

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

Br 78.5.33

Harvard College Library

FROM THE BRIGHT LEGACY

One half the income from this Legacy, which was received in 1880 under the will of

JONATHAN BROWN BRIGHT

of Waltham, Massachusetts, is to be expended for books for the College Library. The other half of the income is devoted to scholarships in Harvard University for the benefit of descendants of who died at Watertown, Massachusetts, in 1686. In the absence of such descendants, other persons are eligible to the scholarships. The will requires that this announcement shall be made in every book added to the Library under its provisions.

HENRY BRIGHT, JR.,

HISTORICAL MANUSCRIPTS COMMISSION.

32 11. 57 33

ELEVENTH REPORT, APPENDIX, PART IV.

THE MANUSCRIPTS
OF THE
MARQUESS TOWNSHEND.

Presented to both Houses of Parliament by Command of Her Majesty.

LONDON:
PRINTED FOR HER MAJESTY'S STATIONERY OFFICE,
BY EYRE AND SPOTTISWOODE,
PRINTERS TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

And to be purchased, either directly or through any Bookseller, from
EYRE AND SPOTTISWOODE, EAST HARDING STREET, FLEET STREET, E.C., and 32, ABINGDON STREET, WESTMINSTER, S.W.; or
ADAM AND CHARLES BLACK, 6, NORTH BRIDGE, EDINBURGH; or HODGES, FIGGIS, & Co., 104, GRAFTON STREET, DUBLIN.

1887.

[C.—5060.—III.] Price 2s. 6d.

HISTORICAL MANUSCRIPTS COMMISSION.

ELEVENTH REPORT, APPENDIX, PART IV.

THE MANUSCRIPTS

OF THE

MARQUESS TOWNSHEND.

Presented to both Houses of Parliament by Command of Her Majesty.

LONDON:
PRINTED FOR HER MAJESTY'S STATIONERY OFFICE,
BY EYRE AND SPOTTISWOODS,
PRINTERS TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

And to be purchased, either directly or through any Bookseller, from EYRE AND SPOTTISWOODS, EAST HARDING STREET, FLEET STREET, E.C.; and 32, ABINGDON STREET, WESTMINSTER, S.W.; or
ADAM AND CHARLES BLACK, 6, NORTH BRIDGE, EDINBURGH; or HODGES, FIGGIS, & Co., 104, GRAFTON STREET, DUBLIN.

1887.

Br 78.5.32

Jan. 25, 1888.

Bright fund.

*1888
41-288
6*

INTRODUCTION.

THE following account of the vast collection of papers accumulated at Raynham by successive generations of the family of the Marquis Townshend is by no means to be considered exhaustive. The papers here described were selected from thirty or forty large boxes chiefly filled with early deeds, accounts, surveys, rentals, &c. relating to the family estates, which would be of great interest and importance to the Norfolk antiquary; and it is possible that in going through such a mass of material some documents of historical value may have escaped notice. Moreover, previous to the examination of the collection, a selection had been made by Lord Townshend's agent, the late Mr. William Ansell Day (whose kind assistance to and hearty interest in the work of the Commissioners cannot be too warmly acknowledged by them), from the letters, &c. of the Elizabethan and Jacobean periods, with a view to publication. The majority of these letters formed the correspondence of Sir Nathaniel Bacon, half-brother to the Lord Chancellor, whose estates and papers came by marriage to the Townshend family. The lamented death of Mr. Day has suspended for the present the intended publication, though great progress was made with the arrangement and transcription of the documents; but the Commissioners hope that before long some steps will be taken to make this interesting portion of the Raynham collection of manuscripts also available for historical purposes.

The Elizabethan papers removed to London for examination by the Commissioners, and noticed in the subsequent report are comparatively few in number. They include a few news-letters from Sir Francis Wyndham; some commissions and council letters illustrating Norfolk affairs; a copy of the will of Sir Nicholas Bacon, the Lord Keeper; and a list of persons implicated in the Earl of Essex's rebellion, showing the prison in which each one was confined. Early in the seventeenth century is a letter from the Norfolk justices to the Council, urging that in that time of plenty places abroad with which England is in amity are the only market for the summer corn, and praying for liberty to ship away barley, malt, peas, and beans, and also beer; the country being so emptied of money that, unless this prayer be granted, it cannot meet the payments demanded for her Majesty's service. Licences appear to have been granted to export corn and beer from Lynn shortly after this. A series of college bills show the cost of living and tuition at Cambridge between the years 1605 and 1610; an apothecary's bill of some ten years later in date is another curious illustration of prices at that time. There are also three or four good news-letters from Roger Townshend and N. Bacon. Of the Civil Wars and the Commonwealth there is hardly a trace among these manuscripts of any value. The papers of the time of Charles II. are more numerous, but their bearing upon public and county affairs is not marked enough to require special notice here, with the exception of a very lengthy document headed "Some particular matters of fact relating to the administration of affairs in Scotland under the Duke of Lauderdale," and addressed to the King; it is a very severe indictment of that Duke's government. A bundle of "Warrants of Commitment to the Tower" in the years 1675, 1676, and 1677 is useful as evidence of the incarceration of many noted persons at that time on various grounds. There is also a large collection of songs, lampoons, &c., belonging to the latter part of the seventeenth and the beginning of the eighteenth centuries, of which it has only appeared necessary to quote a specimen relating to Lord Wharton and Bishop Burnet.

Among the State Papers and Despatches of the time of Queen Anne and later, we find many addressed to, or concerning, the second Viscount Townshend during his embassy to the Hague in the years 1709, 1710, and 1711. The English agents at Turin, Florence, Milan, Hamburg, and other places were among his regular correspondents, and their letters give many details of the diplomatic and martial preparations in various courts of Europe during Marlborough's successful campaigns. Some of the letters are addressed to Horatio Walpole, afterwards Lord Walpole of Wolterton, who was attached to Lord Townshend's embassy. There is a good letter from Lord Stair at Warsaw, written in March 1710, referring to the difficulties created by the erratic Charles XII.; and another of about the same date by Stephen Poyntz, referring to the extreme want of the French army "inso-much that in several places their leathern shoes were taken from them in the winter" [lest they should eat them, we may suppose the writer means] "and locked up till the opening of the campaign, and wooden shoes given them in the meantime; and every post we hear of their plundering bakers' shops." One correspondent tells Horatio Walpole in June 1710 of the "late sudden illness called 'Collero Morbus' of his brother Robert, which had nearly put an early period to the career of the then rising statesman; and another friend James Craggs, when with the English army in Spain, writes to him about the battle of Almenara and other matters. Among other letter writers are the Earl of Peterborough and Lord Raby, afterwards Earl of Strafford, who succeeded Lord Townshend as Ambassador at the Hague. After Townshend became Secretary of State in 1715, we find a capital series of despatches from Admiral Sir John Norris, when in command of the expedition sent to the Baltic to protect British commerce, and to demand satisfaction from the King of Sweden for the losses inflicted on our merchants by the confiscation of their ships and cargoes. Other letters of this time in the collection, notably some from Lord Bolingbroke when in Paris, and of Sir Robert Walpole, were allowed to be used by Archdeacon Coxe, and printed in his Memoirs of Sir Robert Walpole. The correspondence for the year 1725 of Horatio Walpole when Minister in Paris, bound in four folio volumes, and many loose letters of his from Paris of earlier and later date were also examined by Coxe. In a long communication dated in January 1727, Sir Charles Wager, the Admiral, gives his "private opinion of the Russians," and their inclinations towards England. The series of notes which passed between George II., in his own handwriting, and Lord Townshend, on various public matters between 1728 and 1730, printed in Coxe's Walpole, are still preserved at Raynham. The last diplomatic letter of importance, dated 3rd November 1735, is from Thomas Robinson, afterwards Lord Grantham; in it he refers to his six years' residence at the Imperial Court, and earnestly desires to be removed from Vienna.

Passing by many petitions and memorials dated in the earlier half of the eighteenth century, which are chiefly of personal interest, we reach the next division of this collection which is that of the Jacobite Papers, ranging in date between 1703 and 1727. The most important in number and interest relate to 1715 and succeeding years, when Viscount Townshend was Secretary of State. Among these are reports from the country of local riots (including a notable one from Oxford in December 1715), and on the state of public feeling; information supplied by spies at various places abroad as to the intentions of the Pretender; many intercepted Jacobite letters; Privy Council minutes by Lord Townshend on the steps to be taken against the rebels and suspected persons; and copies of Jacobite proclamations. Lord Carlisle and James Craggs write from Preston and Wigan on the proceedings against the prisoners taken in Lancashire, and make some interesting references to Lord Derwentwater, and to others still remembered for their share in the rebellion. There is a good letter, too, from General George Carpenter, dated at Nottingham on the 23rd November 1715, detailing his own services during a month's chase of the rebels, and complaining of their inadequate recognition by the authorities. Copies of despatches to the Duke of Argyll, when commanding the expedition to Scotland against the Earl of Mar, from Lord Townshend and Secretary Stanhope, are also among these Jacobite papers, and the extracts given from them in the following report are of great interest. The first despatch is dated 1st September 1715, and the series is continued at intervals of a few days until 21st February in the year following. Of later date are some curious papers bearing on a project for "disarming the Highlands," and a very long letter from General Wade, showing the manner in which that part of the kingdom could in his opinion be made secure against future attempts to disturb its peace.

Of a totally different character are the letters and accounts formerly belonging to the Earl of Wilmington. The Earl, when Mr. Spencer Compton, was treasurer to Prince George of Denmark, and he held in later years a similar post with regard to the Prince of Wales, afterwards George II. The papers and accounts relating to these positions have more personal than historical interest, but they will be found not unworthy of the space given them in the report. Passing by some details of the cost of regimental clothing and the like, we come upon a long inventory of the personal effects of Prince George, a valuation of his breeding mares, stallions, coach horses, hunters, and "padds," and of his plate, guns, and pistols; the last article included in the list being a twelve-oared barge. Perhaps the most noticeable fact about this property is that most of it was claimed by various officers of the late Prince's household as their fees and perquisites; thus certain plate fell to the share of Lord Delawarr as Groom of the Stole, all the coaches and horses (the latter valued at 992*l.*) were given up to Lord Bridgewater as Master of the Horse, and the barge to the bargemaster of the Prince. Some letters concerning the Duchy of Cornwall are best worth attention among the evidences of Compton's second term of office.

Some papers relating to the Tower of London, chiefly between 1712 and 1715, when the Earl of Northampton was Governor of the Tower, next fall under notice. Among them are documents showing the privileges claimed by the inhabitants of the Tower Hamlets, and some curious petitions, notably one from a poor man who claims relief for having been shot by a sentinel under peculiar circumstances. There are also many orders from the council for the great guns to be fired on certain memorable occasions.

Following these are some private letters addressed to Elizabeth, Countess of Northampton, dated between 1713 and 1737. These are chiefly of domestic interest, but are not without reference to public affairs. Thus the satirical Lady Ferrers writes a few days after the death of Queen Anne, "he [George I.] is very stately, and everything must be very fine; he speaks neither French nor English; he won't be very good company to these Kings [the Lords Justices] when he comes. The little Duke of Kent has gained three inches; I have seen one of them [the Kings aforesaid], but he doesn't speak to subjects." The majority of Lady Northampton's correspondents are of her own sex, and their epistles, though doubtful in their orthography even for that lax age, are usually amusing if not always instructive. Almost her only male correspondent was one Nicholas Guillibeu, who appears to have kept a select young gentlemen's academy at Fulham, whence he dates his reports on the progress of her young son, Lord Compton, in his studies.

Of far wider interest is the section of the report under which is grouped the numerous papers relating to the American plantations, &c. during the first 40 years or so of the last century. These, like other portions of the Townshend collection already noted, seem to have been brought together by Lord Wilmington, who between the years 1731 and 1743 held the position of President of the Council. The majority of the letters are addressed to him. Some of them give glimpses of the condition of Carolina and the difficulties which beset its Lords Proprietors: the letters of Governor Gabriel Johnston, three or four of which are given at full length, together with some petitions and other letters from Charles Town, will be found of marked value for the history of that colony. The Governor of Georgia about the same time was the celebrated General James Oglethorpe, of whom is preserved a letter with two very curious reports of his interviews with the Chiefs of the Chicksaw Indians at Savannah. The papers relating to Massachusetts (1730-1742) are equally numerous and important, the majority of them being letters and reports from Governor Jonathan Belcher; a memorial signed by eight pastors of churches in Boston, Roxbury, and Cambridge, and a letter from Governor W. Shirley, who succeeded Belcher, should also be noticed. Of all these letters the most striking is a private one written by Belcher to his brother-in-law, Richard Partridge, who lived in London, setting forth the difficulties which surrounded his governorship. Other interesting papers in this section relate to New Jersey, New York, Connecticut Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, and Jamaica.

George Townshend, afterwards fourth Viscount and first Marquis, was a brigadier-general early in the year 1759, when he was sent to Canada with the expedition under General Wolfe. On Wolfe's death, at the capture of Quebec, he succeeded to the command. Many letters, of both public and private character, relating to this expedition are preserved at Raynham, and have been printed in this report. Roger Townshend, younger brother of George, was a colonel in the same expedition, and died from wounds received at the siege of Tyconderago a few weeks before the fall of Quebec; a letter from him to Lady Ferrers (wife of his brother George), dated from the Camp at Fort Edward, June 7, 1759, gains additional interest on that account. The most important official documents are some "rough notes" relating to the siege of Quebec, and a copy of Townshend's long despatch to Pitt describing the operations and the capture; among the private ones the brigadier's letters to his wife are noticeable. In the first quoted he writes:—"General Wolfe's (sic) health is but very bad. His generalship in my poor opinion is not a bit better, this only between us. He never consulted any of us till the latter end of August, so that we have nothing to answer for, I hope, as to the success of this campaign." Passages in other letters cast a doubt on Wolfe's military skill, though, happily, his character as a hero remains undisturbed; thus, about three weeks after his death, Brigadier James Murray writes to Townshend that Wolfe's "orders throughout the campaign show little stability, stratagem, or fixed resolution; I wish his friends had not been so much our enemies, his memory would probably have been dearer to his country than now it can be. We are acting on the defensive; you have the execution of the plan, and I am well persuaded you will manage it with as much tenderness to the memory of the poor general as the nature of things will admit of."

The concluding portion of the report contains notices and copies of miscellaneous letters and papers covering in date nearly the whole of the eighteenth century. Many of them have little interest except as autographs of persons of more or less distinct selected for brother R had with C

Lord Chas
Harvard d
1716 on t
Lord F for Se
Cand
1732 and M
the Lord B was E Ain sh of th
T
T
C
L
S may papers
One was from S
C three a Yar don do Ne
str

less distinction. Among the remainder the following may be selected for mention:—a letter from Horatio Walpole to his brother Robert in August 1727 referring to a conversation he had had with Cardinal Fleury about the intention to send the young Lord Chesterfield as minister to Paris; one from Colonel John Harbord describing an attack by a French privateer in August 1710 on the packet boat in which he crossed from Holland; Lord Findlater's account of an election of representative peers for Scotland in June 1721; two letters from Charles Compton, Consul-General in Portugal, to Lord Wilmington in 1731 and 1732; a letter written on the coast of Guinea to a Norwich alderman in 1737, urging the fine prospects of a profitable trade with that country which lie open to enterprise; a few chatty letters of Lord Hervey, and of his sons George and Augustus, afterwards Earls of Bristol, to Lady Townshend; one from General John Campbell, afterwards Duke of Argyll, describing his pursuit of the Young Pretender; a curious agreement between Lord Townshend and Lord Weymouth in 1765 about the borough of Tamworth, besides letters concerning other elections at different dates; a letter of Viscount Clare, member for Bristol, on the linen manufacture in Ireland in 1770. Among the latest in date is a note of the Chevalier D'Eon.

Scattered among the above in their chronological order are many letters of the most brilliant member of the family whose papers are being described, the statesman Charles Townshend. One of them is as early in date as September 1735, when the writer was but ten years old; the next was written ten years later, from Scarborough, in which he gives his conviction that his illnesses have no other source than constitutional weakness; three years later he is again at Scarborough, looking forward to a seat at the Board of Trade, as well as for the borough of Yarmouth; and other letters to his mother give glimpses of his domestic life and character. The most important political document is the copy of a long letter he wrote to the Duke of Newcastle, April 30, 1764, suggesting the steps to be taken to strengthen the opposition to the government of that day.

A singular contribution to the history of the study of political economy will be found in the lengthy correspondence which passed in 1752 between the third Lord Townshend and the Rev. Josiah Tucker, afterward Dean of Gloucester; and in the many letters, with their replies, written by the same Lord two or three years later to the authorities of Cambridge University, relative to his proposal to give a prize of twenty guineas each to the two best dissertations "upon subjects included within th theory of trade." After much discussion the proposal was accepted, and the prizes awarded, but the subjects chosen were so little to his lordship's taste that he declined the offer made by the Vice-Chancellor to send the two winning dissertations for his perusal.

Fortunately for historical and literary students, the present noble owner of Raynham has not placed such restraint upon the use of his manuscript treasures there as his ancestor, the third Viscount, thought fit to do. In May 1752 Horatio Walpole asked permission of this nobleman to have a sight of those letters which Lord Townshend's father "wrote and received while he was ambassador in Holland in the late Queen Anne's reign, because I have under my consideration some Posthumous Works of the late Lord Bolingbroke, and the sight of your father's papers might be of service to set in a true light the false and scandalous misrepresentations of the transactions in which Lord Townshend had been greatly concerned." There is no record of any answer whatever having been made to this application, and more than two years later, in October 1754, Walpole repeats his application, with a reference to his previous letter. The rough draft of Lord Townshend's reply to this, from Raynham, deserves quoting at length. It runs thus:—"My father did during his retirement here in the country in the latter part of his life determine to write a history of his own times, which he had entered upon, and though he died soon after, yet as he had resolved rather to take the trouble on himself of drawing up this historical account than to leave it to any other hand, I think that he has by such his resolution plainly signified to me his inclination and desire that these papers which he has left in my custody should not be perused or made use of by any other hand. I should otherwise have been glad to have complied with your request."

The portion of the following report which deals with the Townshend papers previous to 1700 was drawn up by Mr. W. O. Hewlett; the papers of the last century were examined and calendared by the late Mr. H. Barr Tomkins. Upon the death of the last-named gentleman, while his calendar was still in manuscript, Mr. Hewlett undertook the revision of the whole report.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF THE MARQUESS TOWNSHEND, AT RAYNHAM HALL, CO. NORFOLK.

I.—LETTERS AND PAPERS BEFORE 1600.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Besides those set out below there are numerous letters between the following persons.

Amy Bedingfeld (1591); Sir Nathaniel Bacon of Stifkey, passim; Sir Drew Drury (1597); Sir Roger Townshend of Rainham (1577 et passim); Sir Edward Clere of Blickling (1582); William Townshend (1587); Sir Nicholas Bacon Lord Keeper (1569 et passim); John Dychfield, mayor of Lyme Regis (1577); Edward Walpole (1588); Sir Francis Wyndham Justice of the Common Pleas in 1579 (1576 et passim); Nicholas Bacon son of the Lord Keeper (1572); and many others of less note.

N.D. Old memorandum book in parchment covers, with no name or date. It appears to have been made about the beginning of the 16th century, and contains a number of rough notes, written frequently in Norman French, all relating to the Townshends. It contains (inter alia) (1) notes tempore Henry VII. of payments of money, delivery of deeds, and of places where deeds and writings are to be found; (2) Extracts from the will of a Lady Townshend, name not mentioned, who died 8th Hen. 7. 1492-3 (possibly Ann daughter of Sir William de Brewse wife of Sir Roger Townshend), the bequests are chiefly plate furniture and linen; (3) Similar extracts from the will of a Sir R. Townshend Chivalier, appointing chaplains at his various houses and detailing their duties. "And the sayd 2 prests to say at every of ther masses after the Gospell, de Profundis with a speciall colect for my father's soule, my moder's soule, my soule, my wyff's soule, and all our auncesters' and frends' soules, and principally for all the soules that I and my wyff be bounden to pray for, and for all the soules that we have had eny good and not deserved of ageyn consciens; and for all cristen soules;" (4) Notes of leases made by Dame Eleanor Townshend daughter of Sir John Heydon and wife of Sir John Townshend of Brampton; (5) Notes headed "Consideracons that ther was never lawful bergayn between William Paston the younger and Jan Mariot and John her son," being apparently legal notes of some law suit then pending; (6) Extract from a will, (testator not mentioned) mentioning John Townshend, Robert Townshend, George Townshend; (7) Notes headed "Valor maneriorum terrarum et tenementorum Rogeri Townshend." There are many other rough notes, domestic, and estate accounts, many of which are dated. These dates range from 15th to 17th Hen. VII. 1449-1502.

1572. Oct. 13th. Sir Francis Wyndham* to Nathaniel Bacon. "Newes here be none but that the Quene's Majesty is very well recovered agayne.

* Sir Francis Wyndham was son of Sir Edmund Wyndham, sheriff of Norfolk, by Susan daughter of Sir Roger Townshend of Rainham. He married Jane, daughter of Sir Nicholas Bacon, the Lord Keeper, and was thus brother-in-law of Sir Nathaniel Bacon. He was elected recorder of the City of Norwich in 1578, and was a judge of the Court of Common Pleas in 1579.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

The newes in Flanders grow now contrarye to the successe of that contrye reported in Norfolk. For I thynke you have hard that Mowntz ys geven over by Counte Lodwicke unto the Duke of Alva ; that the Counte by composition ys passed with bagge and baggadage, and that the Prynce of Orange ys retyred to Mecklyn, he groweth weake as ys feared thorough want of payment to his sowldyers."

N.D. Nov. 4th. Sir Francis Wyndham to Nathaniel Bacon. The first part of business matters. "Flusbyng begynneth to feare by reason of the sowldyers will skale (? sail) now awaye shortly and therefor yt ys sayd that they of the towne do make awaye their goods. All the townes revolted from the Duke of Alva are returned to hym agayne, but Mecklyn hath bene spoyled by the sayd Duke. It begynneth now to be in whysperying of our league to be renewed with Kyng Philip and that ambassadors shall be sent enterchangeably for the purpos."

1576. Oct. 8th. "Goramburye." Copy Royal Commission under the Great Seal, headed "A comission within the county of Norfolk touching restraint of transportacon of corne and grayne and other victuall beyond the seas, and for furnishinge of the merkets ; and also to enquire of regrators." The commission is directed to Sir Christopher Heydon, Sir William Butts, Robert Bell, Drew Drewry, Henry Woodhowse, Raphe Shelton, William Heidon, Nathaniel Bacon and Thomas Barroughe Esquires. It sets out that it is evident to her Majesty and her Council that "the prises of corne and grayne, and other victuall without any naturall or evident just cause do begynne to ryse and increase only (as it seameth) by reason that divers couetous greedy and evill disposed farmors and other ingrossors and badgers inhabitinge within divers counties of this our realme havinge greate quantitie of grayne in their hands, and myndinge for their owne private lucre and gaine to make a greate scarcitee thereof, not without some expectacon by some occations of secret transportacon of grayne and other victualls owt of the realme by reason of the great prises of the same in forraine partes growne by the inward troubles ther ; and so havinge great store of corne and grayne in their hands and possessions they will kepe and withhold the same from the merkets by unlawfull confederacies amongst themselves to the intente only to kepe the same at very excessyve prises. By reason whereof and by false rumors and reporte devised for that purpose as we ar enformed, all manner of corne and grayne and other victualls and especially wheate and rye, barley malte and otes, and also butter and chease have not only been but also do yet continewe at very greate and extreme prises, and greater is like to doe yf some speady remeadye for the dewe correction of such offenders and the staye of such practises of ingrossors and badgers be not had and provided." The Commissioners are therefore required and empowered to find out by examination of witnesses and other means, (1) all persons in the County of Norfolk who commit the above practices, and the magnitude of their offences and all other necessary particulars concerning them and their transactions ; (2) the names of all engrossers of corn and other provisions ; and (3) full particulars of all persons who in any way, by their dealings, tend to enhance the prices of corn and other victualls. They are further required to enjoin all farmers having corn to sell that they bring to the market such quantity only as they shall be empowered to do by the Commissioners and "to sell the same at reasonable prices without any fraud, covin or delaye" power being given to the Commissioners to commit to gaol any such who transgress these regulations.

No corn, grain, butter, cheese or other victual is to be transported abroad on pain of imprisonment, but under strict supervision of the customs' officers, it may be carried between English ports and harbours.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSR.

1576. Oct. 19th. Hampton Court. Letter signed W. Burghley, T. Sussex, A. Warwyk, F. Bedford, R. Leycester, F. Knollys, James Croft, Fra. Walsyngham. To the Sheriff and Justices of Norfolk on the prevailing scarcity of corn and the means to be adopted for remedying it. Forbidding the exportation of corn abroad, &c.

1577. Jan. 1st. Emblem beautifully sketched in ink of a man on horseback and a man about to mount a bare backed colt. Above is written "Aliquando tamen proficit qoo sero sapit." Then beneath follow the lines :

Before the sturdye colte will byde the bytt,
He beares oftymes the broont of many blowes,
But when at laste he letts his ryder sytt,
He learns to rayne, and forwarde then he goes.
Some men be coltes : they friske and flynge at first,
Yett (onse well broke) suche men prove not the worste.

To the righte Honorable Sir Nycholas Bacon Knighte, Lorde Keeper of the Greate Seale, good newe yere and many to God's good pleasure. My verie favorable good Lorde.

Being latelie receaved into Her Majestie's service (wherein I hope to recover my decayede estate) I devised to presente all my lordes and good frendes in Courte with certayne emblems for their new yeres gyftes, an exerceyes, (as I judge) neyther unplesante nor unprofitable. Att leaste my meaninge is thereby to showe prooffe that my penn cann as well be paynfull in moral poetrie, as itt hathe bene hetherto over curious in expressinge of lighte affections.

And my resolutione beinge suche, I coulde not chuse but proffer your Lordship the lyke presentte, an objecte not altogether correspondente to the gravite of your judgments, and yett voyde of any vanitie which may justlie offende your honorable disposicon and in full hope thereof I have put in hazarde to send you the same, beseachinge your Lordship thus to understande I kept my koltish tricks much longer then was eyther for my credytte, or for my proffytte, I friskede, I flange, I refused the brydell of discretione, and ran still at lardge in the fenns of sondrye follies. At last it hath pleasede God to make reasone my ryder, and he haveinge firste corectede me, nexte enstructede me, and laste of all encouragede and coyed me. I begyne to beare the brydle pretelye well and hope so to goe forwarde as I may deserve in thende to be well placed in a prynce's stable.

But (my goode Lord) my coltyshe and jadishe tricks have longe sythens broughte me oute of fleashe as withowte some spedye provysione of good provender I shall never be able to endure a longe jorneye and therefor am enforce to neye and braye unto your good Lordship and all other which have the keye of her Majesties storehouses beseachinge righte humble that you will vouchsaaffe to reamember me with some extreordynary allowance when it fallethe. God preserve your Lordship to the common proffyte and my perticuler comfote this firste of January 1577 and ever your Lordship's redye at comaunde.

G. LE GASCOIGNE.

1577. May 31st. Greenwich. The Lords of the Privy Council. Lords Burghley, Lincoln, Sussex, Leicester, Sir Francis Knollys, Sir Francis Walsingham and James Croftes to the Justices of Norfolk, with regard to the injury done to the wool trade and to the customs by certain persons who buy up all the wool and sell it again at what price they choose; enclosing a list of such persons, and requiring the Justices to compel them in a bond of 100*l.* each only to buy such wool every year "as they by themselves and ther apprentices shall yerelie make or do to be maid and wrought in ther mantion howses in things used to be maid of wolles and mixed with wolles within this realme. And further they shall not buye anie to sell the same backe in whole againe to anie other." The list of persons who are to give bonds follows on another page.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

1577. July 20th. "From the Court at Richemond." Copy letter signed "W. Burghley," "Edward Lyncolne," "T. Sussex," "F. Knolles," "Ja Crofts," & "F. Walsingham," but unaddressed, requiring a return of all the inns, taverns, and alehouses, on which a small tax is to be levied to raise money for the improvement of the port of Dover.

1578. April 27th. Greenwich. Copy letters signed by Lords Burghley, Lincoln, Sussex, Warwick, and Hunsdon, Sir F. Knollys, Sir Christopher Hatton, Sir Francis Walsingham, and others, directed to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace of the County of Norfolk as to the training of the militia in shooting.

1589. Aug. 20th. "The Court at Otelandes." Copy letter from the Council to the Lord Lieutenant of Norfolk as to the levying of a loan on the County.

1578. Dec. 23rd. Copy Will of SIR NICHOLAS BACON, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal.

In the name of God Amen. The thre and twentithe daie of December in the yere of our Lord God a thousand fyve hundredthe seaventye and eighte and in the one and twentithe yere of the reigne of our Sovereigne Laydie Elizabeth by the Grace of God Queene of England Fraunce and Ireland Defendor of the Faithe etc. [I] Sir Nicholas Bacon Knighte Lord Keper of the Greate Seale of England beyng of whole mynde and memorie doe make this my present testament in manner and forme followyng revokynge all former wills and testaments made by me before the date hereof.

First. I comyte my sowle to the hands of Almighty God whoe of his omnipotencie did create yt and of his infinite mercie redemed yt and nowe as my undoubted hope ys by the same mercifull redemcon will glorifie yt and save yt.

My desier ys to be buried at Pawles where my tombe is. And because I geve noe blackes to the riche that have noe neede therefore I geve to the poore that have neede fyve hundredthe marks to be distributed accordyng as by a sedule subscribed wythe my hand dothe appeare. I will notwithstandyng blackes be geven to my housholde folkes both at London and Gorhamburie and to all my childeren their husbands and wiffes.

Item I geve to my deare and welbeloved wief one thowsande fyve hundredthe ounces of my plate whereof thone haulfe guylte and thother haulfe parcel guylte and white, to be chosen by hir oute of all my plate excepte soutche parcels as I geve awaye by speciall name.

I give hir also all my linnen, naperie, hangynges, coches, lytters, and all other my howshold stufe and howsholde stoore remaynyng at London excepte my readie money, plate and armor and excepte suche evidence as apperteyne to eny lands or hereditaments as be assigned to eny of my children by my former wief, and excepte suche things as remayne in my studie and suche things as I geve awaye by special woordes requyringe my wief in consideracon of the same provision and stoore to kepe so many of my howsholde together at her charges duryng a monethe after my deathe as will tarric so longe for the better doinge whereof I give hir in readie money ^{ch.} I give hir also suche jewells and gol Smythes worke (excepte plate) as remayneth with hir. I will also to my said wief all my horses and geldyngs And also all my intereste in all my stockes of sheepe goyng at Ingham or Tymwoorthe or within eny of my sheepe courses there To possesse and use duryng hir life uppon condicon that within one yere nexte after my decease and before her mariage agayne she become bounde to my executors in the some of twoo hundredthe pounds that at the tyme of her deathe she shall leave to suche person or persons as oughte then to possesse the same mannor and stocke of sheepe goyng uppon the same mannor and within the said sheepe courses of like goodnes and of as greate a number as she shall receive.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

And this is donne because I ame bownde uppon covenants of marriage of my eldest sonne to leave suche a stocke after the deathe of my said wief And I will that the stockes letten with Stifkey goe as the lands is there appoynted to goe and remayne And I will that the one haulte of all the howsholde stufe that shall remayn at Gorhamburie at the tyme of my deathe (excepte my plate, tent and pavyllion) to Anthonie at thage of 24 years And if he die before then to Frauncis at the same age And thother haulte I will to Anthonie after the deathe of my wief And in the meanetyme my wief to have the use of it. To whome also I geve all my greene store of howsholde remayninge either at Redburn or Windridge and all my other goodes and cattalls remayninge there (except my plate and money and other things before geven or excepted).

Item I will that all that my lease of Aldenham and all copiehold lands or tenements lyinge in the parrishes of Sainte Michall or Sainte Stephens nighe Saint Albones or joyninge to any lands of Westwicke, Gorhamburie or Praye shall remayne and goe accordyng as my howse of Gorhamburye is appoynted to goe and remayne.

Item I geve to my said wief all my intereste in Yorke Howse in consideracon of which legacies and in consideracon of suche assurances of mannors lands and tenements as I have assured unto my said wief and for all loves that have benne betwene us I desier her to see to the well bringing upp of my twoo sonnes Anthonie and Frauncis that are nowe left poore orphans without a father.

And further I will and bequethe to the said Anthonie my sonne all that my lease and tearme of yeres and all my intereste and demaunde which I have of or in all those woodes comonly knowne or called by the name or names of Brittetfirth alias Brighteighfirthe alias Brighteighe woode and Burnet Heathe lyinge and beyng in the parrish of Sainte Stephens in the countie of Hertforde And also all that yerely rente of £26 13 4 due and payable for the said woodes And also all my righte tittle and possession which I have of and in eny lands tenements and heriditamentes assured to my said [son] Sir Nicholas for the true payment of the said rente of £26 13 4 And also all that my lease and tearme of yeres and all my tittle and intereste and demaunde which I have of or in the fearme of Pynner Parke lying in the parrishe of Harrowe in the County of Middlesex. And also of and in all my other landes tenements and heriditaments lying in the said parrishe of Harrowe To have and to houlde to the said Anthonie the said woodes lying within the said parrishe of Sainte Stephens And all the said fearme called Pynner Park and all the said landes and heriditaments in Harrowe for and duryng so maney yeres as yt shall happen the said Anthonie to live. And if yt shall fortune the said Anthonie to die before the full ende and expiracon or determinacon of the said leases and tearmes of yeares therein contained then my will and intent is that the eldeste sonne of the bodie of the said Anthonie for the tyme beyng and the heyres mayles of his bodie for the tyme beyng shall have houlde occupie and enjoye successively during their severall lyves all the said woodes and fearme and other the premysse before bequeathed to the said Anthonie for so maney yeres as the said eldeste sonne of the said Anthonie for the time beinge or the heyres males of the bodie of the said eldeste sonne shall severallye and successivelie fortune to live and yf it fortune the said Anthonie and his said eldeste sonne and the heyres males of the said eldest sonne and everie of them to die without issue male of their bodies and of the body of every of them before the full ende and determination of the saide leases and termes of yeares therein contayned, then my will and full meanyng is further that Frauncis my sonne shall have houlde occupy and enjoye the said woodes fearme and other the premysse before bequeathed to the said Anthonie. To hym the said Frauncis his executors and assignes for ever.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

Item I geve also to my eldeste sonne and his heyres all my fearmes in Mildenhall and of Langerfearme and of the lands and tenementes in Ilketeshall and of my howse in Silver Streete that I have of the House of Westminster and of my fearme of Dullynghams.

And further I will to my said heyre my tent and pavilyon remayninge at Gorhamburie and all my apparrell armor and weapon remayninge eyther at Redgrave or at any howse in London and all my howshoulde stufe stocke stoore and other goodes remayning at Redgrave, and all things remayninge in my studie at London excepte suche as be geven awaye by speciall wordes.

Item I geve to Roberte Blackeman my nephewe all my intereste in the lease of the meadowes and grounde at Hame.

And to Nathaniell my sonne towards the buildyng of his howse at Stifkey twoo hundredthe poundes and besides all my lease of the lands in Stifkey and my stocke of sheepe goeing upon them.

Item I give to the Master and Fellowes of Bennet Colledge in Cambridge to the buildinge of a chappell there cclⁱ.

And I geve to every of my freendes and to my servantes and suche other person as be named in a paygne hereafter followynge subscribed with my hand all suche thyngs and somes of money as beene in the same appoynted.

Provided alwayes that iff Ann my said wief doe not make or cause to be made within one yere next after my decease and before she be married agayne to everie of my sonnes Nicholas, Nathaniell, Edward, Anthonie and Frauncis, a sufficient release in lawe of all her right tittle intereste and demandes of dower of and in all the mannors landes tenementes and hereditamentes whereof by reason of my seysin she is or then shalbe dowable and deliver or cause to be delivered to everie of my said sonnes one suche release within the said yere and before she be married, then I will all my legacies guifts and bequestes to her made shalbe voided and then I will the same together with the rest of my goodes debtes and cattalles after my debtes paid funeralls discharged and legacies performed to my eldeste sonne Nicholas.

Item I will that the hundrethe poundes stocke remayninge with the Mayor of Sainte Albones and his brethern's handes for the settinge of the poore of woorke be continued in their handes so longe as they perferme the covenantes agreed upon betweene them and me otherwise that my wief or heyres to Gorhamburie receive and kepe the same.

And of this my will I make my executors Sir Nicholas Bacon Knyghte and Nathanyell Bacon, and overseer my Lorde Treasurer my brother in lawe to whom I geve a standynge cuppe with a cover garnysed with christall weighing 53 ounces 3 quarters, and to my Ladie Burghleye my sister in lawe a deepe bowle with a cover haveyng my cognizaunce weighing 21 ounces and a half.

To Anthonie my jewell that I weare and to my daughter Bacon my eldeste sonne's wief my cheaste in my study made by Albert and my little boxe with ringes and to Mistress Butts my ringe with the beste turquois.

In wittnes whereof I have subscribed everie paygne of this my will with myne owne hande and set to my seale the daie and yere firste above written.

1578. The names of the poorest prisoners in the comon gayle in the Kinges Benche who this 6th of Marche received the som of foure pownds as the legacye of the ryght honorable Sr Nicholas Bacon Knyght decessyd late Lord Keper of the Great Seale of England by thands of Hugh Morgan grocer and Thomas Awdeley skynner.

Endorsed : Prisoners acquittances.

1579. June 12th. "St Kateryns." Nicholas Mynne to Nathaniel Bacon. News of the town. The Bishop of York just dead. The Queen has been "syckly" but is now better.

1579. Aug. 19th. "From the Court at Nonsuch." Copy letter signed by Sir Thomas Egerton, Sir W. Knowles, Sir Robert North, Sir Robert Cecil, Lords Hunsdon and Buckhurst, to whom does not appear, "After our hartie comendacions, we have receaved a letter from Sir Henry Woodhouse by which we perceave that som of you the Comysioners have not only taken from him the charge which longe tyme was comytted unto him, but have of late appointed him againe to attend the defence of Yarmouth not allowing him those forces that have benne by former direcon appointed for that purpose. Theis courses seminge straunge unto us that you should proceed in such sorte with a gente of reputacon and good service, we canne do no lesse then requier you to yeeld us a reason and accompt of your doeings in that behalf, and what moved you to take those unfreindly courses with a gente of his sorte."

1579 [about]. Paper headed "The charge of the buryall in Faules," and endorsed "The verger's bill, to the ryght worshipfull Sir Nicholas Bacon Knight and other the executors of my Lord Keper." It probably refers to the burial of Sir Nicholas Bacon Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, who died in 1579. It gives an estimate (which comes to 18*l*. 4*s*. 4*d*.) of the cost of a funeral at St. Paul's and is signed "Alexander Nowell, deane, Jo: Mullins, Jo: Walker."

1581. March 11th. Blickling. Sir Edward Clere to Nathaniel Bacon, enclosing a copy of a letter from the Privy Council relating to some wax come ashore by reason of a wreck to which certain persons, living near the coast, lay claim. It is her Majesty's pleasure that ten thousand weight of the said wax be delivered to her messenger on her behalf.

1582. Nov. 16th. Sir Edward Clere to Nathaniel Bacon, concerning injuries inflicted on Sir Edward by his "cousin Heidon," forcibly entering Saxlingham House, killing and impounding his cattle, assaulting his servants, &c.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

1583. Paper headed "The oryginnall of the falling out of Mr Thomas Cooper and Mr Robert Markham the younger at Sowthwell the 12th of Maye 1583 in the presence of Mr Thomas Locke Mr William Sutton the younger and Mr Marshall brother in law to Mr Markham."

1587. Nov. 22nd. Sir Francis Wyndham to Nathaniel Bacon. "The opportunitye of this berer together with the freshenes of occurrences here, moveth my wrytynge at this present. Here is very fresh newes and that dyversely conformed, that there be at Dunkyrke of late come 12000 Italian sowldyers, but whither they shall be sent ys dowbted. Some saye into Fraunce, some feare into Scotlande, or yf hither or not ys unknowen. But upon this, though there have bene a great calme and stylnes in not executyng soch preparatyon as was publyshed in the Star chamber should be made at everye hande as well by sea as by lande, yet even now upon advertisement that came but yesterdaye upon conference by the Privye Cownsell yt ys sayd to be resolved that my Lord Admyrall shall presently go to the sea with a great navye. And this daye came there letters from my Lorde of Hunsden that the Scotts have fayled of keypyng of the dayes of treweke at which was promised restytution of and amends for the great spoyle of late taken by the Scotts. Whereupon my Lord of Hunsden in person hath entered into Scotlande and hath taken a great botye there to satisfye the partyes afore spoyled. The Kynge there hath a great power up and in redynes. He geveth owt that he ys dryven for his owne safetie agaynst some of his own subiects to provyde his power for his owne defence. But yt ys not beleved, for rather yt ys thought that he maketh hymselfe redye to joyne with forren forces to invade us, and therfore his excuses begyn not to be trusted nor beleued. Here ys other good newes even yesterday advertysed hither That there be 12 hulkes laded with cordadge (which ys cables and soch lyke furniture for ships) by tempest of wether dryven into Plymowthe haven in the west contrye, which by the helpe of two or three shypys beyng then nere upon the coast helped them to be kept and stayed there, though they moch resisted the same. They came from Hanboroughe (Hamburg) and were goyng to Lyseburne (Lisbon) as a provision made for the Kynge of Spayne's navye. But by God's providens more then by humayne foresyght they be stayed to do us good to unfurnyshe the adversarye. And so we may see how moch we are bound to God if we wold be thankfull."

1590. Jan. 9th. "The Courte at Richmonde. Letter signed "Chr. Hatton, Canc," "W. Burghley," "Hounsdon," "T. Howard," "T. Heneage," "J. Fortescue," "J. Wolley," and "F. Cobham" to Nathaniel Bacon, Esq., appointing him collector of a loan about to be raised in the county of Norfolk.

1591. March 1st. "A certificat touching divers persons who have had privie seales delivered unto them for the loane of money within the Countie of Norfolk." Lists of persons who have furnished money on loan for the Queen's service; of persons who the justices consider have not lent enough; of persons certified to be too poor to lend any thing; and of persons who are able to lend, but whose names have been omitted.

1592. Oct. Copy of a long letter (in Sir Nathaniel Bacon's writing) from the Justices of Norfolk and Suffolk, probably to the Privy Council, as to a grant made to two persons named William Garton and Robert Kyrke of the profits of the forfeiture of a penal statute for the sowing of flax and hemp in Norfolk and Suffolk. In a letter from their Lordships the Justices were required to call before them the patentees and other witnesses and to certify to the Council the correctness or non-correctness of their accounts. This has been done, though the patentees, when summoned, neglected to appear, and the accounts have been proved to be false. The patentees appear to have been under a contract to construct a pier at Sheringham in Norfolk from the proceeds of the grant of the forfeitures, and the Justices had been further required to view and report upon the progress and value of the pier. In this letter they state that they have viewed the pier and have heard the testimony of local men on its value, which is not considered great, and the letter concludes with suggestions that the present pier shall be discontinued and in part pulled down and the timber applied to the building of jetties in front of the town of the merits of which the local fishermen and shippers have a higher opinion.

1596. Feb. 18th. Sir Francis Wyndham to Nathaniel Bacon. "I am sorry I have not suffycient tyme to wryte so largely unto you as the circumstances of matters do requyre; for fyrst you shall understande that within these three or four dayes my Lord Canterbury in the presens of the Counsell (except my Lord Treasurer who was sicke) dyd delyver to her Majestie that her Government by her ecclesiastical courts were like cleane to be otherthrowen by reason of a charge geven by me and M^r Cocke at Sessions vidz. that ther ordynarye cowlde not cyte men to appere pro salute anime to awnser upon oathe, the rumour whereof hath bred a scruple to all the byshops in Englande, that they dowht how to procede in theyr cowrts, for that they have ever synce the Conquest used no other cowrse. With this her Majestie was greatly grieved with me and sayd that she wold have all the Counsell calle all the judges together before theyr cyrcuyte to comand them not to geve yt any more in chardge. And then dyd my Lord Chamberlayne take opportunitie to exasperat the Quenes Majestie further agaynst me saying also that I dyd impugn her Majestie's comissions and other her prerogatyves and procedyngs in her service in Norfolke, which complaynt the Cownsell was lykewyse comanded to call me to awnser. So as this daye my Lord of Canterburie my Lord Chancellor, my Lord Admyrall, my Lord Chamberlayne, my Lord Cobham, and my Lord of Buckherst were assembled at my Lord Chancellor's howse where all the judges were appoynted to hear her Majestie's pleasure before we went in cyrcuyt. So at our beyng there my Lord shewed her Majestie's myslyke that the judges as she harde were not all of one mynde towching the offence of the Martynists and some favored them which yf she knewe she wold remove from theyr places, and then as to the charge geven towching the oathes in spyrytuall courts we were comanded from her Majestie to forbear to geve yt any further till more consultatyon were had therof. Then my Lord shewed further her Majestie's pleasure towching such as were convicted of the Martynists. That yf they wold not submytt themselves accordyng to a draft made thereof that they should be executed! So the judges departed, but myselfe. And then my Lord Chamberlain (withowt callynge Sir Arthur in) dyd hymselfe informe agaynst me, that I sought to dyscontentans hys Lordship in his lieftenancy in that shyre; that I impugned her Majestie's commission and all other her service there for levyng of money, and then he fell to partycularities of baylyng of which I justyfyed, and so to other thyngs as well towching yourselfe and Drurye whom he will send for presently, and chardged me he should be forthcomyng, and I sayd his servants had made him forthcomyng. He sayd he deserved yt well and how yt was but that one of his men dyd mete hym and asked hym

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

whether he did not speke certen words of my Lord Chamberlain, which he confessed he dyd and thereupon he brake his heade with his dagger. So then I shewed the whole facts which he denyed and sayd further that I bare hym and all his mallice for that he was honest agaynst my brother for the Scotts." Sir Francis relates several other charges preferred against him by the Lord Chamberlain and his answers thereto "and so when all this was done the dynner was redye and my Lord Chamberlaine sayd he had xx^v other matters I should awnswer hereafter and so I departed."

1598. April 30th. Stifkey. Paper in Sir Nathaniel Bacon's writing headed "A warrant to be sent to all the C. Con. (sic) in Norfolk," requiring that all persons who advanced money to the Crown on loan, should defer seeking repayment for six months. Giving below the names of all those in the several districts of the County to whom this warrant is to be communicated.

1599. July 19th. Norwich. Paper headed "Matters agreed upon at Norwich in execution of the Councill's letters of the 3rd of May, for musters in the Countie of Norfolk." The orders are signed by Sir Christopher Heydon, Sir Philip Woodhouse and Sir Nathaniel Bacon.

N.D. [but about 1600]. Paper giving a list of persons implicated in the Essex rebellion, and stating where they were imprisoned.

"In the Towere.

Earle of Essex.
Earle of Rutland.
Earle of Sowthampton.
Lord Saundes.
Lord Mountagello.
Lord Cromwell.
Ser Charles Davies.
Ser Christopher Blonte.

In Newe Gaite.

Ser Jhon Davies.
Ser Gillam Merricke.
Sir Hinerie Carie.
M^r Treshame.
M^r Doweall.

In the Gard House.

Ser Jhon Hadame.
Ser Robarte Veron.
Ser Christopher Laydon.

In the Marshallseas.

Ser Edward Myckilborn.
M^r Bushell.
M^r Cosnall.
M^r Bucke.

In the Flete.

Ser Charles Perce.
Ser Jhon Perce.

Ser Edward Banshaind.
Ser Edward Letilltowne.
M^r Fraunces Maneres.
M^r Gregorie Brigge.
M^r Cashe.

In the Counter in Wodstret.

M^r Thomas West.
M^r Man.
M^r Foster.
M^r Addine.
M^r Dasoune.
M^r Compton.
M^r Arwell.
M^r Elleap Jonnes.
M^r Jhon Laid.
M^r Lawsonne.
M^r Richard Herferd.

In the Counter in the Poultrie.

M^r Raphe Smeth.
M^r Williame Parratt.
M^r Thomas Blondall.
M^r Fraunces Kinersleaye.
M^r Williame Grauntam.
M^r Edward Harte.
M^r Edward Harber.
M^r Richard Chamley.
M^r Aunthyen Rouse.
M^r Jhon Ardinge.
M^r Jhon Trimpe.
M^r Fraunces Leaster.

M^r Thomas Sandall.
 M^r Thomas Tippinges.
 Ser William Constabill.
 M^r Peter Redall.
 M^r Williame Orrme.
 M^r Jhon Morries.
 M^r John Parmell.
 M^r Robarte Coote.
 M^r John Binbrigge.
 M^r Gregorie Sissill.
 M^r Alexander Greshim.
 M^r Jhon Robartes.

In Ludgaite Feloninge.

M^r Jhon Wheller.
 M^r Thomas Wheeler.
 M^r Thomas Medley.
 M^r William Liane.
 M^r Jhon Grainte.
 M^r Jhon Wright.
 M^r Christopher White.

MARQUESS
 TOWNSHEND
 MSS.

The Lorde of Susseix in hould at Ser Jhon Stannope's. The Lorde of Bedford in hould at Alldermane Holidaie's.
 Captaine Sallesberie slaine in Essiexe house."

N.D. Ann Lady Gresham to her nephew Nathaniel Bacon respecting the sale of some land.

N.D. March 11th. Lady Gresham to her nephew Nathaniel Bacon relating to the sale of some of her property.

II.—LETTERS AND PAPERS FROM 1600 TO 1660.

Among the letters of no importance save to the correspondents are some between ;

Henry Earl of Northampton (1611) ; Sir Horace Townshend afterwards the 1st Lord Townshend of Lyme Regis passim ; Sir Roger Townshend his father, passim ; Henry Curzon (1624) ; Mildmay 2nd Earl of Westmoreland who married the widow of Sir Roger father of the first Lord Townshend (S.D.) ; Anne wife of Sir John Townshend and daughter of Sir Nathaniel Bacon (1614 et passim) ; Elizabeth Knyvet (1626) Dorothy wife of Sir Nathaniel Bacon of Stifkey (S.D.) ; Nathaniel Knyvet (1634) ; Sir Nathaniel Bacon of Stifkey (1614 et passim) ; Sir Philip Wodehouse of Kimberley (1612) ; Lady Townshend wife of Horace 1st Lord Townshend (1654) ; Sir Hamon Le Strange (1623) ; and many others from and to members of the Townshend and Bacon families.

1600. Jan. 20th. Copy declaration signed Christopher Heydon, Myles Corbett, Na. Bacon, Thomas Knyvett, Edm. Mundeford, W. Welby, Rich. Stubbe, and Mathew Gamble Commissioners appointed for settling a controversy which had arisen as to what towns should contribute to the repair of the banks of the township of Terrington, stating that the townships of Wiggshall, Tylney, and Clendwarton are not liable to contribute.

1600. July 7th. Lynn. The Mayor and Corporation of Lynn to Nathaniel Bacon High Sheriff of Norfolk, Sir John Townshend, Sir Christopher Heydon, and Sir Philip Woodhouse, claiming an exemption from musters outside their town, by charter.

1600. Dec. Copy interrogatories and answers thereto relating to the repair of the sea walls of Marshland in Norfolk and as to what townships are liable to defray the expences of the same.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

1601. April. Copy letter from the Justices of Norfolk to the Lords of the Privy Council as to a recent order prohibiting the carrying of corn from port to port, requesting that this order may be rescinded, as there is now no scarcity of corn, and on account of petitions they have received to that effect from shipowners who go to get coals from Newcastle and who have been accustomed to carry on their way thither corn &c. for the northern markets.

1601. May 24th. Greenwich. Copy letter from the Privy Council to the Commissioners for the Musters in Norfolk, for reducing the numbers in each trainband of the militia, so that no man should have command of more than two hundred men.

1601. July 15th. Norwich. The Justices of the Peace of Norfolk to the Privy Council, giving the names of the gentlemen appointed to view the decays of the sea bank at Terrington and to estimate the charge of repairing it.

1601. Nov. 30th. Whitehall. Copy letter from the Privy Council signed Tho. Egerton; T. Buckhurst; Nottingham; E. Worcester; W. Knollys; J. Stanhope; Ro. Cecyll; Jo. Fortescue; Jo. Popham; J. Herbert; to the Commissioners of Sewers for the County of Norfolk, as to the repair of the sea walls of Torrington and what townships in Marshland are liable to help defray the cost thereof.

1602. March. Letter in Sir N. Bacon's writing, from the Justices of Norfolk to the Privy Council (probably, but it is not addressed) "The transportacon beyonde the seas to places in amity with her Majesty being the onely markett for our somer corne in this tyme of plentie, doth so much import the state of our contrey here in Norffolk, as wee are bold to crave your honour's favours, that it would please you to give direcccon wherby warrants maie be sent to the officers of our ports for libertie to shippe away barley, malt, peas, and beanes and also beere, payeing her Majesty's custome, according to the Statute. The reasons which move us to be suitors herin be especially these. First our experience letteth us see that our contrey is so emptied of money, as a number of persons within the same when they are demaunded to make payment towards sondrie charges of her Majesty's service and the realme, are to seake, and do praie a staye, untill thei mai sell that wherewith thei maie gett money." Now that corn is more plentiful (barley is stated to be at 10s. per quarter) the writers beg that permission for its transportation may be allowed, as benefitting growers, sailors, and her Majesty's Customs.

1602. March 15th. The court at Richmond. Copy letter from the Privy Council to Sir Arthur Hevenyngham Knight High Sheriff of Norfolk, Sir Philip Woodhouse, Sir Basingbourne Gawdy, Nathaniel Bacon, and others, in answer to a letter from them to the Justices of Norfolk, of March 1602 (see above) stating that they will give licences to a limited extent to persons in the county to export corn and beer beyond the seas.

1602. May 1st. Copy letter unsigned and unaddressed, but the person written to is styled "My Lord," and the letter mentions "this port of Lynn." It relates to the question of exportation of corn and grain, which is forbidden by statute, and requests that, as there is a very plentiful supply this year, exportation may be permitted.

1603. Feb. 15th. "At the Court." Thomas Lord Buckhurst to Nathaniel Bacon Steward of the King's manors of West Walton, Walso-ken, Emeth and Tylney, requiring him not to grant admittances or receive surrenders of any tenants of those manors until further notice, and to send a certificate of the value of the said manors.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

1603. July 5th. Lord Buckhurst and others to the officers of the port of Lynn, forbidding strictly the exportation of corn or beer beyond the seas except to Scotland.

1603. Sept. 23rd. Norwich. Draft letter in Sir Nathaniel Bacon's writing, from the Justices of Norfolk, to the Earl of Northampton Lord Lieutenant of the County, on the subject of the musters.

1606-1609. "Mr. William Smith's charges uppon his beinge at Cambridge.

Michaelmas quarter 1605.—For Mr. Percivall and the Schoolmaster's charges to Cambridge about his admittance xxxvij^s

Christmas quarter 1605.—For seeleing a chamber in Trinity Colledge

iiij^{li}

For a yeares rent from Michaelmas 1605

liij^s iiij^d

Geven Mr. William in money x^s

For a viol

l^s

Summa

xi^{li} xi^s iiij^d

"Lady quarter 1606.—For Seton's logicke and paper

xvi^d

For a truncke and porter

xix^s x^d

Geven him when he went to Cambridge

xxx^s

For apparrell for him to Mr. Anguishe iiij^{li} xvii^s vi^d

For the schoolmaster and 2 men's charges with him to Cambridge

xliv^s iiij^d

For poynts

ij^s

To Mr. Aldrich his tutor to defray his charges 27th May xx^{li}

Summa

xxix^{li} xix^s x^d

"Midsomer quarter 1606.—For a pott given the Colledge

v^{li} vi^s x^d

To Mr Smith

v^s

Geven Mr Aldrich by my Lady Bacon

l^s

Added geven to officers and servants there

xiiij^s

For my Ladie's charges to Cambridge to see her sonne vij^{li} xviiij^s x^d

Geven to Mr William Smith

v^s

Geven by my Ladie to schollers

iiij^s vj^d

Added geven to the wayter at Cambridge ij^s vj^d u s d

16 2 10

Summa

xv^{li} vij^s iiij^d

"Michaelmas quarter 1606.—To Mr. Buckworth the tutor by Thurlow 24th October

xiiij^{li} vj^s viij^d

For carriage of the same to Cambridge

iiij^s iiij^d

For a paire of garters

viiij^s

Sent him

v^s

For cambricke for ruffs

viiij^s

Summa

xiiij^{li} xi^s

Summa pagine 71^l 9^s 6^d

MARQUERS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

"Christmas quarter 1606.—To his tutor Mr Buck-worth 2 ^d January	-	-	lvi
For tuition then	-	-	xx
To him 18 th January	-	-	x ^{li}
To Mr Smith	-	-	x ^s
For a paire of pantofles	-	-	iiij ^s
To him at Stewkey 2 ^d January	-	-	xxx ^s
For his expenses at Falsham	-	-	iiij ^s vjd
For a paire of shoes	-	-	iiij ^s vjd
To him at his returne to Cambridge	-	-	x ^s
For his expences upon his returne to Cam-	-	-	xxxv ^s xj bridge	-	-	viiij ^s
For cambricke	-	-	lvij ^s ijd
Added For a sword and dagger, girdle and spurres	-	-	x ^{li}
Ladie quarter 1607.—To Mr Buckworth 6 Aprill	-	-	x ^{li}
To him 20 th Junii	-	-	v ^{li}
Midsomer quarter 1607.—To Mr Smith 12 th August	-	-	ls
To him 17 th September	-	-	v ^s viij ^d
For lawne for him	-	-	iiij ^s vi ^d
For shoes	-	-	x ^s
To him at Stewkey	-	-	vi ^s
For gloves	-	-	xx ^s
To him more	-	-	lvij ^s iiij ^d
For his charges from Cambridge to Stewkey	-	-	x ^s and upon his goeing againe thether	-	-	vij ^{li} xij ^s
Sent him to Cambridge	-	-	xvij ^s viij ^d
To Mr Kempe upon a bill for apparrell	-	-	ix ^{li} xvj ^s
For shoes viij ^s viij ^d . Sent him x ^s	-	-
My ladie's charges at Cambridge	-	-
Michaelmas quarter 1607.—To Mr Burckworth 16 th	-	-
October	-	-	x ^{li}
To him 19 th December	-	-	x ^{li}
For porter of the money	-	-	xij ^d
For knitting a paire of stockings	-	-	xx ^d
Summa pagine			90 ^{li} 11 ^s 1 ^d
Added to Mr Smyth at diverse tymes in the holly
dayes	-	-	xlvs
Christmas quarter 1607.—To Mr Buckworth 25 th Jan.	-	-	x ^{li}
To him in February	-	-	x ^{li}
For shoes	-	-	iiij ^s vi ^d
For his charges from Cambridge to Stewkey	-	-	xxix ^s vij ^d
For shoes	-	-	xiiij ^s iiij ^d
To him when he returned	-	-	xx ^s
To him more	-	-	x ^s
Added for a saddle bridle and furniture	-	-	xx ^s
For his charges upon his goeing againe to	-	-	xxxij ^s x ^d
Cambridge	-	-	ij ^s
For porter of money to the carrier	-	-
xxvij ^{li} xvij ^s iiij ^d	Summa	-	xxv ^{li} xij ^s lijd
Ladie quarter 1608.—To Mr. Buckworth 18 th
Junii	-	-	x ^{li}
Added for portage	-	-	xij ^d x ^{li} xij ^d

MARQUES
TOWNSEND
MSS.

Midsomer quarter 1608.—To him 5 th August	x ^{li}	}	x ^{li} xij ^d
For carriage of money	xij ^d

Summa	-	-	x ^{li} xij ^d
-------	---	---	----------------------------------

Michaelmas quarter 1608.—To him 27 th October	-	x ^{li}
Sent him to Cambridge with xij ^d to the porter	-	xi ^s
For apparrell provided at London by M ^r	-
Kempe	-	viiij ^{li} vij ^s viij ^d
Geven him money	-	xx ^s
Added to him 3 rd December for expences	-	xxx ^s
For a hatt	-	vij ^s vi ^d
Added to him for expences	-	v ^s
For boots and shoes	-	xvij ^s x ^d

xxij ^{li} xix ^s	Summa	-	xx ^{li} iiij ^s
-------------------------------------	-------	---	------------------------------------

Christmas quarter 1608.—To M ^r Buckworth in full	-	xvij ^{li} j ^s iiij ^d
To M ^r Smith at Stewkey	-	xx ^s
For a paire of pantofles	-	iiij ^s iiij ^d
For apparrell	-	iiij ^{li} xviiij ^s

xxij ^{li} ij ^s viij ^d	Summa	-	xxi ^{li} xij ^s viij ^d
--	-------	---	--

And in this tyme he came often into the cuntrey and staide longe with M ^r Stanhope accompanying him and his man.	Summa of the charges dureing his being at Cambridge before he went to London being from our Lady 1606 till February 1609 aboute 3 yeares	}	celi x ^s vjd

li s d	l s d
250 10 6	Summa pagine - 88 9 11

M^r WILLIAM SMITH'S EXPENSES after his goeing to the INNES of COURT.

Christmas quarter 1608.—For his expences up to London with M ^r Stanhope and his man	-	iiij ^{li} vj ^s
For his diett and horsemeate at London	-	xxxvij ^{li} ix ^d
For his horses backe	-	xvj ^s iiij ^d
To him for the quarter ending at our Lady 1609	-	xx ^{li}
For the lease of a chamber and furnishing it	-	xxvj ^{li} v ^s vjd
For a gowne	-	v ^{li} xij ^s x ^d
For lace for a suite	-	xix ^s viij ^d
Summa	-	108 ^{li} 19 ^s 0 ^d

Lady quarter 1609.—To M ^r Smith 23 rd Martii	-	xx ^{li}
For carriage of a truncke	-	iii ^s iiij ^d
To M ^r Kempe for interest for lx ^{li} laide out for the lease of the chamber	-	iiij ^{li} xij ^s
To the taylor for making his apparrell	-	xl ^s
For a close stole	-	viiij ^s vjd
Paied uppon a bill for apparrell	-	xiiij ^{li} xvij ^s v ^d
Summa	-	42 ^{li} 2 ^s 5 ^d

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Midsomer quarter 1609.—To Mr Smith 17 th Junii	-	-	-	xx ^h ⁱ
To him xi th July	-	-	-	xx ⁱ
For garters and poynts	-	-	-	xvi ^s xiiij ^d
Delivered him in money this quarter more	-	-	-	iiij ^h
Summa	-	-	-	43 ^l 16 ^s 8 ^d

Michaelmas quarter 1609.—For a liverie cloake for his man	-	-	-	xxxv ^s iiij ^d
To himselfe in money	-	-	-	xxvij ^s iiij ^d

Mr WILLIAM SMITH'S CHARGES at CAMBRIDGE upon his last returne thether.

Added expences for Mr Smythe's returne to Cambridge	-	-	-	xxvi ^s viij ^d
Paid him xi th October	-	-	-	x ^h
Paid to Mr Anguish for his apparrell	-	-	-	iiij ^h xv ^s

Summa 17^l 17^s 6^d 19^l 4^s 2^d
Summa pagine 212^l 15^s 7^d

For a sword	-	-	-	xxxv ^s
Lent him 13 th Aprill	-	-	-	iiij ^h v ^s
More lent 24 th Aprill	-	-	-	v ^h
Paid to Mr Kempe { More 13 th May	-	-	-	xi ^h
{ For grogarine	-	-	-	v ^h xji ^s
{ For glaseing a paire of stockings	-	-	-	ij ^s
{ For an all of cambricke	-	-	-	x ^s
{ For interest	-	-	-	xv ^s
To Mr Smith 6 th November	-	-	-	x ^h
Summa	-	-	-	37 ^h 19 ^s 0 ^d

Christmas quarter 1609.—For shoes	-	-	-	vij ^s
To Mr Smith 29 th January	-	-	-	x ^h
To him 6 th February	-	-	-	x ^h
For a hatt	-	-	-	xii ^s iiij ^d

Middsummer quarter 1610.—Disbursed (as appear- eth in Midsomer quarter 1610)	-	-	-	vij ^h vj ^s vi ^d
For a remainder of debt for apparrell	-	-	-
Summa	-	-	-	28 ^l 5 ^s 10 ^d

Summa pagine 66^l 4^s 10^d

Summa laid out from Christmas 1608 till

Febr. 1609 - - - - cclxxix^h v^dSumma total is - - - - cxxix^h x^s xij^d

Endorsed. Particulars of Mr William Smythe's expences butt nott the particulars proved.

The following entries relating to Mr. William Smith's education occur in the "Particular disbursements by Sir Nathaniel Bacon : upp" as Executor of Mr William Smyth the Father.

Item geven to the College librarie in books - - - xx^h

*Education of William and Owyn Smyth in the howse.*MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSB

Item for M^r William Smythe's and Sir Owyn Smythe's charges of lodgings, apparrell, dyett, schooling, and attendance for viij yeares and a halfe in Sir Nathaniel Bacon's howse att c^d per ann. amounting in toto for that tyme to - - - - - c xvij^h Expenses by Mr. William Smyth att Cambridg and Grayes Inne for 4 yeares.

Item for M^r William Smythe's expences and mayntenance att Cambridge and Grayes Inne for fower yeares or thereabouts as by particulers in Sir Nathaniel's Booke of receipts and payments appeareth viz. from our Ladye 1. s. d.
1606 untill February 1609 in toto - - - 529-10-11

Expences for mayntenance of Sir Owyn Smyth att Stewkye and Cambridge.

Item for Sir Owyn Smythe's mayntenance and expenses att Stewkye and Cambridge for 4 yeares or thereabouts viz. from our Ladye 1606 untill the death of his brother M^r c
William Smyth in February 1609 in toto at c^d per ann. iij^h

The whole charge of the profits of M^r William Smythe's lands received by Sir Nathaniel Bacon Knight A.D. 1597 to 1609.

Sum total - - - £6669. 15. 5^h.

Particular account of the disbursements by Sir Nathaniel Bacon. A.D. 1547 to A.D. 1609.

For the Lady Bacon's debts due by her before Sir Nathaniel's marriage with her.

For debts of M^r William Smith the Lady Bacon's first husband.

For jewels bought and other extraordinary charges expended for the Lady Bacon before and after marriage.

For fines paid to the Lady Bacon for admittances within M^r Smith's manors.

For the education of M^r William Smyth (who died in February 1609) and Sir Owen Smyth (at Stewkey and Cambridge) by Sir Nathaniel Bacon for or concerning them or their estate or estates during the time they were in his tuition education and government.

For the purchase of lands in Irmingland and for the building and finishing of the house there.

Excess of disbursements over receipts £4734. 7. 9^h and half farthing.

1606. June 10th. Wyssett. The inhabitants of the town of Wyssett to Sir Nathaniel Bacon and Lady Dorothy his wife requesting them to appoint M^r Swallow to the living as minister in succession to his brother recently dead.

1607. Jan. 9th. Letter in Sir Nathaniel Bacon's writing, undressed, but probably to the Privy Council, announcing the decision come to by the Justices of the Peace of the County of Norfolk in a case which had been referred to them, between Henry Clifton, Esq. plaintiff and John, Henry, and Robert Kempe defendants, relating to the defendants' lands lying in the plaintiff's fold-course.

1607. Sep. 21st. Feltwell. Sir Edward Moundeford to "the Steward of the Courte of his Majestie's maner of Methwold," concerning a proclamation to be made at the next court by order of Sir John Fortescue Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster concerning the "breakeinge & spoylinge the Kinge's soyle and destroyinge of his shepe's course ther by digginge flagges and turffes ther." The letter goes on to specify the exact places where the damages complained of have been committed.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1608. Sep. 21st. Burnham. Petition signed by the inhabitants of Buruham to the Justices of the Peace of Norfolk complaining of one Henry Hopkins for bad behaviour and "all lewdnes" and praying he may be proceeded against. On the other side is a statement signed by Sir Nathaniel Bacon, of charges proved against Hopkins.

1609. June 16th. Serjeants Inn. Copy letter signed Tho. Fleming; Edw. Fenner; Chr. Yelverton; Da. Williams; and Jo. Crooke to whom is not stated, probably to the Justices of Norfolk. Many prisoners have lately been set free by forged writs of Habeas Corpus: the writers require for the future that, upon receipt of a writ of Habeas Corpus to bring any prisoner into the Court of King's Bench or before any Judge, the said prisoner be conveyed safely guarded to the place directed by the writ, and not to be set at liberty.

1609. Oct^r 21st. Letter from Henry (Howard) Earl of Northampton to Sir Henry Gawdy, Sir Arthur Heveningham, Sir Philip Woodhouse, and Sir Nathaniel Bacon, Knights, Deputy Lieutenants in the County of Norfolk, touching the proportion of the muster-master's allowance.

1610. Dec. 21st. "This Saint Thomasses day" Ann Lady Townshend (wife of Sir John Townshend and daughter of Sir Nathaniel Bacon) to Mr Mason. Sending "2 turkyes and a pheasant, 7 brace of partridge and halfe a dosen greene plover also a fewe puddings for a breakfast to my brother Sir Robert, yourselfe and my sunn Roger; I wish them worthy your eatinge."

1611. July 8th. Northampton House (Copy). Henry Earl of Northampton to Sir Philip Woodhouse, Sir Charles Cornwallis, Sir Henry Gawdy, Sir Henry Heveningham, Sir Henry Bedingfield, and Sir Nathaniel Bacon, deputy lieutenants of Norfolk, on the subject of the musters. No muster has been held until this year, since 1591, and Lord Northampton is amazed to see that this year the horse are 500 fewer than they were in 1591. This he attributes to the negligence of the deputy lieutenants and he therefore requires them to hold musters of all the forces every year and to raise them to the 1591 establishment.

1612. June 29th. "Articles agreed upon at Norwich signed by Sir Philip Wodehouse and Sir Nathaniel Bacon, relating to the mustering of the militia bands.

1613. Nov. 15th. London. Sir Ralph Cave, Sir Henry Bedingfield, Sir Henry Spelman and others to Sir Nathaniel Bacon. A letter has been received by the writers from the Privy Council directed as well to them as to Sir Nathaniel and other Norfolk justices, requiring them to survey the damage made by the sea on the district called Marshland, appointing a time to meet at Stowbridge to survey the said damages.

1613. Dec. 10th. Whitehall. The Privy Council to the Justices of Norfolk enclosing His Majesty's directions to be observed in the keeping of Lent.

1614. July 16th. Whitehall. Letter signed "T. Suffolke" "Gilb. Shrewsbury," "E. Worcester," "W. Knollys" "Ralph Winwood"

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSA.
—

"Jul. Cæsar" and "Tho: Lake" directed to "the Heigh Sheriffe for the time being of the Countie of Norfolk Sir Phillip Woodehowse Knight and Barronnett Sir Henry Gawthey Sir Arthur Heveningham Sir Thomas Hobbart Sir Hamon L'Estrange Sir Nathaniel Bacon and Sir Henry Beddingfield King's Justices of the Peace of the said Countie." Appointing them Commissioners for musters in the County of Norfolk "to cause generall veiwes and musters to be taken of all the forces in that countie boeth of horse and foote."

1614. July 18th. Whitehall. Same to Same. On the same subject directing the Commissioners not to remove any officers at present holding commissions and expressing a high opinion of Mr Curson muster-master of the county.

1614. August 3rd. Extracts from the rolls of the Court Leet of the Manor of Fakenham, Norfolk.

1614. Sep. 17th. Whitehall. Copy letter from the Privy Council to the Sheriff and Justices of Norfolk, as to a benevolence to be levied in the county to supply his Majesty's urgent necessities at home and abroad. "For ye cannot but understand that the Marquesse Spinola hath amassed together a stronge and powerfull army which sometime he pretendeth to have don under the charge of the Archduke, sometime under the name of the King of Spayne, sometime as best may serve for his advantage under the comand of the Emperor. Whereby we may conclude that thei all thre are combined together, and [he] hath caried all the townes in the countries of and Cleves scituate upon the tract of the Rhyne, wherby not onely the Elector of Brandenburg is deprived of the possession of those townes, which he for many years peacably enjoyed, whose right his Majestie is bound to defend by vertue of the treaties contracted between him and the Princes of the Unyon in Germany, but the persons and States of the Elector Palatine, and the Princesse his lady, his Majesty's only and deerest daughter, environed on all sides by divers armyes are at this present endangered."

1614. Dec. 29th. Eccles. Thomas Barsham to Sir Nathaniel Bacon, on local matters of no great importance. "Sir Phillipp Knevet is travayled beyond the seas; his lady remaynes at Buckenham Castell. Sir Francis Lowell keepeth a great house at Harlinge where the poore hath good releife, and so doth Sir Thomas Hollande at Quiddenham to whome I am much bounden for his kindnes especially for suppressinge of ale-houses in Eccles, who hath promised me to licence none without my consent. We have no need of any, for we are poore enough already."

1615. Aug. 7th. Northampton House. Thomas (Howard) (1st) Earl of Suffolk, Sir Fulke Grevyll, and Sir Thomas Parry (Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster) to Sir Nathaniel Bacon "farmour of the perquisits of the Manor of Methwold in the County of Norfolk" The writers are the King's Commissioners for selling his Majesty's copyhold property and are charged to inform themselves of the true yearly value of all the copyholds belonging to the King, requiring Sir Nathaniel not to hold any court for the admitting of tenants, but to order the Steward to refuse the surrender of any tenants, and to prepare a true rental of the manor.

1619. April 16th. Wivenhoe. A petition from many of the inhabitants of Wivenhoe to the patron of the Church and Lord of the Manor, Sir Roger Townshend, asking him to take some steps to stop the "desperate distempers" and "implacable contentions" that have arisen in the parish.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1619. June 24th. Paper endorsed "The Apothecarie's bill." Sir Roger Townshend's account. Among the items are:

"Greene ginger"	-	-	-	7 ^s
Tabacco	-	-	-	2 ^s
Greene ginger	-	-	-	8 ^s
A masse of pills	-	-	-	5 ^s
An electuarye	-	-	-	8 ^s 6 ^d

Under the name of M^r Stanhope Townshend 12th September 1618 are

"A clyster"	-	-	-	3 ^s 4 ^d
A julep	-	-	-	3 ^s
A cordiall with behoardston (sic)	-	-	-	3 ^s
The cordiall julep	-	-	-	3 ^s
Hearbs for brothe	-	-	-	4 ^d
Rose water	-	-	-	6 ^d
A suppositorye	-	-	-	6 ^d
Another suppositorye	-	-	-	6 ^d
An unguent	-	-	-	3 ^d
A purge	-	-	-	3 ^s
Purgeing pills	-	-	-	2 ^s 6 ^d

1620. July 12th. Whitehall. The Privy Council to the Justices of Norfolk directing them to impress 80 seamen in their county to go in the expedition his Majesty is preparing for the suppression of piracy.

1620. August. Norwich. Copy Letter unsigned and unaddressed, headed "Letters to the Captain of Foote." Probably a circular to be sent to all the Captains of militia regiments in Norfolk, requiring them to prepare for a general muster on the 15th September next, and giving other instructions.

1622. April 14th. Sir Nathaniel Bacon to his son-in-law Sir Roger Townshend. "I have lately received from our High Sheriff a coppie of the Counsell's letters about a voluntary contribucon without the name of benevolence to the Kinge, for the recovery of the Palatinat, and all our Justices of Peace are to labour therein, first in setting their owne somes thei will give, next to call befor them all subsidy men and others of value, and privately to deale with one by one apart from another, and so to persuade them to give. It will be some labour to effect this yf it be performed accordingly."

1622. Aug. 31st. Roger Townshend to his father Sir Roger Townshend. "Here is much uncertaine newes from the Low Countries; sometyes wee have the day, then they, but certaine much loss on both sides. The towne stands yett firm; Count Mansfield is now certainly come into Brabant and hath taken Marie Mount, hath done much spoile to the country, and wee heare in comming to joyne with his Excellencye hath received a blow, but the contrary is reported too, so that I know not what you may beleave more certaine then that they are dayly in action, and much slaughter on both sides. The King is at Windsor whither he hath summoned all the Councell; most say it is about the marriage which is now afresh againe, and the dispensation certainly come, but others think it is about the Palatinat which is now in great distresse, for there is onely 3 townes left, at least threescore thousand of the enemies in the country; more expected. They have cutt off all meanes of supply of victualls, and notwithstanding all treaties proceed in a hostile manner, for they took a towne there by composition, yett putt all to

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSB.
—

the sword. They have put garisons in Spire and Wormes, imperiall townes, and soe racke the Protestants in them, as they feare a sacke. Yet the King promisethe a redeliverye of all againe. Thus they stand abroad; at home we are feasting. Great intertainement in Sussex by my Lord Thresorer at his new howse which he bought of Sir Thomas Sherley, where was my Lord of Buckingham and his dependents. From thence they went to Pettworth to my Lord of Northumberland where there hapened a difference betwene his two sonnes in law, my Lord of Doncaster and my Lord Lisle. I cannot tell you the particulars, but they were at blowes, and parts taken. But my Lord of Buckingham being there made a peace for the tyme."

1622. Nov. 5th. Paper headed "The King of Spain's letter, Phillip 7 the 4th to his favorite the Count d'Olivares."

"The King my father declared at his death that his intention never was to marrie my sister Donna Maria with the Prince of Wales which your uncle Don Balthasar understood; so treated this match ever with an intent to delay it. Notwithstanding it is now so far advanced that (considering withall the aversenes unto it of the Infanta) it is time to seeke by some meanes to divert the treatie which I would have you finde out and I will make it good whatsoever it be. But in all other things procure the satisfaction of the King of Great Brittain who hath deserved verie much and it shall content me so it be not in the matche."

1623. Jan. 27th. Manington. John Potts, to whom does not appear. Relating an election contest at which Sir John Corbett backed by Sir Hamon Le Strange and the writer, Sir John Holland, and Sir Robert Gawdy were candidates. Sir John Corbett was declared by the Sheriff to have been elected, but the party of Sir Robert Gawdy carried him and his son "downe into the markett place in triumph, from thence downe to the Maid's heade, where they drew a cartell (signed principally by the mutineers, Urber, Stileman, Parr, Tubbinge, &c. besides many others ignorant of their designe) to traduce our election. Notwithstanding that all the Knights, justices and gentlemen of quality (even of Gawdy's partye) approved the sentence and sealed the indentures with the shreife."

1623. Jan. 27th. Sir Hamon Le Strange to Sir Roger Townshend, on election matters. Mentions Sir John Corb[et] Sir Thomas Holland, Sir Roger Gawdy. (Seal.)

[1624-5.] Jan. 3rd. London. Roger Townshend to his father Sir Roger Townshend. "Here hath bene an addition of the Duke of Brunswick, who came on Christmas Eve, was conducted presently to St James's and that night fetched by the Prince to the King, who made him sett by him in a chair, would have had him put on his hatt, acknowledged a greater bond to him then to any Prince in Christendome in the love shewed to his daughter, promised a requitall, and so sent him back to St James's where he was lodged in the Prince's owne bedd, and the same servis in state, till he was weary of it, and desired to be freed of the solitude of eating alone, or he would take a lodgng some where els. So he was, and afterwards feasted in divers places, as my Lord of Mountgomery, the Countess of Bedford, the Lady Hatton. His intertainments otherwise were only playes, and running at the ring he was but a spectator. On New Yeare's Eve he had the Garter and my Lord of Salisbury with him, and my Lord of Carleile by a deputye; there were some cerimonies in the chappell for it, and that night he tooke his leave, and went awaye the next morning, and the French Embassador the day before him

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSB.

There is no stay of the match with France, that wee heare of, there is articles abroad of very hard conditions but wee say they are false, and that the Pope hath sent a dispensation without any conditions at all, for which the King of Spaine hath taken exceptions against him, and nothing is like to come of it, for there is hope of their reconciliation."

[Before 1628]. Oct. 22nd Grays Inn. N. Bacon to his uncle Sir Nathaniel Bacon. "For Bohemia the newes is verrie uncertaine as allsoe for Hungaria, but sure it is that Count Mansfeldt having payed his soldiers with forrage heretofore in Bavaria standeth now in neede of another manner of treasure, and hath sent over to our King Mr Ramsey who vexeth the King with importunitie and vowes he will not returne from the King without a satisfactorie answer."

The report is suddaine and late that the Turke hath overthrowne the Polonian; that the King and his sonne are bothe slaine with manie thousands more; that our supplies that were sent over at the request of the Polonian are staid by the way by the King of Denmark under shew of feare lest they should be employed against the King of Sweden.

The Palatinate after the loss of Heydleberg is now rocked asleepe with a halfe yere's truce. The English are well in Maynheim, Frankendale, and another towne all wel fortified although all of them have had their severall assalts with shame and loss to the enimie. Gulick is yet begirt with a sege by Spinola; the Prince of Orange lieth within 4 miles of the towne. It is hoped cold wether will coole their courages; other remedie is hardlie to be expected. The King of Bohemia is comme back againe to the Hage, being resolved to forgoe not a title that he hath allreadie gotten.

Sluice is aymed at; the enimie are building a fort near it, yet the haven is open and free and it's evident, notwithstanding, they meane to beseege it. The affaires of France are somewhat better. The King is (if not latelia comme awaie) before Montauban; the town holds out resolutlie, having caused to be sett over the gate of their town in large letters: Roy sans foy, et peuple sans peure, a faithlesse King and fearelesse people. They were in greate want, but the Duke of Roan with 4000 men in the face of the campe releved them though with loss of nere 100 men. The report is that the Duke d'Espernon is latelia dead of sicknesse before Rochell. The King to block up their haven had sent thither 30 shippes whoe were set uppon by 20 Rochellers and were scattered, 9 of them being taken and sunk, and the next day 2 shippes more coming with provision for the King's fleete fell into the Rochellers' power while they supposed them to be the King's shippes and were taken by them. They had a greate quantitie of powder and store of corne. The Pope hath sent a lettre to the King of admirable commendations and praises and in the end of all his apostolick benediction.

Since Sir Robert Mansel's returne the pyrates have taken above 40 of our shippes, the gennerrall report is 57, in severall places being most fisher men of small burthen belonging to other havens in the west and east parts, none belonging to London but 2; I feare Linne or Yermouth have their shares in the loss For ourselves the Lord Archbishop as yet stands in uncertaintie; the Commissioners have not done with him, it is feared he shall hardlie escape a favor by it The Marquis Hamilton is going or is gone from the Court, allsoe Mr Thomas Murrie secretary to the Prince, and Mr Fullerton bothe religious honest gentlemen are putt from their places: they say Coddington shall succede the secretarie's place. This Coddington was legier in Spaine. The Court speaks Spanish, Councel Spanish, Clergie Spanish, why should not all the countrie be Spanish at lengthe? The match they saie is concluded, a high alter making at St. James's and a sylver crucifix, and gentlewomen are suters to the Spanish ambassador for places of attendance under her. I leave it to your discretion to beleve or not, for my part I shall tell you more when I see these things fulfilled. But enough for this time."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1628. May 6th. Copy Order of the Court of Chancery in a suit of Sir Roger Townshend and others v. Harris and others. Signed Washington.

1629. March 31st. Whitehall. The Privy Council to the Commissioners for the subsidies in Norfolk. (Copy.) As to a subsidy to be assessed on those that can best afford to be taxed and who in the former assessment were too much undervalued.

[Before 1636]. John Yates to Sir Roger Townshend on election matters. Sir Roger has been elected with Sir Robert Bell for the county in spite of his determination expressed that he would not stand. The writer begs him to alter his determination. 1626?

1659. Jan. 23rd. Sir William Doyly to Sir Horace Townshend that he is willing to meet Sir Horace at the time he wishes and to do anything requisite for the "Country's peace, ease of grevances and settlement of the nation."

1659. Feb. 11th. Whitehall. Copy letter headed "Lord Generall Monck and the officers here to the severall and respective regiments and other forces in England Scotland and Ireland" recommending, as a means of further establishing and strengthening the Commonwealth, the readmission to the House of Commons of the secluded members, the legal dissolution of Parliament and the issue of writs for a future full representation of the whole commonwealth of England Scotland and Ireland. The writers are confident that the present Parliament if the secluded members are admitted will not repeal any of the Acts and orders for supplies or public disposition of lands, &c.

"And if any disaffected persons shal hereby take occasion to make disturbance of the peace of the Commonwealth either in favour of Charles Stuart or any other pretended authority we desire you to secure them til the pleasure of the Parliament, or Counsell of State be knowne in that behalfe."

1659. "Charles R. (autograph) Charles by the Grace of God King of England Scotland France and Ireland Defender of the faith, &c. to our trusty and welbeloved (sic) greeting. Wee do by these presents constitute and appoint you to be Governor of

(sic) and to put such a garrison of horse and foote therein as you judge necessary for the defence of the same against the rebells and to command the said garrison as Governor thereof, and to do all things necessary for the preservation of the said place for which this shall be your warrant. Given at our Court at Bruxelles the 6th day of March 1659 in the eleventh yeare of our reigne."

Sealed with the Royal Arms.

[1617-36.] April 8th. Thomas Godsalue to his cousin Sir Roger Townshend. The writer is in prison on a false accusation of having attempted to escape, and "for want of paying for my chamber, I am cast downe into the lower ward;" begging Sir Roger to write to Sir John Corbet asking him to talk with M^r Wcekes the gaoler on his behalf,

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

N.D. [1648-1660]. Draft Petition of the gentry of Norfolk to Sir William Lenthall speaker of the House of Commons "Wee the gentry of the County of Norfolk and County and City of Norwich being deeply affected with the sence of our sad distractions and divisions both in church and State and wearied with the misery of an unnatural civill warre, the too frequent interruptions of Government, the impositions of severall heavy taxes, and the loud outcries of multitudes of undone and almost famished people, occasioned by a generall decay of trade which hath spread itself throughout the whole nation and these countyes in particular; and haveing mett together and consulted what may best remedy and remove our and the nation's present grevances and distractions, doe humbly conceive that the chiefe expedient will be the recalling of those members that were seclused in 1648 and satt before the force put upon the Parliament (wee of this county of Norfolk being by such seclusion deprived of any person to represent us in Parliament) and alsoe by filling upp the vacant places therof and all to be admitted without any oathe or ingagement previous to there entrance, which being done wee shalbe ready to acquiesce and submitt in all things to the judgment and authority of Parliament, without which authority the people of England cannot be obliged to pay any taxes."

N.D. [temp. Interregnum] Copy "petition of the barronets, knights, esquires, gentlemen, ministers, and others of the County of Norfolk" to the Parliament, complaining of the state of their county which they ascribe to its not being represented in Parliament.

Praying that such of their members as have not forfeited their rights may be summoned to come and sit in Parliament.

N. D. Dorothy Lady Bacon to her grandson Sir Roger Townshend. Unimportant. The postscript is, "O Sir lett me say as I dare speake my mind if I had you privatt. My mallencaly sonne hath within this few weekes so greved my selfe and him selfe as it wear strang to tell you ondy because hee can not indevar but to lede a singell life, and a travelling life. Alas what shall I saye; I cannot indevar him once more to ventar all the chellderen I have in this world, but this must not be knowen it came from me."

N.D. Dorothy Lady Bacon to her daughter-in-law Lady Townshend on private family affairs; mentions her daughter Knyvett.

N.D. Sep. 11th. London. Roger Townshend to his mother Lady Townshend. Mentions his cousin Stanhope.

N.D. Ann Corbett to Sir Roger Townshend. Acknowledging a loan of £200.

N.D. Ann Townshend to her sister (name not given) on family and domestic matters. Mentions her cousin Robin Bacon, and her cousin Hungat.

N.D. Nicholas Le Strange to Sir Roger Townshend asking him to be godfather with Sir H. Spelman to his infant son who is to be baptised at Hunstanton.

N.D. Paper unsigned in Lady Anne Townshend's writing beginning "M^r Mann" relating to Sir Roger Townshend and her son whose tutor M^r Mann appears to be.

N.D. [temp. Interregnum]. Copy petition to Lord Fairfax requesting him to take steps as suggested at the foot of the petition to secure the lasting peace of the County, the punishment of rebels and enemies, and the prevention of the liberties of the County being further endangered.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSB.

N.D. "To the townsmen of Halloughton and Martin Raynham. Sir Horatio Townshend Baronet sendeth greeting.

As 'tis the duty of all Christian people fearing the Lord, to keepe the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace, soe theese are to will and require you the townsmen aforesaid to live in a peaceable and quiet manner with your minister that soe al divisions and differences being laid aside ye may follow after peace and holines without which noe man shall see the Lord."

III—LETTERS AND PAPERS, 1660–1700.

Letters between the following persons are not of sufficient importance to be set out at length:

Horatio Lord Townshend and Charles Viscount Townshend passim; Lord Richardson (1661); Charles Spelman (1661 etc.); Sir Philip Wodehouse of Kimberley (1663); Gilbert Archbishop of Canterbury holograph (1663); Sir Jacob Astley (1663); Sir Robert Kemp (1663 et seq.); Sir Joseph Paine (1664); Hugh Morrell (1664); Sir Henry Bedingfeld (1664); Sir John Holland (1674); Ann Lady Townshend (1675); Lord Arlington (1677 etc.); Christopher Bedingfeld (1679); Sir Peter Glean of Norwich (1680, etc.); Sir John Holland (1681 et seq.); W. Harbord (1681); Sir Christopher Calthorpe (1681); Thomas Townshend (1681–2); Sir William Jones (1682); Sir R. Potts (1682); James Fountain (1682); The Earl of Rochester (1685); Thomas Warde (1686); The Bishop of Hereford (1686); The Duke of Beaufort (1686).

1660. Nov. 5th. Paper headed "an inventory of what cloathes are in my keepeinge" and "an inventory of what boots and shoos are in my keepeinge" same date. Endorsed by Lord Townshend.

1661. Feb. 3rd. Robert Reade to Charles Spellman. "Att the right honourable my Lord Townshend's in the old Palace Yard Westminster." The writer says that he has as yet received no command from Mr Spellman or from Lord Townshend, "nor do I wonder at it, because the flying post lay drunke last Friday at Fakenham (being the day that he should have binn at Thetford to take those letters then there which he should bring hether on Saturday) and had not changed his quarter yesterday as I am informed by one of Scott's men who saw him pittyfully drunke. The cuntry complaines of him."

1661. Mar. 22nd. Nathaniel Norcrosse to "his loveing friend Mr Keimar these at Wells." A letter from one Puritan to another on religious matters, containing no information. The postscript, however, is "as for newes we are expecting to have the bill of Conformity to come forth. It will silence all ministers that will not conforme, and supresse all meeteings that yet wee enjoy through mercy."

1661 to 1667. A Schedule comprising the names times and causes of commitments of all the prisoners in the gaol belonging to the County of Norfolk, excepting those that are in for debt.

1662. March 16th. Heigham. The Bishop of Norwich to Lord Townshend. Apologizes for his long absence from the House of Lords owing to his wife's severe illness, and thanks Lord Townshend for having excused him there. The Bishop of Worcester has his proxy. (Seal.)

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS

1662. June 12th. Norwich. Sir John Pettus to Lord Townshend enclosing "A narrative concerning the proceedings upon an order of the House of Lords bearing date the 26th Feb. 1661 wherein the determination of admeasuring seaven miles from the Crane Key in Yarmouth towards Laystoffe is referred to the two severall and respective sheriffes of Suffolk and Norfolk," relating what took place on the measurement being made, and speaking of the opposition of the sheriffs to its being done.

1663. May 13th. Lynn. Laurence Withers to Horatio Lord Townshend asking him for the place of one Mr Bromley, against whom certain charges have been made, should it be vacated by him.

1663. Aug. 5th. Whitehall. Original note signed : Clarendon, Albemarle, Lindsey, Manchester, Anglesey, Ashley, Carbery, Middleton, W. Compton, Will. Morice, Henry B——, and Richard Browne to Lord Townshend, Lord Lieutenant of Norfolk, recommending to his Lordship the speedy establishment of the militia of the County as the best means for checking and preventing the assemblies and conventicles of the disaffected in that part of the country, and stating what extra pay can be given to officers and men under the provisions of a recent Act intituled "An additional Act for the better ordering the forces in the severall counties of this kingdom."

1663. Sep. 2nd. Whitehall. Copy (signed Richard Browne) of a letter unsigned and unaddressed, requiring that the militia of the County (Norfolk) shall be put into such a position as shall enable them to suppress the assemblies, meetings, and conventicles of the disaffected in the County and specifying the sums to be paid to them for such extra duty, out of the money received of the month's tax of 70,000*l.* levied by a late Act intituled "An Act for ordering the forces of the several Counties of this kingdom."

1664. Mar. 22nd. Copy "Significavit" under Sign Manual addressed to the Lord Treasurer and Chancellor of the Exchequer to grant to Horatio Lord Townshend the two-thirds belonging to the Crown in Marshlands in Walton, Walsoken, Walpole, Tyd St Mary's, Wisbich, Leverington, Newton, and Tyd St Giles, in the Counties of Cambridge, Lincoln, and Norfolk.

1664. Ap. 29th. Lynn. Laurence Withers to Sir Ralph Hare Baronet requesting the office of King's Searcher should it be vacated by the present occupant Mr Bromley against whom several charges are about to be brought. (Seal.)

1664. May. 2nd. A letter signed "M. M." unaddressed, but as it commences "My Lord" and deals with questions affecting the government of Norwich, is probably to Lord Townshend, on some matter of a charter sought by the Mayor of Norwich, to which the writer is strongly opposed.

1664. Oct. 29th. Sir William Doily to Lord Townshend indignantly denying some charges brought by Lord Townshend against him relative to the government of the town of Yarmouth.

1664. Oct. 31st. Norwich. John Gladman to Lord Townshend. The writer has incurred Lord Townshend's displeasure owing to his having written something to the Duke of Albemarle without first shewing it to his Lordship, and writes to explain his conduct in the affair.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1664. Nov. 2nd. Yarmouth. Sir Thomas Medowes to Lord Townshend, Lord Lieutenant and Vice-Admiral of Norfolk, as to the impressing of men for service in the Navy.

1664. Nov. 23rd. Ovington. Mr T. Felton to Lord Townshend. Would have written to his Lordship before but "was stopped by a very great snow and the waters which were so upp as there was no travelling, and when I returned thence to Apleton the waters were so up as I was stayed there 7 or 8 days together before I could pass thence." The letter relates to Lord Townshend's mineral property.

1664. Dec. 12th. Raynham. Charles Spelman to Lord Townshend chiefly on the affairs of his Lordship's Norfolk property "Here is nothing new here that wee wonder att but 2 millions and an halfe, and the new blasing starr that poynts his beurd to the new world where most matter for money is to be had. These mistye nights has much perplexed Mr Clarke whoe, hearing on Monday last that there was such a thing as a comett, has broake his sleepe all this weeke, nor could he take sight of any till this morne, which has a little appeased him after he had roused his wholl family to pertake of the prodigie."

1665. Ap. 26th. Lynn Regis. Thomas Greene Mayor of Lynn to Lord Townshend, complaining of the injury done to the traders of the town by "sea pirates, and forreigne men of warr" and asking for a convoy for their vessels to and from Newcastle and other northern ports.

1666. May 5th. "Royal Charles in the Buoy of the Nore" The Duke of Albemarle to whom does not appear (probably to Lord Townshend) asking assistance to the ketch of Sir Edward Spragge commanding the Triumph to impress some seamen for the King's service. (Seal.)

1666. Sep. 7th. Whitehall. Lord Arlington to Lord Townshend on business relating to the County of Norfolk, acknowledging three letters from Lord Townshend the first two being on County business "the third takeing noteece of the unhappy fire fallen here and desireing to know his Majesty's pleasure to you in this great exegency. To which his Majesty bids me answer, that seeing it hath pleased God miraculously to extinguish this rageing fire, and that it hath not been accompanied with any of those troublesome consequences from the desaffected party which wee might reasonably have apprehended, there will be no need for the present of your Lordshipp's assembleing any part of the meletia or further troubling the country there, unlesse your Lordshipp sees cause for it. If any appears here, your Lordshipp shall be timely advertised thereof. Which is all I have leasure now to say to you."

1667. June 16th. "Cockpitt" The Duke of Albemarle to Lord Townshend asking him to send two or three companies of the regiment, which he had raised, into Yarmouth, for the safety of that town.

1667. July 11th. Whitehall. Lord Arlington to Lord Townshend "I did not contend with your Lordshipp that Cremen was an honest man, but an Irish man, and if your lordshipp find him otherwise in either of these qualities I am farre from desiring his release.

1669. Sep. 14th. Sir Francis Bacon to "Mr Townshend" enclosing a copy of Mr Justice Rainsford's opinion on the case of a man named Blancher who was convicted at the Norwich Assizes of killing two men named Cooke and Hendry.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS

1670. Mar. 30th. London. Lord Townshend to the Mayor of Norwich to be communicated to the Aldermen of the City. Acknowledges receipt of their letter of the 9th March. He has never failed to assist them with the King. Desires to know wherein he has failed towards them. Refers to those employed in the present concern with the Corporation of Great Yarmouth to say whether he has been wanting in his endeavour to serve them in that matter.

1671. June 19th. Copy abstract of a docquet appointing Sir Robert Long Baronet Treasurer and Receiver General of the Revenues late in jointure to the late Queen Dowager in the place of Sir Henry Wood. Signed: "Ashley" and "J. Duncombe."

1673. Feb. 19th. Warrant signed "Charles R." and countersigned "Arlington" for the disbanding of Lord Northampton's regiment.

1674. May 22nd. Quidenham. Sir John Holland to Lord Townshend. Concurs with his Lordship's opinion of Sir Robert Kemp. Thanks him for acquainting him with his Lordship's intention of setting him up to supply the vacancy in Parliament by the death of Lord Rychardson. Will support him.

N. D. (1674). Letter unaddressed and signed "T."—from Lord Townshend—beginning "my Lord" asking for assistance to further Sir Robert Kemp's election as M.P. for the County of Norfolk.

1674. July 2nd. Lord Yarmouth to Lord Townshend promising his assistance to Sir Robert Kemp in the forthcoming election for Norfolk.

1676. July 23rd. Quidenham. Sir John Holland to Lord Townshend. Congratulates him on the verdict and damages given him by the jury at Norwich. He intends to go to Norwich to-morrow and to visit the Judge, whom he has told that he did not at all doubt but he should yet live to be better understood by his Majesty's great ministers and so to be restored to his Majesty's good opinion and favour which was all the ambition he had.

1676. Aug. 6th. Quidenham. Letter from Sir John Holland to Lord Townshend. Has been to Norwich where he met the Lord Marshall and visited the Judge. The Lord Marshall blamed him for deserting the King's service in the militia and told him that the Lord Chancellor had said that he had refused to serve the King in his Lieutenancy under Lord Yarmouth though he had done it under Lord Townshend, and that such refusal was a kind of warring against the King. That he replied that that was one of the Lord Chancellor's rhetorical expressions to satisfy the Lord Treasurer and that he was very well content with his present condition.

"Since the verdict passed all things are and will be improved to your prejudice. To meet and prevent the ill consequences of this, your Lordship should frequently impress by your friends at Court the constancy of your loyal and faithful affections towards his Majesty in his person and Government, and that no disobligations shall or can make you depart from your duty."

1676. Oct. 24th. Deposition of the defendant in an action of trespass Horace Lord Townshend v. Dr. Owen Hughes.

1676. Nov. 12th. Copy letter from Lord Townshend to Sir John Duncombe. Enclosing opinion of Sir Robert Sawyer upon Lord Townshend's Patent of the sea coal rents dated 21st March 19 Charles II. 1667, and upon further Letters Patent dated 26th May 1676 granted to Sir John Duncombe of the rent of £1000 reserved by the above Letters Patent.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1677. Mar 12th. Norwich. Letter signed by the Mayor of Norwich and many others, to Lord Townshend, praying his Lordship's influence in Parliament "in preventinge the Corporation of Yarmoth from obteyninge any additional time granted in Parliament to levie monie upon the Counties of Norfolk Suffolk and this citie towards the repaire of their haven and peeres, they haveinge already received nere £12000 to that purpose." (Corporation Seal.)

N.D. [but about 1677]. Sir John Holland to Lord Townshend as to a motion (the nature of which does not transpire) the writer intends to make in the House of Commons and asking Lord Townshend's support. Inclosed is a copy of some correspondence Sir John has had with the Lord Chamberlain, Lord Arlington, on the same subject :

1677. Jan. 29th. Sir John Holland to Lord Arlington, stating that he intends to make a complaint in the House of Commons against a person who has misrepresented him to the King, and asking Lord Arlington's permission to make use of his name as his Lordship was his informant of the name of the person who so misrepresented him.

1677. Jan. 29th. Lord Arlington to Sir John Holland in answer to the above, begging Sir John not to mention his name in the complaint he intends making.

1678. March 28th. Deed signed and sealed by James Calthorpe acknowledging the receipt of £550 from Horatio Lord Townshend paid to him after the death of Lady Townshend wife of the said Lord Townshend in accordance with a bond signed and sealed by his Lordship.

1679. April 5th. Norwich. Letter signed with a monogram—apparently S. T.—to Lord Townshend on election and other local matters. Endorsed by Lord Townshend, "This letter concerns the Bishop and M^r Turginton's being turned out of his surrogate's place." Mentions Sir H. B[edingfeld], Lord Shaftesbury, Sir Francis Winnington, and Sir T. Hare.

1680. June 25th. Sir John Hobart to Lord Townshend. Endorsed by Lord Townshend, "Sir John Hobart's answer to mien of the 24 of June 1680. This letter must be kept." The letter is on election matters and relates to Lord Townshend's having said he would withdraw his interest from Sir John's side in consequence of some difficulty which had arisen in reference to the election expenses.

1681. May 2nd. Melford. Sir Robert Kemp to Lord Townshend on election matters. Mentions Sir P. G[leane], Sir John Cordil, M^r Wyndham. (Seal.)

1681. May 16th. Sir Peter Gleane to Lord Townshend in answer to one of his Lordship's of 11th May, announcing his intention not to stand at the next election.

1681. June 28th. John Stewart to M^r Rudding (a tenant of Lord Townshend's) written at Lord Townshend's desire relating to the destruction by fire of Mr Rudding's dairy, stating that, if Mr Rudding rebuilds the dairy and all other destroyed buildings, Lord Townshend, if he approves of the work, "is like to bee kinde" to him.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1682. March 11th. Lord Townshend to Thomas Townshend, endorsed:—"My answer to Sir Peter Gleane's letter to my cossen Thomas Townshend dated the 11th of March '81--2" on election matters. Sir Peter appears to claim money from Lord Townshend on behalf of his election expences on the score of service done to his Lordship; Lord Townshend repudiates the services and refuses to pay the money, but is willing to refer the matter to arbitrators. The writer is evidently very angry with Sir Peter Glean. "For his wound if hee have received any I cannot but bee sorry for it, though ignorant of any, but what hee hath now given himselve in this affaire. As to his pleasure or easie travile, I thinke noe furdur worth my taking notice of then only to tell him, that I have knowne fortie pounds buy a paire of naigs (if one will not doe) that hath draged as weighty a man, from head to taile, as Sir Peter Gleane, and to more freinds then hee will leave himselve, unless hee useth them better than hee hath done mee. As for his service to mee my wife and children, though he bee not ashamed to present it, yett I am, and they shall bee soe for my sake to receive it upon the tearms it is tendered."

1682-4. Rough notes in Lord Townshend's writing of sums of money received and expended by him, the receipts amounting to £3147-8-11 in 1684.

1683. Sep. 10th. Sir John Holland to Lord Townshend. Relative to the differences and unhappy divisions which have arisen among the chief gentlemen in the country through contested elections and submitting to his Lordship certain proposals relative thereto, which he intended to make to some in his neighbourhood.

Paper endorsed

"Sir John Holland's speeches made in '75"

The paper contains (a) a long speech apparently upon the King's Speech on the question of Supply. (b) A speech upon reading the Order for the House to take into consideration what is to be done in the matters of dispatch with the Lords. (c) A speech upon the 2nd reading of the Bill for the repealing of the Act passed in the beginning of the Long Parliament for the continuation of that Parliament and the calling of future Parliaments.

1684-5. Mar. 17th. Copy Letter from Lord Townshend to the Earl of Rochester. Relative to the attendance of himself and his wife at the Coronation of the King and Queen.

N.D. "Some particular matters of fact relating to the administration of affaires in Scotland under the Duke of Lauderdale, humbly offered to your Majestie's consideration in obedience to your Royal commands.

1st The Duke of Lauderdale did grosly misrepresent to your Majestie the condicon of the western counties as if they had beene in a state of rebellion though there never had been any opposicon made to your Majestie's authority, nor any resistance offered to your fforces nor to the execucon of the lawes, but hee purposeing to abuse your Majestie that soe hee might carry on his sinister designes by your authority advised your Majestie to raise an army against your peaceable subjects, at least did frame a letter to be sent to your Majestie to bee signed by your Royall hand to that effect, which being sent downe to your Councell orders were thereupon given out for the raising an army of 8 or 9000 men the greatest parte whereof were Hylanders, and notwithstanding that to avert this threatning the nobility and gentry of that country did send to Edensburgh and for the security of the peace did offer to engage, that whosoever should bee sent to put the lawes in execucon should meet with noe affront and that they would become hostages for their safety : yett this army was marched into a peaceable country and did take free quarters according to their comissions and in most places leavyed great sumes of money under notion of dry quarters and did plunder and robb your subjects of which noe redresse could bee obtained though complaynts were frequently made.

2. All which were expressly contrary to the lawes of the kingdome. In these quarterings it was apparent, that regard was only had to that Duke's private animosities, for the greatest part of these places that were mostly quartered on, and destroyed had not been guilty of any the feild conventicles complayned of, and many of the places that were most guilty were spared upon private consideracons.

3. The subjects at that tyme were required to subscribe an exorbitant and illegall bond which was imposible to bee performed by them (viz.) that they their wives and children and servants, their tenants and their wives children and servants should live orderly according to law, not goe to conventicles or entertaine vagrant preachers and severall other particulars. By which bond those which synded it were made lyable for every man's fault that lived upon the grounds.

4. Your subjects were charged with laborrowes, denounced rebels, and captions were issued out for seizeing their persons upon there refusing to signe the aforesaid bond, and the nobility and gentry there who have been ever faithfull to your Majesty and had appeared in armes for suppressing the last rebellion were disarmed upon oath, a proclamacon was also issued forbidding them upon great penalties to keepe any horses above 4l. 3s. 4d. price :

5. The nobility and gentry of the Shire of Ayre were also indicted at the instance of your Majestie's Advocate of very high crimes and misdemeanors whereof some did import treason. These indictments were delivered them in the evening to bee answered by them next morning upon oath, and when they did demand two or three dayes' tyme to consider of their indictments and make the benefitt of lawyers to advise within matters of soe high concernment and also excepted to their being put to sweare against themselves in matters that were capitall, which was contrary to all law and justice, those their desires were rejected though the like had never been done to the greatest malefactor in the Kingdome, and it was told them, they must either sweare instantly or they would repute them guilty and proceed accordingly :

6. The noblemen and gentlemen knowing themselves innocent of all that had been surmised against them did purge themselves by oath of all the particulars that were objected to them and were thereupon acquitted, and tho' the Comitte of the Councell used the severest maner of enquiry to discover any seditious or treasonable designes which were pretended as the grounds of leading in that army into those countreyes yett nothing could ever bee proved, soe false was that sugestion concerning a rebellion then designed that was offered to your Majestie and prevayled with you for sending the afore mentioned letter.

7. The oppressions and quarterings still continuing, the noblemen and gentlemen of those countreyes went to Edensburgh to represent to your Councils the heavy pressure that they and their people lay under, and were ready to offer to them all that in law or reason could bee required of them for securing the peace, the Councill did immediately upon their appearing sett forth a proclamation requiring them to depart the town

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.
—

within three dayes upon all highest paines, and when the Duke of Hamilton did petition for leave to stay two or three dayes longer for some very urgent affaires, that was refused him.

8. When some persons of quality had declared to the Duke of Lauderdale, that they would goe and represent their conditions to your Majestie, if they could not have justice from your ministers, for preventing that a proclamacon was sett forth forbidding all the subjects to depart the kingdome without lycence, that soe your majestie might not bee acquainted with the said condicon of your subjects a thing without all president or law for putting of your subjects from makeing their application to your majestie noe less contrary to your majestie's true interest (who must alwayes bee the refuge of your people) then to the naturall right of the subject :

The former particulars relate to the invasion of the rights of great numbers of your subjects all at once; what followe, have indeed only fallene on some single persons yett are such that your whole people apprehend that they may bee upon the slightest occasions brought under the like mischiefes.

The Councill hath upon many occasions proceeded to a new kinde of punishment of declareing men incapable of all publike trust, concerning which your majestie may remember what complaints the said Duke made when dureing the Earle of Middleton's administracon hee himselfe was put under and incapacitated by an Act of Parliament; The words of his paper against the Earle of Middleton are uncapacitating (sic) was to whipp with scorpions, a punishment to robb men of their honour and to lay a lasting stayne upon them and their posterity, and if this was complained of when done by the high court of Parliament your Majestie may easily conclude it cannot bee done in any lower court. But that notwithstanding it is become of late yeares an ordinary sentence in Councill when the least complaints are brought against any with whom the Duke of Lauderdale and his brother are offended :)

Instances of these are :

The declaring twelve honest worthy cittizens of Edinburgh incapable of publike trust against whome noe complaint was ever made to this day as your Majestie will perceive more fully by a paper concerning that affaire. The true cause of it was, that those men being in the magistracy, the Duke and his brother could not gett a vast bribe from them out of the towne's money which was afterwards obtayned when they were removed.

The Provosts of Glasgow, Aberdeen and Jadburch were put under the same sentence for signing a letter to your Majestie in that Corvencon of the buroughs with the rest of that body, which letter was advised by him whoe is now your Majestie's Advocate, as that which had nothing in it which could bring them under any guilt, and yett these three were singled out of the whole number and incapacitated, besides an high fine and a long imprisonment as your Majestie will moore fully perceive by another paper.

Sir Patrick Home of Polworth being sent by the sheire of Berwick to complaine of some illegall proceedings, and to obtain a legall remedy to them which hee did only in the comon forme of law was alsoe declared incapable of publike trust besides many months of imprisonment.

The Provost of Linlithgoe being complained of for not furnishing some of your forces with baggage horses was called before the Councill, and because hee said that they were not bound in law to furnish horses in such maner, hee was immediately declared incapable of publike trust and was both fined and imprisoned. There were also fifty of the towne of St Johnston's incapacitated upon a very slight pretence, soe that it is now impossible for them to finde a sufficient number of cittizens for the magistracy of that towne. Your subjects are sometymes upon slight and sometymes upon noe grounds imprisoned, and often kept prisoners many months and yeres nothing being objected to them, and are required to enter themselves prisoners which is contrary to law. It was in the former articles expressed that many of the persons declared incapable of publike trust did alsoe suffer imprisonment; and besides those instances Levetennant Generall Drumond (whose eminent loyalty and great services are well knowne to your Majestie) was required to enter himselve prisoner in the Castle of Dumbarton where hee was kept one yeaere and a halfe and was made a close prisoner for nine months of that tyme and yett nothing was ever objected to him to this day to justifie that usage.

The Lord Cardross, whoe was for his Lady's keeping two conventicles in her owne house (at which hee was not present) fyned £11,000, and hath been now kept four yeaeres prisoner in the Castle of Edensburgh where he still remains, although he hath often peticoned for his liberty: And Sir Patrick Holme hath been now a second tyme almost one yeaere imprisoned and nothing is yett laid to his charge.

Besides these illegall imprisonments the officers of your Majestie's forces carry frequently warrants with them for the apprehending persons that are under noe loyall censure, nor have been soe much as cyted to appeare, which hath putt many of your subjects under great feares especially upon what was done in Councill three yeaeres agoe (viz.)

Captaine Carstaires (a man now well enough knowne to your Majestie) did entrap one Kirkton, an outed minister, into his chamber at Edensburgh and did violently abuse him, and designed to have extorted some money from him. The noise of this coming to the ears of one Bayly, brother in law to the said Kirkton, hee came to the house, and beareing him cry "murther, murther," forced open the chamber doore, where hee found his brother in law, and the Captaine grappling. The Captaine pretended hee had a warrant against Kirkton, and Bayly desired him to show it, and promised that all obedience should bee given to it, and that hee himselve would assist him in the executing of it, but the Captaine refusing to doe it, Kirkton was rescued. This was only delivering of a man from the hands of a robber, which nature obligeth all men to doe, especially when joyned with soe neare a relation. The Captaine complayned of this to the Councill and the Lord Hatton with others were appointed to examine the witnesses; and when it was brought before the Councill the Duke of Hamilton, Earles of Morton, Dumfrize, and Kingcarding the Lord Cocheren and Sir Archibald Primrose then Lord Register, desired that the report of the examinacon might bee read, but that not serveing their ends was denyed, and thereupon those Lords declaired their opinion, that since Carstaires did not shewe any warrant nor was clothed with any publike character, it was noe opposing of your Majestie's authority in Bayly soe to rescue the said Kirkton, yett Bayly was for this fined in 6000 markes and kept long a prisoner.

These Lords were upon that soe represented to your Majestie that by the Duke of Lauderdale's procurement they were turned out of the Councill and all comand of the militia, and it can bee made appeare that the Captaine had at that tyme noe warrant at all against that Kirkton, but procured it after the violence comitted and it was antedated on desigune to serve a turne at that time. This maner of proceeding hath ever since put your subjects under sad apprehensions.

There is one particular further offered to your majestie's consideracon concerning their way of using prisoners. There were fourteen men taken at a feild conventicle, whoe without being legally convict of that

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS

or any other cryme were secretly and in the night taken out of prison upon a warrant signed by the Earl of Linlithgoue and the Lord Hatton and Collington and were delivered to Captaine Maitland, whoe had been paige to the Duke of Lauderdale but was then a French officer, and was makeing his leavyes in Scotland and were carryed over to the service of the French King in the yeare 1676. The Councell hath upon many occasions proceeded to most unreasonable and arbitrary fynes, either for slight offences or for offences where the fine is regulated by law which they have never considered when the persons were not acceptable to them, soe the Lord Cardross was fined in £11,000—for his ladye's keeping two conventicles in his house and christning a child by an outed minister without his knowledge. The Provost formerly menconed, and Bayly with many more were also fined without any regard to law. The Councill hath at severall tymes proceeded to the taking of gentlemen's dwelling houses and putting garisons in them which in tyme of peace is contrary to law. In the yeare 1675 it was designed against twelve of your majestie's subjects and put in execucon in the houses of the Earle of Callender, the Lord Cardrosse, the Lady Lumsdon &c. and was againe attempted in the yeare 1678. The houses belonging to the Leards of Cosnok, Blagand, and Rowalland were possessed by souldiers and declaired garrisons nor did it rest there, but orders were sent from the Councill requiring the countrie about those houses to furnish them for the souldiers use and to supply them with necessaries much contrary to law. It was against this that Sir Patrick Home came to desire a remedy, and comon justice being denyed him hee used a legall protestation in the ordinary forme of law, whoe was thereupon kept many months a prisoner and declared incapable of all publique trust.

There is another particular which because it is soe odious is unwillingly touched yett it is necessary to informe your majestie about it for there by it will appeare that the said Duke of Lauderdale and his brother have in a most solemn maner broken the publique faith which was given in your Majestie's name. One Mitchell being put in prison upon great suspition of his haveing attempted to murther the late Archbishop of St Andrewes and there being noe other evidence against him, warrant was given by the Duke of Lauderdale (then your Majestie's Commissioner and your Councill to promise him his life if he would confess, whereupon he did confess and yett some yeares after, that person (who indeed deserved many deaths if there had been any evidence against him) was upon that confession convicted of the cryme, and the Duke of Lauderdale and his brother being put to it by him did swear that they neither gave nor knew of any assurance of life given him, and when it was objected that the promise was upon record in the Council bookes, the Duke of Lauderdale did in open court (where hee was present only as a wittness and soe ought to have been silent) threaten them if they should proceed to the examinacon of that act of Councill which (as hee then said) might inferre perjury on them that had sworne and soe did cutt off the prooffe of that defence which had been admitted by the court as good in law and sufficient to save the prisoner if proved. Thus was that man hanged upon that confession only though the promise that drew it from him doth appeare upon record, and can bee proved by good and cleare evidence, and from this your Majestie may judge what credditt may bee given to such men.

Wee doe not at present enlarge upon other particulars though of great importance, such as monopolies, selling of places and honours, turning men of knowne integrity out of their employments to which they had a good and just right during their lives, the profits of one of the most considerable of those being sequestred for some tyme and applied for

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS
—

the Dutchess of Lauderdale's use the treating about and receiving of great bribes by the Duke and Duchess of Lauderdale and the Lord Hatton and particularly from the townes of Edinburgh, Aberdeen, Linlithgoe, and many others, for procuring from your Majestie's Warrants for illegall imposicons within those townes to the manifest and publique perverting of justice besides, the most signall abuses of the mint and copper coyne that are most greivous to all your subjects but the number of those is soe great and they will require soe many witnessnes to bee brought hither for proving the same that wee feare it would too much trouble your Majestie now to examine them all but your Majestie shall have a full account of them afterwards.

One thing is humbly offered to your Majestie as the roote of these and many other oppressions which is that the method of governing that nation for severall yeares hath been that the Lord Hatton and his adherants, frame any letter that they desire from your Majestie to your Councill and sends it to the Duke of Lauderdale, who returns it signed, and this is brought to the Councill upon which if a debate at any tyme arises concerning the matter of the letter as being against or without law and when it is proposed that a representacon of it should bee made to your Majestie then the Lord Hatton in his insolent way calls to have it putt to the question, as if it were a cryme to have any warrant either debated or represented to your Majestie which is procured by the Duke of Lauderdale or himself, and this is echoed by his party, and by this means any further debate is stopt.

There are some other particulars relating to these heads that are to bee offered to your Majestie in other papers which are not added now least your Majestie should now bee troubled with too long a paper.

1685. Oct. 1st. Letter from Lord Townshend unaddressed. It is written to a gentleman who has disagreed with Lord Townshend about magisterial business in Norfolk.

1687-8. March 20th. Discharge, signed "James R.," by King James II. to Sir Peter Apely and Sir Benjamin Bathurst the treasurers and Receivers General of his Majesty's revenue before his accession, of a debt of 600*l*. on their account which had since been paid.

1689. Nov. 5th. Letter (in French) unsigned ; headed "Lettre escrite à Monseigneur L'Evesque de Salisbury par le Secretaire Chouet. The writer mentions "notre république," and the letter deals with its diplomatic relations with France. Mentions that Monsieur des Marais who had been destined by the French King to go there as ambassador, was much objected to by the inhabitants of the writer's "town" (name not given).

1696. April 18th. Sir James Calthorp to Viscount Townshend. "The late horrid plot of assassinating the King, and encouraging an invasion from France has filled the goales with prisoners ; three have been executed for the assassination, all papists ; two gentlemen Sir John Freind and Sir William Parkins for being ready to joyn with K[ing] J[ames] upon his landing with a French force. Three more condemned his week upon the same account, the witness a partye to the plott. This gives occasion to greater severity in the severall countreyes, and all non-jurors are called upon to take the oathes ; in our County Sir N. L. and Sir C. amongst many others. Though most papist, Sir N. has given bale to appear at the next assises, and to be upon his good behaviour till then, when the oathes are to be rendred to him again. Sir C. chose rather to endure the penalty of six moneths imprisonment, after which he is discharged by law according to the late Act, but this Parliament have made a new one that all non-jurors shall be reputed as Papists convict which is forfeiture of two-thirds of their estates."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

N. D. [after 1660]. Copy Petition to the House of Lords in an appeal now before them in which Edward Birmingham and others, some of "the officers and soldiers who reduced Ireland in 1641" are appellants, and Henry Earl of Shelburn, George Lord Carbery and others, trustees for the appellants, are respondents, praying that their Lordships will order the said appeal to be set down for hearing.

[After 1661.] Draft letter from Horatio first Lord Townshend to whom is not stated, but to an aunt of the writer's, respecting the proposal of a marriage of his "niece Cartwright" to one Mr Papillon, to which Lord Townshend is strongly opposed.

N. D. Apethorpe. March 23rd. Lord Westmoreland to his son-in-law Lord Townshend. Relating to the placing of the writer's proxy in the House of Lords as he is too unwell to attend. "Your mother entertained a cloud of sorrow and melancholly for the death of one of your sister Cartwright's children, else she is much after the old manner never perfectly well. So like Bausis and Philemon we two owld acquaintances sit cherishing one the other in the chimney corner hawking and coughing like mad, but least you deem me so indeed I forbear all farther trouble saving to kiss my pretty lady's little fine hand." In a postscript "Pray remember me kindly to Hare and mind him of Ogleby's Homer; what would I give that the Lady had leverets in her belly, and yours another such like blessing."

N. D. Aug. 27th. Anthony Bishop of Norwich to Lord Townshend. "In pursuance of your Lordship's reference to me and generous offer to accept what I should approve in Dr Hugh's case, I have under my hand recommended to your Lordship a submission made to me by the Dr. which he will present to your Lordship as soon as his health permits. I cannot say it merits your acceptance, I am sure it cannot, but finding your Lordship so charitably inclined. I cannot but hope that your Lordship will admit both it and him to receive your pardon for which noble favour and admitting me to be the instrument under your Lordship of so pious and charitable a work, I shall give your Lordship my hearty thanks as now I do for your late noble present."

N. D. Francis Barber to Lord Townshend. The writer is a clergyman holding two livings, and has been threatened by Lord Townshend that he shall be proceeded against under a recent act for some Ecclesiastical offence, praying his lordship to allow him to retain his benefices until further order be taken and pointing out words in the act which will warrant his Lordship in doing so.

N. D. A MS. apparently a case for opinion of counsel, relating to the estate of Sir Edward Lewkener grandfather of Lady Townshend the wife of Sir Horace Townshend, containing a great deal of genealogical information. The case states that said Sir Edward Lewkener died leaving a son Edward and three daughters; by his will he devised certain property to his wife for life, remainder to his heir, and in case his wife should die leaving the heir a minor he conveyed the property to trustees during such minority on trust to raise portions for the daughters. Edward Lewkener the son married Elizabeth daughter of Sir William Russell of Chippenham, and died three weeks before he was 21, leaving one child, the present Lady Townshend, an infant only a few months old; Lady Lewkener mother of the said Edward received all the profits of the estate of her son and had his wife's marriage portion—£5000; two of the daughters married, and had their portions assigned to them under the will of their father, one to Sir Nicholas Le Strange, the other to M^r Calthorpe and was since a widow; the youngest was 40 years old and unmarried, and also had a portion on her reaching the age of 21; then Lady Lewkener died leaving her daughters her executors.

Sir Horace Townshend married Mary the only daughter and heir of the said Edward Lewkener after Lady Lewkener's death, and settled a jointure upon her. Afterwards Sir Nicholas Le Strange, M^r Calthorpe and Miss Lewkener filed a bill in Chancery against Sir Horace Townshend and his wife "to bee releaved for the meane profitts of all the lands demised by Sir Edward Lewkener to the trustees during the minority of his heir." The paper goes on to state the questions that arise on this suit

N.D. Draft letter in the writing of Horace Lord Townshend, to whom does not appear; the letter commences "My Lord." He hears that the Lord Lieutenants and deputies take it ill, that he has taken into his hand the book of the proceedings during the time he was Lord Lieutenant of Norfolk, explaining his reason for doing so, and ascribing the King's displeasure with him to the slanders of his enemies.

N.D. Lord Townshend to whom is not stated. Draft letter beginning "My Lord" and written on a piece of paper addressed to Lord Townshend and sealed with a shield bearing three demi-lions, two and one, surrounded by the garter, and surmounted with an earl's coronet. The letter is an answer to an intimation that the King is willing to restore Lord Townshend to favour, and is written in a dignified strain, the writer hinting at the King's ingratitude for his past services in the rebellion, and denying that he has anything to be forgiven except speaking his mind when questioned by his Majesty, fearlessly and boldly.

IV.—UNDATED AND MISCELLANEOUS PAPERS BEFORE 1700.

1584. 27 Elizabeth. Nov. 10th. Lease from William Heygate to Roger Townshend of East Rayneham of the Mansion house called Ludgreves and premises thereunto belonging containing 100 acres, from Michaelmas then last past for three years at the yearly rent of 52*l*. per annum.

1613. Letters and particulars relating to lands and sheep pastures in East Rudham belonging to the Lady Berkeley and to the manor of West Rudham St Faythe.

1614. May 10th. Portion of the will of Sir Nathaniel Bacon devising lands in Stifkey, Long Merston and other towns adjoining. Mentions his daughter Lady Anne Townshend, his grandchild Roger Townshend, his second daughter Lady Elizabeth Knyvett, his third daughter Lady Winifryd Gawdie, and his brother Edmund Bacon.

1617. A view of the estate of Sir Roger Townshend's manors lands and possessions in the counties of Norfolk Essex and Middlesex and in London.

1617. April 17th. "A note of the payments to the Kinge and of all the fees and charges payed upon passage of the Patent of Baronetshipp for Sir Roger Townshend Baronett."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Inprimis to Mr Morgan my Lord Treasurer's Secretarye for his paynes in renewing of the Commission three peesces - - - - -	£3 6 ^s 0 ^d
Item to the then Attorney's man Yonge for drawinge and ingrossing of the Commission and first patent—three peesces - - - - -	£3 6 ^s 0 ^d
Item geven to Mr Finche for drawinge of the seconde Patent, two peeces - - - - -	44 ^s
Item, to his clerke for copying thereof - - - - -	11 ^s
Item to Mr Finche more for goinge to Mr Attorney Yel- verton aboute some points altered by him in the saide draught - - - - -	22 ^s
Item to Mr Calvert the Clerke of the Councell for the Lords' Warrant to Mr Attorney, and to his clerke for writinge thereof - - - - -	44 ^s
Item to Mr Attorney for his fees for perusinge and certifyinge of the Patent - - - - -	£5 10 ^s
Item geven to Mr Attorney's clerke for his fees for the same - - - - -	55 ^s
Item to his man that engrossed the Patent - - - - -	11 ^s
Item to Mr Attorney's doorekeeper - - - - -	11 ^s
Item to the Clerke of the Councell for gettinge of the Comissioners' hands to the Patent - - - - -	22 ^s
Item payde in to the Receipte xi Aprilis 1617 for the first payment to the King ut patet by talley - - - - -	£365
Item payde then to Mr Rowdon for fees in that office uppon payment of the said money - - - - -	20 ^s
Item payde for the fees of the talley - - - - -	10 ^s
Item payde for the makinge and enrolment of two bonds for the other two payments to the Kinge at vi ^s viij ^d apeece Item payde to Mr Watson for his certificate of the first payment of the money and of the tallinge of the bonds	13 ^s 4 ^d 40 ^s
Item payde to Mr Benbowe for the fees of the Clerks of the Signet and Privye Seale, the Clerke of the Crowne, and the Heralds in toto - - - - -	£8
Item payde to him more of the vellum flourishing and strings for the Patent - - - - -	12 ^s
Item payde to him more for the fayre writinge of the patent & for the clerk's paynes - - - - -	40 ^s
Item payde to him more for the docquett - - - - -	5 ^s
Item payde to him more for the enrolment and dividend - - - - -	40 ^s
Item payde to him more for the fees at the Seale - - - - -	41 ^s 8 ^d
Item payde to him more for the Sealer and Chafewax - - - - -	6 ^s 8 ^d
Sum total	£407 10 ^s 8 ^d .
Whereof in money payde to the Kinge for the first pay- ment of the fyne - - - - -	£365
And in fees payde ut patet supra - - - - -	£42 10 ^s 8 ^d

1624. May 25th. Agreement made by the inhabitants of West Raynham for the Cow pasture and New Close and Hearth Moore.

1661. April 20th. Paper endorsed "Warrants for creations."

"It is his Majestie's pleasure that the noblemen to be created meet at a Chamber that will be provided at the lower end of the banquetting house on Satterday the 20th of Apprill 1661 at 2 of the clocke in the afternoone precisely.

The Barons to provide a surcoat.

A Baron is to carry a mantle.

And 2 Barones are to support him.

The Baron to bee created is to goe in his surcoate, and after hee is presented to the King by his 2 supportors uppon theire knees, they rise upp leaveinge the Baron to be created in that posture during the reading of his Pattent, and at the word Creamus the Baron whoe carries the mantle presents it to his Majestie who (the King laying his hand uppon it) with the helpe of the 2 supports, putts it on, then the Patent being read out, and delivered by his Majestie to the new created Baron hee gives his Majestie humble thanks for that greate honor and then ariseth.⁵

Note. This Warrant is for the creation of Sir Horatio Townshend as Baron Townshend of Lynn Regis by Letters Patent dated the 20th of April 1661.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Fees for passing a Patent for a Baron, Viscount, & Earl.

	£	s.	d.
Secretary's fee for the warrant	-	-	6 0 0
For enteringe it	-	-	0 5 0
Attorney-General fees £30 10s. for each	-	-	30 10 0
To the Secretary for signing the bill when it's brought back	-	-	6 0 0
Signett for each	-	-	6 13 4
Privy Seal the like for each	-	-	6 13 4
Crown Office, Hanaper Office, &c.	-	-	135 0 0
King's servants.
For an Earl	-	-	206 10 0
For a Viscount	-	-	167 9 4
For a Baron	-	-	135 5 4
Lord Chancellor's Secretary. For the Recepi	-	-	5 guineas.
For a Baron in all	-	-	246 14 6
For a Viscount	-	-	288 17 10
For an Earl	-	-	332 18 6

Fees due to his Majestie's Servants, Hanaper Office, Crowne Office, and Great Seale for the Lord Townshend's Dignity of Viscount.

	£	s.	d.
To his Majestie's Servants	-	-	175 9 4
Hanaper Office	-	-	34 13 4
Lord Chancellor's Grant of the Divident	-	-	3 13 4
For signeing the Docquett	-	-	1 0 0
Flourisht guilt skynne with gould and silver strings	-	-	12 0 0
To the Clerke of the Crowne	-	-	8 10 0
Clerk of the Crowne's Deputy and clerks	-	-	4 6 8
Lord Chancellor's Gentleman of the Chamber	-	-	6 10 0
Under Officers of his Lordshipp's House	-	-	4 10 0
Sealers and Chafewax	-	-	5 10 0
Clerke of the Hanaper's Deputy and clerk	-	-	3 13 4
Private Seale and attendance	-	-	3 0 0

90 6 8
175 9 4

sic 266

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

The Charge of passing the Right Honourable the Lord Townshend's Dignity of a Viscount.

	£	s.	d.
To the Secretary for the King's Warrant and his
Majestie's signing the Bill - - -	32	5	0
Mr. Attorney, fee for the Bill - - -	30	10	0
Signet and Privy Seal - - -	17	0	0
Docquets 3 guinnies - - -	3	4	6
For a private Seal - - -	2	0	0
Lord Chancellor's Recepi 5 guinees - -	5	7	6
Great Seal, and to the King's servants at Whitehall, Hanaper, Crowne Office, and Lord Chancellor's servants in toto - - -	266	0	0
To under Officers - - -	7	5	0
For a box - - -	1	0	0
To the Solicitor for passing the Patent, tenn guinnies
- - - - -	10	15	0
	<hr/>
Totall -	375	7	0

1661. Oct. 20th. List of the officers of the several regiments of the militia of the County of Norfolk by John Kendall muster master.

N. D. Similar list and Proclamation relative to the Act for better ordering of the militia and service thereunder.

1664. Nov. 3rd. "Letter Office London." A copy of a letter to Mr Salterton the Postmaster from the Post officers. "In answer to what you write concerning Mr Kendall's demanding money of you for expresses sent by him to the Lord Townshend the like hath not been demanded from this office nor any postmaster that I ever yet heard of. Therefore you may give Mr Kendall so much to understand that you cannot allow it without order The Post Master General is not obliged to carry any letters or pacquets free but such as come to these persons of honor, viz., The Lord High Admiral of England, Lord Chancellor, Lord Treasurer and his Majestie's two principal Secretaries of State; except by particular order under the King's hand, Duke of Ormond, Duke of Albermarle and the Lord Lowtherdale, Lord Secretary of Scotland could not have their letters and despatches free until they sent His Majesty's warrant for the same. And if my Lord Townshend please to procure the like order under His Majesty's royal hand for his own and Mr Kendall's letters and pacquets passing free, his Honor and Mr Kendall will receive the benefit of it. Until that be obtained the office cannot pass them to His Majesty's accompt, nor can the Postmaster General bear the loss for many reasons, and this is all the answer to be given you at present."

ACCOUNT touching the Lord Townshend's defalcations from 1674 to Lady day 1680 (amounting with interest to £10110 6s. 6½d.) under his Majesty's grant of the coal farm—to be made up out of the growing reserved rent or otherwise as His Majesty shall think fit.

N. D. Draft for the conditions of a bond for 200*l*. relative to the sum of £100 bequeathed to the townsmen of Denham in the County of Seffolk by the Lady Mary Townshend, wife of Horatio Lord Townshend, Baron of King's Lynn.

Undated. Temp. Charles II. Sir John Knyvett's list of officers of Sir John Holland's regiment with his owne troope of Volunteers.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

Undated. Temp. Eliz. Paper relative to the enforcement of certain orders of the Privy Council for stay of the dearth of corn and the prevention of a rise in the price thereof.

Sentences printed in the Lord Keeper's gallerie at Gorambury and selected by him out of divers authors and sent to the good Lady Lumley at her desire.

N.D. "Articles objected against Thomas Beckham touchinge his begetting of a basterd chield of the bodie of Kattrhryne Pallmer."

N.D. Paper signed Hugh Morrell and headed "Sundry overtures (in all humility) to the Right honorable the Lord Townsend for improving the exportacon of our sea coales to all forraigne princes dominions and plantacons in Christendome."

N.D. Paper endorsed "Case of Bewdley election, Herbert and Winnington," containing a narrative of the proceedings at an election of a Burgess to sit in Parliament for the borough of Bewdley, contested by M^r Winnington a Burgess of the borough and M^r Herbert. A dispute arose as to whether M^r Herbert not being a Burgess could be elected, and the Town Clerk thinking he could not, took down only the names of those who voted for M^r Winnington and declared him duly elected, although a majority of the Burgesses polled for his opponent.

N.D. Case and petition of Valentine Knightley Esquire claiming the Barony of Fitz Warine.

N.D. Fragment of a book (commencing at p 25.) containing a list of officers in the Royal Household with their salaries, a list of the castles, parks &c. belonging to the Crown and other information. No date is given, but the Earl of Salisbury and Lord Elphinstone are returned as Principal Secretaries, John Lord Stanhope as Master of the Posts, and the Earl of Worcester Master of the Horse.

N.D. Letter from the Justices of the Peace in the County of Norfolk to Lord Townshend the Lord Lieutenant, on the subject of the militia of the County.

N.D. Petition (to whom is not stated; possibly to the Privy Council) from the Mayor and Corporation of King's Lynn setting forth the losses their town has suffered of late years at the hands of the Dutch and that they are unable to supply the two ships of war which they have been commanded to furnish to the fleet now preparing in consequence of the depression and injury done to their trade, praying to be excused from furnishing the ships.

N.D. Papers unsigned relative to providing a house for the poor of Aylysham and the opposition to the proposal offered by Sir Christopher Heydon.

N.D. An undated memorandum.

"That the Dutchess of Queensberry is surprized and well pleased that the King hath given her soe agreeable a comand as to stay away from Court where she never came for diversion; but to bestow a greater civility upon the King and Queen. She hopes by such an unrepresented order as this that the King will see as few as he wishes att his Court

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

(perticularly such as dare to thinke or speake truth). I dare not doe other ways and ought not nor could not have imagined that it would not have been the highest compliment that I would possibly pay the King to endeavour to support truth and innocence in his house. Particularly when the King and Queen had both told me that they had not read Mr Gay's Play. I have certainly done right then to stand to my own word rather than his Grace of Grafton's who hath neather made use of truth, judgment, or honour through this whole affaire either for himselfe or his freinds.

"C. QUEENSBURRY."

N.D. Letter unsigned and unaddressed beginning "Dear Cosin," relating to the Norwich petition which has been "dismissed without anything being done upon it." The arbitrary proceedings of the Mayor, the writer thinks, deserve the severest punishment the Privy Council can inflict. The present action of the Council will be a great encouragement to the Mayor.

N. D. Temp. James II. Petition of the House of Commons to the King. Thanking his Majesty for his great care in the suppression of the late rebellion which threatened "the utter extirpation of our religion as by law established which is most dear unto us and which your Majesty has been pleased to give us repeated assurances you will always defend and support which with all gratefull hearts wee shall ever acknowledge." The King's recent speech has been considered "and as to that part of it relating to the officers in the army, not qualified for their employments according to an Act of Parliament made in the 25th year of the reigne of your Majestie's royal brother of blessed memory, entituled An Act for preventing dangers which may happen from Popish Recusants, wee doe out of our bounden duty, humbly represent unto your Majesty that those officers cannot by law bee capable of their employments, and that the incapacities they bring upon themselves thereby, can no wayes bee taken off, but by an Act of Parliament." Therefore a bill is now being prepared for the Royal assent to indemnify these officers, and the petitioners beg that pending the new act they may be removed from their posts.

The King's answer is: "I did not expect such an adresse from this House of Commons, after haveing soe lately recommended to your consideration the great advantages a good understanding between us had procured in a very short time, and giving you warning of fears and jealousies amongst ourselves. I had reason to hope that the reputation God hath blessed me with in the world would have created and confirmed a greater confidence in you of me and of all I say to you. But however you proceed on your part, I will bee steady in all the promises I have made you and bee very just to my word in everyone of my speeches."

N.D. A dialogue in verse between "The Lord R's Ghost and Dr C. Dean of Can." A rather scurrilous production of which the meaning is very obscure.

Lord R. calls the Dean a rebel, whereupon the Dean answers

- D. "Rebell, my Lord, that's too severe
I did give way, comply and swear
Sure that admitts a softer name
G. To praise it when 'tis done's the same

* * * * *

Besides you've sworn i' th' face of the nation
For to support the usurpation

Since this no doubt must be the sence
Of swearing to another Prince,
Because in any elce 'twould bee
Nothing to his security

* * * * * I can tell

It is the comon talke of H—ll
That you more instrumentall was
In bringing matters to this pass
Than either Danby or Delamere
Or he who did the Jack boot weare
Or e'n that curst false Scotch Apostle
Who so much in the cause did bustle
Nor were by one halfe soe serviceable
As you to raise the headstrong rabble.

* * * * *
But now the stars become less bright
And I must goe before 'tis night.

D. I wish your Lordship may get home well

G. What ! Nothing to your uncle Cromwell

D. Yes, duty, and his paines to soften

Tell him the newes

G.

I'll see you often."

N.D. (latter end of 17th century). General instructions of a mother to a daughter (named Julia) for her conduct in life.

Ends: "Thus, my dearest Julia, have I led you through the different stages of human life, and hope, when you read this, you'll rather think it came from a friend whose tenderness endeavoured to make you perfect than from a mother grown severe by age; and do not enquire whether she who gave you these lessons, observed them herself, only think that she who could give them was capable of following them; others' faults do not lessen ours, but ought to serve as examples to deter others from them. I flatter myself from the observations I have made on your temper that this abridgment of your conduct may be serviceable to you in all instances of your life, on which I beseech the Divine Being to pour His Holy Blessing."

BUNDLE marked "WARRANTS OF COMMITMENT TO THE TOWER."

1675. Jan. 16th. Warrant under the Sign Manual to the Constable of the Tower to take into his custody Colonel Henry Danvers committed for treasonable practices against the King and the State.

1675. Feb. 27th. Warrant under the Sign Manual to the Constable of the Tower to take into his custody Robert Cobbett committed for treasonable practices against the King and the State.

1675. Sept. 22nd. Warrant signed by "Finch C." "Danby," "Carbery," "Newport," "H. Coventry," "Tho. Chicheley," "R. Carr" (?), "Edw. Walker" to the Earl of Northampton, Constable of the Tower, to take into his custody Colonel Philip Warner for the murder of his own brother, in commission from his Majesty and some Indians in friendship with the English.

1675. Oct. 21st. Warrant signed by Edward Seymour Speaker of the House of Commons, to the Earl of Northampton, Constable of the Tower, to take into his custody Lord Cavendish for his breach of the privilege of the House of Commons in prosecuting a quarrel against Mr Thomas Howard whilst the matter was depending before the said House.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1675. Oct. 22nd. A like warrant for the discharge of the said Lord Cavendish.

1675. October 26th. Warrant signed by Edward Seymour Speaker of the House of Commons, to the Constable of the Tower to take into his custody Mr Thomas Howard for being the author, promoter, and disperser of a paper signed T. Howard of Richmond and Carlisle, voted by the House to be a scandalous paper and a breach of the privilege of the said house.

1675. Nov. 8th. A like warrant for the discharge of the said Mr Thomas Howard.

1676. Feb. 7th. Order of the House of Lords to the Constable of the Tower to receive into his custody George, Duke of Buckingham for his high contempt committed against the House.

1676. Feb. 9th. Warrant signed by "Finch C." "Danby," "Ormonde," "Lindsey," "H. Coventry," "J. Williamson," "Robert Southwell" to the Constable of the Tower to receive into his custody Dr Nicholas Cary for publishing a scandalous and seditious libel to the dishonor of the King's Majesty and his Government, and in which libel it is most falsely affirmed and by many feigned reasons endeavoured to be proved that the present Parliament is dissolved.

1676. Feb. 16th. Order of the House of Lords to the Constable of the Tower to receive James, Earl of Salisbury, Anthony Ashley, Earl of Shaftesbury, and Philip, Lord Wharton—for their high contempts committed against the House.

1676. Feb. 17th. Order to the Earl of Northampton Constable of the Tower, for strengthening the guard in the Tower, signed 'Monmouth.'
Seal.

1676. Feb. 21st. Warrant under the sign manual for M^{rs} Amée Cary to visit her husband.

1676. Mar. 1st. Order of the House of Lords that Dr Cary be fined 1,000*l*. and remain a prisoner until he have paid the same.

1676. Mar. 28th. Warrant under the Sign Manual to the Constable of the Tower to send Colonel Philip Warner on board the Phoenix to be transported to the Island of Barbados.

1676. April 28th. Warrant under the Sign Manual to the Constable of the Tower for Colonel Henry Danvers' discharge.

1676. May 4th. Warrant under the Sign Manual to the Constable of the Tower for Major Cobbett's discharge.

1676. May 12th. Warrant signed by "Anglesey," "Worcester," "Finch C." "Peterborow," "J. Bridgwater," "W. Maynard," "J. Williamson," "Edw. Walker" to the Earl of Northampton, Constable of the Tower, to take into his custody John Freake of the Middle Temple Esq. for dispersing a seditious libel called the Chronicle of which he is presumed to be the Author.

1676. May 19th. Warrant signed by "Finch C.," "Worcester," "C. Craven," "J. Bridgwater," "H. London," "H. Coventry," "J. Williamson," "J. Ernle," and "Edw. Walker" to the Constable of the Tower to take into his custody John Radford committed for high treason.

1676. May 28th. Warrant under the Sign Manual to keep Mr. Freake a close prisoner, being committed for high treason.

1676. June 21st. Warrant under the Sign Manual to the Constable of the Tower to take into his custody Charles Lord Cornwallis, committed for being indicted for murder.

1676. July 5th. Warrant signed by "Finch C.," "Anglesey," "Danby," "Ormonde," "J. Ernle," "J. Williamson," "John Nicholson," to the Constable of the Tower to take into his custody Sir Philip Monckton, knight, for writing a seditious and scandalous letter to defame the Government and the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council and to raise groundless jealousies and fears among the people tending to public disturbance.

1676. July 22nd. Warrant under the sign manual to permit the Duke of Buckingham to have his liberty unto the 22nd August next.

1677. Jan. 2nd. Warrant under the Sign Manual to James Earl of Northampton, Constable of the Tower, to take into his custody Philip Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, committed for speaking blasphemy and other misdemeanours.

1677. June 1st. Warrant under the sign manual to the Constable of the Tower to permit the Earl of Salisbury to go to Hatfield to remain until the 30th June.

1677. June 29th. Similar warrant, enlarging the time to 31st July.

1677. July 23rd. Similar warrant, discharging him from imprisonment, he having expressed his extreme trouble for having offended the King and House of Peers by what he owned to have unadvisedly said concerning the late Prorogation.

1677. July 29th. A similar warrant for the discharge of Philip Lord Wharton.

1677. July 20th. Warrant under the sign manual to the Constable of the Tower to permit any person signified by a Secretary of State to have access to Anthony Earl of Shaftesbury.

1677. July 2nd. Warrant signed by Sir Joseph Williamson principal Secretary of State, to the Constable of the Tower, to receive George Bullen on board the ship John, and convey him to the Tower, being committed for dangerous words by him spoken against his Majesty on board the ship called the John.

1677. Aug. 26th. Secretary Coventry's letter to the Earl of Northampton to permit Richard Lucy to have access to the Earl of Shaftesbury.

1677. Dec. 5th. Warrant signed by "Finch C.," "Danby," "Anglesey," "W. Maynard," "J. Ernle," "J. Williamson," "Thomas Dolman," to the Earl of Northampton, Constable of the Tower, to take into his custody the Lord Purbeck for carrying and delivering a challenge to the Heer Van Benting, Chamberlain to the Prince of Orange, in the Palace of St James's and for other misdemeanours.

1677. Dec. 29th. Warrant to the Constable of the Tower to recruit the three Companies in the Tower and to admit and entertain such recruits.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

N.D.—Draft appointment by James Earl of Northampton, Constable of the Tower, of Sir John Robinson, Knight and Baronet, as his Deputy Constable of the Tower.

BUNDLE marked "PETITIONS."

N.D. Petition of Robert Perkins, "lying under sentence of death," to Charles Viscount Townshend, praying his Lordship to procure his pardon.

N.D. Petition (in French) of the Duchess of Grafton to the King, on behalf of Sir Henry Bombury accused of high treason for having franked a seditious letter of one Captain White. The Duchess alleged, in excuse of Sir Henry, that it was the custom for members of Parliament (who had the privilege of franking letters) to give blank envelopes ready franked to their servants to be used on occasion, and that one of these had been given to White and used by him to convey a treasonable letter. She prays the clemency of the King on behalf of Sir Henry.

N.D. Petition of Sir Humfrey Ferrers Knight to the King, stating that certain manors in Essex Bucks and Derbyshire had been granted to his ancestor Sir Henry Ferrers: that these manors had come into the hands of the Crown by reason of the minority of one of the petitioner's predecessors in title and that they have never since been recovered for various causes; praying a restoration of them to him.

N.D. Petition to the King of the Mayor and burgesses of Thetford, imprisoned for contempt of the King and of Lord Townshend his Lord Lieutenant of Norfolk, making apology and submission and praying thereupon their release.

There is a large collection (marked "Verses") of fugitive songs, poems ballads, squibs, lampoons &c. of no particular interest.

The following is amusing, and a fair sample of the remainder.

1.

A wicked old Peer
And a Bishop I hear
About going to Hell made a rout
They both had observed
'Twas what they deserved
But which should go first was the doubt.

2.

That, swore and lyed
This, hypocrisy tryed
'Twas hard to say which was the worst,
Give the Devil his due,
Two worse he ne're knew
But however the Bishop went first.

3.

Affronted in Hell
At what I can't tell
He sat musing, nor opened his mouth
But soon the bright M——s,
Who now in the dark is,
As usual began with an oath.

4.

Wh——n G—d d—mn ye old Nick,
 We'll shew you a trick,
 We Monarchy always have hated,
 We both will disown
 Your right to the Throne
 And swear you have abdicated.

5.

S—r——m Right Marq—s of W——n
 'Tis what I first thought on His title nor you nor I know
 'Twould be a fine thing
 If horns made a king,
 I'm sure he is not jure divino.

6.

 But straightway the D——
 Grown wondrous civil
 At the sayings of each hopeful imp
 Cryed hold up your faces,
 Ye both shall have places
 S——m my porter, and W——n my pimp.

7.

 They bowed and went on
 But whispered the throng
 Now we're in, of our time we'll make use,
 We'll maul the old whelp
 If you'll lend us your help
 And who knows but all Hell may break loose

8.

Then W——n did say
 If we can't get away
 For one thing we'll give you our words
 Here will be by and by
 With S——m & I,
 Two thirds of the Bishops and Lords.

9.

With these helps I hope
 Spite of D——l and P——pe
 If the honest damned will come over
 My friend's zeal and mine
 To the Protestant line
 Will bring in the House of H——r.

There is a bundle of letters marked on the outside "Letters to Mr. Titley." These are of the years 1692 and 1693 and are from various servants, bailiffs, and agents of Lord Townshend to Mr. Titley, who appears to have been his Lordship's chief agent in London, on various matters, such as sending down wigs, boots, shoes, saddles, wine, clothes &c. for Lord Townshend's use. Several letters are from Mrs. Ann Newborough the dame of Lord Townshend's sons, Roger and Horace, at Eton.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

STATE PAPERS, DESPATCHES, ETC.

1702-1742.

1704. March 3rd. Copy of a letter "for his Ma^{ties} Service," addressed to the County Magistrates of Norfolk; directing them to carry out the Council Order of Feb^y 19th, 1701, relating to the impressment of seamen. Dated at Norwich Castle and signed by, "yo^r very loving Friends, Edward Ward, Arthur Windham, and John Harbord, Deputy Lieutenants of the County of Norfolk."

. You are by His Ma^{ties} especial Directions to issue out yo^r Wa^{ts} forthwth to the Chief Constables wthin yo^r Divisions, to send out their War^{ts} forthwth to the Petty Constables wthin their Limitts, that they may make exact Lists of the Names of all Seamen, comprehending also Boatmen, Bargemen, Watermen, & Fishermen, as inhabit wthin their respective Parishes, wth an Account of their severall Ages, & Conditions, according to the Forme and Scheme which is hereunto annexed that the s^d Chief Constables may transmitt the same to Mr. Edward L'Estrange, Clerke to the Lieutenantcy of Norfolk, that soo he may give his L^dship, the Lord Viscount Townshend an Acc^o thereof 1702. May 16th. Sir Charles Hedges, Secretary of State, to Lord Townshend (Lord Lieutenant of Norfolk). Dated at Whitehall and stating that the Queen wishes the Privy Council Letters for procuring Seamen to be carried out forthwith in the most effectual manner.

1702. Dec. 5th, N.S. Copy of a Memorial of Alexander Stanhope, British Minister at the Hague, in reply to a Memorial of the States General dated ^{16th}/_{27th} November. 2 pp.

1704. March 16th. "Extract of a Letter from Mr. Stanyan, Her Ma^{ty}'s Envoy in Swisserland, to the Earl of Sunderland." About the territory of Tockenbourg in Swisserland, which is subject to the Abbots of St. Gall, and is in danger of losing its privileges through the bribery and intrigues of the latter. 5 pp.

1709. April 10th. Baron Schutz, Hanoverian Minister in London, to Secretary Boyle, "to have France's acknowledging the Electorate of Hanover made a Preliminary of the Treaty." In French. Dated at St. James's Square. 1½ pp.

1709. April 17th Copy of Mons^r Schutz's Scheme of a Barrier for the Empire. In French. 3½ pp.

1709. April —. Copy of a letter, in French, "on behalf of the Protestants at the Treaty of Peace." Dated at the Hague and unsigned. 8 pp.

1709. May 2nd. Copy of Lord Townshend's Credentials to the States General. In French. 1½ pp.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Same date. Court at St. James's. The Queen's "Private Instructions for D. of Marlborough and Lord Townshend."

"Whereas it is expected that several towns now belonging to, and in the hands of France should be given up, and yielded by the Treaty of Peace to be garrisoned by the Forces of the States General, for the security of their Barrier. If therefore the Revenews of such towns, their Dependencies, and Territorys, so deliver'd up, and garrisoned, be not found sufficient to answer the necessary expences to be made for that Service, in such case you have liberty to consent to the adding such further Sum, or Sums, as shall be thought requisite and reasonable for that purpose, out of the Incomes, and Reveneues, arising in general from the Spanish Low Countries."

A. R.

[No date.] "A List of Treaties that are in Mr. Secretary Boyle's Office." 18½ pp.

This list commences with the Emperor's Ratification of King William's Accession to the Treaty made between the Emperor and the States General at Vienna,—12th May 1689; and it ends with the Elector Palatine's Ratification of the Convention between her Majesty and the States General, and his Electoral Highness, at the Hague,—17th May 1703.

1709. May 10th. Whitehall. George Tilson to Horatio Walpole. Written in great haste.

..... "We have directions for 7 Lieut^s Gen^l, Stanhope, Mordant, Farrington, Howe, Cadogan, Meredyth, Palmes. You see we make provision for War, whatever the Fr[ench] may think of peace" 1709. May 13th. Christopher Tilson "To his Excellency the Lord Viscount Townshend, Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary from the Queen of Great Britain to the States Gen^l of the United Provinces." Dated at the Treasury Chambers.

..... "The Privy Seal for Your Lordps allowances is passed and at my Lord Treasurers return from New Markett, w^{ch} wilbe tomorrow, I hope to obtaine his Warrant to the Excheq^r for your Lordps Equipage money w^{ch} is 1600^l, and for three months advance on your Entertainm^t of 100^l p weeke; that being done your Lordship may please to value your selfe on me for 2700^l or thereab^t."

1709. May 14th. Mons^r Schutz to Secretary Boyle. "Concerning the Barrier and the affair of Religion." Copy. In French. 2 pp.

1709. May 15th. Copy of a letter from Frederick Augustus, Elector of Saxony and King of Portugal, to Queen Anne. In Latin with the following translation:—

We Friderick Augustus, by the Grace of God King, Duke of Saxony, &c., To the most Serene and most Potent Princess, Anne, by the same Grace, Queen of Great Britain France and Ireland &c., Greeting. Friderick Khune Our Subject has humbly represented in a memorial offered to Us, that his Brother Rudolph formerly Cloest Keeper to the late King William of pious Memory died at Kensington in Sept^r 1707, having left a Will, whereby he made Martin Christian his Brother's Son his Heir. And tho' there was no such Person in being, so that upon Default of the said Heir, the Will became void, and the Estate was to devolve to the next of kin to the Intestate, among whom is the said Friderick Khune, yet his Share of the Inheritance is contested by the Sons of another Brother of the deceased, upon a Pretence that the whole belonged of right to One of them; wherefore he has humbly & earnestly desired Us to recommend his Case to Your Ma[jes]ty. And indeed We could not easily deny him Our Letters to Your Ma[jes]ty in his favour, not only as he thought Our Recommendation would be of great Advantage to him, but also as it seemed just & reasonable to Us that the Lawfull Successors should have their Right preserved to them intire. And as We are persuaded Your Ma[jes]ty's great Justice will incline you to be of the same Opinion, We make it Our Brotherly Request, that You would please to vouchsafe Your Royal Favour to the said Kuhne Our Subject, and interpose Your Authority in this unjust Controversy carrying on against him, that he may possess his just Right of Inheritance without any Vexation or Trouble. Which will not only be a great Addition to the Character of Your Ma[jes]ty's Justice so well known in the World, but will also be a particular favour done to Us, when We find we have so successfully interested Ourselves in this Matter. As to what remains, May Your Ma[jes]ty long enjoy your health, & promise to Yourself every thing that can be expected from a Prince, who has so true a Respect and Value for the British Name.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Given at Dresden the 13th day of May 1709.

Your Majesty's

Good Brother and

Cousin,

AUGUSTUS REX.

1709. May 15th. Copy of a resolution of the States General in behalf of the French Protestants.

[No date.] A Memorial in French, endorsed :—"The Guaranty of the Kingdoms of England for the treatys between the Protestants and the King of France." 7 pp.

[No date.] A Memorial [in French] concerning the Protestants in France. 8 pp.

[No date.] Raisons pourquoi Sa Majesté la Reine de la Grande Bretagne & les Seigneurs Etats Gen[er]aux des Provinces Unies peuvent avec justice demander en depest la Ville de Strasbourg avec le Haute et Basse Alsace et les moyens comment y parvenir. [Unsigned and unaddressed.] 3½ pp.

1709. May 24th. Christopher Tilson to Lord Townshend. Dated at the Treasury Chambers and addressed as before.

..... "touching your Lorps money at the Excheq^r I have now nothing to repeat to your Lordp but that I have actually received the same; and have obtained also from my L^d Chamb[er]l[ain] W[ar]rants for the nec[essa]rys following Vizt, for 5893 oz. White Plate & 1066 oz. guilt Plate, For a State [Coach] with the other nec[essa]rys attending it, For an Altar Cloth, Books & other Chaple necessarys, For the Queen's Picture at Length and Frame & Case; I am now going to acquaint my Lady (who is now is Towne,) with these things, expecting her Ladyship has your Lordships partycular directions about them. I am with all imaginable respect" etc.

1709. May ^{17th}/_{28th}. John Robinson to the same. Hamburg.

The writer suggests that France should be obliged to discharge all foreigners serving in its armies.

[No date.] Plan d'une Barriere pour l'Empire. Unsigned. Endorsed "Rec^d from Baron Schutz." 3½ pp.

[No date.] The projects of the States General and the British Ambassadors compared. In parallel columns in the handwriting of Horatio Walpole. A preamble and 22 Articles.

[No date.] Draught of the 26th Article of the Preliminaries relating to the French King acknowledging the Elector of Hanover :—

"Sa Majesté reconnoitra dès la Signature de ces Preliminaires la dignité Electorale de son Altesse Electorale de Brounsvic Lunebourg et son Office d'Architresorier de l'Empire qui y est attaché."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1709. May 28th. Articles preliminaires pour servir aux traitez de la Paix Generale. Signed at the Hague at this date. 40 Articles. 14 pp. [copy]. The signatories were [Prince] Eugene of Savoy, Philippe Louis Comte of Sinzendorf, the Prince and Duke of Marlborough, [Viscount] Townshend, J. de Welderen, L. B[aron] de Reede, A. Heinsius, [Baron] Coninck, F. Baron de Reede de Renswoode, S. V[on] Goshinga, Van Ittersum, W. Wickers, Willem Buys, and P. V[an] Dussen.

Same date. John Wich, Envoy at Hamburg, to Lord Townshend.

. . . . "This Town will have an occasion to lay themselves att your Excellencie's feett, and implore Your Protection, when the grand & alluring Topick of Trade may come to be handled"

Same date. The same to Horatio Walpole.

Is sending by M^r Statton "a box in which are five gold meddalls, however I tell him 'tis some of the Duke of Cells powder, so famous on all occasions you wrote for."

1709. June 3rd. John Robinson to the same. From Hamburg.
14th

The writer hears that the King of Sweden gained a great victory about the end of March.

1709. June 4th. The same to the same.

Will send a translation of the requests of the Town of Dantzig.

1709. June 6th. Minutes of a Conference between the Ministers of the Allies and Mons^r de Rouille. In French. 5½ pp.

1709. June 7th. Resolution of the States General upon the Report of the Conference between the Ministers of the Allies and Mons^r de Rouille, in reference to the French King's refusal of the Preliminaries. In French. 4 pp.

Same date. John Chetwynd to Lord Townshend. From Turin.

. . . . "I beg to congratulate your Ex^{ty} upon the good choice w^{ch} the Queen hath made of you to manage her affaires in so nice a conjuncture, & I heartily wish your Ex^{ty} may meet with good Success in your Negotiations. If what our last letters bring us be true, you have already gon a good way in your great worck, so far, that we expect a Courier here from the Duke of Savoy's Minister every moment, with the news of y^{re} haveing adjusted the preliminaries of Peace, or that you have dismissed the Marq^s de Torcy. The Duke of Savoy's Courier is just now arrived with the news of your haveing signed the Preliminaries, I have been at Court, and have seen the Duke's letters from his Ministers, as well as from my L^d Duke [of Marlborough] & Prince Eugene; H.R.H. seems pritty well satisfied with what you have don for him, & I must own, I am very well pleased to see things in so fair a way"

Same date. John Robinson to Horatio Walpole. From Hamburg.

It is reported the King of Sweden with his Army has passed the River Dnieper without any hindrance from the Muscovites.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1709. June 11th. John Wich to Lord Townshend.

"The King of Danemarck is expected in Holstein very suddainly, and then wee may hear a little what passed at that magnificent interview"

Same date. The same to Horatio Walpole.

. . . "I am and always was of the Opinion that His Grace [the Duke of Marlborough] will gett much better and more advantageous conditions with the Sword drawn, then in suffering the Ribaldrye of three or four French slaves, and Sycophants to be whisper'd about the World as a sort of a Preliminary"

Same date. A diary of the affairs of Hamburg (from May 13th, 1708, to May 3rd, 1709). Enclosed in Mr. Wych's letter of this date. In French. 11½ pp.

Same date. Dr Henry Newton to Lord Townshend. From Florence.

. "The Pope has not yet acknowledg'd King Charles the Third, in hopes that a Generall Peace may take of from him the Envy & the Hazard of such an Act, & so upon one pretence or another, temporizes betwixt the contending powers, & delays to make good the late Treaty with the Emper^r in that Part. Hee fears the Two Crowns, loves not the House of Austria, & at present suffers by them all: no mony being now returnd to Rome from Naples or Millain, & as little at present likewise to be expected from Spain: so that the Cardinalls are not able to keep up their usuall Port at Rome, most of their Revenews as likewise of the Apostolic Chamber arising from those parts. Here in Tuscany the Succession of the Family being in danger, since there is now no Likelihood, that either of the two Princes, the Sons of the G[rand] Duke, should have any issue, the Court has at last resolv'd that the Cardinall of Medices shall marry with the second Daughter of the Duke of Guastalla, with whom all things are now said to be adjusted, & that we may expect the Bride in a few dayes at Florence Tis thought Cardinall Medices's Cap will be bestowd upon the Abbat Salviati, Brother to the Duke of that name in this City & is at present Nuncio at Paris for the carrying the Consecrated Blanketts from the Pope to the Duke of Brittany; w^{ch} at Rome will bee reckned for an Hon^r done by them to that Court."

1709. June 12th. The same to the same. From Turin.

. I had the honour to write to Lord Sunderland in favour of the exiled Protestants in the Valley of Perouse I flatter myself that her Maj^{ty} will be pleased to approve of what I have had the honour to write in their favour, & I hope your Ex^{ty} will allso grant them your protection, when the Treaty with the Duke of Savoy shall be concluded. The Dutch Envoy at this Court hath wrote to his Masters to this purpose, we allways act in concert in things of this nature.

1709. June 14th. Christian Cole to the same. From Venice.

. Two Brittish Merchants, Mess^{rs} Boddington & Colebrooke set out from hence for Holland by the post. I have charged them with some Pamphletts newly published, and relating to the present differences, lately half adjusted at Rome. Since the departure of the Germans for Pie[d]mont every thing is hush in Italy, and I cannot send your Lordship any news of moment.

1709. June ^{14th}/_{25th}. John Robinson to Lord Townshend. From MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
Hamburg.

The writer hears from Poland and Saxony that King Augustus is resolved to return to Poland and to endeavour to regain that Crown.

1709. June 18th. John Wich to Horatio Walpole. From Hamburg.

You will have seen the propositions this poor Town has made to England towards being restor'd to the same privileges of Trade with [as] the Hollanders. I must beg you to recommend their miserable case on all hands to his Excellence 1709. June 18th. Draft of a letter from Horatio Walpole to Mr Secretary Boyle.

1709. June 24th. Draft of a letter, the same to the same.

1709. June 25th. John Robinson to Horatio Walpole.

The writer objects to a Squadron being sent into the Sound to intercept Corn Ships going to France since no force can be used there without a violation of the King of Denmark's neutrality.

1709. June 28th. The same to the same.

Enclosing a paper which has become separated.

Same date. John Wich to the same.

About the plans of King Augustus.

1709. July 6th. John Chetwynd to the same. Dated at Turin.

"Last Thursday Mar[sh]all Dawn reviewd the Imperiall and Piedmontese horse at Orbassano consisting of about ten thousand. The Infantry wth a Detachment of 600 horse, have begun their march, and are to be at the foot of mount Cenis tomorrow when the Mar[sh]al designs to join them, an the 9th Inst. they will begin to climb up that Mountain.

Two thousand Pioneers or more wth some Infantry have been employed ever since the 2^d Ins^t to make a way over Mount Cenis to facilitate the passage of our heavy Artillery in case Mar[sh]all Dawn should have occasion for any, to force some of the Enemies Posts in Savoy or make a Siege on that Side.

Besides the Army w^{ch} marches with Mar[sh]all Dawn over Mount Cenis, Gen^l Rehbindler is detached wth 16 Batt. to observe the Enemies at Briancon where we are informed they have 30 Battallions.

Letters from Paris say that they are under great Consternation there & apprehensive of an Action in Flanders. Mons^r de Roclore Govern^r & Mr de Baville Intendant of the Sevensnes, have sent Courier upon Courier to the Court of France to demand a speedy Succour from the King to endeavour to extinguish the fire w^{ch} kindles there. The number of those who have taken up Arms is considerable and encreases daily, these are both Roman Catholics and Protestants. This being so near the Fronteer, to be favoured by the Duke of Savoy's designs, gives great uneasiness to the Court of France.

They talk in France that all their Troops are recalled from Spain, & that their design Seems to be to have an army in the Kingdom to curb the people in the severall Provinces, who begin to mutiny, rather than to send Succours to the Armies in Flanders and Dauphiné as the Court gives out.

Mr. Palmes went from hence yesterday for Milan to wait the Arrivall of Count Slick or what other Minister the Emp^r will be pleased to send to see and adjust the differences betwixt his Imp^l Maj^{ty} and the Duke of

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

Savoy who seems resolved not to take the field till he get Satisfaction from the Court of Vienna, as to the entire execution of his Treaty.

The Duke of Savoy has given leave to Prince Emmanuel & P. Eugene of Soissons, nephews to P. Eugene of Savoy to make the Campaign with Mar[sh]all Dawn, and they will leave this place to join the Army tomorrow.

His R.H. having sent all the Troops that he possibly could into the field, we have nothing but the Militia left for the guard of this place."

1709. July 9th. Florence. Dr. Henry Newton to Lord Townshend. The Peace of Italy has made us here but empty of News at present. The Pope's health declines, and the recognition of King Charles the Third's stile delay'd, w^{ch} upon the News of the Preliminaries at Rome wanted but little of being comply'd with. Wee are like to have a very extraordinary Harvest in these parts, after all the fears they had of a bad one; Wee expect to heare every houre of the arrivall of the Princesse Guastalla here to consummate the marriage with the Prince Francesco Maria (for that is the name the late Cardinall Medici goes by) who is now upon the road with his Nephew, the youngest Prince, to meet and conduct her hither. I had my first Audience on the 6th instant of that Prince, hee being no longer now Protector of the Two Crowns; to congratulate him upon the occasion of his Marriage; there being no hope left, of keeping up the Succession of the Family, and consequently of securing on this Side the quiet of Italy

1709. July 10th. Milan. General Francis Palmes to the same. Att my Arrival att Turin from the Court of Venice I found the news of the treaty of Peace being broke of w^{ch} made me believe that y^r Excellency would have returned from thence for London, but since I find that y^w are like to continue att the Hague sometime I desire leave to pay my respects to y^r Excellency and att the same time to communicate to y^w what passes in my station where I hope to be very soon. I have been here these three or four days expecting the Emperors Minister who is to be sent hither in order to adjust the differences between his R. Highnesse the Duke of Savoye and that Court, who I fear will not when he does come settle those affairs altogether to his R: H: Satisfaction

I doe with all my heart congratulate y^r Lord^p being employed by her Maty to put an honorable end to a tedious and just warr, w^{ch} I hope will give a happy and lasting peace to Old England, and quiet and honor to all those who contributed to bring its Enemies to reason.

1709. July 12th. John Wich to Horatio Walpole.

Enclosing a statement in French of the proceedings of the "Commission Imperiale" from May 3rd to July 9th.

1709. July 14th. Mr. David Flotard's Proposal to support and assist the rising in the Vivares and the Cevennes. Dated at Amsterdam. In French. 3 pp.

[No date.] A Memorial of Mr. Flotard enclosed in the last and addressed to Queen Anne and the Allies. In French. 3 pp.

1709. July 20th. James Cockburn to Horatio Walpole. From Turin.

"Marshall Dawn arrived at Ossois the 14th Inst., from whence he detached the Count de la Rogue with 5000 Men to drive the Enemies from the Tarentaise, where they have 8 Battalions, a Regiment of Dragoons and part of a regiment of horse. General Schulenberg who

MARQUIS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

comands in the Valley D'Aoust is to advance on that Side to assist Count la Roque. The Mareschall designed to march from Ossois the 18th & was to be last night at Modane or Aurelle.

Our Letters from Paris of the 3rd Inst. and from Lyons of the 7th assure that the french King has sent orders to countermand the retreat of his Troops from Spain, and that the Mar[sh]all Bezons is to assemble the Army of the two Crowns with all possible diligence near Lerida in order to enter Catalonia. The Paris letters are full of the change of the Ministry, and say that the King has left the management of affairs wholly to the Dauphine. The Camisars continue to encrease, the last letters bring nothing particular from them.

..... We are informed that the Enemies Army is in such great want of Corn, that they subsist only of what they can get daily from the neighbouring marketts and Villages part of w^{ch} they buy & part they take by force, and not only the Deserters who come daily in great numbers, but likewise all the advices from Lions & the frontiers say that they want money so much, that the Soldiers have received no Sub-sistance money for a considerable time"

1709. July 23rd. Dr Henry Newton to the same. From Florence. the Subsidies demanded here of the people, w^{ch} the Contributions required by the Germans have in a great measure given rise to, cause no little discontent & murmurings amongst them: & in Naples they are every day in apprehensions of a Tumult upon the accompt of the new Gabells; w^{ch} has obliged Cardinall Grimaldi the Viceroy, to call thither the greater part of the Horse in this Kingdome, for his own & the Governments Security. Matters are not yet settled at Millain to the Content of the D. of Savoy: & the Pope's decaying & broken health makes it very probable, that there may bee a Conclave yet before the end of the Year. Before w^{ch} time too I hope my Lord Townshend may yet again Successfully assist in the procuring a Generall Peace for Christendome.

1709. July 26th. John Wich to Lord Townshend.

.... "The Emperor's Commissioner here has given a wonderfull offence to the Priesthood, and last Sunday he was declaimed against in every Pulpitt in this City [Hamburg]. He has taken two children from their Friends who design'd to breed 'em up Lutherans and on Prætext that their Mother was a Portugaise and a Catholick keep 'em in his own House and has Jesuits over 'em" 1709. July 30th. The same to the same.

Mentions a reported victory of the Russians over the Swedes and encloses an extract in French from a severe paper by Count Schönborn against those ministers who animadverted in their sermons upon the case of the Schleich children.

1709. Augt. 9th. Nicholas Clignet to the same. From Leyden.

In French. Enclosing the accounts of the Marquis D'Arseiller against the British Government.

1709. Augt. 13th. John Wich to the same.

The Plague is at Dantzic. The accounts concerning the Defeat of the Swedes and the Death of their King continue the same.

1709. Augt. 23rd. The same to Horatio Walpole.

There is no doubt of the entire Victory gained by the Muscovite.

"We begin to be a little upon the muddle in the commission."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

The two main Machines being at present absent. The Em[pero]rs and Ele[cto]rs Ministers, however I shall keep them at play, tho but at a small game.

1709. Augt. 26th. General Palmes to Lord Townshend. From the Camp at Faverges.

..... "Our Army reaches from Confians to Annecy and wants for nothing, and in a few days we expect our field Artillery here. The Enemy are very strongly intrenchd at Montmeillan, and have severall posts between that place and Chamberry, they have also a considerable Number of Militia, and five Regiments of Dragons on the Rhone, being very apprehensive that the Mareschall should attempt to pass that River with a Body of Horse.

L^t Gen^l Baron de St Rhemy of H.R.H.^s troops march'd the 24th with 3,000 foot to the Chartreuse not far from the left of the Enemys Camp to see what posture they are in on that Side.

The Enemy are daily reinforced by the troops that came out of Spain, and the Roussillon so that we count them at present 100 battalions, and 45 Squadrons on this side of the Rhone. I am obliged to y^r Excellency for y^r letter of the 30th of July and could wish I could send y^r such news from hence as would facilitate y^r negotiations when they begin att the Hague, however I doe not thinke the Army on this side nor the Expences can be called uselesse since we employ the enclosed number of the Enemys troopes and hope we shall oblige more of em to march as these wth otherwise must augment their forces against my Lord Marlborough who hitherto has been our Sheet Anchor and where our greatest hopes lye.

His R.H. [the Duke of Savoy] has hitherto shown very great zeal for the success of the Campagne and great attention for the providing the army wth necessarys w^{ch} I can assure y^r Lord^p in this difficult country is both chargeable and painful, considering the superiority the Duke of Berwyck has in foot and the good measures he has hitherto taken I believe a strong diversion will be the utmost of our hopes on this side. I have etc."

Enclosed is a list of the 97 Battallions and the 19 Squadrons under the orders of the Duke of Berwick.

1709. Augt. 31st. James Cockburn to Horatio Walpole. From Turin.

..... "As on one side Marshall Dawn endeavours to bring the French to an action, so on the other Gen^l Rehbinden who was left in the lines of Exiles wth 12 Batt^s was ordered to advance towards Briançon, he is allready passed Mount Genevre & attacked the Enemies at Pont la Vachette, & beat them from thence with the loss of 120 or 130 men and if he had been strong enough might have taken possession of some posts near the Town" 1709. Sept. 7th. The same to the same. From Turin. Dated at Turin.

..... "Gen^l Rehbinden has been ordred to detach two of the Batt^s under his comand to join Marshall Dawn and they are marched over Mount Cenis.

..... The Duke of Savoy having appointed the 8th Inst. to be observed as a Generall Day of Thanksgiving in all Piedmont for the happy delivery of this Town, His R. H. designs to hold a chappell of the Knights of the Order of the Anuntiade to hear Te Deum sung, and afterwards make a Solemn Procession with the Princes and rest of the Nobility of both Sexes."

1709. Sept. 10th. John Wich to the same.

The King of Sweden lives but whether he will do well the writer cannot tell.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Same date. The same to Lord Townshend.

The Accounts are that the King is well and perfectly recovered of his Wound, that His Majesty after an incredible March of several Days through the Deserts got safe to the Banks of the Boristhenes with three or four hundred Horse; That finding the River vastly broad and the Transports few, he was obliged to send over to Oczakow for assistance. The Officer there not daring to do any thing without leave of the neighbouring Basha kept that unfortunate Prince on the other side four and twenty hours before any boats could be order'd him, which arriving at last, came just time enough to save His Majesty and some few of his retinue, the rest being all taken prisoners by a Party of Muscovites who were sent in his pursuit.

1709. Sept. 11th. A letter from the Protestant Ministers at the Diet of Ratisbon to Queen Anne, on behalf of the Protestant Religion. In Latin. 4 pp.

Enclosing a Declaration in French, signed by Charles Whitworth and dated at Ratisbonne 15th March 1703, of the Queen's intention to use her utmost endeavours in support of the Protestant Religion.

1709. Sept. 17th. John Wich to Horatio Walpole.

... "I am full of Transport [at the victory of Malplaquet] and like the Bowle which I shall this Evening consecrate to their Healths, runne over with Joy and Satisfaction. Whilst you are drawing towards a Peace, Wee here are preparing for Blood and Slaughter. Danemarch resolved to make a huge Bustle" ...

1709. Sept. 28th. James Cockburn to the same. From Turin.

... "Our Army is now on their Retreat from Savoy the last of them was to be on this side Mount [S^t] Bernard yesterday, so we shall soon have them all in the plain at Ivrea. We expect M^r Palmes here every moment. Tomorrow we are to sing Te Deum here for the Reduction of Tournay & the great Victory the Duke of Marlborough & P. Eugene obtained [at Malplaquet] in Flanders the 11th Inst." ...

1709. Sept. 30th. John Laws to the same. From Brussels. Misdated "30th October 1709."

... At the opening of the Trenches before Mons on the 25th [Sept. 1709] Lieut. General Cadogan was wounded by a Shot in the Neck ...

1709. Oct. 1st. John Wich to the same.

"The Sweets have got together 16000 men in Schonen and have already fitted out fourteen Men of War. Their Ministers begin to talk as if they would be glad to have a peace with the Czar and suffer King Augustus to be dethroned upon certain conditions."

1709. Oct. 3rd. John Laws to the same. From Brussels.

... "Lieut. General Cadogan is in a fair way of Recovery, the Ball not having Lodged. His Aide de Camp Foxen is dead, of a shott he receiv'd in the head at the same time."

1709. Oct. 8th. John Wich to the same.

[I] intend to settle this winter here betwixt a Rummer of Rhenish, and a smart jole of Stergeon.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Same date. Stephen Poyntz to Thomas Ward. Dated at the Hague and addressed "For Mr. Ward at Raynham Hall in Norfolk—By Swaffham Post." Franked "R. Walpole."

..... "We hope to hear some good news frō' Spain."

1709. Oct. 12th. James Cockburn to Horatio Walpole. From Turin.

"Marshall Dawn with most of the Generall Officers of our Army have been here some days. The Enemies having reinforced their posts about Briancon & on that frontier his R. H. has thought fitt to order 15 Batt^s to be detached from our grand Army^{w^{ch}} is now encamped near to Ivrea to reinforce the body under Gen^l Rehbinden & these Troops are already marched towards Suze under the comand of Gen^l St Remy"

1709. Oct. 18th. John Wich to the same.

Enclosing a Memorial in French from the Bishop of Lubec on the case of the Princess of Gottorp, and giving General Meyerfeld's account of the affairs of the King of Sweden.

It concludes: "For God's sake where is Lord Raby?"

1709. Oct. 12th, N.S. Daniel Pulteney, Envoy at Copenhagen, to the same.

Enclosing an extract from his despatch of this date to M^r Secretary Boyle informing him that the King of Denmark has fully resolved to attack Sweden. It concludes . . . "New difficulties seem to arise every day; I am almost tempted to believe all will come to nothing at least for this Year."

1709. Oct. 29th. The States Rough Draft of the Barrier Treaty. [In French 11½ pp. Together with] A Separate Article of the same Treaty. [2½ pp.]

1709. Oct. 30th. General Francis Palmes to Lord Townshend. From Turin. Giving the movements and winter quarters of the Imperial Troops.

1709. Nov. 1st, N.S. Stephen Poyntz to Thomas Ward. From the Hague.

..... No talk of a Peace till Spring. The D. of Marlborough will be here on Sunday.

1709. Nov. 1st. A Memorial about appointing a Person to examine the Interests of the Protestant Churches. Enclosed in Mr. Boyle's letter of the date. 4 pp.

[No date.] Directions for Mr. Hales, a Special Commissioner to the Protestant Courts and States on behalf of the Oppressed Protestants. Unsigned, 4 pp.

1709. Nov. 15th, N.S. Stephen Poyntz to Thomas Ward. From the Hague.

..... Mr. Hor[ace] Townshend is not yet come, but expected daily.

1709. Nov. 27th. King of France's Answer to Mons^r Petkum's proposals. In French, 1½ pp.

1709. Nov. 29th. John Wich to Lord Townshend.

The writer is forwarding a copy of his despatch, of the same date, to the Secretary of State, in which he mentions that the marriage of the Czars son with the Princess of Wolfenbuttel is a good as concluded and that the Princess has set out for Dresden where the Czar's son is to

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.
—

wait on her. "It is stipulated among the Articles that his Czaarish Majesty is to purchase such Lands in Silesia, as may be a competent jointure hereafter in Case the Prince should dye, which some people think is little less then admitting the Muscovite into Germany."

Same date. Earl of Sunderland, Secretary of State, to John Chetwynd, Envoy Extraordinary at Turin.

This is a despatch enclosing Orders from the Lords of the Admiralty to the Mediterranean Fleet, which was never forwarded.

The seal on its cover bears the arms of Lord Sunderland, but his Signature is written by a Secretary.

His Lordship informs Mr Chetwynd that by Her Majesty's Command he is sending him Orders from the Lords Commissioners of Admiralty to the Mediterranean Fleet, to seize all Genoese ships unless the Genoese immediately cease exporting corn to France. It goes on: "The Dutch Envoy will receive the like from his Masters, and You in conjunction and concert with him are to acquaint the Republick of Genoa that You have such Orders, which You are comanded by Your respective Masters to send forthwith to their Admirals and Commanders in the Mediterranean, to putt a Stop to this carrying of Corn into France, and no fair words without the real doing of it will be accepted by the Queen and States, and if they should upon this new Representation putt a Stop to it for a while, & then begin it again, you are not to fail to send the Orders to the Fleet"

[P.S.] "Her Ma^y thinks that when You and the Dutch Envoy notify this to the Republick of Genoa, it will have the greater effect if it be done in the most formal manner, & therefore Her Ma^y would have You go with the Dutch Envoy Yourselfs to Genoa rather than do it only by Letter."

The Admiralty Orders enclosed in the above despatch are signed by Lord Orford [Edward Russell], [Sir] George Byng, George Doddington, Paul Methuen, and J[osiah] Burchett [Secretary to the Board]; They are addressed: "To S^r John Norris Kn^t, Adm^l of the Blew Squadron of Her Majesty's Fleete, and Adm^l & Comander in chiefe of Her Ma^y's Ships in the Mediterranean; Or to the chiefe Flag Officer, or Commander in chiefe of her Ma^y's Ships employed in the Mediterranean for the time being."

The Orders after reciting that the Genoese have for some time furnished France with corn, notwithstanding the representations of the Queen's Envoy at Genoa [William Chetwynd] go on:—

"You are therefore hereby required & directed, forthwith upon your receipt hereof, to give strict & effectual Orders to the respective Capt^s of her Majesty's Ships which are or shall be under your Command, to seize all Shippes belonging to the Republick of Genoa, in pursuance of Her Majesty's pleasure as aforesayd. For which this shall be Your Warrant: Given etc."

1709, Dec. 13th. Copy of a letter from the Ministers of the Reformed Religion assembled at Ratisbon, 23rd Nov. 1709. Enclosed in Mr. Boyle's letter of this date. In Latin, 3 pp.

1709, Dec. 14th. Copy of the Resolution of the States General upon the French King's answer to Petkum. In French, 9½ pp.

[No date.] Etat du Rapport des Contributions, sauvegardes &c. de 16 de Mai 1703 jusque 15 de Mai 1709.

[No date.] Etat General de la Depense des Provinces Unies pour l'annee 1710.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

[No date.] Enumeration of the troops of the United Provinces from the Peace of Ryswick to 1710. In French, 7½ pp.

Note. In the latter year the total force is stated as 142,185.

[No date.] A memorandum in French requesting Passports from Her Britannic Majesty for three vessels, lying at Amsterdam, which have been built for subjects of her Majesty, viz., the Amsterdam of 900 tons, Captain Samuel Adams; the Devonshire of 700 tons, Capt. Richard Horswell; and the Portsmouth of 700 tons, Capt. David Setter.

1709-1710. A bundle of "Papers relating to the King of Prussia's Pretensions at a Treaty of Peace."

1709-1710. Extracts from the Despatches of the Hon. Henry Boyle, Secretary of State, to the Duke of Marlborough and Lord Townshend, the British Plenipotentiaries at the Hague, from 5th April 1709 to 8th August 1710. In an official hand on folio sheets numbered I. to LIV. The sheets numbered II., and X. to XVI., are missing.

1709-1710. A bundle of rough drafts and fair copies of despatches from the Duke of Marlborough and Lord Townshend to Mr. Secretary Boyle, from 23rd July 1709 to 25th April 1710.

1709-1710. A memorandum of the official correspondence, between the Foreign Office and the British Plenipotentiaries, from 21st March 1708 to 8th August 1710. 4 sheets.

1709-1710. Mr. Secretary Boyle's despatches to Lord Townshend, from 13th May 1709 to 30th August 1709; and from 4th April 1710 to 19th September 1710.

1709-1710. A bundle of letters and despatches from Daniel Pulteney, Envoy at Copenhagen, to Lord Townshend and Horatio Walpole, from 19th November 1709 to 16th September 1710.

1710, Jan. 7th, N.S. Stephen Poyntz to Thomas Ward. From the Hague.

..... "There is no likelihood of a Peace this winter, however the Gardiner may sow what he thinks fitt, since it will be better to have the garden stocked tho' my L^d should not come, than to run the hazard of finding it empty.

The family continues well God be praised."

1710, Jan. 29th, N.S. John Chetwynd to Lord Townshend. From Turin.

..... "I observe with pleasure the good dispositions of the States-Gen^l to have every thing ready to open the Campaign early. I wish I could send your Ex^{cy} the like good news from hence, instead of telling you that his R. H. hath his differences with the Imp^l Court so much at heart, that he oponly prefers their adjustement to any other view. M^r Palmes is gon from hence very well instructed with his R. H.'s reasons and he is so sensible of the necessity of satisfying this Prince, that I am perswaded he will leave no stone unturned to compass so great a work. On the other hand, the resolution of the States Gen^l after the Conference wth y^r Ex^{cy}, C^t Zinzendorf, &c., joined to the orders wth the Queen will probably give on the same head, will, I hope, have a good effect at Vienna, as that we shall see them disposed to make an end of this difference."

1710, Feb. 7th. John Wich to the same. From Hamburg.

... "a title once in a family is hereditarye to the Children, therefore the son of S^r Peter Wich is call'd Chevalier.

.... I am afraid the Elector of Hannover will hardly be persuaded to make the next campagne. I hear My Lord Staires could gett no positive Answer from his Highness"

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1710, Feb. ^{9th}/_{20th}. Extract from a letter of Charles Whitworth to Secretary Boyle. From Moscow. In French, 1½ pp.

1710, Feb. 10th. General Palmes to Lord Townshend. From Vienna.

.... "I fear 'tis not the intention of this Court to execute the treaty without being very much pushed to it by the Queen and the States"

Same date, N.S. James Cockburn to the same. From Turin.

.... "all the letters from France assure that we have accepted the last offers & that two Deputies are gon from the Hagne to meet the Mar[sh]all D'Uxelles & the Abbé de Polignac at Moredike, but we do defer our belief of this news till we have it confirmed from the Hague.

1710, Feb. 11th. Stephen Poyntz to Thomas Ward. From the Hague.

.... "Something relating to the Peace has been in Agitation lately, but the French King not being yet brought to reason, 'tis gone off again except he thinks fitt to renew the Negotiation by accepting of the terms proposed in the Preliminary Treaty; w^{ch} pehaps he may still do before the opening of the Camp"

.... Mr. Townsh^d is like to stay here all the Winter. The Pears &c. are come but all rotten."

1710, Feb. 13th. Mons^r Petkum's letter to the Marquis de Torcy. In French. 1½ pp.

1710, Feb. 28th. Stephen Poyntz to Thomas Ward. From the Hague.

.... "The French Ministers are expected somewhere near Breda by the 5th or 8th of next month, in order to try if an Exped[ien]t can be found out for qualifying the 37th Article of the Preliminaries, the French King having consented to all the rest. But whether these Conferences will introduce the General Treaty or not is as yet very uncertain, tho' I believe it is thought by most here that when once the Fr[ench] Ministers are come they will hardly go back again without making the Peace. If so I hope we may be able to see Norfolk some time this Summer, or at least to return to London by the beginning of Winter."

"His Ex^{ty} has sent over for the two little Masters from M^r Windham's.

I desire the favour of you to present my humble servicc to M^r Prestland, and to lett him know that our friend D^r. Hare is married. I wish the good examples of this kind w^{ch} our College have sett might influence him to do the same. M^r Horace Walpole is expected here soon, by whose coming I shall be eased from that weight of business w^{ch} I have had upon me for some time, and shall oftener find myself at liberty to write both to him and you. The whole family enjoy their health rather better here than in England."

Same date. John Wich to Lord Townshend.

The writer encloses a Memorial (in French) from the Minister of Holstein in Hamburg, and an "Extract of the Right Honourable

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

M^r Secretary Boyl's Letter. Whitehall Feb^r 17⁹⁸/₈ directing him to follow instructions received from Lord Townshend without waiting to receive particular directions from Whitehall.

1710, March 3rd. Copy of Instructions to M^r Envoy Palmquist. Dated at Stockholm, 6¹/₂ pp.

1710, March 7th. John Wich to Lord Townshend.

Enclosing a memorial from Baron Goertz and a copy of a letter to M^r Secretary Boyle.

1710, March 14th. The same to Horatio Walpole.

... "I'll answer Y^r, Dear Sir, next Post, in the mean time I recommend you to Madamoselle Czarenburg's whale bone Petticot. The Danes are beaten. Make Peace and Peace hereafter. Our Northern Bullies begin to cock their Crests. The King of Sweden has at last wrote himself to the Government of Stat Pomern and Stockholm. When he heard the Danes had invaded him, He laught and said, My Subjects know how to defend themselves. The Cloud is gathering."

1710, March 27th. John Laws to the same. From Brussels.

"I beg leave to congratulate your coming on this side, and to renew my correspondence

. The Marechal de Villars is daily expected at the French Camp near Cambray. Some Letters say he is arriv'd there. The Maison du Roy is in march towards the frontier having receiv'd orders to leave Paris without being pass'd in review by the King upon the news [of] the precipitate Success of the Allies."

1710, March 29th. The Earl of Stair to Lord Townshend. Dated at "Warshaw" and unaddressed.

My Lord,—I have little to trouble y^r Excellency wth at this time, having upon the 27 given a full account to my Lord Duke of Marlborough of the situation of things in this country. The King obliges himself not to invade Pomerania nor to march his troops through the Empire, upon condition that the Swedes doe not march out of Pomerania, nor reinforce their corps that is there, w^{ch} his Majesty conceives can be done wth no other view than that of invading the Empire or returning into Poland. I dont at all question but there will be care taken that the Sweedes in Pomerania, dont move, for if they should it will be impossible to prevent all Germany's being in a flame, and I conceive it to be of very great importance that exact measures be taken that the corps in Pomeraina be not reinforced, for when the Campagne is once begun and the Muscovites employ'd in the siege of Rog^a, if the King of Sweeden returns and puts himself at the head of his troops in Pomerania w^{ch} it will not be a hard matter to reinforce wth 8000 or 10000 foot if the war in Schonen is at an end, I say I doe not see w^t hinders him to march into the heart of the Empire he understands the secret of getting money there, and when he has that men wont be wanting. I believe w^t he did formerly will not be a very sufficient pledge of his moderation at this time & in no other place but Pomerania he can pretend to have an army capable to act, in Pomerania there is actually remaining a body of five thousand horse.

The Danish Minister here makes strong instances for the march of the Succours or the invasion of Pomerania, the king seems to think the case is not yet arrived in w^{ch} he is obliged to furnish the Succours the Danes not being attackt but he promises to invade Pomerania the minute the Sweedes moves towards Holsteyn. Orders are given to make magazines upon the frontier, an express from [the] Empress is sent to the Czar at Petersburg.

My Lord I must beg y^r Excellency will be pleased to speak a word to Mons^r de Starembourg who is president of the committee de Raaden, the Pensionary must be spoke too because it must pass in the States of the Province, to obtain a prolongation of Leave for Capt. Kennedy who is along wth mee, he is Capt. in Brigadier Douglas his Regiment. I have wrote to Mons^r de Wissenbourg wth I take the liberty to send under y^r Lo^{ps} cover. I am wth very great respect and Esteam my Lord, y^r Excellency's

most obedient humble Servant

STAIR,

1710, April 1st, N.S. Stephen Poyntz to Thomas Ward. From the Hague.

..... "The French Ministers continue still at Gertruydenberg, and the last Courier they sent to Versailles is now returned, but what he has brought is not yet made publick. Their design seems to be to amuse and disunite the Allys, and to retard the preparations for the Campaign, and they have made no new proposals except some relating to a Partition w^{ch} are not likely to be accepted; so that I believe we must give them another blow before they will hear reason. Prince Eugene is expected here the 3rd & the D. of Marlborough sett^s out for Flanders the 12th. The Magazins are all ready and the Army very well cloathed & recruited, while that of the Enemy is in extreme Want, insomuch that in sev^l places their Leathern Shoes were taken from them in the winter and locked up till the opening of the Campⁿ, & wooden Shoes given them in the mean time; and every post we hear of their plundering Bakers' shops &c^a.

I hope there have been no disturbances in Norfolk on acc^t of Dr Sachev[ere]'s Tryal

[P.S.] The 2 little Masters are arrived in good health."

1710, April 4th. William Penn to Lord Townshend.

Dated "4. 2nd (Ap.) 1710" and unaddressed. Endorsed "April y^e 4.—Rec^d April 22 N.S. 1710."

"My Noble Friend,

There being Fifty or Sixty Swissers, called Menonists comeing for Holland in order to goe for PennSylvania, It is feard the States of Holland will stop them being well to pass for as much as one Mitchell, their Agent has contracted wth m[e] for them, for lands &c.: I humbly beg that If the States should stop them, It would please thee, as for the Queen's Interest & Service, It may be taken off or prevented, & thou wilt much oblige

Thy very respectf^l Friend

WM. PENN.

Menonists or Menist[s] are Annabaptists here."

1710, April —. Etats de Fourages necessaires pour pouvoir former une Armée aux environs de Tournay et de Lille Vers le 15^{me} ou 20^{me} d'Avril 1710. 4 pp.

1710, April 16th. John Chetwynd to Horatio Walpole. From Turin.

Details the movements of some of the French and Imperial Troops, and states that H.M.'s Ships Dartmouth, Gosport and Ludlow Castle

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

arrived at Genoa the previous week having left Sir John Norris with his Squadron at Port Mahon.

1710, April 23rd. John Cockburn to the same. From Turin.

.... "By our last letters from Genoa we are informed that a Genoese ship was arrived there from Cadix having on board 500^m p[ie]ce[s] of eight of the money lately come by the Flotille, w^{ch} the Genoese Captain assures [us] to be richer than any arrived for some time.

.... The Earle of Rochford went from this on Munday last for Genoa to wait M^r Stanhope's arrivall there " 1710, April 25th, N.S. Stephen Poyntz to Thomas Ward. From the Hague.

..... "I suppose you will have rec^d before this can reach you the joyful news of the Duke of Marlborough's and Prince Eugene's having passed the French Lines in two different places without opposition, upon which fortunate opening of this early Campaign I congratulate you the more heartily because if the future successes are but answerable to this beginning I shall hope to see you next Spring in Norfolk. It is thought the Army will immediately lay siege to Douay, and though I know we are often too hasty in computing the time that a Town can hold out, yet it is confidently reported here that it cannot defend it self above 10 days or a fortnight, that I could not but let you know it.

His Ex^{cy} is extremely glad to hear that there have been no rebellious riots within his Lieutenancy upon the account of the late Tryal; which good disposition I hope will extend it self so far as to keep all parts of Norfolk from attempting to imitate the Gloucestershire address, and to disturb the peace of Her Ma^{ty}'s happy reign by unseasonable professions of duty and Loyalty. Which humour is so like that of the times of the late Rebellion that every good subject ought to check it for fear of the consequences 1710, May 3rd. John Chetwynd to Lord Townshend. From Turin. Enclosing a Despatch for Lord Sunderland under a flying seal.

1710, May ^{5th}/_{16th}. Copy of a letter from M^r Rosencrantz to M^r Secretary Boyle about renewing the Treaty of Alliance with Denmark In French. 2 pp.

1710, May 6th. Lord Drummond to Horatio Walpole. From Amsterdam.

Is sending 51 flasks of Claret to Lord Townshend. There is a rumour that the Duke has arrived with a Peace signed in his pocket.

1710, May 10th. Monsieur de Quesne to the same. In French. Dated at Geneva.

The envoy Stanian has received no orders, and there does not seem to be any one charged with the commission entrusted to the Marquis d'Arzeliers We hear that the French are in consternation through fear lest they fail to secure a peace. The flight of the Duke d'Ossuna and the imprisonment of the Duke de Medina Celi make one believe that there is some disorder at the Court of Madrid. God grant that profit may be made of circumstances favourable to the [Protestant]. Religion.

1710, May ^{7th}/_{18th}. Charles Whitworth to the Duke of Marlborough. From Stolpe in Pomerania. Copy.

Stating the views of the Czar as to his joining the Grand Alliance.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Same date. The same to Lord Townshend. From Stolpe. Enclosing the last.

“I have had hitherto the most fatiguing Voyage imaginable which has not a little impaired my health, however I shall make what diligence I can to the Hague”

1710, May ^{15th}/_{24th}. The same to the same. From Berlin.

Enclosing two letters from the Swedish Secretary Mons^r Caderhielm who was taken prisoner with Count Piper. . . . “I suppose the formal siege of Riga will now be begun very suddenly, according to the resolution taken before the Czar and his Court left Mosco[w] but I don't hear that any of the Saxon Troops will be employed in that expedition; on which occasion I am obliged to acquaint you that the Czar has no manner of Confidence in King Augustus, & will not give his Majesty or the Polish Troops any footing in Riga during this war” 1710, May 15th. John Laws to Horatio Walpole. From Brussels.

“Letters from Madrid of the 28th confirm the close Emprisonment of the Duke of Medina Celi but we have yet here no certain advices of the reason of it.

“I see you have sent back the French Ministers, unless this last Courier brings something new to stopp them. I suppose you hear the Duke of Burgundy [is] grown very clamorous at their coming back, and at the successes of the Allies.”

1710, May 16th. Monsieur Clignet to Lord Townshend. In French. From Leyden.

If the slightest change is made in the preliminaries the French ought to be made to surrender Upper Alsace and Strasbourg together with the fortresses in their present state . . . and they should give security for their debts and plunder and the money they took by force from the good families of Strasbourg.

1710, May 19th. Anthony Corbiere to Horatio Walpole. In French. From London.

The writer thought that the affairs of Cap^t Caries would have been finished before he wrote but will not delay sending his grateful compliment.

1710, May 21st. John Chetwynd to the same. From Turin.

“Marshall Dawn arrived here last Saturday from Vienna & went to wait on his R. H. [the Duke of Savoy] to . . . concert the necessary dispositions for assembling our Army . . . & its hoped before the end of next month, that they will be all encamped at the foot of the mountains

Mr Stanhope sailed the 16th ins^t from Finall with three of the Queens ships of war for Barcelona . . . tho' Mr Stanhope designed when I left him to stay at Genoa till such time as the 3000 Germans, with the rest of the recruits designed for Catalonia, had been ready to embark w^{ch} will be about the beginning of next month, he hath however carried along with him all the recruits w^{ch} were ready at Finall, and a considerable Sum of money.” . . .

“His R. H. received a courier the other day from the Hague with letters of the 10th ins^t by which we find that you have sent the French Ministers about their business.”

Same date. “Copy of Mr Pultney's Memorial to the Danish Ministers” in relation to the instructions given by that Court to its Privateers. In French. 1½ pp.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1710, May 26th. "Extract of Mr Secretary Boyle's letter of the 26th May 1710, O.S.," to Lord Townshend.

"I send your Excellency by Her Majesty's order a great bundle of papers concerning two Spanish ships that had Her Majesty's passes to go from Passage in Biscay to Buenos Ayres in America, and return from thence to any Port in Spain. The said Ships sailed from Cadiz the 25th of March last under protection of the said passes and were the next day mett by three Dutch ships of warr, which carried them as prize into Lisbon, and when they are brought to Holland the captors will endeavour to have them condemned. Your Ex^{ty} has all the materials in the enclosed papers to support those passes which you can be furnished with from hence; and you will be pleased to inform the pensionary with what is most effectual in them to exempt this capture from being adjudged lawful prize. But before you make any representation to the States in this matter in Her Ma^{ties} name Her Ma^{ty} would be willing to learn what his thoughts are of those passes, and what success she is like to meet with in maintaining the validity of them."

—, 1710. A bundle of papers relating to the above-mentioned Spanish ships.

1710, May 28th. John Chetwynd to Horatio Walpole. From Turin.

"Thursday last we received advice by an express from Genoa of Sir John Norris being arrived at Vado with the fleet under his command" 1710, June 3rd. Copy of a Memorandum signed by Lord Townshend at the Hague.

"Monsieur le Baron de Schmettau Plenipotentiaire de Sa Ma^{te} le Roy de Prusse ayant déclaré au nom de sadite Ma^{te} au sujet du renouvellement de la convention regardant le corps de troupes de Sa dite Ma^{te} faisant en Italie qu'en attendant que Sa Ma^{te} Imperiale, Sa Ma^{te} la Reine de la Grande Bretagne, et leurs Hautes Puissances Mess^{rs} les Etats G[e]n[er]aux des Provinces Unis puissent adjoûster et convenir des conditions dudit renouvellement, ledit Roy son maître est content que ledit corps en Italie continue de rendre les mêmes services qu'il a rendus les campagnes precedentes sur le pied de la dernière convention du 31^e de Mars 1709 pourvû que le dit corps tant de la part de S. M. I^e et de S. M. B^r que de L^s. H^s. P^s soit traité sur le pied de la dite convention aussi bien à l'égard du payement exact des subsides que du fournissement des autres douceurs y stipulées;

"Sa Majesté la Reine de la Grande Bretagne ayant appris avec plaisir la resolution prise par S. Majesté Prussienne pour qu'en attendant que l'on s'explique sur le projet présenté au nom de Sa dite Majesté son dit corps de troupes continue sur le pied des années precedentes, et concoure à agir pour le bien de la cause commune, a autorisé le sousigné Ambassadeur Extraordinaire et Plenipotentiaire de Sa Majesté de déclarer au nom de Sa Majesté Britannique qu'en attendant qu'on se puisse expliquer sur le projet susdit elle veut bien continuer la dernière convention regardant ce corps de troupes Prussiennes et Italie faite le 31^e de Mars 1709, tant à l'égard du payement de sa part des subsides que des autres points y contenus.

"Signé TOWNSHEND."

Same date. Dr Henry Newton to Lord Townshend. Dated Rome May 31st and Florence June 3rd.

". . . They are here much dissatisfied with the carriage of the Court of France, their Courier having returned from thence without any satisfactory answer for the restoring the Dutch marchant man which was lately taken by Mons^r L'aigle a French privateer under the guns of one of the G. Duke's [the Grand Duke of Tuscany] forts at Leghorn and afterwards carried by him to Toulon the ship being to the value of about 150,000 peices of eight"

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1710, June 4th. John Chetwynd to Horatio Walpole. From Turin.

"Upon S^r John Norris arrival at Vado I sent an express to Marshall Dawn to hasten the march of the two Imperiall regiments designed for Catalonia with the remainder of the recruits for the German and Italian troops in Spain"

"The Earle of Rochford's Regiment of Dragoons which are to embark at the same time, are on their march to the sea side and being to pass thro part of the Duko of Savoy's country, I solicited his R: H: for a march route with orders for the necessary forrage, carriages &c. which his R: H: was pleased not only to grant me but also [to] send orders to all the places through which they are to pass belonging to his State to furnish them with forrage, oats and carriages gratis" 1710, June 7th. Daniel Pulteney to Lord Townshend. From Copenhagen.

Enclosing a copy of a despatch to M^r Secretary Boyle and pointing out the difference between the writer's instructions and those of the Dutch envoy.

1710, June 11th. James Cockburn to Horatio Walpole. From Turin.

" . . . By an express which we received yesterday from Vado we have advice that they had begun to embark the troops designed for Spain, and that it was hoped all would be on board and the fleet ready to saill by the 14th Inst"

1710, June 14th. James Pelham to the same. Dated "At the Camp before Douay."

Begging M^r Walpole to secure Lord Townshend's influence in procuring the writer the vacant troop in Lieut. Gen^l Rosse's Regiment.

1710, June 15th. The same to the same. Dated: "before Douay."

Recapitulating what the writer wrote the day before in case the former letter should be lost.

1710, June 16th. James Taylor to the same. Dated at Whitehall.

"I am desired to put the enclosed letter under your cover for the Lord Lonsdale and am very sorry to tell you by this post that on Wednesday last the Earl of Sunderland delivered up his Seals and the Lord Dartmouth succeeds him which was a surprise upon every body. This had liked to have had such a blow upon credit that yesterday some of the Dons of the City and Bank were to wait on her Majesty. I do not yet find if we are to have a new Parliament or not; that doubt once cleared for the negative people's minds will be pretty well satisfyd. I must tell you that the discourses of the changes has so filled our ears that we talk no more of peace or the taking of Doway or any thing else relating to the warr. Your brother my very good Master is very well recovered from his late sudden illness call'd Collero Morbus which put all about him under dreadfull apprehensions for 4 hours. I hope effectual methods will be taken to prevent the like for the future. I thank God he is brave and well, and may he long continue so is my daily prayer. I am ever etc."

Same date. Sir William Hodges to the same. Dated in London. About two Spanish ships which had been taken by the Dutch.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Same date. James Craggs to the same. Dated at the Camp at Portella. The writer, who says it is his first opportunity of writing since he arrived in Spain, begs Mr Walpole, if he has not received some money for him, to be so kind as to forward enclosed bills to Cardounel the first time he writes to him.

1710, June 17th. A project for the passage of English letters through Denmark to Sweden. Undated but enclosed in Mr Pulteney's letter to Lord Townshend of this date. In French. 1½ pp.

1710, June 18th. John Chetwynd to Horatio Walpole. From Turin.

"By our last letters from Genoa we have advice that Sir John Norris sailed the 12th inst from Vado, with the two German regiments and other recruits . . .

"Last Sunday Mar[sh]all Dawn arrived here from Milan. All the German troops which are to compose our army here are arrived at their respective quarters, but the march of the Prussian troops has been countermanded upon some new difficulties the Imperiall Commissariat has raised, about the payment of what is due to these troops.

" I have said all I can think of to perswade his R. H. [the Duke of Savoy] to take the field and convince him of the unreasonableness in making his best friends suffer as he doth for his ill humour ag^t the Imp^l Court, but all I can say is not of weight enough to make him change" 1710, June 22nd, N.S. James Craggs to the same. Dated at the Camp at Portella.

The writer acknowledges the receipt of Mr Walpole's letter of May 6th and thanks him for recovering his desperate debts. "Our Master [the Duke of Marlborough] is very well. I hope if we send you no great news this Campaign we may at least assure you, you will not hear of any great misfortune befallen us."

The following postscript is dated "Barcelona the 26th June 1710."

"Dear Horace, Since I writ this letter it has been judged necessary for me to come here to concert the operations of the Fleet with Admiral Norris. I have met yours of the 23rd of May and returne you my hearty thanks for the measures you have taken about my money. I have nothing to add but that since I have learn't we are come to our old Camp at Balaguer I will tell you in private that we shall doe nothing this Campaign and that our fine hopes are entirely vanished, 'tis what I desire you to acquaint my Lord Townshend with and believe me entirely y^{rs}.

"J. C."

Same date. John Laws to the same. From Ghent.

" All letters from the Camp agree that Douay is agonizing Tis probable the return of the Dutch Deputies from Tournay will bring Mr Cadogan hither with them"

1710, June 26th. Lieutenant General Charles Rosse to Lord Townshend. Dated at the Camp near Douay. Explaining that the vacant troop that Mr Pelham had desired to obtain had been given by the Duke of Marlborough to the writer's nephew Mr Rosse.

1710, June 27th. Copy of Mr Pultney's letter to Mr Schlestadt, with reference to forwarding of English letters to Sweden. Enclosed in the writer's letter of the same date to Mr Walpole. In French. 2½ pp.

1710, June 28th. Mr Pultney's Reflections upon the Danish Declaration about allowing the passage of English letters to and from Stockholm. Enclosed in Mr Pultney's letter of the same date to Secretary Boyle. 2½ pp.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1710, June 30. Sir William Hodges to Horatio Walpole.

The writer is grateful to Lord Townshend for so heartily espousing the unfortunate case of the two Spanish ships and their cargoes and humbly prays the continuance of his favours and protection.

1710, July 1st. James Pelham to the same. Dated "before Douay."

The writer after having explained that he would not have troubled Lord Townshend in the matter of the troop without Mr Cardouell's direction, writes: "You know we are in possession of the town and fort, I don't hear what is to be done next, 'tis thought our regiment will be sent to garrison being very much shattered at the siege. I intend to stay in the field as a volunteer the remaining part of the campaign. . . . I beg the favour of you when you write to Spain to forward the inclosed to my Coz. Mountagu."

1710, July 5th. John Chetwynd to Lord Townshend. From Turin.

" . . . his R. H. [Prince Eugene] having been ill for these ten dayes, I have not had the honour to see him . . . so that the Dutch Envoy or I have not been able to renew our solicitations for his taking the field, on which head I have so often alledged all the reasons I could think of, to so little purpose that I quite despair of meeting with the least Success till the Court of Vienna shew more inclination to do him justice . . . his R. H.'s distemper which was thought a malignant feavour hath proved the meazles, which have been of so ill a sort, that he will not be able to stir out of his chamber these 8 or ten dayes yet . . . "

1710, July 8th. Copy of a letter in French from Messrs. Buys and Vander Dussen to Marshal D'Uxelles and the Abbé Polignac. Dated at the Hague, and minuted "Received in Lord Townshend's letter to Mr Boyle of the 8th July 1710 N.S." $\frac{3}{4}$ p.

1710, July 9th. Copy of a letter in French from Marshal D'Uxelles and the Abbé Polignac to Messieurs Buys and Vander Dussen, in reply to the last. Dated at Gertrudenberg, and minuted "Received in Lord Townshend's letter to Mr. Boyle of the 11th July 1710 N.S." $1\frac{1}{4}$ pp.

1710, July 12th. John Chetwynd to Horatio Walpole. From Turin.

" All our Royall family expect [except] his R. H. are well again; he is much better, but so weak that his phisicians do not think it adviseable for him to see company or meddle with any business, so our visits have been very short, without any conversation for above this fortnight.

"Mar[sh]all Dawn left this place yesterday to put himself at the head of our army and I propose to follow him in a day or two" 1710, July 18. Christian Cole to the same. From Venice.

"This letter will be given you by my Lady Richelieu, Dutches of Agnillon. I begg, and conjure you to give her all the assistance she may desire of you. I have a very great and just esteem for this lady, and doe assure you she does not deserve the anger of the nation. I begg you would recommend her affaires to my Lord Townshend, and I shall ever be, etc."

1710, July 20th. John Chetwynd to the same. From the "Camp at la maison de meane—in sight of Arches." Received August 7th.

Describing the operations of the allied forces. Marshall Dawn "declares that he will give them no quarter, however I do not believe we shall be so cruell, or that they will yield their post till our cannon obliges them, though it seems something strange that so small a body should stop our army."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1710, July 25. The same to the same. From Arches in Spain.
Received August 13th.

Describing the capture of Arches, etc.

" If we should not succeed I do not know which way we may steer our course, neither shall I dare to hope for any great advantage during the rest of our Campaign, seeing the enemies will be in a better condition every day than other to oppose us, now that they see our whole force in these valleys. A good peace would be agreeable news here, that we might bid adieu to the terrible mountains which we are forced to climb every day like so many goats"

1710, July 25th, N.S. Stephen Poyntz to Thomas Ward. From the Hague.

" I have no news to send you but that the peace is at a stand at present. The late change and the divisions in England having encouraged the French to talk very high, which has made the Allies resolve not to send their Deputies any more till they come to more reasonable terms. We have some hopes given us that the Parliament will not be dissolv'd which perhaps may humble them again."

1710, July 30th. Lord Stair to Lo^d Townshend. Dated at the "Camp at Vilers Brulin," and addre^{ss} to "My Lord Ambassador Townshend." 7 $\frac{1}{4}$ pp.

The writer details his views as to the affairs of Poland and the North and begs to be informed of what is doing at the Hague. He mentions his secretary Mr Mackenzie and General Count Fleming prime minister of the King of Poland, "the taking of Wybourg and the falling of Riga into the Czar's hands which in all probability has happen'd already, or must happen very soon, will diminish the apprehensions the K. of Poland has of the K. of Sweeden's return, but at the same time will be a reason to the allys to give the Princes concerned in the northern war against Sweeden no ground of offence, which may serve them for a pretext for entering into measures to our disadvantage, to recall their troops or to ask greater conditions. If the war should continue I believe it would be no hard matter to prevail with the Czar to lett the Allys have ten thousand foot for their bread and their forrage"

[P.S. Dated August 4th.] "My Lord, I give you a thousand thanks for your obtaining another forloff for Captain Kennedy.

"Everything in the Army goes as wee could wish, so that I think there is a morall certainty of procuring very soon a solid and a lasting peace, if we continue the way wee are in; which I hope is sufficient to prevent any changes which may discourage our friends and incourage our ennemys.

Your Lordship will see by the date that what is above was writt before the French made their last movement: which is certainly a disadvantage to us. My opinion is that the strength of the argument taken from the ill prospect of our affairs lyes for venturing whilst wee have so good an Army rather than against it. I wish we mayn't have occasion to repent our letting the French nestle where they are now intrenched.

"Since that time wee have likewise the certain account of Rega's being taken, that will make the Princes of the North more ticklish, and will make it more necessary to give them no offence especially the Czar with whom I think it absolutely necessary wee should have a Minister. I wonder the States doe not suit Monsieur de Crauenburgh. I am etc."

No date. A resumé of the Conferences at Gertrudenberg (being extracts from the British Ambassadors' letter to Mr. Secretary Boyle) from 12th March 1710 to 25th July 1710. 30 pp.

[1710, Augt..] A few concluding lines of a letter from General James Stanhope relating to the battle of Almenara. The postscript is as follows:—

"List of English Officers killed and wounded at Almanira the 27th July 1710 N.S.

"Killed Lord Rochford [and] Count Nassau, Brigadiers Lt Col. Trevor, Captⁿ La Porte, Cornet Carson, Cornet Webb.

"Wounded Lt Col. Bland, Lt Col. Montgomery (Aide de Camp to Gen^l Stanhope) Capt^s Ravel, Wills, Moor, Naison, Lt^a Neville, Paterson, Jobber, Nieron, Wood, Cornets Wildgoose, Du Casse, Quarter Master Smith."

1710, Augt. 3rd. John Chetwynd to Horatio Walpole. From Foglioso. "Received August 20th."

Describing the further operations of the Allies in Italy, etc It concludes:—

"Sir John Norris being gon with a small body of troops to make a descent upon the coast of Languedoc to favour and succour the Cevennois I hope we shall soon receive some good news from him and that this expedition will cause a considerable diversion in our favour."

Same date. James Cockburn to the same. From Foglioso.

Enclosing, by the Envoy's [Mr Chetwynd's] orders, an extract from a letter in French cautioning the latter against a certain Monsieur Dupuis, a Burgundian, who has long intrigued at the Hague in the interests of France.

1710, Augt. 10th. John Chetwynd to the same. From Turin.

"... Our friend Mr Stanhope hath had a considerable advantage over a body of the Enemies horse near to Lerida, of which I have as yet received no other particulars then that of our having got the better, with the loss of Count Nassau and Lord Rochford who were cut in pieces.

"I am to acknowledge the receipt of your letters of the 22 and 25th inst^y by which I find that your negotiations for peace are very near being interrupted, if not allready broke off."

[1710], Aug. 10th. Copie d'une lettre de Monsieur le Marq[ui]s de Torcy ce 10^{me} d'Aoust." Unaddressed.

"J'ai receu Monsieur les lettres que vous avez pris la peine de m'ecrire le 24 et le 31 Juillet. Lorsque les Conferences ont commenc  les affaires d'Angleterre se brouilloient d j , et celles du Nord n'etoient pas moins agit es qu'elles le sont aujourd'hui puis que les Danois avoient une arm e dans la province de Sch ne. Ces considerations n'ont pas emp ch  le Roy d'envoyer Messieur les Plenip[otentiaires]   Gertruyd[enber]g et de faire par eux des offres plus amples que sa Ma[jest ] ne les avoit jamais faites. Il ne faut pas donc dire que l'esperance des nouveaux  v nements que ces divisions peuvent produire ayant oblig  la France   s' loigner la paix. La reponse dont vous avez  t  le porteur et que Messieurs les Deput s ont confirm e dans la derni re Conference n'a fait voir que trop claiem[en]t   qui la rupture en devoit  tre attribu e. Vous sav s de quelle mani re j'ay toujours pens  sur la droiture et sur les bonnes intentions de Monsieur le Pensionnaire, mais en verit  je me trouve bien seul presentem[en]t dans mon opinion; et comme je n'en ay pas encore chang , je comprends plus que personne, combien il doit  tre sensible   la rupture de la Negotiation.

"On donne plusieurs autres causes au chagrin de M. le Duc de Marlborough et   son inquietude, mais il n'est gu re vraysemblable que les Anglois osent et qu'ils puissent se passer de luy tant que la guerre durera.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

"Quant a Mi Lord Townshend si l'on croit les avis de l'Angleterre il sera incessamment rappelé, et je croy que la perte du poste qu'il occupoit luy sera sensible principalement s'il retourne en Angleterre dans un temps ou le parti de l'horris[Tories] aura la superiorité. Monsieur le Comte de Sinz[endorf] n'aura pas été fâché de retourner à Vienne à l'exercice de sa charge, et l'Hollande à s'épuiser encore pour soutenir la querelle de l'Emp[ereur] et qu'il s'est conduit en Ministre habile, et que ce n'est pas peu que d'avoir obligé deux Nations éclairées à demander opiniâtement une condition qui rendit la paix impossible. Quoy qu'il ne soit plus question de negotiation, vous me ferez plaisir de continuer la correspondance avec moy et de croire que je suis très veritablem[en]t Monsieur entièrement à vous."

1710, Augt. 17th. James Craggs to Horatio Walpole. From Genoa. Enclosing an account of the battle of Almenara and a list of British cavalry officers killed and wounded in that engagement.

1st enclosure [3½ pp.]. An account of the battle dated "From the Camp at Almenara the 31th of July 1710." It concludes as follows:—"Our great loss and such a one as is regretted by the whole army is the want of Lord Rochfort and Count Nassau who both dyed upon the spot, the killed & wounded on our side are not above 400 men the half of which are English the account we have of the loss of the enemy is 300 men prisoners, and killed and wounded they have about 1500. Mr Stanhope [General James Stanhope who was in command of the British Cavalry] received a contusion by a dead ball and Gen^l Carpenter has a slight cutt. Tho' the night preventing us from reaping a greater advantage from this overthrow it is no small benefitt wee have gott that wee are undeceived in the opinion of their horse, which hitherto has kept us in great awe, but since 16 squadrons have been sufficient to beat 42, wee may reasonably hope to deal with them at any time The sixteen squadrons that did engage were six English viz^t 2 of Harvey's 2 of Nassaw's 2 Rochfort, 4 Dutch and 6 Palatines and the Generals with Mr Stanhope were Lieutenant General Carpenter, Major General Trancherberg of the Palatines, and Major General Pepper."

2nd enclosure. "A list of officers and men killed or wounded in the British Brigade of Horse July 17th O : S : 1710."

1710, Augt. 19th. The same to the same. From Turin.

" I cannot tell you the Mar[sh]all's reasons for marching thro' the plains of Piedmont I cannot help looking upon our Campaign as ended. I heartily wish I may be mistaken"

1710, Augt. 29th. Sir William Hodges "To Horasio Walpole Esq^r—Secretary to the Embassy of Her Majesty of Great Britain &c.—at the Hague."

"Sir—I have not very lately troubled you with any of my lines, nor should not have done it now, but to thank you again for the continuance of your favour and good offices, which the Spaniards there and all the concerned in the two unfortunate B[uenos] A[yres] ships are very sensible of. Also of my Lord Ambassador's endeavours for some good success in that unfortunate affaire. My honoured friend your brother was pleased some dayes since to promise me to mention me in his letter to you. One of the two Spaniards which remained here is gone over with Mr Secretary Boyle's pass, and will waite on you with the others already there. Pray favour me to give my humble duty to his Ex^{ty} and believe me to be etc."

NOTE.—From later papers it appears that the States General carried Resolutions on the 15th, and 21st, of November, 1710, directing the

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

College of the Admiralty of Amsterdam to suspend their proceedings for the condemnation of the two Spanish ships until further orders.

1710, Augt. 30th. Alexander Cunningham to the same. Dated at Berlin and addressed "A Monsieur Monsieur Horace Walpoole Secrétaire del Ambassade, Chez My Lord Tounsend à la Hay, Holland.

" . . . I return you thanks particuarlie for the letters you sent me by Mr. Chitney which I received. We intend to leave this place in two days and are to goe into Italie by the way of Tirol, if there come to your hands any letters for my Lord Lonsdale or me, please to direct them for me at Samuel Williams' house at Venice, for we shall not make a long stay at any place now till we come to Padua.

" Yesterday we had the news of my Lord Tr[eaure]r's breaking his staff, and that his place is put in Comission. Why my Lord L[onsdale] should be concerned for it I know not, I wish it may be for the publick good and to you much joy of your new Masters. . . . Yesterday the K. was taken ill at table, but was perfectlie well in half an hour. The Prince Royal is a keen Whig and calls the T[or]ys rogues etc., but perhaps a short time will make him change his thoughts, as I expect [it] will doe to most of the new violent Whigs, who they say are all going over with Jack Smith at their head, if so I hope you will not be among the last, unless you think constancie is a vertue which I fancie Mademoiselle Dorp herself will scarce allow, 'tis well the Duke of Marlborough is content to stay at the head of the armie, better half loaf than none at all, others will be of his mind, but they are not to be received by mother church as they say, soe had better goe out with a good grace, if the experiment be not dangerous. . . . "

1710, Augt. 31st. John Chetwynd to the same. Dated at Oulx.

" . . . the enemies have ordered some redouts to be made betwixt Foglioso and Larche to hinder our penetrating that way another time.

" We shall sing Te Deum here tomorrow for the redition of Douay."

1710, Sept. 1st. John Lawes to the same. From Brussels.

" Yesterday we received here the capitulation of Bethune, by which the garrison was to march out that day with the usual marks of honour, and to be conducted to Saint Omer. Monsieur Keppel brother to the Earl of Albemarle is made Governor of Bethune. . . .

" Yesterday we rejoiced for the late victory in Spain. Having been at Gand some days with Mr Cardonel, I did not trouble you last week. He is so well recovered that he thinks of setting out on Wednesday next for the army."

1710, Sept. 1st. Lord Stair to the same. Dated at the "Camp at Vilers Brulin." 4 pp. on the balance of power in the North.

The same to the same. Dated, "Fryday 10 a clock."

" Sir,

Here are Sir Richard Temple and I so intent on the wind that wee dare not allow ourselves the pleasure of waiting on my Lord Townshend and your honour, wee shall much repent it if the wind continues obstinate. You'll doe us a great deall of pleasure if you'll lett us know how the world goes I am his Excellency's most faithful servant, and yours with all my heart.

" STAIR."

[P.S.] "Don't forget the article of England, for our letters I'm afraid are not to be come at here."

The seal on this letter is curious. It represents a female figure, standing in the foreground, towards whom a Cupid is rowing in a small boat. The motto on the seal is "Seguardo non arivo."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1710, Sept. 5th. James Taylor to the same. From Whitehall.

" take Leave to congratulate you on our great success in Spain and are impatient for the particulars but wee have no reason to doubt the truth of it since France owns it Enclosed you have the Queries N^o 2 and the Earl of Clarendon's Opinion about the dissolution of the Parliament Anno 1640 very apropos to this time This day's Tatler being a good one I send you that also"

1710, Sept. 8th. John Laws to the same. From Brussels.

" I heartily congratulate you on this glorious success [near Sarragossa on August 20th].

1710, Sept. 9th. Thomas Willymott to the same. Dated at Doctor's Commons, and addressed "To the Honorable Horatio Walpole att his Excellency's the Lord Townsend's att the Hague Holland.—These."

The writer asks M^r Walpole to interest himself in the case that Mr. Robert Breame, master of the ship Mary and Elizabeth, has pending at the Court of Holland.

1710, Sept. 10th. Monsieur Charion to Lord Townshend. In French. From Berne.

Congratulations on the two victories in Spain (Almenara and Saragossa). It concludes:—"so long as Joshua shall be at war with Amalek I shall have my hands stretched out towards the Heavens."

1710, Sept. 23rd. J. Macky to Horatio Walpole. From Ostend. Recommending an officer for promotion but not naming him.

1710, Oct. 7th. Henry Hale to the same. From Amsterdam.

" Tomorrow departs from hence our great Gouvern^r Pitt and [he] will be sure to wait on my Lord Townshend" 1710, Oct. 8th. General Palmes to the same. Dated at Vienna and unaddressed.

"Sr—I am infinitely obliged to you for your constant correspondence can send you nothing in return from here, most of our Ministers being in the country, and little more to be effected in the Duke of Savoy's affaires til we have his answer to the last dispatches we sent from here.

The Count de K—— who is to assist as plenipotentiary att Milan in case his R. H. consents to a conference upon the resolutions of this Court is ordered to come hither to receive the instructions in order to it, and if his R. H. accepts of that I shall according to the orders I have formerly received goe thither, I have not as yet signify'd her Majestic's desires to the Court relating to the Hungarians, expecting the return of the Ministers from their country houses, but I am humbly of opinion it will be of little purpose, however I shall give you an account of it"

1710, Oct. 13th. A Camp Circular. Unsigned. Dated at the "Camp before Aire the 13th Octob^r 1710."

Describing the siege operations from October 10th.

1710, Oct. 16th. D^r Francis Hare to Horatio Walpole. From the Camp at S^t Andre.

"Dear Horace,

I had a letter from M^r Naylor by the last mail, desiring me to send him a Certificate, if Jemmy Pelham was alive the ninth of September O.S. his name being concerned in some of M^r Naylor's writings. Jemmy being from the army I can't do what he desires, but believe you may; the Captain having been, if I am not mistaken, with you at the Hague

MARQUESS OF TOWNSHEND
MSB.
—

since that time I hear by the last letters, you are eased of the trouble of serving two masters”

1710, Oct. 20th. John Drummond to the same. From Amsterdam.

. . . Mr Stawell may Lord Stawell's brother entreats his Excellency's pass to go for England, he has not his health very well and goes direct to Rotterdam, if you please to direct Mr Forbes to send his Excellency's pass for him and his servant to Mr Black's at Rotterdam, I hope to be with you on Saturday evening, and shall pay Mr Forbes the ducs, I thinke his name is Edward Stawell” 1710, Oct. 24. Count Stadion to Lord Townshend. In French. From Mayence.

The Elector fears lest the troubles in the United Kingdom and the change of Parliament may not import some change into affairs, and the writer hopes that, if the allies continue to be blessed with success in Spain, France will think more seriously, and with better intentions, of Peace.

1710, Oct. 27th. Henry St John, Secretary of State, to Horatio Walpole. From Whitehall.

“Sir,

I hope you will attribute it to the hurry I have lately been in to take care of my elections, and I have not answered sooner your congratulations upon her Ma^{ty} having honoured me with this Employment. I shall be very glad to make use of it upon all occasions.

After what I write to my Lord Townshend I can have no further directions to send to you ; but I don't question your diligence in sending all such advices as may be for her Ma^{ty} service, which will be always acceptable to “Sr your most humble servant

“H. St JOHN.”

1710, Nov. 3rd. Copy of a letter, in French, dated at the Camp before Aire, from the Duke of Marlborough to the Count of Colmenero. The Duke enquires if the latter had written to him on the 22^d of October as he had received a letter bearing the Count's signature but doubted its authenticity.

1710, Nov. 24th. James Taylor to Horatio Walpole. Dated at the Horse Guards.

“ your brother came to towne last night and is this day much pesterd with company and tomorrow our new sennators meet which prevents his writing to you by this post. Enclosed you have two Medlys which are esteemed very good and very apropos. . . .”

1710, Nov. 27th. Alexander Cunningham to the same. From Padua.

“Worthy Sir,

I had the favour of yours of September the 9th, just as I was entering the Lazaretto the 4th of November we stayed there 14 days during which time I could make no return to you, being then buried in Lazarus's house, but now being risen as it wer from the dead I can assure you that my dutie to you is one of the first things that I call to mind and [I] shall be proud of all opportunitys of entertaining frindship with a person of your merit. I thank you for the care you have had of my letters, and desire you would be soe kind as to put forward the enclosed to Mr Wortley Montague who I believe would see you in his return to England. The measures taken latelie in England surprise all that doe not know us, they think 'tis odd a bruer should set up against a General, but you know the merit of brewers better, soe it seems the new brooms sweep clean.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

I would not have thought that they would have gone soe far, but they know best what they are doing, I wish they take care of the poor foolish nation and not put all in danger. The Church is in none unless it be of one that's much prouder than herself. They ask me here what's Dr Sacsherval's religion, for my part I know not, but pray ask and let me know, for they tell me here he is of theirs, only the Germans are sorrie that he should disturb the alliance, others think he has pretensions on the Crown and that he may set up for himself, I'm amased to see what notions people has of us. As for what you say of yourself I'm sorrey to hear it, that you must perish with those you are imbarcked with, constancy makes a man cheap as you well observed in Lovers. As for those that are gone out instead of going over I fancie some of them have mistaken their way, however betwixt you and me they have this comfort, they goe not out soe poor as they came in. Of all things I wonder most of M^r B[oyl]'s being out for he was obnoxious to none, I hope the Whigs will think of travelling, if they'l come thus far I shall be glad to see them, they'l find friends among the fair here, but I leave politicks knowing I'm never to be at the helm.

My Lord Lonsdale gives his humble service to his Excellencie and your self, he has bought a Horace for love of you, and studys now [to make up] for his idleness at the Hague, he has laid all politicks aside since his friends have done the same, now he reads incessantlie. We shall be here till Christmas, then will go to Venice to refresh our selves with Operas and other interluds. Tell M^r Peryra that in the Lazaretto I have converted two Jews to Whigrie but they'l be old Whigs, they not being for Places or preferment.

My dear M^r Walpool I shall be glad of your Commands alsoe, your news, save your self if you can, your sins are only venial yet, and the Whig's can't blame you for occasional conformitie. Operas bals and the like is our business, my Lord [Lonsdale] is a mightie hopefull youth, soe that 'tis a pleasure to me to be abroad at this time. Give my most humble services to his Ex^{ty} and I am etc."

"[P.S.] Direct yours to me under a cover to Mess^{rs} Samel Williams and Smith Marchants at Venice."

1710, Nov. 29th. Monsieur Charion to Lord Townshend. In French from Berne on the prospects of the War and the chances of Peace.

1710, Dec. 1st. A letter from Count de Valdenz, Governor of the Castle of Milan, to Lord Townshend. In Italian. 3 pp.

About certain Spanish fiefs of the Emperor.

1710, Dec. 7th, N.S. John Molesworth to Horatio Walpole. From Wesel.

" . . . All my letters go through Mons^r Clignet's hands : I mean him who is Postmaster at Leyden. . . .

"I shall stay some days at Dusseldorpf, and from thence proceed to Francfurt, where I should be mighty glad that the frosts would overtake me, for the roads we have allready past are but a bad sample of what we are to expect especially in the Westerwalt, which am affraid is almost impassable.

"[P.S.] I have made bold to trouble you with a letter to M^r Stanhope, not knowing any safer way of conveying it to him."

1710, Dec. 10th. James Cockburn to the same. From Turin.

"During M^r Chetwynd's absence I will take the liberty to trouble you when we have any news here worth your attention

. . . . They continue to mention the enemies fitting out 18 or 20 men of war at Toulon.

"Last week a British Man of War arrived at Genoa, with advice that Sir John Norris with the fleet, was gone out from Port Mahon to cruise for two months."

1710, Dec. 10th. Admiral Sir John Norris to Lord Townshend. Endorsed "Duplicate To the R^t Hon^{ble} Lord Townshend." Dated on board the Ranelagh, at Port Mahon. The writer reports the movements of his ships and of the Turkish convoy.

1710, Dec. 24th. From Turin. James Cockburn to Horatio Walpole. ". . . . By letters of the 20th from Genoa we have an acc^t that Gen^l Wade was arrived there from Spain being sent into England by Mr Stanhope. Our Army is still near Toledo, but it is feared we shall be obliged in a little time to return to the frontiers of Arragon, by reason that the Portuguese would not join us & that the Spaniards seem against us in Castile."

"The ship which the Enemies have fitted out from Toulon to the number of 37 are gone towards the Straits near Cartagena; Sir John Norris being likewise that way I hope he will have the good fortune to meet with some of them" 1710, Dec. 25th, O.S. Geoffrey Walpole to the same. From Port Mahon.

"Dr Brother,

I have been favoured with yours & am glad to hear of your continuing still at the Hague, our success here in cruising has been very bad all this winter, the enemy having fitted out such a number of ships in these parts as has obliged us to keep in a body; since the late misfortune of Gen: Stanhope the King has pressed our going up to Italy for the troops that are there ready to embark for Spain, for which Service we now a fitting out with all expedition; I have spoken to Sir J^{no} Norris in behalfe of Mr Goddard but do not find that there is any likelihood of succeeding, the usuall answer is that he has obligations to provide for several others who came abroad with him, which he shall not be able to do, before the arrivall of Sir J^{no} Jennings who is dayly expected here to relieve him, & to whome I believe it will not be improper for my L^d [Townshend] to recommend Mr Goddard to, he having served some time under his command; we expect to be in Italy by the middle of next month where I beg you let me hear from you, 'tis reported here that my brother Walpole is out of his employment as treasurer of the Navy, but we do not hear who has succeeded him, I wish it may prove otherwise; the arrivall of Sir J^{no} Jennings in these parts I'm in hopes will give me a greater prospect of Success by cruising than hitherto I've had, I am

Dear Brother

most affectionately yours

G. WALPOLE."

[P.S.] "I'm afraid we have had no success in the lottery by your silence.

1710, —. Copy of a Memorial from the States General to Prince Eugene. In French. 15½ pp.

1710-1711. Copies of forty-six "Letters from L^d Townshend to Mr Secretary St John." From Nov^r 4th 1710 to March 27th 1711. In a cardboard cover.

1710-11. Twenty-one letters, in French, from Isaac D'Alais, Secretary at Hanover, to Lord Townshend and Horatio Walpole. From March 28th 1710 to March 27th 1711.

In a postscript to the latest of these letters the writer says that Lord Raby is expected to arrive in Hanover the same evening.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1710 to 1719. Miscellaneous letters and papers from Feb^y 8th 1710 to Aug^t 4th 1719. In a cardboard cover.

1711, Jan. 9th. A Discourse on the affairs of Portugal. Unsigned. 17½ pp.

1711, Jan. 16th. An unsigned police advertisement. Dated at Rotterdam. It runs as follows:—

“AVERTISSEMENT.—Le Sieur Devisseau est party aujourdhuy par le Bateau D'Anvers, il a bien dit qu'il devoit revenir icy dans 7 à huit jours, mais comme c'est un fin Je ne say sy on doit y ajouter foy, il doit loger à Anvers au Grand Laboureur. C'est un homme de moyenne taille, agé de 60 à 64 ans, le Cou court, une mechante perruque blonde, sy on est dans le Dessin de l'arrester, on aura tout le temps necessaire parce que le Batteau est beaucoup charge & que le Vent luy est contraire.”

1710, Jan. 21st. James Cockburn to Horatio Walpole. From Turin.

“... things are not so bad as the Enemies gave out; tho' the misfortune of the English troops being made prisoners is great enough
.....”

“We have no news of St John Norris, but expect him every day at Vado.”

1711, Jan. 30th. Abraham Stanyan to Lord Townshend. From Berne.

Recommending the bearer, Mons^r Le Camus a French Officer, to his Lordship's protection.

1711, Feb. 4th. Mons^r de St Saphorin to the same. From Berne. In French.

Explaining the writer's views on a projected alliance with the Protestant Cantons of Switzerland.

[No date.] “Projet d'une Alliance deffensive entre Sa Ma^{te} Brit[annique] et L[eurs] H[autes] P[ui]ssances d'un côté et la Suisse Protestante de l'autre.” Unsigned. Perhaps enclosed in the last. 17½ pp.

1711, Feb. 9th. James Taylor to Horatio Walpole. From the Horse Guards.

“Enclosed you have the Medley of Munday last and the Examiner of yesterday which is more scurrilous than any I have yet seen except N^o 4 in which he calls his Grace [the Duke of Marlborough] a Cataline at the head of a Mercenary Army. I am astonish'd at the Liberty the Author takes, and more at those who protect him. There was a very great shew on Tuesday last at Court everybody vying who should be finest 'tis said my Lord Duke will be going hence in a few days. God send him good Success. As for Mony wee are yet in the dark and the Spring advanceing very forward gives us but a very melancholly prospect of a good Champaigne. I hear there are several parties in the house & one in particular call'd the October Clubb consisting of 64. The Malt Act is pass'd & I am told not £10,000 lent upon it, wee live in hopes that Credit will be better, your Brother [Robert] is very well & thank God is yet Treasurer of the Navy.”

[P.S.] “His Grace came to Towne from Woodstock a Wednesday Night last.”

1711, Feb. 10th. Lord Peterborough to Lord Townshend. From Frankfort.

“After a most wretched journey I am come well to Frankfort, the Ice was too strong to force, & too weak to bear, so that I stuck one whole night in the Road.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

"I find the confirmation of raising the Siege of Gironne upon the Road from all parts which makes me conclude 'tis true, the Warr in Catalonia had been impracticable if that place had been lost.

"As soon as I come to Vienna I will give your Lordship an account of what Success my endeavours may have in that terrible Court & I return you my most humble thanks for all your favours att the Hague."

Same date. Daniel Pulteney to Horatio Walpole. From Copenhagen. About affairs at the Danish Court. 5 pp.

1711, Feb. 13th. Adam Cardonnel to the same. From Westminster.

"... [I] am now in a hurry preparing to hasten over to you, our Baggage is gone on board Cap^t Sanderson this afternoon, and he is to saile to morrow for Harwich whether we shall be hastening in three or four Days in order to embark.

"Lord Orrery is to be with my Lord Duke [of Marlborough] this evening and I hope we shall leave matters here pretty easy. . . ."

Same date. Duke of Queensberry to the same.

Enclosing a letter to be forwarded to Mr Jefferyes who has left no directions in his grace's office how his letters may be addressed to him while he is on his way to Bender.

1711, Feb. 19th. Lord Peterborough to Lord Townshend. From Lintz.

"After a most uneasy journey I am come as far as Lintz & have the mortification to be stop'd within a day & a half of Vienna. The Snow is melted & the Rivers impassable by Land, & the Ice prevents the passage by the Danube.

"... I fear our affairs in Spain are in an ill Condition, in a few days I shall give you the best account I can of affairs in these parts . . ."

Same date. John Laws to Horatio Walpole. From Brussels.

"Our freshest letters from Paris are of the 13th We are still without any accompt of what has passed at Girona since the Capitulation of the Town on the 25th of January There is nothing material from the Enemies Frontier on this side except that the great want of money still continues among their Troops.

"The 17th being Her Majesty's Birthday it was celebrated here by firing the Cannon, with all other usual Rejoicings, and the greatest marks of Zeal and Affection were shown on this Occasion by the Government and People, in acknowledgement of the good effects they receive from Her Majesty's gracious Protection" 1711, Feb. 20th. James Taylor to the same. From the Horse Guards.

"... The Lottery Act will pass in a very few days, and consequently very soon wee shall know if the People like the proposition, I wish they may with all my heart for the Money wee want very much. My Lord Duke [of Marlborough] left the Towne a Sunday Morning last for Holland. I wish him a good Voyage & good Success this Summer. Wee are here under some apprehensions that Barcelona will be besieged."

1711, Feb. 24th, N.S. James Jefferyes to Lord Townshend. From Hanover.

Enclosing a despatch under a flying seal for his Lordship's perusal.

1711, Feb. 27th. James Taylor to Horatio Walpole. From the Horse Guards.

"I forgott to tell you in my last that the house of Lords had passd the Qualification Bill which I hear by a Computation will throw out above

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

two hundred Members (at the next Election for a new Parliament) of the present house. The Duke of Argyll will be setting out for Spain in about 8 or ten days."

Same date. Lord Townshend's Letters of Recall. Dated at St. James's. Signed and sealed by Queen Anne, and countersigned by Henry St. John.

1711, Feb. 28th. Lord Peterborough to Horatio Walpole. Dated at Vienna and addressed to "Monsieur Walpool" and "Mr Wallpool."

The writer is hoping to send accounts from Vienna that may not be disagreeable. The news from Spain is very mortifying.

Same date. Lord Raby to the same. From Berlin.

"... I know before yours [came to hand] that my Reg^t was taken, seeing my agent writ me very lately word that he had received a letter from my major Coll. Benson at Burgos in Spain, but by yours I am informed that King Charles has raised up a Reg^t of Dragons which is call'd the Royall which I thought was attributed to mine & am obliged to you for your information. This Court is in great hopes now of an accomodation with the Prince of Frieze & and if the conclusion is intirely made perhaps you may see our Court with you in the spring.

"I do assure you I am very glad the Duke of Marlborough is like to command again, I shall win 10 pistoles by it which I laid with the Prince Royall in November last I have very great hopes the War in Hungary is ended by Prince Ragotzys making his peace with the Emperor."

[P.S.] "The affair of the Elector of Hanover's taking the Bishoprick of Hildesheim continues to make a great noys here but the quarels o these German Princes are allways ended by a paper war at Ratisbone."

1711, March 2nd. James Taylor to the same. From the Horse Guards.

"I am sorry to hear that your Revocation was sent a Tuesday Night last expecting now to have the Pleasure of seeing you in England I am etc."

1711, March 6th. Robert Mann to the same. From London.

"... I have taken the liberty to order M^r Davis of Rotterdam to send you a small parcell of Silk for haucercheifs which I desire your Care of when you come for England and beg you'l buy me a peace of lace not two fine for Shirts and not quite so broad as your uncle's . . ."

1711, March 7th. General Francis Palmes to the same. From Vienna.

Explaining a projected interim settlement of the dispute between the Emperor and the Duke of Savoy as to the right of the latter to certain fiefs in Montferrat, and mentioning that the Elector of Mayence, uncle of the Vice Chancellor of the Empire, has agreed to furnish four battallions which the States General are to send into Spain.

1711, March 10th. John Wich to Horatio Walpole. From Ham-burgh.

"... The King of Sweden's Declaration, I had two or three days before, and find the Vandall's wandering blood is in him and that the Goth will sooner leave his Cittyes, and Dominions, then the pleasure of rambling at randome. I am affraid, wee shall have the Devill to do with him, for in all his proceedings Revenge is his most Christian attribute, and he is made of such Mold that he must have a magicall wheele that puts him into any shape, but what hee'l bare himself. You must be speedy in what you do one way or other, for you have now to do with a Man, I mean Generall Governour Welling, Who is the most retir'd, cunning Polititian, at least Intriguer, on earth, and one who is no less then a Swedish Caper in the very Midelle of a French Sloop. Putt him into a Limbeck, and when the Sued is Evaporated the Spiritt will be un cordial pour le Roy de France . . ."

MARQUES
TOWNSEND
MSS.

1711, March 11th. Josiah Burchett, Secretary to the Admiralty Board, to Lord Townshend. From the Admiralty Office.

"I send your Lordship herewith an Order from the Lords Comm^{rs} of the Admiralty directing one of the Captains of the Yachts now in Holland to bring your Excellency to England. There are now at Rotterdam severall of her Maj^{ty} Ships under the Command of Captain Scott of the Romney, who is ordered to convoy your Lordship to England if you can be timely ready, otherwise the Deptford a Ship of 50 Gunns is ordered from the Downes to Holland to attend on your Excellency."

Same date. Abraham Stanyan to Horatio Walpole. From Berne.

Referring to a Col. Bugnot's proposal to "debauch 7 or 8000 men from the Enemy's Army, it would be methinks a piece of Service that deserves Encouragement."

1711, March 13th. John Wich to the same. From Hamburg.

A hurried line requesting Mr Walpole to give the enclosed to Mr Cardonnell. "I wish you a bumper, and a good night."

Same date. A News-letter from Paris. In French.

The king last Tuesday reviewed his two regiments of French and Swiss Guards, which cannot set out so soon as was intended on account of the rains having rendered the roads impassable.

In connection with this review they tell rather a curious story, which is mortifying for the Duke de Guiche. As colonel of the King's Guards he went to Versailles to learn on what day it pleased the King to hold the review, and he enquired where it should be held, seeing that it could not well be held as usual on the Plain of Grenelle, near the Invalides, which was still under water from the inundation of the Seine. To this enquiry the King replied that it would be no great harm if they were all drowned Same date. George Tilson to Horatio Walpole. From Whitehall.

"D[ear] S^r—I am now much tired at near three in the morning and cannot do any more than acknowledge yours I did not deliver your first letter wth any ceremony to Mr Sec^y [S^t John] since your last ended with that request, however I put it into his hands that he might see how desirous you were of his Protection. We have not a farthing from Ireland yet. When it comes I shall be mindfull of your just Pretensions. I hope our Lottery will make a great Sound abroad. It has surpass'd every body's imagination. I have lost a Guinea upon it, besides being excluded, but the Parl^t wants more, and may get it by this method which seems so agreeable.—I am D^r S^r—Y^{rs} &c. G. T."

1711, March 14th. Lord Raby to the same. From Berlin. Endorsed "Lord Raby's Circular of March 14, 1711."

It begins :—Having receiv'd my letters of revocation Sunday last, I would have taken my Audience of leave immediately, but the King having a mind I shou'd have a publick one, desired me to defer it till Tuesday next, & told me at the same time he would dine with me the day before."

Same date. Daniel Pulteney to the same. From Copenhagen.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSH.

About the Swedish Declaration against the neutrality &c. [5½ pp.] and enclosing an extract from a letter to the Duke of Queensberry on the same subject [2½ pp.].

1711, March 15th. Lord Raby to the same. From Berlin.

"... the Declaration of the Swedes was general as you will see by what I sent formerly to his Excellence my Lord Townshend, & it can't but extremely embarase all the Powers concerned in the Guaranty. . . . I hope soon to have the honour of waiting on him myself at the Hague tho' I dread the roads I hope to be setting out from hence before the end of next week."

1711, March 16th. George Tilson to the same. From Whitehall.

"Dr Sr—Since last Post I have had the favour of yours of the 20th

"I put my Bro^r [Christopher] in mind to solicit for money for L^d Townshend upon Mr Secrys letter, but I fear the Treas[ur]y bears dunning very well, if I could forward it more [expeditiously] I would do my utmost. I sent your good News to Sr W. Hodges who by his Son has let me know, how much satisfied they are to have come off so well. They ought surely to own your hearty Pains in this matter with great thankfulness.—[The Marquis de] Guiscard we believe will dye, it is not his wounds that prove mortal, they are all well, but the Messengers & others when they got him down bruised him horribly; they were fain to make an Incision yesterday, & above a quart of Sanies, or bruised blood came out. If he dyes he will save us the trouble of straining hard with the Laws to hang him; 'tis wretched to see how difficult it is to come at the life of a Vilain by Law. I am told the Lords have passed the Wine Bill with an Amendment which the Commons have agreed to, so people hope to have good wine here, tho' not much cheaper; & as we must have it, our Merch^{ts} may do it as well as others. The over-filling the Lottery causes a great Confusion in the City. I think they have agreed to compute, & deduct proportionally from every one to reduce it to the sum they want, & those who won't take their money back in proportion, may take the Law of the Bank if they please. I hear one Blunt who put in above 100 m. li. [£100,000] is very resty & untractable. I waited on Mr. Boyle this morning before he went out of Town, & he bid me desire that you would add to the Com[issio]n you have already from him half a hoghead of the best Hermitage wine you can get. I thank you for your readiness as to my Shirts and Lace. We find by this Post that Lord Peterborow has executed his Com[issio]n very vigorously. I hope we shall see good effects of it. I think it is our Sheet Anchor. Were the Hungarian trouble finished we might be more easy as to the pernicious projects of the Swedes. Mo^r Steinghens seems to think his Master too generous; 'tis seldome that German Princes' generosity hurts them.—I am ever—Dr Sr, Y^{rs} G. T."

1711, March 17th. George Mackenzie to the same. From Dresden.

"... what you wrote me in Cyphers by the last of the 10th Instant was very acceptable to me . . . such are my orders to make as little use of numbers as possible. 'tis to no purpose to me to alledge prudence will have it otherwise, because I must hold that obedience is better than Sacrifice."

Same date. Daniel Pulteney to the same. From Copenhagen.

About the Swedish declaration against the neutrality, etc. 5½ pp.

Same date. Copy of an unsigned letter in French. Dated at Geneva and unaddressed. Enclosed in Mr. Stanyan's letter to Horatio Walpole of March 28th.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
—

"L'on a fait courir un bruit sourd à Paris, que Milor Duc de Marlborough étoit mort subitement en Angleterre d'un Mal qui n'avoit dure que 18 heures, l'on ma assuré que M^r d'Yberville avoit écrit ici cette Nouvelle

"On se prévient en France que S. M. Britannique pourra être bien tôt détrônée, et que l'Angleterre ayant un Roy entièrement devoûé au sien, elle se trouvera bientôt triomphante, et au dessus de tous ses ennemis, auxquels elle se trouvera pour lors en état de pouvoir faire absolument la Loy. Il est certain qu'en général en France l'on donne fort à present dans ces sortes d'idées. C'est ce que j'ay peu reconnoître.

"Les Dommages qu'on a receus par l'enflure extraordinaire de la Seine sont considerables, tout fois l'incommode et la crainte en a été beaucoup plus grande que le Mal.

"Le Rhône a été aussi débordé, et en general plusieurs Provinces du Royaume ont souffert par ces Debordem^{ts} extraordinaires.

"Pour peu qu'on reflexisse la dessus, on jugera bien que les pertes considerables arrivées ainsi à une partie des Peuples de France, ne peut en ce tems ci que causer une fort grande breche aux recettes du Roy, et faire qu'il trouvera infiniment plus de difficultés à recouvrer les fonds qui lui seroient necessaires pour le Soutien de cette guerre."

1711, March —. A Memorandum of letters written by Lord Townshend and M^r Walpole on March 10th, March 13 & March 17th, 1711, N.S., and part of a rough draft of a letter in the handwriting of M^r Walpole.

1711, March 18th. James Jefferyes to Horatio Walpole. From Vienna.

" I am sorry your stay at the Hague is like to be of so short continuance The French, Poles and Swedes opposed with all their power the mission of the Turkish envoy to this court, but he is expected in a few days. The Turks reckon they shall have 80,000 fighting men, besides those designed for the fleet. There is little appearance of their doing any great mischief, especially if they do not succeed in their first fury.

"The horse tail's not yet exposed among them."

[P.S.] "Your commands will come safe to my hands if you address them to M^r Fury, Agent for the Turkish Merch^{ts} at this Place."

1711, March 20th. George Tilson to the same. From Whitehall.

"Dear Sir—Now you have put off your Ministerial Airs, perhaps even the shortest of my letters may be important to you, but almost two in the morning will not suffer me to be long. You needed no Apology to M^r Sec^{ry} [Boyle] for my Lord Townshend's Mem[oria]ll, which came at the same time with the letters. Mr Boyle is out of Town, so I could only forward your letter to him by this Post, but I told his servant, who is here, that he should look out sharp, as soon as the Rotterdam Fleet arrives. I wish you a good voyage expecting to see you now with the first easterly wind.

"I am ever D^r S^r—Y^{rs} &c. G.T."

Same date. John Wich to the same. From Hamburg.

" Whensoever, or Wheresoever I can serve dear M^r Walpole, I'll do it with a Freindship becoming a Man of Honour, and hope I may now and then have the same satisfaction by the [Packett] Boat, I have had by the Post. Pray lett my Lord Ambassador carrye with him from the Hague a good impression of me."

Same date. George Mackenzie to the same. From Dresden.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MS3.

Alludes to misunderstandings and explanations and expresses great regard for Mr Walpole. Sends humblest services to Colonel Cathcart and to Mr Envoy Chetwynd "when he shal arryve on this Side."

Same date. Alexander Cunningham to the same. From Venice. Addressed "A Monsieur, Mons^r Ho^{ro}e Walpoole Secretaire de Sa Maj^{te} Britannique chez My L^d Tounsend à la Hay, Holland."

"Dear S^r—I did not intend to trouble you this post, but being to goe from hence to Rome the morrow and having had yours this morning I can't leave this place without expressing the horror I conceive at my L^d Tou[nshen]d's leaving the Hague, I see it likewise in print, and all are amazed with the news, what's the meaning of it God knows, L^d Lon[s]d[a]le is heartilie concerned and hopes we shall all meet, and will now pass the time in Italie that he intended to have stayed at the Hague next winter. The acc^{ts} we have from Engl^d are odd, soe I'm more virtuoso than ever, and for my own happiness will shut my eyes henceforth from all news and fortifie my incredulitie and not think the Isl[an]d is to be ruined before 'tis ruined. The French here tell me the secrets of our cabinet, I looked on their acc^{ts} as Romance or Com-medie, but I find them some thing else, and can assure you they laugh at all your preparations against Spain, nay they rejoyce at 'em; Italie is much influenced by Vienna et present, and if the Great Duke should chance to dye now, the fate of his Cuntrey is in the hands of the Emp^r. However the French faction, tho' quiet at present, is numerous and busie under hand, they heave [have] Abbatours among our travellers, and I expect to see more of that where I'm going, but I shall shut my eyes, as others did on me. The Doge of the Nicolotti is dead and the watermen are cabaling as much against the time of electing a new Doge as our parteyes doe for a Speaker or a Secretary of State. Mr Newton is gone from Rome having got the Pope's Medals and other marks of Esteem from the Virtuosi, the book he has printed makes him famous with the learned, I have not yet seen it, but belive it must be weel done, and heave that pleasure yet to come. We hear nothing from Mr Molesworth since he left this place, but I know he's safe arrived at Florence. If My L^d Amb^r have any Com^{ds} for me he knows how much I'm his serv^t and shall receive 'em with particular pleasure, I shall write to him verie soon. My L^d Lonsdale gives his heartie service to his Exc^{ty}, and all the adversitys of his friends don't in the leest alter him; he travells with reputation wherever he goes and I must say he's one of the hope-fullest young Gen^l I have ever known, he has a particular kindness for you and gives his service to you and 'tis with the greatest respect that I am etc."

1711, March 21st. Daniel Pulteney to the same. From Copenhagen. Besides the six Norway ships taken by the Swedes eleven more have been taken, some of them by French Privateers sailing under Swedish Com-missions. Mr Jackson Her Majesty's Resident at Stockholm writes that "no more Zimtoms of the Plague had appeared" there since the early part of February.

Same date. Lord Raby to Lord Townshend. From Berlin.
". Our good fortune is, the conjunctures are such in these parts that the King's best Game is certainly continuing firm with the allies, & all the offers of France are not to be relyd on, which they are sencible of here, tho' the Diavel can't hinder them from nibbling at the bait."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1711, March 23rd. Sir William Hodges to the Same. Dated in London and addressed "To his Ex^{ty} the Lord Townshend. Her Maj^{ty} of Great Britain's Ambassador & Plenipotentiary at the Hague—Present."

The writer thanks his Excellency for having procured, through his interest with the States General, the restoration of two Buenos Ayres ships and their cargoes.

Same date. The same "To Horatio Walpole Esq^r att his Ex^{ties} the Lord Townshend her Maj^{ty} of Great Britain's Ambass^{or} & Plenipotentiary—At the Hague."

On the same matter as the last which was enclosed in this. It goes on:—

. the Spanyards have a great many excellent Proverbs and one is, Medio pan e mejor que innguno. [Half a loaf is better than no bread] I have presumed to write his Ex^{ty} a few lines of thanks for the hon^r he hath been pleased to do me and the [persons] concerned, which letter goes inclosed, so pray favor me to deliver it, and [this] is all I can say till I shall have the hon^r to waite on his Ex^{ty} & to see you in England, which I hope shortly to do, interim I tender you all due respects and am etc. WM. HODGES."

1711, March 24th. Lord Raby to Horatio Walpole. From Berlin.

The writer is setting out for the Hague the next day.

1711, March 25th. Admiral Sir John Norris to Lord Townshend. Dated on board the Ranelagh in Vaia Bay. Reports an engagement between three of the writer's ships and four French ships. The names of the English ships are the Severn, the Lyme, and the Lyon. Captain Pudner commands the Severn. Captain Strickland commands the Nassau. Captain Walpole has lost his right arm by a cannon ball.

1711, March 26th. John Wich to Horatio Walpole. From Ham-
burgh.

Regrets at M^r Walpole's departure for England and compliments.

1711, March 27th. William Gibson to the same. From Rotterdam. Addressed "To Horatio Walpole Esq^r Secretary to his Excellence the Lord Townshend, Tot, St^e Gravenhage. Enclosing a "bill of Loading" for two casks of wine shipped on board "the Martha, Rich^d Perkius master."

1711, March 28th. Abraham Stanyan to Lord Townshend. From Berne.

"My Lord,—Not knowing how long your Ex^{ty} may continue at the Hague, I take this Opportunity of returning my most humble thanks to your Lordp. for the many favours I have received from you both during my Stay at the Hague and since, begging leave to assure you that I shall always retain a gratefull sense of them, and think myself very happy, if I can ever find an Opportunity of shewing my gratitude. It is not for me to judge of the reasons which prevailed with your Lordp. to quitt your Embassy, I doubt not but they are good as to your own particular, but I don't know whether you can so well justify them to the publick, since all the letters from Holland, as well as the persons I meet with that come from thence, speak with great regret of your Ex^{ty} leaving that Countrey. However it be, since it has been your Choice I heartily wish it may prove to your Satisfaction, and beg leave to assure you, that wherever you are, I shall always be with the utmost respect—My Lord—Your Ex^{ty} most faithfull & most humble servant.

"A: STANYAN."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
—

Same date. The same to Horatio Walpole. From Berne.

"I have no news to send you but the Copy of a letter I have seen from a General Officer in the D. de Noailles's army in Catalonia which you will find here annexed.

"The letters from Milan of the 20th inst. say that they had yet no News of the Arrival of our Fleet at Vado, but that it was expected every day, and that the Troops would embark for Catalonia as soon as it arrived.

"Pray can you tell me what is become of Mr Stanhope? & since I am making enquiry I desire you would let me know whether I must lose you with my Lord Townshend, or whether you stick to the Embassy and not to the Amb^r. Whereever you are I shall always be very heartily—Dear S^r—Your etc."

As a postscript to this letter is a copy of a letter in French from a General Officer in the army of the Duc de Noailles, dated March 15th.

1711, March 30th. Les Plaintes du Roy de Prusse contre les Etats G[e]n[er]aux. Dated at the Hague and unsigned. 8 pp.

[No date.] Les demandes faites à l'Empereur, outre celles qui sont faites cy dessus aux Etats Generaux. 3 pp. This paper is appended to the last.

1711, March 31st, N.S. George Mackenzie to Lord Townshend. Dated at Dresden.

"My Lord,—I received yeasterday the honour of the letter that your Excellency had been pleas'd to write to me of the 24th Inst., and sincerely beg leave to assure Your Lordship, that I am too sensibly touch'd with the loss I must make, to've receiv'd with indifference the notice you've thereby given me of your Excie's purpose to return into England I must presume that Your Lordp's remembrance of the plainness and fullness with which I have faithfully ever acquainted you, with all that past in these parts, will continually be such proofs of my unbounded Confidence in, and of the attachment I really conserve for Your Lordp, that if hereafter any thing offer wherein I may be usefull, that at least I may still promise myselfe the Satisfaction of your Excie's commands.

"I am with a most profound respect—My Lord—Your Excellencie's most obedient, most faithfull, & humblest Serv^t

"GEORGE MACKENZIE."

Same date. The same to Horatio Walpole. Dated as the last.

"Sir,—I ingeniously receiv'd with the deepest regret the notice you had been pleas'd to give me of the 24th Instant, that you are at same time with My Lord Townshend to return into England. I'm very sensible that your own personal Merit as well as other advantageous Circumstances will still make every Situation easie to you, but as I cannot promise myselfe the like happiness with any by the freedom and Confidence that I used [to receive from] and repos'd in you, I presume you will forgive me to be sensibly affected with what may be my highest misfortune: I hope you have had some demonstrations of my soundness and Sincerity, and therefore may be persuaded I shal never be very diffuse in Protestations; but as you cannot doubt, that I have the due Sentiments I ought, of the many and signal obligations you've done me, in the Course of your Residence & Negotiations; I presume you'll give me leave to assure you, that I will in all time coming very gladly embrace every opportunity that can contribute to your Satisfaction and my acknowledgments.

" I presume you are more generous, than [to] deny me the complacency I shal ever receive, to effectually declare that I am with the utmost Sincerity & cordial respect—Dr Sir—Your most obedient & most humble Servant,

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

“GEORGE MACKENZIE.”

1711, April 6th. Mons. Thomas Laurens to the same [?] Dated at Briel and unaddressed.

“ . . . Je suis informé que les vaisseaux de guerre resteront en mer sans entrer à Goree, pour attendre Son Excellence Mylord Townshend.
“ . . . ”

1711–1712. Copies of six letters from Lord Peterborough. From 1st September 1711 to 12th August 1712. Dated at Venice.

1713, Jan. 9th. “To The Rt Hon^{ble} the Lord Visc^t Townshend at Rainham Hall near Swaffam—Norfolk—Free.” In an official hand and unsigned. Dated in London.

“My Lord—From the Hague [we hear] that the main Point in Question between Prince Eugene and Villars is about a safe Barrier for the Empire with the latter as yet is far from yielding and insists not only on the entire Sovereignty of Strasburg and Alsace, but alsoe of the Country quite down to Germersheim inclusive which it's bekeived the Emperor neither will or can agree to, meantime the States are very uneasy least France should stipulate something from his Imp^l Maj^{ty} to their Prejudice touching the Barrier in the Netherlands, have ord^d the Comanders of the Frontier Provinces and Towns to repaire to their sev^l Gov^rmt^s and double their usuall Guards.

“From Hamborough [we hear] that the King of Denmark has given leave for Provisions to be bro^t in every Fortnight into Toninghen on condition the Congress be held the 24th at Brunswick to accomodate differences between the Northern Princes, and that the house of Mr. Roberts the Brittish Consull at Elsnore was lately burnt but (sic) a sudden Fire and all his Papers consum'd, among them a Packet from England directed to Stockholm and another from thence to England.

“Charles Vivian Esq^r is made a Com^r of the Stamp office in the room of Cap^t Steele who some time since resign'd.

“This Day's Dutch Post advises from Vienna that sev^l Imperial^l Regiments in Hungary have orders to march for Italy where new Troubles are expected from the King of Sicily.

“From Strasburgh [there is news] of the 1st, That a detachm^t of the Garrison of Friburgh have taken the Pass of Newstadt 4 Leagues from Villinghen and thereby opened a way on that side into the Black Forrest.

“From Paris [we hear] that their Sea Armament is very great haveing 12,000 Landmen on board and all Materialls of Warr in order as they give out to assiet the Spaniards in [the] Conquest of Sardinia.

“And from the Hague [we hear] that on the 13th the 2 Dutch Ambassad^{rs} set out for Paris and on the 15th that [the Ambassador] of France made his publick Entry at the Hague.”

1714, Oct. 12th, O.S. Copy of a letter from Lord Townshend to Mons^r Vandenberg. From Whitehall. In French.

His Lordship returns thanks for congratulations on his appointment as Secretary of State, and will contribute as far as lies in his power to maintain a good understanding and friendship between Great Britain and Holland.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1714, Oct. 29th. A letter from the Avoyer and Council of Berne to Lord Townshend on politics and local disputes. In German. 4 pp.

1714, Dec. 6th. "Baron Schack's new Letter of Credence," from Peter the Great, "rec^d from Sir Clement Cottrel 30th April 1715." In Latin. Dated at St Petersburg. 1 p.

1714 --. "A Narrative of Mr R. A[']s] Correspondence with the House of Hanover." From Aug^t 1712 to Nov^r 1714. In a parchment cover, 41 pp. Eight more pages have been destroyed. Printed copies of the Queen's Speeches of 6th June 1712 and 2nd March 1713, and also a copy of the "Post-Boy" of 3rd July 1714, are bound up with this MS.

1714-1717. Letters from L^d V[iscount] Townshend, L^{ds} Stanhope, Sunderland, and others, belonging to Marquis Townshend. [In a card-board cover.]

1715, March 9th. Copy of a letter from the Emperor Charles VI. to King George I., on the Affair of the Barrier. Dated at Vienna. In French. 7 pp.

1715, March 14th. "Abstract of a letter from Bilbao about a Spanish Ship fitting out for Newfoundland to demand and assert their Right pursuant to the 15 Article of the treaty att Uttrich [Utrecht]."

1715, March 16. Copy of a letter from the Emperor to King George I., acknowledging a letter of Jan^y 15th received at the hand of Lieut. General Cadogan.

It concludes: "Je ne dois pas oublier de donner ici au Zèle particulier & à la dexterité de Mr Cadogan à menager et à finir sa Commission, les louanges qu'il merite, étant etc."

[No date.] A Memorial in French showing how the Emperor could attach to his interests the League of the Grisons and thereby establish an easy communication between the States of the Empire and the Duchy of Milan. 11 pp.

1715, April 1st. Translation of a letter from Peter the Great to King George I., congratulating the latter on his accession.

1715, July 10th. Monsieur Baruer to Lord Townshend. In French. Dated at Vienna and unaddressed.

The writer sends compliments and would much like to come to England" Madelle d'Appermont has the small pox ; if our hero [the Prince Eugene] escapes [it] the mother and daughter may go to Brabant whither the Prince who has been appointed governor will shortly go too. . . ."

[1715, August.] Marquis de Rochegude to the same. In French. Undated and unaddressed. Written "at the Hand and Pen, in Pantou Street near Leicester Square."

Enclosing a copy of the writer's recent despatch to the Protestant Cantons of Switzerland, and begging a continuance of his Lordship's favour.

1715, Augt. 12th. The copy of the despatch just mentioned. In French. Dated in London.

It begins:—"Great and sovereign Lords the good resolutions of Parliament sustained by the levy of 8 or 10 thousand men have arrested the Pretender on his road"

1715, Augt. ^{13th}/_{24th}. Monsieur Petkum to Lord Townshend. In French. Dated in London and unaddressed. Endorsed: "Mr. Petticū 13 Aug."

The writer complains that he has not as yet received any satisfaction for the offence done to him in the King's Chamber at the Palace by Mr Graham, in violation of the Law of Nations ; and he begs his Lordship to obtain for him speedy redress.

1715, Aug. 27th. Extract from a letter in Italian. Unsigned and unaddressed. Dated at Paris and describing the last hours of Louis XIV.

[Circ. 1715.] An anonymous undated letter addressed "To the Right Hon^{ble} Lord Viscount Townsend, Principall Minister of State, Albemarle Street."

"My Lord — As your Lordpp is generally knowne [as] a great Benefactor to your Country in all your Eminent Stations; I made bold to intimate to your Ldpp that I could discover a gang of Rogues, some high way men, who have bene out very lately a month [ago]; and by some undoubted Circumstances brought home great booty. I am a stranger to them and to all ill practice, the Intelligence came to me by chance, and I infer from makeing a discovery of the house they resort to; if I am known to be the discoverer, my life incurs great danger; to serve my Country is my sole motive, notwithstanding if it prove true, I expect £300: your Ldpp's word I and the world can depend on: if it be approved off I will proceede to my utmost to serve my Country, but I will not be knowne to any such rogues who [I] am told are notorious ones. I beg your Lopp's pardon your obe^t ser^t. a.b: ooo.

"[P.S.] in the flying post, if occation be I expect to hear further."

1715, Sept. 1st. Chidly Pigott to Lord Townshend.

The writer prays his Lordship to recover from one Mr Beak a petition that the King had referred to his Lordship's Committee.

No date. "Deduction de ce qui s'est passé à l'égard de la demolition de Dunkerque depuis la Signature de la Paix à Utrecht jusqu'à la mort de la feüe Reyne." 18 pp.

1715-1716. Letters from Horatio Walpole to Lord Townshend. Dated at the Hague from the 8th February 1715 N.S. to 23rd October 1716. A thick bundle in a cardboard cover.

1715-1716. Despatches of Admiral Sir John Norris from 13th May 1715 to 4th November 1716.

1715, May 10th. Copy of a despatch from the Lords of the Admiralty to Lord Townshend.

Enclosing a copy of "Instructions for Sir John Norris for his proceeding to and from the Baltic with the Squadron of his Ma^{ty} Ships under his Command." Signed by Sir George Byng, George Dodington, Sir John Jennings, George Baillic, Sir Charles Turner, and Abraham Stanyan.

To these instructions are appended "A List of his Majesties Ships, designed to proceed to the Baltic under your Command," and "A List of Ships Employ'd by the underwritten Merchants to import Hemp from Petersbergh for his Majesties service, Anno 1715."

From the second of these lists it appears that the number of ships placed under the command of Sir John Norris—was four third-rate, fifteen fourth-rate, and one sloop.

The Merchant ships were the America, Thomas Pickarden; the Adventure, John Smith; the Three Martins, Robert Tomson; the Mary & Elizabeth, Samuel Cont; the Hannah, Ralph White; the Benjamin, John Hooper; the Thomas & Henry, Nicholas Constant; the Plym Stock, Capt. Harrison; the Dorothy, Adam Abbot; and the Friend's Adventure, Alexander Long.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

The names of the owners of these vessels (so far as they are given), are [Sir] Randolph Knipe, [Sir] Godfrey Webster, Jos. Martin, William Astell, Charles Goodfellow, and George Morley Jn^r.

1715, May 13th. Sir John Norris, on board the Cumberland at the Nore, to Lord Townshend.

The writer is delayed as he is waiting for some of the Merchant Ships and for Naval Stores. He concludes "I shall not loose one moment of time in proceeding from hence as soon as in the power of My Lord.— Your Lordships most Obed^t faithful Scr^t.

"JN : NORRIS."

[1715.] "Draught of a lett^r to be writt by Sr Jⁿ Norris to His Ma^{ty} Ministers at Stralsund & Stockholm." Undated.

"Pursuant to the Instructions I have received from His Majesty; I am to acquaint you that I am arrived here with a Squadron of Men of war, and a fleet of Merchant men under my Convoy, as well for the Security & protection of the Commerce in the Baltick Sea, as to demand of the King of Sweden reparation and satisfaction for the great losses w^{ch} the British Merchants have sustained of late years, in having great number of their ships taken and confiscated with their Cargo's by the Swedes without any just reason or pretence whatsoever, and also to require an abrogation of the Edict relating to Privateers published by the King of Sweden at Stralsund the 19th February last; I must therefore desire you to lose no time after the receipt of this to represent to his Swedish Majesty the occasion of my arrival with the fleet under my Command in these Seas; and that the King my master having nothing more at heart than the preservation of the antient Friendship between the two Crowns, is very much concerned that the behaviour of the Swedes in taking and confiscating contrary to some treaties still in force the ships and effects belonging to His subjects, and the denyall of satisfaction & redress to them notwithstanding the repeated instances made by you as well as by Mr Jackson on that account has obliged His Majesty to send me with a naval force to protect His subjects in carrying on their lawful trade to the Baltick ports, and to demand of the King of Sweden immediate reparation for the losses sustained by the British Merchants (an account of which is here annexed) and also an abrogation of the aforesaid unjustifiable Edict relating to Privateers, which renders the Commerce to these parts impracticable contrary to the Treaties still subsisting between the two Crowns; and lastly to insist that the freedom of trade to the ports of the Baltick may be immediately restored to His Majesties Subjects, and preserved for the future without any interruption or molestation whatsoever.

"You will at the same time let His Swedish Majesty know for these reasons I am directed to stop all such ships that I shall meet with which shall belong to him, or to his subjects, or that carry his Commission, and to detain them, untill I shall receive from you the King of Sweden's full compliance to these demands; which are so agreeable to justice and reason, that I cannot doubt but His Swedish Majesty out of his known love and regard to both will grant a ready and favourable answer; but if contrary to all expectations he shall continue to refuse complying with what is desired in the name of the King my master, I shall then be obliged to [take] such ships as I shall intercept belonging to him: or to his subjects, or carrying his Commission, as just reprizalls for the damages sustained by the British subjects, and carry them with me as such into England."

[No date.] "Copie. Conte Specifique des pertes et domages qu'ont faites les Sujets Britanniques par la Saisie et Confiscation de Vaisseaux et Marchandises sous mentionnées dans la Suède." Fourteen claims the total of which amounts to £65,449. Perhaps enclosed in the last. 6½ pp.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSB.

1715, June 23rd. Copy of Minutes of Council of War, held on board the Cumberland at Revel. Enclosed in the next letter.

Present: Sir John Norris, Admiral of the Blue, &c.; Sir Thomas Hardy, Rear Admiral of the Blue; Captains Edward Hopson, Charles Strickland and Thomas Smith; Mons^r L. du Neth, Rear Admiral of Holland, and Captains Jolle Jolles and John Taatman.

The decision come to at this Council of War was to set sail for Dordrecht, for the protection of the trade of Riga, so soon as the four ships daily expected from the Island of Hoghland should return; to call for despatches at Dantzick; and to hold a fresh Council of War to determine the proper time for returning with the Fleet to Revel in order to convoy the Trade to England and Holland.

With the above paper was also enclosed in the next letter a "List of the Czar's Fleet as they are disposed in a Line of Battel."

1715, June 24th. Sir John Norris to Lord Townshend. Dated, on board the Cumberland, at Revel.

The writer sent away the Trade bound to Petersburg with four men-of-war to see them as far as the Island of Hoghland. On the 23rd he held a Council of War, "so we may put to Sea again so soon as the said four Ships have rejoined us." Has had the good Fortune to prevail with the Dutch Admiral to join with him "in such a Cruise as will not only serve for the Security of our Commerce, but also enable me to answer the other purposes of his Majesty, so far as the time will allow. . . . The people here are still in daily expectation of the Czar's Arrival with his Fleet from Cronslot but we have not received any Account of his leaving that Place."

[P.S.] 25th June.

"The Post not going away yesterday I have an Opportunity to acquaint your Lord^{ship} that last night I had a letter from the Czar by his private Secretary, by which and what that Gent^l had orders to tell me I find his Majesty is very desirous of my stay till he arrives with his Fleet from Cronslot, which his Sec^y assures me will be in a day or two I have inclos'd the Muscovite Line of Battel, and can tell your L^{dy} our Trade is got safe to Petersburg. I sailed this morning from the Road of Revel and anchored off Nargan. Your L^{dy} will pardon the Liberty I take of putting my Family's Letters under your Cover."

1715, July 8th. The same to the same. Dated on board the Cumberland at Revel. Enclosing "Lists of the Danish and Swedish Fleets," and "a State of Provisions on board his Majesty's Ships in the Baltick under the Command of S^r Jⁿ Norris."

The writer has striven to persuade the Dutch Rear Admiral to act with him offensively against the Swedes, but the latter says that he cannot join in any offensive action until he receives such orders from the States, or advice from their Minister, Mr. Lentilo. "I have also received a second letter from the King of Prussia, wherein he acquaints me the Danish Fleet is retired, being too weak for the Swedes, and presses me immediately to endeavour to join the Danes . . . if your Lordship shall send any orders for me at Copenhagen, we may attempt to put them in execution in conjunction with the Danes, as far as our provisions and the season of the year will admit, which are both pretty far spent"

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

"P.S. His Czarian Majesty has ordered Gen^l Prince Galexin to make a descent with 60 Gallies from Neustadt or Wassaw, on the coast of Finland in the North Bodom, upon the opposite coast where they can land best, in order to burn the country and divert the Swedes from transporting any troops to Pomerania. The Czar's troops designed for Pomerania are in motion, and I am told he designs to go thither in person.

"I enclosed y^r L^dship the copy of a List I have just had from the Czar of the Danish and Swedish fleets said to be at Sea and of the Danish Flotilla."

1715, July 13th. The same to the same. Dated on board the Cumberland at Dantzick.

" We sailed from thence [Nargan] the 28th, and meeting variable winds we came upon the coast of Windaw the 5th of this month, and being informed there that the Men of War and Trade at Riga were not molested by any Cruisers, we came from that coast, and arrived at Dantzick the 10th, and I am informed here by Mr. Beaumont and Mr. Hopman that they received a packet from your L^dship for me, but had forwarded the same to Revel the Dutch Rear Admiral is informed from the Prints of his Country which he has seen here, that the States have lately declared that their order to him is to keep an exact neutrality, and therefore he cannot joyn with me in any case to act offensively against the Swedes and there being but 14 English Men of War with me, and by letters I have met with here from Mr. Jackson he sends me a List of the Swedish fleet now together, which is 26 sail, and 21 of them are of the Line considering that by the last of this month our trade at Petersburg will be ready, and that from that time we must be gathering up the Commerce to return down the Baltick, y^r L^dsp will expect no further of us than a proceeding with our Trade, unless the Swedes will seek an occasion; but if it happen that we get down with them to Elsenure in any short time, where they will be free from any apprehension of the Swedes, if His Majesty be pleased that I have any further Orders to act with the Men of War, I shall very faithfully endeavour to obey his commands, which I beg your L^dship will answer for me.

"Here is two Merchant Men come to this place, whose Masters I have examined, and they give so odd a relation of the Swedish and Danish fleets, that if I had not examined them myself and found them ready to deliver w^t they said on oath, I should hardly have related it to your L^dship. One of them says that on the 8th instant near Bornholm, he was carried into the Swedish fleet by one of their Cruizers, that they were in all 35 sail, whereof 21 were of the Line, that while he was with them, they discovered the Danish fleet to Leeward and bore down to them, who he says were also 35 sail, and 21 of them in a line to receive the Swedes, that when the Swedes were near the Danes about 30 Cannons were fired from the Swedes at the Danes who made no return; after w^{ch} the Danes bore away and the Swedes kept their wind and so separated, and this man coming on his voiage hither saw no more of their proceedings. The other Master says that on the 9th he was likewise in the Swedish fleet near Bornholm, and saw them in sight of the Danes; that the Swedes had the Wind of them, that he saw some few guns fired from the Swedes, after which the Swedes tacked and stood towards the Island of Bornholm and the Danes towards Fosterburn. . . ."

1715, July 16th. The same to the same. Dated on board the Cumberland at Dantzick.

Sir John encloses a copy of the resolutions come to at a Council of War two days before, and will pursue them if the post brings him nothing to the contrary.

In the Council of War it was decided that the fleet should proceed to Revel "and dispatch four ships from thence to Hoghland, to fetch the trade from Petersburgh to Revel, and that when they shall have rejoined the fleet there, it be considered in another Council of War in what manner 'twill be best to take up the rest of the trade of both nations to proceed down the Baltick in order to return to our Countries."

1715, Augt. 2nd. Lord Townshend to Sir John Norris. From Whitehall. Copy. 3 pp.

His Majesty entirely approves Sir John's conduct; thinks it is of the last consequence to the nation that the merchant men who are now upon their return from the Baltic should be conducted home in safety—since if they should miscarry such a scarcity of naval stores must ensue as would disable him from fitting out a Fleet next Spring—and therefore orders Sir John to convey them home with all convenient speed. As, by returning home with his whole squadron and the merchant ships under convoy, Sir John will probably have no opportunity of making reprisals on the Swedes, he is instructed to leave behind him in the Baltic eight of his ships "under the command of some discreet Officer that is not a Flag," to act in concert with the Danish fleet, to compel the Swedes to make reparation for the damages they have done to his Majesty's subjects during the last two years, and to compel the King of Sweden to revoke the unjustifiable Edict lately published.

1715, Sept. 3rd. Sir John Norris to Lord Townshend. Dated at Copenhagen.

"My Lord—Since my last to your Lord^{sh} from Dantzick, I am to acquaint you that I sail'd from thence the 25th of August, and anchor'd off Bornholm the 27th by reason of contrary Winds. I sail'd from thence the 1st of this Month and yesterday arrived with all our fleet in the Bay of Knyke, where I found the Danish fleet, whose Admiral sent me by a Frigate, Your Lord^{sh}'s Orders of the 2^d of August, upon w^{ch} I immediately came to an Anchor in that Road, and pursuant to your Commands made a detachment of eight of the best of our Ships under the Command of Captain Hopson, to join the Danish fleet and act according to your Lord^{sh}'s directions; and have drawn from our other Ships what provisions they can possibly spare, to enable them to continue on the said service. After they seperated from me this Morning, I sail'd with the rest of our Ships and pass'd the Grounds of Elseneur, and am just come a shoar to this place to adjust with the Ministers for such further Provisions as shall be wanted for the service of the said eight Ships, but as the Post is now going and I have not opportunity to acquaint your Lord^{sh} with any thing further, I shall not fail of taking particular Care to do it by the next," etc.

1715, Sept. 5th. The same to the same. Dated at Copenhagen. A signed duplicate, enclosed from Elseneur in the next letter. 3 pp.

The writer has arranged terms with the King of Denmark's Ministers for the provisioning of the squadron that he is to leave behind him in the Baltic. He hopes [very shortly] to have all our Trade clear'd at Elseneur and to be ready to sail by the first Opportunity to our Country. Is going to Fredricksberg tomorrow, to receive the Queen of Denmark's Commands, and from thence to Elseneur to our ships. The Danish Magazines have neither hemp, cordage, masts nor yards, sufficient for their own ships whence his Lordship will see that in case of difficulty they will not be able to supply our squadron.

Enclosed in the above letter are the three following papers.

1. Sir John Norris's Instructions to Capt. Hopson, Commander of his

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND.
MSS.

Maj^{ty} Ship the Burford. Dated "aboard the Cumberland off Draco this 3^d Sep^r 1715." 4²/₃ pp.

2. State of the Provisions of the 8 Ships under the Command of Captain Hopson in the Baltick. $\frac{1}{2}$ page.

3. Rates to be paid for Provisions that shall be taken up at Copenhagen for the Squadron in the Baltick, and charge of putting Men into the Danish Hospitals &c.

The last-mentioned paper which illustrates prices and exchange, and weights and measures, is as follows:—

"At what Rates such Provisions are to be paid for, as the eight Men of War left in the Baltick have occasion to be supply'd with from Copenhagen (Viz^t)

				li. s. d.
Bread (of the King's sort)		} 2 Danish Schillings, or	0	0	1	sterling per pound.
Beer	112	"	"	0	4	8	{ per Danish tun said to contain 34 English Gallons.
Beef (salt)	4	"	"	0	0	2
Pork (salt)	7	"	"	0	0	3½	{ per pound.
Oatmeal	480	"	"	1	0	0
Butter	10	"	"	0	0	5	{ per Danish Ton said to contain 36 Eng. Gall ^s .
Cheese	6	"	"	0	0	3

"The Bills given for the said Provisions, are to be drawn according to the printed Course of Exchange when the Provisions are deliver'd.

"If any Sea Men be put into the King of Denmark's Hospitals, the Charge will be three Rixdollers per Man per Mensem, and five such Dollers are accounted equal to a pound Sterling.

"1715, Sept. 10th. Sir John Norris to Lord Townshend. Dated on board the Cumberland at Elsenure.

"My Lord—Herewith is the Duplicate of what I had the honour to write to you from Copenhagen the 5th. After I had adjusted every thing then with the Danish Ministers relating to the eight Ships w^{ch} stay under the Command of Capⁿ Hopson, I went to Fredricksburg, where I had the honour of waiting upon the Queen of Denmark and all that Royal Family. Her Majesty was pleased to command me to make her Compliments to the King and Prince and Princess of Wales, and commanded me to dine at her table, when she was pleas'd to drink their Healths and Prosperity, as did all the Royall Family. I came that night to our fleet, and we now only wait a fair wind to sail, w^{ch} I shall be carefull to do the first opportunity that shall present. I am, etc."

1715, Sept. 13th. The same to the same. Dated on board the Cumberland at Elsenure.

"My Lord—Since my last to your L^dsp I have only to acquaint you that by contrary winds I am still kept here with the fleet, and the shortness of our provisions has obliged me to endeavour the procuring some at this place, the account of w^{ch} I shall take care be regularly sent to the Commiss^s of the Victualling at the cheapest rates I am able, and pray the L^dship to move His Majesty that Admiralty may order the bills my Secretaries shall draw on the Victualling be regularly complied with. I am, etc."

1715, Sept. 26th. Capⁿ Edward Hopson, R.N., "From on board the Burford in Ruyck Bay," to Lord Townshend. In a clerk's hand; unaddressed, and signed E. Hopson. 2 pp.

"My Lord—In Obedience to the Orders I receiv'd from Sir John Norris, I joyn'd the Danish Fleet with the Squadron of his Majesty's Ships under my Command, at this Place the 4th instant, where we have continued ever since without any Motion towards proceeding any further. . . .

"Count Geldenlew came on board and took the Command of the Danish Fleet two days since.

" The small quantity of Provisions which was demanded to compleat our ships to Twelve Weeks at Short Allowance, and but half Allowance of Beer is not yet all delivered should we want a further Supply, I fear it will be very difficult to get. As for Naval Stores by what I can learn they have not any in their Magazines should we be in want thereof. All these things considered, as well as the Season of the Year far advanc'd, I don't see we shall be able to remain in these Seas longer than about the Tenth of October; but my Instructions directing me to consider that at a Council consisting of the Captains of the Squadron, I shall act accordingly, and shall not omit giving your Lordship an Account of our Proceedings as often as Opportunity shall offer, and pray leave to subscribe myself, etc.

"P.S. Just now I received a Message from Count Geldenlew that he had receiv'd the King's Orders, and design'd to sail the next morning by Day light, towards Rugen, I shall accompany him with my Squadron, being willing to promote the Publick Service, but am a little surprized at his giving me no other Intimation of his Intention."

1715, Sept. 27th. Copy of a despatch from Lord Townshend to Captⁿ Hopson. Dated at Whitehall.

" the King being acquainted that the Ministers of Denmark have agreed to furnish you wth provisions at the same Rates as his Danish Majesty is obliged to pay, and that you have a quantity sufficient to serve you till the 10th of October, about w^{ch} time Sr John Norris supposes you may be preparing to return home; I am commanded by his Maj^{ty} to acquaint you that he thinks the interests of his Subjects, and his own Honour too much concern'd to support the particular points mention'd in the instructions Sr John Norris has given you; that it is therefore his pleasure that you should not think of leaving those seas with the Squadron under you Command untill your shall receive the King's speciall orders for that purpose"

1715, Oct. 17th. Sir John Norris to Lord Townshend. Dated on board the "Cumberland near the mouth of the Thames."

"My Lord,—I sailed with the fleet from Elsenaur the 29th of the last month, and the 30th the wind coming contrary [we] were obliged to anchor off the Island of Lesson, where we rid till the 2^d instant, and then having a favourable Easterly wind, we sailed out of the Categat, and passed the Schaw with all the fleet in the afternoon. That night came on a violent storm of wind from the South to the South West which dispersed the fleet so, that on the 3rd having hard gales and thick weather, we could not see, besides our own Men of War, and three Dutch, above 40 sail

"The Swallow and Moor, who were ordered to keep in the rear of the fleet were separated from us the night of the Gale.

"The 7th, three Dutch Men of War and some Merchant men parted from us for their Country"

"Captⁿ Finbo will have the honour of delivering this letter to your L^dp. He is a very worthy Gentleman I pray leave to recommend him to your L^dship's favour, and hope soon to be permitted the honour of waiting upon you, and am " etc.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

1715, Nov. 5th. "Traduction d'une lettre du Commisariat de l'estat de la Marine, au Conseil, à Copenhagen." Signed Rantzau, Seckman, and Lassen. (1 page.) To which is appended a statement "Des provisions que l'Admiral le Chevalier John Norris a demandé pour l'Escadre Angloise qui est avec la flotte Danoise, et des provisions receues là-dessus, selon le poid et mesure de Dannemarc." 1 page.

The letter expresses surprise at complaints that the English ships had failed to obtain the provisions promised them, and calls the Council's attention to the accompanying extract which shows how the provisions have been supplied, in payment for which at present the commisariat have not touched a sou, though the commisariat had to advance money for the purchase of the provisions at considerable inconvenience.

[1716]. A list of the Swedish Ships which engaged the Danes on the 28 July 1715, and ought to be expected at Sea this year. Unsigned and undated.

[The total number of ships in this List is 21, and of their guns is 1366, and the proposals that follow seem to have been drawn up by Sir John Norris.]

" Besides the above-mentioned ships the Swedes have at Gottenberg ten sail from 28 to 50 guns, which are in condition for the Sea and were out the 1st of last year.

"The aforesaid Account is the whole number of ships the Swedes had at Sea last year.

"If the King have Occasion for his fleet to proceed up the Baltick, the Danes, not being in a condition, or it not being for their interest to go above the Island of Bornholm, the English should have an equal number of guns in their fleet to the Swedes, to expect the success of a battle in case Occasion offer.

"If the English be only to joyn the Danes and act in conjunction with them, as much less a number as may be reasonably supposed the Danes shall joyn them with, to give the success to a battel in case of an engagement may suffice.

"The Swedes have a much greater number of Men than the English, insomuch that the Adm^{rs} ship of Sweden will have 1,100 men, and the English Admiral but 470, and a proportional difference between all the ships of the two nations; wherefore 'tis proposed that the English Ships may be allowed the same complement of Men they have in War.

The English ships are now ordered only the allowance of ammunition at home in time of Peace, which is but 40 Charges for each Canon, and in case they have an engagement, that will be neither sufficient to conquer their Enemies nor defend themselves; it is therefore proposed they be allowed the same proportion of Ammunition they carry aboard in time of War, together with 20 rounds of pound-shot, for the Danish Magazines are in so ill a condition, that they cannot supply the English in case of necessity.

"The English were, last year, victualled with four months provision at whole allowance, but if more had not been procured abroad, the ships had not been able to return, and yet, with that help, they were obliged to live some time at half allowance, w^{ch} in sharp weather men are not able to bear; and it is therefore proposed, they carry out with them a greater proportion of provisions.

"It is likewise proposed the fleet be allowed a fifth Rate Frigate, and two Sloops or sixth-rates, to assist in the useful parts of Sounding before the fleet, or helping any Ship that may be distressed by running aground, and also that an Hospital Ship may be allowed for the reception of sick or hurt seamen from the Men of War.

"The Government of England has allowed 16,000 Seamen for this year, and if 7,000 of them be employed to the Baltick, it will be very little or no more charge to England than if they were all kept in the Channel."

1716, May 10th. Instructions for Sir John Norris. Given at the Court at St. James's at this date. 5½ pp.

The instructions recite the grievances of the British Crown and Merchants against the Swedes. The King of Sweden "is now endeavouring to make himself Master of Norway, the reduction of w^{ch} Kingdome we look upon, besides the loss of the trade of Great Britain thither, to be the most ready way both to enable him to cut off entirely the Commerce of our Subjects to the Baltick, and to afford him greater opportunitys of carrying on those projects, which from good grounds we cannot but apprehend he is forming against the Peace and Safety of our Kingdomes."

Then follow specific instructions to Sir John Norris with regard to the reparation he is to demand and to the measures he is to take to enforce it. If he shall judge the King of Sweden's answer to be full and satisfactory, he must then "use all possible instances to divert the Danes from making an Invasion upon Schonen, and from carrying on any hostile attempt against any other the Territories of Sweden."

1716, May 11th. Lord Townshend to Sir John Norris. From Whitehall.

Requesting Admiral Norris to carry the bearer to the Sound and set him ashore at Elsingburg, and on his return to take him on board again and have him landed somewhere near Lubec.

1716, May 12th. Lord Townshend to Sir John Norris, and to Robert Jackson, British Resident at Stockholm. Dated at Whitehall. Copies of two letters (on the same sheet) enclosing duplicate drafts of the memorial (in French) which Sir John Norris was to send by express to the King of Sweden. Mr. Jackson is desired to form a memorial upon the same plan and to the same purpose, to deliver it to the Senate at Stockholm, and then to transmit to Lord Townshend with all convenient speed an account of the proceedings thereon, and of the answer he receives.

1716, May 17th. Sir John Norris to Lord Townshend. Dated on board the Cumberland at the Nore.

The writer hopes the Hampshire will join him to-morrow from Sheerness, and will take the first opportunity of wind to sail on his voyage. The Muscovite ships sailed the day before he came here.

1716, May 18th. Lord Townshend to Sir John Norris. From Whitehall. Copy.

"The King desires that Sir John will sail at the very first opportunity, and further that, if during his stay in the Baltick, application should be made to him by the Court of Denmark or by any of His Ministers abroad for granting a Convoy to ships carrying provisions for the Garrison at Wismar, he should comply therewith and see the said ships safe to Wismar."

1716, June 5th. Sir John Norris to Lord Townshend. Dated on board the Cumberland at Elsenaur.

"... I waited on his Danish Maj^{ty} at Fredricksberg and made him our Master's compliments. His Ma^{ty} was pleased to receive me very favourably, and in discourse with me ask'd if he might know the

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.
—

purport of my Express to the King of Sweden. I told him 'twas by the command of the King to press his Swedish Maj^{ty} in the strictest manner to desist from his Enterprises in Norway, and for the Freedom of our Trade in the Baltick, and that I expected a favourable answer if the King of Sweden should be so unreasonable as not to permit any answer to come to me, I shall be in want to know from your Lord^{sh} how his Maj^{ty} will please to have me behave myself.

"Mr. Püchler tells me he has writ to England that the Court of Denmark intends a Descent upon Schonen with 20,000 Men who are to intrench themselves there till Troops can be got to strengthen them.

"I trouble your Lord^{sh} with the inclosed Petition of the Master of one of our Merch^t Ships w^{ch} have been detained at Copenhagen by the Danes. I have made application to the Ministers for his Discharge, and they have promised me to be favourable to him."

1716, May 30th. Copy of the humble petition of Robert Curson. Enclosed in the last. 1½ pp.

The petitioner is master of the Adventure of Wells which is principally owned by himself and Mr. John Buckler of Wells. Last March when bound from Coningsberg to London the said ship was taken by a Swedish Privateer. It was recaptured by a Danish Frigate and carried to Copenhagen where it has been detained ever since because he refuses to pay the Danes one fourth of the value of the ship and cargo as salvage. Wherefore he humbly begs "that he may have liberty to prosecute his voyage without being obliged to answer the demand above-mentioned, since our Royal Master is at peace both with the King of Denmark and Sweden."

1716, June 11th. Copy of a letter in French from Mons^r de Puckler to Admiral Norris. Dated at Copenhagen and enclosed "In Sir John Norris's of 1st June 1716."

The writer, on behalf of the King of Denmark, wishes the British Admiral to station his squadron between Carlsrona and Bernholm, or between Maën and Dornbusch, so as to protect the vessels that are coming from Pomerania Mecklenbourg and Holstein. Their arrival is much needed both for fitting out the fleet, and for victualling the fleet and Copenhagen.

1716, June 13th. Robert Jackson to Sir John Norris. Dated at Stockholm. Copy 1½ pp.

" On Monday morning last the Holstein Privy Councillor Count Vander Nath arrived here in town from Wenersborg, a place about 20 Leagues from the King of Sweden's Camp at Swinesund, and I chanced to meet him the same Afternoon at Court, where after the usual Civility I inquired if he had not seen Mons^r Stambke, when he made no difficulty to own that he left him at Wenersberg this day se'night, and seemed to believe he might still be att the same place, for he told me that while Baron Gortz the Holstein Treasurer and himself were regulating some matters at Wenersbourg, which the said Count Vander Nath went down on purpose to confer with him about, Mons^r Stambke came to the same place in his way to the King of Sweden's Camp, and getting notice of their being there he immediately came to them, and acquainted Baron Gortz of his having some Letters to the King from you, when the said Baron demanding to see the Copys, and Mons^r Stambke telling him he had received none from you, the Baron would not suffer him to proceed any further, but told him that as he was himself returning the same Day to the King of Sweden, he would let him know as soon as possible when it might be his Maj^{ty} pleasure to permit him to come to him, so that I cannot but conclude Mr. Stambke will be some time detained, and consequently that you will not see him so very suddenly."

1716, June 15th. Lord Townshend to Sir John Norris. Copy. 1½ pp.

Lord Townshend expresses the King's approval of Sir John's having strictly followed his instructions and states that in the King's opinion he should station his squadron at Bornholm or some other place near Carlscroon so as to have a watchful eye on the Swedish Fleet and enable the Dutch Squadron to proceed securely up the Baltic with the Trade.

1716, June 19th. Sir John Norris to Lord Townshend. Dated on board the Cumberland at Elseneur. A signed Duplicate. 4 pp.

"My Lord — I rec^d a Letter from his Danish Maj^{ty} Sec^y of State, Mr Schesledt, desiring me to attend his Maj^{ty} at Fredricksburg the 18th which I accordingly did, and acquainted him that I had rec^d Letters from Mr. Jackson, and was in hopes, since the Swedes permitted them to come to me, soon to receive some Answer from his Swedish Maj^{ty} to the Memorial. But the King of Denmark believing the Swedish Fleet at Sea press'd very much that I wou'd, in the meantime, move with the Squadron towards the Bay of Ruyke and the Meun; in order to be a Countenance to his Men of War, who could then cruise, and secure the bringing his Troops and Provisions to the Island of Zeeland for the intended descent upon Schonen, which they are earnestly desirous to put in execution as soon as possible. I made as civil an excuse as I could; telling his Maj^{ty} that while I waited for the King of Sweden's Answer, I could not remove from where I ride, unless the Swedes made any Attack upon his Countries which should require my Assistance in his Defence. This did not satisfie the King, who told me he had been given to understand I was to assist as well as to defend him" 1716, June 23rd. Copy of a Statement of Thomas Hall, Master of the Ship Prosperity of Hull, made on board the Cumberland at Elseneur. Enclosed in the next.

"Captain Hall states that he left Stockholm ten days ago, that 'twas reported there the Swedes were preparing to send an Army into Schonen, and that he saw three Regiments of Horse on their way thither," etc.

1716, June 26th. Sir John Norris to Lord Townshend. Dated on Board the Cumberland at Elseneur.

". I sent to the Governour of Elsinburg a letter for Mr. Jackson, importing one the rec^d of his, desiring it might go by that day's post to Stockholm. The Governour received the letter, and sent me his assurances he would forward it, and that there was no answer come from the King of Sweden to the memorial, but [he] would not let any Officer land, but talked to him at the Boat, and said it was the King of Sweden's orders so to do."

1716, June 30th. The same to the same. Dated on board the Cumberland at Elseneur. 2½ pp.

". The Danes and Muscovites have nothing so much to wish for, as that we may be engaged alone with the Swedes; in w^{ch} action let the advantage be as it will, we shall be both so disabled, as that after it they will be entire masters of these seas and have their own advantage to pursue it at pleasure I have not any return to the Memorial, and every body here is of opinion, the King of Sweden will not come to any terms"

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1716, July 3rd. Copy of a despatch from Lord Townshend to Sir John Norris. Unsigned. 1½ p.

" . . . The King has ordered me to let you know that in case the Swedish fleet be out of port, or in such a station as may endanger the Trade, then you are to joyn such a detachment of your squadron with the Dutch, as you shall judge sufficient to oppose any attempt of the Swedes upon our Merchant men; and since upon detaching a squadron of such a Force as may be requisite to protect our Commerce, you will be so much weakened, that your lying longer in the Sound may expose you to Insults from the Swedes, the King thinks it best you should go with the rest of his fleet to the Bay of Kiog or to such other station as you shall judge convenient and secure to wait for the King of Sweden's answer. And in case you have any apprehension of danger to the Squadron remaining with you from the superior strength of the Swedes, it is His Majestie's pleasure that you should joyn the fleet of Denmark for your better security. And as the King of Sweden has hitherto protracted his returning an answer, and probably will not give any, his Majesty therefore directs that you should not give any hindrance to the Danes in their descent upon Schonen either by representations or otherwise."

Same date. The same to the same. Copy 3 pp.

" . . . His Majty is well assured that the Swedish Minister at Paris has concluded a Treaty with the Rebels in France, by which they are to be admitted into the service of the K^s of Sweden in the same rank and Station as they enjoyed respectively under the Pretender it is his pleasure that in case the Fleet of Sweden should advance to attack that of Denmark, or otherwise to defeat the descent on Schonen, you should join with the Danes in giving them Battle, and in opposing their designs by all means possible. His Mat^ys intentions being that you should observe no measures towards Sweden in any case where the assistance of his Fleet shall be necessary to deprive them of any signal advantage, or where your joyning the Danes may procure them some signal advantage over Sweden. But without one or the other of these two cases you are not to give the Danes such a degree of assistance as me be interpreted to amount to an open rupture with Sweden. I am," &c.

1716, July ^{13th}/_{24th}. Copy of Additional Instructions to Sir John Norris. "Given at our Court at Osnaburg." Docquetted "In Mr. Stanhope's of 21 July, 1716." 3½ pp.

These instructions are, concert with the Dutch squadron to convoy the merchant men so far to the eastward of the Swedish fleet that they may safely reach their destinations under a detachment sufficient to protect them from Capers and other Frigates, and then with the main body of the joint fleet to watch the Swedish fleet and to execute reprisals. Further to request the King of Denmark to order a strong squadron of his ships to join the joint fleet and to give him assurances of being ready to act in concert with the Danish Squadron to oblige the Swedish fleet to retire into their ports.

1716, Nov. ^{2nd}/_{13th}. Sir John Norris "to Mr. Sec^y Schestedt." Copy. Dated at Copenhagen and enclosed in Sir John's letter to Lord Townshend on the following day.

"Sir—My Royal Master having commanded me to put a Squadron of his ships in a Condition to remain in these parts some time longer, and finding it absolutely necessary for that End, that a Quantity of Bread, besides other Provisions should be provided, I directed our Commissary to endeavour to procure the same. He has accordingly ingag'd two hundred barrels of Wheat flower, but as he informs me he is unable to bring it into Copenhagen without paying a Duty, I humbly request you will be pleas'd to represent the same to his Maj^{ty}, and as it is not for Merchandizing but the Use of my Master's ships, he will be pleas'd to grant that the said flower, as well as what other Provisions it may be necessary to procure for that Squadron while in these parts, may be free of any Duty or Douaine; the like flower [? favour] having been always granted by the Crowns of Spain and Portugal when our fleets were useful there. And for avoiding any fraud to the Crown of Denmark by this favour, I have given directions by our Commissary, Mr. Vere who is the Bearer of this Letter to give you what Testimony you please, either upon his honour or Oath, that whatever Provisions he shall procure will be only for our Master's Service, and Mr. Cleveland who has the honour to command in chief the said Squadron will likewise assure you of the same from time to time as it shall be necessary. I am &c. J. N."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSR.

1716, Nov. ^{3rd}_{14th}. Sir John Norris to Secretary Stanhope. Dated at Copenhagen. Copy. Enclosed in the next. 2½ pp.

"Since my last of the 30th October, the Dutch Men of War with all their Trade arrived here, and all the Merchant Men will be clear'd by tomorrow at Elseneur for leaving this Country and I shall accordingly take the first opportunity of Wind to sail to ours.

"I have not been favoured with any of yours since that of the fourteenth last Month, but Mr. Bothmar having shewn me his Letters, that you would send me his Maj^{ty} Commands by Major Finbo for leaving six Ships under Captain Cleveland in these Seas for some time longer, I shall perform the same tho' your Orders do not come to my hands, and if his Maj^{ty} will permit me humbly to name a time proper for their return from these parts, I believe the 20th of December will be as long as they can well stay for the Ice

"P.S.—I have only time to acquaint you Major Finbo is just arrived, and that by next Post I shall send you an Account of all our Proceedings. I have likewise received a Message from M^r Schestedt that their Court has consented to my request of the Provisions."

Same date. Sir John Norris to Lord Townshend. Dated at Copenhagen.

"My Lord—I had the honour of writing to your L^{dy} the 28th of last Month, and came to this place with our Men of War and Trade next day, when I received the favour of your Letter of the 9th past, and am very glad my behaviour has met with his Royal Highness's approbation.

"For the present State of our Affairs here I pray leave to refer your Lord^{sh} to the enclos'd copies of what I write Mr. Sec^y Stanhope by this Post, and am with the greatest Respect etc.

"JN. NORRIS."

1716, Nov. 4th. The same to the same. Dated "off Copenhagen."

"My Lord I have only to trouble your L^{dy} with the inclosed copy of my letter of this date to Mr. Sec^y Stanhope of my orders to Captain Cleveland, and to acquaint you I am now under sail in order to make the best of my way for England. I am with great respect, etc.

"JOHN NORRIS."

Same date. The same to Secretary Stanhope. Dated at Copenhagen. Enclosed in the last. Copy, 1½ pp.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Enclosing the writer's Instructions for Capt. Cleveland and begging that further instructions may be sent to the latter to rectify whatever the writer may have omitted.

Same date. Copy of Instructions from Sir John Norris Admiral of the Blue, etc. "To William Cleveland, Esq., Command^r in Chief of the Squadron of his Majesty's ships to be employed upon the Coast of Norway." Enclosed with the last. 2½ pp.

These orders are; To wait at Copenhagen till the 30th of Nov^r for his Majesty's commands; to inform Mr. Stanhope of this, and to obey the instructions he will send, to open despatches arriving for Sir John Norris, and communicate them to Lord Polwarth and Mr. Bothmar, etc.

174⁵/₈, Jan. 9th. William Thomson, Recorder of London, to Lord Townshend.

"My Lord,

I am obliged to trouble your Lordship once more on the behalf of John Wild who was reprieved to wensday next. He persisted in his innocence to the last not knowing of his reprieve, I presume your Lordship will please to mention it to the King that he may be reprieved till further orders, and that you will please to signify his Majesty's intentions to the Sheriffs or myself in a letter to that purpose. I am" etc.

174⁵/₈, March 8th. Walter Etherington to Lord Townshend. "Principal Secretary of State."

The writer has brought Lieut. Cunningham to make affidavit against Francis Hamond, Governor of Landguard Fort, and Mathew Draper his Deputy, who put him under arrest for 24 hours for drinking the health of the Duke of Marlborough on the 31st of December last.

[1716, July.] Proposed alterations in the Cabinet. In French and undated. The Duke of Devonshire to be President of the Council with the salary of 3500 pounds sterling a year which ought to be drawn in part from the pension of the Duke of Argyle and in part from the profits of the Privy Seal which Lord Sunderland is willing to surrender for this purpose.

Lord Sunderland to be Keeper of the Privy Seal without Salary and to have sole charge as Vice Treasurer of Ireland.

The Duke of Kent to be Lord Steward of the Household [Grand Maitre] in the place of the Duke of Devonshire.

The Duke of Kingston to be Master of the Horse [Grand Ecuyer].

Mr. [Francis] Negus to be Master of the Horse under the Duke of Kingston.

Mr. [Conyers] Darcy to be Master of the Buckhounds.

The Duke of Montrose to be Lord Clerk Register [Greffier] to Scotland, in the place of Lord Isla.

Lord Tankerville to be a Lord in Waiting [Seigneur de la chambre du Roy] in the place of the Duke of Kent.

Lord Leicester to be a Lord in Waiting in the place of Lord Orrery.

Lord Haversham to be Keeper of the King's Forests south of Trent, in the place of Lord Tankerville.

Lord Cobham to be Constable of Windsor Castle, in the place of the Duke of Kent.

1716, July 22nd. A letter to Mons^r d'Ibberville from the Conseil de Marine "with a Memorial on the Insults they say the English Fishermen on the Coasts of France and England do the French Fishermen on the afores^d Coasts." In French. 1 page.

1716, Nov. 11th. Lord Sunderland to Lord Townshend. Dated at Gohre in Holland and unaddressed.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

"My Lord—My giving your Ld^p this trouble, is occasion'd by M^r Stanhop's having shewn me, a letter he has writt to you, by the King's express Command, upon the subject of the French Treaty, and the delays in the signing of it. Your Lord^p may remember that at the beginning of this negotiation with France I was very much against it, apprehending it was an artifice onely of the French Party in Holland, to avoid the Treaty with the Emperour, and to sow disunion among the Allies, however when I left England, I saw plainly the Torrent was for carrying on the negotiation; I knew no more till I came hither of this affair, butt what I had from common news, and reports in the Low Countries, and therefore upon the same generall notion, I writt my opinion to your Ld^p in generall still to the same effect, whilst I was at Aix. Butt upon my arrivall here, and M^r Secretary Stanhop's having acquainted me with the Treaty itself, and every step that had been taken in it; I was entirely convinc'd that no negotiation had ever been managed with more pains and prudence, nor no Treaty ever brought to a Conclusion more glorious, nor more advantageous to the King and England; especially under the circumstances Europe is like to be in, by these proceedings of the Czar, the King of Prussia, &c. which very probably may make France, take a pretence from these delays, to avoid signing at last, and what is more yett is, that the occasions of this delay, leave it in the power of France to say it is not their fault. I am sincerely concern'd at any thing that may be prejudiciall to the King's service, and particularly at any thing that happens that may nott rightly be understood among those in his service, that allways have, and allways ought to act cordially together; and that is the single reason why I say any thing upon so unpleasant a subject. I must therefore be so plain as to tell you that I never saw the King resent any thing so much as this affair, in which he thinks, nott only M^r Secretary Stanhope butt himself nott well us'd; and indeed I think, it wants to be explain'd; I must nott omitt too acquainting your Ld^p that the King is very much surpris'd at the strange notion that seems at present to prevail, as if the Parliament was not to concern themselves in any thing that happens in these parts of the world, which he looks upon, nott onely as exposing him to all kind of affronts, but even to ruine; and indeed this notion is nothing butt the old Tory one, that England can subsist by itself, whatever becomes of the rest of Europe, which has been so iustly exploded by the Wigs, ever since the Revolution. I am very sensible, that upon many accounts it might have been more prudent in me nott to have mention'd these things, butt the King's service, and the supporting the right interest, and the union of those in his service depend so much upon these things being rightly understood, that I could nott have answer'd it to my self, if I had nott troubled you a[bout] this,—you will take it is, I am sure [mos]t sincerely meant, by him that is with [the] greatest truth and respect—My Lord—y^r Ld^p's—Most obedient humble servant

"SUNDERLAND."

[1716.] "Copy of the K^s lett^r to the Prince [of Wales] containing the restrictions laid upon him in his Regency." [In French. 6½ pp.]

1716. [Draft] Letters from Lord Townshend to [the Pensionary] M^r Secretary Stanhope, Horatio Walpole, &c., from Jan^y 10th, 1716 to Dec^r 11th 1716. [In a card board cover.]

The latest of these letters is addressed to Secretary Stanhope and encloses a letter in French, for him to hand to the King, in which Lord Townshend accepts his dismissal and declines the Lord Lieutenantship of Ireland.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSA.

1716-1717. "Copies of letters relating to the change of Ministry in 1716-1717, from Lord Townshend, Mr. Walpole, &c." In book form. On the cover is the following memorandum:—"I know this to be in the handwriting of the Rev^d Tho^s Patrick Young who was a Prebendary of Westminster and Rector of North Church Herts—TOWNSHEND & LEICESTER—April 1808."

1716-1724. A packet of ten letters described on their cover as "Curious letters from Lord Bolingbroke to Lords Townshend & Harcourt—belonging to the Marquis Townshend."

These letters have been printed by Archdeacon Coxe in his Memoirs of Sir Robert Walpole.

1. The first is undated, unsigned, and unaddressed, and is apparently in a Secretary's handwriting. 1½ pp.

2. "Paris le 16 Mars 1716." In French. Unsigned and unaddressed. 1 p.

3. "Paris Dec: the 17th 1723." Probably to Lord Harcourt. Unaddressed. 4 pp.

4. "Paris Dec: the 28th 1723." Unsigned and unaddressed. Endorsed, "From Lord Bolingbroke to L^d Harcourt." 6½ pp.

5. "Dec. 29 1723." Unsigned and unaddressed. In the same handwriting as the 1st letter. 3 pp.

6. "Paris Dec: the 29th 1723." Address obliterated. Signed "B." Lord Bolingbroke to Lord Townshend? 2 pp.

7 and 8. "30 Dec 1723." Unsigned and unaddressed, with cipher names and cipher figures. Lord Bolingbroke to Lord Harcourt. It is accompanied by a deciphered rendering in the same handwriting as the letters 1 and 5. 2 pp.

9. "Jan. 12, 1724." Unsigned and unaddressed. In cipher. 8½ pp.

10. "Feb. 3, 1724." Unsigned and unaddressed. In cipher. 6 pp.

1717, April 9th. General Stanhope, Secretary of State, to Lord Townshend. Dated at the Cockpitt.

"My lord—the King judging it for his service to dispense with your lordship's service as lord lieut^t of Ireland I am commanded to signifye his Ma^{ties} pleasure to your lordship upon it, his Ma^{ty} is sorry that many circumstances render this alteration necessary at present he commands me to assure your lordship that he will never forget your past services and you'l give me leave to say that I shall be very gladd of an occation of writing to your lordship upon a more agreeable subject as being with great respect—my lord—your lordship's most humble and most obedient servant

"JAMES STANHOPE."

[1720.] The extract of a Project sent by Count Bernsdorf to Count Zinzendorf. [Undated.]

"The disgusted Whiggs have endeavoured to convince his Majesty that the Cabal designe to alter the Constitution, to destroy the present Establishment and the Quadruple Alliance, which was formed for the Security of both, but it seems now they intend that Allians[e] only to secure themselves in their Places, the better to enable them to run the Nation into an Aristocracy as appears by the Frame of the South Sea Bill.

"That the Cabal designe to amuse his Majesty with a Peace in the South in the same Manner as they have done that of the North, but in the end will order it so as to establish themselves, and be able for the future to give Laws to the King and his Son, and even to remove him when they shall think Proper.

"That they will be condescending to France and Spain the better to secure the Intrest of those two Crowns by whose Power they intend to keep the Czar from a Peace in the North till such time as they can be in a Condition to enable him to disturbe the Peace of the Empire.

"The disgusted Party offer to countermine the designs of the Caball after [sic] the following method.

"To give good Termes to Spain by which means they hope to secure the South Sea Trade the better to enable that Company to furnish his Majesty with two or three Millions independent of Parliament if his affairs abroad should require it.

"By this means his Majesty may bring the Czar and other Northern Princes to be at his Devotion and keep them in his Intrest.

"To secure the Peace of the North and the Empire for the future they propose to advance Money to King Augustus to buye off the Crown Generall and some other considerable Palatines in order to make Poland Hereditary by which means they would also be able to keep the Power of France within bounds.

"That it would be more for the Intrest of his Majesty and the Nation to make an Addition to his German Dominions by the Purchase of some Country contiguous to his present Teritories which would enable him to hold the Ballance between the Northern Powers better then by sending a Fleet yearly to the Baltick which gives umbrage to the People.

"France will undertake no new Warr during this Minority, consequently his Majesty in conjunction with his Imperial Majesty may the easier put these Scheams in execution.

"As the present Cabal is made up of two Classes of Men entirely resigned to the will and direction of two or three at most, and as the one class are men of birth but no experience all miscarriages may be laid at their dore, and the lat[t]er being men of some experience but no birth there can be no difficulty to bring them to Justice to make an attonement to the People, that when their indirect practices and miscarriages are laid open it is presumed none either at home or abroad will appear in their favour.

"It is conceived his Majesty must not delay long to give attention to this Scheme because to defer it to the next Sessions will be dangerous.

"Your Excellency may see that it is the opinion of most of our friends as well as our owne that there is a necessity to chaing[e], and as the persons that offer this project are of consequence, and promise sincerely to stand by his Majesty he may safely give into them. It is true the regent may be dubious, but as he has Views of his owne he will at least stand neuter, however I am certain that his Majesty will be much better in the hands of these new projectors then where he is at present.

"The King must dissemble and take no notice of their proceedings towards us which will give us the better oportunity to provide ourselves with honest men, probably the measurs that was formed against us may be improved to our advantage. This somer will in all likelihood be spent in Treaties (you know our mouthe are shutt up,) therefore it would be very proper to hasten an Imperial Minister here to observe their motions, and to find out what Clandestin measurs may be carried on with France which if not timely discovered may tend to the prejudice of both our Mastiers, you are sencible how dangerous 'tis to trust Ministers abandoned to their pleasurs for such have more then once been corrupted by France.

"Thank God we have persons that will countorpoysse and assist the King to disapoynt them.

"Instead of performing their promise to push forwards and to assist the King to cutt off[f] all dependance they relent, and in all likelihood will spend eight monthes time doing that which might be done in three, however I hope their designs will be brought to light and the

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

eyes of the People will be opened, which will give the King an opportunity to part with them with honour and Reputation to himself, by substituting the following persons :

Sr Peter King Lord Keeper
Duke of Somersett Master of the Horse
Duke of Devonshire Groom of the Stole
Duke of Rutland Master of the Househould
Duke of Chandois first Lord of the Treasury or in case he refuses L^d Pembrook
Lord Orford in his former Place
Lord Couper President of the Councill
Lord Stanhop[e] Privy Seale or Generall of the Horse
Mr Methwin Secretary of State
Lord Carlton Secretary of State
Lord Sunderland L^d Livetenant of Ireland
Lord Townshend in Lord Linco[1]n's place
Mr Walpole Chancelor of the Exchequer
Duke of Argile may keep his place or cho[ose] to be Generall of the Foot.

There will be some left for 5 or 6 of the leading county Tories to come in for the rest of the places and in case they refuse the other country gentlemen of good esteame and estates, that will accept of the King's Favours.

"D. C. [DAVID CRAWFORD?]"

1720-1729. Miscellanies of Foreign Correspondence from the 14th Nov^r 1720 to 8th Nov^r 1729. In a cardboard cover.

[After 1720]. "List of the Attendance of the R^{ht} Hon^{ble} the late Earl of Stanhope on his Journey, and during his Residing at Hannover." [Undated 3½ pp.]

1730, Jan. 4th. Lord Irwin to George Treby. Dated "Whensday Morning" and enclosed in the next. Endorsed "L^d Irwin to Secry at War in his of 6 Jan."

The writer states that he is sending papers to justify the action of Quartermaster Thompson, and he concludes: "I had waited on you my self but am not yet able to walke. I'm S^r—Your verry humble and obediant Servant.

"IRWIN."

[P.S.] "the Quarter Master is a relation of M^r Methuen's and I doe assure you of as good a charrecter as any young fellow in the Kings serviss. I send you likewise M^r Taylor's letter desiring such a force which I beg you will not loose."

1730, Jan. 6th. George Treby to the R^t Hon^{ble} James Craggs. From Whitehall. Endorsed "Secretary at War—with an acc^t of what was done by L^d Irwin's Dragoons in assisting the Custome Officers at Weymouth."

1730, Feb. 9th. Lord Townshend to Colonel William Stanhope, afterwards Earl of Harrington. From Whitehall. "Sir—The King having been pleas'd to honour me with the Seals I can with great truth assure you that it is a very great mortification to me to find my self under a necessity of beginning our correspondence by condoleing with you on the death of Lord Stanhope. You have lost in him a very kind and sincere friend and relation, and the King an able and faithfull servant at a juncture when he had great occasion for his help and assistance. I heartily

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
—

wish I could say anything to you upon this melancholy occasion that might give you ease and relief under your present affliction, for tho' I have not the happiness of being personally acquainted with you, yet your character and the services you have done the King in the stations you are in are so well known to me, that I can without flattery assure you that you may upon all occasions command my best services. It is a great addition to our present misfortune that Mr Craggs is fall'n ill of the small pox and I fear is in some danger. I have not seen your last letters; I am told they are before the King from whom I have nothing in particular at present in command for you, but believe I shall dispatch a messenger to you in a few days. I have therefore now nothing further to add but only to lett you know that His Ma^{ty} is resolv'd to pursue the same measures and to support steadily all the engagements he is entred into, and you may assure both the Marq^s Scotti and Mons^r Grimaldi that His Ma^{ty} will persevere in the same favourable intentions towards his Catholick Ma^{ty} and wishes most earnestly to see a firm and lasting friendship and correspondence settled between the two crowns. I am with the greatest respect etc.

"TOWNSHEND."

1721, Feb. 14th. Copy of a letter from the Emperor Charles VI. to King George I. Dated at Vienna. In German. 8 pp.

1721, March 1st th. Copy of a letter from King George I. to the Emperor Charles VI. In German. 10 pp.

1721, March 15th. Bill of extraordinary expenses of Robert Jackson, Envoy to Sweden. From December 25th 1720 to March 25th 1721. Dated at Stockholm.

The amount claimed is £99 of which £30 is for postage.

Minuted at foot "Whitehall, 6 June 1721—I allow this Bill.

"TOWNSHEND."

1721, April 1st. Translation of Mr Renard's Letter to my Lord Townshend. Dated at Amsterdam. 3 pp.

The writer forwards a list of the effects of the late Directors of the South Sea Company that he has seized as his Majesty's Agent, viz. :— In the hands of George Clifford & Company 243,540 Florins in divers bonds upon Silesia, and a year's interest thereon at 8 per cent., due to Sir Theodore Jansen, Sir Lambert Blackwell, Charles Joye, Robert Knight, Richard Horsey, and John Gore . . . Andrew Pels and Company declare that Sir Theodore Janssen has transferred to them 10,000^{li} South Sea Stock which they are to restore him . . . Henry Termitten declares that Sir Theodore Janssen has transferred for his account to Mr Christopher Van Brants 4,400^{li} South Sea Stock . . . Mark Cocky declares that Sir Theodore Janssen has transferred to him 9000^{li} South Sea Stock, and 3000^{li} more of the said Stock, for his account, to Nicholas Dirckens; but that Sir Janssen has laid hold of 103,900 Florins belonging to him, Mark Cocky, as a deposit for the said Stock.

" . . . here is an instance of what passes in relation to the Quarantaine of Ships that come from France. A French ship from Bayonne bound for Amsterdam put into Ireland and there received on board five men, the King's subjects, who were to search this ship and remain on board during the Quarantaine; but the French Captain being unwilling to wait so long, would have sent the Irish on shore, where their countrymen refused to admitt them; so that these five men were obliged to re-embark in the French vessel, which brought them hither and here they landed without performing any Quarantaine. These poor people came to me to help them to a passage home. I sent them to the Resident Dayrolle at the Hague, to be examined.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

"One sees by this instance that Quarantaine is better observed in Great Britain than here."

1721, May 19th. "Le Rev^{de} Mons^r de Choisy" to Lord Townsend. Addressed "A Monseigneur—Monseigneur le Comte de Townsend premier Secrétaire d'Estat, at his house in Albemarle Street, near Picadilly."

"Monseigneur—Comme depuis longtempz, les pauvres Ministres Refugez n'ont rien reçu des trois années, et un mois de pension, qui nous sont maintenant dûes pour ce regne; et comme cela est cause qu'enfin, avec une santé fort mauvaise, je suis deplus dans un tres pressant besoin, manquant mesme des choses les plus necessaires pour la vie; vous me permettez, Monseigneur, de vous le représenter par cette lettre, espérant que vous aurez quelque compassion d'un Ministre de l'Evangile qui bier que dans un Royaume Protestant, se voit néanmoins réduit à un estat si déplorable, je vous en seray extrêmement obligé, et en attendant, je demeure, avec tout le respect possible,—Monseigneur—Vostre très humble, et très obéissant serviteur

"DE CHOISY."

"Le 19^{me} de May, 1721,
At the Seven Stars in King Street, Covent Garden."

1721, July 22nd. George Tilson to the same. Dated at Whitehall and unsigned.

A memorandum about some despatches. It concludes:—"I sent your Lo^p last night a draught to the Archbishop of Cambray [Fenelon] Perhaps there may be too much flourish in it but to a French man I thought something of that sort not amiss."

1721, Sept. 16th. The same to the same. Dated at Whitehall.

"... Lord Cartaret still finds more convincing reasons to believe the business of the partition real; I had a short letter from M^r de St Saphorin of the 10th wherein he says nothing but that the Germans are passive in the business of making new grandees which he looks on as an ill sign for the congress, and a mark of the prevalency of the Spaniards. Lord Whitworth . . . thinks he has found great benefit by the baths; he is preparing to return to the Hague and from thence to Berlin. . . ."

1721, Sept. 25th. The Archbishop of Canterbury (D^r Wake) to Lord Townsend. Signed "W. Cant."

Enclosing two papers in Latin reporting the Evangelical Conference held at Ratisbon on the 16th of the previous month, and relating to the affairs of the Protestants and the reformed religion in Germany.

The Archbishop begs Lord Townshend and Lord Sunderland to consider these papers; and, if they shall judge proper, mention the matter to the King, and obtain his favour on behalf of the Reformed. He hopes to be at Lambeth at the end of the week for the whole winter, and will then enquire what is thought fit to be done in this matter, so that he may return some answer to our friends abroad.

1721 to 1730. Copies and drafts of Lord Townshend's depatches from 9th Feby 17²¹ to 12th May 1730. In cardboard cover.

[1722?] An undated Address to the King "from the Protestant Dissenting Ministers of the three denominations in and about the Citie: of London and Westminster."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

This address expresses the loyalty of the Dissenters and their hopes for the full detection of traitorous designs of the King's Enemies.

1722, Oct. 31st. Count Wallenrodt to Lord Townshend. In French. Dated in London and unaddressed.

The writer reminds his Lordship of his promises to Mr Dayrolles at the Hague about an arrangement with the House of Nassau, and also to send orders to Mr [James] Scot at Berlin as to the Conferences set on foot in favour of the poor Protestants of Poland.

1723, March 8th. Copy of the King's letter to the Duke of Orleans.

"Mon Frère et Cousin, Les égards que J'ay pour les contesses de Holderness et Deguenfeld, m'obligent de m'intéresser auprès de vous en leur faveur. Je vous prie de permettre que le Chevalier Schaub ait l'honneur de vous représenter l'affaire, qui les regarde, à l'occasion de laquelle Je me flatte, que vous voudrez bien, à ma recommandation, leur témoigner quelque bienveillance. C'est en quoy vous me ferez un sensible plaisir, et Je vous assure, que Je n'en auray pas moins, de pouvoir vous en marquer ma reconnaissance, et l'attachement sincère, avec le quel Je suis,

"Mon Frere et Cousin
Votre bien bon Frère et Cousin

"À St James le 8^e de Mars 1723

"À Mon Frère e[t] Cousin le Duc d'Orléans."

"GEORGE R."

1723, May 15th. Copy of a letter from the Duke of Modena to Mons^r Riva. In Italian, and partly in cipher numbers. 7 pp.

1723. A packet of letters which have been printed by Archdeacon Coxe in his "Memoirs of Sir Robert Walpole." (Vol. II. p. 294 et seq.)

1723, Oct. 1st. Whitehall. Robert Walpole to Lord Townshend Unsigned. 12 pp.

1723, Oct. 11th. Whitehall. The same to the same. "Private." 4 pp.

1723, Oct. 18th. Whitehall. The same to the same. "Private." 6½ pp.

1723, Oct. 26th. Houghton. The same to the same. 3 pp.

1723, Nov. 1st. Claremont. Duke of Newcastle to the same. 10 pp.

1723, Nov. ^{19th}/_{30th}. Whitehall. Robert Walpole to the same.

Enclosing a memorandum endorsed "Bishop of London's paper relating to the Deanery of Rochester."

1723-1727. A bundle of despatches (in a cardboard cover) selected and copied by Archdeacon Coxe.

These despatches are dated and addressed as follows :—

1723, Sept. 24th. N. S. Lord Townshend to Mr. Secretary Walpole. From Hanover. "Private." 11 pp.

1723, ^{Oct. 21st}/_{Nov. 1st}. Horatio Walpole to Lord Townshend. From Paris.

18½ pp. The latter part of this letter is dated ^{Oct. 23}/_{Nov. 3}, 1723.

Same date. The same to the same. From Paris. 14½ pp. foolscap.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1723, Nov. 8th, 9th, and 10th, N.S. The same to the same. From Paris. 13½ pp.

1723, Nov. $\frac{9\text{th}}{20\text{th}}$. The same to the same. From Paris. 26½ pp.

1723, Nov. $\frac{11\text{th}}{22\text{nd}}$. The same to the same. Unsigned and unaddressed. Mostly in cipher numbers which are deciphered between the lines. About the marriage of the Countess of Platen's daughter. 1 p.

1723, Nov. $\frac{16\text{th } 18\text{th}}{27\text{th } 29\text{th}}$. The same to the same. Unsigned and unaddressed. A cipher letter on the same subject as the last. 1 p.

1723, Nov. 27th. Lord Townshend to Horatio Walpole. Unsigned draft.

1723, Nov. —. Draft of "Instructions [from the King] sent to Mr. Secretary Walpole for Mr. Horatio Walpole relating to the marriage of the Countess of Platen's daughter. Referred to in Mr Secretary Walpole's private letter of the 19th of Novemb^r 1723."

1723, Dec. 1st. Horatio Walpole to Lord Townshend. From Paris. "Private." 7 pp.

Same date. The same to the same. From Paris. 15½ pp.

1723, Dec. 8th. The same. "To the R^t Hon^{ble} Robert Walpole Esqr." From Paris. Copy. 3½ pp.

1723, Dec. 10th, N.S. The same to George Tilson. From Paris. Unaddressed, partly in cipher. 2 pp.

Same date. The same to Lord Townshend. From Paris. 2 pp.

1723, Dec. 15th, N. S. The same to Robert Walpole. From Paris. 16½ pp.

1723, Dec. $\frac{11\text{th}}{22\text{nd}}$. The same to the same. From Paris. 5½ pp.

1723, Jan. 29th, Lord Townshend to Horatio Walpole. Draft. 2½ pp.

1724, Sept. 27th. Horatio Walpole to George Tilson. Unaddressed. Dated at Fontainebleau. Endorsed "Rec^d by Stone [the messenger] 21 [Sept. O. S]." 2 pp.

1725, April 21st. The same to Lord Townshend. From Paris. 2 pp.

1725, July 20th. Lord Townshend to Stephen Poyntz. From Pyrmont. "Very private and to yourself alone." Copy 4 pp.

1725, Augt. $\frac{16\text{th}}{27\text{th}}$. The same to Horatio Walpole. From Hanover. "Very private." Copy. 18½ pp.

1725, $\frac{\text{Augt. } 30\text{th}}{\text{Sept. } 10\text{th}}$. The same to Horatio Walpole. From Fontainebleau. "Very private." , 19 pp.

1726, March 19th. Count de la Lippe Schaumbourg to George Tilson. From Manheim. In French. Unaddressed. 1 p.

1726, April 10th. Horatio Walpole to George Tilson. From Paris. Unaddressed. 1 p.

1726, May 6th, N. S. The same to the same. From Paris. Unaddressed. 4 pp.

1726, July 12th. Lord Townshend to Stephen Poyntz. From Whitehall. Unaddressed. "Very private and to yourself alone." Copy. 4 pp.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
—

1726, August 25th. The same to Horatio Walpole. From Whitehall. Draft. $5\frac{1}{2}$ pp.

1726, Augt. 27th. The same to the same. "Private." Draft. $1\frac{1}{2}$ pp.

1726, Sept. 1st. Horatio Walpole to Stephen Poyntz. From Fontainebleau. Copy sent "with Mr. Walpole's of the 2 Sept^r 1726." 4 pp.

1726, Sept. 2nd. The same to George Tilson. From Fontainebleau. Unaddressed. 3 pp.

1726⁴ $\frac{\text{Jan. 25th}}{\text{Feb. 5th}}$ to $\frac{\text{Sept. 23rd}}{\text{Oct. 4th}}$ 1726. Extracts from Mr. Stanhope's letters. [9 sheets foolscap.]

1726, Dec. 11th. Horatio Walpole to George Tilson. Unaddressed. 1 p. The writer will set out for Calais to-morrow.

1726, — Dec. Projet des propositions à faire à l'Empereur et à l'Espagne. Draft in French. $3\frac{1}{4}$ sheets.

1727, Jan 11th, N. S. Thomas Robinson to George Tilson. From Paris. $2\frac{1}{2}$ pp.

1727, Jan. 13th. Copy of the letter of Cardinal de Fleury to Mr. Walpole. In French. $3\frac{1}{4}$ pp.

1727, Feb. 15th. Thomas Robinson to George Tilson. From Paris. 1 p.

1727, March 12th, N.S. Horatio Walpole to the same. From Paris. Unaddressed. 3 pp.

1727, March $\frac{2\text{nd}}{13\text{th}}$. The same to the same. From Paris. Unaddressed. 2 pp.

1727, March $\frac{4\text{th}}{15\text{th}}$. The same to the same. From Paris. 1 p.

1727, March $\frac{16\text{th}}{27\text{th}}$. The same to the same. From Paris. 2 pp.

1727, April 3rd. A copy of Mr. Walpole's letter to Mr. Finch. From Paris. Enclosed in the next. 3 pp.

1727, April 6th. Horatio Walpole to George Tilson. From Paris. Unaddressed. 3 pp.

1727, April 15th. Lord Townshend to Horatio Walpole. Unsigned draft. "Very private."

"The King expects France to use its utmost efforts against the Emperor, and is very little concerned for their making any vigorous attack upon Spain, there being no fear of the Spaniards taking Gibraltar which is plentifully supplied with men and necessities and our strength at sea being so much superior to theirs.—" 3 pp.

1727, April 22nd. Copy of the reply of Cardinal de Fleury to Mr. Walpole. From Versailles. In French. $1\frac{1}{4}$ pp.

1727, April 28th, N.S. Extract of Mr. Walpole's letter to the Duke of Newcastle. From Paris. 7 pp.

1727, April 30th. Horatio Walpole to George Tilson. From Paris. Unaddressed. 2 pp.

1727, May $\frac{4\text{th}}{15\text{th}}$. The same to the same. From Paris. Unaddressed. 5 pp.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1727, May 5th, N.S. The same to William Finch. From Paris. Copy. 2 pp.

1727, May 9th, N.S. The same to the Duke of Newcastle. From Paris. "Private" copy. 5 pp.

Same date. The same to George Tilson. From Paris. Unaddressed. 2 pp.

1727, May 11th. The same to the same. From Paris. 3 pp.

1727, May —. George Tilson to Horatio Walpole. "Draft of letter in reply to Mr. Walpole's letter to the Duke of Newcastle of May 9th."

1727, May ^{12th}_{23rd}. Copy of a letter from Messrs Walpole and Armstrong to the Duke of Newcastle. From Paris. 5½ pp.

1727, May 24th. Horatio Walpole to George Tilson. From Paris. 2 pp.

1727, May 27th. Lord Townshend to Horatio Walpole. From Whitehall. "Private." Draft. 7 pp.

1727, May 28th. Horatio Walpole to George Tilson. From Paris. 5 pp.

Same date. The same to the Duke of Newcastle. From Paris. [3 pp.] Enclosing preliminary articles [12 articles in Latin] for a general peace in Europe.

1727, May 30th, N. S. The same to the same. From Paris. Copy. 12 pp.

1727, June 1st. The same to George Tilson. From Paris. Unaddressed. 1 p.

1727, June 4th. The same to the same. From Paris. Unaddressed. 1½ pp.

1727, June 8th. The same to the same. From Paris. Unaddressed. 1½ pp.

1727, June 16th. The same to William Finch. From Paris. 2½ pp.

1727, June 17th. The same to Lord Townshend. From Paris. "Private." [5 pp.] Enclosing advices from the camp before Gibraltar which state that the siege has been turned into a blockade.

Same date. The same to the same. From Paris. "Very private." [4 pp.] Enclosing a "Copy of the separate and secret article of the particular peace between France and Spain concluded at Buenretiros March 23, N. S. 1721."

Same date. The same to the same. From Paris. [6 pp.] Enclosing a copy of a letter, in French, from Cardinal de Fleury, dated at Versailles June 14th, 1727.

1727, June 20th, N. S. The same to George Tilson. From Paris. 1½ pp.

1727, June 22nd. The same to the same. From Paris. Unaddressed. 2 pp.

Same date. The same to Lord Townshend. From Paris [6½ pp.] Enclosing:—

1. Copy of a letter, in French, from Mons^r Vandermeer to Mons^r Boreel; dated at Madrid, June 9th, 1727. 4½ pp.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

2. Copy of a letter, in French, from the Duke de Richelieu to Horatio Walpole; dated, at Vienna, June 14th, 1727, N. S. 2 pp.

3. Copy of a letter, in French, from Mons^r de Morville to Horatio Walpole; dated, at Versailles, June 21st, 1727, N.S. 1 p.

4. Copy of a letter, in French, from Horatio Walpole to Mons^r Van de Meer; dated, at Paris, June 22nd, 1727.

Same date. The same to the same. From Paris. "Private." [2 pp.] Enclosing copy of a letter, in French, from Cardinal de Fleury to Horatio Walpole, and a copy of a project with respect to the Princes of Germany.

1727, July 16th. Thomas Robinson to George Tilson. From Paris. 1 p.

1727, July 26th. Horatio Walpole to the same. From Paris. Unaddressed. 4 pp.

1727, ^{July 22nd}_{Augt. 2nd}. Cardinal de Fleury to Horatio Walpole. From Versailles. In French. 1½ pp.

1727, Augt. 9th. Horatio Walpole to George Tilson. From Paris. 3 pp.

1797, Aug. 21st. Lord Townshend to Horatio Walpole. From Whitehall. "Very private." 3 pp.

1727, Sept. 3rd. Horatio Walpole to George Tilson. From Paris. Unaddressed. [1 p.] Enclosing copy of a letter, in French, from Mons^r Kli——n to Mons^r G[edda?]; dated, at Berlin, August 20th, 1727.

1727, Sept. 6th. N. S. The same to the same. From Paris. Unaddressed. "Part in the Old Cypher." 1½ pp.

1727, Sept. 30th. N. S. The same to the Duke of Newcastle. From Fontainebleau. "Very private." Describing the writer's interviews and correspondence with the Sicilian Priests who had been the King of Spain's advisers, and what he had heard from them about the secret articles of the Treaty of Vienna. Copy. 8 pp.

Enclosure (1.) "Translation of the answer from the Sicilian Abbots to Mr. Walpole." Undated. 1½ p.

Enclosure (2.) "Translation of a Note of 26 Sept^r 1727 from the Sicilian Abbots to Mr. Walpole." 4 lines.

1727, Oct. 2nd. Horatio Walpole to William Finch. From Fontainebleau. [Copy 3½ pp.] Enclosed in the next.

1727, Oct. 3rd. The same to George Tilson. From Fontainebleau. 2 pp.

1727, Oct. 12th. George Tilson to Horatio Walpole. From Whitehall. Unsigned and unaddressed. [Draft 4½ pp.]

Enclosure (1.) Copy of a letter, in French, from Baron Dehn to the Duke of Wolfenbuttel; dated, at Vienna, Sept. 24th 1727, with a "Postscriptum Secretum." 1½ pp.

Enclosure (2.) Extract from a letter, in French, from Schleunitz to Baron Dehn; dated at Brunswick, October 3rd 1727. 2 pp.

Enclosure (3.) Draft of letter, in French, from Lord Townshend to Prince Keurakin; dated, at Whitehall, Oct. 12th 1727, and offering condolences on the death of the Prince's father. 2 pp.

1727, Oct. 21st. Horatio Walpole to George Tilson. From Fontainebleau. Unaddressed. 4 pp.

1727, Oct. 31st. The same to the same. From Fontainebleau.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Unaddressed. A few lines to say that the letter and its enclosures of Oct. 12th never came to hand.

1727, Oct. —. Daniel Preveran to the same. Undated. The writer forwarded the packets of letters on the 12th with several other letters in a basket directed to Mr Walpole, and will not fail to write to him by the next post to know if he received it.

1727, Nov. 3rd. Horatio Walpole to Benjamin Keene. From Fontainebleau. In French. Copy. 15½ pp.

1727, Nov. 4th. The same to George Tilson. From Fontainebleau. Unaddressed. 4 pp.

1727, Dec. 13th. Lord Townshend to Horatio Walpole. From Whitehall. Unsigned draft. 4½ pp.

1727, Dec. 25th. Horatio Walpole to George Tilson. From Paris. Unaddressed. 2 pp.

1725⁴. Jan. ^{12th}/_{23rd}. Lord Marchmont and Charles Whitworth to Lord Townshend. Dated at Cambray and unaddressed. "Private. My Lord Your Lordship may be sure that we shall not make the least step in the important affairs which are now depending, till we have His Majesty's further instructions.

"When Mr. Rondeau was in England, having occasion to speak to your Lordship concerning the manufacture of cambric, which is in a great measure carried on by Protestants at the town of St Quentin; your Lordship thought it might be of great advantage to Great Britain if such a manufacture could be set up in it and brought to bear.

"Mr. Rondeau, since he came over, has been at St Quentin, and taken pains to be informed how that matter can be brought about. Your Lordship will see by the inclosed project how that can be done, and will judge if it may be advantageous to Great Britain, and what may be further adviseable to be done in it.

"We have sent this by Mr Smith the messenger to Calais. We are my Lord with the greatest respect etc.

"MARCHMONT,
"C. WHITWORTH."

[1725.] An undated proposal for the revival of the Order of the Knights of the Bath, with a list of the proposed Knights, and with marginal notes in the handwriting of John Anstie, Garter King of Arms. 4 pp.

This scheme was carried out and the first Knights of the revived Order were installed on June 17th 1725.

1725. Correspondence of Horatio Walpole whilst British Minister in Paris in this year. Bound in four volumes folio.

1725, Feb. 8th. Copy of His Majesty's letter to the Duke of Bourbon, and the Duke of Bourbon's Answer, 13th March, 1726, N.S.

"Mon Cousin, L'Affection que J'ay avec beaucoup de raison pour le Duc de Devonshire President de mon Conseil m'engage à recommander à votre protection un procès qu'il a au conseil de mon bon frère le Roy Très Chrétien pour le succession du feu Comte de Gallway. Sa cause me paroît si juste que Je me persuade que vous ne trouverés nulle difficulté à la favoriser, dont Je vous auray une obligation toute particulière. Je suis avec l'estime et l'affection les plus sincères,

Mon Cousin

"À St James le 8^e

Fevrier 1725.

"À Mon Cousin

le Duc le Bourbon."

Votre bon Cousin,
"GEORGE R."

[The Answer of the Duke of Bourbon :—]

“ Sire,

J'ay receu la lettre que Votre Mat^e m'a fait l'honneur de m'écrire en faveur de Mons^r le Duc de Devonshire. J'ay donné ordre qu'on instruisse exactement l'affaire qui l'intéresse, et lorsqu'elle sera en état d'être rapportée au Roy j'y donnerai l'attention la plus particulière, et je serai ravi de pouvoir faire connoître en cette occasion à Votre Maj^{te} la disposition où je serai toujours de lui marquer l'attachement respectueux avec lequel Je suis

“ Sire,

“ À Versailles le 13^e

Mars 1726.

“ Au Roy de la Grande Bretagne.”

De Votre Maj^{te} [votre]

Très humble et très

Obéissant Serviteur ”

[BOURBON.]

1726, March 4th. Copy of Admiralty orders to Admiral Hosier, Vice Admiral of the Blue Squadron of his Mat^e's Ships employed and to be employed in the West Indies, to take sink burn or otherwise destroy any Ships of War, or Privateers, or Merchant Ships or Vessels, belonging to the King of Spain or his subjects, the Spaniards having acted hostilities against His Majesty's Subjects at Gibraltar.

Signed by, John Cockburne, William Chetwynd, [Sir] John Norris, and J[osiah] Burchett.

1726, March 28th. Copy of a letter from the King to the Governor of Barbadoes.

Enjoining the latter to give every assistance in his power to Admiral Hosier.

Given at St James's, signed by the King and countersigned by the Duke of Newcastle.

“ Memd^m a like letter was wrote to the Duke of Portland and to the Governor of the Leeward Islands. Dated ut supra.”

1726, May 4th. Copy of His Majesty's Letter to the Duke of Bourbon.

Mon Cousin, La memoire que Je conserve du mérite du feu Comte de Stanhope et des services qu'il m'a rendu, particulièrement en ayant contribué à l'établissement de l'Union intime dans laquelle Je suis avec mon bon Frère le Roy très Chrétien m'engage à vous recommander les intérêts de sa famille. Une grande partie de l'héritage qu'il laissa à ses orphelins consistoit en une somme de Cent Quarante Trois Mille Livres en Billets de Banque convertis ensuite en nouveau Comte de Banque [sic], qui furent remis[es] entre les mains du feu Cardinal du Bois à dessein de distinguer cette affaire des autres de même nature, mais les papiers s'étant perdus entre les mains du Cardinal, il est arrivé que ce qu'on faisoit pour y donner un tour favorable l'a enveloppée dans des difficultés, lesquelles si on peut lever par votre interposition Je vous en auray beaucoup d'obligation. Je suis très sincèrement, de May 1726.

“ À St James le 4^e

“ À Mon Cousin

le Duc de Bourbon.”

Mon Cousin

Votre bon Cousin

“ GEORGE R.”

1726, June 12th. F. c. d. S. M. [Marshal Sandroski ?] to—. Un-addressed. A letter in French enclosed in two covers: the inner one addressed to “ Monsieur le Comte de Sandroski Mareschal des Camps et armées de S[a] M[ajesté] C[atholique] et Commandant la Cavalerie

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

à Barcelonne," and the outer one addressed in Spanish to Don Phelipe de Sabula &c. Knight of the Order of St. Lago at Madrid.

The letter contains polite excuses for not having written sooner etc.

1726, Nov. 11th. Colonel Richard Kane to [George Tilson]? Dated at Gibraltar and unaddressed.

When the King had apprehensions in July 1725 that some design was formed against Gibraltar, Lord Townshend dispatched one of his Majesty's Messengers from Pymont to Minorca with the King's Commission and Orders for the writer to come from thence and take the Command of that Garrison. Upon his arrival there, in expectation of a blockade, the writer ordered a ship-load of coals for which he desires £235 may be paid to Mr Henry Neale and be deducted from the remittance of contingencies.

1726, Dec. 27th. Jasper Clayton to the same? Dated at Portsmouth, unaddressed.

The writer thinks it ill timed of Colonel Kane to be anticipating the contingencies when Gibraltar is threatened with a siege.

The soldiers are all on board and the writer hopes they may arrive in good time to support the Garrison his Majesty has been pleased to honour him with the charge of, and which he will defend to the utmost of his power.

1726, Feb. 7th, N.S. Richard Poley to George Tilson. Copy. Dated at the Hague.

"... I have read with a true pleasure His Majesty's speech and the two addresses, which I am persuaded will be no very welcome pieces at Rome, Vienna, or Madrid. I find the House of Commons don't want Sr Robert Neufville's spur.

1726, June 25th. Copy of Vice Admiral Hosier's Letter to the Duke of Newcastle.—Dated at Bastinmentoes. ½ page.

Enclosing an account of the Admiral's proceedings since writing from Tiberon Bay. This account is dated "On board the Bredah at the Bastimentoes the 28th June 1726." 5 pp.

1726, July 28th. "Copie de la declaration du Sieur Diego Ramos par devant les Alcaldes ordinaires de la Ville de la Trinité de Cuba le 28 Juillet 1726." 4 pp.

1726, Augt. 8th. Copie d'une lettre du Chef d'Escadre Antoine Seranno; écrite de la Havane le 8^e Août 1726." 1½ pp.

1726, Jan. 1st. Sir Charles Wager, R.N., to Lord Townshend. Dated on board the "Kent at Spithead," and unaddressed.

"My Lord—I beg leave, before I go away, to give your Lordship my private opinion of the Russians: By all that I could perceive, the Russian nation in general, as well as the officers of their Navy, have no inclination at all to have a warr with England, but would much rather choose to have a free commerce, and a better friendship with us, they having no trade by sea with any nation but us and the Dutch, at least not anything considerable: and, by the way, we should be much put to it for hemp, if a warr should break out with them, having no hemp for the Navy, at least very little, but what we have from them; and what we have in store would be exhausted in one year, as Sr Jacob Acworth the Survey[o]r, can inform you. Perhaps the Dutch, who cannot subsist without trade, may be suffer'd to carry on a trade, even tho' there should be warr, and it might be refus'd to us: the consequence of that would be, that we must buy our hemp of them, which would raise the clamour of the disaffected at home and be a real prejudice to us. The Court of Russia, are, no doubt, intent upon the interest of the Duke of Holstein, but when they find their schemes miscarry I think they would easily be perswaded to come into more reasonable ones with a little encouragement in them, for the Duke of Holstein, knowing very well that it is not the interest of the Russian nation to come into a warr for the Duke of Holstein's sake only, who perhaps, will be no relation of theirs when the Czarina is dead; and there are none of the Russians so blind as not to see that, and therefore I have allways thought since I saw any thing of that country, that a little friendly invitation would bring them into his Maj[esty]'s schemes which are so much for the quiet and peace of Europe. The Swedes would not then be so backward in coming into the Treaty of Hanover, or need be so dearly bought. Besides, the Russians should, I think be perswaded, by all means to look upon themselves as Protestants, least if Religion should once come to be the dispute they should take the wrong side. I think their dominions are far too extended, as well for their own safety as the quiet of their neighbours, and in a warr I think they would be more like to loose ground than gain [any] for both Livonia and Finland on the other side of the gulph tho' not theirs yet are so depopulated that if armys should come into them againe, they would soon be a desart, and therefore I think it very much the interest of Russia to have peace especially with England, and Holland, but if that cannot be, all trade with Petersburgh should be prevented if possible, but I fear that the Dutch must be permitted it, and that we shall want Hemp, tho' I hope we shall have enough to hang such as shall appear enemys to their Country. But your Lordship may very justly bid me mind my own business; and I am sorry to find that some of the Flota are arriv'd, and I fear the rest by favour of the bad weather, will escape too; so that part of my business, I doubt, will be over before I come to my Station. But I hope I shall soon see what the Spaniards are doing, either at Gibraltar or Cadiz: I think the time of year will not admit their making any hasty progress in any of their enterprizes, and therefore hope they will be timely prevented and nip'd in the bud, though I would have them be at as much expence about them as possible, that with the help of the Emperor, the Flota that does arrive may be soon unloaded and the mony gone.

"I doubt not but Admiral Hosier will have intelligence of the sailing of the Flota from the Havana, and then he will have nothing to do but watch the Galleons.

"I shall allways be glad to receive your Lordships Commands, and hope you will pardon the liberty I take in writing so long a letter with so little in it. I am—your Lordship's most obedient Serv^t

"CHA: WAGER."

"P.S. 2^d Jan^y: The wind is come again to SSW: so that I can not sail."

1727, Jan. 8th. Copy of Letters of Credence from the Elector for John James Zamboni, Envoy to England. Dated at Warsaw. In Latin. 3 pp.

The Elector signs as Augustus the Second, King of Poland.

[No date.] An Oath of Allegiance to be sworn by all Bishops in the United Kingdom. 1½ pp.

[No date.] "Copy of the Emperor's answer ab^t Meclenbourg.—Sent to the Cardinal by a Courier from Vienna." In the handwriting of Mr. Tilson. 2 pp.

[No. date.] A paper endorsed, in the handwriting of Mr. Tilson, "Dra^t of a Declarⁿ on the Conversation with the L[andgrave] of H[esse] Casell." 2 pp.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

[No date.] "Copie des raisons faites par M^r Hugetan pour soutenir la defense du Commerce avec la France et la Holland." 12½ pp.

[No date.] Plan d'une Alliance defensive entre S.M. Britannique et S.M. Czarienne. Addressed to Mons^r Bernstorff and unsigned. 5 pp.

1727, June ^{13th}/_{24th}. Lord Townshend to King George the Second. Dated at "Osabrug," two days after the King's accession. Copy in the handwriting of the writer's son Thomas.

"May it please Your Ma^{ty},

At the same time that I take the liberty of condoling with your Ma^{ty} upon the unspeakable loss of your late Royal Father, I beg leave humbly to assure your Ma^{ty} that you have no subject in all your Dominions who wishes more cordially than I do, that your reign may be as prosperous and as glorious as that of any of your greatest and most renown'd predecessors. I came hither hoping I might be of some use to your Ma^{ty}'s service, and being likewise desirous to pay this mark of respect to my deceased sovereign. I shall return to England with all expedition, in order to lay myself at your Ma^{ty}'s feet, being with the utmost duty and veneration

"Your Ma^{ty}'s most dutifull most obedient and most faithfull servant and subject

"TOWNSHEND."

1727, July 25th. Earl of Orford (Admiral Russell) to Lord Townshend. Dated at Chippenham and unaddressed. Written by an amanuensis, and signed by Lord Orford.

"My Lord—I was this morning honour'd with a letter from your Lords^p in which you was pleas'd to tell me that it was the King's commands that I shou'd serve him as one of the Commissioners of the Admiralty, but it is my misfortune that from old age and infirmities I am wholly incapable of doing that service which I well know that employment requires. I must therefore desire the favour of your Lords^p to acquaint his Majesty that I have the deepest sense of duty and acknowledgment for the honour he is pleased to do me, in thinking me capable of performing so great a trust, and believing me a man perfectly attach'd to his interest and service, which I ever was and ever shall be, but that I beg His Majesty in his Goodness will please to excuse me, because 'tis not in my power, from my present want of health, to serve him as I would, and as I ought, and rather accept that which is in my power, the integrity of my heart, and unshaken duty, and my prayers to God for all blessings that may make His Majesty and his family happy and prosperous.

"I am—My Lord—Y^r Lordship's—most obedient humble Servant
"ORFORD."

1727, July 30th. Extract from a letter from Vienna of this date relating what had passed at the Conference held between Count Zinzen-dorff, the Duke of Bournonvill, and Mons. Hanel Bruyninx on July 26th. In French. 4 pp.

1727, July 31st. Letter of credence from Charles Landgrave of Hesse to H. B. M. in behalf of Lieut. General Diemar. Dated at Cassel. In Latin. 2 pp 1727, Augt. 8th. Richard Manning to Lord Townshend.

Enclosing a copy of a memorial which the writer is about to present to the King.

1727, Sept. 19th. Copy of a letter to the King, on his Accession, from the States General? [Unsigned]. In French. 2 pp.

[1727.] "Secret Articles concluded at Vienna [in 1725] between the Emperor and the King of Spain." Five Articles (4 pp.), together with "Reasons that were given against the said Articles" (43½ pp.). The whole stitched, in book form, and endorsed "Translation of the paper rec^d from the Sicilian Abbots concerning the Secret Treaty between the Emperor and the K. of Spain."

The contracting parties :—

1°. Guarantee each other's dominions.

2°. The Emperor obliges himself to press England to restore Gibraltar to Spain.

3°. "If the King of France dies without leaving a son the Emperor will assist with all his force the King of Spain's right to the Crown of France; or, if the other Powers set the Duke of Orleans on the throne of France, the Emperor will take the French Low Countries, Alsace, and the Franche-Comté of Burgundy, and the King of Spain would unite to the Spanish Monarchy Roussillon, French Cerdagne, Lower Navarre, and the other countries he might conquer "on the part of the Pirenean Mountains."

4°. Contracts a marriage between the Infante Don Carlos and the eldest Arch Duchess, and the King of Spain obliges himself to maintain the Pragmatic Sanction.

5°. "Their Cesarean & Cat^{olic} Maj^{ties} foreseeing that the King of England will oppose the execution of such designs as well in regard to his particular interests, as not to loose his Umpireship in Europe, for which reason he will undoubtedly engage the English Nation, and unite the Dutch and other Princes in his League, they oblige themselves to seek all methods to restore the Pretend^r to the Throne of G. Britain; to which end the Cat[holic] King was to make use of the pretence of the restitution of Gibraltar, which he was to demand immediately as soon as the Peace of Vienna was published."

1727 —. The concluding part of a detailed statement of the strength of the Prussian Army in this year. From Paris. In French. 4 pp.

Note.—The total strength is stated to have been 63,932 men.

1728, March 1st. Baron Munchhausen to Lord Townshend [?] Unaddressed. Dated at Ratisbon, and signed G. A. de Munchhausen.

A letter of compliments 3½ pp.

1728, March 16th. Extract from a Latin Protocol, signed by Waldstettin, stipulating that there shall be a re-investiture of certain Spanish fiefs belonging to the Emperor.

1728, May 5th. The Marquis of Monteleone to Lord Peterborough. From Venice. In French. Unaddressed and enclosed in the next. 6 pp.

... Has written from Florence to Lord Townshend and is writing to the Duke of Newcastle, begging them both to make the South Sea Company promptly pay his appointments, which were charged by the King his Master on the Assiento, and entreats Lord Peterborough to hasten the payment.

"... Today's news is that the Pretender arrived here last night incognito, without the republic being in any way mixed up with his coming; there is no mystery, he only comes to see the City and the Church ceremonies on Ascension Day. . . ."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1728, May 20th. Lord Peterborough to Lord Townshend. Dated at Bath.

"My Lord,

I thought the best way was to send to your Lordship the Marquis of Monteleoni's letter, I have taken the liberty to tell him I was well assured, that no solicitations were necessary on his behalf either to Sir Rob^t Walpole or yourself.

"I wish our pacifick endeavors may procure quiet to the world, I am told our Spanish friends comply very awkwardly and with much unwillingness, but give me leave to assure your Lord^{sh} that the King and my friends shall have my best assistance either in peace or war.

"My Lord

Your most faithfull and affectionate
Servant

"PETERBOROW."

1728, Nov. ^{18th}/_{24th}. Horatio Walpole to Charles Delafaye. Dated at Paris, and unaddressed. In the handwriting of George Tilson, and noted by him "Cop: M^r Walpole's to M^r Delafaye."

"Dear Sir—I have received your favour of the 6th O. S. by Whiggs the Messenger on Monday in the afternoon, and last night that of the 7th by the Post. M^r Poyntz has been with us these two or three days in expectation of a Courier from Spain; but he returns this morning with M^r S^{ta} Cruz to Soissons, to come hither again with that Gentleman upon the arrival of any Courier from Spain with an account of M^r Bournonville's negotiation there. In the mean time the Spanish Amb^{rs} have received one with letters dated the 14th and orders to congratulate their Ma^{ty} here on the recovery of the French King's health; and they accordingly went yesterday to Versailles for that purpose; so that now the Court of Spain is freed from all uneasiness and agitation on account of this extraordinary event. It is not doubted but they will seriously consider of the negociations depending, and which were certainly suspended untill the fate of this important Crisis was over.

"Mr. Stanhope and I shall go tomorrow to Versailles; and upon our return shall send you a Messenger with an answer to the D. of Newcastle's last dispatches of the 6th, and with an account of what news may have come by the last Courier from Spain. I am &c.

"H. WALPOLE"

1728–1729. Despatches of Horatio Walpole from Paris. In card-board cover.

1728–1730. A collection of notes from Lord Townshend to the King. In a card board cover. They have been printed by Archdeacon Coxe in his "Memoirs of Sir Robert Walpole" pp. 520–543. The earliest of these notes is dated "2 July 1728," and the latest "6 May 1730." On the 8th of May 1730 Lord Townshend surrendered the secretaryship to Lord Harrington. Archdeacon Coxe writes, "It is remarkable that not one of these notes is in the handwriting of Lord Townshend," and he suggests "the reason probably was because the handwriting of Lord Townshend was very indifferent and sometimes almost illegible." The King's replies are uniformly in his own handwriting, and are generally written on the same paper as Lord Townshend's notes.

1729, May 15th. St. James's. Copy of the King's Letter to His most Christian Majesty.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

"Monsieur mon Frère. Le Colonel Douglas s'en retournant en France pour solliciter ses prétensions à votre Cour, je le recommande à votre protection, vous priant d'ordonner qu'on luy fasse droit, selon ce qui est stipulé par la Traité d'Utrecht sur les terres en fonds qu'il reclame. Je recevray comme une marque de votre amitié pour moy cette justice que vous luy rendrés, et Je vous prie d'être persuadé que Je me serviray toujours avec plaisir des occasions de vous donner des preuves de l'estime et de l'affection avec laquelle Je suis.

"Monsieur Mon Frère
Votre bon Frère
"GEORGE R."

1729, Nov. 4th. Claudio Francesco Re to Signor Como. Dated at Paris, and endorsed, "Copie d'une lettre de M^r Re, a M^r Como." In Italian, to the following effect:—We are expecting news next week from Seville about the great matters, although we calculate that Mr. Stanhope may have reached there the 23^d or 24th of the past month. Things remain as they were, and there is nothing new here except that yesterday five Ministers of the Hanoverian Allies gave the Imperial Ministers their reply on the point of the guarantee of the Austrian Succession. It is said that the reply which was given viva voce, contained neither 'yes' nor 'no.' Politicians here say that it ought to conclude with a 'No' and not with a 'Yes.' This is all the current news to-day.

This letter is subscribed:—"mi ratifico con tutto l'animo.

"CLAUDIO FRANCO RE."

1729, Dec. 12th. Copy of a letter from the Marquis D'Aix to the King of Sardinia. In French. 2 pp.

1729, Dec. 22nd. The Duc de Broglie to Lord Townshend. In French. Dated in London and unaddressed.

Asking for information as to the reply his Britannic Majesty has sent to his ministers in Paris touching the guarantee of the succession to the Empire, and asking for an appointment for an interview the next day.

1729, Dec. 23rd. John Couraud to ——. Unaddressed.

"Dear Sir—Mr Delafaye having acquainted me that my Lord Townshend desired to have all the Dra^{ts} of his Lo^{ps} Letters to France and Spain during my Lord Duke's absence in Sussex, I send you herewith several, which with those that his Lo^p has already had are all, I think, that were wrote in that time. I am &c."

1729-1730. Letters from Mess^{rs} Stanhope, Poyntz, Keen, &c. In cardboard cover.

1730, Jan. 11th. Robert Daniel to George Tilson. Dated at Brussels.

". . . . It is current here that the prevailing party in the United Provinces is for abandoning the Barrière Towns whence some infer there must be some considerable change in agitation [interlined in another hand over the cipher figures 864. 875. 640. 516. 419. 320. 350] this they interpret in favour of a younger Infant of Spain [interlined over 14. 419. 735. 814. 911. 124. 47. 500. 587. 364. 814. 960] since nothing else could make the Barrière useless The Princess de Ligne was on the 7th delivered of a daughter, which baulked for the second time the hopes of a son in that Family"

1730, Jan. 27th. Charles Delafaye to the same. Unaddressed. Endorsed by Mr Tilson, "M^r Delafaye—ab^t the Spanish Men of Warr."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

"Dear George,—Here is what we can readily find. The remainder of your history must be made out by letters from the governor of Port Mahon or of Col. Stanhope, which I doubt are not in our hands, for my Lord Cartaret took most of his papers with him. What I have from Lord Carpenter is, that the Ships were first sold to the Emperor, and put into the possession of his Commissarys at Port Mahon; that the Spanish Commissary came thither, and would not receive them in the Condition they were in; And then the Empr^{sa} Commissary gutted them, and the Ships being at last so spoiled that they were ready to sink and spoil the Harbour, the Governor had them towed out to Sea in shoal water and there sunk where they now lye not worth the weighing.

"Yours ever, C. D."

"[P.S.] Are you forestalling the liquidation of the affair w^{ch} is referred to Commissarys?"

1733, March 17th. James Evelyn to Lord Townshend. Dated in Duke Street and unaddressed.

"... if the persons, who have complain'd to your Lordship, will give us an account of what they have paid on account of fees [for Debentures on the exportation of silk manufactures] we shall be very ready to examine whether the Custom house officers have here taken more than the Law allows"

1734, March 14th. A detailed scheme of the arrangements made for the procession which was to be formed the following day on the marriage of the Princess Royal. 10 pp.

1734, July 18th. An Agenda paper for the Privy Council meeting of this date. Noted by Lord Wilmington with the business disposed of. 1½ pp.

1734, July 20th. Copy of a grant from the King to the Duke of Richmond, Duke of Montagu, Duke of Portland, Earl of Loudoun, and Sir Conyers Darcy, of "all that piece or parcel of Land . . . in the Privy Garden within the precinct of Our Palace of Whitehall containing in length from North to South three hundred and seventy one Feet and in breadth from East to West one hundred and fifty one feet abutting to the West on a piece of wast Ground reserved to erect and build some publick offices upon for Our use if occasion be and on the street leading from Whitehall Gate to Westminster Hall, and on the garden of Mrs. Jane Lowther, South on an area or open space of ground granted or intended to be granted to the said Earl of Loudoun, Nathaniel Gould Esq^r and the said Jane Lowther, East on ground in the possession of the said Charles Duke of Richmond John Duke of Montagu and Sir Conyers Darcy, and on a piece of wast ground there, and North on the area before the Banqueting house in Our said Palace"

"N.B. This is conceiv'd to be an engagement from the Crown to use the above reserved piece of ground for no other purpose but to erect a Publick Office thereon if need be."

Endorsed: "Grant of part of the Privy Garden to the D. of Richmond &c. July 20th 1734."

1735, Nov. 3rd. Thomas Robinson, afterwards Lord Grantham, to Horatio Walpole. From Vienna.

"Sir.—If the true explication of things has out come not sooner than by this messenger, I cannot well attribute so late a communication of them but to the decay of my credit here, nor that decay to any thing but to the more or less part I may have had in the suggestion of the

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
—

expedient of the marriage. If it was not the first opening of that matter as of myself in the month of July, it was however the proposal which I made on the 5th of August, that threw me entirely out of my seat. Bartenstein has the sole power here. Upon the Bishop of Bamberg's telling him in a conference que ce n'étoit pas à luy à y parler, mais à écrire seulement, his highness was forced to quit the Vice-presidency of the Council of war to be Grand Maître to the Empress, and that for having desired the Emperor in a letter from Italy de se fier plutôt dans les affaires de la guerre à ses Généraux qu'à un Ecrivain. The Prince of Savoy himself is piqued against Bartenstein, who however does and will maintain himself. I must therefore be humbly desiring that your Excellency will in time think of withdrawing me from hence. I do not repine as long as it shall be thought for the King's service to have me at this Court, and tho' my principal object in view is to get home and to endeavour to think for myself at this time of day in the quiet manner which I have formerly had the honour to explain to your Excellency, yet for the sake of leaving this place with a less appearance of discredit, I could almost be bold enough to show some desire of being employed in the future congress, if there should be an occasion for more than one, and you should be at the head of the Embassy. In an old letter from Mr Pelham, and written with your knowledge, he says "the Duke [of Newcastle] was pleased to express the greatest affection and freindship for me, and was ever ready to support in the strongest manner, as were S^r Robert and M^r Horatio Walpole, any thing that might be proposed for my honour and credit at Vienna, or for my future ease and satisfaction, that my conduct met with approbation, and my lot consequently to remain here." You know, Sir with what resignation I have been contented with that lot, while it was thought that my being here could be of immediate service; but without supposing that my continuing here may perhaps prove disserviceable, if circumstances however are such, that I can be equally serviceable to the King in another employment, be it never so much superior to my expectations or even desires, it would be, I thought, inexcusable in me not to put myself, as the occasion may offer, in a way which by withdrawing me from hence with honour and credit, may also lead to my future ease and satisfaction. And this last I can assure Your Excellency will be always so moderate, as never to give rise to the question. What shall we do with him afterwards? The Peace that is to be made with the Empire will authorise the employing of one, who has lived near six years at the Imperial Court, and tho' I may be thought to aspire to something much beyond my sphere, yet it is in fact looking out for an employment, which in all probability will not be of long duration, and must naturally, if there should be any occasion at all for it, be given to one or other of my foreign Colleagues, amongst whom of the same rank, not one will be found, whose fortune it will have been to have born^[e] the heat of the day with more zeal and industry than I have done.

"I beg leave to entrust this affair with Your Excellency singly, and for God's sake, Sir, stifle the thing in its very infancy, if out of your goodness for me, you find it improper for me even to have thought of it, but should there happen to be room for a second or third person in the ensuing Congress, and Your Excellency should think from my known attachment to you personally, that particularly during your occasional attendance in Parliament, you cannot in any respect leave one that can be more your self, that is, who can more faithfully enter into and carry on your thoughts, I will be bold to say you may throw your eyes upon persons of greater distinction and fortune, but not upon one that can be with a truer and profounder respect than that which makes me more

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

and more every day of my life—Sir—Your most obedient and most humble servant.

“T. ROBINSON.”

[P.S.] Vienna. 1735 [Nov.] 5th N.S.

“I had written this letter on Thursday morning while I was expecting at leisure to be called to a conference; but however true the contents of it are as to my situation here, I little thought that the very paper, which according to the inclosed copy of the letter written this day to Your Excellency in cypher I have treated as a modification of my orders of the 13th past should have furnished so much matter for nourishing Mr. Bartenstein’s spleen.

“C[oun]t Konigseck was declared Grand Maître yesterday but with a view, as it is generally thought to take from him in time the Vice presidentship of the Council of war. What is at least certain, the command of an army is incompatible with his new post.

“T. R.”

1737, May 14th. Sir William Thomson, Baron of the Exchequer, to Lord Wilmington [?] Dated in Bloomsbury Square and unaddressed.

“My Lord—Your Lordship having done me the honour to enquire concerning the power of trying the person convicted last sessions for a murder in Newfoundland, I not being then apprised of the Case, could not give your Lordship a satisfactory answer. But as I find the fact was done upon the Land, and not in any harbour or haven (though thrown into the water there after the death). He was tried by virtue of a clause in the 10th & 11th of K. W^m the third, Cap, 25. sect. 13, which gives power to try murders in that country of Newfoundland upon the land & on the Islands belonging to it—within any County in England, as if committed within this Realm. But if the fact had been done in any harbour or haven on the water, it would have been otherwise.

“I take the liberty of assuring your Lordship, that I have the honour to be with the highest respect, My Lord, etc.

“W^m THOMSON.”

1738, July 20th. An Agenda Paper for the Privy Council meeting of this date, with notes on the handwriting of Lord Wilmington. 2½ pp.

1738, July 27th. A List of Papers referred at the last Council and other business for the Committee. Noted by Lord Wilmington. 2½ pp.

1739, June 25th. Thomas Skottowe to Edward Weston “at the Secretary’s Office, London.”

“ I have transcribed his Lordship’s [Lord Wilmington’s] letter to D[epu]ty L[ieutenan]ts and the Order of Council and have sent them to the only three acting Deputy L^{ts} here (M^r Le heup being in London) viz.: Harbord Harbord, Lee Warner, Ja: Host Esq^r.”

“Sir Edm^d Bacon tho’ he appear[s] every Sessions would not put pen o paper as a D^y L^t but tell[s] me he have paid for his Commission which perhaps many others have not. I have been the less obliged to an old acquaintance”

1739, July 15th. Lord Cobham to Lord Wilmington [?] Dated at Stowe and unaddressed.

“My Lord,

Your Lordship will find by the enclosed the necessity of an election of Jurats in Jersey and that they themselves cannot agree

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
—

were it left to their choice whether they would have all or part. I need not observe to your Lordship that as little harmony subsists amongst them at present as formerly; the petition of Badinel the Viscount and the Judgment of the King and Council upon it is too plain a proof that six will act illegally and arbitrarily as well as twelve. I shall therefore humbly offer it as my opinion that they may be authorized to proceed to Election to compleat the number of the Royal Court”

1739, July —. The Earl of Malton to Lord Wilmington. Undated and unaddressed. Enclosing the next. Endorsed “July 1739.”

1739, July 21st. The same to Sir Walter Calverley, Bart., and Mr Horton, with reference to an Order in Council about sea-faring men. Dated at Wentworth House.

1739, Augt. 17th. Dr Edward Chandler, Bishop of Durham, to Lord Wilmington.

“My Lord,

In obedience to the commands I had the honor to receive from some of the Lords of His Majesty's Privy Council in their letter for taking up men for the sea service, I enclose a list of two of His Majesty's Justices of Peace for this County, of persons sent by them and received by the collector of Sunderlând. I believe had the ship continued here, sent down by the Admiralty, many more might have been taken up here and about Newcastle, and delivered aboard, but there is no detaining men in expectation [of a ship]. all I know of certainty is that I have the honor to be with a firm attachment My Lord,

“Yo^r Obedient humble serv^t

“E. DURESME.”

1740, Jan. 18th. John Strange (afterwards Attorney General) to Lord Wilmington [p] Unaddressed.

“My Lord.—In my Lord Coke's 4 Institute cap. 77 pag[e] 362 there is nothing said in the text of the book by way of exposition of the words the King's nephew in the 31 H. 8 c. 10. But by a reference to the margin they are explained, i.e. the King's grandchilde. But in the lower part of the page which I have marked with a 42 there is a reference to some Parliament Rolls which he says are full of notable precedents concerning precedency both in respect of the blood royal and otherwise, for which reason I have troubled your Lordship with the book itself.

“If I can be of any further service to your Lordship I hope you will honour me with your commands to your etc. J. STRANGE.”

1740, April 9th. An Agenda paper for the Privy Council meeting of this date. Noted by Lord Wilmington. 1 p.

1742, April 10th. J. Gore to Lord Wilmington. Dated in Bishopsgate Street.

Showing how the remittance of £200,000 to Genoa, and £300,000 to Vienna, for the Queen of Hungary's Service, in bills, would derange the exchanges, and recommending that a Man of War be sent to carry gold from Lisbon to Trieste. 4 pp.

1742, April 17th. A letter from Mons^r Du Plan to the King on behalf of the Protestant cause. 4 pp.

1742, May 4th. London. Baron de Wasner, Hungarian Minister in London, to Lord Wilmington. Unaddressed.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

"My Lord—Vous savez, my Lord, la situation pressante où S. M^{te} la Reyne ma très gracieux maitresse se trouve, et combien il importe de ne pas perdre un moment de tems pout lui mettre en état de soutenir les efforts des ennemys qui n'ont pas moins la ruine de sa maison que celle de la liberté de l'Europe pour objet. Dans cette considération je prends la liberté de vous prier, my Lord, de vouloir bien donner vos ordres, pourquoi la somme accordée par le Parlement à Sa Maj^{te} le Roy pour sad[i]te Maj^{te} la Reyne puisse m'être payée au plustôt.

"Votre zèle si connu pour le bien de votre patrie et de la cause commune me laisse d'autant moins lieu de douter de la promptitude et de la facilité, que vous voudrez bien y apporter, que my Lord Carteret m'a fait l'honneur de me répéter encore avant hier, que cet argent étoit prêt et que je trouve beaucoup de difficultés à faire le remises avec promptitude et avantage tant que cette Somme n'est pas payée.

"Si vous permettez my Lord j'aurai l'honneur de vous aller rendre mes respects ce matin pour vous en parler conjointement avec M^r Gore; et pour vous réitérer de vive voix les assurances de la plus parfaite veneration, avec la quelle je serais à jamais—My Lord—Votre très-humble et très-obéissant serviteur.

"DE WASNER."

1742, May 7th. R. Salter to the same. Enclosing a scheme for a lottery.

[1742]. "An Account of his Majesty's Ministers to Foreign Princes, States, &c., with the expence of each particular, and the amount of the whole for one year." Undated.

Given in a tabular form, from which the following rates of pay and allowances are extracted.

Earl of Stair, Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the States General, £100 per week with an extraordinary allowance of £1600 per annum.

Envoys Extraordinary and Plenipotentiaries: Thomas Robinson (afterwards Lord Grantham) at Vienna, and the Earl of Hyndford in Prussia, each £8 per diem, with extra allowances of £600 and £400 respectively.

Envoys Extraordinary: Thomas Villiers (afterwards Earl of Clarendon) in Poland; the Hon. Charles Compton in Portugal; Walter Titley in Denmark; Sir Cyril Wich in Russia; the Hon. Robert Trevor (afterwards Lord Hampden) to the States General; and Melchior Guy-Dickens in Sweden;—each £5 per diem, with extra allowances of from £300 to £600.

Arthur Villettes, Envoy at Turin; Horatio Mann, Envoy at Florence; and James Cope, Envoy to the Hanse Towns; each £3 per diem with allowance of £300 or £400.

Commissary, James Porter at Vienna £3 per diem.

Secretaries: Onslow Burrish at Antwerp, and Anthony Thompson at Paris, each 40^s per diem.

Consuls: Ambrose Stanyford in Algiers, £600 per ann. with £500 extraordinary allowance; William Reade at Tripoli, £380 per ann. with £250 allowance; William Latton at Tetuan, £250 per ann.; John Deane in Flanders, £200 per ann.; John Burn-Parker at Oporto, £500 per ann.; William Cayley at Faro, £200 per ann.

Ministers of divers natures: John Lay, Resident at Dunkirk, 20^s per diem; Charles Hozendorff, and for services, £400 per ann.; Brinley Skinner, till provided for, 30^s per day; Robert Daniel, Agent in the Low Countries, £100 per ann.

PETITIONS, MEMORIALS, ETC.

1701-1771.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1701, Dec. 6th. Agreement between the several candidates for the next election for the County of Norfolk. Signed by J. Houghton for Mr. Townshend; J. Holland and Jacob Astley. 1 page.

1705, Oct. 2nd. Copy of an "Order for discommuning several persons of the Corporation of Cambridge." Signed by Sir John Ellys, Vice-Chancellor of the University. The persons discommuned "for violating the rights and privileges thereof," are the Mayor, Mr. James Fletcher, Aldermen Daniel Dove, and Francis Percy, and the Deputy Recorder John Welbore.

1705 —. The Case of the Corporation of Cambridge. 3 pp.

1705, Dec. 24. Abstract of the late Earl of Romney's title to [be Keeper of the Palace and Park of] Greenwich, &c. [3 pp.]

1706 to 1711. A collection of undated petitions (many of them in French) referred by the Queen and the Treasury to Spencer Compton as Treasurer of the Queen's Bounties. Some of these petitions are noticed further on.

1709, Nov. 25th. A report of the Board of Trade, on the Petition of Sir William Hodges, setting forth that there is "a debt of 80,839½ peices of 8 or Dollars (which at 4s. 6d. each is 18,188½ 16s. sterling)" due to him and his partners from the Crown of Portugal, and praying that the same may be stopped out of what shall become due from his Majesty to that Crown, or that he may be otherwise relieved. Dated at Whitehall and signed by the Earl of Stamford, Lord Dartmouth, Philip Meadows, J. Pulteney, and R. Monckton.

"A true copy—WM. POPPLE."

To this paper is appended a "Mémoire touchant l'affaire de Guillaume Hodges Chevalier Barron et Marchand de Londres et ses Associés," dated 11th Oct. 1709, and witnessed as "a true copy—

CHARLES DELAFAYE."

1709, Dec. 14th. Rev. Dr John Robinson, Dean of Windsor, to Spencer Compton, at Whitehall. Dated in London.

"Sir—At the earnest request of Mademoiselle Lapie I take leave to acquaint you that I have seen attestations setting forth that her father was formerly a Secretary at the Court of France, and that her self fled thence for religion. I also know that she was for several years at Stockholm, and went under the character of a religious and virtuous woman and has been oft recommended to me as such, by persons of distinction in that place, in order to procure her some relief here, which I verily believe she much wants; and that if it please Her Majesty to extend her charity to the said Mrs Lapie it will not be misplac'd.—I am with great respect—Sir—your most humble and obed^t servant,

[No date.]

"J. ROBINSON."

The petition of Marie Lapie. Undated and unsigned.

"À la Reyne.

"Madame—Marie Lapie fille d'un Sécrétaire du Roy de France, remontre très humblement a vostre Maïesté, quelle est sortie de Paris, lieu de sa naissance, depuis vingt cinq ans pour cause de religion, et que depuis ce temps elle a vescu avec deux de sa soeurs qu'elle a attiré ausprès d'elle de l'ouvrage de ses mains, sans avoir jamais receu aucun secours de personne, mais comme à present, a force de travailler, sa veue est tout à fait affoiblie, et qu'elle se trouve dans une extrême

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

necessité, elle se jette a vos pieds Madame pour supplier Votre Maïesté de vouloir jeter un regard de compassion sur son estat qui est des plus triste, et d'ordonner qu'elle soit au nombre des pensionnaires qui subsistent par vos beneficences Royales, et elle continuera ses vœus pour la conservation de vostre personne sacrée."

1709, Dec.—. A list of the several regm^{ts} of British forces according to seniority. Endorsed "List of the British Forces.—Dec^r 1709." 3½ pp.

[170⁹.] Petition of the Governor and Company of Adventurers of England trading into Hudson's Bay. Undated, and endorsed "Hudson's Bay Company's Petition to her Ma^y. Enclosed in their letter of the 17th Febr^y 17⁰⁹."

The petition details French aggressions on the territories of the Company from the year 1682 and concludes as follows:—

"The premises considered, when your Majesty in your high wisdom shall think fitt to give peace to those enemys whome your victorious armes have so reduced and humbled and when your Majesty shall judge it for your people's good to enter into a treaty of peace with the French King your petitioners pray that the said Prince be obliged by such treaty to renounce all right of pretensions to the Bay and Streights of Hudson to quitt and surrender all ports and settlements erected by the French or which are now in their possession as likewise not to saile any shipp or vessell within the limitts of the Company's Charter and to make restitution of the £108,514. 19. 8, of which they robb'd and dispoyled you[r] petitioners in times of perfect amity between the two kingdomes.

"And yo^r pet^{rs} as in duty bound shall ever pray, &c."

[1710, March 7th]. An undated paper headed "D^r Sacheverell—Extract." 5½ pp.

This is a condensed report of a portion of D^r Sacheverell's speech in his defence before the House of Lords at this date.

1710, March 14th, N.S. Adam Cardonnel and Horatio Walpole to Spencer Compton (as Treasurer or the Queen's Bounties). Dated at the Hague and unaddressed.

"Sir—Here is a poor gentlewoman M^{rs} Le Bas a vertuous good woman, who it is certain has quitted a reasonable subsistance in France for the sake of her religion, she had a small pension of 15 p^{ds} a year in the late reign as you will see by her Petition, it would be a real act of charity if you would take a fitting opportunity of laying her case favourably before my Lrd Treasurer that she may be restored to her 15l. a year to find her bread; we should likewise take it as a particular obligation. We are with great truth and esteem—Sir—Your most faithful and obed^t servants.

"AD. CARDONNEL.

"H. WALPOLE."

1710, July 4th, O.S. "S^r William Hodges and several other merch^{ts} of London to my Lord Townshend, in behalf of the two Spanish Ships going to Buenos Ayres, and taken by the Dutch men of war.

"May it please your Ex^{cy}—Wee the subscribers, in behalfe of ourselves and many others of Her Maj^{ties} subjects trading to Spaine, do render your Ex^{cy} our most humble thanks for so heartily espousing our interest, and that of the Spaniards, and others concerned in the two unfortunate Spanish ships, which sayled from Cadiz for the Buenos Ayres, and were taken by the Dutch and carried to Holland, without any regard

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
—

to her Maj^{ties} passes, which were granted for reasons wee shall not now trouble your Ex^{ty} with, knowing that you have had them and all other papers relating to this matter, from the Right Hon^{ble} Mr Secretary Boyle, and directions to reclaime the said ships and cargoes; in which the hon^r of her Maj^{ties} passes, and that branch of our trade (so beneficial to this Kingdome) is so much concerned; besides the ill consequences that may attend the latter if restitution be not made.

"We therefore humbly pray your Ex^{ties} favor and protection in this case, which will infinitely oblige—My Lord—Yo^r Ex^{ty}'s—most obedient and most humble servants—Jn^o Houblon, William Hodges, P. Porreel, Christop Hayne, Ferd. Mendes, Anthony da Costa, Rog. Braddyll, E. & F. H. . . . , Jos. Hodges, E. Terrell, Ben. Ash, Rob^t Hull, Lw^e de Dorpere, Tho^s Herne, Fran. Beuzelin, Jn^o Love, Fran. Trobridge, Jn^o Fellowes, Jn^o Radburne, Peter Lepipre, John Lambert, John Edmonds, Moses Cañon.

"[E.S.] My Lord—If there be no other remedy wee will hope the Dutch will admitt of a favourable composition for the Spanyards and others."

1710, Dec. 8th. Dr John Robinson, Bishop of Bristol, to Spencer Compton. Unaddressed and endorsed "M^e La Pie."

"Sir—Her Maj^{ty} has been pleas'd to order me to putt into your hands the enclosed note, which I read to Her Maj^{ty} this morning, being the name of the poor French woman, who has troubled you so long with her solicitations; it being Her Maj^{ty}'s intention, that she may be added to the list of those, to whom Her Maj^{ty} is graciously pleased to extend her charity, as upon mention thereof I hope you will find—I am etc.

"JOH. BRISTOL."

1711, June 13th. William Lowndes "To Spencer Compton Esq^r Paymaster of Her Ma^{ty}'s annuall and other pençoûs and bountys.—These."

Transmitting by order of the Lord High Treasurer (Harley Earl of Oxford and Mortimer) a petition from Margaret Countess Dowager of Marlborough.

Within is a memorandum that the Countess never had any annual pension, though she had received 400*l*. in several sums by Warrants of Bounty.

1711, Jan. 7th. Dr Compton, Bishop of London, "To the Honourable Spencer Compton Esq.—These." Dated at Fulham, and signed for the writer.

"Dear Nephew—Let me trouble you on behalf of this bearer Mr. Charles L'ogle Minister of the French Church in Wapping establish't by her Majesty's especial command; for the cure of w^{ch} she was pleased to appoint forty pounds a year, w^{ch} was paid to M^r Carron whom this bearer hath succeeded.

"H. LONDON."

[P.S.] "My hand is yet so lame, that I am not able to write myself."

[Circa. 1713.] Draft report of Spencer Compton to the Lord Treasurer [the Earl of Oxford], on M^r Pauncefort's memorial relating to M^r Guy Palmes. [Undated].

" Guy Palmes Esq^r having been app^{ted} one of the Tellers of the Exchequer by their late Maj^{ty}, did in the year 1698 assign and make over the said office to Thomas Gibson for a term of 12 years in trust that the said Thomas Gibson should out of the profits of the said office pay to the said Guy Palmes £200 per ann. and discharge several debts due to divers persons named in the said assignment. And whereas

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

W^m Palmes Esq. father to the said Guy Palmes did pay or satisfie the greatest part of the said debts amounting to £14,500 ; therefore the said Thomas Gibson by the direction of the said Guy Palmes did in the year 1700 assign the residue of the said term to Bennet Sherrard Esq. in trust that the said B. S. should pay 800 per ann. to the said William Palmes and the overplus to the said Guy Palmes. I further humbly certify to your Lord^{sh} that her present Majesty was graciously pleased to grant by Letters Patent dated August 4th 1702, £1000 per ann. out of the Post Office during her Majesty's pleasure to the said Guy Palmes in consideration of his losses in the said office of Teller."

[Temp. Anne.] "The Case of John Evans Merchant and his wife, Dame Mary Hussey, late widow and relict of S^r William Hussey who was Ambassador Extraordinary from King William to Vienna and Constantinople to mediate a Peace between the Emperor and his Allys, and the Grand Signior in 1690 and 1691."

The petitioners claim £10,863 12s. as Extraordinary Expenses due to the late Sir William Hussey.

[Temp. Anne.] Lady Killigrew to Lord Godolphin [or the Earl of Oxford]. Undated and unaddressed. Endorsed "Lady Killigrew's Letter to my Lord Treasurer."

"My Honoured Lord, if I cou'd by any means keep my selfe, and my poor daughter from starving, I wou'd not importune your Lordship, but what can a woman of eighty doe, without y^r Honour will save me, in my great distress, my humble Petition is that you wou'd graciously please to give me as a private favour the half yeare which is due of my pention ; before the rest have theirs, it shall not be a pre-sident for others to sollicite, for I will pray for you in humble silence, I have exhausted all my credit, nor have a possibility of living but by your Lordship's favour ; upon my old knees I beg you wou'd order me the half year, for a quarter will not clear me of half I owe ; I am, my Lord, your Lordship's most dutifull and most obedient servant, BARBARA KILLIGREW.

[Circ. 1714.] Two undated identical petitions to the House of Commons, from the freeholders and inhabitants of the Parishes of Maresfield and Uckfield, near East Grinstead in the County of Sussex. In favour of a Road-Bill, with many signatures appended.

[1715.] An undated petition to Lord Townshend as Secretary of State from "the Stewards of the Protestants of Ireland for the celebration of their Anniversary meeting in London, in memory of their deliverance from a generall massacre begun in that Kingdom by the Irish Papists in the yeare 1641, and appointed by Act of Parliament there." It concludes:—

"The Reverend M^r Jonathan Smedley Preacher to the Protestants of Ireland for this present year 1715, having signalized himself for adhering to the interest of the succession of the House of Hanover for severall years last past, and having suffer'd in his fortune for the same, the above-mentioned Stewards in respect of those circumstances, and of his excellent and seasonable discourse preached before them at this time, as well as in regard to his being a person of known abilities do beg leave to present the said M^r Smedley as a person fit to be encouraged by your Lords^{sh} and worthy of his Ma^{ties} notice and favour."

[Signed.] "MEATH ; MOUNTJOY ; CASTLECOMER ; S. MOLYNEUX ; ROB^t FINLAY ; [and] RICHARD STEELE."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1715, Augt. 23rd. George Townshend to Lord Townshend. Dated in Lincoln's Inn and unaddressed.

The writer solicits his Lordship's interest in behalf of his son who is anxious to be appointed an Extraordinary Clerk of the Council, in the room of Mr James Vernon who is also one of the Commissioners of the Excise and is dying if not dead.

Note. George Townshend was a Commissioner of Excise from 1699 to 1726, and James Vernon from 1710 to 1756.

1715, Sept. 6th. Rev. R. Davies to Spencer Compton. Unaddressed Endorsed by Mr. Compton "Mr. Davies petition for a prisoner."

"Honoured Sir—I beg leave to make application to you in fav^r of a poor prisoner in the Marshalsea who is under sentence of death. The crime for which he is condemn'd is the stealing of a horse, which he says he himself did not do, but had the horse from another, that stole him. . . you will do a very good deed, in being instrumental in procuring his pardon. I therefore beg in this poor man's behalf that you wou'd be pleas'd to make application for him to my L^d Townshend. He was condemned at Kingston Assizes, his name is — Gascoyne, or Gaskin, his first name I have forgot. . . . My humble service to my Lady Phillips. I am, etc. R. DAVIES."

[P.S.] "If you should think it requisite to write to me any thing in answer to this, it will be sufficient to direct to me in Christ Church, Southwark."

1715, 19th Sept. Walter Etherington to Lord Townshend. Addressed "To The R^t Hon^{ble} The Lord Townshend Secretary of State —These humbly p^rsent."

The writer encloses the following Petition and Information, and begs his Lordship to dismiss the said Mr Hamond, Governor of Landguard Fort, and to put in a just person in his room.

First enclosure:—

"The humble petition of Sampson Seagoe and sixty others, all Masters of shipp's trading to Newcastle, and other parts—To the King's most Excellent Majesty." 1 page.

The petitioners pray to be relieved from the oppressions of Mr Hamond the Governor of Landguard Fort, and that the salute of the said fort may be ascertained by the firing of [a] gun as is usual to other forts.

Second enclosure attached to the last:—

"The sworn information of Sampson Seagoe, of Great Yarmouth Master of the good Shipp called the William and Mary of Yarmouth of the burthen of two Hundred and Sixty tunns, laden with coales from Newcastle; that this morning when sailing out of the harbour of Harwich, his ship was fired at by the Governour of Landguard Fort, . . . Sworn Sept. 2nd, 1715, before Samuell Lucas, Mayor (of Harwich) and Daniell Smyth." 1 page.

Note. From the printed Calendar of Treasury Papers, it appears that a Capt. Francis Hamon was Lieut. Governor of Landguard Fort in 1702.

[1715, Sept.] Complaint ag^t the "Govern^r of Landguard Fort." Addressed.—"To The R^t Hon^{ble} Viscount Townshend, Lumbly p^rsent." In the handwriting of Walter Etherington, and signed by Henry Townshend

It begins and ends as follows:—

"My Lord,—The subscriber, Mr. Henry Townshend, Master of the good Shipp called the Lake of Wisbitch is redy and willing to make

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

affidavitt that Mr Hamond Governer of Landguard Fort fired a gunn at him."

[P.S.] "Allo Mr Thomas Murfort paid Thirteen Shillings and 4^d and was without the harbour, witnes my hand, THOMAS MORFORT."

1715, Oct. 1st. Dr Smalldridge, Bishop of Bristol, to Lord Townshend. Dated at Bristol, and unaddressed.

"My Lord—Yo^r L^p was pleas'd at my request to interest your self so far in obtaining from his Ma^{ty} directions for the payment of the 2,000^l. given by the late Queen to the poor, that when I came out of town a month ago, I had reason to hope it would be immediately paid, and therefore left with the Sub-almoner a list of persons to whom it should be distributed. I hear from him that the Warrant for payment of it is not yet sign'd by his Ma^{ty}, and that the poor gentleman is afraid of being torn to pieces by those who have long with great impatience waited for it. I must therefore entreat your lordship's farther favour in prevailing with Mr Wortley Montague, in whose hands I understand the Warrant is, to lay it before His Ma^{ty}, which act of charity will entitle your L^p to the blessings of the poor as well as to the thanks of their importunate sollicitour—Your L^{ps} most humble and most obedient servant, GEO. BRISTOL."

1716, July 6th. An Order of Council, dated at the Court at St James's and sealed with the Council wafer-seal.

"Present—The King's Most Excell^t Ma^{ty}

Archb^p of Canterbury, etc.

"The Right Honourable Spencer Compton Esq^r Speaker of the House of Commons having been this day by his Majesty's Command sworne of his Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, took his place at the Board accordingly.

"EDWARD SOUTHWELL."

To the above Order is attached by the Council Seal the following form of oath:—

"The oath of a Privy Councillor taken by the R^t Hon^{ble} Spencer Compton Esq^r the 6th of July 1716.

"You shall swear to be a true and faithfull servant unto the King's Majesty as one of His Maj^{ties} Privy Council you shall not know or understand of any manner of thing to be attempted done or spoken against His Majesty's person, honour, crown, or dignity royal, but you shall lett and withstand the same to the uttermost of your power, and either cause it to be reveal'd to His Majesty himself, or to such of his Privy Council as shall advertise his Majesty of the same. You shall in all things to be moved, treated and debated in Council, faithfully and truly declare your mind and opinion according to your heart and conscience, and shall keep secret all matters committed and revealed unto you, or that shall be treated of secretly in Council. And if any of the said Treaties or Councils shall touch any of the Councillors, you shall not reveal it unto him but shall keep the same until such time as by the consent of His Majesty or of the Council, publication shall be made thereof. You shall to your uttermost bear faith and allegiance unto the King's Majesty and shall assist and defend all jurisdictions pre-eminences and authority's granted to His Majesty and annexed to the Crown by Act of Parliament or otherwise against all foreign Princes, Persons, Prelates, States, or Potentates. And generally in all things you shall do as a faithfull, and true servant ought to do to His Majesty.

"So help you God, and the holy contents of this Book."

With the above papers is the following:—

"Note of fees for swearing the R^t Hon^{ble} Spencer Compton Esq^r, Speaker of the House of Commons, of the Privy Council.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

	£	s.	d.
To the Clerks of the Council -	10	0	0
To the under Clerks -	4	0	0
To the Keeper of the Records -	6	0	0
To the Keepers of the Council Chamber	5	0	0
To the Under Chamber Keeper -	1	0	0
	£26	0	0
To the Messenger [a guinea]	1	1	6
	27	1	6"

[The last item, and the total, are in Spencer Compton's handwriting.]

[1716]. Two copies of a petition, of which one is endorsed "Copy—East India Comp^y Petⁿ to the King—about ships going from Ostend &c^a to the East Indies;" and the other is endorsed "Petition from the E. India Comp. Inclos'd in L^d T's to L^d Cadog^a & M^r Walpole. 5th Oct^r 1716."

The petitioners, after reciting the Acts of Parliament, complain that several of his Majesty's subjects have presumed to trade into and visit the said East Indies and in hopes to evade the law have contriv'd to purchase Commissions from Foreign States and Potentates, which may be gotten at easy rates, hoping under colour thereof to screen themselves from the prohibitions and penalties contained in the said Act.

" On the 15th of the preceeding October arriv'd at Surat Bar the ship Victoria of Ostend, burden 240 Tons with 70 men, Captⁿ Haver Sandfield an Irishman commander, under the Emperor's colours they had received a letter from the Company's factors at Callicut on the Mallabar coast dated the 5th of said January [1716] which informs of two large ships from Ostend under the Emperor's colours being arriv'd, one at Surat, the other at Callicut, commanded by Mons^r Sarsfield both intending to load home from those places directly the Petitioners have very great reason to apprehend that Captain John Opie an Englishman who went several months since from London to Leghorne is gone from thence to the East Indies on the like design

"The Petitioners do therefore most humbly intreat Your Majesty will be graciously pleas'd to take the premisses into your royal consideration and to apply such a remedy for checking in its infancy this practice so many ways destructive to this considerable branch of the trade of Great Britain as to your Majesty's great wisdom shall seem meet.

"And the Petⁿ as in duty bound shall ever pray &c."

[circ. 1716.] The humble address of thanks from the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge—To the King's Most Excellent Majesty. Undated. 1 page.

"Humbly thanking his Majesty for the gracious mark of royall favour which he has bestowed on his ancient University of Cambridge in presenting to it the noble collection of books and manuscripts gathered in many years by the great industry and accurate judgement of the late Bishop of Ely." [D^r Moore.]

[1717?] Petition to the King from Sir John Wittewrong Bart. In French. Unsigned and undated. 1 page.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSB.

The petitioner has always supported the Protestant Succession and his Majesty's interest for which he has spent great sums in the County of Bucks. Has served as a Member of Parliament for more than twelve years, and is still a member.

During the last Ministry much injustice was done him and he rejected several advantageous offers as his principles prevented his entering into the measures that were then on foot.

He has had the honour to serve as a Colonel of Infantry and he would rather be cashiered than sell out.

Notwithstanding such a character and his zeal for his Majesty, he has had the misfortune to be excluded from the new levies, several colonels of less standing than him have been preferred, and many persons have had civil employments without any one having the least regard for the petitioner.

He therefore humbly prays for the command of a regiment or to be put on the Excise Commission, or in such other employment as his Majesty shall think fit, so that the petitioner's enemies cannot have occasion to say that he is entirely neglected.

1719. — [Copy of a] petition to the King in Council of Samuel Tatem, Richard Reeve, Lawrence Ingoldsby, and others, Merchants of London traders to the Porte of Bilbao in Spain. Undated and without signatures. Endorsed by Spencer Compton "Petition of Sam^l Tatem &c. Merchants, trading to the Port of Bilboa—1719." 1 page.

The petitioners pray for passes for two Spanish ships laden with wool and iron to come to the Port of London as was practised in the late war with Spain.

1719, April —. Copy of a humble representation addressed by the same London merchants to the Commissioners for Trade and Plantations in support of their petition to the Privy Council. Undated and without signatures. Endorsed by Spencer Compton "In Mr. Wace's hands in L^d Harrington's office, Apr. 1719. Passes granted and dated May 12th do." 2 pp.

The merchants represent that "Spanish wool is absolutely necessary to the making our superfine cloth and the lessening the consumption of that wool in the manufacturing of the cloth debases its quality and will if practiced bring it into disreputation in foreign marketts. Iron is also necessary for the use of his Majesty's Navy as well as to all other shipping particularly large ships for their anchors chain plates, and the like great work During the late war this practice of granting passes was indulged particularly to Bilbao by which means we were constantly furnished with a supply of Spanish wool as our occasions required but now by the interruption of commerce their remains no door open for that trade."

"Nevertheless some of our manufactories have been exported to Spain by way of Holland and other neutral portes to supply their demand and prevent the disuse of our manufactories at that markett tho' loaded with the Additional charge of two freights commission and customes in and out which we have been obliged to pay in Holland as some of us has lately experienced"

1721, April 22. A curious petition to the King at Bordeaux, and subscribed:—"Le très humble très obéissant très fidelle sujet Gaiuen de Valois de Terrefort prince du sang Cardinal."

"C'est d'une très profonde soumission que j'ose avoir l'honneur de m'adresser au roy de la grande bretagne non comme on faisoit vers les roys de perse qu'on n'oisoit leur parler moins encore les aprocher, mais

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSB.

comme à un roy gracieux, riche, puissant, inance, décoré des qualités à un si grand prince, car quel plus grand et plus auguste roy puist être miux que votre Maiesté, Sire le digne subject de mes louanges si j'étois capable d'en faire le gloriux panégirique; l'heurux souvenir des graciuses faveurs que le feu roy Guillaume prince d'orange m'honora à la prière du feu roy de France et mon devoir, m'oblige de prier le roy d'Angleterre avoir agréable la démission que j'ay, l'honneur de faire à sa Majesté de l'archevêché de Cantorbry primat du royaume que le roy Guillaume m'avoit pourveu, il m'honora aussi de plusieurs lettres pour m'obliger d'aler remplir cette haute dignité que l'on a tenu putêtre secret au roy qui est une recompence à favoriser le sujet le plus fidelle à sa Majesté, mes bules sont dans les argives du conseil d'Angleterre que le prince me promet faire conserver avec soin, la persone qui jouit de ce grand benefice est mon coadjuteur, le titre de cet illustre prélat avec mes bules que j'ay l'honneur d'indiquer sont des temoignages fideles de la verité que j'ay l'honneur d'avancer au roy, mes incomodités, la pauvreté, la peine que je ressans par le malheur que j'eus d'enccourir la disgrace du feu roy de France peu de tems après la mort du prince Maurice, m'a mis hors d'état d'exercer aucun des nombrux emplois desquels j'avois eu l'honneur d'être graciosé par le roy Louis Quatorse et par le roy Guillaume qui sont les plus grands et les plus eminents dans le monde et dans l'église: si la relation de ma vie n'étoit enuyuse à votre Majesté Sire, j'aurois l'honneur d'en faire icy un détail; mais je n'ose exiger une longue attantion de la generosité du roy. Son altesse serenissime le duc de Florance à qui j'eus l'honneur d'éviter une surprise qu'on vouloit luy faire où il s'agissoit de la perte de ses états, puit assurer le roy que tout mon malheur depand d'être issu du sang de Valois: je prie sa Majesté de vouloir être memoratif qu'après la mort du prince Maurice, je fus receu et recognu héritier a tous les biens honeurs et dignités de ce prince par le roy de France la famille royale et par le conseil d'état, en consequence et par la grace de Dieu, j'eus l'honneur d'être couronné, du diadème que je remis au roy de France après luy avoir fait démission des droits que j'avois sur la courone qui consistent a la moitié du royaume de France, les portes fermées; après avoir enrichi le roy de France mon maître et avoir eu le bonheur d'heurusement sauver la vie aux très dignes altesces mes seigneurs le Dauphin de Viennois et le Duc de Bourgoigne, sachant que les intantions du roy de France me devien-droit prejudiciables, leurs tres hautes altesces par le suport d'une reconnoissante tandresse aydèrent a mon creasion. Depuis ce tems malhurux je suis errant dans le monde, pardon grand roy de ma trop grande liberté mais animé d'une noble ardeur, me sentant encore honoré d'un des bienfaits du roy Guillaume en l'election qu'il luy plût faire de ma persone, pour que mon nom fut inseré au nombre des très illustres et très honorables chevaliers de la jaretière. Je prie a main jointe le roy avoir agréable mes tres profondes soumissions, qu'il plaise a sa Majesté Bretanique me faire la grace de me remettre les bules de L'archeveché de Cantorberi qui ont resté dans les argives d'Angleterre, qui sont inutiles pour d'autres persones, et permettre que j'aye l'honneur d'être continué dans l'ordre de la jaretière même de la porter ce que j'espère recevoir de la bienveillance du roy, par surabondance d'une très grande marque d'honneur de triomphe a ma famille; je promets garder ce precieux trésor avec tout le soin la precaution et l'ordre neces-sere, en memoire des très hautes très dignes très graciuses faveurs des roys de la Grande Bretaigne. Le roy de France avant son décès me fit la grace de m'accorder une amnistie qui me remet dans mes biens honeurs et dignités renouvelée par le roy à present regnant, mais mes biens particuliers ayant été distribués aux plus grands du royaume

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Monsieur le regent jouissant d'une partie, je ne pense plus qu'à mourir en repos dans mon indigence ne mangeant que du pain vivant de charité, il ne me reste plus Sire pour la tranquillité de mon esprit qu'à avoir l'honneur de me demetre comme j'ay l'honneur de faire par ces présentes de l'archevêché de Cantorbéry en faveur du roy d'angleterre, que j'espère être agréable à sa Majesté brétanique, et à la faveur de son inmance protection royale que j'ay l'honneur de reclamer a main jointe, mes penes seront adoucies, mon nom ne sera pas divulgué, sous cet hureux apui j'entreprans d'un cœur généreux la liberté que je prans, parceque sa bonté royale m'attire et m'engage d'avoir l'honneur de me presanter à ses pieds sous les auspices d'un grand roy pour qu'il plaise à sa plus qu'impériale Majesté m'octroyer les très nobles demandes que j'ay l'honneur de faire : ce sont les graces, faveurs inmances que jay l'honneur d'attendre et espère recevoir de très grand très auguste très puissant roy de la Grande Bretaigne priant sa Majesté d'être assuré que j'ay toujours esté inviolablement comme j'ay l'honneur d'être d'une très profonde soumission des roys d'angleterre et de votre Majesté, &c.

"Le Duc de Barwic qui comande en cette ville m'est suspect."

1721, July 28th. Sir William Thompson, ex-Solicitor General, and afterwards a Baron of the Exchequer, to Lord Townshend.

"My Lord—I presume to trouble your Lordship with the enclosed memorial, and beg your perusal of it and that your Lordship will be so good as to alter it where you are pleased to think it wanting, and I shall esteem it an honour to be allow'd a few moments of your Lordship's time as soon as it may be convenient.—I am, etc."

The enclosed memorial is in French and is addressed to the King.

The writer represents that he has been Recorder of Ipswich and Member of Parliament for about fourteen years, and Recorder of London for nearly seven years.

That he has always been attached to his Majesty both in Parliament, in the Courts of Justice, and in the other public assemblies of the London Magistrates.

That he was one of those appointed by the lower house to conduct the prosecution of Dr. Sacheverel when the Protestant Succession was in danger, and was consequently very illused by the last ministry of Queen Ann, etc.

In conclusion the writer represents that he has the mortification of having no marks of his Majesty's approbation, which greatly diminishes his credit, and also his authority against his Majesty's enemies. Wherefore he very humbly prays his Majesty not leave him longer under so painful a discouragement.

[1721?] An undated petition to the King from Charlotte, widow of Capt. Rycaut, daughter of Sir Gilbert Gerrard, and grand-daughter of the late Bishop of Durham [Lord Crew]. Praying for a pension upon the Irish Establishment to enable her to maintain and educate her five children.

[1721?] An undated petition to the King from Viscount Gage. In French. Praying for the payment of the balance of the £5000 promised to the petitioner out of the sale of some timber in the Forest of Dean. It concludes:—

"The petitioner will try to render himself more capable to serve his Majesty in getting himself elected Member of Parliament in the place of [Nicholas Lechmere recently created] Lord Lechmere."

1722, March 28th. An unsigned paper giving a list of some Election returns up to date, and addressed "For my Lord Townshend's Office—These."

Most of the names mentioned are marked with a (+) or a (—), and it would appear that the latter mark was employed to distinguish supporters of the Ministry. The list is as follows:—

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS

Wednesday the 28th March, 1722.

B[isho]ps Castle. Bowater Vernon—. W^m Peer Williams+.
Welby. Serjt Birch—. Nicholas Philpott—.
Derby. L^d [James] Cavendish—. [Thomas] Bayley+.
Cricklade. S^r Tho^s Reed—. [Thomas] Gore.
County of Essex. [William] Harvey+. [Robert] Honeywood—.
Preston. Tho^s Hescoth+. Daniel Poulteny—.
Thetford. S^r Edmund Bacon. Rob^t Jacomba.
East Redford. Thomas White—. [Patrick] Chaworth+.
Shaftsbury. S^r Edw^d Desbouverie—. Edward Nich[o]las+.
Eye. Spencer Compton—. Edward Hopkins—.
Dartmouth. Coll^o George Treby—. Thomas Martin—.
Bridport. S^r Dewey Bulkeley—. Peter Walter—.
Edinburgh. John Campbell—.
Newark. Brigad^r [Richard] Sutton—. James Pelham—.
Barnstaple. S^r Hugh Ackland+. Gen^l [Thomas] Witham— [a mistake for Wetham.

Haslemere. [James] Oglethorpe+. [Peter] Burrell (a false return—L^d Blundell and Mr Molineux) [Note. This appears to have been stated in error], and the error is repeated in a note at the foot of the paper].

Highworth [? Malmesbury]. L^d Hilsborough—. S^r John Rushworth [a mistake for Sir John Rushout.] Coll^o [Giles] Earle— Coll^o [John] Farmer [a mistake for Fermor].—a double return.

A note at the foot of this paper adds:—"N.B. [James] Oglethorpe [and Peter] Burrell, are false returned for Haslemere," but the election return does not seem to have been challenged and those gentlemen represented Haslemere in this and the next four parliaments.

1722, April 27th. Horatio Walpole to Lords Townshend and Carteret. Unaddressed.

My Lords—I having by the consent of my late lord Stanhope and Mr Secretary Craggs received the principall fees for Irish Commissions sign'd during their time in the Secretary of State's Office upon my notification amounting to the sum of 213-10-10 I beg leave to lay before your L^{ds} an account of what fees have since accrued in your offices on the same account to the time of my L^d Lieut^s [the Duke of Grafton's] departure into Ireland when I resigned my employment as Secretary to his Grace etc."

The above letter is written on the fly leaf of a List—(2 pp. and 58 names of officers, with the fees they paid for their commissions being drawn) headed "Principal Fees for Irish Commissions received in the Right Hon^{ble} the Lord Townshend and Lord Carteret's offices from the 4th of March 1721 to the time of the Lord Lieut^s departure in September following under the notification of Hor^o Walpole Esq^{re} Sec^{ry} to Lord Lieut^s"—and it is endorsed with the following minutes:—

"I allow the repayment of the proportion received by me of the fees within mentioned—TOWNSHEND," and "I allow the same—CARTERET."

The following receipt is also endorsed upon this letter:—Received this 14th day of June 1722 for the use of Horatio Walpole Esq. late

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Secretary to his Grace the Lord Lieut of Ireland, of the Right Hon^{ble} the Lord Visco^t Townshend by the hands of John Wace Esq^{re} the Sum of one hundred and eight pounds and fiftenth shillings being his Lordships propor^{on} of the principal fees of Irish comicons received in his office from the 4th of March 17th 9 to Sep^r following being the time he resigned that employment which his Lordship was pleased to give and allow to the 2^d Hor^o Walpole according to the within written accompt—I say received by me—PETER LEHEUP—£108: 15.

1722, Aug. 11th. George Treby, Secretary at War, to the "R^t Hon^{ble} Spencer Compton Esq^r Paymaster Generall of his Majesty's Forces." Dated at Whitehall.

"Sir—His Majesty having been pleased by a sign manual to constitute you together with—

The R^t Hon^{ble} the Earl of Cadogan.

R^t Hon^{ble} Robert Walpole Esq^r.

R^t Hon^{ble} Lord Viscount Cobham.

Lieuten^t Gen^l [George] Macartney.

Major Gen^l [Williams] Tatton.

Major Gen^l [Joseph] Wightman.

Brigadier [Richard] Russell.

Brigadier [Andrew] Bisset.

Brigadier [Phineas] Bowles.

Comptrollers of the Accounts of the army.

And myself a Board to examine the reduced officers of his laud Forces and Marines upon the Establishment of Half Pay in Great Britain;

I am to desire you will meet the said Commissioners in the Great Room at the Horse Guards on Tuesday the 14th Instant at ten of the clock in the forenoon in order to hear the Warrant read, and to proceed upon the said Examination, I am" etc.

1722, Augt. 10th. The Case of Capt. John Welbe, addressed with a Petition to Lord Townshend as Principal Secretary of State. In book form 32½ pp.

"The humble Petition of Cap^t John Welbe sheweth:—

That Your Petitioner has been confined a prisoner in the King's Bench prison above six months, on acct of unjust sutes of William Adye a packer, and Cap^t Nicholas Mandell and others, who have vowed revenge for his discovering their unlawfull practices and testifying the truth against them, at two tryalls before the Lord Cheife Justice King at Guild Hall in June last was a twelvemonth. And attending severall tryalls before the Lord Cheife Justice Pratt likewise relating to the wilful destruction of the ship Riga merchant in Port Mahone on purpose to defraud the insurers, And particularly William Adye who has sworn never to dye in peace till he has ruind your Petitioner, the particulars of which may be seen in Your Petitioner's Case.

That there is another Conspiracy against Your Petitioner by M^r Edward Morgan a Roman Catholick liveing in Bloomsbury Square of 2 was round the globe with Cap^t Dampire the same voyage that

"The Petitioner was and was the death of the first Lievetennant by Majesty in most barbarously ashore at the Island of S^t Jago, where he place of [Nicholas's] days with hunger and greife, and the said Morgan 1722, March 28th. of the said expedition, and now endeavours to returns up to date, and addreby overthrow his intended discovery, in These."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSA.
—

and Tho^s Burt^t a nonjuror one of Ormes's congregation and book-keeper to Mr Rich^d Cambridge, who were your petitioner's bail, and surrendered Your Petitioner after they had confounded his mony, and trickt him out of all that he had, by encouraging sham actions, and given them the advantage in the law against Your Petitioner designedly, by latting judgements goe by default, and bringing writts of errors, and suffering non pros upon the errors, for want of paying the transcript &c. Some particulars of which may be seen in the inclosed copy of Your Petitioners letter to Mr Tho^s Burt^t.

That Your Petitioner was under some apprehension in the month of March last was a twelvemonth, of the designed barbarous usage that Your Petitioner was to expect from William Adye, Cap^t Nicholas Mandell and others, and therefor presented a Petition to Your Lordship dated the 13th of March 1720 a copy whereof is hereunto annext, And in the Month of June following presented a Petition to His Majesty likewise, dated the 18th of the said month, relating to the barbarous usage Your Petitioner then expected from Mr. Richard Cambridge, Tho^s Burt^t his book-keeper, Mr Edward Morgan, and Mr Gregson their attorney, and others, And the consequence thereof is hereunto annext likewise.

That the usage Your Petitioner meets with, is a conspiracy against the interest of His Majesty, and the whole nation, as well as against Your Petitioner, which Your Petitioner will undertake to prove before the Parliament, when they meet, the consequence and views of which, may be seen in the annext copy of Your Petitioners Petition to his Majesty, dated the 18th of June 1721.

Therefore Your Petitioner humbly Prays that Your Lordships would be pleased to Order Your Petitioner some releife till the Parliament meets, And thereby defeat the designs of the enemies of His Majesty, and the nation.

And Your Lordships Petitioner Shall pray &c.

King's Bench Prison,

August the 10th 1723."

The Case of Cap^t John Welbe [24 pp.].

1. Containing a copy of a letter to the Right Hon^{ble} Robert Walpole Esq^r.
2. His Case and Petition to the R^t Hon^{ble} the L^d Viscount Townshend.
3. A copy of his Affidavit made before Mr Delafay (Under Secretary of State) relating to the designed destruction of his Majesty's Fleet under the command of Sir George Bing then in the Mediteranian, and the wilful destruction of the merchant ships on purpos to defraud the Insurers.
4. A list of severall persons who in their own and other names have prosecuted the said Cap^t Welbe for making such affidavit with an account of disbursements ocationed thereby.
5. Two copies of letters to Gov^r Pitt thereupon.
6. Instructions to discover the several frauds in the said Affidavit mentioned.
7. A copy of a Petition to His Majesty in Council relating to the establishment of a South Land Company [i.e. a chartered company, with a capital of three millions sterling, for colonizing, and trading with, Australia, "and for working the gold and silver mines which there abound"]].

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

8. A copy of an Order [of the King in Council, dated Dec^r 14th 1720] of reference to to the Lords Commissioners of Trade and Plantations thereupon.

9. A copy of a Petition to the Lords Commissioners of Trade and Plantations relating to the same.

10. A copy of a Petition to His Majesty relating to the barbarous and unjust usage that the said Cap^t hath met with for detecting treasonable and felonious practices and offering to undertake to discharge the nations debts and enrich the nation upwards of one hundred millions sterling.

11. Reasons humbly offerd by the said Cap^t for granting a Charter for establishing a South Land Company.

All which is humbly offer'd to the consideration of the Hon^{ble} House of Commons by CAP^t JOHN WEBBE.

[1722]. Copy of the Petition of Richard Cambridge and others to Lord Townshend, Principal Secretary of State.

"Sheweth: That of late great demands have been made upon Your Petitioners and several other merchants for losses of divers ships which Your Petitioners and other merchants had insured and which have been wilfully and designedly lost, particularly the Diligence, Jeremiah Finch, Master, the Riga, merchant, John Cattell, master, and Cap^t John Welbe hath discovered these unlawfull practices, which tend to the ruin of the insurers, upon whose hazard and adventure the trade of the nation very much depends.

That in order to oppress Cap^t Welbe, many actions have been brought at law against him, and he has been frequently arrested, and put to great expense, and trouble, by persons whome your Petitioners have great reason to believe were concerned in such the said evil practices, and he has therefore been obstructed from attending the defence of sutes presented against several of the insurers, to the great disadvantage of Cap^t Welbe, and the loss and hazard of the insurers.

Your Petitioner therefore humbly prays that Your Lordships would be pleased to grant to the said Cap^t Welbe, such protection, and encouragement, as may defeat the designes of such evil disposed persous, and enable the said welbe to assist Your Petitioner in the further discovery of the said evil practices, and in prosecuting the offenders.

And Your Petitioners Shall pray, &c."

1722, Augt. 22. A copy of a letter to Mr Burt, bookkeeper to Mr Richard Cambridge. "Mr Burt,—I Remember when you carryed me to the Fleet to surrender to those actions in the Common Pleas, that you and your master's friends were bail for you told me that you would move me from thence to the King's Bench to surrender to those actions that you and your Master's friends were bail for me likewise, that my bail might be intirely discharged, And that then you would get me the liberty of the rules of the King's Bench and supply me with money weekly till I could be in a capacity by chymistry to maintain my self and which I proposed to doe in a few months it requiring about three months to prepare my medicines &c. in which time you promised to allow me fifteen shillings a week subsistence besides a certain sume for erecting a small laboratory of about three or four furnaces and materials &c. At that time I little expected that you would have used me thus barbarously as you have don, especially considering

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
—

that the whole overthrow of my affair is intirely owing to the usage that I have mett with from you, for M^r Gregson, Morgan, Adye, nor Mandell nor any of the rest could not have ruined me had it not been for you, and for which you must expect to answer either in this world or the next, Some particulars of which I have thought fit to remind you of (viz.) in the first place all those actions were ocationed by my discovering the wilfull loss of the Riga, merchant in Port Mahone, and being a witness for your Master relating to the same, who had underwritt about six hundred pound on the said ship and therefore became my bail, and you told me your self that your Master promised to spend a thousand pound in my defence, before I should be wronged, 2^{ly} you employed M^r Gregson on that acct he being your Master's attorney, 3^{ly} I proposed the inditing of them, and told you that there would be no end of their actions. But you and M^r Gregson refused saying that your Master was not willing to hang them but would take care they should not ruin me, 4^{ly} you know M^r Gregson had instruction for a Bill in Chancery severall termes by him but would not file the Bill, but let judgements goe by default and brought writts of errors, and suffer'd a Nonpross for want of paying the transcrip and 5^{ly} at the first generall meeting you came and told the gentlemen that your Master could not come but gave his service to them, and what they concluded on he woud agree to, And said your Master desired them to have regard to M^r Morgan's caractor, and not speak disrespectfully of him &c. altho' you knew he was a Roman Catholick, and had ruind Cap^t Dampire's Expedition, and was then endeavouring to ruin mine, 6^{ly} After I had found out M^r Morgan's designs against me, you came in a coach to my house, on purposs to hinder my going to S^t James's with a Petition to His Majesty, relating to the said affair, and swore that if I did I should ruin it, so that neither M^r Morgan, nor I should get the Charter, and 7^{ly} when you sent for me in order to surrender me about April last was twelvemonth I told you that I had acquainted the Board of Trade and Secretary of State that you had a design to Surrender me, and that therefore you could not alledge any just reason for the same I being reddy at your pleasure, upon which you altered your resolution, and then concluded on sumonsing 40 merchants to a meeting to advance a sume of money for my defence and to enable me to carry on the said affair, you being in hopes at the same time that I could not prevail on them to advance any money, having your self made a party against me which you depended on to oppose it, and when the gentlemen mett, your Master did not come but you came in his stead at last when the gentlemen were reddy to conclude, and when you found that I had in your absence, prevaild on the gentlemen to advance me two hundred pound, you undertook to gather the money for me, by which you got it in your power, to keep me out of the same, whereby you have ruind me, I could remind you of a great many more particulars, but hope this is sufficient to touch your conscience, if you have any, that you may have some remorse, and not murder me, by keeping me in a prison, without money, after you had been one of the cheife instruments of confounding all that I had in the world, therefore [I] desire to speak with you, that I may know what to depend on, after all this barbarous usage &c.

I am, as I am used,
JNO. WELBE."

King's Bench Prison,
August the 22^d 1722.

P.S. What doe you think of a fiery tryall &c.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

1724, May 15th. Copy of a report from the Committee of Council in Ireland. Dated in the "Council Chamber Dublin" and unaddressed.

May it please your Excellency and Lordships.—In obedience to your Excellencies and Lordships Order of re-reference of a report signed the sixth day of May pursuant to His Grace [the Duke of Grafton] the then Lord Lieu^t and Council's Order dated the 27th day of April last, requiring us to consider what is proper to be done to allay and quiet the great fears of the people of this kingdom occasioned by the apprehensions under which they are of William Wood's copper half-pence and farthings becoming current among them, we have met and considered the same, and are of opinion that for allaying and quieting the great fears of the people upon the occasion it will be proper that an humble Address be made to His Majesty in order to obtain from his royal wisdom and goodness such remedy as may be fitting to avert the great evil that we apprehend would unavoidably befall this kingdom in case the said half-pence and farthings should become current among us, a draught of which Address is hereunto annex'd and humbly submitted to your Excellencies and Lordships by, Edward [Singe Archbishop of] Tuam, [The Earl of] Abercorn, [Lord] Mountjoy, Santry Tullamoore, Ralph Gore, [The Earl of] Meath, Gust[avus] Hume, Edw[ard] Crofton, Oliver St George, R. Tighe, Marm[aduke] Coghill.

(A true Copy)

ED. DERING,

Dep. Cler. Con. Priv. [Hib.]"

1725, Jan. 18th. Count de Broglio to Count de Morville. Copy of a letter, in French, dated in London.

[Translation] The Princess of Wales has forwarded to me a petition, which has been sent her by [a] galley slave who entreats her to intercede with the King [of France] for his pardon, and she has expressed a wish that I should write to the Court. As the galleys are in the Department of the Count of Maurepas I have sent him the petition, and have explained to him how anxious she is that it may be granted 1725, May 29th. A Privy Council Report addressed to the King from the Council Chamber at Whitehall, and endorsed in a clerk's hand "Copy of Committee Report for issuing a Special Commission to try Cap^t [Robert] Elston for the Murder of two of his ships crew beyond the seas [on the coast of Guinea].

1st June 1725, read and approved, and Lord Chancellor ordered to issue a Special Commissⁿ accordingly.

"Mem^d. The Act of Parliament upon which the Commissⁿ was founded, was past in the 33^d of Henry Eighth chap. 23^d, Entitled An Act to proceed by Commission of Oyer and Terminer agst such Persons as shall confess Treason &c^a. without remanding the same to be tried in the shire where the offence was committed."

1725, Oct. 28th. F[rances?] Killigrew to Sir Spencer Compton? Dated in Church Street, Soho, and unaddressed.

"Sir—Your great compassion and good nature upon all ocations encourages me to take this liberty. Mrs. Howard has informed me that His Royal Highness is determined to give no pensions and the misfortune I am in oblidges me to trespas upon your great goodness to beg that you woud recomende me to His Royal Highness for part of his

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSB.

bounty: I dare say if his Royal Highness knew the distress I am in that he would be so charitable as to condescend to think of me; I have no merit to plead in excuse for troubling you but my misfortunes which are very great and too many to repeat. I am, Sir, with great respect your most obedient and most humble servant,

F. KILLIGREW."

1725-26, Jan. 23. Edward Stables, Clerk-Assistant to the House of Commons, to Spencer Compton. Unaddressed.

"Sir—I beg leave with a heart filled the deepest sense of duty and gratitude, to return my most humble thanks for your hono^r great goodness, in again interposing between me and death, hastening upon me, by overmuch fatigue in the service of the publick; as these are beyond expression, I humbly hope you will be pleased to accept, on all occasions, the utmost returns of gratitude in my power, long since a duty upon me, far above any ability of mine to answer, and will ever be so, tho' alwaies attempting to be acknowledged, and repaid, with the greatest pleasure.

Upon my present recollection I was thus admitted Clerk Assistant in December 1710 when Mr [Culverwell] Needler and Myself had agreed, (he being disabled by palsy) Mr. [Paul] Jodrell [Clerk of the House of Commons] and he waited on Mr. Bromley (then Speaker) and acquainted him therewith, and Mr. Jodrell proposing me to succeed Needler, Mr. Bromley asked him who he thought was to name the Clerk-Assistant, Mr. Jodrell insisted, himself, as his Clerk; Mr. Bromley denied that, as not being Clerk to the Clerk, but a distinct and proper Clerk of the House, to be appointed by the House, as their Clerk-Assistant and a check upon the Clerk of the House appointed by the Crown, and that, at most, Mr. Jodrell could only propose, but that the nomination, or approbation, was in the House, and that no such officer could be admitted without a que[st]ion; and this was the opinion of St John Trevor, the Ma[ste]r of the Rolls: (In conversation).

I had the good fortune to be well spoken of to Mr. Bromley and he received me in the most generous, and ready manner, he acquainted the House with Mr. Needler's disability, and that a proper person had been considered of to succeed him, and giving a recommendatory character of me (according to his goodness, which I was alwaies very sensible of) he put the qu[est]ion for calling me in, which was done, without more ado; but Mr. Jodrell entred nothing of this upon the Journal.

Give me leave, Sir, to conclude with my humble thanks also for your great indulgence to me, on this occasion, for time to recover my health, which I hope will be very soon, and I hope I shall alwaies make use of it to testify, with as gratefull a heart as ever filled mortal breast, the greatest duty to your hono^r most justly owing from Sir—your—Hono^r most obliged and most obed^t humble serv^t

E. STABLES."

1717, Sept. 26th. An Order in Council, dated at the Court at Kensington, and sealed with the Council Wafer-seal.

Present—The King's most Excell^t Majesty in Council.

This day the Right Honourable Sir Spencer Compton Knight of the Bath was by his Majesty's command sworn of his Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council and took his place at the Board accordingly.

ROBERT HALES.

17—, Nov. 3rd. [Date torn.] A paper endorsed "Judges opinion [in favour of] the Prince of Wales chusing his own servants." It is

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

signed by [Sir] Robert Raymond, William P. Williams, and Samuel Mead.

Note.—The endorsement is inexact as there were no judges named Williams and Mead on the Bench at the same time, during the reigns of George the First and George the Second. Sir Robert Raymond was Attorney-General from 1720 to 1723, and a Justice of the King's Bench from 1723 to 1733.

[1727?]. The humble Petition of Mary o'Brine widow—To the Right Hon^{ble} Spencer Compton Barronet [sic] Speaker to the House of Commons. Undated.

"Sheweth—That your Petitioner's first husband Thomas Evans was a Captain of a Man of War in King William's time, and was killed by the French on board the ship he comanded in New found Land the same year his Majesty King William dyed, that her husband John o'Brine was L[ieut] of Granadiers in Colon^l Molsworth's Regiment and was kill'd at Prats del Roy in Spain, That in consideration of her last husband's faithfull service, the Government was pleased to allow her a pension, which she enjoyed for some time, untill one Thomas Fox and his wife falsely swore her out of it, because she would not allow him ten pounds in hand and six pounds per annum, and has served several honest widows the same way to their utter ruine, under pretence of being an evidence for the King, which in effect was only to extort money from the poor widows, That your Petitioner had him taken up and tryed at the Old Baily for robbing of her and extorting a note of ten pounds, That then he the said Fox receiv'd his sentence to be whipt from Newgate to Tyburn, fifty pounds fine, and two years imprisonm^t who after receiving this, his sentence, made escape from justice, but is now coming to ruin what he did not before, That his wife gives out that your hon^r will give him a protection to appear again in order to ruin your Petitioner and the said widows, That your Petitioner and her family are utterly ruin'd through his means, and beside is afr[a]ide of her life w^{ch} his wife strove to take away before.

Therefore your poor Petitioner most humbly begs that your Hon^r would be pleased to grant her a hearing to satisfie your hon^r further and she as in duty bound will ever pray."

1728, May 4th. [Copy of.] "The humble Address of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland.—To the King's Most Excellent Majestie." Dated at Edinburgh and subscribed, on behalf of the Assembly, by William Wishart, Moderator. A loyal and pious address congratulating the King upon his accession. The following is a specimen of its wording:—

"The death of our late Gracious Sovereign, Your Majestie's Royal Father of glorius memory, whom God made the instrument of so great Blessings to us, and to all Europe, was so sensible and heavy a stroke to us, that we should have been inconsolable under it, if so great a loss had not been made up to us, by Your Majestie's most peaceable and happie accession to the throne.

Permitt us, then, Great Sir, to congratulate Your Majestie upon Your ascending the throne of Your royal ancestors with the joyful acclamations of all Your dutiful subjects. We can never cease to bless Our Gracious God, when we think of his setting a King over us, whose royal qualities do so brightly adorn the throne upon which he sits," etc.

[1729?]. Copy of a very loyal Address from the Commons to the King. Undated and signed by Edward Stables, Clerk of the House of Commons.

1780, Dec. 31st. An Order of Council, dated at the Court of St James's and sealed with the Council Wafer-seal.

Present—The King's most Excellent Majesty, Duke of Newcastle etc.

His Majesty in Council was this day pleased to declare the Right Honourable Spencer Earl of Wilmington, Lord President of his Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, and His Lordship took his place at the Board accordingly.

JA. VERNON.

[Circ. 1780.] An undated petition to the King from John Carter under sentence of death for robbery. Signed by Edmund Waller M.P., and John Clavering M.P., [Members for Great Marlow from 1727 to 1734], Sir John Etheredge, George Bruere, and other inhabitants of Great Marlow.

[Circ. 1780.] Petition in French to King George II. from Louis Bernard of Lezan in the Diocese of Nismes, a French Protestant convict on board the Invincible galley.

The Petitioner who has been condemned to the galleys for life has already spent 14 years in chains and implores the King's protection, the promise of which was renewed in the year 1729.

1780-81, Jan. 4th. Thomas Tomkyns to the Earl of Wilmington. Dated in the Poultry Compter and unaddressed.

"My Lord—When I reflect on the frequent trouble I have given your Lordship already in this way I can't refrain [from] being ashamed at the thought of it; and yet my unhappy circumstances are such as urge me nevertheless to the farther trespass.

It is now two years and a half since my being confined upon an Extent, without being able, as yet, to regain my liberty, notwithstanding my having completed a discovery, that by competent judges is thought to be worth a million sterling to the nation: upon this foundation I am, at present, seeking my releasm[en]t, and in order there to, have lodged a Petition to His Majesty praying the same.

What I have therefore now to entreat of your Lordship (as apprehending your being lately appointed President) is, that you would be so good as to order my petition to be read [at] your next generall Council, and to contribute to its being referred to a Committee of Council."

1731, Jan. 12th. Memorial to the King about an Establishment for the relief of the widows of poor officers in the Navy. Dated at the Admiralty and unsigned. 4½ pp.

The memorial proposes that three pence in the pound should be stopped out of all naval pay and half-pay for the relief of the widows in question.

[1731.] Proposed heads of [a Scheme for] an Establishment for the relief of the widows of poor officers in the Navy. Unsigned and undated. Enclosed in the last ten clauses. 7 pp.

The Scheme proposes the formation of a charitable Corporation, with a Board of Governors and a Court of Assistants, to administer the funds subscribed. It also proposes the names of many naval men (from the Lords of the Admiralty down to Warrant Officers,) to be the first Governors of the proposed Corporation.

1731, Feb. 8th. Extract from the Minutes of the House of Commons. Dated "Lunæ 8^o die Februarij 1730-1."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Resolved, That an humble Address be presented to His Majesty that He will be graciously pleased to give directions, that an account be laid before this House of what proceedings have been had for the establishing a Civil Government at Gibraltar, and for declaring the same a free Port, since the last application of this House to His Majesty for that purpose.

1731, June 9th. Thomas Tomkins to Lord Wilmington. Un-addressed. "My Lord—Upon a Petition lately presented to the Treasury praying my liberty, having been informed, that, under my present circumstances, the proper application for it, is to His Majesty in Council I have therefore prepared the inclosed in order to be lodged forthwith, in hopes that your Lordship will be so good as to order it to be read at the next general Council.

To succour the distressed is an action expressive of humanity and great goodness; and if from an inclination of that kind, you shall be induced to contribute to a favourable issue of this my intended application, it shall always be remembered with the utmost gratitude by him, who is, with the greatest submission and respect—My Lord—Your Lordships most obedient and most humble servant.

THOMAS TOMKINS."

[1731.] The humble Petition of Thomas Tomkyns now a prisoner in the Poultry Compter upon an Extent.—"To the King's most Excellent Majesty in Council assembled." Unsigned and undated. Enclosed in the last.

The petitioner prays for his enlargement from prison, on parole or otherwise, that he may put in practice his invention for making cast iron malleable with sea or pit coal.

1732, July 20th. An undated Petition (to the King) of the widow of Robert Gregon, late Office Keeper and servant to his Majesty's Council Chamber.

Humbly shewing. That it hath been usual for the Crown on the death of such under officers of the Council Chamber to allow their widows some small pension for the support of themselves and family.

That the poor Petitioner being left with two children destitute of the common necessaries of life some time since made her humble application to His Majesty for such pension proved unsuccessful therein in regard Mrs. Holland the widow of the former Office Keeper was at that time alive and receiving a pension of twenty pounds p annum.

That being lately informed the said widow Holland is now dead and the said pension void.

The Petitioner in consideration of her husband's long & faithful services to the Crown, and she being in a starving condition and grown past her labour, prays that the like small pension may be granted to her as was enjoyed by the said Mrs. Holland.

Certified at foot under the above date as follows:—

"We the Clerks of His Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council hereunder written do certify the contents of this Petition to be true and do believe the Petitioner to be an object of great charity.

JAS. VERNON,
TEMPLE STANTON,

W. SHARPE,
CH. DELAFAYE."

1735, Nov. 28th. Copy of a letter from the Russia Company to Claudius Rondeau Esquire, English Resident at the Russian Court. Dated at London and Signed S. Holden. 2 pp.

This letter encloses an undated Petition, addressed to the Privy Council, signed by Joseph Chitty, a Russian merchant, and also a copy of a letter (translated out of High Dutch), from Baron Peter von Shaffiroff to Mr. Bardewick (the Agent for the Petitioner in Russia), dated at St. Petersburg, July 25th 1735.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

The Petition relates to an alleged purchase, from the Czarina, of Rhubarb to the value of £2,500, and also to the alleged refusal of Mr. Rondeau to render the petitioner's agent any assistance in enforcing the said contract.

1735, Dec. 27th. Copy of a letter from Claudius Rondeau to Samuel Holden, Governor of the Russia Company. Dated at St. Petersburg. 7 pp.

This letter controverts the statement that the above-mentioned contract had been entered into; and the writer further asserts that he offered to speak to the Czarina's Ministers on behalf of Mr. Bardewick, and has done his utmost to maintain a good harmony and understanding among the gentlemen of the English factory in St. Petersburg.

Same date. Copy of a letter from Claudius Rondeau. Dated at St. Petersburg and unaddressed.

With reference to Mr Chitty's Memorial explaining that neither the Senate nor the College of Commerce (at St. Petersburg) had authority to conclude any such contract without a possible order from the Czarina or her Cabinet Ministers.

1736, Aug. 12th. Abstract of the Return of the Secretary to the Governors of Queen Anne's Bounty to an Order of the Committee of Council of the 12th of August 1736:—

The total number of livings augmented from the beginning of the Corporation to the 1st of January 1735—

		£
By Joint Benefactions	220 not exceeding	10 p ann.
	209 - - -	20
	176 - - -	30
	161 - - -	40
	137 - - -	50
	<hr/>
	903
By the Bounty alone	234 not exceeding	10 p ann.

In all 1137—Of which 517 have been augmented with purchase of real estates with the whole money appropriated for that purpose, 23 Livings with part of the money, and 597 remain for which no purchases have been made.

Total number of Livings which remain under the yearly values of £10 £20 £30 £40 and £50, viz:—

	£
694 - - - not exceeding	10
1139 - - -	20
1095 - - -	30
1161 - - -	40
1329 - - -	50

In all 5418 Livings.

1738, April 4th. Memorial from the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, praying His Majesty's Orders for issuing Warrants to impress seamen. Dated at the Admiralty Office and signed by Sir Charles Wager, Sir Thomas Lyttelton and Sir Thomas Frankland. 1 page.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Endorsed with a Minute "6th April 1738.—Read and approved.—
L^d Adv^y to issue Warrants accordingly."

1738, July 26th. Representations of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty praying directions may be given for the speedy manning of the Fleet. Dated at the Admiralty Office and signed by Sir Charles Wager, Sir Thomas Frankland, Thomas Clutterbuck, and Lord Vere Beauclerk. 5½pp.

Endorsed with a Minute "31st July 1738.—Read and app[rove]d and Orders to be issued accordingly."

[1738?] An undated paper in the handwriting of Lord Wilmington, being a list of British ships captured by the Spaniards, with some memoranda as to documents relating to their capture:—

S^t James of Bristol, [Capt.] Cartia, bound from Cork to Jamaica, taken the 12th of May. Carried to a Bay in Puerto Rico, Order on the 22nd, d^o to carry the s^d Ship to S^t Johns, arriv'd there the 25th, d^o part of the Provisions sold to the S^t Juan, a Spanish Man of War.

Prince William, [Capt.] Kinselagh, from S^t Kits to London, taken the 24th of March, 250 Leagues to the Eastward of Bermudas, having Braziletto Wood on Board, was sent to Havanna.

[Capt.] Kinselagh[']s Letter] to Isaac Pero, July 27th.

Do. to Wilks and Berian, July 28th.

Certificate from S^t Kits that the Brasiletto was imported from Providence.

Brigantine George, [Capt.] Ware, from Jamaica to Bristol, taken the 21st May.

Affidavit of Harris and Jenkins.

Loyall Charles, [Capt.] Way; Dispatch, [Capt.] Delamotte, from Jamaica to London, Spaniards told [Capt.] Griffin of the Seahorse, that these two ships were condemned at Havanna, the latter for having logwood on board.

Two Sisters Brigantine, [Capt.] Gardner, taken in 1732 at the Tortugas.

Eight Ships taken in 1734.

Friends Adventure, Sloop Johannah, fired at, not taken, Endeavour and Friendship, Bermudas Sloop.

Sloop Carac, [Capt.] Donaldson, from S^t Kits to Curaçao [Capt.] Donaldson[']s letter] to Somers.

Sloop Thomas, [Capt.] Keeling, taken April 3rd 1734, bound from Curaçao to Virginia.

Protest at S^t Kits and Certificate of the Deputy Govern^r of Virginia.

Prince William, [Capt.] Ivy, from Virginia to Jamaica, 1731, taken plundered and let go.

M^r William Coventry.

Sloop from New-York, [Capt.] Wolf, from Madeira to Curaçao and Jamaica. July, 1736, carried to Camina.

Another Vessel, [Capt.] Walters, from North Carolina to Curaçao, taken plundered and then discharg'd.

Another Vessel 3 Months ago.

Captain Playter.

Neptune Snow, [Capt.] Playter, 12th July last plundered.

15th d^o rummaged again.

Nicholas Forster, mate.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

Carried on Board the Spanish ship, saw a great number of English sailors, who had been prisoners two years aboard. [The Spanish] Captain inquired what ships were coming from Jamaica, &c.

Richmond, [Capt.] Halifax, in 1729-30 went from London to St Kits, 14th Apl. 1730, carried to St Jago de Cuba.

Pheasant, [Capt.] Wilson, carried to Puerto Rica, stript and plundered, bound from Barbadoes to S. Carolina.

1739, Aug. 2nd. The humble Petition of the United Company of Merchants of England trading to the East Indies—To the King's most Excellent Majesty in Council. [Undated, but endorsed by Lord Wilmington, President of the Council. "Copy of the Petition of the United Company of Merchants of England trading to the East Indies—Aug^r 2^d 1739."]

[The Petition] "SHEWETH—That in order to protect the trade in the East Indies, your Petitioners maintain a considerable naval force, and large garrisons at their own expence.

That in the late war in the reign of Queen Anne, several privateers were fitted out from Europe to cruize in India upon your Petitioners Ships.

That your Petitioners' Governours there would have fitted out a naval force in order to take or destroy them, but upon considering they had sufficient powers for that purpose, they were obliged to desist, whereby your Petitioners trade was exposed to the enemy and several ships were taken, and the ship Marlborough, Captain Matthew Martin, valued at upwards of one hundred and fifty thousand pounds was attack'd, but by the bravery and conduct of the Captain and officers she got clear from them, after a fight of several days.

That your Petitioners are apprehensive that attempts of the like kind may now be made, and that with sufficient powers vested in the Governors at Bombay, Fort St George and Bengal their trade may be greatly prejudiced.

Your Petitioners therefore most humbly beseech your Majesty to take their case into consideration, and that your Majesty will be graciously pleased to grant to Stephen Law Esq. Governour of Bombay, Richard Benyon Esq. Governor of Fort St George, and Thomas Braddyll Esq. Governor of Fort William in Bengal, and to the Governors of the time being, such or the like powers as are given to your Majestys Governours in the West Indies, to enable them to grant Letters of Marque and Reprizal in such manner as your Majesty may think proper, or such other relief as your Majesty in your great Wisdom shall think fitt.

And your Petitioners shall ever pray &c.

Signed by Order of the Court of Directors of the said United Company.

CHRIST[OPHER] MOLE,
Secy^r."

1740, June 26th, Aug. 16th, and Aug. 20th. Robert Robinson to Lord Wilmington. Dated in Lincoln's Inn and unaddressed.

These three letters relate to their writer's appointment as Chief Justice of Gibraltar. On the fly leaf of the earliest of them are "Some Minutes or Memorandums relating to Gibraltar," and with them are preserved two undated papers relating to the same matter; viz., "The Humble Memorial of Robert Robert Robinson, Esq^r, To the right Honourable Sir Robert Walpole and the rest of the Lords Commissioners of his Majesties Treasury," and "A few Minutes for Lord Wilmington's inspection with relation to what appointments [are] to be allowed the Judge at Gibraltar.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

In his Memorial Mr. Robinson prays the Treasury that his salary may be fixed at £1,000 a year; that he may have a suitable provision for Out-set Money, and for erecting Courts; and that he may have the house which was late in the possession of General [Francis] Columbine etc.

1740—41, Jan. 5th. Letter of Henry Mauger to Lord Wilmington. Dated in Guernsey and addressed to the President of the Council. 3 pp. Under cover of Peter Dobree, of Monument Yard, London, dated Jan'y 13th 1741.

The writer who has for seventeen years been the King's Attorney and Solicitor in Guernsey, informs the Council as to an intricate dispute which has been for long on foot between the Crown and the Jurats of Guernsey.

1742, June 16th. Copy of a Memorial from the Commissioners of the Customs, to the Lords of the Treasury, in favour of appointing Mr. Francis Hurdd to an office in the Customs. Signed by Richard Chandler, John Evelyn, Brian Fairfax, and Isaac Leheup.

Enclosed is Mr. Robert Paul's Report to the Commissioners of Customs, as to the services of the said Francis Hurdd, which is dated May 20th 1742. 2½ pp.

1742, Nov. 9th. Francis Hurdd to Lord Gower, Lord Privy Seal.

The writer ("a considerable dealer in haberdashery Wares") prays his Lordships' favour and interest in procuring him an appointment under the Commissioners of the Customs.

His statement of his claims proceeds as follows:—

"On the 12th of April 1739 I waited on Mr. [John] Hill one of the Commissioners of the Customs, and represented to him that vast quantities of goods were run at Hull and other outports to the very great loss of the revenue as well as prejudice to the fair trader By my instructions this clandestine trade has in a great measure been prevented. . . . I had the thanks of the Commissioners for this service with an assurance of being recommended to the Lords of the Treasury for a suitable post The Earl of Orford when at the head of the Treasury was made acquainted with these particulars and promised all due encouragement; but the elections then coming on, it was defer'd til the 30th of June 1741, when it was referred to the Commissioners of Customs for them to report the true state of the case, and what they thought proper to be done thereon. Here also by one occurrence or other intervening it was protracted till June last, and the post which was then vacant being supplied before their Honours' Memorial came to the Treasury; nothing has yet been done. I have the vanity to think my services may be thought worthy a superior post than that, and do most humbly pray your Lordship's favour and interest in behalf of your Lordship's," etc.

[1742 or 1743]. The Memorial of James Cockburn to the Right Hon^{ble} the Earl of Wilmington First Lord Commissioner of the Treasury. [Undated.]

Humbly sheweth—That by the accompts of his late Majesty's household (delivered into the Treasury) from the 30th June 1726 to the 11th of June 1727, there is

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

	£	s.	d.
due to the said James Cockburn to clear the accompts of wines bought by him, for his said Majesty's service, the sum of - - - - -	375	4	11
That there is likewise due to him for the purveyance of charcoal, furnish'd at the contract price and for wages within the said time the sum of - - - - -	1,280	14	6½
	£1,605	19	5½

“ He therefore most humbly prays your Lordship will be pleas'd to give directions, when any money comes in upon his late Majesty's accmpt, that it may be issued to the cofferer towards discharging the said debt of £1,605 19 5½.

Or in case there be not now any great likelihood of any more money coming into the Excheq^r for his late Majesty's arrears, that your Lordship will be pleas'd to take him into your compassionate consideration, and favour him with such other relief as your Lordship out of your great goodness shall think fit.

And he is in duty bound shall ever pray &c^a.”

[1742 or 1743.] The Memorial of John Earl of Loudoun, addressed to Lord Wilmington as First Commissioner of the Treasury etc. Undated.

The Petitioner prays that the arrears of the pension of £500 per annum granted to him in 1738 may be paid to him before the troops go abroad there being two years due to him.

[1745.] The memorial of Sir Robert Munro, Lieut. Colonel in Lord Sempill's Regiment [the 42nd foot]. Unsigned, undated, and unaddressed. It sets out the dates of the Commissions of the Memorialist, who was killed at the Battle of Falkirk in the following year, when Colonel of the 37th Foot.

1753, Oct. 3rd. The Petition of Henry Spelman Gent. to the Honourable George Townshend Esq^{re} (M.P. for Norfolk). Dated at Norwich. 3½ pp.

The Petitioner after setting forth at considerable length his descent from Sir Henry Spelman the Antiquary, and also the careers of his father and his uncles, concludes thus:—

“ That your Petitioner is the only survivor of the senior branch of Spelman, being the son of John Spelman abovementioned in the year 1737 became a Voluntier in His Majesty's Own Regiment of Horse [the 1st Dragoon Guards], then commanded by the Right Hon^{ble} the Earl of Pembroke, wherein he continu'd to serve for some time in England, and during the severall Campaigns in Germany and Flanders, in hopes of being preferr'd, but not having the good fortune to succeed and the regiment returning to England in 1746 by the good offices of some friends and there being then a vacancy he purchased a Warrant and was appointed a Quartermaster in the said regiment, but the change of the Establishment thereof, from Horse to Dragoons taking place the Xmas following, he thereby became greatly affected in his circumstances and by means of the great reduction of his subsistence, and meeting with considerable losses and disappointments in his private affairs, was reduced to the necessity of disposing of his Warrant in 1748 in order to extricate himself from the many difficulties and incumbrances he then laboured under, as many more particularly appear by his Certificate from the said regiment, to which he craves leave to referr. And having ever since labourd under the misfortunes of poverty and

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

[being] intirely destitute of employment [he] is now reduced to great distress.

He therefore prays such favour, recommendation or relief in the premises as to your great wisdom humanity and compassion shall seem meet.

And your Petitioner shall ever pray.

HENRY SPELMAN."

[No date]. Copy Certificate of Service of Henry Spelman, Gent. [Enclosed in the list].

THESE are to certifie That the bearer Mr. Henry Spelman hath serv'd for the space of ten years, private and corporal in his Majesty's Own late regiment of Horse commanded by General Sir Philip Honywood, and in my troop: four years of which he served abroad in the late war with approbation.

That he serv'd eight months as Quarter Master, till the establishment of the said regiment was chang'd from Horse to Dragoons.

That he likewise serv'd after the change of the establishment, two years and a quarter as Quarter Master in the said regiment, during all which time, of about thirteen years he distinguish'd himself, by honestly and faithfully discharging ev'ry trust repos'd in him as became a good soldier, and subject, but by the unforeseen disappointments and misfortunes in his private affairs, was obliged to obtain leave to sell his Warrant, to extricate himself from the difficulties and incumbrances he then labour'd under.

Given under my hand and regimental Seal in London this 12th day of March 1749-50.

T. CARR, Lt. Coll.

A true Copy. The Original of the above Certificate was sign'd and seal'd, at the time mention'd, by me.

T. CARR, Lt. Coll.

NOTE.—From recitals in the petition of Henry Spelman it appears that his father, John Spelman, who died in 1741, had been Clerk and Surveyor in the "Hand in Hand" Fire Insurance Office, which was founded by his uncle Henry Spelman of Wickmer, Esq., and was called the Friendly Society; had been afterwards a Volunteer in the 2nd Foot Guards, then Surveyor of the duty on printed calicoes, and lastly, a Land Carriage Waiter in the Port of London, to which post he was appointed by Sir Robert Walpole in 1735. It also appears that the Petitioner's grand father was the Rev. Charles Spelman, Vicar of Congan, and that the latter sold the family's Norfolk estates on the death of his father, Sir John Spelman, who was the eldest son of Sir Henry Spelman the Antiquary.

1771, May 7th. Capt. Daniel Shaw of the 62nd Regt. "To John Lees, Esq^{re}, Private Secretary to His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland." This letter is dated at Kinsdale, and endorsed "Capt. Shaw to Sir Geo. Macartney."

"Dear Sir—About five weeks agoe I did presume to apply to His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant to succeed the Ensign of my Company lately deceased in England.

I once in my life had an opportunity of exerting my self by going beyond the proper distance from my guard to rendre some small service to the present Lord Lieutenant of this Kingdom the day after the Battle of Lafelt, when he was the Hon^{ble} Captain Townshend and aide des camp to His late Royall Highness the Duke of Cumberland.—Notwithstanding it happened so long agoe I should imagine His Excellency may recollect the circumstance. In my last to His

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSB.

Excellency I made bold to mention the affair but never will any more. The multiplicity of State affairs I fear much will injure my application in feavor of my dear and most deserving young lad just in his sixteenth year well grown and properly educated, how happy I should be to have him in my own company; Inclosed you have a detail of my services which ought to have some weight."

The enclosure above referred to is as follows :—

A detail of Captain Shaw's service.

1744.—Joined the armie in Flanders a Volunteer in the 42nd Regiment.

1745.—Left the 42nd Regim^t and joined Lord Crawford's Corps a Volunteer. Was in the Battle of Fontenoia [Fontenoy]; the latter part of that day remained on the field of Battle to the very last, acted as aide des camp. Delivered his Lordship's orders to different Regiments in retreating particularly to the 42nd regiment which can avouch the same.

1747.—Was by the Duke of Cumberland's recommendation with fourteen or fifteen more Volunteers from the British armie appointed Ensigns in the Dutch service with a promise from His Royall Highness to be recalled whenever an opportunity offered to be provided for in His Majestie's service.

1756.—Was recalled by order of the Duke of Cumberland and appointed first Lieutenant in the 34th Regiment with rank from the date of my Commission in the Dutch service.

1761.—Was offered a Company in the new raised levies but preferred going on the Expedition against the Havanna which will appear by a letter from the Right Hon^{ble} Charles Tounshend Esq^r the Secretary at War.

1762.—Was appointed Captain of a Company in the 42nd Regiment.

1763.—Was put on half pay when the second Battalion was reduced.

1768.—Was appointed to a Company in the 62nd Regiment where he is at present one of the oldest officers in that Corps.

Captain Shaw was at the Battles of Fontenoia and Lafelt—was at the seige of Bergen op Zoom where he was stormed—was at the burning of the shipping at St^t Malo—takeing of Cherburgh at St^t Cas—was at the Siege of the Muro [the Moro Fort near Havanna] and reduction of the Havanna.

JACOBITE PAPERS AND LETTERS, 1703–1727.

1703. Papers relating to the Scottish Conspiracy of this year, viz. :—

1. "An account of the Conspiracy in Scotland." Unsigned and undated. 13 pp.

2. "The Substance of Sir John McLean's discovery to the Earl of Nottingham, No. 4." 5½ pp.

3. "The Duke of Queensbury's paper delivered to Her Majesty on Jan. 14th 170¾, No. 14." 6 pp.

4. "The Duke of Queensbury's paper delivered to Her Majesty on Jan^y 10th 170¾, No. 15." 5½ pp.

NOTE.—These four papers are printed in extenso in the House of Lords' Journals of Feb^y 8th 170¾, with the above titles. On the 15th of the same month the Lords moved an Address to the Queen for the production of further papers relating to the Conspiracy, amongst which they specified certain "Letters written in a Gibberish Language." The

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Earl of Nottingham on Feb. 19th, when he produced the papers that had been moved for, stated that Her Majesty thought it for the Public Service not to take any further notice of these letters. The Lords, however, entered them in their Journals on the following day, and on Feb. 23rd presented an Address to the Queen praying her to issue a Proclamation promising a pardon and a reward of £500 to whomever should "make known to . . . the Lords' Committees appointed to examine into the Scottish Conspiracy (of whom Lord Townshend was one) the Key or Cipher whereby the four letters written in Gibberish Language may be fully explained." Amongst these MSS. are copies in the handwriting of the 2nd Viscount Townshend of three of the Gibberish Letters with the interlinear translations given below. The three copies are dated March 4th 1703-4 and March 5th 1703-4, on which days, perhaps, the originals were translated to the Lords' Committee by some person acquainted with the key to them. The language of the translations would make it appear as if the informer were a foreigner.

March 4th 1703-4. Translation, under this date, of the Gibberish Letter dated June 1st. 1703, and addressed "To My L^d 7."

"My L^d,—I send by this gondellion an account of Lord three of the good luck when he had last remonstrance and particular account of the managements of this affair which at present, God be praised, to so happy an event is brought that we have all belief of speedy helps after long expectation of so many years, nothing now ruin hope but disagreement only yourselves by which will give distrust to the most timorous in the universe, and force these less forward in venturing on the bottom when they may fear it uncertain if not they do find unanimity. They hope of your in all counsells, and chiefly the Parliament present on which the eyes of Europe are fix'd. The Votes and resolutions will determine in everything whether any expectations are left of the return of your antient and ruined family, your resolves in asserting rights your against pretended authority of false Parliament that the people Scotch will assure not so altogether corrupted without keeping some sense of their antient vertue of fidelity and honour and yet gold English so often disposed to dazzle eyes their, both in the last reigns and this not so can overcome just sense of duty toward God fidelity towards naturall Prince and affection towards native country which debauch'd by the example of the English did forget to be Scotch; as for succession of Hannover and also the abjuration we apprehend no at all dues pligadunes two points about which not we doubt that a party the greater to venture too much fortindi to yield any compliance at that rate, too much fatal wou'd be a backsliding such after promises so many only they can affaires nothing to destroy and to loose good opinion which long they have taken pains to give the court French, of party honest in Scotland, not I mean this V: Mo [your Lordship] whose fidelity just from we depend but since it might be convenient to communicate this letter to others who have not your probity so perfect, I am willing these to shew what is expected from them, at the same time to shew the rocks upon which they may so good a course to split as was never more happy a juncture, so the French court never did shew greater inclination of supporting our interest present good endeavour of the noble rich and considerable Scotch and universal ferment (or disposition) in that Kingdome, too much they are conspicuous not to make clear sighted men to see his own interest and to graspe so happy a conjuncture of disengaging themselves from these difficulties in which they are entangl'd by breaking Zunamento armed his dispaire and conscience of guilt thus present happy prospect of their affaires at this time will give power of making good all promises and assurances of late made, the conjunction with Bavaria which here is thought a matter so well concerted, as to leave no room of miscarriage will give so fatal a blow to the confederacy little revicuda empire as to capacitate the French to impose laws to others, and to bring Badafes to points his own who are too much thoughtfull not to see his own proper advantage and to consult his interest, the game of the B[avarians] falling off French will be able to dispute with the English all on the sea, which point is not only credible beyond Tweed then amongst English, but upon it depend thus they will be able if they succeed to exert their generosity and us to help, if they miscarry in this great affaire them will force to cast eyes upon Scotland and to endeavour a chain there to break considerable diversion thus I did give V: Mor: [your Lordship] an account particular of affaires present so that I have nothing besides with which to trouble V: Mor: [your Lordship] but to beseech you [you] will exert usuall your vigour and wisdom in carrying on affaires of our session appearing [approaching?] and honour me to do answer speedy. I am Morion [my Lord] Vo: Mor: [your Lordship's].

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSB.

June 1st 1703. FIGILLISSIMO.

1703, March 5th. To Philotheus. No date to this letter.

"Sr,—Brought yours all satisfaction which is wonted when the I have to receive commands yours, also I must me confess apart some men did give me not small dissatisfaction to find some so senceless as not to be satisfied except all things be carryed in a manner their own proper, I did expect the last promise which we made might give satisfaction entire to people all I w'd desire them sensible that we have severall parties to satisfye who sh'd be distinguished only by their merit and forwardness in our service. I know that there are some chief (or forward) men whose little conscience of their own crimes too much did influence others, these beleiving that never they cou'd pardon deserve, they did not know the hereditary goodness [of] this family, which is not only to pardon but them to reward if it they shall deserve, they may depend upon such solemn assurances as were given, and as more conscious of guilt they are than others, they must endeavour by more timely penitence and zeal in the cause to obliterate the memory of crimes their, not I must think again they may play the old game as by the treaty of Breda, not we are God be thank'd in so bad circumstances as Charles the Second at this time it is better still to starve and be precarious then to obtain bread upon such barbarous and termes unreasonable, as ourselves, in better circumstances we are so they may reflect that they are in much worse themselves then ancestours their half an age of years past, at that time was to be feared a vast majority in this country and all things did govern whereas the affair now is altered and who are willing us to serve by inclination are most considerable in all respects if they shall not act upon principall we must consult interest our and we may declare for the strongest but ought to take care never to appear too late, our King young as he is father of all Universally will extend as before I did observe his protection to people all who shall lay hold on it, and as he will endeavour to bring to good subjects satisfaction universall in all reasonable [things] so on the other hand not will be imposed upon and tied up from rewarding the most faithfull and the antient friends, his behaviour already fatal too much hath been to family his, and at this time not w'd want this help, when he ask'd people his if that his father and uncle not had follow'd this advice curse[d]. I desire that these gentlemen w'd consider that it will be very well if after reconciliation

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
—

they are upon equall foot with them who never did fall but to engrosse every and to exclude them who we have merit constant is most unreasonable and also barbarous imposition, which Zungi imposed necessities of Princes was made in Scotland, and not offered in other country, I am willing such temper to keep my, this affair as if your own sentiments were; without exposing this letter which Venturi them sh'd exasperate by appearing from us, well I am assured of your inclination to serve so good cause and of your interest and power them among when always you supported them by necessary friendship which not was contrary to this strict probity which most justly did bring respect from all good but none more particularly then from V: M:—you Lordship's —.”

1703-4, March 5th. “To the late Queen at St. Germain.”

“Madam—In obeying the orders of V: M: [your Majesty] pressing the point to the gentleman V: M: did appoint me so that according to thought mine I did find at first much unwilling and shy which proceed's from timourousness of his nature and no want of obligation or affection towards V: M: & his Prince his service all satisfaction I cou'd from him gain is that whenever the King shall appear with power sufficient to protect his friends not will fail to have all in his power to serve the interest but as to that surrender of the place trusted to his charge me he did tell not he cou'd promise a thing which not might be in power his [to] perform, him I did tell that it was most absolute necessary that our friends sh'd possess any a port otherwise never we may venture a fleet on our coast y^t assurances of having harbour only c'd engage France to a powerfull prosecution of affairs our; he did reply that he cou'd do no more say, that he w'd do all in his power, but as to giving anything under hand he thought it most unreasonable to be hoped for, when him I did speak that paper blanc [carte blanche] he sh'd have, most generously he did reply that he w'd make no termes to those to whom there was obligation them to serve, that might (or c'd) engage thoughts of rewards to the goodness and bounty of V: M: after so generous a declaration I did think not it fitt him to press home any more in an affair which him had made uneasie he is without doubt a man of honour & upon whom V: M: with confidence may depend, I required my L^d Momerion the rest anhortiden [to exhort?] our that from [from that hour?] I have no more to trouble V: M: but to conjure in consideration to take these alterations which were requir'd little last gondellion [courier?], which will procure only satisfaction entire [to the] well inclined party of subjects your to give and fix the King's cause [in a] faithful [sure] way of success of which the accomplishment is the daily wish V: M: Figellissimo omilindi Sugnon ei aden Esclavansi [of your Majesty's faithful humble — and servant.]

London Oct. 8-19 [1702].

PHILARCHUS.

170 $\frac{1}{2}$, March 20th. Rough notes on seven sheets, in the handwriting of Lord Townshend, reporting the examination of certain witnesses by the Lords' Committee on the Scottish Conspiracy.

The evidence here preserved is that of the following witnesses on the following dates, and it agrees with the Committee's report to the House of Lords as printed in the House of Lords Journals:—

Colin Campbell, Thomas Clarke, Keith and M^{rs} Fox, on Feb. 23rd.

Sir John Maclean and Colin Campbell, on Feb. 24th.

Colin Campbell, on Feb. 25th.

Sir John Maclean, on 25th, 26th, and 28th.

Sir Thomas Stewart and Fergusson, on March 7th.

Campbell and Keith, on March 8th.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
—

1711, Jan. 17th. Colonel A[dolphus] Oughton to Horatio Walpole. From Bruges.

"I have hitherto heard no news of the arrival of Seaton and am perfectly persuaded he is not as yet in this town . . . a Scotch man who had been taken prisoner on board the Salisbury at the time of the intended descent, came here about three months since, and after having had frequent conferences for about ten days together with several suspected persons here particularly those of his own country, went from hence to Antwerp where he made a stay of about three weeks, and afterwards returned hither in his way to Paris . . . this may be the very person in question, although at the time of his being here he went by the name of Cambell and pretended to be a chirurgion. My Lord Drummond receives almost every day letters from France, Some of which I can easily have intercepted, if you think it proper to proceed in that manner . . . meantime I shall continue my endeavours to inform my self more particularly of his behaviour. . . . Major Erwyn is just arrived and desired me to assure you of his most humble respects."

1714, Augt. 24th. Dr Bernard Gardiner to Dr Smallridge Bishop of Bristol. Dated at Oxford and addressed "For the R^d Reverend Father in God the Lord Bishop of Bristol near the new Chappell, Westminster."

Complaining of the conduct of the soldiers recruiting in Oxford. . . . "This day the Serjeant who makes the speech for the Volunteers to come in, after that is ended, adds words to this effect, that the people would come in to serve King George, and not be governed by those who have a Pope in their belly. . . ."

1715, March 3rd. Lord Islay to Lord Townshend. From Edinburgh.

The writer promises to get the best information he can relative to the steps which the enemies to his Majesty's Government are making.

1715, March 5th. Matthew Price to the same. Addressed "To the Right Hon^{ble} the Lord Viscount Townshend Principall Secretary of State."

Intelligence about a secret Jacobite assembly. The place where it met is not specified and no names are given. The writer gives his address as "Matthew Price, Callico Officer att Mr. E. Graftons—By the Horse Ferry att Chelsea."

1715, May 10th. Nouvelles de Paris le 10 May 1715.

Mil[ord] Bullingbroock part pour aller faire sa residence dans le Lionnois à portée de Genève, muni d'une bonne lettre de crédit sur le Chevallier Richard Cantellon Irlandois, banquier en cette ville et Chevallier de la façon du Prétendant. Il reconnoit à présent le mauvais tour, que luy a joué le C[omte] d'Oxford, en se cachant dans sa Province, et faisant repandre le bruit, qu'il s'estoit sauvé, à dessein de faire peur à Mil[ord] Bullingbroock, et luy faire prendre le parti qu'il a pris. Il reconnoit aussy, que le Prétendant a rendu un grand service au Roy George, en parlant dans son Manifeste de l'intelligence qui estoit entre luy, et la feuë Reine Anne. Que par la mesme raison il avoit aussy ruiné tous ceux, qui avoient dans ce pays été dans ses interests assurant, qu'il n'y en avoit plus un seul qui désormais vouloit entendre parler de luy. Il a adjouté, dit-on, sans que je sache, si ce n'est pas une charité, qu'on luy prête, que cette seule démarche du Prétendant suffisoit de convaincre tout le monde, qu'il estoit vray fils de son père.

1715, May 18th. Mons^r Gullman to Lord Townshend. From Frankfort. In French.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

The writer wishes the British Government to employ as their Agent in Lorraine a certain honest man who had served King William, of glorious memory, both by sea and land, in his tenderest youth. This person is anxious to be employed to go to Bar le Duc, whence he will render an exact and faithful account of the Pretender, and of all the faces at his Court.

1715, July 9th. James Blakeway, John Hill, Jonathan Scott, Edward Jones, and Samuel Thomas to "The Rt Honorable the Earl of Bradford att his house in Soehoe Square — London." Dated at "Salop."

A letter signed by the above-named members of the corporation of Shrewsbury describing "a most notorious riott that hath happened in this Corporation," in which a meeting house was wrecked and the "goal" broken into. The riot commenced by "some few drunken idle boys . . . crying out down with the round heads, noe Duke of Marlbrô, Ormond for ever."

1715, July 18th. "The Information of Samuel Mence and Samuel Yardley of the City of Worcester, taken upon oath before the worshipfull Benjamin Mence Esq^r Mayor of the City aforesaid and Philip Bearcroft one of the aldermen and Justices of Peace of the said City."

This Information states that the Mayor and Alderman Bearcroft having on July 12th committed one Henry Weekes for riot and high treason, Mr. Benjamin Pearks, one of the aldermen, to encourage the rioters, said that none but a parcell of [those] that would swear anything would swear against him and that he was an honest fellow and that he would bail him out on the morrow morning, or words to that effect.

1715, July 22nd. Thomas Horsley to Lord Townshend. Dated at Conway.

Information received from "one Samuel Webber who was in the time of the last fatal M[inistr]y, a Messenger to her late Majesty, and who was very frequently sent with dispatches to France to the Duke of Shrowsbury," that he informed the late ministry of a plot to bring in the Pretender and that they would pay no attention to him as "they were so well paid with French money."

Same date. Draft of a letter from Lord Townshend to Mons^r Slingelandt, and a translation of the same into French. Unsigned.

"Sir—You will have seen by the publick prints that His Maiesty has rec^d certain advices from abroad of an invasion designed in favour of the Pretend^r and though the vigorous resolutions of the Parliam^t and the dispositions that are making on this occasion give reason to hope that this enterprise may end in the confusion of those by whom it was sett on foot, without troubling the State[s General] for any assistance, yet as it is impossible to foresee at once how far the contagion may spread, and since the Duke of Ormonde's flight may to[o] probably be in order to putt himself at the head of this attempt, His Maiesty knowing how zealously the Pens[ion]ary and you are concerned for the inseparable interests of the two nations has commanded me to let you know in confidence that he hopes that in case the provision of Forces made by Parliament should not be sufficient he hopes he may depend upon the States [General] letting him have 5 Regiments of the Scotch his subjects which are now in their service. His Majesty chose rather to make this overture to you and to the Pensionary than to write to the States upon this subject at first, as well to avoid the alarm such a step might cause as to prevent that delay and opposition which might be raised by the friends of France if such a proposition were brought into the States directly without any previous deliberation. His Majesty desires to receive your answer with all possible speed, and promises himself that in case of need there will be no difficulty to grant this assistance.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1715, July 23rd. George Lucy to Colonel Oughton. Dated at Warwick. "The Posse mustered at Warwick near 300 men with such firelocks as could be gott, I hope sufficient to dislodge the rioters you will observe by the Journall our intentions of approaching Birmingham about Tuesday."

1715, July 27th. A letter signed by the Earl of Sutherland, A. Grant, John Forbes, J. Campell, William Gordon and Robert Munro and addressed "To The Right Hon^{ble} The Viscount Townsend principall Secretary of State"; begging the favour of an appointment for an interview with him on a subject of great moment for his Majestie's service.

1715, July 30. Major J. Wyvill to the same. Dated at Manchester. Since writing three days before there have been no riots. Lieut. Colonel Holley, Major to Gen^l Carpenter's Dragoons, arrived yesterday, and attempted to supersede the writer in the command of the King's troops at Manchester but the writer threatened to put him in arrest till Lord Townshend's commands were known.

1715, Aug. 1st. Mons^r Gullmann to the same. Dated at Frankfort. In French. To-day our man writes me from Bar le Duc (under date the 26th) that the Pretender was there with his pretended mother, and their suite who were about 50 persons, all well affectioned for him. That the Pretender was preparing to start two days later for Nancy with Queen Mary to try to dispell the vexation they felt at the ill success of their affairs. That courriers reached them every day but that for lack of sufficient means he had not attempted to learn the contents of their despatches which were kept very secret. That he (the Pretender) had returned some time from Nancy and from Luneville. As for the current report that someone had attempted his life it was only a false alarm which laid hold of them for the following reason; an English priest having arrived at Bar le Duc was at the Pretender's Palace when he said that he wished to speak to him immediately. From the suspicions they had of him because he would not unburden himself to any one but the Pretender they imagined that he sought the latters life and that he was sent by his enemies to rob him of it; that his servants thereupon closed the doors and the priest was threatened with the severest tortures. However it appeared, after a severe examination, that he was a courier, despatched by his friends in England, and that he brought good news, which made the Pretender's people change their tone and flattered him so much that he presented him with five or six hundred crowns.

1715, Aug. 19. Dr. Trimnell, Bishop of Norwich, to the same.

The writer understands that Lord Townshend has heard from Mr. Turretin from Geneva to beg his good offices with the King for the recovery of a young gentleman out of the hands of the priests in the dominions of the King of Sicily. There is a fresh Alarm there about the Pretender but we are in a better condition to receive him than we were some time ago.

1715, Aug. 20th. ——— to ———. In French dated at the Hague, and endorsed "Mr S."

The writer learns that the States General have determined that the two vessels that were equipping at Ostend for the Pretender (as is supposed) shall be detained until their destination be known. At

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Versailles they say the King has been ill from a surfeit and that the Pretender's project got wind by being communicated to the English Court by the French Ministers.

1715, Augt. 25th. William Eden to Lord Townshend. Dated at Birmingham.

"Since the arrival of the King's messengers all things have been very quiet the Eyes of many of his majestie's poor mislead subjects begin to be opened since that grand incendiary Dr Sacheverell is removed from amongst us I am assured the person in their [the Messengers'] Custody will make a discovery to yo^r Lordships satisfaction."

1715, Augt. 27th. A paper dated at Hereford, and endorsed "Return of the Dep[ut]y Lieut[enant]s relating to Papists, Non Jurors, &c." It is signed by Thomas Wilkinson, Mayor, and by Benjamin Phillips, Jonah Taylor, Richard Poole, John Morse and Thomas —, Aldermen.

1715, Sept. 1st. The Earl of Sutherland to Lord Townshend.

"My Lord,—I have all this day been preparing my self for my voyage, if the ship were come to the Nore and had I those things soe very necessary for the King's service which I gave your Lordship a memorandum of, I shall be ready to goe and putt the country in as good a posture as I can for his Majesty's service, and venture my life in the good old cause, I doubt not but your Lordship has gott that affair of the Chamberlane of Ross done for my son Strallinaver after the same manner the Earl of Cromarty had it, favor me with anything extraordinary either from Scotland or France, being just now about my letters to North Britain, I am," etc.

1715, Sept. 5th. From — to —. A Jacobite letter, unsigned and unaddressed. Begins "My dear Kineman" and ends "My Dearest Cosin Yours."

"The old bully left every thing uncertain, and the young one is resolved to take care of himself in the first place. . . . The Duke of Powis as innocent and as harmless a man as any that suffer'd in the Popish Plot, is already taken up. The Duke of Argyle goes for Scotland next Tuesday and divers other Scotch Lords. Sir G. Bing is sail'd for the Irish Coast where he is to ly to prevent any succours to be sent to that Kingdom. Lord Oxford has given us his answer which is very full, very bold, and very fine. Mr Ford is return'd from France where he left Lord B[olinbroke] and the D. of O[rmond] in good health: He brings no news but that our apprehensions here of an invasion are groundless, and yet we proceed as if they were real. Walpole is to be at the head of the Treasury, and his brother Horace Paymaster in trust. The feuds at Court run high. I long to see you and will do it very soon, if nothing happens to intercept me. Take care of yourself. Liberty is as precious as life. . . ."

1715, Sept. 6th. Duke of Argyll to Lord Townshend.

I was this moment at the Treasury where I was told that the ten thousand pound credit is not yet gon to Scotland, and the thousand pound I was to receive is not to [be] had to day, by this your Lordship will see that I may be detained here and I not be in fault.

1715, Sept. 9th. Copy of the Earl of Mar's call to arms: addressed "To the Baillie and the rest of the Gentlemen of the Lordship of Kildrummy.—Given at Braemar."

On the same sheet is a copy of the following letter, of the same date, from the Earl of Mar to John Forbes of Invereran. Dated at Invercauld "at night."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

"Jocke,—Ye was in the right not to come with the 100 men ye sent up to night, when I expected four times the number. It is a prettie thing when all the highlands of Scotland are now rising upon their King and countrey's accompt, as I have accompts from them since they were with me, and the Gentlemen of our neighbouring Lowlands expecting us down to joyn them, that my men should be only refractory. Is not this the thing we are now about, which they have been wishing these six and twenty years—and now when it is come and the King and countrey's cause at stake will they for ever sitt still and see all perish.

I have used gentle means too long, and see I'll be forced to put other orders and I have in execution. I have sent you inclosed an order for the Lordship of Kildrummie which you are immediately to intimat to all my vassalls If they give ready obedience it will make some amends, and if not ye may tell them from me that it will not be in my power to serve then (were I willing) from being treated as enemies by those who are ready soon to joyn me, and they may depend on it, that I will be the first to propose and order their being so. Particularly let my own tennants in Kildrummy know that if they come not forth with their best arms that I will send a party immediately to burn what they shall miss taking from them, and they may believe this not only a threat, but by all that's sacred I'll put it in execution, let my loss be what it will that it may be example to others. You are to tell the Gentlemen that I'll expect them in their best accoutrements on horse back and no excuse to be any let off. Goe about this with all diligence and come your self and let me know your having done so, all this is not only as ye will be answerable to me but to your King and country."

Your assured freind and servant,
Sic subscribitur MARR.

1715, Sept. 15th. James Anderson to Lord Townshend? From Edinburgh. Unaddressed "I had advices from Perth and Dundee both of yesterday's date. That from Perth bears that the Quality and Gentry in the north are gathering about Blairgowry, Couper of Angus &c. And are about 4 or 500 Horsemen who that night or too morrow were to come there and proclaim the Pretender and to overturn the Magistracy there and settle new ones of their own appointing. Mar nor any other fool had not yet joined them and that the disaffected there were very uppish. From Dundee that they daily expect 100 Horse there to proclaime the pretender and that it was talked confidently they wou'd be there tomorrow That it was talkt there that D[uke of] Berwick was landed Tis also reported that some of Mar's vassalls refuse to rise with him and that he threatens them with fire and sword.

Yesterday afternoon the Dukes of Argyll and Roxburgh arrived safe here; and yesternight Brigadier Grant was ordered to take care of the Castle where the prisoners of the tolbooth here that were taken the night of the design upon that are carried to this evening. This day an express was sent to Newcastle to the commanding officers of Carpenter and Ker's Dragoons to hasten their march hither and such directions I hear are given as 'tis hoped we shall have here very soon a handsome army."

1715, Sept. 17th. ——— to ———. Unsigned and unaddressed.

"I would write to you oftner if any thing occurred worth troubling the Post Masters in the first place with reading, and afterwards yourself. The public prints have sent Charles Kainard into France;

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

I really thought him all this while in the Highlands Carteret and Boscawen are gone post into Cornwall, upon what arrand the Lord knows, for if we are to believe what we are told all prospect of a disturbance is over."

This, and the similar letter of Sept. 5th, are endorsed "Copies of letters taken upon Sr Wm Wyndham."

1715, Sept. 18th. Charles Lovell to the Lords in Council? From Dover. Unaddressed.

"Right Honourable Sirs last night at eight came over Mr Barton (of late one of the King's messengers) who went for London immediately, he could tell me no news.

Mas[te]r Browne who was principally intended to have been taken up by my Lord Townshend's Warrant which Mr Wilcox came down with is now come from Holland and is in towne here I believe 'twill not be possible to come at any wrightings of his because (but by what means I know not) I hear he's apprised of his being designed to have been taken up with Driscall."

1715, Sept. 21st. Colonel the Hon. Hatton Compton, Lieutenant of the Tower, to Lord Townshend. Dated in the Tower.

"My Lord—This morning at six a'Clock I received an order from the Privy Councill, and since that I have the honour of another letter from your Lordpp. both directing without loss of time my regulating the Militia of the Tower Hamlets, to be in readiness to march whenever His Majesty's service shall require; this is to acquaint your Lordpp that there is no Horse belonging to the Tower Hamlets but two very strong Regiments of Foot; and [they] are ready to march when His Majesty pleases. I am etc.

[P.S.] This morning early I gave orders for the searching for, and seizing all Papists, Jacobites, and Non-Jurors, according to orders."

Same date. Lord Dupplin to the same. Dated in Leicester Fields "a quarter after seven in the morning" and unaddressed.

"My Lord—Mr Nightingale is here with your Lordship's Warrant to bring me to your Lordship. I'm ready to wait upon your Lordship whenever you please. I only beg the favour of your Lordship that the messenger may have orders to stay here with me, till your Lordship is ready to examine me, My wife is just now in labour, which makes me give you this trouble. I am," etc.

1715, Sept. 23rd. Council Minutes, in the handwriting of Lord Townshend, dated at Whitehall:—

[That] an extract of Lord Hay's letter relating to the ships who are cruising on the coast of Scotland be sent to the Admiralty for their opinion and to desire in case they approve of what is therein propose[d] they wou'd send directions accordingly.

to thank the Mayor of Glasgow.

that the Lord Hay be removed out of his house by the messenger into custody.

A Councill [must be held] for [drawing up] a Proclamation for the apprehending Sir William Wyndham.

1715, Sept. 30th. Lord Carteret to Spencer Compton. Dated at Stowe and unaddressed.

"Sir—I still persist in my opinion that there will be no troubles in the West; notwithstanding there are many people in very ill humour, the design being so happily discover'd, that disaffected persons are so dampt, that they rather strive to smother their own contrivance then to bring it to bear. If any insurrection shou'd be in this country, we are in a bad posture of defence. I sent a messenger last Wednesday to Mr. Boscowen,

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

who lives fifty miles westward from me, that if there shou'd be any occasion, we may take the best means we can. The county about me has been alarm'd by a flying report that the Tinnors are in arms upon the account of Sir Richard Vivvian's being in custody, but nothing of it was true when it was said, and I have not heard anything these two days ; however severall gentlemen have been here begging my protection, and assuring me that they will follow me for the King's service, if any rebellion shou'd break out here. I heartily wish that all things here may be quiet ; the observation I make is, that the discontented people are rather cold to the present government, than dispos'd to venture any thing against it. I know you will do me the justice to thinke that I will do all I can for the best ; and I will have the vanity to say, that not one of the Kings subjects is ready to hazard more in his service, than I, to the utmost of my mean abilities, will be. I thank you for your second letter and am sorry to find so near [a] kindsman as Sir William Wyndham is to me so deeply engaged. If any thing happens within my knowledge—you shall have a speedy account of it. I am, yours,

CABTERET."

1715, Oct. 31st. Mons^r H. de Caris to Lord Townshend. In French. Dated at Ostend and unaddressed.

The writer explains the precautions he is taking to prevent the embarkation of the Pretender from Ostend or its environs.

1715, Oct. 7th. "Nouvelles de Paris." In French. Unsigned.

..... "The adherents of the Pretender whose numbers are much increased for some months past no longer conceal that they have a revolt all ready to break out in England in favour of that of Scotland, but notwithstanding their entreaties the Pretender postpones his departure from time to time, and one sees sufficiently clearly that he thinks he would expose himself too much as yet if he were to cross over to England"

[1715?], Oct. 10th. Council Minutes in the handwriting of Lord Townshend. Endorsed "Oct. 10th. Minutes:—"

To seize Row a Dyer at the Elephant and Castle in Drury Lane and search his house for one Painter and one Rowe his brother.

That the western waggons be searched at the several inns for arms.

To refer the informations sent by M^r Boscowen to the Attorney [General] in order to have indictments prepared against as many as there are two witnesses against for H[igh] Treason, in order to have the said indictments proved at the first opportunity.

That there be an advertisement in the Gaz[ette] promising a reward of 100^{li} to any one that shall discover so as to bring to justice any of the persons mentioned in the said informations.

1715, Oct. 11th. "Nouvelles de Paris." In French. Unsigned.

..... "The revolt of the Scotch makes much noise here, and the adherents of the Pretender say out loud that there is a considerable one [preparing] in England which must break out shortly, and as the Duke of Ormond has disappeared for the last two days it is believed he has left to put himself at the head of that party, and it is asserted that many persons of consideration are mixed up with it.

..... There is positive news that the Pretender was still at Bar le Duc, and that he always refused to leave before seeing more daylight in his hopes"

1715, Oct. 17th to Oct. 27th. Copies of four letters from the Earl of Mar, dated at Perth and Aucharder, and addressed to Lord Kenmure and to Mr. Thomas Forster (M.R. for Northumberland) who is addressed

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

as 'Mr Forrester.' Each of these letters is endorsed "Received from Major Browne—Jo. Micklethwaite."

1715, Oct. 18th. Michael Pallister to the Honorable General Wills at Preston. Endorsed: "Received 26th Novbr 1715—from Major Browne—Jo: Micklethwait."

"Sir,—I have sent you a list of those gentlemen that joined the rebels about Lancaster and Preston as i have the account from a neighbor of this place."

The list, which is headed "Lancaster Papists," is as follows:—

My Lord Mollineux of Bardsey, Mr Walton of Windermore, Mr Hodgson of Leighton, Mr Carns of Halton, Mr Dalton of Thurnham, Mr Butler of Rawcliffe, Mr Leyborn of Naleby, Mr Cliftons of Lytham, Mr Westbys of Bourne, Mr Tyldesleys of Lodge, Mr Whittingham of Whittingham, Mr Threlfall of Ashes, Mr Shuttleworth of Brookside, Mr Shuttleworth of Turnover, Mr Plesington of Dimples, Mr Hesketts of Goosnargh, Mr Townley of Townley, Mr Brockholes of Claughton, H^r Winkley of Banister hall, Mr Walmsley of Showley, S^r Francis Anderton of Lostock.

1715, Oct. 23rd. Copy of a letter from Francis Campbell and A. Campbell "to Glengary and the Cap^t of Clanronald."

"Wee send the bearer to you that you may lett us knowe what further damage has come to your knowledg, wee will as soon as wee can make a strict and impartial enquiry into it, and as you desire in your letter will send after you, with a line to one of you two with ane account of it and wee are," etc.

No date. Copy of a memorandum, in the same handwriting as the last. Signed by Alex^r Macdonald and headed "Declaration of Glengary."

It states that in Oct. 1715 at Inveray the Earl of Yla appointed Clanronald and Glengary to treat with Sir Duncan Campbell of Lochnell and L^t Coll Campbell of Finab on the part of General Gordon, and it was agreed that Gordon and his people should abandon Argyllshire and compensate the poor people for their losses, and on the other hand that the Hanoverian troops should not molest the clans. It was after this treaty that the Earl of Broadalbin [Breadalbane] and his men were allowed to make their escape out of Argyllshire. Most of the tenants of the Duke of Argyll on his lands of Morvene were in arms at Sheriffmuir with Lochiel, and though Lochiel had with him all of the Camerons from the Marquis of Huntley's property in Lochaber it was by the positive orders of the Marquis. The money that was promised as a pension to the Clans by the late Queen Anne "of which latter they did never gett any" was for the readily assisting her Majesty against all her enemies at home or abroad.

The last two papers are endorsed "Inf[ormatio]ns relating to the D[uke] of A[rgyll]."

1715, Oct. 24th. "Instructions given by the Earl of Mar to a certain person to be communicated to the King's friends be south Forth."

An endorsement in nearly the same words gives the name of the person to whom these instructions were sent as M^r Miller, and it bears a further endorsement: "Received 26th 9ber 1715—from Major Browne, —Jo: Micklethwait."

1715, Oct. 28th. A Memorandum, in French, endorsed "Avis de M^r de Pettecum] 28 Oct. 1715."

It is headed [in French] "Secret advice as to the designs of the Pretender on the Kingdoms of Great Britain which I have had the 28th of October 1715."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
—

The Pretender is immediately about to start for Scotland, Lord Bolingbroke will remain in France to hasten the execution of the Secret Treaty concluded between the [ex]Queen of England in the name of the Pretender with the Regent of France, by virtue of which France will assist with money and arms. A separate article in the treaty stipulates for the marriage of the Pretender with the second daughter of the Duke of Orleans.

The Duke of Ormond as soon as he lands in Scotland will advance to the frontiers of England to encourage a general rising to compel his Majesty to divide his forces and to prevent his sending more troops into Scotland, of which country Lord Mar will try to render himself the master.

The Pretender on his arrival in Scotland will summon a Parliament to regulate the succession to the Crown and to denounce as traitors the adherents of his Majesty, and will publish a new Manifesto inviting the nation to submit itself, in which he will promise to make no changes in Religion and to have Mass only said for him in his chamber. The Catholics in England furnish every month a sum of money for this enterprise and the Court of Rome has promised fifty thousand crowns a month.

The Duke of Berwick who has received letters from the Pretender has been to see the ex-Queen. He has given orders to prepare his equipage which is to leave in a vessel from Brest. He is about to ask the Regent for permission to serve his King which will probably be refused but nevertheless he will follow the Pretender.

The Pretender has not chosen to hazard himself rashly on the assurances that have reached him from England and Scotland, and he will not be decided to start without being sure of external assistance. He will embark in Normandy on board of a vessel he has purchased.

At the instigation of the Court of France he has sent a confidential agent to Madrid to beg his Catholic Majesty to fulfil his promises and assist him to mount the throne of his ancestors.

By the same advice he has applied to the King of Sicily, to whom it is represented that he is interested through relationship (being the next heir to Great Britain should the Pretender die childless) and besides that he ought to fear a close union between the Emperor and the King of Great Britain.

Those who have pressed the Pretender to undertake this enterprise assure him that all Scotland will declare for him immediately he lands, and that the discontent in England is so general that there will be a rising in every county. That the army itself is divided and that the King cannot trust it. That both officers and men are equally disgusted with the Dutch troops being brought over. A certain Ecclesiastic has written to one of his friends in France that the Pretender has no need of troops to defeat the English Army. His presence alone will suffice, and a single pathetic address would make them throw down their arms.

France to deprive the King of foreign assistance will foment the war in the North and encourage, by subsidies, certain princes of the Empire to aid the King of Sweden.

Up to the present time those who are opposed to the Ministry in England have not declared themselves for the Pretender. The Duke of Ormond and Lord Bolingbroke hold out hopes that they will do so soon as the Pretender shall land and shall have regulated and confirmed the liberties of the Church of England and of the Nation.

1715, Nov. 1st. From ——— to ———. Unsigned and unaddressed. Endorsed "Received 26th Novb: 1715—from Major Browne,—Jo. Micklethwait."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

The writer gives an account of the mutiny of some Highlanders at Langholme, for want of pay, when ordered to march to England.

Same date. John Campbell to Lord Townshend. Dated at Edinburgh. Unaddressed. "Wee are all soe sensible of the great service the Duke of Argyll did to this town, in preventing the danger it was in, of falling into the hands of the enemie, and how absolutelie necessary it is for the King's service to preserve it, that wee have been at the expence of making such works at all the avenues of it, as may render it defencible; without giving his Grace the trouble of a detachment from the little army he has to employ against the designs of the enemy at Perth, which your Lordship will judge is of as great importance as Stirling to his Majestie's service.

I am sorry to fynd both from the printed papers and private letters that soe bad acc^{ts} of our affairs are sent to London. Since I began to write this letter I have advice that the three regim^{ts} of Claytone, Marsone and Egertone, are landed from Ireland, Egerton's with 2 companies of Clayton's wer last night at Glasgow, the rest are on ther march. I shall not pretend to give your lordship any account of the rebels at Perth since by this express the Duke of Argyll writes to your lordship or M^r Stanhope. And as for those in the south wee have noe certain accounts of them since they arrived at Howick wher they were in great confusione onlie that some of the Highlanders were come back to Selkirk which I beleive may be deserters from them, I am not affraid that the Highlanders will ever attempt goeing to England unless joyned by a considerable more number which I hope now is prevented since these three Regim^{ts} are landed. I am, etc.

[P.S.] The Inclosed copie of a letter from Jedburgh will show your lordship the disorder these Rebels are in."

1715, Nov. 2nd. General Cadogan (afterwards Lord Cadogan) to ——. Dated at Brussels and unaddressed.

"This minute Mons^r Plessen is arrived here from Nancy, and has brought the particulars contained in the enclosed relation of the Pretender having left Commercy early on Wednesday last, in order to go through France into England the Barrier Treaty will I hope be signed on Thursday next.

I have, etc.,

WILLIAM CADOGAN."

1715, Nov. 5th. Two Informations sworn before Tobias Paine, Mayor of Oxford, and William Wright, J.P., by Daniel Houghton and Mathew Wisdom; relative to the finding of a large number of sword-blades, etc., in the house of one George Vincent, a cutler.

1715, Nov. 6th. Sir Jonathan Trelawney, Bishop of Winchester, "To the Lord Bishop of Norwich Clerk of the Closet to the King at his hous in Stretton Street neare Devonshire hous Westminster."

Endorsed. "B^p Winchester upon signing the Declaratⁿ."

"MY VERY GOOD LORD,

I RECEIV'D the expresse fryday at night, and having sign'd it with both my long names at length to shew I did it heartily. I forwarded it to our brother of Oxon, tis admirably well drawn, and I wish it had been sooner thought on; and why is it not forthwith printed? it will doe more to quashing the rebellion than an army, at least a Scotch one can, or will.

I am with greate respect and affection

Your most faithful servant and loving brother

JONATHAN WINCHESTER."

Same date. An anonymous letter of advice from Oxford. Unaddressed.

MARQUES
TOWNSEND
MSS.

"My Most Honored Lord,—The Soldiers keep us here in good order at night. We have scarce had any tumults except on Monday night some scholars in Catstreet met a file of soldiers, and after they had pass'd them they cry'd out an Ormond and a Bolingbroke and the Pretender. Upon which two musquetts were fir'd after them, but without doing hurt. This hap'ning the first night has struck such a terror, that I believe will contribute much to our future peace. Many of the scholars had form'd a design to corrupt the soldiers by giving them money, and entertaining them in their butteries and kitchens, but the officers have had timely notice of this; and on Fryday two soldiers run the gantlope for drinking Ormond and Bolingbroke's healths, and confusion to their officers. This fact hap'ned at Wadham Coll[ege], and the soldiers were seduc'd to it by four scholars, who were conven'd before the Vice-Ch[ancello]r, but the proofs being not full enough, the Vice-Ch[ancello]r thought fit to dismiss them without punishment.

On Fryday in the evening the officers search'd for arms, and at Vincent the cutler's, they seiz'd 120 large cutting swords. About 10 at night the Coll[onel] sent for me and acquainted me with the success he had at Vincent's, but Ethersey and the rest had convey'd away their arms, having had suspicion of a search. Upon perusal of Vincent's books which were seiz'd I found a Memorand[um] which I believe will be of use to the Government.

The Memorand[um] was this

Mr Vicery	- 6 ^d	} A mercer in town.
Mr Vicery	- 3
Mr Jones	- 6	Of All Souls I believe.
Mr Thatcher	- 6	A Baker.
Mr Sherwin	- 6	A Milliner.
Mr Greenway	- 2	A Quarter-M[aste]r in the Militia under Lord Abington.

Now all these persons are violent Jacobites; and that Jones of All-Souls is meant by Jones I have reason to think, because he was the person hinted at in my first letter, who was seen at Vincent's the day Coll[onel] Pepper search'd for Owen, and it is more than probable the letter d at the head of the numbers signifies dozens, and what these dozens should be besides swords which are lodg'd with these persons I can't imagine. It appears likewise by the books some swords have been delivered to Bayly the Cheshire Carrier. I had very little time to look into the books, or else I believe further discoveries might have been made. I design to get them privately into my chamber, with one of the officers, and then your Lordship will hear further from me.

Yesterday we kept here with due solemnity (illuminations excepted). Bells were rung, and bonfires made in most parishes without disturbance. I hope to hear the same good order was preserv'd in London and Westminster, tho' I was inform'd, that the Tory mob had given a challenge to the Whigs and were resolv'd to engage them last night.

We have lately had two or three robberies committed in the London road near the town. The persons are known to the Buckinghamshire men, but are not yet taken.

Lord H. is very well and gives his service.

Mr Talbot I hear is in town, but I have not yet seen him.

I am with all duty, my Lord,—

Your Lordship's most obedient and H: Serv^t."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1715, Nov. 9th. A list of signatures dated at Preston, and endorsed, "Received 26th Nov^{br} 1715—from Major Browne—J: Micklethwait."

This list is headed "All Gentlemen who are come to this place to serve his Majesty are desir'd to set their names to this paper, and such as have been in the army to mention the post in which they served."

The signatures are: Robert Cotton, John Trafford, Richard Towneley, Richard Gascoigne, Robert Scarisbrick, Jordan Langdale "served two years under Coll. Sheldon and three years under Coll. Dorington," Hugh Anderton, Charles Chorley, William Nelson "serv'd under Captin Eccleston as Quarter Master of Horse," Richard Chorley "Ensign in Coll. Gage's Regiment," Alexander Osbaldiston, John Cotton, Francis Anderton, Roger Diccinson "Lieut^{nt} under Coll: Gage and town Major of Chester," Francis Legh "Capt: of a Man of War," Lionel Walden, John Leyburne "Lientenant," Cuthbert Hesketh, Richard Chatterworth of Brookside "sub-brigadier in the Guards under the Duke of Berwick," Thomas Carus, Albert Hodshon, Edward Howard of Norfolk, Ralph Standish, Thomas Stanley, and Ralph Grappe.

[No date.] The following Jacobite Proclamation is endorsed:—"Received 26th 9^{ber} 1715—from Major Browne—Jo: Micklethwait."

BY THE KING. A PROCLAMATION.—JAMES REX.

WHEREAS by the Laws and Constitution of these Realms our native born Prince James the Third immediately upon his fathers demise had the sole unquestionable right to these his paternall hereditary dominions and our Gracious Sovereign now coming to assert his own right and relieve his Kingdoms from the tyrannicall oppression arbitrary power and foreign yoke under which they groan THEREFORE WE NOBLEMEN Gentlemen and others his Majesty's faithfull subjects being now met together in obedience to his royall commands and being fully resolv'd to spend our lives and fortunes in his Majestie's service for the promoting his happy restoration the reestablishment of the Constitution in Church and State and the deliverance of our native county Do hereby unanimously and in concert with others his dutifull subjects in many different parts of these Realms with heart and voice proclaim notifie and declare to all men that the most august and high born Prince James the third by the grace of God King of England &c: Defender of the Faith is the only rightfull and lawfull Sovereign of the Realms to whome alone we acknowledge our allegience and subjection to be due inviting hereby all his Majestie's faithfull and loyall subjects of both nations to join with us in his service and promising to stand by them in the prosecuting of these glorious ends.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

1715, Nov. 10th. E. Francke "To the R^t Hon^{ble} the Earl of Darwentwater." Endorsed:—"Received 26th Novb. 1715—from Major Browne—Jo. Micklethwait."

The writer, who is in confinement on suspicion of concealing arms, begs his Lordship to use his interest for his enlargement, and explains that the arms in question were delivered to Sir Henry Houghton, who was Colonel of the Militia of the Hundred from which he is writing.

1715, Nov. 11th. The Parole signed by Thomas Wybergh, a prisoner in the hands of the Jacobite General Forster at Preston in Lancashire, under which he undertakes to get himself exchanged within twenty days for Allen Ascough, Esq^r, a prisoner in the hands of the Governor of Carlisle, or else to return to the said General Forster's army and continue his prisoner during his pleasure.

Endorsed as the last.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1715, Nov. 15th. Lord Carlisle to Lord Townshend. Unaddressed. Dated at Preston.

"MY LORD,

THE Expresse sent yesterday morning by Mr Wills [General Willes] would acquaint your Lordship that the rebels have surrender'd at discretion. . . . I being particularly well acquainted with my Lord Darwentwater and my Lord Witherington (and they being at this time under great dejection of mind) I thought this might be a proper time to trye if they were disposed to make a confession. I therefore lay'd before them in the best manner I could the little reason they had to expect the King's mercy unless they did some thing very material of this kind to deserve it. I asked them several questions, and particularly I told them they must know what part Sir William Blackett, my Lord Downe and some Bishopbrig Gentlemen had in this undertaking. . . . I am really of opinion that they do not know much, I believe they had promised Mr Forster, whenever he called upon them they would rise and that they were so simple as to do it, and to believe him when he told them, that all England would do the same.

I have adviced Mr Wills to call upon Mr Forster to refund all the publick money he obliged the King's officers to pay in the places through which he marched. I have likewise desired him to take particular care, that no innocent person be carryd away when the prisoners are removed, for I am afraid several of the country people were in the disorder and confusion hurried into the church, with the rebels, that being the place where they are at present secured.

I shall return home tomorrow with great ease of mind hoping weo may live quietly now if good care be taken of my Lord Marr.

[P.S.] Allmost all the Roman Catholicks of Northumberland, and of this county are now in your power."

1715, Nov. 22nd. James Craggs to the same. Dated at Preston and unaddressed.

"My Lord, I had stopd Major Brown whom Mr Wills [General Willes] was dispatching to London till I receiv'd the letter your Lordship was pleased to write me last Saturday. It came to my hands this minute, and tho I could wish my powers had been somewhat fuller, I don't despair of making such a use of it as may answer your Lordship's expectations, for by what I understand of Mr Forster's behaviour he seems to think himself that this will be the only means to preserve his life and family, tho in his professions he has said he was ready to doe any thing becoming a man of honour so that I cannot judge how he will understand that to be effected by my propositions till I come to talk with him. He is certainly the man that can speak to some purpose if he pleases. I may also as I see occasion try my Lords Derringtonwater and Widdington. I hear the first seems most desirous to doe somewhat to save his life, the latter's conduct has been sensible and in his principle more steady, saying that he had no other encouragement to take arms, but that he thought he should make a bad figure with his religion and his opinion to sit still in this cause when his neighbours and so many others had. That he had first propos'd to surrender and by that means sav'd many of his subjects lives, which if he could obtain he would deserve it by his future conduct. These are the only men one can hope any good from. And your Lordship will find Mr Wills had sent them two days agoe to Wigan, where they are followed this morning by the rest of the prisoners in their way to London. However I thought it proper to come on to this place, I shall goe there again tomorrow morning and stay as long as I judge it to any purpose, from whence I will send your Lordship punctuall accounts of what passes, thò I hope after a day or two's residence to bring you my accounts myself.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

The powers for holding Court Martials being only directed to Gen^l Carpenter, Mr Wills does not think himself authorised to execute the half pay officers and other deserters. He sends up to Maj^r Brown the lists of the prisoners and other intercepted letters of Derringer Water Widdrington and Forster.

I find this expedition was as fortunate for the conjuncture as any other circumstance because the rebels in two or three days would certainly have been joyned by as many thousands well armed and mounted, but now one would wonder where all these disaffected people are gone, for you meet thro' all these countrys with none that are not ready to live and dye by King George and the Government.

1715, Nov. 23rd. The same to the same, from Preston.

"My Lord, This is only to rectify a mistake in my letter of yesterday, Major Brown being detained by Gen^l Wills till this morning, that went by the post, and he will set out with the lists of prisoners and their papers this morning, I am also going to Wigan three hours hence, from whence I will trouble your Lordship but with one letter, and follow it very close my self; My Lord Orkney has sent an express here to Mr Wills with a letter to intercede for Lord Ch. Murray, his nephew a son of Lord Basil Hamilton, and an officer in his own Regim^t one Dalzell. He says he has spoke to the King and the Duke of Marlbro who bid him send. Wills has lost the letter or I would send it your Lordship.

This morning Coll^o Killigrew is march'd into quarters at Lancaster with Dormer's regim^t and part of the prisoners to be put into the Goal. The Brigadier is in a fair way of recovery. I am," etc.

Same date. General George Carpenter to——. Dated at Nottingham and unaddressed.

"Sir,—Having writt to you of my coming to this place, I was in hopes to find your commands here. I had a letter from Mr Pulteney telling me onely, that his Majesty judg'd itt necessary for his service I should continue here till a more perfect account of affaires from Scotland; so tis likely I may be sent there, having offer'd my self lately; as I did before to follow the rebels with fresh troops in case they should have gott by me northward.

Sir, after having chac't the rebels a month, with ununsual difficultys and fatigue, saving Newcastle by dilligence, and att last driving them into the nett, where I was present and commanding att taking them; tis a great mortification that Mr Will's who march't but two days and made a rash attack, highly blameable, by loosing so many men to no purpose, (of which you will hear more) except to serve his ambition by ending itt before I came up should have friends to magnify what he did so as to prevail on his Majesty to make him Lieut. Gen^l for his good services; and no notice taken of me nott so much as a compliment. This is very unequall treatment, and a great discouragement to me, having serv'd well, and with success; for the cheif prisoners assur'd me and others that as soon as they saw my detachment from the steeple the Lord Widdrington who was in the churchyard said very loud before their men that they were all undone, and upon that they consulted to ask

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

termes, which they did in 4 houres after my arrivall, thò nott yeikled till next morning. Twas I that insisted that Lord Darwentwater and one of the Makintoches should come out hostages, and was with them arguing their having no termes; thò I have good reason to believe Wills assumes to have done all himself. One very great fault I committed, viz. just as wee were mounting to go into the towne Mr Wills was taking on him great command, att which I us'd him very freely, and was going to putt him in arrest, butt my Lord Carlisle who was present, and Lord Lumley begg'd me nott to do itt, and indeed att that instant itt might have proved fatall to his Majesty's Service, for the rebells had yet possession of their armes and the towne; and Wills was likely enough to have call'd the troops that came with him to support him. So I did not do itt; and when in the towne I made another false step very unthinkingly. For seeing there would nott be cover for half the forces, out of pitty and care of those harass't troops that came with me, I sent them away to good quarters att Wigan, and so on to these they are now in, which I after imagin'd took the command from me, when none of my troops were there; so could not putt him in arrest, thò he deserved itt. I find the prints give him all the power and applause, I suppose by his own or some friends direction, and I fear his Majesty may be under that mistake also, which makes me desirous to come to London, otherwise no busyness or ease should hinder my pressing to go on service, thò a winter's campagne in Scotland, which however I am willing to do, provided I have justice done me in this affair, for itt must be sett right. I desire your friendship in reading over this letter again with attention, and then I know your justice is so great, that I shall nott suffer in my reputation or any other respect by my absence. I intreat the favour of a line in answer, and am, etc.

[P.S.] I have writt to the Duke of Marlborough and referr'd his Grace to this letter which please to shew him."

1715, Nov. 24th. James Craggs to Lord Townshend. Unaddressed. Dated at Wigan.

"My Lord—I arrived here last night and had Mr Forster to sup with me, I told him in the best manner I could the reason why I desired his company, and the behaviour by which he might deserve the King's mercy. He answer'd me that if he were to declare all he knew it would come far short of what he believ'd might be expected from him and then he doubted he should not be thought to deserve his pardon when he had no more to say. All the information I could get from him amounted to this, that he had promis'd the Duke of Ormond to rise whenever he should land, but was precipitated into it sooner by the order to seize him, that he came out of town when the Duke made his escape. He does not own any concert with other people, but says in general he look'd on the whole body of the Torys to be in it. That he has indeed been in companys where their King's health has been drunk but unless he had his pardon does not see to what purpose he should be more particular, for he imagines he should be suppos'd to know a great deal more. So we have parted on these terms, that if when he comes to London he thinks I may be of any service to him, which I can only be by his putting it in my power, I shall be very ready to wait on him and intercede for him. So we have parted with this only and no promise of my side, and I would observe to your Lordship that the same thing as to my part has concluded my conferences with every one to whome I have spoke. The next was my Lord Derringwater; he swears he was in no secret himself but will be very ready to relate any former passages he can recollect and promises on the road to make it his business to get what information he can from the other prisoners and acquaint me with it at London. My Lord Widdrington says the same thing as to his own ignorance of what measures were intended and promises but with more reserve than the former that if he can persuade any of them to tell any thing material they know to save their lives he will use his utmost endeavour, but thinks he cannot betray anything they should say without their consent. I have also discours'd one Gascoigne and a gamester who had fled with the Mac Donalds and others from the Bath, and fell into this gang by chance. He tells me he was in no deep secret, but understood there Sir W. Wyndham, Sir W. Carew and Sir Copplestone Banfield were to rise, that he had been told my Lord Gore was in it, but it was in a gentle way of talking amongst the Jacobites and he could not be more particular, only they were drunk with an opinion their game was secure. The last man I entertain'd is one Tunstall a Roman Catholick who has been very active, but he seems also as determin'd, and rejects with great contempt the character of an informer. In all these conversations I had the assistance of Coll^o Neist who had had the chiefs at his quarters at Preston, and in case they will or can make any new discovery at London would be very usefull, for he's a very sensible man and has been very civil to them. I am afraid this will not appear to your Lordship a very great piece of service, but as I could doe no more I intend after having tryed this day if I can get any thing else amongst 'em, to set out to morrow for London where I propose to be on Monday morning next to give your Lordship a more distinct account of this treaty between the rebels and me and assure you no body is more what I am," etc.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

1715, Dec. 13th. Lord Nairne to the same. Dated in the Tower of London and unaddressed.

"My Lord—If your Lordship will be pleased to be so good as to forgive what I have either omitted or neglected in answering to your Lordships queries by reason of a deafness I have had the misfortune to labour under these severall years, it will be an obligation I shall never forget and I hope for forgiveness from the rest of your august assembly for any disorder or confusion I have been in when I had the honour to appear before them. I'm sure it was my duty as well as inclination to behave my self with all due respect to your high caretars; if I durst presume to beg pardon for my life and that only, at the King's hands I shall throw my self at his feet for mercy and I'm sure I will not want English as well as Scots friends to answer for me. I shall ever prove as gratefull an object of it as any. I with all humilitee press this no less for my poor wife's sake and 12 children then my own, if this can be graciously obtain'd, may the never failing mercies of Almighty God reward His Majesty, offspring, and councilors shall be ever the earnest wishes of him who is with all profound respect My Lord" etc.

[No date.] Richard Lluellin to the same. Addressed "To the Right Honourable The L^d Viscount Townsend one of His Majesty's Principall Secretary[s] of State."

"My Lord, In obedience to your commands I came to London last Saturday with Mr Nightingall.

And tho I am now a prisoner I would prefer an honourable way of making my application the most agreeably to your Lordship, before the loss of business in my profession, or the loss of my liberty.

For two reasons, I dare not press for a speedy examination, tho never guilty of any crime against his present Majesty, or Ministry.

The First is: least it may be suggested that I did it, to prevent some future, some more material evidence.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
—.

The second because your Lordship's hours are taken up with persons of greater figure and more weighty affairs.

These being my real thoughts: if your Lordship would be so generously kind to allow the following persons (all unexceptionable in your interest) free access to me twould make my confinement more easy, and lay the greatest obligation upon, My Lord, your "etc.

The names appended to this letter are as follows:—

Mr Justice Saintloe

Mr Row Secretary to the Council of the Prince

Mr Parsons of Charter-house-Yard

Mr Russen and } Aldermen of High Wicomb.
Mr Shrimpton }

[No date.] Copy of a petition to the King in favour of Lord Lovat.

Endorsed "Pet^r and Security for the L^d Lovat," and minuted at foot, in Lord Townshend's handwriting, "Sign'd by some members of Parliament and near 80 Gentlemen zealous for his Majesty King George."

It concludes: "we are so sensible not only of his power, but of his sincere intentions to joyn with us in the supporting inviolably the authority of your Majesty's Government in the North of Scotland that if we can be so happy as to obtain the royal favour for him we humbly make offer to become bound for his loyal faithful and dutiful behaviour to your Majesty in whatever sum your Majesty shall be graciously pleased to appoint."

1715-1716. Copies of Despatches to the Duke of Argyll, whilst he was commanding the troops in Scotland employed in the suppression of Mar's Rebellion.

1715, Sept. 1st, Whitehall. Lord Townshend encloses a Warrant for the disposal of the arms and ammunition in the Castle of Edinburgh and informs his Grace that the Treasury will lodge at Edinburgh a credit of £10,000 for His Majesty's service to be employed as he shall appoint.

1715, Sept. 13th, Whitehall. Secretary Stanhope writes about the pay of a recent addition to the garrison to Edinburgh Castle, and adds "I am also to signify to your Grace His Majesty's pleasure that you give orders for seizing the Laird of Borlum younger and for securing him in the safest way till His Majesty's further pleasure shall be known. The charge of the additional men in the Castle, is to be supplied out of that money which is lodged at Edinburgh, to be disposed of by your Grace."

1715, Sept. 15th, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

"I had yesterday morning the honour of your Grace's letter from Burrowbridge, of the 12th by the flying Packet, which brought us an account of the attempt made to surprise the Castle of Edinburgh. I heartily congratulate your Grace on the failing of this design, which we hope will be no small discouragement to the enemies, who probably were to form their measures by the success of the enterprise. I have laid your Grace's letter before the King, and His Majesty is very much dissatisfied with the slow motions of the Regiments of Carpenter and Ker which we were in hopes might have been in Scotland as soon as your Grace. The Secretary at War has received directions to hasten their march with all possible expedition.

My Lord, after writing what is above, a flying Packet brings letters from Edinburgh of the 12th giving an account of the marching from several places of the Highlands, of the enemy, to the places of general rendezvous near to Perth, with further particulars of the disappointment and discouragement they meet with from the bad success of their attempt against the Castle of Edinburgh. We hope they will be soon convinc'd they are to have no support nor assistance from abroad, for by an Express arrived yesternight from the Earl of Stair. we understand that an embargo is laid on the ships at Havre de Grace, and indeed on all ships in any ports of France, that have on board any counterband goods. That the Duke of Orleans has refused to see the Duke of Ormond and Lord Bolingbroke, and that the Marquis de Torey is laid aside. All which we reckon the foundation of such a good understanding between this Court and that of France, as to leave us under no apprehensions of our enemies receiving any support from thence. I am &c.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

P.S. [Signed by James Stanhope.] My Lord, Since writing what is before, the King having received some information touching the Lieut. Governour of the Castle of Edinburgh, hath thought it proper to remove him, and to grant a Commission of Lieutenant Governour to Brigadier Preston who carries this Dispatch."

1715, Sept. 24th, Whitehall. Lord Townshend excuses himself for not having written himself in reply to the Duke's last letter.—"I am now to acquaint your Grace that whatever you have writ hath been faithfully and punctually communicated to His Majesty . . . and it is with very great pleasure I obey His Majesty orders, in assuring your Grace that he is entirely satisfied with your Grace's conduct, and with every step you have made. . . . The situation of our affairs here is such as makes it impracticable to spare any more regular troops from hence. . . . Your Grace may be sure that the Government is not idle, and we hope to come to the bottom of the matter, and to learn who are embark'd in it, as your Grace may judge by the orders that have been already given, for the seizing of several persons. Sir W^m Wyndham has indeed made his escape after he was once taken, but has left some papers behind him which we judge of consequence"

1715, Sept. 26th, Whitehall. From Secretary Stanhope.

"The very day that we received your Grace's letter of the 15th it was laid before the King, who immediately dispatched Major General Evans to you, and orders to Ireland for his Regiment to join your Grace with all possible dispatch. . . . Every advice we have here, both from home, and abroad, and particularly the two last letters from my Lord Stair, make it evident that a general insurrection is intended to be begun at the same time in several counties of England. Bristol is to be their place of arms. They reckon themselves sure of all the West, of Wales, of Staffordshire, Worcestershire, Derbyshire, Lancashire. Whether the seizing some of their chiefs will disconcert their measures, a little time will show. The same advices, and particularly those from my Lord Stair, do represent their hopes of success to be grounded upon the prospect they have that a great number of forces would be sent to Scotland; the confessions of some who are taken up, confirm the same thing. Our last letters from Edinburgh assure us, that the Jacobites there, give out that there is to be a rising in England, and particularly that a considerable body of horse of the English rebels is to join the Earl of Mar; I may further tell your Grace that by papers under the hand of one of the chief conspirators, found about Sir W^m Windham, not only the same is confirmed, but further, that it was immediately expected to break forth. After all this

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

My Lord I submit it to your Grace whether the King's Ministers will not be justify'd before God and man, if they advise the King, to keep this nation in some posture of defence; and give me leave, My Lord, to offer you truly my poor opinion, that nothing will so much dishearten the rebels in Scotland, as to find themselves disappointed of the hopes which had been given them from hence.

If your Grace will be pleased to suggest to me any particular in which you would require orders, I shall not fail to receive his Majesty's commands in it. I am My Lord &c.,

JAMES STANHOPE.

[P.S.] Beating orders are issued for filling up Grant's Regiment to the same complement with the others."

1715, Sept. 29th, Whitehall. From Secretary Stanhope.

"Your Grace's letter to my Lord Townshend of the 24th instant, hath been laid before His Majesty who hath given orders that some battalions do immediately pass from Ireland to the River Clyde. . . . As to what your Grace mentions concerning positive orders, how far your Grace is to risque the King's troops, His Majesty relies entirely upon your conduct, and your doing every thing that shall be most for his service, and does not think it practicable at this distance, to give positive directions how to act against an enemy whose circumstances may alter every day. And your Grace may, as I told you in my last, be very secure of his Majesty's approving your best endeavours for his service.

The King approves of altering the Lieutenant of Lord W^m Hay, as is proposed by your Grace. Whether a Commission from hence, will be requisite, your Grace will please to inform me. . . .

Letters from France, come by an Express this day, confirm every thing I told you in my last, but its to be hoped, the seizing of their freinds here, will at least occasion some delay in their attempts."

1715, Oct. 4th, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

"His Majesty does entirely approve of your conduct . . . all is left to your Grace's own management. . . . Very probably your Grace judges right that little dependence is to be made upon the informations and advices you receive from the Duke of Atholl considering how he is besieged. . . .

Your Grace knows with what unwearied application our enemies have endeavoured to poyson the people and to alienate their effections from his Majesty and his Government, and therefore if upon the first advices given of that spirit of rebellion which has since appeared in your parts and which I may freely say, has been more or less, every year since the Revolution, His Majesty had proposed the augmenting of his forces, I leave it to your Grace to judge what use would have been been made of it when . . . even honest and well meaning people, were drawn into believe the whole a sham and a pretext for a standing army. . . .

His Majesty approves very much of your Grace's design of leaving 200 of the Militia of Glasgow in Stirling Castle, when you remove your Camp in that place, that being a place of consequence, and which ought by all means to be secured."

1715, Oct. 4th, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

"Since writing my other letter of this date, having laid before his Majesty what your brother has represented to me of the bad state of the Castle of Edinburgh as to its provisions, His Majesty has ordered me to direct My Lord Justice Clerk, in regard of My Lord Hay's being out of town immediately to cause lay in three months provisions for which he is to draw bills which will be answered."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1715, Oct. 11th, Cockpit. From Secretary Stanhope.

. . . . "We shall be impatient of hearing the Regiments from Ireland landing with you. Some Squadrons will be ordered immediately to the North of England, which is hoped will have a good effect. We begin to hope that the troops which have marched towards the West will check the rebellion which was certainly ready to break out there." . .

1715, Oct. 27th, Whitehall. From Secretary Stanhope.

"By the flying Pacquett which arrived last night I received the honour of your Grace's of the 21st inst by which I perceive neither my Lord Townshend's of the 4th nor mine of the 11th were then come to hands; they have probably been intercepted by the rebels, which in all appearance has likewise been the fate of some of your Grace's

His Majesty has observed with some concern, how weak the Regim^{ts} of Foot with your Grace appeared by the last returns notwithstanding the orders for increasing the numbers, as likewise money for the said augmentation, have been issued long since Lieutenant Gen^l Carpenter with the Regiments under his command has positive orders to pursue and attack the rebels of Northumberland who have now joyned those of your country; by a letter we received from him this night he promises not to lose an hour in getting up with them."

1715, Nov. 2nd, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend and Secretary Stanhope.

"The same Express having brought to each of us a letter from your Grace, the one of the 18th and the other of the 19th inst. you will allow us to answer them together in one letter.

We did immediately upon receipt of them get them translated into French for His Majesty's perusal and we are commanded by his Majesty to tell your Grace very plainly, that he was not a little surprised at some expressions in them His Majesty is surprised to find that you treat these orders as bills on Terra Incognita; how becoming your Grace's reflections touching the necessary precautions, which have been taken to prevent a rebellion in England, are, your Grace upon reflection will your self best judge. His Majesty hath had and has good reasons, for all the resolutions he has taken, which a very little time may possibly demonstrate, and however your Grace may please to treat his Ministers, certainly some respect is due to the resolutions of the King. We submit it to your Grace, whether it is not possible there should be many grounds of apprehension, which it is not proper to publish, especially when so many of our letters are intercepted.

We hope, my Lord, that the Irish Regiments will have joined you before now, that Mr. Carpenter will likewise be in Scotland, and that your Grace will give us an opportunity of laying before the King accounts from you more acceptable; we do assure your Grace, that we most sincerely wish it, not only for the King's and our country's service but for that of your Grace &c."

1715, Nov. 4th, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

. "I am by His Majesty's order to acquaint your Grace, that as to the troops, which were ordered for Newcastle, your Grace must be sensible that they advanced to that place with all the haste, the distance of the quarters they were in, and the badness of the roads at that time could possibly allow of, and that after their arrival at Newcastle, not one moment's time has been lost in the pursuit of the rebels, Carpenter

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

being got by a very extraordinary expedition within 7 or 8 miles of them, so that whatever design the rebels might have to return to Edinburgh, His Majesty hopes that is prevented, and that Mr Carpenter will keep so close to them, that they will not have it in their power to give your Grace any disturbance. I hope this situation will give your Grace much ease, by delivering you from the care of the town of Edinburgh, and leave you at liberty to employ all the troops as your Grace shall judge best for His Majesty's service. . . .

Your Grace will easily imagine, what acceptable service it would be, if the countys which have sent out their Militia so frankly, could be prevailed with to keep them up for some time longer at their own expense . . . you here set them a very good example by the great expense you have put your self to, in Argyleshire in keeping up the Militia of that country, of which his Majesty is highly sensible, and [he] ordered me to return your Grace thanks for this singular mark of your zeal for his service. His Majesty hopes this will influence other countys, and the rather that they must be sensible, from what extravagant contributions they are exempted, to which the countys which are in the possession of the rebels are exposed.

By the last letter your Grace had from Mr. Secretary Stanhope and me, we acquainted you, that the Pretender had set out from Bar le Duc and was come to Chateau Thierry. The Earl of Stair by his letter of the 9th N.S. writes that having represented this to the Regent, His Highness had directed the Duke De Guiche to give order to Major Gen^l Coulade to carry the Pretender back to Lorrain and for that end to use force if necessary, and Coulade was gone from Paris to put his orders in execution. We have as yet no certain accounts of the Duke of Ormonde. The Lords Justices of Ireland have by their letter of the 26th to Mr. Secretary Stanhope writ that Morrison's and Clayton's Regim^{ts} had sailed that afternoon, having been embarked some days before but detained by contrary winds, and that Edgerton's and one troop of Evans' sailed on the 23rd from Donachadee for Port Patrick, so we hope all these may be by this time have joined your Grace, of which His Majesty will be very glad to hear"

1715, Nov. 8th, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

. . . . I must own I have not taken notice of any thing in the publick prints that reflects on your Grace's conduct . . . as your Grace may very well judge from what particular views and selfish designs such insinuations may proceed you will know how little weight ought to be laid on them

Your Grace need not doubt of His Majesty's approving your design of attacking the enemies if they attempt to pass the Forth; their getting between you and England being, as your Grace observes, of too great consequence, not to be prevented if it can be done.

His Majesty approves of your Grace's sending back E[arl] Mar's trumpet without giving him any answer, and His Majesty being determined that he and all with him shall be treated as rebels, your Grace will take notice of this, and regulate your self by it, in all matters of this kind.

. . . . I am further to tell your Grace in confidence, that for a considerable time His Majesty has had good ground to suspect the conduct of the Regent, which our last accounts from the Earl of Stair do very much confirm, it being certain that the Pretender is on the coast of Normandy, and very probable that the Duke of Ormonde is landed in England, and that Dillon is gone to Ireland. So that it appears the Court of France designs to foment a rebellion in all His Majesty's Dominions.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

His Majesty has agreed to what your Grace proposes for Mr Neill Campbell, to be Minister of Renfrew, and has ordered a presentation to be prepared, which will be ready to be sent down by the next occasion."

1715, Nov. 14th, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

"His Majesty approves of your conduct, which ought to make you easy whatever reflections private persons from their own particular views may think fit to make upon it.

His Majesty who has had under consideration what your Grace has so fully represented in relation to the circumstances of your troops under your command, and observing you are of opinion that by the disposition your Grace has made of these troops, they will be as ready for action as if they continued in their tents, and that the lodging them in Stirling and the other places mentioned, will be very much for their ease and conveniency, His Majesty does approve of what your Grace has done in this particular"

1715, Nov. 15th, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

"as it appears by the intelligence your Grace has had of the Earl of Marr's advancing with the rebels to Auchterarder that he may design to pass the Forth, your Grace needs not doubt of His Majesty's impatience to have your next accounts"

Same date. Whitehall. From the same.

"I despatch this by a flying Pacquett to communicate to your Grace, and to congratulate with you, on the good newes we received this morning from Lancashire. We have accounts that on Saturday morning, Major Gen^l Willis having intelligence that the Lords Derwentwater and Widringtoun with the Northumberland and Scots rebells, and such as had joined them in Lancashire, making in all between 4 and 5000 men, were at Preston he marched from Wigan, to attack them, with the Regiments of horse and Dragoons of Pitt, Winne, Honywood, Dormer, Munden, and Stanhope, and Preston's Regiment of foot. He had left Col^l Newtown's Regim^t of Dragoons at Manchester, to prevent the disaffected in that town from stirring as they had promised. About one in the afternoon, he arrived at the bridge of Ribble, and found there, about 2 or 300 of the Rebells horse, and foot, who upon the approach of his Majesty's troops withdrew with precipitation into the town, at the entrance of which they had made a strong barricade, The Maj: Gen^l ordered Preston's Regiment to attack it, which they did with great bravery, and at the same time ordered the whole town to be surrounded to the right and left, by the horse and Dragoons. The rebells having the advantage of being very well posted at the barricade, Preston's Regiment sustained some loss, and the Maj: Gen^l having effectually secured all the avenues, about the town, ordered the foot to make a lodgement. The horse and Dragoons continued at their horses heads all that night. On Sunday morning about nine a'clock Lieut^t General Carpenter joined him with the three Regiments of Dragoons of Cobham, Churchill, and Molesworth. About one the rebells began to parley, and after several messages agreed to surrender themselves prisoners at discretion. On Monday morning at seven a'clock, they had laid down their arms, and the King's troops were preparing to march into the town. Brigad^r Dormer and the Lord Forrester were wounded in this action. Of which we hourly expect further particulars, as also the list of the Lords and other persons of note, who are prisoners. All the troops express'd great zeal and resolution on this occasion, and the new Regiments appeared in perfect good order.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

I hope, my Lord, we may flatter ourselves that by this action, the rebellion here is suppress, and that it may have no small influence. On your parts, it has this advantage, that it leaves His Majesty at liberty to order the 3000 of the Dutch troops that were at first designed for the Firth of Forth, to proceed thither. I wrote to your Grace, that upon the motions of the rebels in Lancashire, they were directed to the Humber, but having been forced by a violent storm, to put into Harwich, which has disabled them so much, it is found absolutely necessary they should land soon. Your Grace may depend upon it they will be ordered to Scotland with all possible expedition."

1715, Nov. 19th, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

This Evening Mr Harrison arrived and brought me your Grace's of the 1th inst^h which was immediately laid before the King, who has ordered me to return you his hearty thanks for the good service you have done His Majesty and your country by this victory you have obtained over the rebels, the good consequence of which His Majesty doubts not will appear every day, and your Grace must allow Mr Secretary Stanhope and me to congratulate you on this good success, which we do both very sincerely. I have also His Majesty's orders to desire your Grace to give thanks in his name to all the officers and others under your Grace's command, who have on this occasion given proof of their bravery and fidelity. His Majesty was very much concerned to hear of My Lord Hay's being wounded but glad, as are all his servants, to find by your Grace's that you do not apprehend him to be in great danger. You need not doubt but all here regret very much poor Lord Forfar's fate. My Lord, as soon as we had the news of the suppressing the rebels in Lancashire His Majesty ordered the 3000 Dutch which were designed to put into the Humber to proceed to the Firth of Forth, but by a violent storm with which they were overtaken, they have been so disperst and not only the transport ships but the convoys so disabled that they could not possibly keep at sea. But I have His Majesty's orders to assure your Grace that no time shall be lost in falling upon the most expeditious way for these troops to take in order to join your Grace. Some of the Transports have put into the river of Thames, some to Harwich, some to Yarmouth, so that it must be some time before they can be got together, but your Grace may depend upon it, all possible care shall be taken to reinforce you as soon as possible."

1715, Nov. 22nd, Whitehall. From Secretary Stanhope.

"My Lord Townshend has already acquainted your Grace that upon suppressing the rebels in Lancashire directions were given for the 3000 Dutch troops that were ordered to the Humber, to proceed to the Firth of Forth, but upon what your Grace has represented in your last letters, His Majesty has come to a resolution of sending the whole 6300 to join your Grace."

As these troops with those already under your Grace's command, will make a considerable body, and such as may well require two Lieut^{ts} Gen^{ls} under your Grace, and as the Dutch are commanded by a Lieut^t Gen^l Vander Beek His Ma^{ty} thinks it very reasonable in case by any accident your Grace should be hindered from being your self at the head of the troops, that there should be a British Lieut^t Gen^l elder than Vander Beek, to take the command upon him, and for this purpose His Majesty has pitched upon Mr Cadogan as the person who is the best acquainted with the Dutch Troops, and who His Majesty judges will be most acceptable to your Grace."

1715, Nov. 26th, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

"It is with great concern that His Majesty observes the

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MRS.

uneasiness you are under, notwithstanding the repeated assurances which have been given you of His Majesty's approbation of your conduct, and of his relying intirely upon it. I think your Grace must be convinced, that nothing has been wanting on the part of the Governmt^t to give your Grace all the assistance, the circumstances of Affairs here could possibly allow of His Majesty cannot think of your Grace's withdrawing from his service or employing any other to command his army. I am sure there is nothing your Grace can desire of me, in which I will not most heartily serve you, except in this particular, which in my opinion is absolutely inconsistent with the good of His Majesty's service and with the interest of my country."

1715, Nov. 27th, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

"Mr Cadogan will have your honour to deliver this to your Grace. His Majesty has appointed him to serve under you as Lieut^t Gen^l of his forces judging it absolutely necessary for his service, that there should be a British Lieut^t Gen^l older than Vanderbeek. Mr. Secretary Stanhope and I have by our former letters acquainted your Grace with the directions given for reinforcing the army under your command part of which from Yarmouth and Hull, we hope may be in the Firth of Forth this day, neither shall I trouble you with any particulars in relation to His Majesty's further views, as to what operations may be further necessary in your parts, which Mr Cadogan will fully explain to you, and therefore I take the liberty to refer your Grace to him."

1715, Nov. 30th, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

"I have received the honour of your Grace's of the 25th which I have laid before the King, who has commanded me to acquaint your Grace, that from the representations you have made of the state of affairs since the battle, as well as from the repeated advices he has had of the Pretender's being sailed for Scotland, His Majesty is very apprehensive, that his service may suffer by your absence; however he is so unwilling to refuse your Grace any request that is not directly inconsistent with his interest and service, that he leaves it intirely to you to come hither for the time you mention, in case you think the enemy will make no advantage of your leaving the army at this juncture."

1715, Dec. 3rd, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

... "in relation to the offer made by Mar. . . . His Majesty looks upon this as a matter of the very last consequence to his service . . . as soon as I receive His Majesty's directions upon it I shall not fail to transmit them to your Grace.

His Majesty read with very much concern what your Grace writes the Earl of Forfar, and exprest himself with so much affection and regard to that poor Earl, that what your Grace mentions as his request for his aunt Mr^s Lockhart, I believe you need not doubt but it will be complied with."

1715, Dec. 6th, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

His Majesty observes with satisfaction and approves very much of your declining to enter into any treaty on the proposals made by [Mar] Huntley and others till you had his further orders neither does His Majesty think that in the present situation and circumstances of affairs, it is consistent with the honour of his Governmt^t or the future peace and quiet of his good subjects, that the rebels should be admitted to any terms but those of surrendering their persons, and intirely submitting to His Majesty's pleasure."

1715, Dec. 15th, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSB.

“Your Grace seems to think the Pretender may still land, and if he should, that he may soon be at the head of 20000 men, but I must acquaint your Grace, that by our freshest advices from France, we have good ground to think, he is still there, neither is it probable, that after the great checks and disappointments, his partisans have met with both here and from your Grace, he will think of making any further attempt, but should he land and even find that assistance your Grace apprehends, His Majesty does not doubt but that providence which has hitherto so visibly blessed the justice of his cause will continue to do it, to the destruction of his enemies, and to the rooting out of the very seeds of this rebellion.

you should as soon as you are joined by that reinforcement, which has been ordered, and which we hope will be soon with you, march without loss of time against the rebels and endeavour to dislodge them from Perth, and even follow them amongst the hills, if they shall seek their shelter there.”

1715, Dec. 23rd, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

“His Majesty continues firm in his sentiments of not entering into treaty with any of the rebels, on other terms than these of their surrendering themselves, and submitting intirely to His Majesty's pleasure . . . it appears by Sir Robert [Gordon]'s own letter, that he is gone North, it is not proper any other step should be made in relation to him, till he first comply with what His Majesty proposes, and surrender himself to your Grace on these terms.”

1715, Dec. 27th, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

“My Lord the King is very sensible of the good services the Lord Lovat has done, at this time, and tho' I cannot, by this Post, give your Grace those assurances you desire of his pardon, yet I am sure nothing can give him so just a title to it as his continuing to serve with that zeal he has hitherto done, and ingaging his dependents and friends to the like.

Mr. Secretary Stanhope and I had both of us letters of the 19th from Lieut. Genl Cadogan, with which he transmitted a plan of such operations as appeared necessary for reducing the rebels, and as he writes that the same had been approved of by your Grace, they have been laid before the King, and I am by His Majesty's order to acquaint your Grace, that he does intirely approve of the project . . . His Majesty leaves it to your Grace to consider whether a part of the forces may not be sufficient to attack the rebels at Perth, especially if this great frost continues, which by the freezing of the river must necessarily make one half of the town defenceless. . . . My Lord, His Majesty judges the execution of this project of the very last consequence to his service, and the rather that by the letters we have from France we have received this day, we have reason to believe the Pretender may be in Scotland before this reach your Grace, which makes it absolutely necessary that the rebels be dislodged from Perth, and deprived of that hold which has been of so great use to them, and without which it is scarce possible for them to keep together a great body.”

171⁵/₆, Jan. 3rd, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

“His Majesty is sensible that a winter campaign will be of great expences, for the reasons your Grace takes notice of in your letter, but at the same time His Majesty looks upon it of such consequence to his service, and so absolutely necessary for the suppressing of this rebellion, that it must not either on that or any other consideration

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

whatsoever, be laid aside, and therefore as soon as the Dutch troops have joined your Grace, His Majesty is persuaded you will without loss of time, pursue the instructions you have received on this head. My Lord, to the following the rebels amongst the hills, in case they retire from Perth, His Majesty never intended that the whole army shall be employed to follow them.

As your Grace is pleased to renew your request to return, I am ordered to tell you, His Majesty consents to your Grace's coming hither whenever you please.

Upon what your Grace represents to Mr Evans' indisposition, His Majesty allows him to go to Bath or where he thinks fit for his recovery; tho' at the same time sorry for the occasion of it. His Majesty and all his servants being sensible of that gentleman's merit, and of the loss it may be to His Majesty's service that he should be absent."

17 $\frac{1}{2}$, Jan. 6th, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

. "Your Grace might very well presume that you are to answer such rebels as apply to you that His Majesty expects they shall surrender themselves to your Grace and submit intirely to his pleasure, this being as I have often repeated to your Grace, what His Majesty judges [necessary] both for the honour and security of his Governm^t and it is by this your Grace is to regulate your self with relation to the Laird of Methven, or any other who shall make the like proposal to your Grace, as he has done.

I have also in Command from His Majesty to repeat by this occasion to your Grace, what I wrote in my letter of the 27th for putting in execution, without the least loss of time, the project I there mention, the copy whereof had been transmitted by Lieu^t Gen^l Cadogan.

Tho' the advices of the Pretender's being landed do not seem to be such as to be absolutely depended upon, yet as the thing is very probable His Majesty is so far from thinking it should retard the execution of the project, and of the attempt against Perth, that I am ordered to make use of it, as a motive for your Grace's forwarding the expedition as much as possibly can be. His Majesty approves of your Grace's causing take possession of the Castles of the Earl of Broadalbin, and likewise of your Grace's supplying Tinab, in the way you mention, to enable him to keep possession of these places."

17 $\frac{1}{2}$, Jan. 10th, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

"I am to acknowledge your Grace's of the 8^d, which I have laid before the King who was very much surprized to find your Grace attribute the continuance of the rebellion to the orders His Majesty has thought fit to send you, as not having given you sufficient power, till you received mine of the 27th past.

His Majesty was from the beginning of this rebellion of our opinion, that he could not either in honour or conscience go into any measures in relation to the rebels, but such as would effectually secure the future peace and quiet of his faithfull subjects, and your Grace was therefore empower'd by your instructions, which were drawn, as you must well remember, by your self, to give assurances of His Majesty's mercy and favour to such only, as should by submitting themselves, to His Majesty and by making early discoveries, or doing some other signal services, merit them. His Majesty has since several times repeated these orders to your Grace, that before any of the rebels could expect favour, they should surrender themselves to your Grace, and my letter of the 27th of Dec^r can be understood in no other sence, and His Majesty having carefully reviewed all your Grace's letters, cannot find in them one instance where any of the Rebels have offered to comply with those terms, except Lord Rollo and [the] Master of St Clare.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

His Majesty observes the offers which have been made by Marr, Huntley and others have been made only to separate themselves from the body of the rebels, without any offer of coming to your Grace, and bringing their followers with them, or making any Discovery as to the Lord Rollo and [the] Master of St Clare, tho' your Grace in your Letter of the 30th Nov^r mentions their offering to join your Grace with the Fife Squadron, yet, besides that in your preceeding letter, which was of the 27th and to which I gave a return by mine of the 6th Dec^r your Grace only speaks of their offering to separate themselves from the rest of the rebels, His Majesty would have thought it very hard, but these persons should be the first objects of his royal clemency, who had most signalized themselves in the ravaging and destroying of their country, and in the harrasing and pillaging of His Majesty's faithfull subjects, as by particular advices, His Majesty is informed, the Lord Rollo and [the] Master of St Clare, did with the Fife Squadron, and particularly in a most barbarous and inhumane manuer against the Earl of Rothes, who, besides his being of one of the first and best families of the Kinglom, has at this time distinguished himself by his singular zeal in His Majesty's and his country's service.

Upon the whole His Majesty is persuaded, that your Grace, when you have seriously reflected on and considered this whole transaction, will in justice rather impute the contrivance of this rebellion to the obstinacy of the rebels, or to some other cause, than to any defect in his orders, or to the want of powers, and since they have put the nation to such vast expence and obliged the King to call for the assistance of foreign troops, the greater the preparations are for the suppressing of this rebellion the less reason there is for listening to any offers of the rebels, but such as carry with them evident advantages to His Majesty's Service, are absolutely consistent with the honour of his Government, and tending to the future quiet and security.

My Lord, if in my letter to your Grace of the 27th I mentioned that project sent up by Lieu^t Gen^l Cadogan, as his, it was because it was transmitted by him to Mr. Secretary Stanhope, and your Grace was not pleased in your two first letters, after it came, to take any notice of it. As to the alterations which may be thought necessary to make in the scheme, His Majesty leaves that intirely to your Grace, not doubting, but they will be such, as will be no obstruction to the execution of the project, and the attempting the expedition against Perth, and that the want of artillery, by reasons of the ships being detained by contrary winds, may be as well supplied, as possibly may be. Orders are sent by his Grace the Duke of Marlborough to Berwick for furnishing your Grace, with what that place affords, of canon, ball and other stores, and what else may be fit for the train, as your Grace shall call for them, Tho' if the frost be such in your parts, as it is here at present, we presume your Grace will have little occasion for them.

Tho' your Grace mentions the arrival of the Pretender, as not absolutely certain, in yours of the 3^d which is the last I have received from you, yet from all our advices from France, as well as from Scotland, by letters of the 5th the King has no reason to doubt, but that he is landed in Scotland. I am therefore by his particular command to let you know, that he thinks it of the last Consequence to his service, that no time should be lost in marching to the enemy, the least delay of that kind, at this juncture, may be dangerous, and grow every day, as your Grace most justly observes, more difficult. I am &c^a.

TOWNSHEND."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSB.

171⁵₁₈, Jan. 23rd, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

“His Majesty hopes to hear very soon of your Grace's putting the project against Perth in execution, the inconveniencys your Grace apprehended from M^r Burrows' absence, and I hope sufficiently supplied.

His Majesty is very well pleased that M^r Evans's health is such as will allow him to continue there, I shall not fail when there is any alteration in the Establishment of the General Officers to do him justice, by putting His Majesty in mind of his pretensions, I shall also take the first opportunity to receive His Majesty's directions in relation to Capⁿ Stewart, whom your Grace has recommended in two of your letters.”

171⁵₁₈, Jan. 31st, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

“His Ma^{ty} is extremely well pleased to find your Grace has made a disposition of every thing so as to be in readiness to march as on Saturday last, His Majesty hopes the returning of the frost, which we have now here to as great a degree as ever, will render your enterprise the more practicable, I need not tell your Grace of how great importance it is to His Majesty's Service, the reduction of Perth, and obliging the rebels to betake themselves to the hills, when it will be impossible for them to keep together in a body.

As to what Your Grace mentions of the Earl of Rothes's censuring your conduct, it is what I do assure you, I am wholly a stranger to, having never corresponded with any but your Grace, except on some few occasions with His Majesty's servants at Edinburgh, when the exigencies of his affairs required it.

His Majesty does not think it consistent either with the honour of his Government or the interest of his service, that there should be any cartel made with the rebels; but if your Grace can fall on any way of having the prisoners who are of any consequence released, as the gentlemen of Sturler's Regiment, you mention, the Laird of Gilkindie or any such, your Grace may fairly do it and depend upon His Majesty's approbation of it. I have by His Majesty's order put into the hands of the Secretary at Warr, the Memorial your Grace transmitted from Colonel Hawley and shall on his report receive His Majesty's further directions.

As to what I have said above, in relation to the exchange of prisoners, there was a method found out to exchange them in Flanders during the last warr with France, when there was no cartel settled, and if your Grace can find any such expedient, His Majesty will approve of it rather than let those who served him faithfully suffer in the hands of the rebels.”

171⁵₁₈, Feb. 4th, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

“It was very agreeable to His Majesty to hear that the army was at Dumblain, and that your Grace had made all the necessary dispositions for its marching the next day to Ardoch, and His Majesty doubt not but your Grace will as far as possible by your care and conduct overcome the difficulties occasioned by the barbarities of the rebels, and other accidents and that we shall soon hear of your being before Perth.

I have further in Comand from His Majesty to acquaint your Grace that there being good ground to believe that upon the Pretender's going to Scotland, there was a design laid for a rebellion in Ireland, to be carried on in concert with that in North Britain, and for raising of which no endeavours are still wanting, His Majesty judges it absolutely necessary for his service, that your Grace should establish,

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

in the most expeditious and safe way you can possibly, a constant correspondence with the Lords Justices of Ireland"

17 $\frac{1}{2}$, Feb. 6th, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

"I received by Mr Stewart your Aide de Camp, the honour of your Grace's letter of the 31st past which I immediately laid before the King. His Majesty received it with very great satisfaction the news of your Grace's having advanced so farr with the army, and of the rebels having abandoned Perth. His Majesty returns your Grace thanks for your good conduct on this occasion and approves intirely of your Grace's resolution of following the rebels whatever way they take."

17 $\frac{1}{2}$, Feb. 10th, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

"I received yesterday morning by a flying Pacquet the honour of your Grace's letter of the 2^d from Erroll, and by another in the afternoon, that of the 4th from Dundee, both which have been laid before the King, who was extreanly well pleased to hear of the army's being in such close pursuit of the rebels. His Majesty is of opinion that no Quarters can be settled for them till this rebellion is wholly at an end, by the rebels being disarmed, their chiefs in custody, and the Highlands reduced intirely to the King's obedience.

His Majesty is of your Grace's sentiment that it may be very necessary to reinforce the garrison of Fort William, that they may be in a condition to act offensively against the rebels in that neighbourhood.

Before the Address which your Grace mentions to have been transmitted, in behalf of the Lord Lovat, came to hands, His Majesty was so sensible of the good services of that Lord, at this juncture upon the representations of the Earl of Southerland, who has not failed to do him justice, that he thought fit that the Earl of Southerland should be empowered to assure the Lord Lovat of His Majesty's pardon, and I can now tell your Grace that I have His Majesty's order to prepare it, in which no time shall be lost.

[P.S.] Since writing what is above I have a fresh occasion of congratulating your Grace on the news we have received by letter of the 5th of the Pretender's imbarcking in great precipitation at Montrose, and of Sir John Jennings being in pursuit of him."

17 $\frac{1}{2}$, Feb. 17th, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

"I have received the honour of your Grace's of the 8th which I have laid before the King, with the letters from the Earl of Southesk and others, but have no commands for your Grace in relation to the submission they offer, that matter being under His Majesty's consideration.

Your Grace may remember that by my former letter you were, at your own desire, at liberty to leave Scotland, as soon as you could do it without prejudice to His Majesty's affairs, and now that you are pleased to repeat the same request, and His Majesty's affairs being as your Grace observes, on such a foot as that they cannot suffer by your absence, your Grace has not only His Majesty's leave, but I have his orders to tell you that he thinks your presence here very much for his service, and therefore desires you would return as soon as conveniently you can."

17 $\frac{1}{2}$, Feb. 21st, Whitehall. From Lord Townshend.

"I have by two different flying Pacquets received the honour of your Grace's letters of the 12th & 13th from Aberdeen, with the letters and other papers referred to in them, all which have been laid before the King.

His Majesty approves of the answer your Grace has given to the Marquis of Huntley and such as have made the like offer as he has done. As to Major Urquhart, tho' His Majesty upon inquiry finds that what he alledges is true, and that therefore he is not to be considered as a deserter; yet it is His Majesty's pleasure that he should be kept in custody till further orders.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

The King is not as yet come to a resolution as to the disposal of the troops into quarters, which, as I wrote to your Grace by my letter of the 10th, His Majesty thinks cannot be settled this rebellion is wholly at an end. . . .

I should very heartily have concurred with my good offices, in promoting what your Grace has proposed for the Earl of Deloraine, but before your letter came to hand, His Majesty had declared his resolution to bestow the government of Stirling Castle on the Earl of Rothes.

As I suppose this may find your Grace at Edinburgh, or on the road thither, that Lieut Genl Cadogan may be apprized of what is in this letter which concerns His Majesty's service, I have by His Majesty's order sent him a copy of it and have nothing further to trouble your Grace with." . . .

1716, March 2nd. Copy of a despatch from the Marquis d'Uxelles to Mons. d'Iberville, In French—and chiefly in cipher numbers. Dated at Paris, and indorsed "Mr d'Iberville du M[arche] d'Uxelles—Most in cypher—& 2 paragraphs abt My L^d Stairs." 12½ pages on 13 sheets stitched.

The two paragraphs referring to Lord Stair are as follows:—

"Il est vray que l'on ne peut point espérer de concilier les Esprits pendant que le Roy d'Angletr^e se servira de M. le Comte de Stairs. Il a si clairement fait conoitre en toute occasion qu'il ne vouloit rien pour faire naistre des sujets de defiance et il a affecté avec tant de soin de garder le silence sur ce qu'il a vue par luy meime de la sincerité des intentions de Monseigneur le duc d'Orleans qu'il n'est pas possible que l'on puisse jamais prendre confiance en luy; cependant le Roy n'a pas voulu faire de plainte formelle de sa conduit et Sa Majesté a cru qu'elle devoit la dissimuler afin de ne pas donner lieu de dire qu'elle voulut demander le rappel d'un homme actif et éclairé qui pust être témoin de ce qui se passoit.

Il n'y a rien de plus faux que ce que vous a été raporté d'un prétendu discours de Monseigneur le Duc d'Orleans à M. le Comte de Staire. S.A.R. luy a bien dit que ce n'estoit pas sa faute si le Roy d'Angletr^e n'avoit pas accepté l'offre qu'elle luy avoit faite au nom de Sa Majesté de former une Alliance entre la France l'Angleterre et la Hollande qui auroit levé toutes sortes d'ombrages et de soupçons mais jamais elle ne luy a pu dire que par rette saison elle ne fut pas en état d'empêcher que le Prétendant ne tirast des secours du Royaume. Elle l'a empesché autant qu'il a esté en son pouvoir et c'est une de ces inventions que le party qui veut le renouvellement de la guerre [two or three words are here illegible from decay of the MS.] de vraisemblance aussy bien que de verité et qu'il soutient parce qu'elle convient à ses vûes. Je vous prie d'être persuadé que je suis très veritablement Mons^r entierement à vous le M^{AL} D'UXELLES."

1716, May 16th. The last statement of Richard Gascoigne, a Catholic Jacobite, lying under sentence of death in Newgate. 3 pp.

[1716]. An undated letter from the same to Sir Roger Bradshaw, Baronet, begging the latter to appear and give evidence on behalf of the writer at his approaching trial.

[1716]. A Memorandum, signed by the same, and dated in Newgate "Friday Morning, betwixt 9 and 10."—

"All that was contain'd in my paper yesterday was true and as I shall and am obliged to day when I leave the world to declare, itt is soe and

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSB.

I bless my God as I wou'd not tell an untruth for the world att any time, soe much less, when in a few minutes I expect to appear before the tribunal of our good God.

Itt wou'd be an instance of mercy and charity, if I cou'd be allowed some few days longer, for I was ill of a feavour. Many of those I have pass'd since my condemnation. If itt can be obtain'd, my poor prayers shall be offer'd for them that doe itt, who ever they are, I am heartily their well wisher both of soul and body."

1716, July 9th. Draft of a Council Minute. In Lord Townshend's handwriting.

. . . . Sir David Dalrymple and Sir James Stuart being heard upon the letters from Scotland giving an account of the endeavours used by the rebels who are priscuers there to obtain their liberty by applying to the Justiciary Court, they were ordered to prepare a letter with directions how to prevent their being released before they are brought to a legal tryal the draught of the letter to be laid before the Lords to morrow night.

1716, July 12th. Draft of a Council Minute. In Lord Townshend's handwriting.

To approve what Mr Wich has done in relation to Lord Duffus and to order him to thank the Magistrates for the assistance they gave him upon this occasion to [write to] Mr Stanhope that H.R.H. is of opinion if his Majesty approve it, that care sh'd be taken to secure Lord Duffus in safe custody and that he sh'd be sent over hither.

[1716.] A petition to the King from John Gordon, condemned for High Treason and a prisoner in Newgate, imploring his Majesty's clemency and mercy. Two copies, on the same sheet, one in French and one in English. Undated. Signed by the petitioner.

The petitioner states that his father, the late Patrick Gordon of Dunneath in the County of Banff, and his uncle Sir George Gordon of Edenglassie—the Sheriff Principal in the same county, were early concerned in the happy Revolution in favour of which they both distinguished themselves.

[1716.] A copy of the above petition addressed "to the Lord Viscount Townshend His Majestie's Principall Sec^y of State." Undated, and signed by the Petitioner.

[1716 ?] "Memorandum of the Duke of Montrose to my Lord Townshend with relation to the following persons, in case there should be any application made to their prejudice.

Mr Walter Stirling, Keeper of the Wardrobe, he was my tutor till I went abroad.

Sir Gilbert Kennedy, Under-Falconer, a very honest gentleman upon half-pay, and a friend of My Lord Stair's.

Mr Henry Graham of Braikness, Chamberlain for the Bishoprick of Orkney; a namesake of mine, very well affected, and was recommended by the honest people in those parts.

Mr Mungo Graham of Gorthie, Receiver General of the Customs, who executes that office with so much care and integrity, that I doubt not but he will always deserve your Lordships particular favour and protection."

[1716.] Three undated papers in the same clerk's hand which seem to have been dictated by Horatio Walpole.

1. A Memorial, in French, endorsed by Horatio Walpole "1st Project of a Memoriall." 6 pp.
2. A similar Memorial, in French, endorsed by Horatio Walpole, "2^d Project of a Memoriall." 5 pp.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

3. An undated "Memorial to be delivered in a Conference with the Deputys for Foreign affairs" of the States General.

These three memorials are to the same effect, and the last of them, which is in English, commences as follows:—

"The King my Master being firmly persuaded that his own interest and security is inseparable from that of the States has commanded me to acquaint you that notwithstanding the Rebels have been entirely suppressed in England and their army defeated in Scotland yett the person commonly called the Pretender has by the encouragement of some conspirators against their lawfull sovereign and country and by other ennemys to the publick tranquillity of Europe dared to invade his Majesty's dominions. And although the precautions his Majesty has already taken, the assistance of the brave troops which the States have been pleased to lend him and the vigorous and unanimous Resolutions of his loyall Parliament will in all probability by the blessing of God enable him soon to put an end to this unnaturall rebellion and entirely to baffle the hopes of success that his ennemys may have vainly imagined to find within his own Dominions, yett as on the other side the Pretender and his adherents flatter themselves with certain assurances of the assistance and support of a foreign power and as it is notorious that notwithstanding the repeated promises given by the Court of France that the Treaty of Utrecht should be strictly observed, and that no officers soldiers arms and ammunition should be permitted to goe from any Port of France for the service of the Pretender and that positive orders had been given in all the Ports of France for that effect, yett great numbers of officers etc. doe constantly pass into Scotland for the service of the sayd Pretender from most of the Ports of France without the le[a]st opposition from the Governours there and particularly the Commandant of Calais when Mr Moore an Englishman did on the part of my Lord Stair acquaint him that severall hundreds of persons were ready to embark from thence to go to the Pretender instead of giving a civill answer to Mr Moore threatned to make him leave the town, and accordingly the sayd officers sayled the 30th of January at midnight in four vessels fitted out for that purpose."

This memorial goes on to insist upon the importance to the Dutch republic of the Protestant succession to the Crown of Great Britain, and concludes by urging the States General, in concert with the King, to "invite other Princes and States to join his Majesty and this Republick for their common security and defence in order to "discourage" and distresse by all possible means any Power that shall endeavour to violate the peace which Europe now enjoys or to give any succour or assistance to the sayd Pretender."

The following Postscript to the above memorial is in the handwriting of Horatio Walpole:—

"The army of the rebels being put to flight, and the Pretender obliged to leave Holland since this Memoriall was drawn it will be easy to make the alterations which these incidents require."

1717, Dec. 6th. Copy of a Jacobite letter with names in cipher. Unsigned and undressed:—

"Doubtless you heard of the alterations at South's house; you might have heard on't long ago had Moulsworth and his gang made use of the fair handles given 'em from time to time, but as Rog[e]rs had reason to suppose the s^d Moulsw[orth] was willing to live upon the spoil as long as he cou'd, took a resolution with himself to strain a point so as to bring matters to an open rupture.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.
—

He happened to discourse over a bottle a fast friend of Hall's that he knew formerly in Gerard's house, and finding [him] uneasy at Hall's management, saying that he was blind and stupid and was in hands that would treat him as they did the late Mr Kemp, I agreed with him, on which he drew a paper out of his pocket which he said [he] was to give to Mr Hall the day follow^s and was to tell him withal that if he didn't change hands and take in some of the leading and moderate ones of the Waggs and Tanners he was an undone man.

The paper contained in substance that he should forthwith reduce Allen, give a free protection to Overbury and those with Mr Ken not to meddle in Eggleton's quarrel, to bring Segrave, Beaumont and several others of the gang to be his mates, to give free access to all Tanners and others, and equal encouragement with the Wags. I told him this would be a means to rivet him in Hall's affections, and his family in the copyhold; as soon as I parted from him I put all this suggestion into an order, sent it to Scogel by an old friend and acquaintance of Moulsworth, Scog[el] shew'd it to Moulsworth on sight, and as he came back to my friend he ask't if he would make good what he said: my friend answer'd he would be ready to do it on occasion, and would wait on old Hall when he desir'd him. On inquiry I found Scogel made nothing of the matter for a while to see what Hall would do, and find out his natural bent and inclination, upon which I made some of the Waggs and Cope's partners acquainted with all this matter, and convinc't them Hall would drop them in a little time. They answered they would put it out of his power. They made a noise and a splutter and blamed Cotton and Moulsworth as well as Hall saying if he would not be their tool they should not be his tools, and would have no motly mates. This frightened him and his mates and [I] was obliged to shew a steadiness to them, but I found this would not do. I went to a person that waits on Mr Hall, and told her that Moulsworth would lay hold on this occasion of the child's christening to affront her, and if he got one point of her or her husband she must give up all other points, to ingratiate herself with her mistress. She improved it to advantage, telling her withal old Hall's supposed wife and mistress was at the bottom on't. I found after Arbutnet influenced them, and spurr'd them on against Moulsworth and Hall who has consign'd himself over to the former, being the only person now in the Keeper[s] that can assist him against Knell and Treyton, therefore he will sacrifice all his friends and family to preserve his quart[er]s in Gerard's house. None now can so well do as Moulsworth and the present mates, 'twill be his ruin in the end, for he and all the Gerardins are too much govern'd by passion and interest that 'twould be an easy matter to run 'em aground had the Tanners or Moulsworth a true love for their country or Mr Kenedy. I must confess Segrave and Overton have been the main occasion that the Tanners are so backward, buzzing in their ears the power of the patron and Finch's House; now they see they can't do anything without Otway or Knell the latter will do nothing for them but with assistance of the former.

If Hall or his family were beloved, this last proceeding of his would inflame the 3 Keepers, if Arberthnet and his friends can but get young Hall to declare in Holt's house that the partners of Hungate is now illegal, it will produce some good effect; and reconcile all the Waggs to your interest, or at least be passive. In the mean time don't doubt but the present proceeding will have some good effect or other; 'twill encourage the Tanners, discourage the moderate Waggs, and forward the Registerions and Cope's partners to proceed with more violence, and oblige Hall to reduce Allen to the same state Quaint left it, if so you'll find work that will please you.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

I have no news to send you but that the P[rince] & P[rin]c[e]s of Wales that were banisht the Court are going to live at the D[uke] of Devonshire's house till matters are made up with the King. They are now indispos'd, and 'tis hop'd they'll be better in a few days; at least I hope so, and that they will be reconcil'd to the King. You know I can't be but sorry for this difference. So will Mr. Ken and you.

I hope and don't doubt but Mr. Kirk will be at Evlin's house by Easter; if a project Rogers has in hand succeeds he is in a way to serve Rion and his cause. He'll spurr 'em on. Otway may be convinc't is nor will be in any power to withstand him or his Allen if he comes his late [sic]. A gentl[eman] was acquainted with the scheme Rog[e]rs laid for these proceed[ing]s and seemed well pleased with it. He thought me too daring."

1721, June 10th. Report by Anthony Cracherode on the Case of James Gartside. In reference to the Information laid by the latter against Captain James Leonard whom the informant alleged to have committed High Treason at Calais in December 1716.

[1722.] The following copies of Jacobite letters seem to have been made for the Privy Council, and to be connected with Laver's Conspiracy. The contents of these letters are very similar to those printed in "Reports from Committees of the House of Commons; which have been printed by Order of the House and are Not inserted in the Journals."

[No date.] Londres, Jendy. À Mi Lord Mar à Paris sous l'adresse de Monsieur D'Hubert chez Mons^r Waters banquier à la Rue Dauphine à Paris.

1722, April 23rd. To Cap^t Vohnson—N or X—under the cover of M^r Francia at Calais. Signed Goodwin.

1722, May 10th. N.S. Copy of a Letter from M^r Blunt To Mr. N—X under the cover of Mr. Francia at Calais. Dated in London and signed Blunt.

[No date.] Received 3^d June.—Copy of a letter from Robert Brown directed to [the writer's cousin], Mr. Hary Blair, Writer [to the Signet] at his house in Allan's Close opposite to the Cross Edinburgh North Britain." Without date.—This letter came by the French Mail 3^d June 1722, and is an answer to a letter of the 4th May signed Walter Grahame and directed à Mons^r Collins chez Mons^r Waters, Banquier à Paris.

1722, June 20th. T. J. To Mr. Jn^o Paterson; in the care of M^{rs} Alexander in the Canon Gate, Edinburgh.

1722, June 21st. Copy of an unsigned letter dated at Castle Howard and addressed, under cover to Mr. Walters at Paris, to Madame D'Hubert.

"My Dear Sister, I received a letter from you last Post which was much long'd for—My Lord Carlisle is the most agreeable in his own house that's possible, there is one thing that surprises me much to find both my Lord Car[lisle] and Lord Irwin quite brock with Lady Lechmer and Lady Mary hears of her seldom in great dryness. I know the opinion you have of her which I must always think she deserves it. . . . I heard today [from] Mrs. Harvey she complains sadly of never hearing from you, and has done so in every letter I've had from her."

[1722], Augt. 4th. To M^r Chauncey at M^r Chesshyres in Devonshire Square near Bishop's Gate. [Unsigned.]

1792, Augt. 13th. Dated Dieppe. To the Rev^d D^r Hunt head of Baliol Colledge in Oxford. By a person who subscribes himself Alex^r

Richmond. Another Letter from the same Alex^r Richmond of the like date directed to W^m Phips Esq^r at the Hon^{ble} Sir Constantine Phips in Ormond Street.

1722, Augt. 18th and Aug. 16th. Two letters addressed from London. "À Mons^r Francois Bernard chez Mr Tuillies tapissier, rue de St Pere près La Charité Faubourg St Germain à Paris."

1722, Augt. 15th. To Mr. David Wilkins at Wills Coffee house near Covent Garden London.

1722, Augt. 18th. To Mrs. Draycott to be left at Mr Glasco's on Arrars Key Dublin.

1722, Augt. 19th. For Mr La Fontaine at Clare's Coffee house in Conduit Street near Hannover Square.

Same date. For Mr. Spencer at Old Man's Coffee house, Charing Cross. From Paris.

1722, Augt. 24th. To Mr. Wilkins at M^{rs} Brydges at the Lumber House in Duke Street Westminster.

1722, Augt. 25th. Extract of a Letter to The Lord Garlies ; to the care of the Post Masters of Edinburgh and Wigton Scotland. The author signs C. S. with a flourish.

1722, Augt. 29th. "For Mr. Wilkins" etc. as above. It begins "My dearest dear," and is subscribed "your for ever—LE BRUNK."

1722, Sept. 3rd. An anonymous letter addressed to Mons^r Evans chez Mons^r Waters, Banq^r rue Christine Fauxbourg St Germain.

1722, Sept. 7th. To Robert Dillon Esq^r at his house in Latins Court Dublin.

1722, Sept. 10th. To Mr. Shortip at his house the lower end of Norfolk Street in the Strand. Dated at Dunkirk and signed Tho. Smith.

1722, Oct. 6th. À Milord le Vis-Conte de Bolingbrook under a blank Cover to Mons^r de L'Orme chez Mons^r de Blissy Commissaire des Poudres rue des Minimes à Orleans. In English ; unsigned.

"I write this upon my birthday, and am now come to that age of man which according to the Scripture is the uttermost extent of life.

I am sorry to hear you have bin ill if you apprehend any thing of the palsy, or rheumatism and that your lameness continues, I should think that the waters of Aix La Chapelle, or Barage, very proper for you ; we see many every year who come to our Bath, supported with sticks, and crutches that return leaving both behind them.

We have had so fine an autumn that I hope it has made amends for the badness of the summer and that you will have a good vintage and we good wine.

I hear poor Jo : Whiteman is dead suddingly of an apoplex at the Bath ; well at Lyndsey's a tuesday night, and dead a few hours after. Lord Hinchinbrook is likewise dead there.

The King is come to town and the Parlim^t meets on tuesday, we shall leave this place about the 18th ins^t.

Pray make my wife and daughters complim^{ts} to Mad^m La Marq^{ue} and my service in particular.

All mine are Yours—Adieu.

[P.S.] I am glad to hear you have had no hand in this dirty work, you have run hazards enough already for the party which you and your family will feel to its great loss if not to its ruin."

1722, Oct. 10th. John Colebrooke to Mr. William Lock in Exchange Alley, London.

MARQUEES
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

[1722], Oct. 17th. For James Fountaine Esq^r [from R. Eustace]. To be left at Howel's Coffee House in Great Wild Street, London. This letter is supposed to be design'd for the person, who writes from hence and who commonly signs Rogers, or sometimes Richards.

[1722], Oct. 18th. To Mr. Louis Clement at M^r Charlie at the sign of the Dog and Duck in S^t James's Street, London. From Rouen. In French, signed C. C.

[1722], Oct. 19th. To Mr. Floyd at M^{rs} Wild's in Bennet Street S^t James. Cette lettre est marquée sur l'adresse par la poste, estre de Rouen.

1722, Oct. 21st. To Mr. Martin at the hat and Beavor, a Hatter's near the new Exchange in the Strand.

1722, Oct. 24th. To Mr. Wye in Wine Office Court, Fleet Street. N.B. this letter is by the same hand that signs Quittwell &c^a. Dated at Paris and signed Dorval.

1722, Oct. 26th. A Mons^r La Tour chez Mons^r Braili chez un tapisserie vis à vis S^t Joseph rue Mon Martre à Paris.

[No date.] For M^r Wilkins at Mrs. Brydges House at the Lumber House in Duke Street Westminster. Weds^d morn. 10 a Clock. Unsigned.

1722, June 29th. The examination of Walter Steeres gentleman taken [and sworn] before John Parnell Esq^r one of the Judges of his Majesty['s] Court of King's Bench [in Ireland]. 3½ folio pages.

The information is to the effect that in the previous July one John Steers an attorney living near Lincoln's Inn Fields, proposed to Major William Crosby, Gentleman of the Horse to the Duke of Chandos, to kill the King, and asked him what was the best method they should take to murder him etc.

[1722, July 28th]. Council Minutes in the handwriting of Lord Townshend. Undated.

[Present] L^d President—L^d Privy Seal—Duke [of] Roxburgh—M^r Walpole—L^d Cadogan.

That the visitours [Lady Bellew and others] who were seized with M^r [Dennis] Kelly this morning be discharged there being no papers of a treasonable nature found upon them.

M^r Mills the merchant who shipt the goods and [was] formerly in custody and M^r Drycote.

That a guard be placed at the house where Kelly is in custody.

Mr. Draycott [to be] examined and remanded into custody.

That the persons that were taken on board the ship and in Mark Lane be brought hither by water with their baggage and that they be here by ten of the clock in the morning.

Nothing to be stirred out of the ship.

1722, Aug. 20th. Hon. Edward Carteret, the Post Master General, to Lord Townshend. Dated at the G[eneral] P[ost] Office.

"My Lord—I have met with the enclos'd letter this afternoon amongst the letters which came into the office today from the country, which I thought it might not be a miss to send you, that you might have the perusal of it. It is dated from Billingsgate a place in the country not known in our office, Thursday last the 16th, and in the letter, says that Mr. Rogers and he went this morning to the mercer, whom he mentions to live beyond Hanover Square. The mention of the name of Rogers and the odness of the letter induces me to send it you, and if it be of no consequence you will I doubt not have the goodness to excuse the trouble, and return it me by the messenger, and I will forward it to night for France. I am" etc.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1722, Sept. 1st. An unsigned MS. of nine pages in book form, endorsed in Mr. Tilson's hand "Informations about designs &c." It begins:—"The person that communicated his observations last year has continued to have a watchful eye stil upon some particular persons, from whom he has made some discoveries, which would have been sent sooner if thought necessary: but such as they are you have them now." And ends:—"All matters seem to be at a stand but the papists [are] no ways baulked, tho' they think things will not be ripe before spring, at least they seem to think so."

[1722]. Extracts from Jacobite letters of this year. 9 pp.

[1722]. An alphabetical key to the cyphered names in the Jacobite Correspondence. 16½ pp.

[1722]. Lists of Jacobite letters that had been signed. 14 pp.

[1722]. Cypher keys to Jacobite names. 4 pp.

May 11th, 1723. "Le Connú" (a Government spy in Holland) to George Tilson or to Anthony Corbiere? In French. Unaddressed.

[Translation]. "Sir,—I have the honour of your letter of April 26th. My enclosure to his Excellency contains one of those foreign letters, the contents of which have always been obscure to me, but it may well be that he is not too skilful, or that not having a high character he has no occasion to show his savoir faire."

Here are two extracts from letters of Walkinshaw. In that from the Hague there was a song of which you have a copy here annexed. To-day Walkinshaw sent a copy of it to Hugh Paterson at Boulogne in France, he has also sent an abstract-copy to a certain Mr Waddel a Scotch student, and according to my opinion to have it printed there. "I did destroy the paper with my own hand" this is [i.e. refers to] that paper which Walkinshaw had tried to get printed here, and which I suspect to be concerning that sample.

In order to prevent those sort of papers being printed Mr D'Ayrolle [Dayrolles] would have nothing to do but to mention in conversation to the Deputy of the town of Leyden, in the Committee of the Dutch Raad, that one knew that ill-intentioned persons would try to get printed at Leyden pieces odious to the Government and in favour of the Pretender, and that they might be prevented if the Magistrates served orders on all the printers not to print in English flying sheets like this one, or at least not till they had shown the original to Mr Gouwan, the English Minister here, that he might see and examine it before hand. This Minister is a perfectly honest man and of the best intentioned for the Government, for I believe that he prints many little flying sheets in this country, and that they are sent into England to be dispersed there.

I am very respectfully—Sir—Your humble and very obedient servant,
LE CONNÚ."

The following copies, in Le Connú's handwriting, of two intercepted Jacobite letters were enclosed in the above.

(1). Extract. De Paris, 3 May 1723.—"I am sorry that the disappointments of these paper affairs should deprive us of the pleasure of seeing you here. I shall inform my self more particularly as to the affairs of the Canal and advise you and I am not without hopes of recovering your other affair. Mr Dundass his business with L: M: [the Earl Marshal?] goes but very sloealy the people believe they will be able to clear all in time.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

De £1200 à 1205.

A. ALEXANDER."

(2.) à Mr Walkinshaw.

Hague the 8th May 1723.

"Dr Sir—If this comes time enough to hand take care that Willie Hay may be as right as Kaperdish can make him and I shall repay you the favour at meeting. You can [ken] my meaning.

I did destroy the paper with my own hand and had all the others you sent for which I most heartily thank you, the inclosed will make amend for all my neglects. My good wishes to Mr Maul Mr Cunningham and Mr Morrow from—Your &c.

JAMES HAMILTON."

1724, July 4th. Petition of William Downham, of Bristol, to Lord Townshend Secretary of State; recommended to his Lordship by Sir Abraham Elton and Henry Walter.

[1724?] An undated petition of Jonathan Kelly of Dartmouth, and William Downham of Bristol, to George Prince of Wales. 16 pp.

The petitioners represent that they were the principal agents in discovering to Lord Townshend certain details (which they minutely specify) of "the late horrid bloody and unnatural conspiracie," and that they have only received a reward of £600 etc.

The last paragraph commences as follows:—

"That not being provided for his Majesty's service as was often really promised us, we are therefore brought under great inconveniences, only pityed by our friends and flouted at by the Jacobites. That being become their scorn and derision we cannot expect nothing else (some time or other) but to fall a Sacrifice to the furie of them. But our trust is in the God of Heaven who has hitherto defended Our Majestie King George and his Kingdom, from the vile attempts, and secret conspiracies of the Pope and a Popish Pretender, and we hope ever will. And as we are true subjects of his Majestie King George (the best of Kings) we doubt not but our actions will be duly considered, and countenanced, knowing his Majestie to be the great example of Europe in encouraging good actions."

1724-5, Jan. 14th. "A Memorial concerning the Highlanders Sheriefships Vassalages &c. of Scotland." Dated at Edinburgh and unsigned. Numbered (1). 7½ pp.

1724-5, Jan. 15th. A Memorial etc. with the same title, and in the same handwriting as the last. Dated at Edinburgh and numbered (3). 13 pp.

[No date.] A memorial entitled "Proposall abt the Highlanders." 5½ pp.

To the proposal are appended the following lists:—

(1.) Clans or tribes [that] were engag'd in the late Rebellion. Most of them are arm'd and committ depredations.

(2.) Clans belonging to superiours well affected to his Majesty. The Athol men, 2000, [and] The Broadalbin men, 1000, went into the Rebellion in 1715 without their superiours.

(3.) Clans in the late Rebellion and suppos'd still to be disaffected to his Majesty.

(4.) Roman Catholics in the Highlands.

(5.) List of the most considerable gentlemen who are well affected to His Majesty's Government.

(6.) Gentlemen inhabiting the Highlands of the Shire of Inverness said to be proper persons for executing the office of Justice of the Peace.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

[1725.] Copy of a "Proposal for disarming the Highlands of Scotland." Unsigned and undated. 8 pp.

To this proposal is appended the following papers. The first is headed "Provision of money will be wanting for the purposes under-mentioned," and endorsed "Services to be performed in the Highlands in the years 1725 and 1726." 1 p. The second is headed "Numbers of the Highlanders as they were estimated [in] 1715. At a mean calculation partly from the numbers actually in Rebellion and partly from different informations." This paper is as follows:—

In Argylshire including Lord Breadalbin's and the Laird of Calder's men (chiefly whig) about 4000.

Macleans in the Isle of Mull; the land belongs to the Duke of Argyl, the men for the most part Tory 600.

Stewart of Appin attainted, the land belonging to the Duke of Argyl, the men Tory 200.

Mackdonald of Glencoe, Torie 100.

Mackdonald of Keppock attainted, the men Torie 200.

Mackdonald of Glengarie, Torie 500.

Mackdonald of Klenronald attainted and the land belonging to the Duke of Argyl (Tories) 600.

Camerons belonging to Lochiel, in several places, Tories 800.

Mackleods Tories 600.

Seafort's Mackenzies Tories 1500.

Lovat and his Frazers whigs 600.

Grant and his followers at present Tories 800.

carried over 10500

Duke of Gordon and his followers Papists 1500.

Mackintoshes Tories 500.

Mackfersons Tories 400.

Duke of Athol, his followers and the Robertson Tories 1500.

Mackniel of Rannay Papists 100.

Mackinnon Tories 150.

Rosse's mixt Whigs and Tories 500.

Kilrawack and his Rosses, Whigs 200.

Munroe's Whigs 300.

Lord Rea 300.

Lord Sutherland 500.

[total] 16450.

Mem. There are several other Gentlemen on the borders of the Highlands who can influence a small number of men.

Earl Breadalbin in Perthshire 500.

Total according to this gross computation 16950

No date. "A projected Act abt [disarming] the Highlands." In 3 clauses. 4 pp.

No date. A Memorial concerning prosecutions begun in Scotland relating to what passed in September last in the towns of Dingwal and Nairn. 4 pp.

It begins:—"There being several contests at the late elections for Magistrates of the towns which are now represented in Parliament by

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Colonel Monroe and William Stewart Esq."—and concludes, after mentioning that Lord Lovat is likewise in the Indictments branded with the imputation of several crimes without so much as being made a party to the suit, by submitting that it would be for His Majesty's service if His Majesty's Advocate should waive his suit by (as it is called in the Law of Scotland) deserting the Diet simpliciter.

1726, April 22nd. Substance d'un projet qui fut donnée au Duc de Riparda le mois de Fev^r dernier 1726. Endorsed "Substance d'un projet pour le Prétendant. Madrid 22^d Av^r 1726, in M^r Stanhope's 1¹/₂ Ap^r." Unsigned and undated. The following translation accompanies this paper.

Substance of a project given to the Court of Spain in February 1726, N.S.

"After having reflected on the project which has been formed and communicated to me, to burn the English men of war at Chatham, I find many inconveniencys in the execution of it; and even thò it were to succeed, yet it would have no effect for the advantage of the Pretender; because as there are at Chatham but part of the ships of England, the rest being dispersed in the several Ports of that Kingdom, besides that, by the Union subsisting between the King and the States General, another fleet would soon be provided, such an expedition would only serve to alarm all England, give them warning there to be more upon their guard, and prevent the making any enterprise hereafter in favor of the Pretender. I have another project to offer, which will infallibly have the success of placing the Pretender upon the English throne, if it be sure that the Emperor will sincerely join with the King; and this is the substance of it.

1^o. Instead of sending troops into Galicia, as was proposed, which indeed would not fail to give uneasiness, by reason of the little need there is of troops in that country, where there never used to be above two or three battallions; 12,000 men should be sent into Navarre out of such Regiments as shall be chosen, and of which I shall give the names, under pretence of providing for the security of the frontiers on that side. These troops would be within reach of Guipuscoa, where transport ships might be easily had, and the two men of war lately built at Orogna might join the said transports in order to convoy them, and on board of these I would put some arms, as knowing where they are to be had.

2. I take it upon me to get six men of war armed in several Ports of Brittany, provided with all necessary stores, men, provisions, &c., reserving to myself the naming of the officer that shall command that Squadron. These ships shall be joined by those that shall go from the Ports of Guipuscoa with the troops, and the whole shall be commanded by the Duke of Ormond; I also offer myself to serve in that expedition if the King thinks proper to employ me in it.

3^o. The Emperor must have 6000 men ready to be embarked at Ostend; I shall take the necessary measures for their embarkment. This matter must be kept very secret; and in order to prevent or retard the discovery of this enterprise, as soon as the troops shall march to be embark't, the letters must be stop't for two Posts together, and very strict orders given on the frontier not to suffer any person to pass, nor any courier to go from Madrid.

4^o. Two ships may likewise be sent away from Cadiz, on board of which the Earl Marshall may go with arms which I shall put in those ships. He shall go to Scotland, where the best part of the troops will, without doubt, be ordered to march into England, upon the first alarm occasioned by the descent; and then he will land with his arms and infallibly find the people ready to receive him.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

5°. The Pretender must set out from Rome to Vienna to go to Ostend, and there go on board of one of the six ships which I shall have provided in Brittany. If his project be relished, and approved by the King of Spain, I shall propose the several means of putting it into practice, so as to make it succeed infallibly, &c.

6°. The three Maseovite ships, which are now at St. Ander, may be employed in this expedition."

[1726?]. Project du Duc de Wharton pour rétablir le Prétendant. Unsigned and undated. The following translation accompanies this paper:—

The Duke of Wharton project to restore the Pretend[e]r.

The Pretender must go from Rome to Vienna incognito, and make a secret treaty with the Emperor and the King of Spain to give Minorca and Gibraltar to the latter, as soon as he shall be in possession of Great Britain; and he shall not only guarantee to the Emperor the Ostend trade, but grant him the trade to the English Colonies, as well in the East as West Indies. From Vienna the Pretender shall go to Petersbourg, the Czarina being absolutely resolved to assist him. From thence he shall go to Archangel to be transported into G[reat] Britain with ten or twelve thousand men. The King of Spain must land 8000 men in England and make himself master of a Port, and that the Emperor shall send all the troops that shall be thought fit from the Port of Ostend, and shall, at the same time, march more troops into the Low-Countries to hinder the Dutch from sending any assistance into England. The affair must be begun in Scotland which will quickly be in arms, the Pretender having arms in Spain, Britany, Holland; and 2 millions of pounds sterling are ready in the hands of his friends in England, where they only wait for the Pretender's order to begin a general insurrection as well in England as in Scotland; and it is assured that in Scotland almost every body is in the Pretender's interest and ready to rise on his first order. The landing must be executed when the English Squadrons shall be abroad, and in case that opportunity cannot be laid hold of, it must be done in winter time when the ships are laid up.

April 10th, 1727. General (afterwards Field Marshall) Wade to Lord Townshend. In a secretary's hand, and signed by the General. Slightly torn. Dated in London and unaddressed.

"My Lord,—As you have been pleased to allow me the liberty to represent to your Lordship what I conceive to be necessary for His Majesty's service in North Britain, for securing the present peace of the Highlands on a solid and lasting foundation; and to frustrate the designs of His Majesty's enemys who for the future may attempt to disturb the present tranquility of that part of the Kingdom.

Nothing can more effectually contribute to those ends than the proposals I had the honour to make of erecting new forts and barracks at Inverness and Killitruiman; which His Majesty was graciously pleas'd to approve of. But I am sorry to acquaint your Lordship that notwithstanding my repeated representations of the necessity of carrying on these works, and of repairing the Castle of Edinburgh, and other fortresses in the South of Scotland, nothing has yet been effectually done (either in the one or the other) but repairing the old Castle of Inverness.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

I hope your Lordship will likewise procure His Majesty's consent that an allowance may be made out of the contingencies of the army as was [done] the last year for carrying on the roads of communication. The great military way through the centre of the Highlands extending from Fort William to Inverness (50 miles in length) is now almost finished and made practicable for the march of troops, canon or other wheel carriage, and may be continued to Perth at a very moderate expence by the Regiments quartered in those parts.

I formerly took the liberty to represent to your Lordship that it would be of use if a small man of war were ordered to cruise on the West Coasts of Scotland, for if the Pretender should ever attempt to land arms or forces in that part of the Kingdom it will probably be on the West Coasts, which by my last intelligence has been already surveyed by a sea officer in the Spanish service sent thither for that purpose.

I had the honour to acquaint your Lordship by letter from Edinburgh the last year that I had information that four persons attainted for High Treason were returned to Scotland, viz^t John Stuart of Innernitty, Alex^r Robinson [sic for Robertson] of Strowan, Sir David Trepland of Fingask, and John Walkinshaw of Scots Town, in hopes of being permitted to make their submissions to His Majesty. But if His Majesty does not see fit to receive their submissions and grant them his royal pardon, proper measures should be taken to chase them out of the country.

I begg leave to observe to your Lordship that as the Governour and Lieut Governour of Edinburgh Castle are generally absent the Earl of Orkney by his attendance on His Majesty, and Brigadier Preston by his ill state of health, occasioned from the wounds he received [in] the last warr, the highest officer resident there is the Fort Major, who though an experienced officer is often indisposed by sickness and [is] decayed in his constitution. I therefore am humbly of opinion that it would contribute to the security of that important place if His Majesty would please to constitute a Deputy Lieut Governour of known zeal and experience who would constantly reside in the Castle. The person who I should recommend as most proper for that employment is one Major Hardine formerly Major to Sir Charles Hotham's Regiment and who was Major to the Castle of Allicant when beseiged by the Spaniards in 1708, which he defended with great resolution after the Governour and other his superiour officers were blown up by the springing the mine of 1500 barrells of powder. This gentleman is now in London, and has offert'd to serve as Deputy Lieut Governour without any sallary provided he may have the promise of succeeding Brigadier Preston in the Lieut Government of the Castle when it may happen to become vacant.

I take the liberty likewise to recommend Coll^o Cunningham as a proper person to be made Lieut Governour of the Castle of Inverness; he served with reputation in all the Campains of the two last wars in Flanders, but is now out of employment; he is willing to reside constantly at Inverness where there has been no Governour since Col[onel] Clayton's departure to Gibraltar. An officer of experience will be usefull, in that part of the Highlands, as well to keep the country in a due subjection to His Majesty, as to forward the fortifications and barracks intended to be executed erected there.

I must likewise put your Lordship in mind of two persons I had the honour to mention to you, the one is the Lord John Murray, the eldest son of the Duke of Athol by his second marriage; he has been educated in England, is a youth of good parts, very desirous to serve in the army, and would be very well pleased with a Colours in the Foot Guards having very little to depend on. The other is the nephew and heir to the Laird of McIntosh, and will succeed him as Chief of that Clan; he has served for some years as Quarter Master in Col^o Kerr's Dragoons who gives him a good character as well for his diligence in his station as for zeal he has allways shown to His Majesty and Government, and if he were encouraged (by being made Lieutenant of Foot) to continue in His Majesty's service he would in time be able to work a great alteration in the minds of that Clan whose disaffection has been so notorious.

When I had the honour to be last with your Lord[ship I took] the liberty to inform you, that the Moderator by order of [the National?] Assembly of the Kirk of Scotland had wrote a letter to [His Majesty forwar]ding the Petition of the Inhabitants of Maryburgh w[ho request that] his Majesty will be graciously pleased to allow them a salary for the maintenance of a Minister to perform Divine service, and to educate their children. If His Majesty is pleased to grant their request 50^l per annum will be sufficient for that purpose, and if no other fund can be found to defray that charge it may be allowed out of His Majesty's annual bounty to the Kirk of Scotland for the support of itinerant ministers.

I have only to acquaint your Lordship that the Highlands continue in perfect quiet. The garrison Companys, as also those raised for [the service of the Highlands have been compleat ever since the 24th of February last, since which time the latter have been assembled at proper Stations, and ready to march to any part of the sea coasts, if occasion shall require. I am—My Lord—your Lordship's must humble and most obedient servant.

GEORGE WADE."

1727, May 16th. Copy of advices from the Camp before Gibraltar. In French. Unsigned. It concludes:—

"The day before yesterday the Duke of Wharton insisted on going to a Battery to show his Garter-Riband crying out a thousand times "Long live the Pretender," and using a quantity of bad language. They represented to him repeatedly that he ought to withdraw, but he refused to do so. At last he was struck by a piece of a shell on the toe. He had been drinking brandy, otherwise perhaps he would have been wiser. . . . If the English do not have pity on us we shall all have our beards grey before Gibraltar is taken. Plenty of persons have engaged to write otherwise but I would rather hold my tongue than write falsehoods."

1727, August 18th. Mons. La Roche to Horatio Walpole? Endorsed:—"In Mr Walpole's to Sr Robert Walpole." In French.

[Translation.] "Sir—I believe that you are sufficiently persuaded that there is nothing on foot in favour of the Pretender. The Bishop and O'Brien have both told me that there was some appearance that he would go to make a tour in Spain. There were frequently councils at the Bishop's where Mr Ruth always assisted and about three weeks ago the Bishop passed a whole day and night at Mr Ruth's. It is this which has given rise to someone belief that an interview with the Pretender took place—O'Brien also being absent for some days. O'Brien told me yesterday that there is a treaty concluded between Spain and France, and that the affairs of Europe were about to change their aspect a good deal. I do not think that few persons are informed of the place where the Pretender is. I believe that he has been at Cologne and at Liege, and I am persuaded that he has been at Connonges at Mr O'Roark's or at Commerci, and that so much the more probable that I am persuaded that the journey of Mr Roark to Vienna is [undertaken] on that subject, for he is one of the most zealous Jacobites in the world, and one of the best fitted for negotiations.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

I have seen my Lord Blandford very often for a month past and he continues to have his head very confused with all those affairs, and he no longer thinks of returning to England. I supped last evening with the Duke of Beauford and Lord Blandford and it seems that those two Lords wish to make a grand intrigue together, for they often enough have secret "teste à teste" conferences, and I find that Lord Blandford is very pleased with the Duke.

The chief rumour current among the Jacobites is that Spain is preparing an armament in favour of the Pretender. There are some people here who affirm this with great positiveness but I believe it would be unreasonable to pay the least attention to it: Above all [to] a piece of news which took its origin in the head of the Chevalier Toby Burck.

I hope, Sir, that I have not had the misfortune to displease you. The apprehension that I have done so has given me all imaginable pain. However I take the liberty to assure you that I act with zeal in this affair and that I have neglected no occasion of arriving at a knowledge of the things that I have thought useful to be known and to be communicated. I am resolved whatever happens always to continue to do so. I commend myself to your goodness and protection and entreat you to believe me with very profound respect—Sir—Your very humble and obedient servant.

LA ROCHE."

"à Paris ce 18 d'Aoust 1727 à l'hôtel d'hansbac [Ansbach ?] rue Jacobe."

1727, Augt. 19th. An Affidavit made by George McCaines at Portsmouth.

George McCaines Master of the Catherine of London this day arrived from Havre de Grace in France, which place he left on Tuesday last, who says it was there reported by people of good credit, that the Pretender in company with the German Ambassador lately went to Versailles and that the Pretender was two hours in private with the King of France, after which he immediately took post chaise and in company with the said Ambassador went for Brussels.

Jurat' etc. Jn^o Norris.

[Signed] GEORGE MCCAINES.

ACCOUNTS, ETC., FORMERLY BELONGING TO THE EARL OF WILMINGTON.

1705-1728.

1705, Nov. 30th. A copy of a Warrant, from Prince George of Denmark to his Treasurer and Receiver General Edward Nicholas, to pay to Sir Isaac Newton and others a sum not exceeding £1100.

It begins:—"Whereas I have thought fitt to appoint the Hon^{ble} Francis Roberts Esq^r, Sir Isaac Newton K^t President of the Royall

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Society, Sir Christopher Wren K^t Her Majesties Surveyor Generall, Mr John Arbutnot and Mr David Gregory Professor of Astronomy in the University of Oxon, to oversee and take care of the printing and publishing of the observations of the Heavens for thirty years last [past] by Mr. John Flamstead, with power to contract for printing and publishing the same at my expense"

This warrant is noted at foot:—"25 Apr. 1707. Paid to Sir Isaac Newton in part £375*l*. and incident charges, £ⁿ 7*s*. 6*d*.—£384 7*s*. 6*d*."

1705-1709. A bundle of Accounts, Inventories, and Valuations, etc., formerly belonging to the Hon. Spencer Compton as Treasurer to Prince George of Denmark. Some of these are quoted further on.

1707, March 17th. A copy of the Warrant of His Royall Highness Prince George of Denmark to Spencer Compton Esq^r, Treasurer and Receiver General of his Household and Revenue, to pay the Duke of Argyle £431 for Colours drummers' coats &c.

"I doe hereby direct and require you that out of such moneys as are or shall come to your hands by the receipt of any Revenue you pay or cause to be paid to the Duke of Argyle or his assigns the sume of four hundred thirty one pounds according to the bill hereunto annexed. For which this with the acquittance of the said Duke of Argyle or his assigns shall be your warrant. Given &c."

Same date. The Duke of Argyle's bill for the use of His Royal Highness Prince George of Denmark's Regiment of Foot:—

For 26 drummers coats, wascoats and briches, stockings, shoes, shirts and cravatts 15 ^h each, 3 pair of Colours at	li.	s.	d.
10 ^h each	420	0	0
Incidental charges	11	0	0
[Total £]	431	0	0

170⁷₈, March 12th. Major William Churchill to Spencer Compton.

"Sir—Inclosed are the reasons which induced [the] Duke of Marlborough Duke of Argyle and Gen^l Churchill to beg his Royal Highness's favour to his Regim^t, the Duke of Argyle is very uneasy till 'tis granted. I this morning received the inclosed from his agent. I beg pardon for this trouble and am" etc.

"State of the Prince's Regiment." Enclosed in the above letter.

"That upon the Revolution in 1688, the regiment of your Royal Highness, late commanded by Gen^l Churchill, now by his Grace the Duke of Argyle, did most of them desert with new cloathing, which upon their recruiting, being forced to be new cloath'd, occasion'd two new whole cloathing in one year.

That when it came to Gen^l Churchill it was left by Sir Theoph[ilus] Oglethorpe above 500*l*. in debt.

That in Ireland there was 400 draughted from them with their new cloathing, for which the said Regim^t was never reimbursed.

That during the time of small money, and the great deficiency on tallies, the Regim^t being alwayes on service, the cloathing exceeded the off reckonings in 5 years above 4000*l*.

That at the Battles of Landen and Hohenstet, the Regiment was almost destroy'd being new cloathed.

These misfortunes occasion'd a great debt on the Regim^t, which by management is above half of it reduced.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

But Her Majestie having been pleas'd to appoint a new method of clothing for the future, which cannot be comply'd with by his Grace of Argyle, without running the Regiment further in debt, unless Her Majestie, or your Royal Highness will be pleas'd to shew some favour to it.

'Tis therefore humbly pray'd your Royal Highness will be pleas'd to bestow on the said Regiment, the favour annually (till the Regiment is out of debt, which will be in three years) that your Royal Highness used to grant to Gen^l Churchill every other year.

All which is humbly submitted."

PAPERS relating to the personal effects of the late Prince George of Denmark.

1709, June 9th. A Memorandum, signed by Lord De La Warr, Groom of the Stole to Prince George.

"There was alsoe taken out of the Prince's pocketts, vizt.:

A gold watch and seals, a gold tooth pin case, a gold tuisar case and 20 guineas. All these things were put into the Prince's scrutore that stood in the closett att Kensington, and I delivered both the key of the closett & scrutore to the Queen.

There was alsoe put into this scrutore att that time, a pair of diamond shoe buckles, and a diamond hat buckle.

There was also 2 diamond Georges and a gold George put into the Prince's strong box and his collar of SS with his enamelled George.

There was also 2 gold headed canes in his closett at Kensington.

There was alsoe 2 pair of diamond buttons which he constantly wore in his shirt sleeves which I delivered to the Queen.

There was alsoe 2 pair more of diamond buttons for his shirt which were in the Prince's own custody either in the scrutore or strong box as Mr Buckholt Informed me.

There was 2 Boxes of guilt dressing plate brought from Denmark whereof one was presented to the Queen, when Princess, the other was kept for his own use in his Bedchamber, when his Royal Highness was in health, & used to dress in his own side. This box consists of 24 pieces which was always kept by Mr Buckholt only, as being first barber, and when he att any time held the Prince's leave to goe to Denmark he delivered it over to Mr. Laroch as the Prince's second barber with a list."

1709, June 21st. A Memorial delivered to Queen Anne by [the R^t Hon^{ble} John Smith Esq^{re} and the R^t Hon^{ble} Sir Charles Hedges] the Administrators to his late Royall Higness.

With this memorial are preserved the following exhibits :—

An appraisment of the horses and mares of his late Royall Highness Prince George of Denmark, the 20th of June 1709. [Signed by John Willis and Robert Simcoke.] :—

Breeding mares.

	Prized at
	li.	s.	d.
Grey Webb - - - -	30	0	0
Chesnutt Webb - - - -	10	0	0
Charming Jenny has now 2 bone spavins	20	0	0
Pope Bess - - - -	25	0	0
Chesnutt Ramsdon - - - -	30	0	0
Bay Courant - - - -	50	0	0
Bay Scratch - - - -	35	0	0
A Bay filley 4 years old - - - -	12	0	0
Chesnutt Spot good for nothing - - - -

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

Stallions.
Leeds	-	-	-	80 0 0
Dunn Arabian	-	-	-	60 0 0
Black Arabian	-	-	-	43 0 0
Honey Wood	-	-	-	30 0 0

Coach horses.

Sett of 7 Black Danish horses and 1 gelding (1 blind, 1 spavin'd, 1 bad eyes, 1 broken winded & good for little. The whole set at	-	-	170 0 0
The sett of Danish bay mares and geldings (3 spavin'd, 2 blind.) The whole Set at	-	-	50 0 0
The leading set of English horses being 8	-	-	143 11 0
Three chaise horses	-	-	40 0 0

Hunters.

The brown Welley mare	-	-	60 0 0
A little Barb Stone horse, 23 gui ^s	-	-	24 14 6
A little Barb nag	-	-	20 0 0

Padds.

A dunn padd	-	-	7 0 0
The Doctor's nagg	-	-	12 0 0
One gray padd	-	-	29 0 0
The old dunn padd	}	-	10 15 0
The Chiddle padd
Old Ormond padd

Total	-	-	992 0 6
-------	---	---	---------

Valuation of the coaches. [Signed by Francis Kitson and Timothy Budworth.]

	li.	s.	d.
His Royall Highness Body coach out of mourning valued at	150	00	00
And old coach put into mourning for a Body coach valued at	40	00	00
The three end leading coach in mourning: and an old velvitt lining and a seatt cloth belonging to it valued at	55	00	00
The chariott in mourning valued at	30	00	00
The old chaise in second mourning lin'd with a grey cloth valued at	10	00	00
The three old wagins valued at	15	00	00
The old sashmere valued at	06	00	00
The old chair valued at	20	00	00

The valuation of the Prince's silver plate. [Signed by Richard Adams and Pierre Platel.]

Note. The total weight is stated as 10329 oz. 12 dwt., and the total value at £2681 17*sh.* 5½*d.* The highest value set on any pieces being 5*sh.* 4½*d.* per oz., and the lowest 4*sh.* per oz.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

Arms belonging to his late Royall Highness valued the eighth day of June 1709 by Thomas Wright, Master of the Gunmakers' Company, Francis Philipps, Warden, John Shaw sen^r and Andrew Dolep.

Item. Twenty pair of pistolls valued at three pounds a pair	-	-	-	60	0	0
Item. Ten pair of pistolls at one pound a pair	-	-	-	10	0	0
Item. Four pair of pistolls at seven shillings and sixpence a pair	-	-	-	1	10	0
Item. Eight mortar peices at one pound a peice	-	-	-	8	0	0
Item. Fifteen wheellock guns at one pound a piece	-	-	-	15	0	0
Item. Sixteen bullet guns at one pound fifteen shillings apeice	-	-	-	28	0	0
Item. Eighteen ordinary guns at one pound five shillings apeice	-	-	-	22	10	0
Item. Six double guns at ten pounds apeice	-	-	-	60	0	0
Item. Two wind guns at five pounds apeice	-	-	-	10	0	0
Item. Twenty four guns at three pounds ten shillings apeice	-	-	-	84	0	0
				<hr/> £299 0 0 <hr/>

A barge belonging to his late Royall Highness deceased valued the 16th day of June 1709 by John Loftus and Robert Mason.

Item a twelve oar'd barge and glasses and oares - 180 0 0

Item. These exhibitants declare that the plate belonging to the bed chamber of his late Royal Highnes and which was in constant use there was appraised at 93. 5. 9³/₄. but was claimed by the R^t Hon^{ble} the Lord Delawarr who was Groome of the Stole to his late Royall Highnes. as a fee and perquisite of his office and as such was delivered to him.

Item. These exhibitants declare that the coaches chaises carriages chaires saddle and coach horses, breeding mares and stallions and all other things belonging to his late Royall Highnes's stable were claimed by the R^t Hon^{ble} the Earl of Bridgewater who was Master of the Horse to his late Royall Highnes as a fee and perquisite of his office and as such have been delivered to him.

Item. These exhibitants do declare that the barge belonging to his late Royall Highnes was claimed by Christopher Hill who was Barge-master to his late Royall Highnes as a fee and perquisite of his place and as such was delivered to him.

[1709?]. Duke of Argyll to Spencer Compton. Unaddressed and undated.

"Sir—You know when I came to command his late Royall Highness Prince George's regiment of foot [the 3rd Buffs] the board of gen^l officers found that Gen^l [Charles] Churchill had left the regim^t £3858 in that debt to Major [William] Churchill and Mr Harnege on the clothing acct. The Duke of Marlborough was acquainted with it and for accommodating the matter on their application his Royall Highness was pleased in place of the £200 he gave yearly for clothing the drums and hautboys of his regim^t in his livery to allow £430 p annum for that untill the above mentioned sum of £3858 should be paid the

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

regim^t being to be clothed new and the first £430 being paid from your office last year I desire you'l oblige me by acquainting my Lord Treasurer herewith and pray the favour of him to speak to Her Majesty to ordere the paym^t of the £430.

Your favour herein in will oblige Sir &c.

ARGYLL."

1712, March 31st. Sir John Stanley to Spencer Compton. Dated at the Cockpit, and unaddressed.

"Sir,—Her Majestie having been pleased to referr my Lord Chamberlain the inclosed peticon of M^r Hill, master of the barges to his late Royall Highness [Prince George of Denmark], his Grace desires you to inform him what allowance was made to M^r Hill out of your office for repairs of the barges, barge-house, &c., and to what time paid. Also to inform him whether the Prince's barges do now belong to her Majestie, or [can be] claimed as a fee by any of his officers, or any other person. I am with respect—Sir—your most obedient and most humble serv^t J. STANLEY."

1715–1723. Abstract of the expences of His R. Highness [the Prince of Wales'] Household [for every month] from Oct. 1st 1715 to Sept^r 30th 1722. On a sheet in tabular form.

A similar abstract from 1st Oct. 1715 to 1st Oct. 1723.

With the above abstracts are several other papers and accounts, most of which are undated and of no great interest, relating to the Prince of Wales' Household.

In an undated paper headed "An Establishment for Richmond House," which begins "M^r Carter the gardner for the whole charge of the gardens 210*li* p ann.," there is entered "The Black [a] Moor in the menagery 8*li* p ann. [and] 6*s*. board wages p week. Totall 23. 12. p ann."

From another paper it appears that M^{rs} Margaret Purcell in 1718 was housekeeper of His Royal Highness's House in Leicester Fields at a salary for herself and her servants of £100.

1720–1722. Accounts of [and letters to] Spencer Compton as Treasurer to the Prince of Wales.

1723–1728. The following papers relate to the Duchy of Cornwall, and formerly belonged to Mr. Compton as Treasurer of the Duchy.

1723, April 16th. Edward Trelawny to Capt. Rogers? Unaddressed and apparently a copy in a clerk's hand.

"Sir,—Haveing the hon^r to dine with the Judges at your Assizes, I took that opportunity to more my Lord Eyres for a farm [qu. a lease of mining rights?] in fav^r of the tanners; his lordship seemed very well pleased with it, and with an uncommon earnestness encourag'd me to endeavour a petition in order thereunto from the tanners, saying it was not theires but our business to petition which if I would forward in the contrary [sic], his lordship assured me, he would promote it above with his utmost interest, and doubted not of bringing it to a happy conclusion.

Soon after I did my self the honour to write to my Lord Falmouth [Lord Warden of the Stanneries] in it, for his lordship's direction; whose answer now lies before me in these words. I am very well pleased, that you or any other gentleman, should use their utmost endeavours for a farm; which no man living more earnestly desires than my self.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

I need not tell you how hardly the tinnors are dealt with by the merchants; and you are so much interested in this affair, and have the interest of your contrary [sic] so much at heart, that I flatter my self, you will not only approve of my endeavours for the common good, but will promote it among your neighbours with your utmost zeal.

I therefore make it my request to you, that you would give me your opinion (who have been so lon[g] experienc'd in forwarding farms for many yeares last past) whether this will be most properly promoted by a generall meeting of the best adventurers; or by a Petition drawn in form and circulated through the county for subscriptions; which together with your pardon for this trouble, will be very welcome to Sir—Your humble serv^t,

ED. TRELAWNY."

1723, April 22nd. William Pendarves "To the Hon^d Col. Godolphin Member [of] Parlt at his house in Scotland Yard—Whitehall." Dated at Pendarves.

"Hon^d Sir—Thursday last at our half Quarter Sessions at Penzance a letter was there communicated to us by Cap^t Rogers a copy of which is inclosed. We came to the resolution that we would make application to some of the Prince's Councell to know in what manner his Royal Highness will be address; whither by the Lord Warden [of the Stanneries] or any other way, if you would give your self the trouble to ask the Speaker his thoughts thereon, and let me know them it will be a great obligation on this country, and if we can bring it to a conclusion, will rivet his Highness[']s int[erests] so in the hearts of our country men; as no other favour can parelel. If for any reason you do not think fit to grant this request, you may please to communicate to any [of] our country men (the enclosed) who you may perchance meet.—I am—Sir your obliged humble servant

WILL PENDARVES.

[P.S.] Pay the inclosed to my wife."

1723, April 27th. Colonel Sidney Godolphin to Spencer Compton. Dated at Whitehall and unaddressed. Endorsed in Spencer Compton's hand "Sidney Godolphin—Apl. 27th 1723—Tin-Farm."

"Sir—I beg leave to trouble you with the inclosed, and that I may wayte on you at your coming to towne to receive your commands I am—Sir—Your most obedient servant

S. GODOLPHIN."

1723, Sept. 25th. The most humble Petition of William Munday—To the High and Mighty Prince George Prince of Wales Duke of Cornwall &c :—

Sheweth—That your Petitioner hath been Chief Clerk in your Royal Highnesses Auditor Gen^l Office ever since the establishment thereof, And was many years before in the Auditor's Office for your Dutchy of Cornwall, and was sworne Deputy therein at your Highnesses new granting the said office to M^r Bertie. And your Petitioner hath likewise acted in your Survey^r Gen^l Office as Chief Clerk, all the time that M^r [Samuel] Travers [late M.P. for S^t Mawes] held the same, and is now continued by Mr. [Walter] Cary the present Surveyor Gen^l

That for all these services your Petr doth not receive from your Royal Highness any salary or yearly fee whatsoever, nor from any of his principals, but M^r Bertie, who pays him 40*li* p ann. only: And his perquisites are so small in all the said Offices, that your Petitioner is unable to support himself and family without your Royal Highnesses bounty towards him, etc.

Endorsed : " Referr'd to his Royal Highness's Council the 25th Sept^r 1723," and minuted at foot:—It is his Royal Highnesses pleasure that this Petition be referr'd to the consideration of his Royal Highness's Council; and that they do report their opinion to his Royal Highness what gratification it may be reasonable to allow for the extraordinary services mentioned therein.

S[AMUEL] MOLYNEUX.

1724, April 29th. The Memorial of W^m Munday Deputy Auditor of the Dutchy of Cornwall relating to the Accounts of Robert Corker Esq^r Receiver General thereof. Addressed "To the R^t Hon^{ble} Spencer Compton Esq^r His Royal Highnesses Treasurer and Receiver General." 2 pp.

From this Memorial it appears that "the Ipsum" of the Dutchy Receiver's Account for the year ended at Michaelmas was £21,807. 12. 5 $\frac{1}{4}$.

1724, May 18th. The second Memorial of W^m Munday Deputy Aud[ito]r of the Dutchy of Cornwall relating to the Accounts of Robert Corker Esq^r Rec[eive]r Gen[era]l thereof.

"The remains of the Ipsum of his Accounts to and for the Year ended at Michaelmas 1721, according to my former state is 3,257*l.* 12*s.* 6 $\frac{1}{4}$ d."

"In all in the Rec^r Gen^{ls} hands due to his Royal Highness to Michaelmas last 16,884*l.* 10*s.* 11 $\frac{3}{4}$ d."

"1724, Dec. 16th. Nicholas Vincent to Spencer Compton. Dated at Chelsea and unaddressed. Endorsed by the Speaker "Mr Vincent's letter relating to the Sheriff of Cornwall."

The writer states that he has received a letter from M^r Samuel Philips complaining of ill health, and begs M^r Compton to prevail with his Royal Highness to name Thomas Long of Penheale his Sheriff of Cornwall, for the ensuing year, instead of M^r Philips.

1725, April 7th.—Mons^r Brunaud to "The Right honourable Spencer Compton Treasurer to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales—In St James—London." Dated at Bordeaux.

The writer advises his Highness's Treasurer as to drafts he has drawn for wines bought for the Prince's use. From his figures it appears that the then rate of exchange between England and France was then about 3*s.* 2*d.* per écu of 3 francs.

"£200 at 37 $\frac{3}{4}$ p. v. making in French money frs. 3814.10." The letter concludes :—

"I did not draw all at once as M^r Powell writes me you wished I had done but I durst not do it before the wines were ready to go aboard. However [I] am glad that what remained to draw was but little at this high rate of exchange, it being started up in one post from 37 $\frac{3}{4}$ to 38 $\frac{3}{4}$ & $\frac{1}{4}$ year 38 $\frac{3}{4}$ never have I seen the like, nor monneys so scarce; that we may thank the famous system of Mississippi for. I subscribe [myself] with submission" etc.

1725, July 3rd. J. Collier "To The Right Honourable Sir Spencer Compton Speaker of the House of Commons." Sir—I have sent the farther bill to M^r Andrews for your honor—and would humbly presume to begg your Honor's favourable recomandation of the item in my former bill which is left in blank. I am sure from your owne justice and generosity considering my Extrordnary paines and service in the affair there is noe occation to mention it but that it may not slipp your mind, I am S^r—Yo^r hono^{rs} most obedient humble serv^t,—J. COLLIER."

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

1725, Oct. 9th, N.S. William Rollinson to Sir Spencer Compton. Dated at Bordeaux and unaddressed. 3 pp.

The writer discusses the merits of various wines and the prospects of the approaching vintage. Begs his correspondent's acceptance of a barrell of grapes which he is sending by Capt^r Henry Beach of the Bordeaux Merchant. "Twenty-four hours more wet before the grapes are cut must infalibly spoil the whole sans resource. I am therefore so far at present from saying what sorts may be most proper this year for His Royal Highness, that 'tis impossible for me to imagine whether any wine in this province can be found worth bringing into England. I have this day drawn upon you for 2903: 1: Livres, at 38 $\frac{7}{8}$ per French Crown, £156. 14. 11. sterling, payable to the order of Mr Robert Gordon at two [months?] usance, being the amount of five tons of wine according to the enclosed invoice"

Note.—From this letter it appears that the claret supplied to the Prince of Wales's household cost about thirty guineas a tun, that the value of the French livre at this date was nearly thirteen pence, and that the exact value of the French écu of three livres was 38 $\frac{7}{8}$ pence.

1725, Dec. 13th. Nicholas Vincent, "To William Munday Esq. at his House in Grovesnor Street near Hanover Square—London." Dated at Truro.

"Mr. Munday—I receiv'd yours last Saturday, and though I have no objection to the characters of the persons whose names you sent me, yet I think it would be more for the service of the Government, that John Collins of Treworgan Esq^{re} should be appointed Sheriff for the ensuing year, and therefore hope he will be nominated accordingly. I desire you will present my humble service to that Gentleman who commanded you to write the letter and am—your friend and servant,

NIC. VINCENT."

1726, April 17th. Sidney Godolphin to Sir Spencer Compton.—Dated at Thames Ditton in Surry, and unaddressed.

"Sir, Haveing (beyond expectation) survived the winter I am not without hopes of liveing a little longer, in order to which I don't know anything that can contribute more effectually then his Royall Highnesses's grace and favour.

I am told Mr Vincent (if liveing) is in a verry ill state of health. Upon Mr. Godolphin's death he succeeded him in the place of seymaster [? Assay-master] of the stannerys. I did then with all humility address my self to your Honour (who I am proud to call my Patron) to recomend me to the Prince's favour on that ocaion which I now again do if you approve of this the most humble request of—Your most faithfully devoted and obedient serv^t.

S. GODOLPHIN."

1726, July 1st. Lord Falmonth, Lord Warden of the Stannaries, to Sir Spencer Compton. Dated in London and unaddressed.

"Sir—I take the liberty to lett you know, that att two this morning Mr Vincent dyed, by whose death the office of essay master is vacant in the gift of His Royall Highness. If itt would be His Royall Highnesse's pleasure to bestow that office on Samuel Foot Esq., who lives constantly in the Country, is knowing in these affairs, and has ever been steady to the interest of the royall fameleye itt would allsoe enable me to be very usefull, in severall corporations, which to be permitted to be (to His Roy^l Highness) is my utmost ambition, but this must be as (he pleases) and it must be told Him or not as you please, att least you will pardon this, from him that is most truly Sir—Your very scall [? special] humble servant.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

FALMOUTH."

1724, Feb. 2nd. Robert Mann "To Mr Andrews at the Right Hon^{ble} Sr Spencer Compton's—These."

"Sir—A vacancy being likely to happen in a very little time here, I think it my duty to let my great Master know it, and being confin'd to my room, where I have been more then ten dayes, thought none so proper to tell him of it as yourself—'tis Mr Astells [Post of] Controller of the cole yard; the sallery 30th pr ann, diet coles and candles, with a pretty litle lodgeing fit indeed only for a single man. He sells the College coles by contract and delivers out all candles and by that means serves all the offices with both cole and candle. In a word in my opinion 'tis to a man that will be here and mind his business a good 100th a year. Formerly the Wardrobe was enext to this and Pope the present Wardrobe Keeper is in a very bad way and had he dy'd first Astall was to have had both (as I have heard) and then it would be twice as good and two very good lodgeings, and indeed the first establishment runs for one man to both places, and since my time one Heeler had them both. If you please to let his Hon^{or} know this and with humble duty, you'l oblige me. I don't Care to presume to write this bussey time to him, but you'l believe me—Sir your most humble servant.

ROB. MANN."

[P.S.] Interest is making by some [who] will make the Speaker believe its worth a very triffle but mine is a true state of the matter.

PAPERS RELATING TO THE TOWER OF LONDON.

1712 to 1719.

1712, April 1st. Petition of Thomas Cornelius, Master Gunner of the Town to the Earl of Northampton. Assigned and Endorsed "Cap^t Cornelius's Petition."

The petitioner thinks it his duty to acquaint his lordship that yesterday when putting the guns in order on Evan's Battery Mr Eustace, Mr Gibson, and Mr Musgrove that assists the Surveyor came there and "without any provocation the said M^r Musgrove grew very passionate and did not only vilifie and degrade your petitioner with very bad language but also struck your petitioner severall times while upon his post and duty as aforesaid and the other two held your petitioner that he could not defend nor helpe himself" etc.

[1712.] Another Petition of the same to the same; unsigned and dated.

Humbly Sheweth.—That it hath been an antient custome for the Master Gunner of the said Tower to be empowered by Warrant from the R^t Hon^{ble} the Constable of the said Tower to demand and receive a smale matter of money for tole or warffidg for landing of goods at and carrying goods from Iron Gates stayres adjoining to Tower Wharff in the Tower liberty Humbly prays your Lordshipp will please to graunt your petitioner the like Warrant.

1712, April 2nd. Humphry Brent "To the R^t Hon^{ble} George Earl of Northampton att his house in Bloomsbury Square." Franked "Walpoole," and bearing the impressed Post Office stamp "Post-paid,

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Peny." Endorsed "Mr Brent's Letter concerning the Commissioners of Sewers."

"My Honoured Lord I have acted as Clerk of the Sewers for about seven years about four months agoe there was a Petition lodged att my Lord Keeper's (which still lyes before him) under the hands of the Sheriffe Cass, Mr Justices [i.e. Deputy Lieut^e of the Tower Hamletts] Tyssen Brattle Frampton Johnson Kyrby and others. With the list of Commissioners [of Sewers] which my Lord Abingdon was so kind to deliver for me to my Lord Rivers, the same having been first approved of by the Sheriffe and Mr Baron [Robert] Price [of the Exchequer] who had sent me before to renew the Commission as being much concerned himselfe to have it done, because his estate at Wapping which is considerable (as well as the estate of many others) suffers very much by the foulness of the Sewers in those parts, But my Lord Rivers being expected to be moved from his Government of the Tower 'twas thought adviseable to defer renewing the Commission till that Post was filled I humbly beg your Lordship's pardon for this trouble as well as leave [to] subscribe myselfe (with the utmost deference and respect)—My honoured Lord, etc.

HUMPH: BRENT."

1712, April 11th. John Hales and David Crauford (two of the Commissioners of Chelsea Hospital) to the Earl of Northampton. Dated at Chelsea.

The writers beg that the bearer, Mr Crispe, may be continued as agent for the 3 Invalids Companies in the Tower, to which post he was appointed by his Lordship's predecessor, the Earl Rivers.

1712, June 7th. Sir Stephen Fox "To the R^t Honbl^e the Earl of Northampton. Dated at Chiswick, and endorsed "Sir St. Fox's letter recommending Henry Bowman."

"My noble Lord,

I was earnestly desired to put this Petition into your Lordship's hands by a person that was recommend'd to me very earnestly and by his stern look [he] seems very fitt for the employment he desires, there will be good security given for his faithfull performance of that office the Petitions for which I leave to your Lordship's judgement and remain,

My noble Lord,

Your Lordship's

Most affectionate and humble servant,

STF: FOX."

[1712]. The Earl of Northampton's case as to the Custos Rotulorum of the Tower Hamletts. Undated.

The Tower and Liberty and Precinct thereof hath an antient Court of Record for tryall of all actions there, and a Court Leet, and by a Charter in King James the 2^d there are Justices and Sessions of the Peace peculiarly and restrictive from those of Middlesex.

The Hamletts of the Tower are not in the Liberty or Precincts but are in the County of Middlesex and the inhabitants have bin formerly by orders of Councell exempted from appearing at the Sessions for the county in respect of their duty to attend and guard the Tower when required and the Trained Bands of the Hamletts were antient and their rights are reserved in the Militia Act of 13, 14, 15 Car. 2^d from which time the Chiefe Governo^r of the Tower hath bin (by Comission) Lord Leuft of the Hamletts and all other places incorporated and priviledged within the limitts and Precincts of the Tower or Hamletts and hath made Deputy Lieut^{ts} as in other countys.

The Earle of North[amp]ton's Comissions of Lieutenancy and Custos Rotulorum are of the Hamletts of the Tower and place incorporated and priviledged within the limitts or Precincts of the Tower or Hamletts with a clause in the Commission of Custos to return to the Sessions of Peace of the Tower Liberty, all writts precepts processes and indictm^{ts} there to be determined.

But there are noe particular Comissions, Sessions or Clerke of the Peace for all the Hamletts as there are for the Liberty and tho' the Earle of North[amp]ton be Custos Rotulor[um] of both Hamletts and Liberty, yet the Justices and Clerke of the county continue to execute their Office in the Hamletts as in the other parts of the county. See that at p^rsent his Lordship's grant of Custos Rotulor[um] of the Hamletts is of noe use to him.

1712, June 13th. A list of the new Commissioners of Sewers [for the Tower Hamlets]. In duplicate, in the handwriting of Humphrey Brent. One copy is endorsed "List of the Commissioners of Sewers for the Tower Hamlets," and the other is endorsed "List of the Commissioners of Sewers given to my Lord Keeper. June 13th 1712."

The R^t Hon^{ble} Simon Lord Harcourt, Baron of Stanton Harcourt, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of Great Brittain: The R^t Hon^{ble} Rob^t Earl of Oxford and Mortimer, Lord High Treasurer of Great Brittain: The R^t Hon^{ble} George Earl of Northampton Constable of her Majesties Tower of London: The R^t Hon^{ble} Richard Earl Rivers, Master of the Ordnance: The R^t Hon^{ble} Montagu Earl of Abingdon: The R^t Hon^{ble} M^r Baron Price: Sir Edward Northey her Majesties Attorney generall; Sir Robert Raynond her Majesties Solicitor Generall: The Hon^{ble} James Bertie Esq^{re} [and] Hugh Smithson Esq^{re} [M.P.'s for Middlesex]: Sir Samuel Garrard, Sir William Leman, [and] Sir Nathaniel Barnadistoun, Barr^{ts}: Sir John Lake, Sir Henry Johnson, Sir John Parsons, Sir Jonathan Andrews, Sir Thomas Davall, Sir Edward Betenson, Sir William Bensou, [and] Sir James Etheridge, Kn^{ts}: [Alderman] John Cass, William Gore, Francis Tyssen, John Ward, William Johnson, Alexander Pendarvis, Uvedale Price, William Bridges, Simon Harcourt (Clerk of the Crowne), Thomas Chamber, William Parker of Hackney, William Northey, Daniel Brattell, Paul Dockmanique, Samuel Benson, Thomas Frampton, Bastwick Johnson, Robert Kyrby, Alexander Ward, Sherman Godfrey, Robert Thornhill sen^r, Robert Thornhill jun^r, Nathaniel Manlove, Charles Caesar, Thomas Blackmore, Joseph Short, Felix Feast, John Metcalfe, Ephraim Beauchamp, Henry Hunt, Samuel Brewster, Joseph Moxon, Edward Ambrose, Joseph Jorye, Alexander Pitfield, Robert Doyley, John Dorrell, Humphrey Parsons, Samuel Twinn, Richard Beauvoir, John Smart, Daniel King, William King, James Walker, Clare Windham, Thomas Wright, and William Wright, Esquires: D^r Richard Welton, [Rev.] John Wright Cler[k], D^r Richard Mead, Peter Monger, Edmond Noble, John Silk, Thomas Bacon, William Jewell, William Blakewey, Edward Lee, John Gorecum, Richard Byrom, Cap^t John Hazelwood of Wapping, Henry Mulcaster, Henry Whitehand, John Warner of Spittlefeilds, Philip Shepheard, Stephen Hall, Charles Boone, John White, Thomas Bateman, Timothy Thornbury, John Bateman, Robert Dennett, Henry Marshall, William Beawes, Cap^t John Merry, Thomas Preston, Samuel Skinner, John Blackhall, Alexander Weller, John Kirby, Robert Bird, Richard Mount, Thomas Sargeaunt, Ralph Harwood, John Hawkins, Cap^t Thomas Wharton, Joseph Wilmot, Cap^t John Haselwood of St Bar-

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSB.

thol[omew] the Great. — [All the above gentlemen 'are] off the Quorum.

[Those whose names follow are] not of the Quorum—James Spagg, Daniel Taylor, Thomas Webb, Samuel Groome, Robert Stephens, Massey Owen, John Elderton, Thomas Cooke, Charles Venner and Art[hur] Stephens, gent[lemen].

1712, June 17th. J. D. Crispe (Secretary to the Commissioners of Chelsea Hospital) to the Earl of Northampton. Dated at the Royal Hospital near Chelsea.

The writer encloses a copy of her Majesty's instructions to the Lords and others Commissioners of Chelsea Hospital.

[1712, June]. The humble Petition of Henry Bowman to Sir Stephen Fox. Undated.

The place of goal-keeper of the Tower-Court being in the gift of the Earl of Northampton, and not in the gentleman porter of the Tower, and Mr Steward [Robert] Thornhill having regulated many abuses committed by the Deputy-goaler, who is not duely admitted to the said Employment, the Petitioner begs the favour of a recommendation to the Earl of Northampton to admit him into that office.

[1712, June]. The humble Memorial of the same to the same. Undated.

SHEWETH—That he having humbly petitioned your Honor to present him to the Right Hon^{ble} the Earl of Northampton, to be goale-keeper of the prison holden for the Tower Court . . . long since informed relating to that station that goale-keeper, and returne-brevium, is one and the same place: returning all the process sent by the Sherriff, when executed in his Lordship's Precincts.—Therefore most humbly prays your Honor's farther favour to prevail with his Lordship to grant his Warrant directed to Robert Thornhill Esq^r, Steward of the Court for the Tower Liberty: that your Petitioner may be settled in the said employment.—And as in duty bound, etc.

1712, July 26th. J. Blount to Humphrey Brent. Endorsed "Ccopy of Blount's letter to Mr Brent to go with the Deputy Lieut^e to Windsor."

"Sir,—Since we parted I have hired 2 three end coaches with 6 horses each at 2^l each coach. I have paid 10s. earnest and the rest to be paid after the journey is perform'd. The man's name is Blunt and [he] lives at the upper end of the Hay Market Pickadilly. The coaches will be at the Exchange at the hour appointed but my Lord being determin'd to go out of town to-morrow I am oblig'd to wait upon his Lordship into the country so cannot attend the Lieutenantcy to Windsor so must desire you will defray all the charges as I should have done had I been there. I am &c.

J. B.

To Mr Brent."

1712, July 26th. Humphrey Brent "To Mr. Blunt or in his absence to Mr Hewett at the R^t Hon^{ble} the Earl of Northampton's in Bloomsbury Square. Endorsed "Mr Brent's letter in ans^r to Blount that he could not do as desired."

"Sir—I do not intend to returne from Windsor with the coaches but to hire a chaise to carry me directly to Reading tomorrow night and to further [sic] in Berkeshire to bring up my spouse who is there. So that I must desire you to order Mr Hewitt or some other person to discharge the coach-hire which has been always done by the Clerk and for which you have an order. This Charge as well as other incident

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

charges will be satisfied out of the first trophy money collected. I can't tell how you can excuse yourself from going this journey, for you know the gentlemen must be provided for, when they come to Windsor, and I am sure you'd not think it either reasonable or proper for me to be concerned in this affaire since I am not as yett so much as appointed Deputy Clerk nor do I know whether I ever shall [be], and besides the care of this affaire was left you know wholly to you by the gentlemen which I doubt not on a second thought you'll take care not to sufferr any failure in I am—Sir—

Your most humble serv

H. BRENT."

1712, Oct. 21st. Humphrey Brent to the Earl of Northampton. Addressed "To the R^t Hon^{ble} George Earl of Northampton—Present," and endorsed "Mr Brent's letter with excuses for not going with the Deputy Lieu^{ts} to Windsor."

The writer expresses his regrets that he should have fallen under his Lordship's displeasure, either from a letter he wrote to Mr Blunt [on July 26th] or from not sooner paying his duty to his Lordship. He prays for forgiveness and explains his inadvertency. The letter concludes:—

"From all which, my Lord, I beg leave to say that I do not so much sollicite your Lordship for the Deputy Clerkship of the Lieutenantcy (tho' I should even in that post be proud of serving your Lordship and the gent[lemen]) as to reconcile myselfe to your Lordship's favour, which if you please to grant me will not only be an argument of your Lordship's great lennity and goodness; but of convincing me how much I am.—My honoured Lord.—Your Lordship's most dutifull and most obliged humble serv^t.

HUMPH. BRENT."

1712, Oct. 22nd. Minutes taken by Humphrey Brent "Att a Court of Lientenancy held for the Tower Hamletts att the Rummer Tavernne in Whitechappell on the 22d day of October Anno Domini 1712":—

Present—Sir John Cass Kn^t, William Northey Esq^{re}, Thomas Hardwick Esq^{re}, Thomas Frampton Esq^{re}, Edmond Noble Esq^{re}, John Blackhall Esq^{re}, John Elderton Esq^{re}, Thomas Blackmore Esq^{re}, Sir Samuel Clerke Kn^t, Robert Kirby Esq^{re}, William Nicholas Esq^{re}, Samuel Skinner Esq^{re}, Thomas Preston Esq^{re}, Peter Monger Esq^{re}, George Tourville Esq^{re}, Stephen Hall Esq^{re}. [Deputy Lieutenants].—In the chair Sir John Cass Kn^t.

THE R^t Hon^{ble} George Earl of Northampton Lord Lieutenant of the said Hamletts having this day by Sir Jchn Cass Kn^t recomended to this Court Humphrey Brent Gentleman to officiate as Clerk in the absence of Mr Hewett Clerk to the Lientenancy the said Humphrey Brent was accordingly unanimously elected and declared Clerk and is appointed by this Court to officiate as Clerk in the said Mr Hewett's absence.

ORDERED that the severall Companies of the two regiments of the Militia for the Tower Hamletts which are at present commissioned be forthwith ticketted and that the rolls of each Company together with a duplicate of the same be brought in by the severall Captains to the next Lientenancy to be holden at the place abovesaid on Munday next att two of the Clock in the afternoon in order to be approved off and signed by them and that Major Thomas Hardwick and Major Thomas Kemp do forthwith give the necessary orders to the severall Captains of their respective Regiments accordingly.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

ORDERED that all such orders as shall from time to time be issued forth by authority of this Court to the respective Majors of the two regiments be signed by three of the Deputy Lieutenants at least.

ADJOURNED to the place abovesaid to Monday next att two a clock.

[1712?]. Petition of Ellinor Calverly to the Earl of Northampton. Unsigned and undated.

Sheweth—That your Petition^r hath given credit to the men doing duty here, the sum of seven hundred pounds: the officers haveing receiv'd no pay (although haveing done twelve months duty) your Petition^r being involv'd in dept and brought to the last extremity by giving credit to above halfe the garrison wee all expecting your Lordship's takeing possession of the garrison, do hope for your Lordship's favour in this our deplorable condition. Otherwise both officer, soldier and sutler must come to utter ruine.—Your Petition^r most humbly prays your Lordship will be pleas'd to give us your letters to the Lord High Treasurer, and that the Company's doing duty here may be establish't and paid, whereby the officers may be kept from starving as well as the men and sutlers from goales, and falling into utter destruction.

[1712?]. Petition of Peter Steward to the same.

The Petitioner is one of his Lordship's tenants as a sutler in the Tower, in the house where Eaton lately lived and he prays that his Lordship will "let him continue in the said business or otherwise your Lordship's poore old petitioner and wife must unavoidably perriish."

[Circ. 1713.] The humble Petition of Charles Wills quiltmaker in Buckle Street in Whitechappel and Headborough for the Upper Precinct.—To the Right Honorable the Earle of Northampton Constable of her Majestie's Tower of London:—

Humbly Shewith—That on Thursday the 19th instant about 3 and 4 a clock in the afternoon he having finished the collection of a brief for building the church of Burton upon Trent was going to Tower Street upon business and having a sudden occasion he went doun to the side of the Tower Dock near the rayl that goes doune from the turn pike to ease himself. Whilst he was there he was shot by the centenell upon or about Leg's Mount with pease or small shott in about 60 places that the blood followed and near 40 of them on his right thigh and 20 in his right leg and 6 in his cod which beat him downe and [he] was taken up senceless by Cap^t Bolton and other gentlemen who were passing by who led him to the Czar of Muscovy's Head in Tower Street a surgeon being brought he order'd some plaisters and oyntment and that he should goe home where he has continued ever since in great paine not being able to follow his trade to his detrim^t having a wife and 3 children to maintain. The persons that took him up saw a serjeant and soldiers of the garrison and which were upon the hill when he was taken up s[ai]d that the centenells had orders from the Gover[nor] to shoote at all persons that eased themselves there.

WHEREFORE Your Petitioner humbly prays your Lordship wilbe pleased to take his condition into your consideration and give him such relief as in your Lordship's great wisdome shall think proper.

And your Petitioner shall ever pray &c.

[Circ. 1713]. Petition of Thomas Glover for, and on behalfe of, his Father Richard Glover, to the same. Unsigned and undated.

SEWETH—That your Petitioner's brother Richard Glover was by your Lordship's Comission in Febr^y last admitted one of the Yeomen

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

Walters att the Tower, under your Lordship's Command, and paid for the said place 250^l being all his substance: that his said brother left an ancient father and six children to maintaine in a low condicion, and before his death desired that an Humble Memoriall might be presented to your Lordship of his hard case--AND most humbly pray'd your Lordship that his said father or your Petitioner for him, might be admitted to the said place, or otherwise that your Lordship would be pleased to grant his said father such reliefe upon the admittance of any other in consideration of the great loss, as your Lordship of your wisdom and goodness shall think fitt; hee being an object of your Lordship's pitty, as will bee certified to your Lordship by Mr Foley of Stoke Hall, in Herefordshire, Richard Hopton Esq^r, Robert Unit Esq^r and others there."

[Circ. 1713]. Petition of Elizabeth Eades to the same. Unsigned and undated.

The Petitioner, a widow, who for several years has had the use of a cellar near Traytor's Gate has lately been locked out of it by the orders of Colonel Pendlebury, and begs that she may have the use of it as formerly.

[Circ. 1713]. "The humble petition of the Inhabitants of the North and West sides of Tower hill" to the same. Undated.

The petitioners beg his Lordship's permission "to plant a row of trees before their dwelling houses which they humbly conceive may be an ornament to the hill and no manner of ill conveniency," etc.

Signed by Tho. Andrews, Harcourt Master, J. Hunt, John Gore, Sam^l Percivall, P. Cranke, W^m Baynes. Sprig Manesty, Richard Harris, and Benjamin Fowler.

[1713]. The humble address (To the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty (of the R^t Hon^{ble} the Lord Licuten^t and Custos Rotulorum, and of the Deputy Lieutenants, and Justices of the Peace, and Militia Officers of the Tower Hamletts. Endorsed "copy of an Address to Her Majesty, from the Tower Hamletts." No signatures:

"Most Gracious Sovereign

We your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects humbly crave leave to approach your royal person with hearts full of gratitude for your princely care and steddy resolution in procuring a peace [at Utrecht] not only for your own subjects but for your allies, notwithstanding the utmost efforts that have been used to obstruct it.

The overcoming so many difficulties in the course of the negotiations is a manifest proof of your Majesty's wisdom in the choice of your Ministers, and of their faithfulness and abilities in discharge of the great trust repos'd in them.

"We can't be sufficiently thankful to your Majesty for securing the Protestant Succession in the House of Hanover and establishing a perfect friendship with that illustrious family which has effectually disappointed the malice of your enemies, and put it out of their power to divide your interests.

"We beg leave to assure your Majesty that we in our several stations will diligently use our constant endeavours to promote and preserve the publick peace, to defend your sacred person, our happy constitution both in Church and State, and to shew ourselves loyall and dutiful subjects to the most indulgent and best of princes."

1713, Jan. 2nd. Sir William Windham to Lord Northampton. Dated at Whitehall, and endorsed "Sr William Windham's about changing the garrison at the Tower.—Ans^d Jan^y 5th 1713."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1713, Feb. 2nd. The same to the same. Dated as the last and endorsed "St W^m Windham about disbanding the 3 companys of invalides, that did duty at the Tower."

1713, March 3rd. A burial certificate from St Andrew's, Holborn. "These are to certifie that Robert Gill Esq^r [Keeper of the Lyons in the Tower] from his house in the great street in Hatton Garden was bu[r]ied the 29th of March 1673, as by our Reg^r Book appears. Witness my hand this 3^d day of March 1713. WILLIAM CHARLES P^{ish} Clerk."

1713, March 25th. The humble petition of Richard Heaton late one of the Sutlers in her Majesty's Tower of London—to the same. Undated, but endorsed "Richard Heaton petition—Read the 25th March 1713—Ordered that Mr Heaton do bring a certificate of his good behaviour.—Q[ue]ry if Kettleby had a legall warr^t for what he did"—

"HUMBLY SHEWETH—That your petitioner about June 1707 became a Sutler at the Punch Bowl in the Tower and at his coming in besides the vallue of the household goods and drink gave the widdow Mayes twenty pounds over and above for her good will and paid the rent of 12^{li} per annum for about two yeares to the order of Gen^l Cadogan, but a dispute arising between the said Cadogan and Coll. Farwell then Dep^y Governor the rent lay for about a yeare and half in your petitioner's hands when Farwell having inform'd your petitioner that he had a right to the rent and could indempnifie your petitioner for paying the rent to him, your petitioner applied to Mr Pearce secretary to Cadogan (to whom he paid his rent before) and informed him of what Farwell had said who told him he must then pay it to Farwell.

"When Farwell disposed of his Commission to Coll. Pendlebury your petitioner then paid his rent to the said Pendlebury as he demanded it, and soe continued till Christmas 1711 about which time the Tower was garreson'd by Invalids who not being upon the establishm^t of Guards and garrisons your petitioner did subsist them upon his credit and trusted those of Cap^t Hide's company to the vallue of 100^{li}. Some few days before Christmas last when the year's rent would be due, Coll. Pendlebury by his serv^t demanded the rent, which your petitioner could not then pay by reason of his having disburs'd soe much money to subsist the Invalids.

"About the 3^d day of February last your petitioner had his goods seized and body arrested by Kettleby (on the suit of Coll. Pendlebury) who put severall persons immediately into possession of your petitioner's house and would have carryed your petitioner to prison tho' the goods seized were of much more vallue then the debt and tho' he offered substantiall bayle, unless he gave him 8^{li} 9^d. Upon which he permitted your petitioner to have his liberty tho' he immediately [ap]praised his goods, at which time there was between 30^{li} and 40^{li} due to your petitioner for subsisting the Invalids above [mentioned]. But your petitioner owing money to his brewer and other tradesmen was for fear of other actions forced to leave his habitation and obscond without having any consideration from Coll. Pendlebury (who then put a serv^t of his into the house) for the 20^{li} he had paid to the widdow Mayes which with the money due from the Invalids (which was paid in [a] few days after) and the vallue of the goods seized would have amounted to more then would have paid all your petitioner's debts by a considerable sume.

"Wherefore your petitioner humbly prays your Lordship to consider the oppression he has had in this matter and the deplorable condition he and his family is thereby reduced to, and wilbe graciously pleas'd to restore him to his employment as a Sutler in the Tower under your Lordship's command or to order he may have some allowance for the 20th paid at his coming in and for the damage disgrace and ruin that is brought upon him and his family.

"And your petitioner shall ever pray &c."

1713, April 3rd. Lord Dartmouth to Lord Northampton. Dated at Whitehall, and endorsed "Lord Dartmouth's letter for firing the Tower guns upon the peace being concluded at Utrecht."

1713, April 18th. A certificate from the Commissary's office (signed by J. Crawford) "that the R^t Hon^{ble} Robert Lord Lucas was mustered as Chief Governor of the Tower both before and after the Treaty of Reswick."

1713, April 20th. Two certificates from the Paymaster's office, signed by James Moody Deputy Auditor.

From the first it appears that by the accounts of the Earl of Ranelagh, late Paymaster General, that the pay of Lord Lucas, as Chief Governor of the Tower, was at the rate of 38s. 4½d. per diem, from 1st April 1692 to 24th June 1702.

From the second certificate it appears that the pay of the garrison of the Tower, from 25th June 1702 to 24th Oct. 1702, was paid to the R^t Hon^{ble} Montague Earl of Abington.

1713, May 4th. Lord Dartmouth, Secretary of State, to Lord Northampton, from Whitehall; acquainting his Lordship by the Queen's commands that she has ordered proclamation of the Peace to be made the next day and that it is her pleasure that the Tower Guns should be fired as usual.

1713, June 23th. The same to the same, from Whitehall.

"My Lord—Her Majesty commands me to acquaint your Lordship that when the French Ambassador makes his publick entry, it is her pleasure that he should be treated with all the marks of respect that are usually shewn to persons of his character on the like occasion."

1713, July 6th. The same to the same, from Whitehall.

"My Lord—I am commanded by the Queen to acquaint your Lordship that Her Majesty does not go to St Paul's Church tomorrow, but both Houses of Parliament being to be there it is Her Majesty's pleasure the guns of the Tower should be fired at the singing of the Te Deum as has been usual at times of publick thanksgivings in that place."

1713, July 21st. The Duke of Ormonde, Commander in Chief, to the same, from the Cockpit.

"My Lord—The third regiment of Foot Guards being to be reviewed on Thursday next, I desire your Lordship will give orders for such of that Regiment as are now in the Tower, to march out tomorrow morning, and to be reliev'd by such others of the Foot Guards as shall be appointed for that service according to Her Majestie's pleasure signified to me thereupon."

1713, July 28th. William Nicholas to the same. Endorsed:—"Mr Nicholas letter about my being muster'd and appointing an Agent."

1713, Augt. 1st. The same to the same. Endorsed:—"Mr Nicholas's letter upon his being made Agent to the Tower Garrison."

1713, Augt. 3rd. The Duke of Ormonde to the same. Dated at St James's.

"My Lord—I am inform'd your Lordship is plac'd on the establishment of guards and garrisons for the more regular payment of your appointment as Constable of the Tower, but I must at the same time acquaint your Lordship that it is not the Queen's intention, the privileges which the Lieutenant has by custom enjoy'd should be thereby any way lessened, either in regard to the agency or any thing else."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1713, Augt. 3rd. Sir William Wyndham, Secretary at War, to Hatton Compton Esq^r [Lieutenant General in the army and Lieutenant of the Tower]. Dated at London, and enclosed in the next.

"Sir—I have received yours with the copy of a letter from Mr Wm Nicholas, and an extract of your patent. My Lord Northampton is at his request placed on the establishment and ordered to be mustered, he desiring rather to be paid on the military list than the civil where the Constable used to be paid. When Her Majesty complied with that request of his Lordship's I am satisfied she never meant to make any alteration in the power or authority of that post much less to take away any from yours as Lieutenant which is conferred by patent."

1713, Augt. 4th. Hatton Compton to Lord Northampton. Dated at Fulham, and endorsed:—"L^t Gen^l Compton's letter."

"My Lord—When first I hear'd of your Lordship's being upon the establishment I rejoyced extremely knowing 'twas your own request and I hoped you would stoped there; but last Saturday night I received a very pert letter from your agent as he calls himself: which allarumed me that your Lordship was taking what of right belongs to me: whereupon I made my applycation to my Lord Treasurer [Lord Oxford and Mortimer] his grace of Ormonde and the Secretary of Warr; the first spoke to the said secretary in my hearing a sunday night to the same purpose which is hoped will satisfie your Lordship since the other two have writ the inclosed to convince you so far as to recall what orders you have given to your clarke or agent for I have got the Muster stoped to avoid disputes untill I receive your Lordship's commands: which I desire next post. Now I humbly beg leave to give my poor opinion: viz.: that by being mustered you brought yourself to be one of the 8000 men and consequently under whosoever commands the army, which I fear lessens the grandure of the Constable; I still hope 'twill not be in the power of little underhand people to create any misunderstanding betwixt your Lordship and him that ever was and is" etc.

1713, Augt. 4th. William Nicholas to the same.

" I cannot learn why the Muster was putt off till Friday
 I have provided the Muster Rolls so every thing will be ready for Friday."

1713, Augt. 6th. The same to the same.

My Lord—I have onely to acquaint your Lordship that the Lieutenant has sent a lett^r to the Tower w^{ch} Major D'Oyly shewed me this day in these words: "These are to acquaint you that the Muster is putt off till a further day, of which you shall have timely notice from &c. The lett^r was directed to Coll. Pendlebury"

1713, Augt. 6th. Lord Northampton to the Lieutenant of the Tower. Endorsed—"Copy of my letter to Generall Compton."

"— I received your letter and am surprised you should be so much dissatisfied with my being putt at the head of the Muster Roll and at my appointing an agent, which I take to be the regular way and shall not recall any orders I have given having writt by this post to the D. of Ormond. As to any misunderstanding between us I know of none nor of any person that endeavours to promote it, but if there should be any it will be wholly owing to yourself, for I am as I have always been."

1713, Augt. 6th. The same to Lord Oxford and Mortimer. Dated at Ashby, and addressed "Copy of my Letter to Lord Treasurer."

"My Lord, I hear the Lieutenant of the Tower hath been with your Lordship upon my being placed on the establishment of guards and garrisons and upon my appointing an agent which of right belongs to him that is at the head of the Muster Roll; it was by your Lordship's favour I was made Constable and also putt upon this establishment, which makes me hope for your protection in maintaining me in my just rights"

1713, Augt. 6th. The same to the Duke of Ormonde. Dated at Ashby, and endorsed—"Copy of my letter to the D. of Ormond." To the same effect as the last.

[1713]. "The Case relating to the Power of the Constable of the Tower in appointing an agent for that garrison when upon the establishment for guards and garrisons."

1713, Augt. 8th. William Nicholas to Lord Northampton. Endorsed — "Mr Nicholas with answers to Querys concerning an agent."

1713, Augt. 11th. The same to the same. Endorsed—"Mr Nicholas concerning the appointing an agent."

1713, Augt. 12th. The same to the same. Endorsed—"Mr Nicholas concerning an agent."

1713, Sept. 3rd. Samuel Lynn to the same. From Whitehall.

"My Lord—Her Majesty having order'd the Third Reg^t of Foot Guards in the Tower Hamletts and on duty at the Tower to march from thence, being first relieved by a detachment from the other reg^t of Foot Guards in the said Tower duty, I am commanded in the absence of Mr [Francis] Gwyn [Secretary at War] to acquaint your Lordship therewith that you may please to permit the said relief to be made accordingly"

1713, Oct. 6th. Lord Northampton. "To the Right Hon^{ble} Mr [John] Hill Lieut^t Generall of the Ordnance."

"Sir,—There being a vacancy of one of the garrison gunners under my command by the death of Dan^l Thorp, this is to desire you will please to give the necessary orders for Rob. Trimble to have a warrant to succeed him. I doubt not but he will be the more acceptable he having served in the Royall Artillery in Flanders till it was broke and he also having assured me he will reside in the Tower the better to do his duty which I shall for the future expect from the garrison gunners."

[1713]. "Extract[s] of sev[era]l patents [temp. Jac. I., and Car. I.] of the office of keeping the Lyons in the Tower."

[1713.] John Martin to Lord Northampton. Undated and unaddressed.

"My Lord,—The grant of the said Lyon office is most humbly desired for the term of forty years or any other term that may be readily granted, by—My Lord—Your Lordship's most humble and obedient servant, JNO MARTIN."

[1713]. "Establishment of the Tower of London for 184 days, from the 24th June inclusive to the 24th December inclusive."

NOTE—From this paper it appears that the pay, per diem, of the Constable is 2*l.* 14*s.* 9½*d.*; of the Lieutenant 1*l.* 18*s.* 4½*d.*; of the Deputy Lieutenant 16*s.* 5½*d.*; of the Chaplain 6*s.* 8*d.*; of the Tower Major 4*s.*; of the Surgeon 2*s.* 6*d.*; of the Master Gunner 2*s.*; of four other Gunners 1*s.* 2*d.* each; of the Gentleman Porter 1*s.* 4*d.*; of 40 Yeomen

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Warders 1s. 2d. each; of the Physician 1s. 1½d.; of the Apothecary 6½d.; and of the Gentleman Gaoler 1s. 1½d.

1714, Feb. 27th. William Bromley, Secretary of State, to Lord Northampton. Dated at Whitehall, and addressed to the Earl "at his house at Castle Ashby."

"My Lord—The Queen having this day received the ratifications of the Treatys of peace and commerce between her Majesty and the King of Spain, I am commanded to signify the same to Your Lordship, that you may immediately order the Tower guns to be discharged as has been usual on such extraordinary occasions."

Same date. The same to the same. Dated at Whitehall.

"My Lord,—Her Majesty being pleased to order that the [Treaty of] peace and comerce between Her and the King of Spain be proclaimed next Monday at twelve of the clock in the forenoon, I am to acquaint your Lordship therewith that you may give directions for firing the great guus in the Tower on occasion of that solemnity.

1714, July 30th. Lord Bolingbroke to the same. Dated at Kensington.

"My Lord,—The Queen has been taken very ill this morning, and the Lords of the Councill who are now assembled here upon that occasion, have commanded me to write to your Lordship that you do without loss of time come up to towa to attend in your post, and to take care of the Tower in this juncture."

[P.S.] "I am too much in haste to use my own hand."

Same date. Francis Gwyn, Secretary at War, to the same. Dated at Whitehall.

"My Lord—I am commanded by his Grace the Duke of Ormonde, [Commander in Chief] to acquaint you that you are forthwith to repair to the garrison under your command, and that you take care that all the officers thereunto belonging do likewise attend their duty."

1714, Aug. 1st. "Letter from the Privy Councell for proclaiming his Majesty King George at the Tower." Addressed "To our very good Lord (George Earl of Northampton Chief Governor of the Tower of London" and endorsed "2^d Aug^t 1714. There is a meeting of [the] Council appointed at St James's at ten a clock this Day."

"After our very hearty comendations to yo^r Lordship. It haveing pleased Almighty God this day to take to his mercy out of this troublesome life our late sovereign Lady Queen Anne of blessed memory and there-upon his royall Majesty King George being here proclaim'd according to the tenor of the proclamation signed by us herewith sent to your Lordshipp forthwith to cause the said Proclamation to be proclam'd and published in the usual places within your jurisdiction with the solemnities and ceremonies accustomed on the like occasion, so not doubting of yo^r ready compliyance herein we bid your lordship very heartily farewell, from the Council Chamber at St James's the first Day of August 1714.

Your Lordships very Loving Friends.

[Signed by John Duke of] BUCKINGHAM [President of the Council; William Earl of] DARTMOUTH [Lord Privy Seal; Simon Lord] HARCOURT [Lcrd Chancellor; Charles Duke of] SHREWSBURY [Lord High Treasurer, Lord Chamberlain, and Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; George Duke of] NORTHUMBERLAND, [James Duke of] ORMONDE; [James Earl of] FINDLATEN; [Hugh Earl of] LOUDOUN; [Charles Bodville Earl of] RADNOR; [John Earl] POULETT [Lord Steward of the Household; Heneage Lord] G[U]RENSEY; and WILLIAM BROMLEY [Secretary of State].

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MRS.

Same date. An Order of Council—Dated at the Court of St James, and signed by Edward Southwell.

It directs the Earl of Northampton to give directions for firing the Tower Guns at 12 Clock being the time appointed for proclaiming King George.

1714, Augt. 3rd. William Bromley to Lord Northampton from Whitehall.

"My Lord—Since the City of London enjoys a perfect Tranquility, & there is no just Cause to apprehend that any Designs are carrying on to disturb the Publick Peace, their Excellencies the Lords Justices think fit that the Militia of the Tower Hamlets be forthwith dismissed. I am with the greatest Respect," Same date. Francis Gwyn, Secretary at War, to the same, from Whitehall.

"My Lord—I am to desire your Lo^p will cause an acco^t to be returned to me what Number of Men the Barracks in the Tower of Lond^o will contain, and in what condition they are at present."

1714, Augt. 5th. A Sealed Order in Council. Dated at the Council Chamber St James', and signed by Edward Southwell.

It directs that Particular Care be taken that during the Proceeding of her late Maj^{ty} Funerall from Kensington to Westminster Abby, and untill Her Maj^{ty}s Body be interred, a Gun be fired at the Tower every Minute.

1714, Augt. 15th. Thomas Gwyn to Lord Northampton. Dated at Whitehall.

"My Lord—The Lords Justices having ordered seven Battallions of Foot to be brought over from Flanders to England some of which are already Arriv'd and the rest hourly Expected, I am therefore to Signify their Excellency's Command to your Lordship, that as any of the said Battallions shall be brought up the River of Thames, You permit them to land at the Tower Wharfe in order to follow the Route given them to their intended Quarters."

1714, Augt. 17th. A sealed Council Order. Dated at the Council Chamber, St James, and signed by Christopher Musgrave. Endorsed :—

"Order of Council for firing a Gun at the Tower every Minute on Sunday Night next while her Majesties Funerall is proceeding from the Princes Lodgings to the Abby at Westminster and till Her Majestie is interr'd."

1714, Augt. 25th. The humble Petition of Thomas Cable to the same. Undated, but endorsed "The petition of Thomas Cable—25th August 1714—To succeed his Father in ringing the bell in the Tower"—

SHEWETH—That your Petitioner's Father Thomas Cable after having rung a Bell w^{ch} goes at Half an Hour after Nine a Clock at Night in the Tower for Twelve Years, and upwards, died Yesterday (the 24th of this instant August) his Wife having also departed this life the 28th of July last, and have left behind them, ten Fatherless and Motherless Children, six of whom are not able to do any thing for a Liveing; and being left in miserable poor Circumstances w^{thout} any manner of Dependence for their Support, but the Charity of well despos'd people.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Wherefore and in regard to his Fathers long and Faithfull Service, your Petitioner Humbly prays you'll be pleas'd to bestow on him his Fathers said Benefitt of ringing the Bell (w^{ch} will be a most charitable Act and enable him to maintain his poor Brothers and Sisters).

Your Petitioner as in Duty Bound shall ever pray &c.

THO^s CABLE.

1714, Sept. 6th, Whitehall. Francis Gwyn to Lord Northampton:

"My Lord—A Detachment of Two hundred Men and Officers proportionable of Lieu^t Gen^l [John Richmond] Webb's Regiment [the 8th Foot] being order'd to march and releive the Detachment of the Foot Guards now doing Duty at the Tower of London the Day before His Majesty's coming from Greenwich to St James's, It is the Lords Justices Direction that upon the Arrival of the said Detachment of L^t General Webb's Regiment Your Lordship do permit the said Releif to be made accordingly."

1714, Sept. 8th. A Sealed Council Order. Dated at the Council Chamber, St James's, and signed by Edward Southwell. Endorsed:—

"Order of Council for firing the Gun^s at the Tower 1st w^a the King Lands at Greenwich; 2. w^a the King sets out on the day of his Entry; 3. w^a His Maj^{ty} & all his Guards shall have pass'd ov^r Londⁿ Bridge."

1714, Sept. 16th. Francis Gwyn to Lord Northampton. Dated at Whitehall, and endorsed:—

"Lett^r from Francis Gwyn Sec^y of War that the Detachm^t of Guards [at the Tower] be forthwith retired by the Detachm^t of Gen^l Webb's Regiment."

1714, Sept. 27th. William Pulteney to the same. Dated at Whitehall, and endorsed:—

"A Letter from W^m Pulteney Esq^r Secretary at War, for permitting Gen^l Webb's Reg^{mt} to be relieved by a Detachment of the 3 Regim^{ts} of Foot Guards."

1714, Oct. 14th. The same to the same. Dated at Whitehall, and endorsed:—

"William Pulteney Secretary at War That a List of the Commission[ed] Officers in the Tower be sent to him."

1714, Oct. 19th. Lord Townshend to the same. Dated at Whitehall, and endorsed:—

"Letter from my L^d Townshend Sec^y of State to fire the Guns as usual [tomorrow] on the Day of His Majesties Coronation."

Same date. William Pulteney to the same. Dated at Whitehall, and endorsed:—

"Order for firing the Tower Guns for His Majesty's Coronation."

1714, Oct. 26th. The Board of Ordnance to the same. Dated at the Office of Ordnance, and signed by C[harles] Musgrave (Clerk of the Ordnance) the Hon. Dixie Windsor (Storekeeper of the Ordnance), and Rupert King.

"My Lord—We desire your Lordship will be pleased to give directions, that the person who has the Key of the House belonging to this Office on the East end of Tower Wharfe (which was lent for the Guard to do duty when doubled on the demise of her late Majesty) do forthwith deliver the said Key to M^r Farmer Messenger to this Office."

1715, Jan. 7th. The same to the same. Dated at the Office of Ordnance, and signed by Edward Ashe (Clerk of the Ordnance), James Craggs (Clerk of the Deliveries of the Ordnance), Major General Michael Richards (Surveyor General of the Ordnance), and John Armstrong (afterwards Surveyor General).

"My Lord—We writt to your Lord^{sh} the 26th of October last to desire you to give directions for delivering the Keys of the House on the East end of Tower Wharfe (which was lent for the Guard to do duty, on the Demise of her late Majesty) to Mr Farmer Messenger to this Office, but as yet the said Keys are not delivered up, We must therefore desire to remind your Lordship of our former Letter, & that you will be pleased to give directions accordingly."

1713, Jan. 10th. "Copy of my Lords Answer to the Board of Ordnance concerning the key of the Guard house at the End of the Wharfe."

Sirs—I rec^d y^r letter of the 7th Instant wherein you desire me to give directions for delivering the Key of the Guardhouse at the East end of the Wharfe. I will speake to the Duke of Marlborough concerning it & am—Sirs—Your humble Serv^t.

1717, July 5th: The Account of the Pay of the Garrison of the Tower of London [from Jan^y 20th 1713 to March 14th 1717].

This is a True Coppy of the Account of all the Money received and paid on Account of the Garrison of the Tower of London by me—
WM NICHOLAS."

LETTERS FORMERLY BELONGING TO ELIZABETH (SHIRLEY) COUNTESS OF NORTHAMPTON.

1713-1737.

1713, Augt. 10th. Dame Ferrers to Elizabeth Shirley. Unaddressed.

"My dear Child.

Tis in this relation i shall ever esteeme you, therefore you may depend upon me, and in w^{ts}oever i may [do] most to express my selfe for y^r servis be free wth me and i will readly compose my selfe to y^r intrest, for as Almightye God hath bin pleased to leave but one of my Famyle, i thinke i am the more oblidge to offer upon any consernes of y^r to be redy to inquier w^t can be [in] my power to add to y^r advantage, and recomend it in all times, that you will be very prudent in care off the station you are in, nor do or act in future or present any thing to the preiudise of that inheretance w^{ch} God hath given you, i shall now say noe more but trust that you make good use of my advise for y^r owne binifett and now take my Lave for this present but shall be to you my Deare Child y^r affectionat Grand Mother

ANNE FERRERS."

[No date.] The Hon. Lawrence Shirley to "M^{rs} Shirley at the Lady Ann Courtney's in the Pall Mall—London."

"Dear Niece I cant by any means prevail with my Lord to look into those Papers, that I brought with me: He says he will neither concern himself with them, nor any thing that belongs to y^w, as long as y^w continue under my L^d Abingdon's care. . . . He has still a great deal of compassion left for y^e, & would willingly be the means of saving y^a from the ruin y^a must inevitably meet with, from those whose hands y^a are now in. Wherefore, if y^a will consent to leave my L^d Abingdon, & turn off y^r french woman (which is another thing he insists upon) y^a shall be very welcome to his house and he will do y^a all the service he can."

1714, July 20th. The Dowager Countess of Arran to the same. Unaddressed.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

"I had writt to you sooner Deare Niece, on this sad occasion but that really I have had so much trouble for it my self, as made me very unfitt to write on that subiect, but I desire you to believe, I am much concerned for you, hearing how great a share you take in this iust affliction you have, in the losse of y^r oneley, & kind Brother [Lord Tamworth], in this change (that hath noe remedy) one must submit with patience to the will of God, who orders all things for the best, & be thankfull, that it hath pleased God hitherto to preserve you alive, &, I hope, you will not afflict y^r self soe, as to bring any illnesse upon y^r self but that you may be preserved in health, to inioy the fortune that is now fallen to you, & may be continued, to be an honour to y^r family, & a comfort to y^r relations, amongst w^{ch} none wishes you more hapynesse, nor will be readyer to serve you in all I can, than y^r Affectionat humble seruant

D[OROTHY] ARRAN."

"[P.S.] Pray present my service to y^r Aunts & to Lady Barbary [Barbara] & M^r Laurance [Shirley] that I am sorry to hear are soe afflicted."

[1714], July 24. The Countess Ferrers to "The Honrable M^{rs} Shirley at Staunton in Leicester Shire.—Loughbrough [Post-] Bagg." Dated in London and franked "Ferrers."

"Dear Madam, we got hear a fryday by six a clock, we had a very pleasant journey it was not hot nor dusty. That was a bundell went down by the Mourning Coch, dericked [directed] for me, if you pleas to oppen it y^{ar} your shows [shoes], pray send my Slippers the furst opportunity. I have sent to M^{rs} Gilibone, he say he has not bespock you a Saddel. I desire to do it a Monday & hope to send it the week after. I cannot get any brown gloves ready Made. L^y Abingdon is in town and L^y Wenshallcey. The town says L^y B: has 20000lb. left her. I hope it will do her Servis, and marry her soon. I have seen nobody nor heard no news. I desire you will let me know how you are y^{es} [this] time, weather more than useall or les. I desire you will take y^r medesons a week after you are well, I will send you some Spaw Waters a Monday, that you may recover y^r health is the hartly prayers of y^r obliged humble Servant.

S[ELINA] F[FERRERS].

[P.S.] My L^d gives his blesing to all I desire mine ware dew [where due] I cannot write to lena y^{es} post & I for got to charge her not to speck to L^y Bety let her be never so bad pray tell her this. Sence I writ I hear [the] L^d T[reasurer] went to the Q: last night & gave her his Staf L^d Dardmouth & the D^k of Buckingham the say L^d Bishop of London is to be the furst L^d of Trea: the B^p of Rochister privi Seal. L^d T: has been here sence I writ with his wite Staf so I believe all I have writ may not be trew pray send the inclosed to my Mother."

[1714], July 27th. The same to the same. Addressed as the last, and franked by Lord Ferrers.

Dear Madam—I could get nothing ready to send you y^{es} [this] week but hope to send all the next I have bespock y^r Saddel the man braut me one I liked very well but it had two pumels so I have bespock one with one pumel covered with gray cloth lased with black lase [lace] with every thing to it for 4l. 10s. I hope it will please you I am to have it a Saterdag sevennight. L^y Angelsey was marry'd last Saterdag, M^{rs} Pit to M^r Chomley y^a [they] ware at S^t James Church a Sunday very fine all my L^{ds} Diamonds are come y^{ar} is non very large, we have bid 5000^{lb} for M^{rs} Bouchers house we conclud we shall have it for she says

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

she will take five thousand Guineas so I believe she wont stand for that. I desire Jack may take some spaw waters every day and M^r Marthus desires he may ride a horse back [on horseback] if he wont go before a Man he [Lord Ferrers] would have Nurs[e] ride behind a man or one [on] a singel horse & take him [Jack] in her lap y^r is some drops for him gon y^{ee} week to take when he wakes before dinner as he uste. L^d Wamouth [Weymouth] is very ill y^a think he wont livve he hiccups so every night y^a can [hear] him two or three Roomes off [f] L^y Worsley is with him but non of the famely besides y^r is a good dele of company hear b^t y^a will all go as soon as the Q: leves Kinsinton she has the Gout in her knee a lettell. My L^d has the Gout in his grate towe of the outhter foot but he goes a bout the hovse I give [you] many thanks Dear Madam for the care you take of my children & hope I shall soon be with you.

I am y^r Most obliged Humble

Servant

S. FERRERS.

[1714?], July 29th. Dame Ferrers to the same. Addressed: "For M^{rs} Shirly."

"Deare Miss,

I have receaved y^r most respectfull kind letter to me wth all the consolation that i was capable of in the condition i was in, for the reale sence of y^r, and my grate Love, hath establisht such an affliction upon my heart that i could not compose my selfe to write so sooune as i ought to have dune, besides i have not bin well, but now am better, and doe assure you as long [as] I have Life will ever express my selfe in my constant friendship for you therefore watch wth greate prudence to have a care of y^r present State and be not prevailed wth to pre[j]ud[i]ch y^r power, you have a fayer fortune be sure you keepe it, and God give you wisdom and courage to maintaine y^r powers health and life i pray to Almighty God give you for this his favour will still be my prayers that am y^r Affectionate Grand Mother.

A. FERRERS."

[1714], Aug. 12th. The Countess Ferrers to the same. Addressed "For Madam Shirley at Staunton Leicershire—Loughbrough Bagg" and franked by Earl Ferrers.

"Dear Madam—

I saw M^{rs} Ferrers a mounday night she went off the next day out of Town she is not well I never heard any body so angrey as she is att his Will she sayd was it love what els coud it be that he shoud leve her so much she woud have seen him if she had known he had made a Will & a grate dele more every body says the same she dos. I hope you will like y^r Sattel he would have had 7. l. 10. s. if it had been a lose cloth & y^{ee} way he had 4. l. 10. s. he can make you a velvet Cover over y^{ee} or he will change it when you have don with it we are very quiate hear & y^a think we shall be so, some fear it will not last, y^a believe the Coronnation will be asson as y^a can get things ready for it, but he is very stately & every thing must be very fine he speks nether frinch nor English he wont be very good Company to these Kings [the Lords Justices] when he comes (houe?) are much exalted the lettell D^k of K[ent?] has ganed three inches I have seen one of them but he dos not speak to Subjecks. Pray take no more of the waters sence y^a do not agree with you I desire if you are not so before five weeks pray take that

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

purg agane dont go longer than five weeks I beg. I am very glad to here you are so well for nothing can be a greater pleasure to

Madam

y^r Most obliged—Humble Servant
S. F.

[P.S.] My L^d gives his blessing to you and all the family he thought y^e had been a Buck sent from Chartley every week he has writ to order one every week."

[1714], Augt. 14th. The same to the same. Unsigned and unaddressed.

" Madam,

I have changed y^r saddle for two pumels the mancoly news of Q. [Anne's] death makes every body hear very dull I hope you have a pleasanter time in the Country I was yesterday at M^{rs} Bondchers My L^d has bant it he gives 5000^l it is thought very cheap I carryed both my boys to School I am sory I cannot tell when I shall return to Staunton for my L^d will stay to see the new K: he cannot be hear in les than a fourthnight which is grate grief to me for I long to see you I am in grate hast. My L^d gives his blessing to all mine waite dew My Sister is y^r Humble Servant."

1714, Sept. 4th. Frances Thynne (afterwards Duchess of Somerset), to the same. Dated at Leweston, and unaddressed.

" Dear Madam—

I return you many thanks for the favour of your letter & am very much asham'd you should take any notice of so worthless a thing as the purse I have a great deal of reason to beg your pardon for sending it att a time when you was in such affliction for the death of Lord Tamworth, but I knew nothing of his illness till after it was gone, so I am in hopes you will forgive me,

I am very much obliged to you for the Sence [you] express of our loss in my Grand Pappa [Lord Weymouth] & join wth you in thinking that this has indeed been a very Unfortunate summer to us both. My Sister presents her most humble Ser^{cs} to yⁿ and the yonging Ladys. I hope you will do me the favour to accept of the same & believe me to be Dear Madam

Y^r most affectionate Cousen & obliged humble Servant

F. THYNNE."

1714, Sept. 11th. Dame Ferrers to the same. From London. Addressed "these for the Honored M^{rs} Shirley at the Right Hon^{ble} The Earl Ferrer's—Staunton Harold in Leicestershire."

" My Deare Child

The letter wherein you intrusted me so freely wth y^r secrett thoughts came safe to me w^{ch} in every part did so much agree wth my sence of y^r condition that had i bin wth y^r selfe in conference together could not have bene in any kind more express a prudence then w^t was, in that my approbation of all you say in that you writ then, i advise you to keepe firmly to, and looke wth a constant Vigilance to of oune interest, this is all i can now say to you being in hopes sounne to see you in toun, when wee may more at large know one anothers minds, and pray beleeve now and ever y^t i'm y^r most faythfull affectionate friend in all your consernes, as y^r oune Mother to the last day of my Life, in w^{ch} you may communicate y^r thoughts att times when you thinke fitt, and nowe farewell till wee meet, but wheare i am y^{rs} as i proffes.

ANNE FERRERS.

[P.S.] My Lady Ferrers did me the honor of a visitt my services to all y^r Aunts my serviss to Lady Baberbery [Barbara] the time draws neare for my rent charg remember of it."

MARQUESS
TOWNHEND
MSS.

[1714 ?] Sep. 12th. The Dowager Countess of Arran to the same. Unaddressed.

"Deare Niece,

I received y^r & I am glad to find you are in good health, I can't blame y^r iust concern, but in things that ca'n't be helped we must submitt, & look to the present, w^{ch} is y^r wellfaire, I received a very oblidging letter from my Lady Ferrers, who professes great kindnesse to you, & how much she will indeavour to serve [you] & make y^r life pleasant, but I hope in a convenient time, you will be settled well in a house of y^r own, y^r fortune being now soe considerable that you may soon have many good opurtunitys of that kind in y^r choice. I shall always be very glad of any hapynesse that befalls you, & ready to serve you in any thing that lyes in the power of

Y^r Affectionat

Aunt & bhumle ser^t

D. ARRAN.

[P.S.] I fancy my L^d Ferrers will hardly goe back into Darbyshire there is soe much to be done in town w^{ch} will occation y^r coming the sooner to town I shall be glad to hear from you. I suppose my mother hath writt to you since her return from hence. My humble service to y^r Aunts."

[1714 ?], Sept. 18th. The Countess Ferrers to the same. Addressed "For The Hon^{ble} M^{rs} Shirley att Staunton by Loughbrough bag. Lecestershire," and franked "Ferrers."

"Madam,

I am very glad I am now to set a day for y^r journey M^r Kirkland has orders to hire Coches for you one Mickalmas day if you approve of it I believe Fore of my Garls & a Servant may come in the Coch with you if y^a do then Martin & the two Children & French women & my Chamber Made & the nursery Made betty Tomson one more that will be most helpfull to them may come in the other. My L^d wont let Jack come if he stays betty Wilkins must. I hope the rodes will be good & that you will have a pleasant journey I sopose you know y^r Aunts intend to go & live with some of y^a relations whieh I hope will contribut to y^r happyness as well as mine & that everry thing may add to y^a is the harty wishes of

Y^r Most Obliged Humble

Servant

S. FERRERS."

[1714], Sept. 24th. The Countess Ferrers "To the Hon^{ble} M^{rs} Shirley att Staunton Lecestershire—Loughbrough Bagg." Franked "Ferrers."

"I forgot to write you a pece of news I heard a bout a fortnight ago. L^d Dunkilen [Dunkellin] is going to be marryed to one M^{rs} Parker a widdo she has been so but a year & a half she has 7 children & ust to be a cocket with grate spiret, but now I will tell you the good part. She has 800^l a year & a house & 25000^l in money, her father is very rich & very fond of her he has only one more Daughter he does not care for, he is called Portland Smith. I believe it will make some body very ille agane. I believe the last was owing to y^a [this] for it has been a goode wile about. I have sent y^r saddle this week I hope you will like it for I gave the man y^r note of dericktions y^{ar} is in the case [a] bundel for my Mother. I have sent Sewallis a favour I think he should send it L^d Abney. I hope Madam it will not be long before I see you for my L^d has grate maches offered him but he keeps them all till he sees you. The wind stands wrong for the K[ing] so my boys go back to Scool to day y^a [they] both give y^{ar} servis to you so dos my Sister how [who] is now hear but gos to day hear is a plague amongst the Cows a grate many peopel have for bid any Milk or butter being used in y^{ar} houses y^{ar} deyed a 100 Cows in one week at Iselington y^{ar} was severall Oxen burnt at Smithfeld & tuctel [Tuthill] felds be[c]ause y^a ware rotten. The way y^a knew it is y^{ar} brath stinks & y^a shake & dey in three hours the reason they give for it is y^{ar} has been so littel grase y^a have feed them with Grans [grains] & that has rooted [rotted] them. I can get you no good pens as [you] will givse [guess] by y^{as} srall [scrawl] but beg you to excuse it from Madam y^r most Oblidged Humble Servant,

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

S. FERRERS."

[1714?] Lady Barbara Shirley to the same. From Lichfield. Franked by John Cotes and addressed "For M^{rs} Shirley att the Earl of Abingdon's in St. James's Square—London."

"Dear Neece

I am glad y^a have see[n] my L^d, & get maters as to my sister Betty; as to my self, I do not care w^t my father thinks; for if it had been by my advice, I think I had no reason to be a shamed off it, & n^y father has alread[y] showed his ill will to me, as much as he can. Pray present my humble service to Ly Abingdon; & tell her, I have sent M^r Harriott the Baily at Astwell to return these arrears to her; w^{ch} I have reason to hope will not be lease than 100^{li}; I am told [that if] I buy [a] bank bill that bare[s] interest I shall have at the rate of three per sent if the mony lies in but a quorter of a year, & if it is so I beg my Ly will lay out my Mony that way. Pray tell her also that I am very well assured that their was twenty thousand pound setteled on my fathers daughters, & that after I was born their was a farder settelment made; this I had from Cozen Okover who had the writing onc[e] in her hands to cary to M^r Corben, without my fathers knowldg & she is also a witness to them. I hope to get them soon in my owen hands, if they are in his daughters hands, but she living a great way off it will be at lea[s]t a week before I shall have them. I have been this day at Blifield so can ade no more but that I am y^r affec:

Aunt & Servant,

B. SHIRLEY.

[P.S.] It is reported that my father has given his consent y^a should have M^r Paget, & has given him his interest to be chose for Staford shire. He is in the Country."

[1714?], Oct. 2nd. The same to the same. From Lichfield. Franked by John Cotes and addressed "For M^{rs} Shirley att the Right Hon^{ble} the Earl of Abingdons in S^t James's Square—London."

"Dear Neece

I receiu'd y^r Letter but not the acquitence then menshamed. I was very much deverted wth the account y^a gave me, & do not questan but y^a will convince the world, in a Littell time; that y^a are not, w^t my Lady Ferrers represents, & I think her preceeding on that occasion. exposes her more than all she has ever done yet: I hope when they find they can do no good they will be friend[s] again, & hus[h]e all up; for

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

I think it will be much for their credit to do so. I think now y^a are in town y^a would do well, to take advise, as concerning y^r demands from my father; for tho: y^r brothers Will hinders y^r demanding a porshan out of w^t I have, yet I believe, it being due from y^r fathers death, my fathers liab^e[l] to pay it y^a out of the arrears, & if not the porshan yet the interest, w^{ch} would be considerable; & of great advantage to y^a at this present, for it would help to clear y^r estat against y^a came of age. [My brother] Lory came here to day from M^r Coten's [Cotton's], he has not see[n] M^{rs} Thacker since, he went their; but she has promes'd to come here; so I hope that matter will succeed, but say nothing off it. Sister Anna came here yesterday. Y^r horse is come well, & I will take great Care off it. I desir y^a will buy me a set of watter Colers, & six littel french cutts, & two or three Ivory plates: by this y^a will see how I intend to employ my self; I have made some efortes at it already; but my Colers are very bad & I want time for practes to emprove my hand, for I make but sad da[u]be of it yet: y^a may give these things to my sister & she will send them with some other things she is to send down. M^r Hill & Chetwen continue to treat still, but have lease hopes than ever, for M^r Bidelf has been here, a making enterest for my brother & the Capten; & he has very good enterest in this town. I shall be glad when the election is over, for we hear of littel else but making enterest now. I shall be glad to hear from y^a often, & hope to hear y^a are very well pleased in the place y^a are in, I will ade no more at present but that I ever am.

Dear Neece—Y^r Affec: Aunt & Servant

R. SHIRLEY.

[P.S.] Pray present all our services to Ly Abingdon. All here are much y^r servants. Pray when y^a see y^r gradmother next give my service to her."

[1714?], Oct. 11th. The same to the same. From Lichfield. Franked and addressed as above.

"Dear Neece

I return y^a thanks for the care y^a have taken of the paint, & believe the Ivory will do well enough for a beginer. I find M^r Millward hase given a very fails account of the Lady days rents in his hands, & he desir'd he might pay the mickelmas taxes out of it, he having no mony of his owen, & they was to be paid as soon as the day was past, & he should not receive any of the rent so soon; so I told him he might, & repay me when he received the mickelmas rents: for I understand those that receive the rents must pay the taxs, but I should tell y^a that M^r Annesley sent me word that if any of the Leases was set to midsummer I had a right to those rents, because my Nephew died after, so I ordered Mr Millward to look into all the tenants Leases, & give me an account to w^t time they was set: but he has not yet: he told me their was one estat that was under set, & that it might be rased 15^{lb} a year, so I bid him send word of it to London; for I had nothing to do w^t that. I believe L^d Abingdon should ask for the Counter parts of the Leases of y^r estate, & if they was looked into it might be of great advanage to y^a. I am going to day to see M^{rs} Coten & in tend to stay two or three days with her, so can ade no more but that I am

Dear Neece

y^r affec: Aunt & Servant,

B. SHIRLEY.

[P.S.] All here are y^r servants; & wee all desire our humble service to L^y & L^d Abingdon."

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

Oct. 15th, [1714?]. Lady Anne Courtenay to the same. Unaddressed
 "I. return Dear M^r Shirley many thanks for her oblidging Letters & should have done it before now but was prevented sometime by my Concerns for the Death of my poore Sis^r Bertie who is realy a very great Loss to her famely & last week I had begun writeing to y^a but was seiz^d wth the Colick before I had finished my letter wth Continued upon mee for some days & made mee soe weak that this is the first time I have bin able to take pen in hand since & I can not say my disorder has perfectly left mee yet, y^r La^s surprized mee by the news y^a sent mee of the Dutches of Beaufort & own I can not but think she had much better have Continued as she was, I hope if my Couzen Catherine Bertie marys my Lady Norreys will take hir Sis^r Nany to live with her.

I am oblidged to y^r La^s for y^r desier of seeing mee but nothing has yet happend in this Countery to make mee desierous of leaving it but if I could doe y^a any service none would bee more ready to take a Journey to London than my Self, my Boy is soe delighted wth the present y^a sent him that he says he will drink y^r health for ever & indeed he & his Sis^r never doe mis it a day, I think wee are much quieter here than at London w^{ch} makes mee wish all my friends wth mee I shall expect in a little time to hear some news of y^r La^s I am sure none wishes y^r Happynes more than I doe who am

Dear Madam

Y^r La^s faithfull Humble Ser^t

A. COURTENAY.

[P.S.] S^r W^m & my litle ones are y^r La^s Humble Ser^{ts} & I am the same to Lady Bab & beg the favour of y^r La^s to get a sight of the bed as y^a mention w^{ch} I think must be a penyworth & if y^a think it soe I shall bee oblidged if y^a will buy it for me & will returne y^a the money."

1714, Oct 17th. Lady Anna Eleanor Shirley to the same. From Lichfield. Franked by John Cotes, and addressed "This for M^r Shirley att the Earl of Abingdon's in S^t James Square—London." The seal on this letter represents an amorino springing off the ground to catch a winged heart.

"Dear nece,

I should not a been so long silant, but that my sister Bar[bara] writing, I belived y^a wold loke upon it the same, and I had nothing more to tell y^a, but what she did, I am extremly well pleas'd y^a like being att L^d Abingdon's, for I dont question but it will be much to y^r advantedg, for non more sencerely wishes y^r happynes, than my silf.

My Brother & Sister, & nece, & my silf, was att the assamble, we dined at Lady Pies; she inquier'd after y^a, as did M^r Willmot, we danced, & ther was most of the best company ther, M^r Coten says M^r Nate Corsen enquires much after y^a, & his elder brother drinks y^r health to him. I hear M^r Pagit desires to make great Cort to y^a, so that he will follo y^r Brothers maxim, in not taking on[e] deniall. By what I can hear y^a will have great store of adm[r]ers; I can give y^a noe account of Repton, yett, it is much as it was when y^a was last hear. M^r frances bagot is just com hear to the Race, in hopes of her loves Company i sepos, to dance, but she will i fear be balked for ther will be tow ball's, & we shall goe to M^r Chettings [Chetwynd's?], tho he desires to envit all upon the race; & has musick com from lester, & has lad out 20 pound in sweettmets & hiered the town hall, i am in hast, & wish y^a can read this sad [s]croll, i am

Y^r most Affe: Aunt & Servent,

AN: ELL: SHIRLEY.

[P.S.] My Brother Ler: gives his sarves to y^a, & all the rest of y^r relations hear, & with me wishes y^a much devershon att the Corenation, & hopes y^a will not be uneasy att y^r not being wellcom to the Pellmell, for when they Com to Consider they will soon Chang ther minds; my sarves to madamasell & M^r Gillbo."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
—

1714, Oct. 31st. The Dowager Countess of Arran to the same. Unaddressed.

"I hope Deare Madam you had my letter I sent you before you came to town, & having not heard from you a good while, I ca'nt forbear inquiring thus after you since y^r coming to London, where I hope you have been well, I dought not but of y^r being very easy at my L^d Abington's, where I hear you are, but yet cannot but be sorry at the occasion, of leaving y^r grandfathers house, before a good Husband brought you to one off y^r own, where I hope in due time you will be happily placed, having now undoughtedly many good offers in y^r choice, & that you will accept of some [one] of them before long, w^{ch} is the best settlement y^r friends can wish you. The town now is very intertayning, & I hope you have by this time gott of in some measure y^r malancholy, for the unfortunate losse w^{ch} is not to be recalled, I shall extreemely reioyce to hear of y^r well faire, being a very true freind of y^a, & in all things very much

Deare Niece,

Y^r Affectionat humble servant,

D. ARRAN."

1715, Aug. 17th. Rev^d Walter Horton to the same. Dated in the Cathedral Close of Lichfield and unaddressed.

"Most Honoured Madam

Permit me to address myself to you this day, and even with extasy, & transports of joy to congratulate your having compleated the twenty first year of your age. It was my happiness to dedicate you to the Christian Religion, and it is a mighty satisfaction to me, that you are as much distinguished by your Piety, as by your birth, & quality, & I have with unspeakable pleasure reflected upon that truly noble Idea of Religion, which is so eminently conspicuous in you, which sits as it were in a glorious triumph in your brest, with all the passions in subjection about her, & with all that lustre that a sweet disposition, & excellent sense, & a most graceful amiable Personage, can endear, & recommend. This, Madam, will command esteem, & inhance your Value amongst all that have the honour to know you. This will revive the brightest Images of your Illustrious Ancestors, for the Ferrerses are renound in our Annals for their generous favours to the Church, as well as for the vigorous Endeavours to maintain the liberty of their Country. May you live many many years. & inherit the Virtues with the fair estates of your Great Predecessors, may you have a most sure, but an exceeding late most blessed Immortality. May you be blest with a noble sweet Companion worthy of you, & may your Children succeed you in your fortunes, may all that prosperity attend you which your own good heart can desire for your self, are the constant & ardent Prayers of

Honoured Madam

Your most devoted & most humble Servant

WALT: HORTON."

1715, Aug. 19th. M^{rs} Katherine Ward to the same. Unaddressed.

Dear Madam,

This being the Anniversary of your La^{dy}'s Birth Day, the same which brings you to the possession of your honourable Estate, & inheritance, I think it My Duty to congratulate y^r La^{ps} upon the same, with My Most sincere wishes for your health, & happiness, Long Life, & good Days, & the best of Husbands, when you think fitt to alter your station, together with all other enjoyments your own heart can wish, or this world can afford you. I doubt not Madam but this is a day of great rejoycing amongst all your La^{ps} friends, & honourable relations. And we for our parts, according to the utmost of our poor capacitys have endeavour'd to participate with you as much as it was possible at so remote a distance, upon the Joyful accation. Sir Edward Littleton vissits us frequently, & M^r Ward tells him sometimes that your La^{ps}, & Lady Barbara would make My Lord Newport, & himselfe the best of Ladys, & if the Heavens have so great a blessing in store for Staffordshire, how should we rejoyce? to have so good Neighbours, & the satisfaction of seeing your La^{ps} placed so near as within 6 or 7 Miles of each others seat. I have never had a Letter from your La^{ps} since that I wrote in obedience to your Commands concerning My Masters Will, & after that I wrote to Mademoisell to enquire after your La^{ps} health, hearing you were indisposed, but have never heard from her, which I am very much concern'd at, I hope as soon as this comes to hand Your La^{ps} will honour me with a Line, for nothing is a greater pleasure to me than to hear from you often, nor nothing would be a greater trouble than to think I was forgotten by your La^{ps}. Be pleased to present my Humble Duty & service to Lady Barbara, & the rest of the Ladys, & I beg of you to accept of more than be expressed from

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

Dear Madam

Y^r La^{ps} Most obedient & most faithful

Humble Servant,

KATH: WARD.

[PS.] M^r Ward is your La^{ps} Most Humble Servant, & we beg you will please to give our services to Mademoisell.

"Upon 11th of July last '89 I was at M^r Wrights of Loughborough who was a Servant of M^r Ferrers of Walton for some time, & did travel with him beyond Sea, both in France, & Holland, he told me that Esq. Ferrers had a farme in Holland with a good House upon it, which he had been wth him at it, & it was called by the Name of Lows Downes, about seven Miles from the Hague in Holland.—JOHN CODDINGTON."

This I found in an account book of M^r Wards, & believing it might be of service to your La^{ps}, I have transcrib'd it."

[1716], [Feb.] 22nd. Lady Anna Bertie to the same. Dated as below and addressed "To M^{rs} Sherly att a house next Door to the Dyall in Charles Street near S^t James Square; London."

"This is to beg dear M^{rs} Sherley & Lady babies pardon for not waiting on you on munday morring but my father was att home by himself and I could not have the face to ask him to give me leave to come to you but according to my promise will not faile to give you a full and true account of my journey to Oxford and my proceedings their, my compny in the Coach was ane old gontay man and his man and his maide the old man preteniged great love to me, so you must think I was mighty happy, so when I came into Oxford the furist thing I sawe and heard was K——y how [who] told me that my Lady norrise [Norreys] was very angrey that I should come to Oxford without and invet[at]ion from her, but when I saw my Lady shee told me shee was mighty glad to see me and that I was mighty wellcome to her house, but she sad that I made her very dull, I put her so much in mind of my sister Nelly that I doe not much mind what was saide afore; all the Oxford scolsr

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

aske if I am not a kin to M^{rs} Elnore Bertie for they never saw too so like in thear lives. This day I was att the Theater to see my lord Aron chose and all the Cry I hear is Aron [Arran] & Ormond for ever & Down with the round heads, and treason hollied in the streat from morring to night so that you must think I am got into a very vile town. I beg my humble service to Lady bab and I beg her pardon I did not pay her for my head but upon my word I never thought on it till I came to weicheim but I shall be in London in less then a forngnight or I will send the mony by the furis[t] opuertunety but pray make a very handsome excuse for me, I have a great Deale to say to you but durst not turst itt in this paper, I did not get out of London till very late so that I did not come into Oxford till darke night and I was in great Danger of breaking my night, I hope dear M^{rs} Sherley [you] will be so kind as to send me word when you are my lady, and if you can give favours I hope you will laye one by for me and some bride cake for you know what a great lover I am of plumb cake I had this day the happiness of seeing young M^r Counton who I ham mightly in love with, I hope you will find out what is meint in this letter but you know what a very good speller I am, so that I will conglude Dear madam your faithfull frind and humble serveint to command

A. BERTIE.

my sister deisirs her humble service to you I have not time to write to aney body afore twlef a Clock att night, pray derickt for me att my Lady norrisse near the Theater in Oxford

Oxford the 22 twelf att night."

[1715], March 5th. Lady Dorothy Cotes to the same. Dated at Lichfield and addressed "For the R^t Hon^{able} the Lady Compton next door to M^r Massy's Wachmaker in Charles Street near S^t James's Square; London."

Dear Neice,

There is no Change of fortune happens to you wherein I cannot but take a part having allways had so sincere a Concern for you. And therefore must beg leave to congratulate with you on your entering into the happy Estate of Mattrimony; and as you have all the Prospect of happiness any of your freands can desier so I sincerely wish you all the Injoyments this World can aford.

Your Unkell desires his humble Sarvice to you wishing you all happiness & would have write to you on this subject but, thought it would be less trouble to you to put it in mine; all mine are your humble Sarvants and

I am Dear Niece

Your Affec. Aunt & Humble Sarvant,

DOROTHY COTES.

[P.S.] I desier my humble Sarvice to your Lord thou[gh] unknown."

[1716], March 6th. Lady Anne Courtenay to the same. Un-addressed.

I have this day heard Dear Madam that y^a are entered into the State of Matrimony & cannot omit taking the first opertunety of wishing y^r La^{ps} all imaginable Joy & Happynes as I think y^a have reison to propose to y^r self from the good Character w^{ch} is soe generally given of my Lord Compton & I hope he justly deserves it for I am sure none hes a truer

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

Value for y^r La^{ps} then I have, I believe y^u are at this time much taken up wth Company soe will tyer y^u noe longer but to assure y^a I am

Dear Madam

y^r La^{ps} Most affec. & Obedient Humble Ser^t,

A. COURTENAY.

[P.S.] S^r W^m is y^r La^{ps} Most Humble Ser^t & wishes y^a much Joy & we both beg leave to Joyne in the same to my L^d Compton. Nany begs y^a will accept of her Humble service & good wishes."

[1716], March 10th. Catherine Venables, daughter of Sir Robert Shirley, to the same. Address torn.

"My waint of heart (Madam) hendered me writing & I had as soon as I heard, to have wished y^a ioy no boddy dus it more harttly (for y^r father and mother sack) I most allwas have a kindnes for y^a and should be glad if it was in my power to searvie y^a. I am much conserned att the disputs betwine y^a, and y^r grandfather and his anger, he is your father[^s] father, and for his sack bair it all as well as y^a can and hid[e] his packen [?] passion] as much as you can for his sack and y^r own as it may as lettell be knon as can be in the famally y^a are now in, he is old, and so I am I hope y^a will exquise this impertignences, and believe me to be

Dear Madam

Y^r affect: [great] Aunt & humble searvant,

C. VENABLES.

[P.S.] My sarvis to L^d Compton."

[1716?], April 3rd. Lady Anne Courtenay to the same. Unaddressed.

"I am very much oblidge to Dear Lady Compton for her letter at a time that I am senceable y^a were so much taken up wth Company the remembering a friend at soe great a distance at that time was an addition to the favour but I doe asure y^r La^{ps} y^a could not have bestowed it upon one who has a truer Value for y^a than my self, I was very glad to hear by a letter from S^r W^m that y^r La^{ps} iniows y^r health & hope y^a will long Continue to doe soe, I have bin very ill of my old companion the Collick w^{ch} very often returnes upon mee, this place is very dull at present haveing noe Company & y^r La^{ps} knowing something of my temper may sopose mee to be a little spleenatick therefore I will tyer y^a noe longer wth this dull scrall but asure y^a I am,

Dear Madam

Y^r La^{ps} Obedient Humble Ser^t

A. COURTENAY."

[1716], April 8th. Lady Anna Bertie to the same. Addressed "To the Right Hon^{ble} Lady Compton next Door to the Dyall in Charles Streat near S^t James Squir—London."

"Madam,

I received the honour of your L^{d^{sh}} Letter & should have return'd thanks for it before this time had I not been Confined to my bed for above this Week by a feaver wich I am now much better of but I have a great Pain in my head, I wish this Place afor'd[ed] aney thing to make a Letter aney wayes acceptable but all the talke att prasint is of a very od Weding wich has lately happned hear, tho you do not know the Lady I cannot help giveing you an account of, and am Sure did y^a know her you must be of my Mind that nothing that weres petticoates need {dispair of a husband, She is a boutte three score & has nether beauty witte nor good humour to recommend her she is of a make large enough for the Grand Senior. Standing one lucky hour att her Window thear past by a genttelman about the same age who casting hies eyes upwards beheld this Queen of Beauty & att this time was taken wth Such a fluttring att his heart that he could not rest till he had Broke his mind to her and he soon found releif, for theay said Matrimony in a week and hethertoo think themselves they [are the] happiest Couple in the Kings Dominions, God keep them so say I. My Father desiens for London next week but I am a frad I shall no[t] come wth him tho' my cheafe Beasness is to pay my duty to y^r Lad^{sh} this Place Grows extreamly plesint, I will not tyer y^a aney further att this time then to assure you I am Madam wth all respet y^r L^{dsh} most obliged humble

Servient to Comand

A. BERTIE.

I hope this will find my L^d & y^r L^{dsh} in good helth my sister desiens her humble service to y^r L^{dsh} & wishes you all the joy & happines y^a can desier.

I should have maid a excuse for the Length of this but that y^r L^{dsh} was so kind to Desier me to use the same fredome, w^{ch} is a Command I very readily obey."a [1716?], May 8th. Lady Anne Courtenay to the same. Dated at Powderham and unaddressed.

I am extreamly obliged to Dear Lady Compton for the favour of her letter & Picture w^{ch} I shall sett a very great value on haveing so true a respect for the originall & S^r W^m tells mee he thinks it is very like, I should not have bin soe long wthout returning my thanks for it but have bin soe very ill wth the Colick in my Stomack & Cramp in all my limbs that for some time I could not hold my pen to write a letter & being soe well acquainted wth y^r La^{sh} good humore makes mee hope y^a will excuse it, I am very glad y^a soe well escaped the robbers. I think those who stay late at the Park have very great Courage, I think my L^d Torrington was very charitable in leaving an Estate to one of soe ancient a Famely & had so little before, my Daughter Nany is very senceable of the Honnor y^r La^{sh} does her in remembering her in all y^r Letters & is very often wishing she could wait on y^a to thank y^a for it her self she begs y^r La^{sh} will accept of her Humble service & I fear I have tyerd y^a soe will onely asure y^a I am very faithfully

Dear Madam,

Y^r La^{sh} Most Obedient Humble Ser^t,

A. COURTENAY.

[P.S.] S^r W^m is y^r La^{sh} Most Humble Ser^t & wee both Joyne in the same to y^r Lord."

1716, June 23rd. To Lord and Lady Compton from the Rev^d Walter Horton. Dated in the Cathedral Close of Lichfield. The signature has been cut off.

"My Lord, & Lady,

My sickness hath prevented me from doing my self the honour to congratulate your thrice happy espousals, but having a little recovered the use of my hand, permit me to wish you all that lasting joy, that sweet consolation, that inviolable friendship that can possibly attend so Honñble, so solemn, so sacred an engagement.

I cannot but with the highest satisfaction reflect upon the promising Consequences of this blessed union, when I duely consider that both your familys make the brightest figures in our English Annals.

The Comptons for a long succession of Ages have been celebrated in other nations as well as in our own, for their gravity & steadiness, for their wisdom, prudence, & valour, & our late Gracious Sovereign when she summond your Lordp to the House of Peers discern'd in your Person the Illustrious Virtues of your Noble Ancestors, & you rarely qualifed to assist her in perplext & difficult times.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

The Ferrers & Shirleys were of old Great Patriots of their Country & your excellent Lady is descended from them both & is as such distinguished by her Virtues as by her high & truly noble extraction, the humility, & aimable charming Sweetness of her temper will every day appear most lovely in your L^d sight.

That your many many years may glide smoothly on in Peace, that you may be left with a numerous offspring to transmit you illustrious qualifications to Posterity, are the constant dayly Prayers of My Lord & Lady.

Your Honours

Most devoted very humble Servant."

1716, Sept. 25th. Hon. Henry Shirley "To The Right Hon^{ble} Lady Compton att her Seat att Compton in the Hole Northamptonshire."

"Dear Niece

I am at a Stand how to begin or what to touch upon, so great a Stranger am I to Diversion as you may judge by the Sequel; when the Compass of 2 Acres confines my greatest Promenade, tho' Boundless my thoughts. Should I tell you I am almost desperately in Love, 'tis probable tell me it is common, But should I tell you with whom I dare say I may justifie my self, if Phylosophy is no a riddle, & that Beautifull Objects were not made to move the Senses. I have lived since I saw you so much upon Ideas that I am almost Ærial, & could wish not almost but altogether, could I but breath[e] that refreshment in a Vapour that might be agreeable to Lady Betty Compton. You may think me Romantick, But were you as sensible as my self of what I can (tho' a Paradox) term nothing but insensibility, I am sure your good nature could not but pity me. I have you know the great task to get over, the perswading some to return to their Reason who expect that men without their senses should live by their wits, & whats [more] work without their Liberty. I am so much a Heterodox man in the principles of modern Toryism, that I cannot write of Politicks without thinking that some men are Conjurers to compound others when stated rules in one Reign are reversed in another, all I believe is that I scarce can believe anything that is reported But what I have better grounds for then some imagine. I believe I shall whip up att last to prove my younger Brother not older then myself, which I find to be necessary, & then I will try what Lady Betty will hear from me; which as it is a thing of the last consequence I think ought to be proved according to law. And then I think to thunder Don Diego a Politicall March who by what I can understand has trim'd his weather cock Conscience to another Point of the Compass. I am very buisy with diverting my self some hours with the Camœnian Muses, & others with my Lord Chief Justice Cook's Crab-stick upon Littleton in the Character of Jacobs Modern Justice. I have been so witty since I visited this Mad House that I almost want a new Petticoat my Muses Cloathing is worn so thread bare & so homely that truly its scarce becomes my Modesty to tell the truth were I not a Poet, & much out att the Heels for want of High Church Hereditary Right. I hope you will not be long before you come to Town 'till when Adieu from y^r Entirely

Service to my Lord

And bright Lady Betty &c."

H. SHIRLEY.

1716, Sept. 30th. Jane Countess of Northampton to the same. Addressed "To the Right Hon^{ble} Lady Compton."

"Since we was to part with my Dear Daughter (w^{ch} I do assure you was with great regret on my side), I was mighty glad that you had so fine a day for travaileing; I hope you found L^d Tamworths family all well, & that you got away from thence in good time, that you might perform y^r journey with ease & get into Compton before it was dark.

My L^d sends you his blessing, & we both desire the same to L^d Compton; & to both return thanks for y^r kind vissitt. The seeming satisfaction you showed here, was I do assure you a very real one to me, & I do promiss Dear Lady Compton, that as long as she dose give me that encouragement, there is no opertunity I won't improve to give proofis, of my real affection to my Dear Son; w^{ch} would be motive en^d for my kindness to you, but the addition of y^r own meritt engages me dubly to be

Your most affectionate Mother,

J. NORTHAMPTON.

[P.S.] All y^r Brⁿ & Sis[ters] presents there servises, so doth aunt Whittle."

[1716?] Lady Barbara Shirley to the same. Undated and unaddressed.

"Dear Neece,

I believe y^a will be glad to know, how my brother's affair goes, theifore this is to let y^a [know] this last monday he went to Staunton, to aske my father's consent; & also to see w^t he would give him in present. He gave him his consent, he told him if he could get her, but did not believe he could, & told him he would give him a mentenance, but would not name w^t. When he had dun talking with my brother he went & told my Ly who was very much against it as y^a may easly emagen; but to put the better face on it; she told him he was very much in the rong to consent to it; for that he might be 20000*l*. with him considering the prospect he had of being Heir, & at last so per-swaded my L^d that he was against; the w^{ch} my brother being enform'd by those that hard the disput, he got a horseback & came a way without seeing my L^d Least he should for bid him, & yesterday he was to acquaint M^{rs} Lister with my L^d answer, the w^{ch} she is so well satisfied with that she has give[n] farder assurances that she will have him, & he has got a Lazance; and the mesanger that brings this to Northampton is sent for a ring; so we hope to have it accomplished very soon. Sis[ter] Catherin is now at Staunton but is to go soon in to Chesshir, one may easly believe she has no very pleasant time their now. My brother Cotes is gone to Wood Cote, w^{ch} place we have reason to think will soon be his for his father declines visable every day. I hope if y^a go to Compton we shall see y^a here in y^r way their, this being a good distance to make y^r dining place. I believe y^a will not see my brother & sister Tam; for they think it not convenient to lie out, & y^a know it is to fare to com back at night all here are y^r servants, & none more so than her that is

Y^r affec: Aunt & Servant

B. SHIRLEY.

[P.S.] Pray give our service to L^d and Lady Nor[thampton] & all the other Lady, & also to L^d Compton."

1734, May 14th.—Lady Penelope Compton to the Countess of Northampton, "att Castile Ashby." Dated at Dover Street.

"we have been tonight very much alarm'd with a Fire in Albemarle street . . . it happen'd to be of the other side of the

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

way next Bond street, so that our house was not in any danger, but seeing it so near was very terrible, for it burnt very feirce two houses intirely down before they could get any water, it began I think they say in one M^r Cantillions who was quite burnt before it was discovered and they say it was by his reading in Bed but there are so many reports one can't tell what is certain; it was very near M^{rs} Shirley which in her condition is very bad but they had no great damage and she sends word she is very well to day; we were a Sunday to see L^d Compton at Fulham so that I can now have the pleasure of sending your Lady^{sh} word that he is extreamly well; S^r John Rushout is come to town again we are just going to dine at Bloomsbury and so many of our Friends has been so kind in enquireing after us this morning that I have not time to add any more than to assure dear L^d Northampton that I am

L^d Margaret presents her service to you & we both beg the same to my B[rothe]r and all Friends."

Your Lady^{sh} Affec : Sister &
Humble Servant
PEN : COMPTON.

1734, July 14th.—Lady Anne Compton, "To The R^t Hon^{ble} the Countess of Northampton at Tamworth." In a child's handwriting.

" Madam

I hope this will find my Lord & your Ladyship safe and well arrived to Tamworth where I wish with all my heart to be with you. Thank God we are all very well Lady Charlotte desired me to join her humble duty with mine to Dear Pappa & Mamma I humble beg your Ladyship will be so good [as] to give our Services to Lady Betty & M^r Compton & pray remember us kindly to Lady Jane. I am

Madam y^r Ladyships
Most Obedient Servant
& Dutifull Daughter

ANNE COMPTON."

1734, Augt. 17th. Lord Compton to the same "at Castle Ashby in Northampton-Shire — by Ashby [Post.]Bagg." In a child's handwriting.

" Dear Mama

I wish your Ladyship a great deal of Joy of your Birthday, wishing you may see a great many of them, I hope you will all be very merry. I will be as merry here as possible. There was a Gentleman came from my [Dowager] Lady Northampton's to day, and says she is better than she has been. Pray give my Duty to my Pappa and my Service to M^r Compton, Lady Betty and my sisters.

I am,

Madam

Your most Dutifol son

JAMES COMPTON."

1734, Augt. 19th.—Lady Penelope Compton to the same. Dated at Bracknell and unaddressed.

"If I had not been indebted to Dear Lady Northampton for an obliging Letter, this Day [being her Birthday] would have elaimed a remembrance. . . . I did not doubt but you had a good deal of company, betwixt receiving and returning Visits, I fancy it was great pleasure to the old Lady Chester to have an opportunity of meeting y^a for she used to be very hearty and cheerful with her acquaintances; poor Lady Gore is indeed I doubt in a very bad way for before I left London Lady Gainsbrough said she expected to hear of her death

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MRS.
—

every post, it is a great deal of pity, especially since you say he is so much reclaimed that he should be left a Widower again so soon . . . tother day I saw Mr^r Vansittart who said that the last time they heard of her she was much better; she is a neighbour to us here about 11 Mile off, and was so obligeing to come to see us, as did also L^d & L^r Arran and L^{dy} E. Butler who are about the same distance too, Lady Nassau Paulet is within two Miles so that your Lady^{sh} finds we have some company, but excepting those that we knew before none has come which I am mighty glad of for [we] was not at all desirous of making new acquaintances here; nor of having many Visits, for [we] did not think it worth while to keep on our Horses whilst we were out of town not having much for'em to do I am very sorry for poor Mr^r Crofts for she will be a very great loss to the school it was indeed a terrible accident and the most extraordinary too that ever was heard on."

1734, Augt. 24th. Lady Anne Rushout to the same. Dated at Northwick.

"Dear Madam,—I should have writ by the return of the Person that brought the Venison to have return'd your Lady^{sh} and my Lord a great many thanks for it it was extream good, and this day [I] shall treat S^r John Dutton with some of it; the Judges dined with us on Wednesday in their way home after finishing their Circuit, Tuesday S^r John is obliged to attend the Chusing of a Mayor at Evesham & Wednesday we go into Buckinghamshire, I shall first go to judge Denton's where after I have stay'd a Week or 10 days shall go to Tring, for about as long a time. Mr^r Sandys comes here to go along with us. I hope we shall have good weather, for [we] propose going to see L^d Cobham's which I have heard great talk of, I am very sorry to hear of the Misfortune of D^r Croft's Sister, I dont know whether L^d Compton is at Asby this Bartholomew time but whereever [he is] I hope [he is] very well, I beg the favour of my humble service to my B[rothe]r L^r Betty & the young Ladys, S^r John desires his also. This morning he had a Letter from my B[rothe]r Cha[rle]s at Lisbon, he and his Family were all very well my two Little Girls are mighty well, Betty at this time at my Elbow & begs her respects, indeed she bestows a great deal of her Company upon me which while I am alone is very acceptable, the small pox is a great deal in the town & tho a good sort yet I take all the Care I can it shou'd not come to us, I heartely wish it over as I do with all your family, it would be great Comfort to you and every thing that would be so is always most sincerely wished by

Dear Lady Northampton

Your most Affectionate

humble Servant

A. RUSHOUT."

1734, Sept. 7th. Nicholas Guillibeau to the same. Dated at Fulham and addressed outside to the Earl of Northampton at Castle Ashby.

"My Lady,—My Lord Compton continues thank God in very good health. . . . as for Mr^r Crofts family it is still managed by his Sister in Law. . . . he intended to have his own Sister Ward but I hear that she has a very bad State of health. . . . her death is a great loss to him and to the whole School."

No date. The same to the same. Unaddressed.

"My Lord Compton continues thank God in very good health. . . . Mr^r Loundes came here Yesterday to see his Lord^{sh} and found them very well. I have ask'd Mr^r Leach who is Mr^r Crofts head Usher if he would go with his Lord^{sh} to Oxford, he being a Student of that place but as it will not be till the 14th of next Month he cant possibly leave the School."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1734, Sept. 17th. Elizabeth Rolleston to the same. Dated in London and unaddressed.

"Madam,

. I am overjoyed to hear that your La^{pp} my Lord & the dear pretty Ladys are in perfect health, I wish you a safe journey to Compton & a Continuance of that happiness there and in all other places. I have follow'd Doctor Colis's directions & I have found I thank God a great benefit by them & (under God) I owe this to your kind procuring his advice for me, May God reward you for this & all the other benefits I have been Constantly receiving from y^e ever since I had the honor to be known to you without which (in all humane appearance) I shou'd have been a Miserable Creature, tis time I repeat my acknowledgements in every letter so they are still repetitions but how can a gratefull heart like mine so sensible of my unworthiness & your great Condescention be able to do otherwise."

1734, Sept. 28th. Nicholas Guillibeau to the same. Dated at Castle Ashby.

"My Lady,—My Lord Compton continues thank God in very good health, His Lord^{sh} presents his Duty to my Lord and to your Lady^{sh} and Services to the Ladies. I had just now a letter from M^r Rawlins in which he tells me that he has taken a place in next Mondays Coach so proposes to wait upon My Lord on Wednesday Morning for the Coach has done flying. M^r Crofts Sister in Law is this week return'd to London, & She that manages the family now is a Cozen of M^r Croft her name is Turenne. She is pretty elderly but seems to be a good Manager and very civil to all the Gentlemen, and as for the Table it is kept in the same Manner as usual."

1734, Oct. 8th. The Same to the Same. Dated and addressed as the last.

"My Lady,—My Lord Compton continues thank God in very good health. His Lord^{sh} keeps free from a cold altho they are pretty much about still. My Lord has drunk but little Malt drink this Summer for it was but seldom to his liking. I mention this because I have not heard M^r Croft speak of any wine he had receiv'd for My Lords use, but often calls for some of Lord Goring's wine."

1734, Oct. 9th. Lady Anne Rushout to the same. Dated at Northwick and unaddressed.

. [I] am sure it woud have been one of the most agreeable parts of our ramble if I could have waited on my Brother and You, but our time was much streightned for what we did and besides had the disadvantage of very bad weather great part of the time, it was particularly unlucky all the time I was in the neighbourhood of Stow, for tho I did go to L^d Cobhams Gardens it was impossible to see any more than that it appeared very large & great Variety; but it seems placed in a very deep dirty Country, when I went to Tring 'twas rather better weather, but was engaged to dine abroad so many of the few days I stayed there, that I was in some fear least I shoud not get an oppertunity to see the new Obeliskt and Temple which M^r Gore has built in his Park since I was last there, which woud have been great pitty they are both so extremly neat & hansome, I think he cant find much more to do at Tring, in my opinion he might quite have finished for it realy is a very agreeable fine place, the leaving that was great disadvantage to going directly to poor little Harrow where [the Dowager] Lady Northampton was obliged to send away part of her own family to make room for St John & I for a few days. I found her much better then when I left her, that Air I believe very good & is a place always agreed with her; at my return Home I found Betty very well but poor Nanny has a terrible cough, which I believe contributes to keeping her weak, for she yet makes very little use of her feet."

1734, Oct. 12th. Nicholas Guillibean to the same. Dated at Fulham, and addressed to the Earl at Castle Ashby.

"My Lady,

My Lord Compton continues thank God in very good health His Lord^{sh} presents his Duty to My Lord and to Your Lady^{sh} and Services to the Ladies. Mr Humes brought My Lords frock and Breeches this Morning and the Hatter has also sent a Hatt. His Lord^{sh} choose[s] to have it it laced, with an open lace."

1734, Oct. 13th. The same to the same. Address torn off. Dated at Fulham.

"My Lord Compton continues thank God in very good health. His Lord^{sh} receiv^d a visit Yesterday from my Lady Cardigan and their two Daughters at my House my Lord being there (for it was Holy Day) : My Lords Pocket Money is all spent and his Lord^{sh} desired me to supply him with more so that I have let his Lord^{sh} have ten Shillings" 1734, Oct. 22nd. Lady Elizabeth Compton to the same. Dated in London.

. . . . I heard to-day from Fulham that Lord Compton was pure well. Lady Dow[age]r Northampton has had a little of the Gout Lady Jane [Compton] was in Town and dined with me to day Sir John Dolben's son has had the small pox in the most favourable manner the Princess of Orange went away yesterday. Dr Tessier & the Queen's Nurse is gone over with her, it is generally said that the King of Prussia is dead, but not to be notified till after the Birthday, least it should eclipse some of the Finery every body that has been in the Air to-day complains extremely of the sharpness of it, such severe frosts beginning so early is a dismal prospect of a very long Winter, but in the Country you are much less sensible of the badness of it than in town"

1734, Oct. 24th. Nicholas Guillibean to the same. Addressed to the Earl "at Compton Vinate—Warwick Shire." Dated at Fulham.

Lord Compton continues in very good health and sends his Duty.

1734, Oct. 26th. The same to the same. Dated and addressed as the last.

Lord Compton continues in very good health and received his Papa's letter last night. The breaking up [at his school] will be about the 12th of December.

1734, Oct. 27th. Lady Penelope Compton to the same. Dated at Bracknell and unaddressed.

. . . . "we are still very well satisfied with our little Habitation, for whenever there is a fine day we make shift to get out of doore which agrees mighty well with us both, and L^y Margaret has not had the least cold our near neighbours are most of them going soon to town. L^y Preston is already gone and Mrs. Skipworth goes tomorrow & those we used to see pretty often, and Mrs. Prade intends going in a bout a week."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1734, Oct. 22nd. Nicholas Guillibeu to the same. Dated and addressed as his last.

The writer reports that Lord Compton continues in very good health and presents his Duty.

1734, Nov. 2nd. The same to the same. Unaddressed. To the same effect.

1734, Nov. 5th. The same to the same. Dated at Fulham and addressed to the Earl at Compton Viniat.

"His Lordship continues thank God in very good health, only his hollow Tooth has felt a little uneasy these 4 or 5 days but since I have stopp'd the hole with a grain of Mastick it has been easseyr" 1734, Nov. 7th. The same to the same. Dated and addressed a the last.

The writer reports that Lord Compton continues in very good health and presents his Duty.

1734, Nov. 18th. Lady Anne Rushout to the same. Unaddressed.

"Many thanks for the Venison you now send me
I have had no private Letter [that] has mentioned Lady Suffolk's quitting her employ; I read it with surprise last post S^r John was sent for last Monday in great hast to L^{dn} to poor Mr. Bouverie (a Young Gentleman he is Trustee for) who lay dying" 1734, Nov. 19th. Nicholas Guillebeau to the same. Address torn off. Dated at Fulham.

"I went yesterday to Mr. Wood and bespoke a coach to be here this day Sevnight, the same Coach Man that usd to drive your Lady^{sh}'s family will go this journey, he said that they could not do with less than six Horses for the Roads in all likelyhood will be very stiff; and that the Oxford Road will be the safest for to go by, Islip is but indifferent travelling even in Summer. We are to go to Stoken-Church the first day and bait at Beaconsfield, and the next day I believe that Wheatley will be the properest place to bait at, and so on to Woodstock" 1734, Nov. 21st. Lady Elizabeth Compton to the same. Dated in Golden Square and unaddressed.

"The number of story's & contradictory reasons given for Lady Suffolk's removing from Court wou'd fill more than ordinary length of one of my Letters (& that generally is een long enough too) my own opinion is that it was her own desire to retreat, her health is bad & the confinement very great, & since her Lord's Death that she was out of danger of falling into his hands, I believe she has been desirous to have Liberty & a little more time at her own command. Others say that she was at Bath too often in company with Lord B——ke &c. & that it a thing agreed on [at] S^t James's that before the Norfolk congress was broke up she should be removed from thence. Lord Hobbard [Hobart] is to be immediately out, & people conjecture that many more are to follow but I believe nothing is yet done. S^r John Rushout who is gone out of town will be able to tell your Lady^{sh} much more than I can, as also about Farinelli he having much more judgment in Musick. All I can say is I think he is charming. A Scholar of M^r Gates's, Beard, (who left the Chappell last Easter) shines in the Opera of Covent Garden & M^r Hendell [Handel] is so full of his Praises that he says he will surprise the Town with his performances before the Winter is over. I suppose you have heard that upon M^r Thompson's (M^{rs} Dunch's Daughter) being so privately buried M^r Thompson has sent to have her Coffin taken up & open'd, upon which it is found she was murder'd. S^t George Oxenden owns the having given orders for her burying, & some people think he must stand a tryal to clear him self of the Murder, it at present occasions a great deal of talk, as does also Lord Falmouth's lying so long unburied. The Widdow refuses to do it, as does also the Heir, & they are all a going to law, his body is still at M^r Trefusis's where he was gone to make a visit when he died. Lord Sidney Beauclerk has the small Pox, it is hoped in a good way, but he will have no Physician, but D^r Mead who is they say in great concern about it—for it seems if he dies without Children the D^r is heir to 1000^l p añ. Lady Salisbury is come up to her youngest son who has the small Pox & in a very good way.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Lady Harcourt complains loudly that no one Lord of what is call'd the Country side has taken any notice of Lord Harcourt since his coming over, & that all the Court has paid him great Compliments both Lords & Ladys, & the Beautys of Richmond, Albemarle, Harvey, &c. —may she says go a great way to biass a young man who has not an inflexible heart. Lord Carteret is a Relation—L^d Litchfield a neighbour in the Country both in Town but have not been near him. if Lady Pomfrett sends to me I will do my self the honour to be your representative & perform your Commissions, as I shall any from dear Lady Northampton that is in the power of your most affectionate

sister and servant

E. COMPTON.

I beg my humble service to my Brother
& young Ladys."

1734, Nov. 28th. The same to the same. Dated in London and unaddressed.

. "On Tuesday Evening I had the honour to represent your Ladyship at Pomfrets & [I] wish you joy of your God-son Thomas Fermor, he is like all the rest of her Children a very fine lusty one, & bawled most lustily at the time of his Christening, which they say is a good Sign your Partners were the Duke of S^t Albans & Lord Lovell, all by Proxy. The Duke in Town but excused his coming upon acc^t of Lord Sidney Beauclair's having the small-Pox & Lord Lempster [Leominster] stood for him; the other down in Norfolk, his B[rother] the Vice-Chamberlain Coke represented. M^r Fermor & M^{rs} Fermor were there, no other company, but the other eight Children who were highly delighted by being all present. Lady Lempster is confined to her chamber by a hurt she had on her Leg by falling down as she was getting into her Coach; (as you desired I left 10 guineas). Lady Harcourt is confined by spraining her foot by falling down as she came out of the Opera-house; she is not yet able to perform the Ceremonys at Assembly but after Christmas designs to have one. The Dutchess of Dorset is extremely ill again, here in Town; she looked sadly when she came up. 'Tis said Lord Scarborough has positively refused to go into Ireland, & that the Duke of Devonshire who is now named, does decline it. Lord Godolphin's Gold Key (as Groom of the Stole) is given to Lord Pembroke, he was offer'd a Pension but that he generously rejected. There is sad to do amongst the Ladys at Court, several of them not so much as speaking to each other, unless it is (in plain English) flatly to contradict what each other has said. The Queen came yesterday morning out for the first time. I was this morning at

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

St James's She is grown a good deal thinner in the face & paler than she was, but I think she abundantly better for it, & she says she thinks she has got quite rid of all complaints, but the Town says she has got a sore Legg which is very bad, but I don't know whether that is true. Lady Mary Sanderson has been very ill ever since I came to town, & complain'd of great pain in her arm 'tis now feared to be a Cancer. The Dowager (Newport) Lady Torrington is very ill at Bath with a dead Palsie. Lord & Lady Ranelagh don't come up to Town till Xmas. Lord Malton is made an Earl, they talk of some more as Lord Abergavenny (& one or two besides) which if so I think it very hard as he was the first Baron that the Patent for one of the youngest should be passed before his, & eight new Creations are talked on. I never heard them all & some I have forgott. Sr W^m Strickland, Mr Edgcomb, Sr Rowland Wynne are some of them. Lord Winchelsea desired I wou'd present his humble service to Lord Northampton, & begged he wou'd be so good as to let him know, if whilst you lived in your house in Grosvenor-street, you ever found any inconvenience by smelling of shores or any complaint that cannot be discovered in going to see a house without living in it. Coll Schutz being going to part with it, Lord Winchelsea has some thoughts of buying it, but before he enter'd upon a Bargain desired I would ask my Brother this Question and have his answer. Lady Betty Fielding lives with him, to take care of the little Girl, Mr Buncombe's Brother has written a Play & last night was the Poetts night, I was there & I think he had a prodigious full house, especially considering that the Town is not near so full as it will be after Xmas. a Play comes out now with great disadvantage for 'twas sadly acted, otherwise I think 'tis really a good Play, 'tis a very deep Tragedy, the name Junius-Brutus, & the Story the conspiracy of his two sons Titus & Tiberius & their deaths. I sent the Ducks this day se'n-night down to Ashby you see I now neither stand upon ceremony nor brevity, but [am] glad of all opportunities of assuring [you] my Dear Lady Northampton that I am most sincerely

Your Affectionate Sister

I beg my most humble service to both the Lords & 3 Lady's.

& humble Servant
E. Compton."

1734, Dec. 7th. The same to the same. Dated in Golden Square, and unaddressed.

. "Lady Anne Rushout sends me word her eldest Girl has been very ill, but now so much better she proposes being in Town before Ch'istm^s. My Lady Dow[age]r Northampton & Lady Jane came on Munday, the last is extremely well as ever I knew her, but my Lady is quite confined to her Chair, [she has] very little or no pain with the Gout now, but her feet & Ancles [are] so swelled and weak she cannot sett them down to the Ground. Mr Desbouvrie is dead, [his family] sent a Messenger for Sr John Rushout last Satturday, but if he had come away post immediately he wou'd not have found him alive, he has left one Brother who is of Eaton School. Lady Masham died yesterday she had been long ill & in Doctor's hands, 'tis said she had great Riches, [she has] left only [an] Only Son & a Gran-Daughter about 7 year old who always lived with her. Poor Lady Salisbury has been in great Pain for her Son who since the small-Pox has had a bad Feavour, & so weak she much feared his recovery, but is now something better & I hope will do well, for she is vastly fond of him, & he has by every body an extraordinary good character; poor woman she looks mighty thin, but as Mr Cecill recovers so I hope will she too. L^d Oxford they say seemed to decline giving them sisters any trouble or law about the dividend of the D[uche]ss of Montagu's Riches but my Lord Morpeth is resolved to give them all the trouble he can so that they are still in suspence he promised the last Term to make his Plea & have it decided, now it is put off till the next [Term]. Mr Tryon seems to think he goes on successfully with his [Lawsuit], he is now gone down into Northamptonshire to the estate in dispute. Dr Kimberley who was in Town a few days is gone down with him. Coll: Bachwell is come up to Town & laid up hand & foot, [he] has had a most severe fitt of the Gout, but [is] much better in his stomach. I believe I never thought to tell your Ladyship how I was one day surprized at a visit that was made me, it was before I had been any where out of doors [and so soon] after my coming to Town, that I did not know who was in or out of Town or who was sick or well enough to come abroad, when in comes Lord Ferrars; I own I was a little surprized not knowing he was so well, he behaved very sedately [and] enquired much after your Ladyship & [your] family. I have seen him since at the Opera & [he] seems mighty well, he does not lie in Town but has his Lodgings still at Kensington. Lord Clarendon is also very well, & every where about; your neighbour still at Mr French's Sr Jason I remember I heard them speak off when I was at Northwick. I think he is so unhappy in his behaviour no body cares to be much with him, but has Sr Harry Parker been baulked in his Amours & gone down again without a Lady? The Town has given Lord North one, they name Lady Lewisham, but I don't believe it is true, but London news you must take as I can pick it up. I never pretend to vouch for the veracity of it, but to my latest breath will affirm the truth of my being

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Dear Madam,

Your most affection^t

Sister & Servant,

E. COMPTON."

1734, Dec. 12th. George Ballard to ——. Dated at Campden, and unaddressed.

"Rev^d & Honoured Sir!

Fearing you would think me unmindful of my promise, I have made bold to trouble you with a Note to inform you that I sent a Letter by the next Post to London for the Drawings; but as yet have received no answer. I fancy the Gentleman who has 'em, hath made a Tour into Scotland in pursuit of Curiosities, (for I hear he designed such a journey) which I imagine is the reason I have received no answer. I shall be highly pleased as soon as I receive the Drawings to pleasure my Lady Countess [Lady Northampton] with a sight of 'em: There being no Noble Family to which I owe a greater respect then those of Compton & Shirley. To the former for their great Loyalty & sufferings for K. Charles the first. To the later not only for their steady Loyalty to the same Prince: But for the great affection they have bore to the Study of Antiquities, as Sr Tho: Shirley & Sr Hen: Ferrers, an ancestor of my Lady Northampton's by the Maternal side; both which are highly Characteriz'd by Sir W. Dugdale in his Antiquities of Warwickshire. And I am infinitely pleased to find this noble & beloved Study of her ancestors to be lodg'd in her Ladyship. I suppose by the many Pedigrees that have been drawn of those worthy Families already, her Ladyships design is in a Historical way: And believing the Inscriptions on the Monuments in Campden Church may be usefull in such a performance, I have copied 'em & sent you; w^{ch} if you judge proper you may please convey to her Ladyship. I have sent no discriptions of the

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Monuments believing her Ladyship has seen 'em already w^{ch} is all in great hast, from " etc.

1734, Dec. 19th. Lady Penelope Compton to the Countess of Northampton. Dated in Dover Street.

..... " We came hither on Tuesday and had a very good journey tho' I believe the roads every where this year are as bad as possible. I dare say you found them but very indifferent going to Northwick, you sent me word you was there last Moon, I am sorry to find the youngest Girl continues still so weak in her limbs, for not to be able to go yet I think is a sad thing, and really great pity for it was a very fine Child, the eldest I hear is got quite well again, and S^r John and Lady Anne [Rushout] proposes being in town in a few days, my [Dowager] Lady Northampton is still confined with the Gout [so] that I have not seen her yet, but they say she is free from pain and otherwise preety well only very lame, we saw Lady Betty and Lady Jane [Compton] the night we came and they are both very well, I hear the town is but empty but can't tell much of that yet for [I] have seen but few folks nor have not picked up any news, only I find every body seems charmed with Faranelli so that the Opera's are constantly crouded. M^r Gore and Lady Mary [Gore] don't come up till after Xtnas and very soon after that we may expect the pleasure of seeing your Lady^{sh}, for you gave us hopes that you shou'd come a little sooner this year then usual; Lady Margaret [Compton] desires her humble Service to you and my Brother to whom I beg to joyn mine as also to Lord Compton and the Young Ladys and believe me

Dear Lady Northampton

Your Affectionate Sister &

Obedient Humble Servant "

[the Signature is torn off.]

1735, April 13th. Earl of Northampton to the same. Dated at Ashby and unaddressed.

" Before this reaches my Dearest Life you will have seen D^r Cotes, who will tell you how we go on here, & he will tell how our Affairs stand at Tamworth, which I think are in a much better condition than ever, at which I most heartily rejoyce, & hope by this warning your Interest there will never be so hazarded again, & I can assure you our Northamptonshire friends now see, that their Victory here wou'd not have been so compleat had we not succeeded there too. Sir John Dolben & D^r Kimberley dined here yesterday, they both congratulate you, & Sir John who had not heard till I told him that you had taken his Son to a Play, & that he entertained you so well, & was much delighted himself, was very thankfull to you for your kindness to his Son, & mightily pleased at the relation, & which he said would be a better Cordial, than what the D^r had ordered for his Mother, who is in a bad state of health. I writ by Smith to L^d Middleton on friduy, his horses not coming for him sooner, & at the same time to Kirkland, & your letters will come to him the same day. The Town Clerk is a sad fellow: which I suspected. I shall finish all here to be in Town on Friday or Saturday. I thought Lady Cath. had been satisfied about the 5^l. I am confident it is right, & 40^l being paid to Mr. Web, there is now due to her 10^l, & 20^l will be due to Mr. Web in July, which makes 70^l. M^r Davys has a brother & Sister with him, I have not seen him these 3 days. M^r Betty was here yesterday, he looks poorly. I pray God bless you & our Dear Children I am

My Dearest Life

Your Most Affectionate

NORTHAMPTON."

1736, March 1st. Richard Wycherley to the same. Dated at Walton upon Trent and unaddressed. A curious business letter from a bailiff or land agent. It begins and ends as follows:—

“ May it please y^r Lady ship

Mr Kirkland not coming to Walton for a considerable time after I came from Compton upon Acc^t of the waters being out (w^{ch} have like to have been the Occasion of several losing their Lives perticularly Abraham Yates & two Gentlemen who were thrown out of the boat into the river the Gentlemen sav^d themselves by Swimming & Abraham by a whip which was thrown to him) for which reason I only had opportunity of inquiring abo^t Dickinsons house who insisted upon forty Shillings a Year

My Wife seems to be very easy at present and give a helping hand towards a Livelyhood teaching two or three Girls to sow &^a & I hope & dont doubt but if we have encouragment from all sides we shall do very well but if the reverse my Wife being a timorous Woman and not used to the Frowns of the World will I am afraid run upon some extream for which I should be sincerely sorry having took a good deal of pains hitherto to prevent any such thing.

She has sent for her Sister & so far as I can understand my Mother's story [her Sister] has send word She shall come. I think its a very imprudent Action but being poor and unable to do for her as she might expect I am obliged to yield up the Ghost tho sorely against my Will.

If there sho^d be anything in this Letter not pleasing to Y^r Ladyship I hope y^r Goodness will excuse me for I do assure Y^r Ladyship I have no design in me [to offend].

My humble duty Waits upon My Lord & y^r Ladyships Family.”

[1737], April 12th. Lady Anne Rushout to the same.

“ Dear Lady Northampton,

The Painter who worked for us at Northwich & Mr Gore at Tring, his Name is Wimpew he lives in Axe Yard Westminster his Price with us was 3 shill^s a day and no Victuals nor lodging but Mr Gore gave him his price & Victuals too, & now he seems to insist upon that. He is a very good workman and painted our House very well.”

1737, June 9th. Lady Jane Compton to the same. Dated at Bloomsbury Square and unaddressed.

. . . “ Poore Lady Anne [Rushout] fell into her usual misfortune last Tuesday . . . the little thing was judged to have been a son; she desires me to present her service to you ”

Same date. John Marshall to the same.

. “ the Damask secte [settee?] will come by the next returne wth Oriss Lace and other Mettarialls for making a pare of w[indow] Curtains and Vallands.”

1737, June 11th. Lady Elizabeth Compton to the same.

. “ [I] am not surprized that the Consul [Charles Compton] should be desirous of the next Little-ones being so well answered for, and according to the old saying I heartily wish it might have all the advantages arising from so accomplished a God-Father's [Lord Compton's] looking into the Bason, which would be a great Prospect of all future happiness both to Father and Son.

Poor Lady Anne Rushout is very unfortunate that notwithstanding all her care and Precaution she could not prevent losing her little one, but she is now thank God as well as can be expected after it, but very weak, last Tuesday was an unlucky day for those mishaps, it happening also to

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Lady Carnarvon and Lady Talbot, but those two occasioned by Frights, one by having her Pocket-Picked at the Play-house & the other by Miss Talbot's falling down stairs, whereas Lady Anne had nothing of that nature that she could impute it too.

Lady Francys Nassau has owned her being married to Captain Elliott to the very great grief of my Lord Grantham, which is much encreased by his discovering also now that Lady Cowper had a great share in the carrying on of the affair, it makes many People think that these disappointments with the many losses in his Family will incline him to marry again, were the Widdowers as much enclined to do so as the Widows I think there could be no doubt of it. Lady Erwin is this morning married to Coll: Douglass, a Lady happening yesterday to dine in company with M^{rs} Nugent, & hearing Lady Erwin was to be married to day, very unluckily cried out she thought the Devil was in all Widows this year. She was sadly frightened when she found she had said such a Paw-word [sic]."

1737, June 21st. John Marshall to the same.

About furniture and materials the writer has forwarded.

1737, June 23rd. Peter Smaggett to the same at Castle Ashby. Dated "from the Cabinet in Frith Street Soho."

About furniture.

1737, July 2nd. Lady Elizabeth Compton to the same. Dated Golden-square and unaddressed.

. . . . "Lady Erwins match had long been talked on but my Lord Carlisle was so much against it & gave so good reasons for being so, that I believe all her Friends wished it might have been prevented, (& perhaps when it is too late she may wish so too). I don't know whether it is the Gentleman you met at the D[uche]ss of Ancaster's, they say he is a very handsome man, very covetous & very positive & does already find great fault with her laying out too much money upon her House, & in her Dress; so that unless she has reserved some money in her own Power, 'tis thought she will not get much. She has been presented to the Prince and Princess of Wales & had a favourable reception, more than M^{rs} Townshend had of the King when she went to be so, upon having the place of one of the Dressers to the Princess of Wales, he positively refused seeing of her. Lady Albermale had a very narrow escape of her Life, after the Review was over, going to get into the Queen's Coach (she being in waiting) the mob threw her down, the Horses being very unruly she very narrowly escaped being run over"

1737, July 5th. Lady Penelope Compton to the same. Dated in Dover Street. The seal represents a Cupid holding a bow, and its motto is "TOST-OV-TARD."

. "Lady Margaret and self are very much obliged by my Brothers and your Ladys^{ms} being so kind to desire it and whatever day next week you please to fix will be ready to obey your summons, and in order thereto shall send our things by the Carrier this week, as we have just now settled it with Lady Betty. Lady Anne Rushout is purely recovered S^r John and she went yesterday to Harrow, [she is] ordered to drink some waters that are near her there [at Highwood] which if they agree with her will determine them what time they shall stay there."

1737, July 7th. Lady Elizabeth Compton to the same. Dated in Golden-square.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

..... my sisters in Doverstreet as well as my self will with great pleasure set out next Tuesday for Wooburn; where with your Ladyships Coach we only beg a chair that holds two and one saddle-horse, we proposing one of the Abigails & one of the Men to go in that, and the other footman on Horseback, & what we bring from London will then return by a Boy that comes along with Mr Woods Coach since the small-Pox has been amongst the Boys at Fulham School I am very glad Lord Compton was not gone back Lady Francys Bland is very happy in her eldest Sons being just recover'd of the small-Pox.

Lady Mary Tryon came last night to Town, & proposes setting out to morrow for Northamptonshire. She is grown pritty big. Mr Sandys is [glad] I think that she was not catched upon the Road, for [she] has been every day this fortnight in expectation of her Midwives coming up to Town (she was to have in the coach that returned from her son's burying, but a Lady in the Country happening just then to lye-in stopped her) to have gone the journey down with her, and on Monday last she was brought to Bed, the child was born alive but [is] not likely to live."

Same date. Peter Smaggett to the same. Unaddressed, and dated "From the Cabinet Warehouse in Frith Street Soho."

About furniture sent down to Ashby.

1737, July 12. Lady Anne Rushout to the same. Dated at Harrow. "I was advised to drink some waters at Highwood-hill which I have constantly done ever since I came here I go out at 7 a clock and am about an Hour and q^r going there every morning they are reckoned of the nature of Tunbridge [water] I was yesterday to make a Visit to Mr Sandys who was brought [to bed] the Night after I came out of town the child lived 2 days, she is as well as can be expected. I hear [the Dowager] Lady Northampton & Lady Jane [Compton] are at Scarborough, Sir John Rushout was obliged to leave me on Sunday to go to Evesham where I am affraid he will meet with much trouble; some whom he thought his friends has deceived him & turned out the Recorder & made alterations in the Chamber. Lord Wilmington came to see me from Chiewick on Sunday."

1737, July 26th. The same to the same. Dated at Harrow and unaddressed.

..... "the water I drink every Morning gets me a very good Stomach and agrees with me I am now as well in Health as ever I was in my life, go out very much in my Chair & Coach, but walking these steep hills is a little too much for me. I was yesterday to wait on L^d Wilmington he has engaged me to come again and dine wth him on Saturday, we propose leaving this place the 8 Aug: and going to Tring from thence make a short Visit to L^d & L^v Jersey before we get to Worcestershire. I shall spend great part of this Summer upon the ramble. I hear poor L^d Scarborough is extreemly ill & feared wont recover the Blow he got on his Head from the misfortune of being overturned in his Coach; L^v Salisbury sent to me to day but I think is not fixed at Bushy. I am very sorry for poor M^{rs} Robison she certainly will be a great loss to her Daughters. I am glad M^r Stratford has had the good fortune to dispose of his Estate so well, I believe tis easier to find Sellers then Buyers especially where the purchase is large, I know several people that have been long endeavouring to dispose of Estates that can't do it."

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.
--

1737, Augt. 13th. Nicholas Guillibean to the same, at Castle Ashby. Dated Fulham.

"My Lady We are got to this place thank God very safe & well & in good time & His Lord^{sh} is not at all fatigued, we found all here in good health I am with submission" etc.

1737, Augt. 15th. M^{rs} M. Tryon to the same. Dated at Bulwick and unaddressed.

Proposing a visit and begging to be met at Wellingborough.

[1737, Augt.—.] Lord Compton to the same. Undated and in a child's handwriting.

"Madam,

I dont doubt the return of your Ladyships Birthday must give great delight to every one that has the Pleasure and Happiness to be acquainted with you, surely then it must give an inexpressible Delight to me and my sisters who are so much obliged to you for your Love and Tenderness towards us; I assure your Ladyship I most sincerely congratulate you of it, and heartily wish you may see a great many of them in health and Prosperity. We have had some little Rain since we came to Fulham, but I hope there has not been enough about Ashby to hinder you from riding out. We had a very good journey and found the Roads exceeding, but they were very empty there being but very few Travellers. M^r Lee just called here, he said he was going to the Bishop's, but whether he will dine there or not I cannot tell. Pray present my Duty to my Pappa and my Service to my Uncle, Aunts, and Sisters, together [with] my Congratulations to them on your Ladyship's Birthday. I will now trouble you no longer only beg that you will believe me to be

Madam
Your most Dutyfull Son
JOHN COMPTON."

1737, Augt. 16th. Nicholas Guillibean to same. Addressed to the Earl at Castle Ashby and dated at Fulham.

"My Lady

My Lord Compton is thank God in very good health and goes on in his Studys with Chearfulness. He found his form advanced in Martial and Horace. Mr. Hume brought some paterns & took measure of His Lord^{sh} last Sunday My Wife & I return my Lord and Your Lady^{sh} thanks and are very much obliged for the fine piece of Venison & the Rabets your Lady^{sh} has been pleased to give us. My Lord presents his Duty."

Same date. Hannah Bretland to the same. Unaddressed.

I had the Pleasure of seeing dear Lord Compton on Saturday who tould mee all the good family was well, which was a great pleasure to mee at the same time I receved a Side of Venyson and i humbly beg Leve to retourn my good Lord and Lady northampton my most harty thanks; i was very sory to heir of Lady mary Gore's death."

1737, Augt. 17th. Lady Anne Rushout to the same. Unaddressed. Dated at the Cross Inn, Oxford.

. "I am convinced you will compassionate the Surprise I have had by Sir John being taken so ill upon his journey & [will be] glad to hear he is better the suddenness of our loss of [my sister] poor L^y Mary [Gore] make my fears more than I believe the cause required"

Augt. 23rd, 1737. Nicholas Guillibean to the same. Addressed to the Earl as before and dated at Fulham.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

"My Lady,

My Lord Compton continues thank God in very good health and uses what time he can spare from his Books in walking for I take his Lord^{sh} out most Days when the weather permits as soon as School is over til Supper time which is about an Hour."

1737, Aug. 27th. Lady Anne Rushout to the same.

"I was so uneasy about poor Betty, I could not write one word, her fever was very high & the inflammation in her Throat encreased so fast we were obliged to have her Blooded . . . I thank God she is very much recovered Dr Mackenzie from Worcester left her Yesterday Morning . . . Sir John recovers his Strength and appetite very slow . . . I believe his uneasiness for the poor child's illness, has been one cause of his not recovering faster" . . .

1737, Sept. 3rd. Nicholas Guillibean to the same. Addressed to the Earl at Castle Ashby and dated at Fulham.

"My Lady,

My Lord Compton continues thank God in very good health. His Lord^{sh} drinks no Malt Drink the beer here being newer then what He used to have at Home makes him dislike it so I thought to mention this to Your Lady^{sh} because this is about the time your Lady^{sh} used to order some wine for His Lord^{sh}'s use. My Lord presents his Duty" etc.

1737, Sept. 9th. Thomas Drake to the same, at Castle Ashby. Dated at Whatcot.

After thanks for a present of venison and compliments the writer goes on . . . "what I wrote was for the sake of my poor wife's health & the benefit of my Dear Children; I own Whatcot to be a most acceptable Gift, and beyond my deserts; & shall ever endeavour to make myself serviceable to the Hon^{ble} family" . . .

1737, Sept. 13th. Lady Jane Compton to the same. Dated at Studley.

To announce that the Dowager Lady Northampton and herself will start for Ashby on the 19th and expect to reach there on the 23rd.

Same date. Nicholas Guillibean to the same. Addressed to the Earl at Castle Ashby. Dated at Fulham.

"My Lady,

My Lord Compton has caught a Cold which I hope will prove to be nothing but the Distemper that goes about . . . early in the morning I sent for Mr Lounds . . . he ordered his Lord^{sh} some of Gascoin's Powders every 6 hours" . . .

Same date. Isaac Lowndes to the same. Dated in London.

Describing Lord Compton's complaint and his treatment of it.

1737, Sept. 15th. The same to the same. Dated in London.

Reporting Lord Compton to be better, but not yet well.

Same date. Nicholas Guillibean to the same. Addressed to the Earl at Castle Ashby and dated at Fulham.

"My Lady,

My Lord Compton is thank God very well recovered."

1737, Sept. 16th. Lady Jane Compton to the same. Dated at Studley.

To explain that the Dowager Lady Northampton is prevented setting out for Ashby by an attack of gout.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Same date. Lord Compton to the same, in a child's handwriting.

"Madam

I perceive myself now I think quite recovered of my little Indisposition, bleeding at the Nose did me I believe a great deal of good, for it bled a good deal Tuesday night and Wednesday. My Master and I were last Sunday to see my Lady How at Parsons Green who has invited me to dine there some day. Colds are so frequent in London that hardly anybody escapes them, which is occasioned chiefly I believe by the uncertainty of the Weather. I suppose you are now a good deal taken up with Company at Ashby, that came to the Races. I hope you had a good deal of Diversion there. Pray give my duty to my Pappa and my Service to all the rest of the Family.

I am,

Madam,

Your Ladships most Dutyfull Son

JAMES COMPTON."

1737, Sept. 22nd. Nicholas Guillibean to the same. Addressed as before.

.... "I have writ to Mr. Agutter as your Ladys^d commanded me for 3 Doz: of Red Port" 1737, Sept. 26th. Lady Anne Rushout to the same. Dated at Northwick and unaddressed.

.... "Lady Jane [Compton] writ to me how much she was concerned at being prevented waiting on you at Ashby I expect Lord Coventry and his 3 Sons to dinner (& to stay here) in their way to Oxford & these moonlight nights every day [we have] company. S^r Rob^t & Lady Cox dine with us to day. M^{rs} Sheldon I believe is gone to Tesmon to M^{rs} Earmer who is near lying in. M^r Skeldon is soon to bring us a new Neighbour the lady's Name is Smith. M^r Plowden makes the match, he is employ'd in the same affair for one of his own Daughters to a M^r Wright a Gentleman of his own opinion, but M^r Plowden is not pleased with it" Same date. Mrs. Charles Compton to the same. Dated at Cintra and unaddressed.

.... "Thank God my little Girls have all got mighty well over the small Pox & will none of them be mark'd, as to my little boy he has not had it]but is perfectly well, & seems very strong. I have left him at Lisbon thinking him too young for a journey, his sisters are with me among woods & mountains which this place abounds with & rambles about, from morning to night as for [my husband] M^r [Charles] Compton he went to Lisbon two days ago & do not expect him here till the Packet sails for England, but was truly concerned at the melancholy news of poor Lady Mary Gore's Death

I cannot help wishing myself with the agreeable company at Castle Ashbey where I have spent my time with great satisfaction, but must have patience & be contented tho' I often think with a mixture of joy & sorrow upon past times, I hope it will be my fate sometime or other to see my friends in England but till that happy hour comes will endeavour to content my self with thoughts that it is for my Childrens good I shou'd remain here.

It was with great regret I left my Quinto & no time can ever make the Town so agreeable to me as the Country but Lisbon is very healthy & I believe [has] very good air which makes it supportable.

I am much obliged to Lord Compton for the Honour he has done me [in promising to stand God father to my son] & shall obey his orders

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
—

punctually. I wish when ever he has the small Pox it may be as favourable to him as it has been to my family, [I] do not wonder at his not returning to School upon that account for it is a distemper with reason dreaded by every body & great joy when well over, I wish his Godson may prove like him in every respect, for by all accounts he is a most charming youth, & I hope he is now convinced I love his uncle Charles & is reconciled to me upon that account, which I beg your Ladyship will tell him with my most humble Service.

As we have nothing but Rocks to talk to [we] can have no news to make a Letter tolerable so [I] will trespass no longer on your Patience than to beg you will believe me with the greatest Respect

Dear Madam

Your Ladyships

Most affec: Sister &

Obedient Humble Servant

MARY COMPTON."

1737, Oct. 1st. Nicholas Guillibeu to the same. The address torn off. Dated at Fulham.

"My Lady,

My Lord Compton continues thank God in very good health as all the boys at our School likewise do, we have had very wet weather for above this week which made me send last Week for a Matt for his Lord^{sh} Chamber to keep it clean so that it may not want washing so often for fear his Lord^{sh} should not take Cold by the rooms not being thoroughly dry. His Lord^{sh} is much more in his Chamber than formerly a writing his Exercises."

1737, Oct. 2nd. Lady Jane Compton to the same. Dated at Studley.

"[I] am directed by [the Dowager] Lady Northampton to present her humble service to you & assure your La^{sh} how very sensible she is of your goodness to her, both in regard of your desire to see her at Ashby, and your obliging concern for her being ill; she is now pritty well again in every respect but lame, [I] can't say she gets any ground as to that, not being able to bear yet the least upon her feet, that I fear she will still be confined here some time longer; & the weather being now very bad, I doubt [it] will make the Roads so, for our journey up, which being a very long one gives her a great deal of uneasiness at the thoughts of it; I am sorry to hear you have had a Cold, & that my Br[other the Earl] has been ill, but by a Letter from Lady Betty today I have the satisfaction of hearing he is well again; they say it is very sickly in most places, & that few Familys escape either in town or Country, not but that this I am in holds very well. I much wonder M^{rs} Tate shu'd chuse to come to Northampton at so publick a time as the Horse-races, I hear a great deal of her in this Country not much to her advantage, she was at Scarborough when I was there, I believe she is not greatly pleased with me, for really I did not care to renew her acquaintance, she seemed inclined to it by sending to enquire after Lady Northampton & me as soon as ever she came there, we took no sort of notice of it, so that she proceeded no farther, nor did I see any body that seemed desirous to keep Company with her she generally came into the Rooms alone, unless [with] Mr Tate, who sometimes came in with her.

Lady Northampton joins with me in humble Service to my Lord & the rest of your Family & I am with great regard

Dear Madam

Your Obedient & Affectionate
humble Servant

J. COMPTON."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1737, Oct. 8th. Nicholas Guillibean to the same. Addressed to the Earl at Castle Ashby and dated at Fulham.

"My Lady,

My Lord Compton continues thank God in very good health. His Lord^{sh} is making a Latin Epistle in verse to send to the Consul [Charles Compton] by one of his School fellows who is going to Lisbon."

1737, Oct. 11th. The same to the same. Addressed and dated as before.

"My Lady,

My Lord Compton has got a little running Cold in His Head but is otherwise thank God in very good health. I gave his Lord^{sh} some Hysop water last night and if his Cold is no better to night I'll give him the Powder which Mr Lounds sent some time since."

1737, Oct. 13th. The same to the same. Addressed and dated as before.

"My Lady,

My Lord Compton continues thank God in very good health all but his Cold which hangs upon him still. I have given his Lord^{sh} a paper of Powders these 2 last Nights which I hope will do him good. His Lord^{sh} presents his Duty etc."

PAPERS RELATING TO THE AMERICAN PLANTATIONS, ETC.

CAROLINA PAPERS AND LETTERS, 1699-1743.

[No date.] Doctor Coxe's Memorial in Relation to Carolana. Unsigned. 10½ pp.

1699, Dec. 21st. Copy of the Report of the Board of Trade, to King William III., on Dr. Cox's Memorial, &c. [6 pp.] Together with an Account of the Commodities of the growth and production of the Province of Carolina, alias Florida. [4½ pp.]

The Report, which is in favour of Dr Cox's claim to the proprietorship of Carolina, is signed by the Earl of Stamford, Lord Lexington, Philip Meadows, William Blathwayte, John Pollexfen, Abraham Hill, and George Stepney.

[Temp. Will. III. or Anne.] A description of Carolina. Unsigned and undated. 2½ pp.

1719, Jan. 29th. Copy of the General Assembly's Answer to the [eight] Queries sent by the Hon^{ble} the Lords Commissioners of trade and plantations relating to the State of South Carolina. 10 pp. Signed by order of the Commons House of Assembly, by T. Hepworth (Speaker), Hovenden Walker, Alexander Parris, B. Schenckingsh, George Chicken, Samuel Priolean, and James Moore. Also by Richard Allein, Rich Beresford, Joseph Morton, Thomas Waring Thomas Smith, and Samuel Eveleigh, [bracketed together as the] Council.

1719, Augt. 10th. Queries from the Lords of Trade about Carolina, with Answers thereto by John Barnwell.

11th query.—"What is the Number of Inhabitants, Whites and Blacks?"—The Number of white Inhabitants have been lately computed at 9,000 Souls and the Number of Blacks att 12000.

12th query.—Are the Inhabitants increas'd or decreas'd of late & for what reasons?—Ans^r: Within these last five years the white Inhabitants have annually decreased by Massacres of the Indians, the Flying off of great numbers to Places of greater Safety, & the Lords Proprietors refusing Land to new Comers, & the great taxes that were annually raised prevented others to come in.

MARQUES
TOWNSEND
MSS.

Yett the number of blacks in that time have very much increased, for the Pitch & tarr trade prodigiously Encreasing, have made the Inhabitants run into buying of blacks to the great indangering [of] the Province.

13th Query.—What is the Number of the Militia?—Answer. The Number of [white] men From 16 to 60 Years of Age are computed att about 2000 men [all of whom are bound to serve, and] most of whom being continually employed in the Indian Warrs, Alarms, & Expeditions are very expert able men, little inferior to disciplined troops.

21st (and last) Query.—What are the Establishments, Civil & Military within that Government, and what Officers hold by Patent immediately from the Crown?—Answer: Very uncertain & distracted; and we know of none besides the Custom-house officers that have any place immediately under the Crown most of whom have Sallarys p^d them in Great Brittain.

The Lords Proprietors had a Govern^r his Sallary 200^{li} p ann.

A Secretary whose Sallary was 40^{li} p ann.

A Chief Justice whose Sallary was 60^{li} p ann.

An Attorney-Generall att 40^{li} p ann.

A Receiver Gen^l

A Surveyor Gen^{ral} } only Perquisites without Sallarys.

1719-20, Feb. 22nd. "A description of Pansecola in the hands & possession of the French: A Description of Moble, and a Description of Missecippi, in a letter signed by Thomas Smith and addressed to Joseph Boone Esq^r, Agent for the Province of Carolina." 2½ pp.

1720, May 25th. Copy of Memorandum setting out that:—

The present proprietors of the provinces of North & South Carolina do agree to sell and part with all their Rights Powers & Properties of the s^d Province unto John Falconer, David Barclay, and Thomas Hyam, which were granted to them by a Charter or Charters from King Charles the 2^d for the Consideration of £230,000 etc. 2 pp. Dated at Bedford Row and signed by John Falconer, David Barclay, and Thomas Hyam [the three Quaker purchasers referred to below], and also by James Bertie (for the Duke of Beaufort), Abraham Ashley, J. Dawson, George Granville (for Lord Carteret), J. Colleton, Lord Craven, and Joseph Boone for Joseph Blake.

1720, Sept. 1st. The Present Establishmt of the 100 men maintained by the Assembly of South Carolina in their three Frontier Garrisons reduced to Ster[ling] money. Written and signed by John Barnwell, one of the three Commissioners paid by the Assembly to superintend these garrisons. 1 page.

Note.—The total charge for this Colonial force is £3,214 per ann.

1720? Draft of a letter in the handwriting of John Barnwell. Unsigned and unaddressed.

"Where as y^r Lordship directed me to make a Computation of the Lands lying between Carolina Settlements and the French, w^{ch} is very difficult to doe wthout an actual Survey.

If I knew y^r Lordship's design in requiring it, [it] is probable I might be able to answer the expectation after another manner, however I will doe the best I can.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

In the First place Dr Cox pretends a right to all the Land lying to the South and West of Alatomaha River by a prior Charter to the Lords Proprietors of Carolina w^{ch} is by him called Carolana, & th^o he made some faint attempts to begin a settle^t yet he never yet could accomplish it, And if he proved to have a better right to those parts then the Prop^r of Carolina he may be prevailed on to part wth it to the Crown, for a small Matter, or the same may be forfeited by disuse.

I am informed he is reviving his Pretentions in order to make a bubble of it.

2^{dy}. Now the land lying between Savano River and Alatomaha River was by the Proprietors of Carolina erected into a Margravate by the name of Azilia in the year 1717 & granted to one S^r Robert Montgomery & to his heirs for ever paying yearly a penny per acre quit rent as the land become possessed by him or his Assigns, Provided he did begin his Settle^t in three yeares; Now the three yeares are expired, & yet he pretends he has an equitable right to it & designs to dispute the same att Law wth the Prop^r. In the main time he had open'd books & took in Subscriptions for 2 millions Ster^s in order to bubble it but the late act of Parlim^t put a stop to it, Yet he is still endeavoring to bring his designs to pass.

This Country of Azilia by Computation may have Fifteen Millions of acres but not above the tenth part fitt for Settle^{ment}s all the rest being vast pine barrens only fitt for Pasturage for Cattle.

3^{dy}. All the Lands that are good for anything between Savano River & Santee River wthin Sixty mile of the Sea is the present settled part of South Carolina and is already bought of the Prop^r by the people there & contains ab^t twelve hundred thousand acres for w^{ch} the Lords has a rent of 500^{li} p. ann there is not above the same quantity between these two rivers & the Mountains good for planting, w^{ch} if they sell as they have done the rest of their lands may amount to 24000^{li} Ster^s but it may be an Age before there will be Settle^{ment}s made so far back.

4^{thly}. Between South Carolina & Virginia there lies a vacant Country as large as Great Britain, w^{ch} nobody as yett does much value, soe it is impossible to compute it only the Lords Prop^r sold the whole Charter to 3 Quakers att 230,000^{li} a Memorand^m of w^{ch} agreem^t I have seen, & find their design was to make a Buble of it, & Mr Boon promised me to lett y^r Lordship have a Copy of it."

1720. An account of Proper Places for Garrisons in Carolina and the absolute Necessity of doing it speedily. Unsigned. 2 pp.

[No date]. A Memorandum on trade with Carolina. Unsigned. 3 pp.

[No date]. A Memorandum on the Indian Trade of Virginia and Carolina. Unsigned. 2 pp.

[No date.] A proposal for the incorporation of a Trading and Colonising Company by the title of the Merchant Proprietors of Carolina. Unsigned. 2 pp.

[No date.] Copy of a letter from Governor James Sutherland to Lord Wilmington? giving a descriptive account of the Colony of South Carolina. Unaddressed. 6 pp.

1727-8, March 4th. Copy of the Lords Proprietors' Letter to the Earl of Westmorland.

"My Lord—We have now the honour of transmitting to your Lordship as Proposer and Mediator in the affaire the Petition we have signed humbly to be lay'd before His Majesty declaring our Inclination to make an intire Surrender of our Propertys in Carolina to His Majesty and the Conditions upon which we are willing to do it.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Upon this Occasion we think it a peice of Justice due to Coll^l Horsey that he should deliver your Lordship the Instrument which is a Preliminary to an Agreement. He has under your Lordship been a Principall Agent in the negotiating and conducting thus far. And as we hope it will in the Event prove verry agreeable to His Majesty we take this Opportunity to recomend him to the Minister under whose Province this affaire may come and also to your Lordship that he may not be a Sufferer by acting so disinterested a part for the General Good. And since by Virtue of the Right of our Charter which we are now proposing to surrender to His Majesty we did humbly present him to His Majesty for His Royal approbation to be Governour of South Carolina, we must now in case this Proposeall takes effect most humbly recomend him as a Person who will be found in all respects qualified for that Trust in the present distracted Circumstances of the Province We hope your Lordship will take in good part the mention we make of him desiring your Lordship will lay it before the Propper Ministers, that we may do him Justice on our parts and his Service in bringing about this affaire may not turn to his Prejudice nor pass without its due Reward.

We have one thing more to take notice of to your Lordship which is, That we never had any propper Notification from Mr Hutchison of his being a Proprietor among us (as is customary and necessary upon those Occasions) and are still ignorant upon what foot that Proprietorship stands, But being informed that he was some time agoe treating for St John Tyrrell's Proprietorship, notwithstanding he declared himselfe against the Surrender of the Sovereignty to His Majesty and never once mett or concerted any Measures for the Settling our offer to His Majesty, we thought it a propper Step in order to make over our offer to His Majesty as full and authentic as possible to tender the Petition to him after we had signed it ourselves without his knowledge or Concurrence, which we did by our Solicitor and he has signed it.

So that now there remains to compleat our whole Number only Lord Carteret and Mr Blake. The latter always resided in Carolina but we are informed has given powers to his Friends here to joine with the rest of the Proprietors in disposing to the Crown, whence we conclude he may be depended upon; and Lord Carteret being now in Ireland upon his Majesty's Service [as Lord Lieutenant] we are in no doubt he will concur in an affaire which seems to be agreeable to all the Ministers and tends so much to the publick good. If we can by any Act of ours forward the concurrence of these two Proprietors we shall be ready to do it. And as we are most of us frequently out of Town we have engaged Coll^l Horsey, with our Secretary Mr Shelton to attend your Lordship's Commands that when your Lordship finds it necessary we may have notice from them and wait upon your Lordship to finish this affaire. We are with great Truth and respect—Your Lordships—Most hum^{ble} & Most Obed^t Servant[s]

Signed. BEAUFORT, CRAVEN, J. BERTIE, H. BERTIE, J. COLLETON."

To the above letter is appended the following:—

[Copy of] "The Earl of Westmoreland's Certificate in favour of Coll^l Horsey wrote with his owne hand under his Case dated 14th of June 1729 & delivered into the Duke of Newcastle's Office.

At the request of Coll^l Horsey I do hereby Certifie That he was the first and Principall Person with whom I treated to bring the Lords Proprietors of Carolina to agree to the Surrender of their Charter to

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

the Crowne, and I have verry great reason to believe that had it not been for his Assiduity & Address on that Occasion the said Agreement would not have been made, which I hope will prove of great Service & benefit to the Crown. The severall Papers referred to in the Case of Coll^l Horsey, some Originalls others true Coppies at the time of their being delievered wherein I was concerned are in my Custody ready to be produced, as also the truth of other Transactions in this affaire which were not in writing I am ready to give Evidence of when called. Thereunto witness my hand.

June 14th, 1729.

Signed WESTMORELAND."

1730, July 28th. An undated memorial.

It quotes some of fundamental constitutions of the province of Carolina, states the nature of the Lords Proprietors' grants of lands, and quotes the opinion of the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General, at this date, to the effect that certain grants of land called Ancient Patents (of which one had been granted to Sir Nathaniel Johnson) were void for uncertainty."

1730-1732. "An account of the several steps taken by the Privy Council upon granting the Georgia Charter."

This account begins with noting the receipt of the Petition of Lord Percival and others on the 17th Sept. 1730, and concludes with stating that the Charter passed the Great Seal on the 9th June 1732.

1731-1732. Several extracts from letters of Robert Johnson, Governor of North Carolina, with reference to his disputes with Mr. St John, Deputy Surveyor General.

1734, Dec. 16th. Governor Gabriel Johnston to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Cape Fear and addressed to "The Right Hon^{ble} Lord President."

"... It is now seven weeks since I arrived here, and found the whole country in the strangest confusion that can well be imagined by the unhappy conduct of my predecessor . . . I have been upwards of 110 miles by water up the two branches of this river and I really think the Thames itself does not surpass the North East branch for beauty and gentleness. I wished for my Lord Chief Baron here 1000 times last moneth, the climate was so serene, the weather so mild, and and the air so balsamick that I am sure his Lordship would have owned he had passed one Nov^r in his life with pleasure . . . I do not doubt getting a pretty good estate in this government without doing the least injury to any person or occasioning any complaint especially if I succeed in the petition I design to present to His Majesty after the assembly for a grant of some lands which lye a great way behind the settlements towards the mountains . . .

1735, Oct. 27th. General Oglethorpe, Governor of Georgia, to the Earl of Wilmington. Dated "From on board the Simond lying in the Downs" and unaddressed.

"My Lord—Before your Lordship went out of town when I had the happiness of discoursing with your Lordship upon the state of affairs in South Carolina your Lordship was so good as to give your sentiments upon the method of strengthening and supporting that important part of his Majesty's dominions in America. I set down in writing, from that conversation the things immediately necessary to be done. His Grace the Duke of Newcastle laid them before his Majesty who was graciously pleased to approve of them (coppys of which I have inclosed to your Lordship).

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

"As the season of the Year prevented my staying for an instruction from the Council for this purpose I hope your Lordship will excuse my taking this liberty of troubling your Lordship least by the numberless weighty affairs that take up your Lordship's thoughts this might possibly be postponed. I hope from your Lordship's patronage and the importance it is to his Majesty's service that your Lordship will be so good as to forward an instruction to the Lievtenant Governor of South Carolina."

The enclosure is as follows:—

"1st. That there be an instruction to the Lievtenant Gov^r of South Carolina to recommend to the Assembly to send down two hundred negroes to work for one year upon building a fortress on the Island of St Simons in Georgia.

"2^d. That the Liev^t Governor of South Carolina be instructed to publish a Proclamation prohibiting all persons whatsoever from running out any lands to the southward of the River Savannah under pretence of their lying beyond the River Alatamaha under any pretence whatsoever.

"3^d. That the Liev^t Governor of South Carolina be instructed to recommend to the Assembly to pass an Act or Acts for contracting with persons of substance and ability for settling the townships and to give to such person or persons such parcels of lands within the Townships and within six miles round the same and such other encouragements and authoritys as the said Assembly shall find necessary for the better peopling of the townships. And that the Lievtenant Governor do sign grants pursuant to such Acts or contracts provided always that the contractor or contractors shall be obliged to settle six hundred white men women and children in the township for which they contract within six years from the date of the grant and to pay the quit rents within ten Years after the grant. And in case the contractor or contractors shall not within six years settle the whole number of six hundred then to forfeit so much of the lands contracted for as shall be proportionable to the number deficient. And also to forfeit all such parts or parcels of lands as he shall not pay quit rent for when the said quit rent becomes due. And that the deputy Governor be impowered to assent to such Acts when passed the Assembly."

1736, Sept. 21st. Observations on the Spanish Memorial of this date.

1736, —. "The right of the Crown of Great Brittain to Carolina, explained." 1½ pp.

1736, Dec. 24th. Copy of letter from the Trustees of Georgia to the Duke of Newcastle. Dated at the Georgia Office, Westminster, and signed by Benjamin Martyn, Secretary to the Trustees. Enclosing the two following reports.

1736, July —. "The Chicksaws Indian talk. 1st Audience. At Savannah in Georgia. Present James Oglethorpe Esqre [Governor of Georgia] — Andrews and T. Jones Interpreters.

"The Chicksaws first produced their Commissions whereby it appeared they had been declared subjects to the King of Great Britain by the Governors of Carolina and were as such entitled to the help and protection they sought for.

"Postubee Chief of the Chic^s.—We are come a great way to see you. The sun was very hot and burnt our heads, and we wanted water, yet we would come. We have many enemies; and beg powder and shot.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

"Another Chickesaw Chief, Mingobemingo.—My brother, my chief your powder and bullets are warriors, they kill their enemies. We walk about very poor ; we want guns.

"Chick. Postubee.—We are come a long way to see our elder brothers, the beloved men, the Scotch Warriors, and the black kings (so the French teach them to call the Clergy). I have seen Charles Town before ; but I now come to see you and like this place exceedingly.

"Mingobemingo.—We heard you was a red woman's child ; Tonny Craig, Tomee Wright, Billy Greg and — Kilkenny told me so ; but now I have seen you, I believe you have as white a body as any in Charles Town. They told us many talks but you see we did not believe them.

"Mr Oglethorpe.—I am a red man, an Indian, in my heart, that is I love them ; do they love me the worse for that ?

Chick. Postubee.—We believe you are a red man in your heart. We have brought our wives and children to see you too.

Mr Oglethorpe.—Is there anything you want to see or to have ?

Chicksaws.—We are come, and have seen you. Our horses are at Savannah Town, and for ought we know may be lost. Yet we will not go till two or three days hence, we must first have another talk.

Having shown an inclination to see the Light House at Tybee, they were asked whether they chose to go to day ; they doubted whether they should have time, till Mr Oglethorpe proposing it Chickesaw Mingobemingo said : Why then we will go to see the great house and the great water, Nay, if you bid us we will go over it.

Mr Oglethorpe.—I wish some of your young men would have gone over with me ; for then they might have had help against their enemies.

Chickesaw Mingobemingo.—We are come into our own town, and our own people, and had we not so many enemies, we would stay here till winter. But I have an old woman to my wife, and I believe every man would take care of his wife, and therefore I would go as soon as possible.

The people of Savannah town said I was going to a French town, and a French man. I told them if they were such, I should die quickly ; that I was an old man, and it was time for me to die. The Creeks, the Chickesaws, Obo hatchee and the White Men all told us so. That we should be tied, and never return, but we have seen you and are satisfied.

The great talk is given out, and we have a great many smaller talks.

Mr Oglethorpe.—Tomorrow by break of day, I will be with you and hear them.

Chickesaw Mingobemingo.—We heard of Georgia in our own Country. They have a great many talks at Savannah town. They told us you were French ; The Abeenche King said so ; but we were resolved to take your talk, and we have taken it.

My heart is glad as yours. You shall have the rest of our talk to morrow."

1736, July 13th. [At] Savannah in Georgia. A second audience. Andrews and Tom Jones Interpreters.

"Chickesaws.—We are come a great way thro' desarts without water in the hot sun. We are glad to see you, and all the beloved men here together. We received a great letter from the great Mico.

We come to you our Mico for assistance. We have had ammunition from the French, but have none now. We want powder and bullets.

'Twas the English first came to our Nation not the French.

We can't tell you the names of all our Enimies, there are so many of them.

The Choctaws, Towassaws, Movilles, and Tomos (these not concerned in the late invasion).

The Yungusses, Tomolohaws (commonly called Ilonois) Nawtowee, and Wrawtonoo: these with the rest that have just now fallen upon us.

Seven hundred men came into our towns twice, but have not killed us all, for some you see are alive yet. The French have forts in all of these Nations, and keep them always in readiness to send against us.

A long time ago we heard from the great Mico. They promised us white men and arms, and to send us white men and writings. The people of Carolina promised them to[o], but never sent them.

We ask nothing besides powder and bullets, but you have a heart.

Mr Oglethorpe.—Have you any friends?

Chickesaws.—None but what are here. But were we to tell you all our enemies, that paper (pointing to him that took down notes) would not hold them all.

The French say your powder makes no noise, your balls drop down as soon as they come out of the guns.

Mr Oglethorpe.—As to that, let some of your young men try, and see whether the powder we give you is good. Take the good and leave the bad.

Chickesaws.—We know it will be good if you give it us. We will not look upon it. The French told us so, but we did not believe them.

Mr Oglethorpe.—But you had better look upon it, lest it should be damaged by coming over the great water.

Chickesaws.—Then we will.

Mr Oglethorpe.—This was needful to talk of. If you have anything else say it.

Chickesaws.—We are but so big (making a small circle with his fingers). You English are so big (making a larger). But the French are quite round us all (stretching out his arms); and kill us like hogs or fowls.

Mr Oglethorpe.—Are the Cherikees your friends?

Chickesaws.—They and they only. The Creeks are almost our Friends, the Albamas Indians are entirely French.

Mr Oglethorpe.—Are the Choctaws as much your enemies as ever?

Chickesaws.—No, the Choctaws came not against us in the late invasion except some straglers.

Mr Oglethorpe.—Till I can get you more help can any come to you from the Cherikees?

Chickesaws.—We do not know. They are red people. You know what you can do.

Mr Oglethorpe.—Which of the Cherikee towns were most friendly to you?

Chickesaws.—Tannasee and Great Tilliquo were our beloved towns, till the Creeks killed their chief warrior.

We are told the French will bring great guns to us, but we do not believe they can.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Mr Oglethorpe.—They can't bring them, but they can bring something like them (granados here described). Therefore it is dangerous to keep within pallisadoes. I was bred to war, and know these things.. I will throw one of them before you. In our wars with them we have come so near the French as this room is wide, and yet could not come quite close. Then we threw these things. I have taken them up and thrown them back again.

Chickesaws.—But the French tell us you have none of them.

Mr Oglethorpe.—That you shall see, they are dreadful if a few men get into a little place. Then if they are thrown, the men can't help themselves.

Chickesaws.—We say the same.

Mr Oglethorpe.—'Twas thus the French caught the Notches in a house, and there they could make no resistance. Keep in the open fields, a good tree these things can't get thro'."

1736-7, Feb. 10th. Governor Gabriel Johnston to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Brompton on Cape Fear River, and addressed to the Lord President.

"My Lord—I should have paid my respects to your Lordship much sooner, if I had not flattered myself from time to time, that I should be able, along with this to send (in obedience to your Lordship's commands) some account of the Natural History of this part of the world. But besides the many unexpected interruptions I alway met with I have not yet seen the best part of the country, the description of which would give the most pleasure. I have indeed been in most of the inhabited parts of the country, and now write from one of the most pleasantly situated plantations in it, about 100 miles from the sea, and tho' there are inhabitants 70 miles above me, yet all this is reckon'd but the fag end of the Province, and the pleasant scenes begin to open near the mountains, where I design to go next Autumn to view the land (for which I take this opportunity to return your Lordship my most sincere thanks) I have lately gott there, and then I hope to be able to afford your Lordship some entertainment, if you will be so good as to excuse my [not] putting it in a botanick dress, with long sounding Greek and Roman names, which have always thrown me into convulsions.—I am much better qualified, and indeed it is a far more easy task to describe the genius and temper of the inhabitants; it is only to imagine the lowest scum and rabble of Change Alley transplanted into a rich and fruitfull country, where with very small labour they can build themselves sorry hutts, and live in a beastly sort of plenty and all the rest of their time devoted to calumny, lying, and the vilest tricking and cheating; a people into whose heads no human means can beat the notion of a public interest, or persuade to live like men, or even to pursue the most commendable and surest methods of acquiring riches—who are a standing proof that refined fraud and dextrous circumvention are not confined to courts, and the politer societies of men, but may be equally found among the meanest, most rustick and squalid part of the species. Among them a cheat of the first magnitude is treated with all the distinction and regard which is usually paid to men of merit, and conspicuous virtue in other parts of the world.

"This is truly, and without any exaggeration, the real character of the generality of people here. There are indeed a few and but a very few men of integrity and candor, by whose assistance I hope we shall be able to people the uninhabited parts of the Province with a better race of men. Before my arrival there was no such thing as recovering

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

private debts, but for paying the King his rents, it never once enter'd into their thoughts. They fancied they had taken sufficient precautions against that, and I believe they will scarce ever forgive me for shewing them that they reckon'd without their host. When I look back I am really amazed how we have been able to carry this and several other important points, considering what small countenance we have had from our superiors in England, and that there is no sufficient jail in the whole Province, nor nothing which deserves the name of Militia.

"Upon my first beginning to do business here I imagined like most young beginners, that with a little assistance from home, I should be able to make a mighty change in the face of affairs, but a little experience of the people, and reflection on the situation of things at home has absolutely cur'd me of this mistake. I now confine my care entirely, to do nothing, which upon a fair hearing (for misrepresentations are unavoidable among such a sett of men) can be reasonably blamed, and leave the rest to time, and a new sett of inhabitants, tho I wish our biennial law was repeal'd. It would make the getting of a reasonable Assembly vastly more practicable than it is at present.

"It is a great happiness that Her Majesty is so highly delighted with American silk, tho in that affair as well as in every thing relating to Georgia, the people of England seem to me to be strangely deluded. The balls [cocoons] were purchas'd by the bushel in Charlestown and the only person in America who can wind them off[f] is a Piedmontese whom Mr Oglethorpe quarreled with soon after, and I have him now on my plantation, and will not easily part with him. I sent a specimen of his performances to Mr Macculloh which I believe will equal any thing done in Georgia. I made but a small beginning last year, and have now 1400 white mulberry trees, and expect to raise as many thousand against next year. Besides if no cross accident happen I don't despair of having 20 acres of vineyard and will soon be able to send considerable quantities of wine to England, so that tho I should be debarred from doing much good to this province as Govr, I hope I shall be able to do a great deal as a planter, I thank God I like my present situation extremely well, and shall never forgett how much I owe my happiness to your Lordship. In a little time I shall have all the conveniences and pleasures about me, which can be had in this climate, and tho' the silk and wine should both miscarry (which I reckon from what I have seen to be impossible) I am sure of remitting in a year or two commodities of my own raising to the value of 4 or 500*l*. yearly home, and to be every year enlarging my remittances.

"Hitherto indeed and even at present it is a little hard, for I had all the ground to clear from trees, and my salary being paid in bills of currency of this Province, where we cannot as yet purchase any thing that will bear a reasonable price at home, I have not had it in my power to send over much money, yet I have made a shift to make most of my creditors easy except Mr Wright, and it is a most chagreening circumstance to me, that I have not been able to satisfy the only person, who could tiere your Lordship with his complaints, the thought of it have often made me almost distracted.

I am heartily sorry that the several pregnant opossums I sent last year should have all miscarried, I hope to have better luck this time. The trees I hope came safe.

Against I can get an opportunity I am laying out for a pair of young buffaloes male and female, they are vastly larger than those of Asia, none of the American quadrupeds approach them in bigness.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

The bunch on their back is reckon'd a great delicacy, I wish my Lord Chief Baron [Sir James Reynolds] had one of them dressed by a French cook, I believe it would relish better than his pottage blanc or the rest of his odious bill of fare. Before I conclude I cannot forbear taking notice to your Lordship of the excessive cold we had here last moneth I never felt any thing so severe in any part of Brittain, the ice was excessively thick in a warm room where there was a good large fire."

1737, April 18th. Daniel Hanmer to Lord Wilmington. Dated in North Carolina, and unaddressed.

The writer complains of Governor Johnston's cruelties to him, and prays his Lordship's interest to procure him the post of Surveyor General of Customs for the Southern District of North America, in the place of George Phenney Esq. who has been dead about four days.

1737, June 2nd. Governor Gabriel Johnston to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Cape Fear, and unaddressed.

"My Lord—As Mr. Phenney Surveyor General of the Customs for the Southern District of America is lately dead, I had some thoughts of endeavouring to succeed him in that post, and to resign what I now have, as it is not possible to hold both, but should be much better pleased if I could by any means obtain it for my brother Samuel Johnston who would serve for one half of the salary which is in all 500*l.* per ann. . . . All business is at a stand here untill we hear from the Board of Trade and the Attorney General which I am afraid will not be in haste. These delays are terrible misfortunes to all concerned in distant administrations. Unless there arrives soon some vigorous declaration from home, or an independent company, it will be impossible to keep things long in any tolerable order here. I am exceedingly happy here as a planter, and have only the consolation of being conscious to my self, that it is no fault of mine that I am not equally so as Governor. I beg pardon for detaining your Lordship so long with my affairs. I am with the most profound respect etc. GAB: JOHNSTON."

1739, March 1st. Governor Gabriel Johnston to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Newburn.

"My Lord,—I have just now put an end to another Session of Assembly, and it is with great pleasure I inform your Lordship that they have behaved themselves most dutifully to His Majesty, and with a much greater regard to his governor than I ever expected. Among other good laws past there is one by which a village most conveniently situated at the meeting of the two great branches of Cape Fear River, is erected into a township by the name of Wilmington. The good navigation, and many other natural advantages of this town will very soon make it the capital of this Province.

"I could at present dispose of the 60,000 acres of land your Lordship intended for me exceedingly to my advantage, but I have neither gott a deed for that land from M^r Muccullôh, nor so much as his obligation which he gave, or ought to have given, to M^r W^m Sharp to make it over to me. If your Lordship would be so good as only to mention this affair to M^r Sharp I don't doubt but he would soon bring it to a happy conclusion 1740, April 29th. James Glen, Governor of South Carolina, to Lord Wilmington. Dated in London and unaddressed.

"My Lord,—When your Lordship procured for me the Government of Carolina, I made a firm resolution (which nothing shall ever make me depart from) that I would never again give you any more trouble

"It is near two years since I was appointed, since which time I solemnly declare to your Lordship, that I am above two thousand pounds out of pocket My living here so long (tho' frugally) has been attended with great expence, and the rent of a house, taken for me in Carolina at £100 sterling per annum has been running on, where there is slaves, horses &c. eating me up.

"I have been obliged to mortgage my estate in Scotland for £1500, and I owe several small sums besides, for some of which my rents there are now arrested, so that I shall be ruined past retrieve unless something is speedily done in my favour.

"If £1000 per annum, the usual salary, is thought too much, I should be satisfied with 800, or even with six or five hundred provided I had it from the time of my appointment Mr. Bing [the Hon. Robert Byng, Governor of Barbadoes] had £1500 for equipage money, besides his salary of £2000 from the time of his appointment, So had Lord How[e, Governor of Barbadoes]. Woodes Rogers [Governor of Bahamas] had £1100, Mr. Popple [Governor of Bermuda] had £500, so had Col. Hope, Mr. Johnson of South Carolina had near £1000, besides the salary of £1000 from the time of his appointment, and Mr. Horsey immediately after his appointment had above £1300. The words of the King's warrant are, "To enable you to proceed in your voyage to America and to settle you in your Government of S^c Carolina."

"But I am sensible that difficultys and delays may attend these proposals, I therefore earnestly pray your Lordship that you would suffer me to apply to His Majesty for some lands free of quit rents as Mr. Lowndes and Mr. Skelton and others have had. My design is not to sell but to settle them, and I am content that there be a clause in the grant making them revert to the Crown if not duely settled with the usual number of white people within a limited time"

[No date.] A petition addressed by the same writer "To the Right Hon^{ble} S^r Robert Walpole Knight of the most noble order of the Garter and the rest of the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury," accompanies the above letter; the more interesting clauses of which run as follows:—

"That the salary annexed by the Crown to the Government of South Carolina was one thousand pounds per ann besides which the Governour had the profits of an independent company there amounting to about £600 per ann. and also had two beneficial offices of Navall Officer and Vendue Master which produced £200 per ann. each, and he had also the licensing of all publick houses which brought in communibus annis £100 per ann. which with the countrey salary (which was £500 per ann.) and the profits arising from the fees and perquisites which came to about £500 a year more, made the whole of the Governour's income amount together to £3,100 per ann., besides £120 per ann. which the Province used to allow the Governour for his house rent.

"That your Memorialist humbly informs your Lordships there is now a very great alteration made in the profits arising from the Government, for the salary of £1000 per ann. which was formerly annexed to it is diverted into a different channell by being taken from the Government of this Province and given to Mr. Oglethorpe [Governor of Georgia] who likewise has the independant company. The two offices of Navall Officer and Vendue Master are given to other persons

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

by his Majesty's Royall Sign Manuall and the licensing of publick houses is taken from the Governour and vested in particular persons appointed for that purpose by Act of Assembly. And the Province has likewise discontinued the £120 per ann. usually allowed the Governour for house rent, so that your memorialist unless his Majesty shall be graciously pleased to extend his royall favour to him, has nothing left to depend on but the country salary, which is now reduced to £300 per ann. which the people have declared they will withdraw if his Majesty shall discontinue a salary to their Governour, and the profits arising from fees and perquisites which are so greatly lessened that they do not now at most amount to £250 per ann. The truth of which the Secretary of the Province, and severall members of the Councill and Assembly now in England are ready to attest."

1740, Nov. 21st. The humble petition of the Council and Assembly of South Carolina on behalf of the distressed inhabitants of Charles Town in the said Province—To the King's most Excellent Majesty

"Sheweth—That on the eighteenth day of this instant November a most dreadfull fire broke out in Charles Town, and in less than four hours notwithstanding all possible endeavours to extinguish it, utterly consumed the best, and most valuable part of the said town, and has left many unhappy families, who by an honest industry applied for many years past had acquired a comfortable subsistence in the world, exposed to the severest want and misery.

"That the misfortunes of the unhappy sufferers have been rendred the more grievous in as much as in that part of the town which was destroyed stood the largest and most usefull buildings and the much greater part of the shops stores and warehouses which contained the goods and merchandize which supplied the whole Province, and which by this fatal disaster were wholly consumed.

"That the Province at a very considerable expense had lately finished the fortifications in the front of Charles Town and had mounted the guns which were bestowed on the Province by your Majesty's great goodness and bounty but in this dreadfull calamity the carriages of the guns on the curtain line and some of the bastions which defended the harbour were also destroyed, the guns dismounted and the place where they were planted left intirely defenceless.

"That your petitioners have caused a diligent inquiry to be made into the immediate losses that have been sustained and by the account already taken according to the nearest estimate that can be made they cannot amount to less than two hundred and fifty thousand pounds sterling, but the unhappy consequences which may attend the whole Province by so considerable a misfortune in a place which was the general repository of all the goods and merchandize and stores for warr and defence, and in which the trade and business of the whole Colony is transacted, time only can discover.

"Your petitioners most humbly beg leave further to represent to your most sacred Majesty that such is the melancholy and distressed situation of this Province that this most severe and terrible event has succeeded the great expence the Province sustain'd in providing for the publick defence against the impending danger of an invasion from the Spaniards in the year 1737 which was soon follow'd by the small pox which raged in Charles Town during the whole year 1738 and swept off a great number of the inhabitants and by the loss of many more in a malignant fever in the autumn of the year 1739 and after the great charge and increase of heavy taxes occasioned by the unfortunate and unsuccessfull attempt which this Province was prevailed upon to engage in against St Augustine.

"That after such a continued series of misfortunes to a Province which has [been] and may be rendred of some use to Great Britain, but who had not fully recovered, when their late calamities began from the unhappy effects of a bloody Indian warr in the year 1715, we humbly hope your Majesty in your royal judgment will consider the inhabitants of this Province as hardly capable at their own expense to defend and secure this exposed frontier against the attacks or invasion of your Majesty[s] enemies in the present warr; or able to give any effectual relief to the unhappy sufferers in Charles Town who have sustained so vast a loss, nor can your petitioners flatter themselves with any hopes of supporting themselves under so many difficulties without your Majesty's most powerfull and gracious aid.

"Your petitioners therefore most humbly pray your most sacred Majesty that you would be graciously pleased to take the unhappy and dangerous circumstances of this Province in general and more particularly the case of the unhappy sufferers the inhabitants of Charles Town into your royal consideration and to grant such relief as to your Majesty in your great wisdom and according to your accustomed goodness shall think fit.

"In the Councill Chamber the 21st day of November 1740.

[Signed by the Clerk of the Council.]

"JAMES KINLOCH."

"In the Commons House of Assembly the 21st day of November 1740.

By order of the House

"WM. BULL JUN^r, Speaker."

1741. Number of inhabitants in Georgia, by the latest information, exclusive of the Regiment. 3 pp.

This is a carefully detailed account which concludes as follows:—

"Note, to 9 June 1741, 1527 had been sent on the Charity, and since then 281 more. In all 1808. Whereof foreign Protestants 839 and British 969.

"The whole number of inhabitants at one time in Georgia, the most ever computed were 2000 Souls.

"In 1739 there appeared to have gone at their own expense in all, from the beginning, 260 besides their wives and children.

"In the 3 first years, persons at their own expense that went were 167, and sent to the Charity 574, making together 741."

[No data.] Petition of Robert Thorpe to the King's Most Excellent Majesty:—

"Shewing—That the late Lords Proprietors of Carolina, by grant under their common seal bearing date the 25th day of Oct^r 1726 for certain considerations therein set forth, did give and convey unto Isaac Lownes his heirs and assigns one barony or tract of land to contain 12000 acres, subject to one penny sterling per ann. quit rent, which grant did likewise authorize and require the Surveyor General of the Province of South Carolina, immediately within 20 days after notice given him thereof, to allot and set out the said tract or barony of land in any place within the said Province of South Carolina.

That the said Isaac Lownes, by deed bearing date the 26th day of Aug^t 1729, for himself his heirs and assigns, did declare and agree that his name was made use of in the said grant from the Lords Proprietors only as trustee to and for the use and behoof of Thomas Lowndes of the

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

City of Westminster gentleman, his heirs and assigns, and to and for no other purpose whatsoever.

"That the said Isaac Lowndes and Thomas Lowndes in consideration of the sum of 450*l*. lawful money of Great Britain to the said Thomas Lowndes in hand paid by your petitioner, and also in consideration of the sum of 5*s*. of like money to the said Isaac Lowndes well and truly paid by your petitioner, did by deeds indented, bearing date the 10th day of September 1781, grant bargain sell and confirm unto your petitioner his heirs and assigns a tract of land to contain 9000 acres English measure, being part of the said Barony so granted as aforesaid to Isaac Lowndes in trust for the said Thomas Lowndes.

"That your petitioner having thus purchased the aforesaid tract of 9000 acres did apply to James S^t John Esq^r your Majesty's Surveyor general of the province of South Carolina to allot and set out the said Barony so granted as aforesaid who readily performed the same, and that your petitioner did thereupon take possession of his part thereof.

"That your petitioner nevertheless finding doubts arise concerning the legality of such survey, it being made without a warrant had from your Majesty's Governour, empowering the Surveyor General so to do, and finding also the said Governour deny granting warrants to survey lands claimed under patents or grants from the late Lords Proprietors without knowing your majesty's pleasure concerning such grants. Notwithstanding that in an act passed in the 2^d year of your Majesty's reign (entituled An act for establishing an agreement with 7 of the Lords Proprietors of Carolina for the surrender of their title and interests to that province to his Majesty) there is an exception in these words "Except all such tracts of land tenements and hereditaments as have been at any time before the 1st day of January 1727 granted or conveyed by or comprized in any grants deeds instruments or conveyances under the common seal of the said Lords Proprietors either in England or in the Province aforesaid.

"He therefore most humbly prays your Majesty

That as he is seized of the said tract of land by a title derived from the late Lords Proprietors, and long before the time of their surrender of their respective interest[s] to your Majesty, and that for the valuable consideration of 450^l lawful money of Great Britain, your Majesty to prevent his being molested in the quiet possession of the same would be graciously pleased to direct the Governour of the province to give him a new grant under the seal of the province subject to the same quit rent, as is specified in his said grant from the said Lords Proprietors.

"And your Petitioner as in duty bound shall ever pray.

"ROBERT THORPE."

1742, June 3rd. Copy of a petition from the Council and Assembly of South Carolina addressed to the King. Signed by John Fenwicke, President of the Council, and Alexander Gordon, Clerk of the Council, and countersigned by William Bull, Junior, Speaker of the Assembly. 3 pp.

The petition alleges that the Province is in very great danger from the French troops and prays for speedy reinforcements.

1742, June 15th. William Bull to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Charlestown, South Carolina.

"My Lord—His Majesty's interest being so much concerned in the present application of the Council and Assembly of South Carolina to his Majesty for assistance to prevent the ill consequences that may attend the designs and proceedings of the French, I apprehend it is my duty, and therefore I beg leave to lay before your Lordship a short view of the present situation of our affairs with regard to our Indian allies, the views of the French, and what is apprehended to be the most effectual means of securing his Majesty's dominions in these parts.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

"And first I presume to acquaint your Lordship that notwithstanding our present flourishing condition by the increase of our inhabitants and trade, and the ships of war ordered by his Majesty for the protection of the same, the safety and welfare of this Province depends in a great measure on the friendship of our Indian allies, the most numerous of whom are the Cherokees consisting of about 3,000 men, living to the North-west about 300 miles distance from Charlestown. They are settled at the head of Savana River, and some branches of the Mississippi. The next are the Creek Indians, who live to the South-west about 500 miles distance from hence consisting of about 1,500 men, and are distinguished by the Upper and Lower Creeks. The Upper Creeks are settled on the branches of the River that falls into the Bay of Mexico at the French Settlement called Mobile. When they were at war with us in the year 1715 they permitted the French to build a fort amongst them upon that River near a town called Halbamas. They are now so jealous of the consequences that may attend the Europeans having a possession and forts amongst them, that they have refused us that liberty when proposed for the protection of our traders in case of a war with France. The Lower Creeks live on the branches of the Chattahoochee River, which falls into the Bay Apalachée on the west of Florida. As they lie more in the neighbourhood of St Augustine they have frequently visited and received presents from the Government, but in the present war some of them as well as our other Indian allies have been prevailed with to assist us against the Spaniards. The Creek Indians are esteemed the best warriors except the Chickesaws who live near the Mississippi, and do not now exceed 400 men, who withstood the French and their Indians in several attacks. But they are nevertheless much annoyed, and the trade interrupted by their numerous neighbours, the Chactaw Indians, who are encouraged therein and rewarded by the French. The Catawba Indians consist of about 300 men living to the northward about 200 miles from Charlestown on the Waterée River which is a branch of Santedé. They as well as the Cherokees have often been molested by the Senecas or Six Nations living near Albany, but Governor Clarke of New York in his last conference with the six Nations, proposed a peace between them and the Southern Indians in friendship with his Majesty's subjects, which the Catawbas and Cherokees, as soon as I had signified the same to them, came down to Charlestown and agreed to. This peace I apprehend to be very necessary to prevent the Indians in the British interest from weakening one another, that they may be the better able to withstand the attempts of the French Indians.

"And I take leave further to acquaint your Lordship that the French by their communication from Quebec through the Lakes and Mississippi River down to New Orleans on the Bay of Mexico have gain'd an interest in and influence over many nations of Indians, who have no friendship or intercourse with any other Europeans, and by that means engage and employ them against the Cherokees and Chickesaws. The French are at peace with and have some influence among the Creeks by their having a fort there. By such frequent enterprizes the French Indians will be improved in the art of war, and the French by their assistance in case of war may greatly annoy if not become masters of this or some other [of] his Majesty's frontier Provinces, (which they have for a long time had in view) if proper measures are not taken to prevent that growing evil before it becomes too formidable to be withstood.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

"Such apprehensions has prevailed with the Council and Assembly of this Province [as to cause them] to make an early application to his Majesty for three independent companies, to be garrison'd, under the immediate direction of the Governor, on the frontiers of this Province to protect and secure the inhabitants in the cultivation of their lands as well as the trade with the Indians. But it is apprehended further with great submission that these forces can be of considerable service to this Province if they were to join and head our Indian allies when any attempt is designed against us by land. For the greatest service the Indians have done has been when they were headed by white men, several instances of which I beg leave to give your Lordship. The Creek Indians in the year 1702 were under great concern when the Spaniards and Apalachée Indians were on their march towards them; but being animated and headed by the traders then amongst them, they marched out and met those Spaniards and Indians at Flint River, when they fought and got the victory over them. And in the year following they did not march down into the Apalachés settlement where the Spaniards had several forts or attempt a conquest of those Spaniards or Indians till Colonel Moore with fifty horsemen encouraged and led them on in that undertaking, which was attended with so great success that it disabled the Spaniards from giving the least disturbance by land to Carolina during that war. Neither did our Indian allies go to the relief of North Carolina to war against the Tuscarora Indians till they were led on by a number of horsemen sent at the expence of the Government in the year 1711, which they were encouraged to continue till they had subdued those Indians.

"I have thus presumed to be long and particular in representing the state of our affairs which is humbly submitted to your Lordship's consideration, and beg leave to recommend to your Lordship's favour and countenance James Abercromby Esquire his Majesty's Attorney general, who attends your Lordship with this, and is employed jointly with Captain William Livingstone in the application to his Majesty from the Government as assistants to Mr Fnrty the Agent for the Province, who are fully empowered to proceed in this sollicitation in case of Mr Fury's death or absence. I beg leave to lay before your Lordship by the hands of Mr Abercromby and Captain Livingstone a copy of the petition of the Council and Assembly of this Province to his Majesty."

1742, Oct. 7th. Copy of a letter from William Jefferis to Harman Verelst. Dated at Bristol.

"Here is a vessel arrived from Cape Fear in 7 weeks called the Bumper Sloop by whom I have the Carolina Gazette 26th July last, copy of which herein I send you and a passenger who left Charles Town about the middle of August, says the Spaniards had left Georgia and taken all the cannon at St Simon's with them. This passenger's name is Watson who liv'd in the Indian country."

[The enclosure] from the South Carolina Gazette [of July 26th 1742].

"Last week the several vessels fitted out by this Government to assist Gen^l Oglethorpe all sailed one after another in order to join the men of war of St Simon's Bar; except the Beauford galley, which did not get out till this morning. Those vessels we hear have on board above 600 Men and one hundred and forty guns carriages and swivels, which with his Majesty's two 20 gun ships the Rye and Flamborough and the Swift and Hawk snows are deemed a force more than sufficient to deal with the Spaniards on the present occasion.

Those who know the situation of Frederica town upon St Simon's Island (where the General at present stands upon his defence) are under no apprehensions of the Spaniards succeeding before relief comes from hence, for by land, at most, two men only can march up a-breast thither from the place called the Camp at the mouth of the harbour which is about the distance of seven miles and is very convenient for an ambuscade all the way, in which the Indians and Highlanders are of great use and service; and by water only one vessel at a time can come up to the town, the reach leading to it being very narrow, about a mile in length and is exposed to be raked by an eighteen and two twelve pounders. To which may be added that the number of effective men now with the General (including the Highlanders and Indians) are about 700 as good men as are to be met with any where for their number and they are all in good spirits and have plenty of provision.

On Friday last the pilot boat returned here, which was sent to Virginia by the Governor, with the first news of the Spanish Invasion. She left Virginia the 12th instant and brings an account that Captⁿ Dandridge in his Majesty's ship the South Sea Castle of 40 guns, would sail in two days after to the General's relief. He was just returned from a cruize, and having all his men ready on board, had nothing to do but to take in some more wood and water.

On Saturday last news came thro' private hands that but at sight only of the Flamborough Swift and Hawk men of war, and the Beauford galley, which appeared off the Bar of St Simon's the 13th instant, the Spaniards betook themselves to their vessels with the utmost confusion, and left the General again master of the island.

As these men of war did not make any stay but returned off this Bar the 15th and made a report to Captⁿ Hardy, that they had seen a large Spanish fleet in St Simon's harbour which having been joined by 16 more missing must have been 52 sail.

The whole concern now seems to be that the Spaniards will in the mean time have an opportunity of getting out and escaping before our fleet gets thither which is thought impossible otherwise that they should do, because that they have no vessels of force capable of contending with ours.

Yesterday morning his Honour the Lieutenant Governor, attended by the first troop of Horse Guards, set out for Port Royal and we hear that Colonel Beale has received a Commission from his honour to carry on such works as are further necessary to fortify Charles Town, according to plans approved of in Council."

[1742]. Copy of The Memorial [to King George II.] of the Trustees for establishing the Colony of Georgia in America. Undated and signed by Benjamin Martyn, Secretary to the Trustees. 2½ pp.

This petition is to the following effect:—That the Memorialists were constituted Trustees for establishing the Colony of Georgia by a Royal Charter, dated June 9th 1732. That the King has signified that the Colony should be established for the relief of indigent British people and foreign persecuted Protestants, and for a barrier for the neighbouring provinces, especially South Carolina which had been laid waste with fire and sword by the Indians in 1718. That notwithstanding all difficulties there is now a fair prospect of the Colony being able to subseist itself in a reasonable time. That the supply granted last year in Parliament enabled the Trustees to send over a considerable number of German and Swiss Protestants and of Highlanders from the North of Scotland who require existence not being able at first to subsist themselves. That the Colony will be dispersed unless kept together by a Civil Government at the publick expense. That the Province, if abandoned may become a prey to the Spaniards or a nest of pirates. "The French are continually making new encroachments. They have advanced their frontier towards Carolina, and have left no means unessayed to gain or destroy the Indians who are in your Majesty's interest. They have long had in view a settlement on the Eastern Coast of the Continent. They will therefore undoubtedly take the first opportunity of settling themselves in the Province of Georgia if [it is] deserted. This place besides other advantages would afford them Ports, by which they would carry on an intercourse with their settlements in a shorter, safer, and better manner, than they can at present; As the country between their settlements and garrisons on the Rivers Mississippi and Mowille, and your Majesty's southern provinces, is plain, flat and open, there is no other barrier except Georgia for South Carolina, but a few nations of Indians, far inferiour in number to those in the French interest; If the French therefore should attempt to settle themselves in the Province of Georgia, when abandoned, there would be no force to withstand them; If they should gain a possession of it, they would be able to supply their sugar Colonies with lumber and provisions: for which they now almost wholly depend on your Majesty's Provinces; They might at their pleasure obstruct the trade of your Majesty's subjects, and most probably in the end make themselves masters of the neighbouring Provinces."

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

1742-3, Feb. 1st. Petition to the House of Commons of Alderman William Baker and others, owners of General Oglethorpe's unsatisfied Bills of Exchange drawn for his Majesty's service in America. Presented to the House of Commons at this date.

1743, April 20th. A letter from Harman Verelst to Lord Wilmington, enclosing a copy of his Petition to the Lords of the Treasury—on behalf of Brigadier General Oglethorpe (General and Commander in Chief in South Carolina and Georgia)—Praying that they will be pleased to grant him assistance wherewith to satisfy the Bills of Exchange drawn on him by General Oglethorpe for his Majesty's service.

MASSACHUSETTS PAPERS AND LETTERS.

1730-1742.

[Circ. 1730.] A Privy Council Memorandum on the question of the Governor's salary. It runs as follows:—

[No date.] A Petition of Governor Shute,—praying to be paid his salary for the time he attended here to prosecute the complaint against the Assembly of Massachusetts Bay—And likewise praying that a certain salary may be fixed on the Governors of that Province for the future—Having been referred to a Committee of Council—Their I ordships on the 4th March, 1725-6. Refer the same to Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations.

30th March. Lords of Trade reported that they thought the Governor ought to have a salary allowed him by His Majesty and to be paid at home untill the people of New England can be induced to make a perpetuall provision for His Majesty's Governors. And that as to his arrears they apprehend the people of New England would never pay them—So submitted to His Majesty.

1726, 21st June. The Lords of the Committee considered the said Report and being of opinion that the Province ought to pay the said Governor's arrears as likewise settle a perpetuall salary on his Majesty's Governors—Referred the same back to the Board of Trade to consider of the most effectual method to oblige the Councils and Assemblies to comply therewith.

1726, 28th July. Board of Trade reported that it was just and reasonable that the Province should pay the Governor's arrears, and settle a fixed salary of at least 1,000*l.* sterling p ann.—And that in order to induce the Assembly to comply therewith it was advisable for his Majesty to recommend the same in the most strenuous terms under His Royall Sign Manual to their consideration.

1726, 15th and 18th February. The Committee considered the said Report and ordered the Agents of Massachusetts Bay and New Hampshire to attend on the 22nd of February.

22nd February. The Committee reported a full state of this affair with their opinion that Governor Shute should be instructed to recommend in strong terms to the Assemblys the settling a salary on the Governor of 1,000*l.* sterling at Massachusetts Bay—and 200*l.* at New Hampshire—that if they refused to comply therewith it might be worthy the consideration of the Legislature in what manner the honour and dignity of His Majesty's Government ought to be supported in these Provinces for the future.

1727, 28th March. This Report was approved and the Secretary of State ordered to prepare a letter for His Majesty's royall signature agreeable thereto. Which was accordingly done and given to Mr. Shute—but he being some time after removed from that Government did not carry the said letter over.

Mr. Burnet succeeding Governor Shute had an article inserted in his instructions containing the substance of the aforesaid letter to Mr. Shute.

1728, 1st February. An Address of the House of Representatives relating to their not complying with the said instruction was presented to His Majesty—And referred to a Committee.

Same day. The Committee referred it to the Board of Trade.

1729, 27th March. The Board of Trade made Report that they had heard counsell for the Governor as also for the Assembly, and were of opinion that Mr. Burnet should be instructed to insist on a salary of 1,000*l.* to be by law settled on him during the whole time of his Government.

1729, 22nd April. The Committee considered this Report and heard Mr. Attorney and Solicitor in support of the instruction and also counsell against the same—and reported as their opinion that this whole matter should be laid before the Parliament.

1729, 22nd May. The said Report was approved by the Queen in Council—And the Secretary of State was ordered to receive the pleasure of the Crown thereupon.—A complaint of Wilks and Belcher, Agents for New England, against Governor Burnet was referred by the Duke of Newcastle to the Board of Trade the 3rd Oct^r 1729 who made

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Report thereupon the 8th of October.—which being afterwards referred to a Committee of Council—their Lordships did on 12th Nov. 1729. Examine into the same and make Report thereupon And at the same time proposed that His Majesty would be pleased to suspend his just resentment against the said Province for not having complied with the instructions untill the Board of Trade had transmitted a proposition to the Assembly upon that head and the effect thereof seen.

1729, 2nd Dec. The above Report was approved and the Lords of Trade directed to transmitt their proposall accordingly.—And the order of the 22^d of May last was directed to be suspended till the effect of the said proposall was known.

Mr Burnet dying before any thing was done herein, and Mr Belcher being appointed Governour, an article was inserted in his instructions agreeable to this last-mentioned order—And it was thereby directed that in case the Assembly should not comply therewith, that he should immediately come over to Great Britain to give an exact account of all that had passed—unless he should think it for his Majesty's service to send some other person fully instructed therein.

[1731?] An undated Memorial in behalf of the children of William Burnet, Esq., late Governor of the Massachusetts Bay. [Signed by T. Burnet].

Sheweth,—That on his Majesty's Accession to the Throne, Mr Burnet was the single instance of a Governor displaced: That he was removed from the Government of New York, worth three thousand pounds sterling a year, and nominated to that of the Massachusetts Bay, with repeated assurances, that it should be made as good to him. as the other had been.

In his instructions he was ordered to demand of the Province, an annual salary of one thousand pounds sterling, to be settled on him during the time of his Government, and behaved therein so as to deserve the approbation both of the Board of Trade and of the Committee of council, in their several reports to His Majesty, and last of all of Her Most Gracious Majesty, the Guardian of the Realm, in an Order of Council of the 22^d of May 1729.

That the House of Representatives continue firm in their refusal to comply with the royal instruction, for the Governour's salary, yet frequently offered to vote him a larger sum than one thousand pounds sterling for a year, and in August 1729, being the second year of his Government, they voted him six thousand pounds of their money, being near two thousand pounds sterling; at the same time, offering to make the Act for the provision of the Governour and Government, the first Act that should be past in every Assembly. But Mr. Burnet's instructions not warranting him to accept of such a compromise, he was likewise obliged by them to refuse the several sums thus voted to him.

Being thus engaged in the King's service, without any salary from the Province, and none being assigned him from hence, he was constrained to support the dignity of his post out of his private fortune. So that, what with the charges of his new patents, of his removal and of his necessary expenses, during the two years of his Government, his family are three thousand pounds sterling poorer, than they must have been, had not their father accepted this employment.

Upon Mr. Burnet's death, this matter being fully set forth in a Memorial to His Majesty, an Order of Council was made on the 8th of May 1730, in which Governor Belcher was ordered to demand of the Assembly of the Massachusetts Bay, in His Majesty's name, that they should make good to Mr Burnet's children the sum of six thousand pounds voted to their late father in August 1729, or at least such a sum, as should appear due to him, during the whole time of His Government, at the rate of one thousand pounds sterling [per annum].

Though this would be far short of the loss sustained by Mr. Burnet's family yet the house of Representatives in the Massachusetts Bay, have refus'd to give them any further sum, than two thousand pounds sterling, which has therefore been rejected by the Governor and Council, as being so much less, than the sum due to them, upon the foot of the Order in Council last mentioned.

The several matters are humbly submitted, etc.

1732-3, Jan. 5th. Jonathan Belcher, Governor of Massachusetts Bay, to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Boston.

"May it please your Lordship

. . . . This Province, my Lord, is in a miserable condition for want of the necessary supplies of money to the publick Treasury, where there has not been a shilling for nineteen months past, altho' there is upwards of £40,000 due to the officers and soldiers of the King's forts and garrisons, to the Judges, the Secretary of the Province and other people, nor would the Assembly, who have lately sat ten weeks raise any money agreeable to the charter, and His Majesty's royal orders. But they have, my Lord, taken a very extraordinary step upon His Majesty's royal instructions to me (the 16th and 30th) by addressing his Majesty a third time to withdraw them, and in case His Majesty will not hear them, then their Agent is instructed to apply to the House of Commons.

As to the 16th instruction which limits or restrains the striking of Credit Bills, I believe any man of thought and substance is highly thankful that the Assembly are kept from ruining all the estates in the Province by issuing out floods of those pernicious Bills and whereas £125 of the lawfull money of the Province would purchase £100 sterling, yet £350 of the vile Bills that have been issued by the Government will not at this day purchase that sum.

As to the 30th instruction, my Lord, I think nothing can be plainer than that it exactly quadrates with the Charter, and for His Majesty to give it up or condescend to the House of Representatives examining the public accounts of charge of the Government, I shoud think it as well for them to appoint their own Governour, for, with great submission my Lord, all the struggle in this matter is for power. If every account of the Province must be subjected to a House of Representatives, the King's Governour will be of very little signification. They that have the controul of the money will certainly have the power And I take the single question on this head to be, whether the King shall appoint his own Governour, or whether the House of Representatives shall be Governour of the Province

The Assembly here has been sitting upwards [of] nine weeks, and would make no supply of money to the Public Treasury, So I dismist them yesterday, at their own request.—And the Government here is in danger of running into all confusion.—The Kings Forts are dropping down, the men ready to desert for want of pay, and every body under great oppression that has money due from the publick."

1732-3, Jan. 13th. Governor Belcher to the Board of Trade. Dated at Boston. Endorsed "Copy of a Letter from Gov^r Belcher to the

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Right Honor^{ble} the Lords Comis^{rs} for trade and plantations. Sent by Capt. Follers."

"My Lords,—Altho' I have wrote you per this conveyance of the 5th, 8th and 12th instant, yet the ship being detained I think it my duty to say to your Lordships that I have taken all possible care and pains, ever since my arrival to have the long contested boundaries betwixt the Massachusetts and New Hampshire adjusted agreeable to His Majesty's royal orders to me, but I can see no prospect of its being accomplish'd and the poor borderers on the lines (if your Lordships will allow me so vulgar an expression) live like toads under a harrow, being run into goals on the one side and the other, as often as they please to quarrel; such is the sad condition of His Majesty's subjects that live near the lines. They pull down one another's houses, often wound each other, and I fear it will end in bloodshed, unless His Majesty in his great goodness gives some effectual order to have the bounds fixt.

"Altho' my Lords, I am a Massachusetts man, yet I think this Province alone is culpable on this head; New Hampshire has all along been frank and ready to pay exact duty and obedience to the King's order, and have manifested a great inclination to peace and good neighbourhood, but in return the Massachusetts Province have thrown unreasonable obstacles in the way of any settlement, and altho' they have for two or three years past been making offers to settle the boundaries with New York and Rhode Island in an open, easy, amicable way, yet when they come to settle with New Hampshire, they will not do so with them; which seems to me a plain argument that the leading men of the Massachusetts Assembly are conscious to themselves of continual encroachments they are making upon their neighbours of New Hampshire, and so dare not come to a settlement. I say, my Lords, in duty to the King, and from a just care of his subjects of New Hampshire, I think myself obliged to set this matter in the light I now do, nor do I ever expect to see it settled but by a peremptory order from His Majesty appointing Commissioners to do it, and those agreed to by both Assemblies.

"1730-1, February. Joseph Talcott Esqre, Govern^r of Connecticut, Joseph Jenks Esqre, then Govern^r of Rhod[e] Island, and Adolph Phillipse Esqre, Speaker of the Assembly at N. York.—[They] are Gentlemen of good ability and integrity, and altho' the Massachusetts I fear will still decline joyning in] the affair, yet I believe New Hampshire from their desire to peace and good order, would rejoyce to see such a direction from the King, and be glad to be at the whole charge, rather than the dispute should still continue: I therefore humbly pray your Lordships so to represent this affair to His Majesty that there may be an end of strife and contention.

"And if your Lordships approve of the Bill I now send you for emitting bills of credit on a foundation of gold and silver, and that I may have His Majesty's leave for doing it in the Massachusetts; I pray I may also have the same liberty of doing it in New Hampshire, where they are in great distress for something to pass in lieu of money, and without speedy help it will be almost impossible for that little Province to support any trade."

1732-3, Feb. 26th. Richard Partridge to Lord Wilmington. Dated in London, Water-Lane, Tower Street.

"... The Governor [Belcher] has a hard task of it with the people in maintaining the honour and dignity of the Crown and in pursuing his royal master's instruction, and I really think he has however, by his conduct manag'd them better than any Govern^r before him has done under such difficult circumstances I know it will still more envigourate him in the King's service if he could receive a line from some in the Ministry approving his conduct."

1734, June 11th. Governor Belcher to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Boston.

"Much honoured Lord,

Since I had the honour of writing your Lordship last, I have met a new Assembly of the Province of the Massachusetts Bay, and am glad to acquaint your Lordship that they seem at present one of the best Assemblies that this Province has had since my coming into the Government

I have now the honour to cover to your Lordship a Bill passed by the House of Representatives, and by His Majesty's Council the eight current for £3000 for my support, and am again to pray the favour of your Lordship, that I may obtain the royal leave for giving my assent to this Bill"

1735. An Act [of the Legislature of Massachusetts] for the more effectual detecting and convicting such as cut, fell, or destroy such trees, as are reserved for the use of the Royal Navy—passed by the Council and rejected by the House of Representatives.

The chief provision of this Act was to make the Surveyor General of Woods (Colonel Dunbar) liable in double costs to those persons whom he might unsuccessfully sue for penalties.

1735-6, Feb. 28. Governor Belcher to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Boston.

" I adjourned the Assembly here to the 17th of next month, they have given some encouragement to the manufacture of potash in the Province, and if it can be brought to perfection, it will be of considerable advantage in the commerce betwixt Great Britain and this place.

"There is a Bill now lying at the House of Representatives, and which has past his Majesty's Council, for the better preservation of the King's woods, and I shall do all in my power, that it may come into a law, although I am very doubtful about it.

"I hope His Majesty's bounty of hemp seed will be here in good season this spring, for encouraging the farmers to go briskly on in raising that Commodity."

1736, May 24th. Governor Belcher to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Boston.

" I have my Lord, been urging the Assemblies here from time to time to pass some law in favour of the royal woods, and am after all now obliged to say in fidelity to His Majesty, that I have no expectation of anything of this nature to be done here.

I heartily wish the British Parliament would give a bounty on plantation potash, and an additional one to that on hemp.

"There have been, my Lord, within two years past, great discoveries of rock iron ore in a town of this Province call'd Attleborough and some furnaces lately set up; the ore I am told is very rich, and the Iron made from it equal to the best Spanish.

"I think a number of guns of 6 to 8 weight a piece have been lately cast at some of the iron works in this Province, and the metal and workmanship perhaps equal to any that passes the proof at Woolwich.

"So that this Province may in time produce timber, masts, iron, canvas, and rigging sufficient for the whole Royal Navy, and must consequently be more necessary to the Crown of Great Britain, than all

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

the Sugar Islands, and the whole North America besides, and so deserve the greater care and encouragement of the Crown”

1736, Jan. 11th. Governor Belcher to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Boston.

“ The Assembly of this Province is now sitting (and have been for 7 weeks past) and have done very little for His Majesty’s service and I am afraid of having a great deal of trouble and difficulty with them”

1736, May 26th. Governor Belcher to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Boston.

“ I have ordered my son [Mr Belcher of the Temple] to wait on your Lordship with this, which accompanies a small specimen of candles, the growth of the country from an aromattick shrub we call bayes; all the curiosity is, that they are not offensive to handle, nor in the smell when extinguish’d”

1736. Abstract of the proceedings [in the Privy Council] upon the petitions for settling the boundaries between New Hampshire and Massachusetts Bay. 3 pp.

1737, May 13th. Governor Belcher to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Boston.

“I humbly ask pardon for the trouble of this, which I pray my son Mr Belcher of the Temple may have the honour to put into your hands, being to say, that I am told Col^d Dunbar (Lieut. Gov^r of New Hampshire) sails this week for Great-Britain, and that he goes away with all the ill-nature he can possibly have against the Governour, to whom he has been but one continual plague, ever since he receiv’d his Lieut Gov^r’s Commission. Fire and contention being the element he delights to live in, loving to be restless, and to make every body so he has to deal with.

“Your Lordship cannot but be sensible of the great trouble and fatigue I have undergone (since my appointment to this Government) with one obstinate Assembly after another for my steady adherence to His Majesty’s royal orders; and I have been often threaten’d by men of influence, that they would grant me no support, unless I would go from the King’s instructions; and during the dispute (for about three years) respecting the supply of the Treasury, I did not receive one farthing to defray my yearly expence in this Province. And at New Hampshire, by Col^d Dunbar’s little arts and crafts with the Members of the Assembly there, that Province is at this time considerably in arrears with me, altho’ they passed a Law, settling my salary to be paid half-yearly.”

“ My Lord I can assure you upon my faith and honour that the Governments of both Provinces have not been worth to me communibus annis £750 Sterling, which is but a poor pittance for the support of the King’s Governour, whom His Majesty in his instructions to me is pleas’d to call the representative of his royal person in the Governments, where he has plac’d me, and the support they give me but barely pay my necessary annual expence; yet as this is my native country, where are my family, my friends, and my little fortune, I own with great and humble gratitude the continuance of His Majesty’s royal favour to me.

“I am sensible Col^d Dunbar will do every thing in his power (right or wrong) to my prejudice, I therefore humbly beg of your Lordship, that his representations may make no impression, till I am heard in answer. He wrote me a few months past he did not intend to return hither, but to seek some employment at home: happy will be for this country they may never see him again, where I don't believe he can make out one single service he has done for the Crown, but I am well satisfy'd he has done a great deal to alienate the affections of the King's subjects from his Government; his despotick arbitrary way, as, beating the King's subjects, threatening to burn and destroy their substance &c., will by no means do in civil government.

MARQUE
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

"The two Provinces, where I have the honour to command, are in good peace and tranquility at present; but should there be any change of the Governour, I have reason to believe it would throw the provinces into new difficulties, and give the King's Ministers fresh trouble, who have had too much already with this people.

"I am told Col^d Dunbar intends to endeavour Mr George Jaffreys may succeed him Lieut. Gov^r of New Hampshire, who is as opposite to me as Col^d Dunbar himself; and with great deference to your Lordship I can't see what advantage it can be to His Majesty's service, or to the ease of his Ministers, to have persons put into post[s] in one and the same Government, who will be continually thwarting and opposing one another. I therefore humbly pray, Col^d Henry Sherburne (who has been for many years of his Majesty's Council in New Hampshire) may succeed Col^d Dunbar in the Lieutenancy in that Province; he is a very worthy gentleman, and would be acceptable to the Province in general and to me in particular"

1737, Dec. 5th. A letter to Lord Wilmington, in the handwriting of Governor Belcher's secretary, and signed by certain of the clergy of Massachusetts. Dated from Boston in New England, and addressed to the Right Honorable, the Earl of Wilmington, Lord President of His Majesty's most Honorable Privy Council, and Knight of the most Noble Order of the Garter.

"May it please your Lordship,

With all that respect and deference to your name, which the high station wherein his most excellent Majesty, our most gracious Sovereign, has seen meet to place, and so long continue you, together with those accomplishments, which render you illustrious therein; we Ministers of the Gospel, and Pastors of Churches in his Majesty's Province of the Massachusetts Bay, in and about Boston, crave leave by the hand of the agents for the Province, humbly to address ourselves to your Lordship and to entreat your powerfull favour for the good people of New England, and for the Churches of it, in which the King's person, and family, and Ministers are constantly and ardently pray'd for, with one heart and voice.

"The blessings of his Majesty's reign, which reach us in these distant parts of his dominions, we hope we have a gratefull sense of: in a particular manner we think ourselves bound to bless God, and to thank the King, and his Ministers, for the continuance of Governor Belcher in the chair over us, by whom the King's good subjects of every denomination are equally encouraged in their Duty to God and to the King.

"We look upon ourselves obliged humbly to address your Lordship in this manner, because we have lately seen in some of the publick prints, what we must call a malicious libel, pretended to be written from Boston, declaring to the world—"An universal joy thro'out this Province upon the news of His Majesty's appointing a new Governour over us; more especially among the better sort of people, and Ministers of all sorts"—than which there could not have been published a greater calumny and more injurious falshood: and we beseech your

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

Lordship to excuse us this zealous vindication of ourselves and our people from it.

"That those my Lord, who have the high honour to stand about the King as his Ministers may have wisdom from above for a most righteous and happy administration is the prayer of my Lord, your Lordship's, most humble dutifull and obedient servants

Benjamin Colman, Pastor of the Church [in] Brattle Street, Boston.

Thomas Prince, Pastor of the South Church in Boston.

William Cooper, a Pastor of the Church in Brattle Street, Boston.

Nehemiah Waller, Pastor of a Church in Roxbury.

Nathaniel Appleton, Pastor of the Church in Cambridge.

Samuel Checkley, Pastor of the New South Church in Boston.

Charles Chauncy, Pastor of the first Church in Boston.

Samuel Mather, Pastor of the North Church in Boston.

Mather Byles, Pastor of the Church in Holles-street, Boston."

1738, May 23rd. Governor Belcher to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Boston. 8 pp.

"May it please your Lordship—By one of the last ships from England my brother Mr Richard Partridge, and my son Mr [Jonathan] Belcher of the Temple (my stated agents) write me that Mr Rindge of the town of Portsmouth in New Hampshire had been recommended to the King to be one of His Majesty's Council for the Province of New Hampshire. . . . As to the Massachussetts, the heats and broils they were in before my arrival and since seem at present to be pretty well laid; the opposition and trouble I have and do still struggle with in New Hampshire has been chiefly owing to the restless temper of Col^d Dunbar (whose natural element seems to be strife and fire) . . . to prevent any Contention or Clashing between the King's Gov^r and the Council, which must necessarily be the case, if men personally prejudiced at the Gov^r, and always opposing the King's authority, must be members of the Council, and such is Mr Rindge (recommended to supply the place of Mr Gambling lately deceas'd). . . .

"I must further beg your Lordship's patience while I acquaint you, that the latter end of the last month I was serv'd with [a] copy of a complaint exhibited against me to the King in Council, by a Committee of the House of Representatives of New Hampshire. . . . I am now preparing my answer, and hope to get it ready to go per this ship. . . ."

1738, Jan. 23rd. Governor Belcher to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Boston and unaddressed.

"I have at one time and another done myself the great honour of addressing your Lordship on the affairs of the two Governments, where His Majesty in his great grace and favour has been pleas'd to place me; and I am now to beg of your Lordship to lend a listning ear, while I lay before you the difficult state of this Province with respect to a medium for the trade, which has been carry'd on for above thirty years past almost wholly by what are call'd here bills of credit, instead of silver and gold, of which this country is drain'd by the constant exportation of it to Great-Britain.

"I would also crave leave to say to your Lordship, that in conformity to His Majesty's royal orders to me, all the outstanding Bills of Credit of this Province must be drawn in by the end of the year 1741, and unless something be substituted in their place, it will make almost an intire stagnation of trade and a considerable concussion in this little Commonwealth.

MARQUSS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
—

"His Majesty's great goodness and lenity to his subjects has secur'd to him the greatest affection in the hearts of all his subjects, among whom I hope this Province are as truly dutifull and loyal as any part of the King's dominions; and I would now become a humble suitor to your Lordship on account of the difficult circumstances this Province is already in, and will still be more so, for want of something to circulate instead of money from man to man. And I would further pray, that I may lay before your Lordship the inclosed request made to me by the Council and Representatives of this Province respecting a Bill past by them for making an emission of £60,000 in Bills of Credit, which Bill is also herewith transmitted to your Lordship; and according to my understanding of it, is the best calculated for maintaining the value of such Bills as may be emitted in consequence of it, of any Bill that has been projected in this Government, and, as I judge, the passing it into a Law will much advance the honour and justice of the King's Government here, and the safety, peace, and good order of his good subjects.

"I would humbly beg your Lordship's favour in facilitating the obtaining His Majesty's Royal Order of leave for giving my consent to a Bill of this nature; your Lordship's known innate goodness and humanity exercis'd to this people in this article must challenge their highest sense of gratitude."

Two papers were enclosed in the last letter.

(1.) Copy of a Bill of the Legislative Assembly of Massachusetts for the emission of sixty thousand pounds in Bills of Credit, of a new form and tenour to be redeemable by silver and gold.

The Bill provides for the issue of Currency bills of one shilling each, redeemable in silver coin at the rate of 6s. 8d. per ounce Troy, in gold coin at the rate of 4l. 18s. the ounce Troy, and the copy of it is attested as follows:—

"Province of Massa[chuse]t Bay Jan^y 22nd 1738. The Bill whereof the foregoing is a true copy having been read three several times in the House of Representatives and in Council, pass'd to be enacted by both Houses.

"Att. SIMON FROST, Dep^t Sec^y."

(2.) An address to Governor Belcher from the Council and Assembly of Massachusetts, with the Governor's answer:

"May it please your Excellency,

His Majesty's Council and the House of Representatives in General Court assembled, in consideration of the near approach of the period when all the Bills of Credit now passing will be sunk, have agreed on a Bill for the emission of sixty thousand pounds, redeemable by silver and gold; which Bill your Excellency was pleased, in your speech of yesterday, to inform us you could not consent to consistant[ly] with his Majesty's instruction.

"Wherefore we, His Majesty's loyal and dutifull subjects, crave leave to observe to your Excellency, the great and distressing difficulties His Majesty's good subjects of this Province will be under in supporting the Government and in carrying their common affairs and business, if the aforesaid Bill, or some other of that nature, shall not take effect.

"Your Excellency cannot but be sensible that for many years past the publick taxes for the support of Government have been wholly paid in bills of Credit, by which bills also the trade and commerce have been for near thirty years almost wholly managed, and that the whole of these bills of Credit must be intirely sunk by the end of the year seventeen hundred [and] forty one, and that it will bring great distress if not an entire stagnation of all trade, if about two hundred and fifty thousand pounds computed in bills of the old tenour, the sum now extant, should be, in that short time, intirely taken away, and nothing substituted in its room, and especially since this Court have in their present Session, for supporting the credit of their own bills, found it necessary to discountenance those of the neighbouring Governments as being not well founded.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

"We would therefore pray your Excellency's favourable consideration of this important affair, and how much the safety, interest and quiet, of His Majesty's good subjects under your Excellency's care depend on its success, and do entreat your endeavours that your Excellency may give your consent to this Bill, or a Bill of this nature, the bills to be emitted thereon being on a different and much better foundation than those which have occasioned His Majesty's prohibition."

The answer of Governor Belcher, dated 16th Jan. 1739 :—

"Gentlemen of the Council and of the House of Representatives.

"In answer to your Address relating to the Bill for emitting Sixty Thousand pounds in Bills of Credit, to pass in lieu of the Bills now extant, which as you observe must be entirely sunk by the end of the year Seventeen hundred and forty one, and are at present the only medium of commerce; you may assuredly depend, that I will inploy my best offices consistent with my duty to the King, that His Majesty's royal leave may be obtained for giving my consent to a Bill of this nature."

1738-9, Feb. 5th. David Dunbar to Lord Wilmington. Addressed to "The Rt Honble My Lord President &c."

"May it please your Lordship—It is more than 7 years since my Lords Commissioners for trade and plantations were pleased to make a strong representation to His Majesty in my favour upon the complaints against Gov^r Belcher for setting aside His Majesty's Commission to me as Liev^t Gov^r of New Hampshire, upon which the Gov^r neither allow'd me any command or share of the sallary, tho' settled on the Gov^r and Lieu^t Gov^r; the said representation was sent to His Grace the Duke of Newcastle to whom My Lords of Trade have applyed twice since to obtain His Majesty's pleasure thereupon. Upon which I have been informed that it was layd by His Grace before My Lords of the Committee of Council, and it is now in the Office.

"Dureing six years that I was Liev^t Gov^r I received no consideration for the expence which a publick station must subject a man to, and I have not yet been so happy as to obtain any satisfaction for my disbursments in endeavouring to add an usefull collony to His Majesty's dominions, which I should have done ere now if it had not been defeated by the opposition of Gov^r Belcher, and without any expence to the Crown, as the quit rents would long ere now have reimbursed me. Those expences haveing layd me under great incumbrances I was obliged to assign all my sallary as surveyor of His Majesty's Woods in America to discharge them, and it is yet so applyed, so that I have not a shilling of it for my own support, and I have moreover been arrested and imprison'd and am now sued for part of the said expences, and I must inevitably sink under them, if some relief or equivalent be not suddainly granted me, which I fear the hurry of publick affairs will obstruct."

"I have presumed to trespass thus on your Lordship, as a reason why I really am not able to prosecute the said affair now lyeing before you in Council, I humbly beg your Lordship will be pleased to see

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND,
MSS.

it and that my Lords of the Committee will give an opinion upon it without hearing council, as I am not able to answer the expence.

"May I further presume to add, that my misfortunes are chiefly owing to a mistake in calling the place I was sent to settle, part of Nova Scotia, which appearing to be part of the Massachusetts Province, I was orderd to remove and quitt possession to that Province. after I had built a fort and barracks for the King's troops sent thither from Nova Scotia; I should be humbly contented with any equivalent in any remote part of the world, no climate or danger would affright me; I have had the honour to be in commission, first from King William in 1697, & rose gradually to be Lieut Coll^o in 1715, and inadvertently parted with my Commission in 1718, piqued, that a younger officer was putt over me by means of my late Lord Cadogan; I was in Parliament in Ireland in Queen Ann's reign, and allways of the side that distinguished themselves in favour of the Hanover Succession, for which I was taken so much notice of that I was threaten'd to be broke. In 1726 I was sent Consul into Spain, and happen'd to do some service there for which I had the approbation of his late Majesty and present Ministry in many letters, and had the honour to be taken notice of by his present Majesty then prince, upon my return from a long imprisonment at Malaga, being taken in the Mediterranean endeavouring to go to Gibraltar on the King's service. I may be so happy as to move your Lordship's compassion upon this narration; my present case my lord is a very uncommon one, I have never been complaind of in any station, and I am ruin'd by endeavouring to do a publique service without any private view to myself, it is a pitty a man should be undone without being charged with a crime.

"I have no claim or pretence to your Lordship's favour but from your universal[ly] known humanity to the distressed, I humbly submit myself to your consideration."

1738-9, March 7th. Governor Belcher to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Boston and unaddressed.

"I humbly beg leave of your Lordship to admit my agents Mr Partridge and Mr Belcher to put this into your Lordship's hands; wherein I first of all give your Lordship my humble and sincerest thanks for the constant course of your Lordship's justice and favour to me in the affairs of my Governments; and in the next place I am to beseech your Lordship's attention for a few minutes, while I say, the last ship from England informs me, that Mr Thomlinson, agent for the House of Representatives of New-Hampshire had, under the name of an appeal from the judgment of His Majesty's Commissioners for settling the boundaries between that Province and this, alleg'd a heap of malicious invectives against me, and by the copy of it, which I have seen, it looks more like a libel upon the Governour, than an appeal in the case mentioned. And I am very particularly to thank your Lordship for not suffering it to be proceeded on with respect to any thing that relates to me, 'till I should be regularly serv'd with a copy, and time allow'd me to answer.

"The affair, my Lord, of the boundaries betwixt this Province and New-Hampshire is certainly necessary to be determin'd for the quiet and safety of His Majesty's subjects of both Provinces, yet I would beg leave to say to your Lordship, that this controversy has been latterly manag'd on the side of New-Hampshire with great zeal and warmth by those that openly profess themselves the Governour's enemies, and by Mr Thomlinson's bitter invectives, I think it's plain, that they rather wanted an opportunity to vent their ill-nature at the Gov^r than to do any good to the Province about the line.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

"As I know I am speaking in the ears of a wise and impartial judge, I would humbly hope, when your Lordship has consider'd the answer of the Massachusetts Assembly to what Mr Thomlinson calls his appeal, and my answer to the complaints of the New-Hampshire Representatives, that your Lordship will intirely acquit me of any partiality in the part I have acted in this affair.

"And as to Mr Thomlinson's charging me with bribery from the Massachusetts, there never was anything more unjust or unreasonable; while in obedience to His Majesty's orders I was pressing them to do me justice in making my salary equal to £1,000 Sterling, and they had once and again given me something towards it, to call such a grant a bribe could spring from nothing but the dregs of malice, and an attempt to make something out of nothing. I can, my Lord, challenge the worst of my enemies to charge me (and make it good) with the value of sixpence I have taken directly or indirectly for any thing that has had the least relation to my administration, except the public grants of the Assembly.

"It is, may it please your Lordship, impossible for a gentleman to be at the head of two such Provinces as I am, and not to have enemies, tho' I believe the Provinces, to take the people 19 in 20, were never in greater tranquillity than at this day. And what I am most humbly to beg of your Lordship is, that whenever any thing is laid against me as complaint, I may have the liberty of an Englishman, that is to be serv'd with [a] copy, and time given to make answer, and then, my Lord, I shall not be in much pain, for I am determin'd, while I have the honour to serve the King in the station he has plac'd me, to maintain His Majesty's just right and honour, and at [the] same time to be tender of the liberties of his people; and these things I think very compatible in an English Governour with an English Government."

1739, Oct. 30th. Governor Belcher to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Boston and unaddressed.

"In March and April last I had the honour of addressing your Lordship in a very particular manner respecting some complaints I heard had been presented to Your Lordship at a Committee of his Majesty's Most Hon^{ble} Privy Council against my administration in the Government here and at New Hampshire, and these letters Mr Partridge and Mr Belcher write me they had the honour to deliver to your Lordship which I hope gave your Lordship some satisfaction as to those complaints. By these last ships I have an account from my Agents at Whitehall, that there had been presented at the Privy Council Office a Memorial from one Mr Gulston and Tomlinson and two others respecting the state of the Province of New Hampshire which had been referr'd to the Plantation Board—who had return'd their Report upon it without serving me with a copy and time to answer—but that when it came to your Lordship's Board your Lordship sent it back again that I might have the justice I insisted upon by my Agents but [which] was deny'd by them—viz^t a copy and time to answer and this has indeed been the steady course of your Lordship's justice and candour in any thing that has come before your Lordship in the affairs of my Governments for which I give your Lordship my most humble and hearty thanks and shall ever hold myself under the strictest obligations of gratitude. I find the complainants had (in their low art) left out my name that they might say it was not a complaint against me, altho' the whole drift and design of it was to get my Commission for N[ew] Hampshire superseded and the report of the Lords of Trade tally'd with their designs, and had not your Lordship

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.
—

interpos'd and put a stop to the manner of proceeding how severe and extraordinary would it have been to have depriv'd a gentleman of his bread and honour and never to have given him liberty of vindicating himself—I say to have taken his Commission away from him upon the ipse dixit of his enemies which upon a fair hearing might appear to be nothing more than a heap of absurdities and falsehoods and the pure product of malice—and when I am serv'd with [a] copy I have no doubt to make this Memorial deserve those epithets—and I do most humbly beg of your Lordship that before any thing be past upon this Memorial I may be serv'd with [a] copy to answer—for it cannot be expected my Agents at a 1000 leagues distance can so fully answer what may nearly affect my interest and honour as I can—There has been my Lord a complaint of this Mr Tomlinson against me and my answer to it lain above twelve months at a Privy Council Office which he seems afraid to bring to a hearing and therefore stirs up Mr Gulston with the other two to bring on a complaint in this manner—and as it were to shoot me in the dark—But God be prais'd that your Lordship presides at the Council Board with so much justice and honour—I humbly beg your Lordship's patience while I mention an instance of his present Majesty's great justice with respect to one Mr Gledhill Governour of Placentia about ten years agoe upon a complaint that was exhibited against him (I think by Lord Vere). A very great person went to the King to desire that he might be dismiss—But the Governour's friends found access to his Majesty and humbly beg'd the Governour might have liberty to answer for himself which the King readily granted. Upon the gentleman's going again to His Majesty to have him put out the King said no sir you told me he was a very good man when I put him in—Yes may it please Your Majesty so he was, but now such and such complaints lye against him—to which the King answer'd they may indeed bear the name of complaints but I shall not dismiss him, let him be serv'd with copies and if he cannot clear himself then let him be dismiss—but if he can I shall still continue him as a good servant. He made answer cleard himself and was continu'd—I remember when I was at Court the King's justice and honour on this head were greatly applauded.

“I know myself my Lord, to have made the King's honour and interest with the prosperity of his people so much the rule of my administration at all times that I am under no pain or solicitude about complaints—if I may but have time to answer—and yet may it please your Lordship there will always be grumbletonians in every Government.”

1740, May 14th. Governor Belcher to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Boston.

“May it please Your Lordship—I do in the first place humbly ask pardon for the trouble I am now necessitated to give you upon the late accounts receiv'd from my friends of the violent pushes of my enemies to get my Commission for this Government and that of New Hampshire superseded, they have not stuck at lying and forgeries to obtain an opportunity of wreaking their boundless malice upon me, of this the Hon^{ble} Sir Charles Wager can give your Lordship a flagrant instance.”

“It is now near 10 years since I arriv'd here with His Majesty's Commissions for this and the neighbouring Government in which time I have met with more difficulties than any of my predecessors for my firm adherence to His Majesty's royal instructions and thereby constantly maintaining the honour and prerogative of the Crown and which has made

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

the Assembly of this Province so strait and stingy in their grants for my support that I have been oblig'd every year to spend considerable of my own fortune, to live in some measure equal to the dignity of his Majesty's Commission. I am told that the length of time I have held the Royal Commission has been given for reason why they should now be taken from me; which with great deference I apprehend can be no reason at all. Nor do I believe His Majesty has at any time made that a rule either at home or in his plantations for dismissing his servants. Had I indeed roll'd up a fortune by the favour of the King's Commissions, the length of time might be alleged with some colour of reason for my having a successour. But I must humbly beg leave to lay before your Lordship, the plain and naked truth of the matter in that respect. At the time I received the honour of His Majesty's Commissions I was one of the principal men of trade in this countrey, but at that time I quitted every other way of life and devoted my self to his Majesty's service in the Governments where he had plac'd me and as I observed before have been hitherto a great sufferer in my private fortune, since my coming into the Government, and now to be dismiss'd it without any provision being made for me, would be such a severity as I humbly beg you would let me hope from your goodness may not pass upon me. I have a large family of children and grandchildren and to take away my bread and theirs would indeed be very shocking. And I can assure your Lordship, let my enemies pretend what they please, the people are so easy that I am satisfied 7 in 8 are desirous of my continuance and a change would make great discontents and give the King's Ministers new troubles where they have had too much already. Let me therefore again earnestly intreat for an interest in your Lordship's favour and compassion at this critical juncture.

1740, August 12th. A letter, extracted from a New England newspaper of this date, dated at Boston.

"It is now certainly known that Col. Blakeney brought over more than 30 blank Commissions to be fill'd up by the several Governours of his Majesty's Provinces and Colonies. . . .

" . . . And in this Province the nomination of ten captains was made, and beating orders issued out the 9th of July; and in less than three weeks after we had 7 companies completed, 6 of which made their appearance in Boston by that time, and by this time it is hoped that the ten companies designed to be raised are near all becoming completed.

" . . . As these observations afford a convincing proof of a true loyal spirit in the people in the Northern Colonies for the service of his Majesty and their country on this occasion, and of the importance of 'em to the British dominions, even in respect of annoying the enemy in the West Indies, I desire you will give 'em a place in your paper."

1740, Oct. 10th. John Graves to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Nutfield in New Hampshire and addressed "To the Right Honourable Lord Wilmington—Lord President of his Majestie's most Honourable Privy Council at St James's Square—London—to the care of the captain by the way of Boston."

"My good Lord.—Amidst the general joy that reigns throughout this Province upon the settlement of the boundaries, and the hopes we have of beeing soon made a separte Government, and thereby delivered from our cruil oppressors, the great the good Lord President's praise is in every mouth, on every tongue, wee at this distance, my Lord, are not unacquainted that it is your Lordship's greatest joy and pleasure to help them to right that suffer wrong, and to deliver and relieve the oppressed, of which this Province will bee an eternal monument, and I hope will transmitt the memory of its deliverer down to the latest posterity.

But as for me, my Lord, I have not only my share in the general benefitt, my case is so particular that when your Lordship knows it you will pardon this liberty. My Lord, my estate in the Province lyes ten miles within any part of the dividing lines, and seven miles within the lines the Massechusetts themselves claimed, when they were obliged to deliver in their claim to the Commissioners at Hampton, yet notwithstanding all this; the Massechusetts Government have for several years passed distressed me and my neighbours in the most cruil manner, making us pay taxes to that government, or they would seize on our goods or persons, me they have torn from my family, and carried to prison as often as I refused paying their unjust demands. This was my real case, but now I am most happy with my family, in a peaceable enjoyment of what belongs to us; and in full hopes of seeing this Province very soon delivered from the oppressive tyrannical Government it has long groand under, and of becoming a flourishing Province, and usefull to our mother country.

Your Lordship cannot be ignorant of the temper of the Massechusetts Government, and the Massechusetts Governour, and what scandalous methods they have taken to procure applications to his Majesty, in prejudice to this Province of New Hampshire. Suffer me, my Lord, to acquaint you with what they are now about; my Lord, as soon as they found that his Majesty had determined the boundarys of that superbe unruly Province of the Massechusetts, which had for many years been making encroachments on his Majesty's Province by granting away a great many townships thereon; And now those townships naturally falls within his Majesty's Province of New Hampshire, and notwithstanding the possessors of those townships were as well satisfied to fall in his Majesty's Province as to be under the Charter government; it being quite indifferent to them whither they paid taxes to one Government or the other, as the settlement of the boundarys only determined jurisdiction, and did not hurt their propertys, yet the Massechusetts Governor and Parson Wells, and other officers and servants of the Massechusetts Government, have by their threats and promises, spirited up those poor unthinking people, and have prepared a great many petitions for them, and have prevaild on a great many to sign then, therein praying his Majesty to give those townships back again to the Charter Government of the Massechusetts, and some of their reasons are, that one part of these great stragling townships will fall in one Province and the other part in the other Province, as tho that could be of any ill concequence, more than in great Britain, where some towns and parrishes are in two or three countys, and the Government of the Massechusetts are now sending to Great Britain one of their Assembly as a private Agent for those townships, butt abbetted and supported by the publick.

But we trust in God all those petitions will meet the same fate of another most wicked one which we hear was privately sent home, and presented to his Majesty, sign'd by six of the Council of this Province, who have all along signed and done every thing they have been ordered to do by the Massechusett Government, to defeat the settlement of the boundarys, and we have great confidence that your Lordship's great penetration and know[n] love to justice and equity will defeat all those wicked and crafty devices.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

My Lord, I have only to lay my self at your Lordship's feet most humbly to implore your pardon in presuming (in the fullness of my heart) thus farr. And I most heartily pray to God, that for the sake of this his Majesty's Province, and all other his Majesty's American dominions, that it would please him long, very long, to bless your Lordship with life and health to support your high station, to bee a glory to the present, and an example to future ages."

1740, Nov. 13th. Governor Belcher to Mr Partridge. Dated at Boston.

"Sir—I have your kind letters of August the 16th and 18th, September 5th, 13th, 17th and 18th by Laws, Bishop, Perkins and Hall, with copies of a great number of letters wrote to me from considera[ble] persons, to assist in my establishment. What shall I say, brother? You are an unwearied good friend. It's impossible for you to do more than you do for my service and interest. I take a kind notice also of what you say of my dear Mr. Belcher of the Temple's great diligence and care in doing every thing in his power that may be of any advantage to his father.

I see Dunbar has got himself made a bankrupt.—Why don't the creditors make the rogue sell his Surveyour's place, which may perhaps fetch 500*l.*, and make the large poundage to them. When he has got clear of the Statute I suppose I must be plagued with him again. I am glad to see, by yours of 13th September, you have got clear of paying J. Sharp's dreadful bill of 95*l.*; it would have been a cruel unjust thing for any body to have expected I should have paid a farthing of it, when the Province had taken the affair upon themselves for their own vindication.—I thank your care of my letters for Baron Scroop, Mr. Whitworth, and Sir Charles Wager.—I take a very particular notice of what past between you and Coll^o Mordaunt, according to what you write he is capable of doing us great service.

I hope to get time to write him and some others by this ship, which may be pleasing to them—I now send you Lewis's powers to receive from Lord Wilmington the money due to the Thetchers, which matter I hope will be pleasing to his Lordship.—I could not make the thing move faster than it has. Our worthy friend Coram writes me a particular account of his conversation with his Excellency Mr. [Horatio] Walpole about Paul the Preacher (as Coram calls him). I find you had also been with Mr. Walpole when you found Mr. Hyam. I hope Sir Charles Wager, Captain Coram, Mr. Hyam and you, will be able to keep H[oratio] W[alpole] in tolerable temper. If Dudley writes him [that] I hinder his auditing the accounts, he writes him a downright falsehood, for he has never since I have been in the Government apply'd to me (according to the best of my remembrance) in any one thing relating to his office as Deputy Auditor, nor have I ever obstructed him.—I have a tolerable kind letter from Mr. Walpole of 10th September per Hall to which I shall make answer in a little time.

If the Parliament should do nothing this Session about the paper currency in the Plantations, it will occasion vast ruin and confusion to the British trade and to all the inhabitants of the Colonies. I say it is absolutely necessary to be brought under a regulation without delay. You'll see by my letters and the prints to the Secretary of State, and Lords of Trade, what I have done about Colman's wicked projection. Never was there so vile a cheat set on foot, yet what is done about it will not be sufficient without an Act of Parliament.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Kilby is a sorry fellow, and you must watch his waters, he'll be ready to do any ill office to the Governor he can.—I am glad Wilk's partner would not suffer him to come in with them.—He is generally supposed to be a man of no substance.—If John Merrett is not my friend he must be what I can't believe, for he writes his wife with the greatest respect and friendship to me, and talks bitterly against my enemies, and such paragraphs of his letters she has re'd to me once and again.

I think you dispos'd of the hams very well. Honest worthy Coram is a choice friend, and capable of good service. Mr. Belcher will read to you what I write him about the forg'd letter deliver'd to Sir Charles Wager by Waldo and your reputation is greatly concerned to get Sir Charles answer to what I now write him, in 2 or 3 lines, of Waldo's delivering him or his servant that letter, for it seems he and his friends here absolutely deny that it was he who deliver'd it. So pray clear up the matter and send it to me, because you mention to me, in more letters than one, that Waldo deliver'd it and I have no doubt of it.

I thank you for the Lucern seed by Hall, and pray you to tell Mr. Switzer not to send me any because I wrote him by Waters to send me the quantity now come.

Hall having had the small pox aboard in his passage, the ship rides [in] quarantine below the Castle, so I have not receiv'd the seed, nor the cane you have sent me, for which I see you paid 9*l.* 9*s.* 0*d.* Pray is it so much over the two ounces of gold I sent your nephew to buy the cane, if it be it must be an extraordina[ry] cane to cost above 7*l.* sterling. Pray let me know how this is. When I write to my son for anything it is his duty to send it, if he can, or write me he cannot.—He has got into an odd way of treating me lately which makes me justly angry.—I have wrote him largely upon it by this ship, and if he does not for the future strictly observe my orders, he will bitterly repent, when too late, his provoking neglect of me [which] has stretcht my patience to its utmost limits. Yet, brother, I love him dearly, and he must not be cramp't in his studies, and if he will reform I will still do to the utmost of my power to support him. You must therefore still comfort and supply him. I heartily wish you and Captain Coram could help him to a good wife, or that you could promote him in the way of his profession. He can't now be esteem'd a young lawyer, having been above nine years in the Temple. Good brother, continue to be a father to him. I see all things are tending to a warr with France, which will be a dreadfull thing to all the Plantations, and to this Province in a more particular manner. I have receiv'd the instruction from the Lords Justices for running the line between this Prov[ince] and New Hampshire, which shall be carried into execution as far as lyes in my power—I understand, since the arrival of the last ships, my Enemies have a great dependance upon a revival of the censure past on me last year in the Privy Council.

I know they would move heaven and hell, if it were in their power, to get me out at the King's return, but considering the vast interest you have made for me, I hope they will be finally defeated and disappointed."—I know I shall stand in need of all the strength you can make, so pray, brother, be still alive and on the sharp look out—I remain—Sir—Your Loving Brother

J. BELCHER."

1740, Nov. 19th. Governor Belcher to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Boston and unaddressed.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

"It is some time since I have done myself the great honour of writing Your Lordship, fearing I might be troublesome.

The last spring I received your Lordship's commands, thro' Mr. Partridge, in the matter of two legacies left by Thomas Thetcher to some of his family here, and in which one of your Lordships manners was concerned. I have taken all the pains I could to comply with your Lordship's orders, and till now we have not been able to do it but by this conveyance I transmit full powers from the legatees of Thetcher to Mr. Partridge, for his receiving their money and for giving the proper discharges. I esteem'd it a great honour to receive your Lordship's commands, as I shall whenever your Lordship can think I may be able to render you any acceptable service in this part of the world.

I humbly beg of Your Lordship to let me hope to be restored to your countenance and protection in all things your Lordship shall judge to be just and reasonable."

1740, Nov. 19th. Governor Belcher to his brother-in-law Mr. Partridge. Dated at Boston.

"Sir—I have your kind favour of 1st of last month, per Comrin, and observe Coll^o Blakeney's Bill for 150*l.* sterling sent you by Mr. Oliver was accepted, as I doubt not the others will be which I deliver'd Mr. Gatcomb being for 356*l.* 2*s.* sterling, and I think went per Harris about a month agoe. In paying the troops I made a mistake of 10*l.* sterling to my prejudice, which I must endeavour to rectify with Coll^o Blakeney and send you his order for it.

I see the merchants had met and sign'd a petition to be delivered the King at his return about Colman's Land Scheme, which petition was [drawn up] under the direction of Captain Tomlinson who was wrote to about it while I was in my other Government; it was certainly an extraordinary step to put any of the affairs of this Province, into the hands of a man who has on all occasions substantially approv'd himself a bitter enemy to the Province. You will find by the prints now sent you, what I have further done for discouraging that wicked scheme, yet I believe nothing less than an Act of Parliament will put an end to it the undertakers are so needy and so violent in the pursuit of it. K[il]by is but an ignorant fellow, and I think will soon overset himself. I see he had been introduced by young Clark to Horace Walpole, for what reason I can't tell, but I take that Clark to be one of my enemies. Before I received your last you'll see what I had wrote Sir Charles Wager and you [on the] 15th currant on the head of the forg'd letter; whoever may say that I have said Sir Charles wrote me that Mr. Waldo delivered it to him asserts a right down falsehood, for I never said any such thing; what Sir Charles wrote me about it, I have recited in my letter to him by this conveyance. I see Waldo is trying to take vengeance upon you about it, and had been with Sir Charles, and that Kilby told Allen Sir Charles denies he wrote me that Waldo delivered him the letter, which [he] must say, if he says anything about his writing, for he never did write me so. However I am glad honest Coram is positive that Sir Charles told him that Waldo did deliver him the letter, and of which I have not the least doubt, and I verily believe, Dunbar and he wrote the letter between them. I very kindly thank you for being so early with Sir Charles to ward off[f], any impressions they might otherwise have made on him to my prejudice. You seem to think Jer[emiah] Allen is really now my friend, and that being much with Kilby he lets Mr. Belcher into things that are of advantage to me to be known. I have told his brother M^r James

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

Allen here in part what you write, and that I will serve him at the next election, but it must be kept a secret that the Governor is in his interest, or he may by its being known lose his choice. Mr James Allen has acted very much the Gentleman in the affair I have depending with Lloyd's executors, towards which I paid him the last week two thousand pounds sterling.

I am mightily pleas'd with your prudent suggestions to me about H[oratio] Walpole and Mr. Leheupe, both which things I shall put in practice in the wisest manner I can.

This is the first day of the sitting of the Assembly here, to whom I shall mention the affair of his Excellency the Auditor Generall of Accounts in the Plantations.

I am fully with you that the Assembly can't fail of serving their country by doing the two things you mention.

I am oblig'd to you for letting me know what Mr. Hodson said to you respecting Coll^o Wendall, and have received that paragraph of your letter to the Coll^o, and return'd him my hearty thanks for his sincere respect, for such it is when a man will part with his money to serve his friend, and is what very few will do. Men will make professions, write letters, and make fine speeches, all of which cost nothing, but parting with a man's substance argues real friendship.

I thank your care in sending me the cloathing per Comrin according to my order, as also for the little box done up in blew paper. I have rec'd all in good order.

I have, brother, a chargeable fatiguing time of it, and am obliged to give you and my son a vast deal of trouble, as well as the rest of my friends. What volumes do I write, it must be tiresome for you, and my son, to read and deliver them. Herewith you will receive a great number of my letters; those left open for yours and Mr Belcher's perusal, you'll read seal and deliver, what of them you please. Your friend Dr Lee Dicker is far from a man of the common sort. A most sensible ingenious gentleman. I am told Benning Wintworth intends to push to be made Lieut Governor of New Hampshire, but I hope it won't be so, if it should, I pray you to take care that his Comission be drawn onely in the common form, and that he have no power to command in chief when I am in Massachusetts. If he should it would be an actual superseding of my Commission, for he might then call Assemblies, appoint civil and military officers, and do all other acts of Government, and I should be Governor there onely for two months in a year. He might also get an Act past for repealing the Act of setting my salary, and get it fixt upon himself, and continually turn out every officer of my appointment, the minute I get over the line. In short for any Lieut Governor to be invested with the chief command, would open a scene of dreadfull confusion in the Government, and among the people, and there can be no colour of reason for transferring the power of the Governor to anyone else while I am in Massachusetts, and the post and carrier pass always twice a week. It might be as reasonable to transfer such a power to some persons in several counties in this Province that are further from Boston, than Portsmouth is. I have, brother, a hard task in the Government to have such a number of enemies, watching for my halting, and to pick holes, where there are none. I am thankful to God that I do even so well as I do, and often think it requires a man of greater genius than I can pretend to be, to steer intirely clear, and lick himself whole. However, courage, my brother, and I hope in a little time, we shall weather out these storms, and that things will grow more pacifick. The great Lord Coke took for his

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

motto prudens qui patiens. The enemies here say they have letters by Hall that Sh[ir]ly's Commission is actually made out and waits only the King's coming for signing it, and I am told the man really believes it tho' I don't, but I do believe they'll all hands join ultimum facere conatum at the King's return for my removal. You may depend our N[ew] E[ngland] chaps stay this winter on purpose, yet I am not much concern'd when I consider your unparallel'd vigilance and diligence, and the great interest you have made in my favour. I first of all submit myself to the care of God's providence, and then in the hopes of your further good offices, and success, I shall endeavour to make myself quiet. I cannot conclude this letter without repeating again (altho I have done it times without number) my affection and tender regard to my good and dear son Jona[than] whom I pray you to comfort and incourage in his studies, and to supply him with whatever may be necessary, and at [the] same time tell him I expect he grows a better husband of his money than heretofore, or he must find a way himself to comply with his profuseness. I don't suppose you ever spent near so much annually as he constantly does from your being a married man and with a family, to this day; let that be as it will I grow in years and neither can nor will go on to struggle and straiten myself, as I have done now for near ten years, on his account. He must therefore strive hard to get forward in his practice in the Hall, and as he is turn'd of thirty he is of full age to be married, and I heartily wish he could bring that grand article in life to bear to his comfort and honour. Pray continue to be kind and good and a father to him. Were it not for him I should not so lye in your debt, from year to year, which grieves me, and I am now endeavouring to sell an estate I have about fifty miles from this town to remit you the money, and I will further contrive to remit you some other monies in a little time."

1741, May 23rd. Jonathan Belcher, junior, to Lord Wilmington. Dated in the Middle Temple and unaddressed.

"My Lord, Your great goodness to my father whilst he had the honour of His Majesty's Commissions, and particularly in condescending to interpose for his continuance in the Governments will for ever claim from him and his family the highest possible returns of gratitude and duty.

It will, my Lord, be a secret satisfaction to my father in his retirement, that he has zealously and steadily pursu'd the interests of his royal master, and that his behaviour in the Massachusetts has receiv'd the honour of your Lordship's approbation.

I could not answer it to my father when I see him if I had omitted my humble acknowledgements in his behalf of your Lordship's favour, which I hope will prevail with you to pardon this presumption."

JONATHAN BELCHER.

1742, April 30th. Copy of a letter from Governor Shirley to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Boston.

"My Lord,—It afforded me much pleasure to hear from M^r Tomlinson that your Lordship is pleas'd to permit him to give me and my friends an assurance of your favourable disposition towards me. As this goodness of your Lordship demands my most grateful acknowledgements, so it will excite my constant endeavours to merit your Lordship's favour and protection by the best services I can render to his Majesty and the country, which I am sensible are the only terms of my preserving that most valuable approbation and friendship, which is of itself singly sufficient to recommend me to the esteem of all parties. It gave me also great satisfaction to find by Mr Tomlinson's letter that I was honour'd with the concurrence of your Lordship's sentiments in what I proposed for the supply of the Treasury here, before I knew from my instructions that I was at liberty to give my consent to the issuing of 30,000*l.* Bills of Credit for that purpose; soon after the arrival of which instruction I made use of that liberty, which his Majesty's service necessarily required I should do, as I had no other possible method of putting the ruinous fortifications of the Province into a defensible condition, and preventing his Majesty's forts and garrisons from being deserted for want of cloaths and pay, or promoting the raising the recruits here for his Majesty's service in the expedition. Upon all which accounts I hope what I have done in the supply of the Treasury will not be disapproved of, especially as I have taken care to put the Province Bills upon a better foot than they were ever emitted on before, by securing all private creditors from being hurt by any future depreciating of those Bills, and putting it out of the Assembly's power to postpone the drawing 'em in beyond their limited periods of payment, which new regulations seem to be the most effectual provision for securing the publick faith and private justice that a paper currency will admit; and to bid fair for curing the chief mischiefs and inconveniences arising from it to the British merchants as well as creditors within the Province, and in a great measure answer all the ends of his Majesty's instructions for restraining it.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Since my consenting to this supply of the Treasury I have been informed by Mr. Thomlinson that my Lords Commissioners of 'Trades &c., have declared their opinion against any emission of Bills of Credit in this Province tho' the merchants who attended 'em approved of what I proposed; but I may assure your Lordship that whilst the Government of Rhode Island are unrestrain'd in their emissions, all restraints of that sort laid by his Majesty on the Province will be ineffectual to prevent the mischiefs proposed by their Lordships to be thereby cured. For that little Colony will of itself issue Bills enough to supply all New England with a paper medium, and in such case the effect of further restraints laid on this Province will only tend to clogg his Majesty's Government in it with difficulties, and subject the people of it to the necessity of receiving the Rhode Island Bills at any rate, than which (according to their present scheme) there never was a more palpable cheat within any of his Majesty's Colonies, which had the countenance of the Government of the Colony.

"In one of my former I troubled your Lordship with some mention concerning the effects of the late Act of Parliament for suppressing the two money schemes call'd the Silver Scheme and the Land Bank or Manufactory Scheme; since which many persons concern'd in both those schemes have been in great consternation and distress; for the Act has destroy'd the agreements and contracts, which pass'd between the directors and partners of each company, and has subjected every person concern'd in 'em to the demands of all the possessors of the bills, by which means it has happen'd that the honester part of each company, who have comply'd with the directions of the Act by bringing in their quotas of the bills to be consumed, still remain exposed to the demands of the possessors of the outstanding bills, and all penalties of the Act, and have at the same time lost all remedy against their knavish partners who obstinately refuse to redeem their respective quotas of 'em, taking advantage of their bonds and other securities for that purpose being annull'd and made void by the Act. To prevent this ruin to many private families and confusion to the publick, the Assembly and Council upon the petition of the worthier part of each of the late companies pass'd one of the enclosed orders No. 1, and most earnest solicitations have been made to me by the sufferers to give my consent to it; but as the remedy proposed by it is at the bottom founded upon the supposed subsistence of the mutual agreements and contracts made at first between the directors and partners of each of the companies, which are deem'd and declared by the Act of Parliament to be illegal and void ab initio I could not possibly come into it. But to retrieve the sufferers and preserve the publick peace and quiet, so far as was in my power, I form'd and promoted the inclosed order of the General Court No. 2, which is consistent with the Act, and I understand has considerably alarm'd the deficient partners, and will I hope, help to make the Act of Parliament have its full effect, and draw in all the outstanding Bills properly. As I troubled your Lordship with a copy of my first Message to the Assembly concerning the settlement of the sallary, I take the liberty to inclose copies of the subsequent Messages between me and the Assembly upon that head, which contain the whole of their pretences for not complying with his Maj^{ty}'s instruction and my answer to 'em. How far the Province may be prevailed upon towards complying with the instruction the first Session of the next General Court will determine."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1742, June 8th. Letter of Colonel David Dunbar, Lieut. Governor of New Hampshire and Surveyor General of his Majesty's Woods in North America, to Lord Wilmington, First Lord of the Treasury.

Enclosing a Petition to the Treasury and also his correspondence with the Privy Council, the Board of Trade, and the Navy Board, with reference to his claims for compensation for having built forts at Pemaquid and Fort Frederick and having settled people on some lands which he deemed to be in the western part of Nova Scotia but which had since been found to belong to Massachusetts.

AMERICAN PLANTATIONS, ISLANDS, ETC. (MISCELLANEOUS).

1714-1754.

1714, Oct. 18th. A report on the Plantations of America. In French. Unsigned. 17 pp.

[1715?]. A Report prepared by the Board of Trade for the House of Commons, relating to Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, Cape Breton, etc. In book form. 93 pp.

It commences:—

"We have extracted the particulars of what was transacted at the Board relating to the treaties of commerce with France and Spain, and relating to Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, Cape Breton &c. : and have subjoined our reflections thereon together with a state of this kingdom's trade to all parts during the peace after the treaty of Ryswick, and a further state thereof for the three first years of the war in 1702, 1703 and 1704. To which is annex'd an account of the woollen manufactures exported from Michaelmas 1697 to Xmas 1714 with our remarks thereon."

The following paragraphs are still of interest:—

"We say—that formerly the French had no right to fish on the coasts of Newfoundland, or to dry their fish there, but by leave from the

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Government here, and for such liberty they paid an acknowledgment. All Newfoundland being always look'd upon as belonging to the English together with the whole right of fishery there.

"Their late Majesties King William and Queen Mary in the Declaration of War against France the 7th of May 1689 asserted their undoubted right to Newfoundland, and assigned the encroachments of the French upon that island, and their subjects trade and fishery, as one of the injuries which occasioned that war."

"In the 10th and 11th years of the reign of that prince there was a law pass'd whereby 'tis enacted that all his Majesty's subjects shall enjoy the trade and fishery to and from Newfoundland &c. And that no alien or stranger whatsoever not residing in England shall at any time hereafter take any bait or use any sort of trade or fishing whatsoever in Newfoundland or any of the islands or places thereunto belonging.

" . . . But by the late Treaty [of Utrecht] the French are allow'd to catch fish and to dry them on land in that part of the Island of Newfoundland which stretches from the place called Cape Bonavista to the northern point of the said island from thence running down by the western side as far as Point Riche which is at least one half of the circumference of the coasts of the said Island of Newfoundland.

"The French have indeed delivered up Placentia, and what other settlements they had upon the said Islands, together with the sole right of fishery on the coasts of the other half of the said Island and the propriety of the whole.

"But even this part of the Treaty is defeated by a letter obtained from her late Majesty permitting and allowing the French to keep their possessions in case they stay, or to sell them in case they go away, in consequence whereof they pretend a property in the houses lands and beeches on which the fish is cured, so that if we cannot have them but by purchase very little in effect is yielded to the Crown of Great Britain and our fishing ships are thereby liable to great disturbances, should even the subjects of Great Britain become purchasers of those beeches, which ought to be free to all fishing ships.

"But the greatest discouragements to our whole fishing trade our navigation and our Northern Plantations in America proceeds from that fatal cession of Cape Breton to the French by the late Treaty notwithstanding the early remonstrances and pressing memorials of several traders and others to the contrary."

The letter of Queen Anne to King Louis XIV. above referred to is set out in the earlier part of the same Report, with the following introduction:—

"Before we mention the consequence of Nova Scotia to this Kingdom, with relation to its fishery, and the great quantity of trees fit for the production of naval stores, we shall take leave to make one observation more and that is that when the expedition against Nova Scotia was undertaken Col^o Nicholson had instructions from her late Majesty dated 18th of March 1709–10 signifying her pleasure that such persons in the several Governments on the continent of America who should contribute to the reduction of Port Royal &c. belonging to the enemy shou'd have the preference both with regard to the soile and trade of the country when reduc'd to any other of Her Majesty's subjects. This was signify'd to the several Governments by proclamations sign'd by Col^o Nicholson, Col^o Vetch and by Col^o Dudley Govern^r of the Massachusetts Bay. Upon this the people readily and cheerfully came in, undertook the expedition and conquer'd the place. But when Col^o Nicholson went over Govern^r of Nova Scotia in 1713 he had a letter from her late Majesty in the words following:—

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

“Whereas our good brother the most Christian King, hath at our desire releas'd from imprisonment on board his galleys, such of his subjects as were detained there on account of their professing the Protestant Religion; we being willing to show by some mark of our favour towards his subjects, how kindly we take his compliance therein, have therefore thought fit hereby to signify our will and pleasure to you that you permit, and allow such of them as have any lands or tenements in the places under your Government in Accadie and Newfoundland that have been or are to be yielded to us by virtue of the late Treaty of Peace, and are willing to continue our subjects, to retain, and enjoy their said lands and tenements without any let or molestation, as fully and freely, as other our subjects do or may possess their lands, and estates, or to sell the same, if they shall rather chuse to remove elsewhere. And for so doing this shall be your warrant. And so we bid you farewell. Given at our Court at Kensington, the 23rd day of June 1713. In the twelfth Year of Our Reign.”

1719, June 4th. Copy of a Report addressed to the Lords of the Committee for hearing appeals, signed by Paul Docminique, Thomas Pelham, Daniel Pultney and Martin Bladen, Commissioners of the Board of Trade who had been required “to consider whether any and what liberty ought to be reserved in the Patent desired by Sir Alexander Cairnes and others to be granted to them of a tract of land on the coast of Nova Scotia for all his Majesty's subjects to fish and cure the fish on the beach there &c.” 4½ pp.

1720, July 22nd. William Popple to Lord Townshend.

“My Lord—In obedience to your Lordship's commands I enclose to your Lordship the copy of a representation which I had the honour to acquaint your Lordship was drawn by M^r [John] Lock[e] in 1696. It relates to the defence of the Northern Colonies and proposes that a Captain General shou'd be appointed over them.”

The enclosure above referred to is dated at Whitehall Sept. 30th 1696, and signed by Lord Tankerville, Philip Meadows, John Pollexfen, John Locke and Abraham Hills, Commissioners on the Board of Trade. 10 pp.

1720 —. “The present state of the French settlements in Louisiana, with the number and state of the Indians lying between Carolina and Mississipi and of the fatal consequences it will be to Virginia and Carolina to suffer the French to acquire the dominion over all those Indians.” Signed by John Barnwell, and addressed to Lord Townshend as President of the Council.

1725, Nov. 8th. Copy of a complaint from four companies of foot, of one hundred men each, posted at New York, against their commander Governor William Burnet, for docking the men of their pay by paying in currency and subjecting them to other hardships. Unaddressed and unsigned. 2 pp.

The third and fourth paragraphs of this complaint run as follows:—

3. “For all Bills of 100 sterling he draws for home he receives here one hundred and sixty-five pounds New York money, with this money he pays the troops and Staff Officers here, all receipts taken from the Officers and sent home to the Agent, M^r Lahoop [Leheup] will justify they are paid in money at eight shillings p^r ounce.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

4. "By paying the troops as above he gits a percusite of above four thousand a year New York money and in his five years has got by paying the troops hear twenty thousand pounds New York money."

1728, Augt. 23rd. Robert Hunter, Governor of Jamaica, to the Duke of Portland [?] Unaddressed. Dated in Jamaica.

" The Spanish privateers continue their insults and depredations of which Mr St. Lo has given your grace a particular acc^t as he informs me. As also of the answer he received from the Spanish Gov^r on his demanding restitution or satisfaction. He is in a declining state of health, and it is much doubted if he can gett over it but I hope it is otherwise."

1735, Oct. 11th. Lewis Morris, afterwards Governor of New Jersey, to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Westminster and unaddressed.

"My Lord—I have been inform'd that the Right Hon^{ble} the Board of Trade, barely upon the credit of some letters from Coll^o Cosby Governor of New York and part of the Councill there, representing Mr Van Dam President of the Councill of New York, James Alexander and others of that Councill and myself (who have been above fourty yeares President of the Councill of New Jersie) as persons disaffected to his Majesty's person and government and as men who have given Mr Cosby unreasonable opposition in his Administration. I presume so far to depend on your Lordship's justice as to hope that neither of us shall be condemn'd unheard, nor suppos'd guilty of anything we are accus'd of by Coll^o Cosby barely upon his saying so."

1735, Dec. 27th. Henry Cunningham to Lord Wilmington. Dated in Jamaica.

" I have had four gentlemen W^m Nedham, Gershom Ely, Charles Price, and Matthew Concannen Esq^r, recommended to me by the Council and others, as persons of the greatest weight and influence among the people, and fitt to fill up the vacancies. The first was many years Chief Justice and Speaker of the last Assembly, the second has long serv'd his country in Assemblies and is at present Custos of a Precinct and Co^l of a Regiment of Militia, the third serv'd in the last Assembly and is now Custos of the most considerable Precinct of the Island, and the last is Attorney-General."

"The rebel slaves since they left the North East part of the Island have been quiet, but I find it is feared by every body of Credit here, that they are settling themselves in some strong fastnesses, and when that is done will attempt to be more mischievous than ever."

1736, July 5th. "The representation of S^r W^m Keith, Bart, relating to the dividing the Governm^t of New Jersey from that of New-York." [Addressed "To the Right Hon^{ble} my Lord Wilmington &c."]

"Most humbly sheweth—That next September it will be two years since the King was graciously pleased to receive and approve my humble petition for dividing the Government of New Jersey from New York a copy whereof is hereunto subjoined.

"That my former services in America for the space of twelve years, first as officer of the Revenue over seven Colonies, and then as Governor of Pensylvania above nine years, have been well approved of, without any complaint having ever been exhibited against me.

"That my application in many particulars here of late to serve the Province of New Jersey and the great confidence which that people have in my disposition and capacity to promote their interest, as may appear from the annex'd copy of a letter to my self from that Country, sufficiently demonstrat how much easier it would be for me, than for any stranger amongst them, to propose and perfect what may be thought necessary for supporting the just authority of His Majesty's Government in that Province.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

"Without derogating therefor from the character of any gentleman who may apply by his friends for obtaining the same employment at this juncture, I humbly presume, that the justice of my pretensions, now of two years standing, to be appointed Governour of New Jersey, will be considered as preferable to those of any other person who has not had the experience and opportunity of rendering equal service to the Crown.

"Those my Lord are the plain facts and circumstances of a case that humbly claims that protection and countenance which ever flows from your Lordship's known humanity and tenderness for every thing which appears to you to be equitable and just."

First Enclosure (in the handwriting of Sir William Keith) :—

"To the King's most Excellent Majesty,

The Representation and Petition of Sir W^m Keith Barrt.

"Most humbly sheweth—That the Province of New Jersey situated between the Colonies of New York and Pensylvania in North America is capable of great improvement with respect to its product and trade. But the said Province haveing of late years been committed to the care of the Governour of New York, for the time being, render'd it impracticable to obtain such laws and regulations of Government as were necessary for the country's improvement, because the interests of the two independent Colonies so frequently interfeir'd with each other, that the Governour's duty to both became incompatible and inconsistent.

"That the poor industrious people of Jersey have some time since petition'd your Majesty for your royal favour by granting a commission to a particular Governour for that Province to reside amongst them, whom they are both willing and able to support in a decent manner, and the rather because it can very little if at all diminish the interest of the Governour of New York, who at this time scarcely receives from Jersey a sufficiency to defray the yearly and continual expence of his attendance on their Assembly, Chancery Court, and other public affairs.

"That your humble petitioner haveing had the honour to be sent abroad Governour of Pensylvania in the year 1716 when your Majesty was at Hampton Court then Regent of the Kingdom, and haveing on that as well as several other occasions acquitted himself with an unblameable reputation in the public service, he now humbly implores your Majesty that in your great goodness you will be pleased to grant him your Royal Commission to be your Majesty's Governour in and over the Province of New Jersey, which from his long experience and knowledge of those countries, he presumes might be so improved, as in a short time to make that small Government a valuable office without any charge or expence whatsoever to the Crown."

"N.B.—This Petition was delivered at Kinsington the 5th day of Sep^r 1734 and Recommended by Sir Robert Walpole."

Second inclosure (in the handwriting of Sir William Keith) :—

Copy of a letter dated from Perth Amboy in New Jersey, the 12th March 1735-6, to Sir W^m Keith Barrt.

"Sir—Our Governour Coll^o Cosby died the 10th of this instant, and the Province of New Jersey is determined if possible to have a sepatat Governour and to grant him a support suitable to his character which they are well able to do. We wish you may have interest to be the

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

person, that this truly well disposed people may be happy under your administration and equally esteem'd with a neighbouring Colony whose wealth and present reputation is by all hands acknowledg'd to be owing to your faithfull and discreet conduct. Our people are so sensible of this, that had they a choice, you would certainly be the man, and we are perswaded his Majesty cannot appoint another so capable to raise the revenue of this Province to a sufficient support. Our Council will meet in a few days and per first opportunity you will hear their thoughts, together with their sentiments of the disposition of our Assembly upon this subject, but to gain time, no other opportunity presenting, we have thought fit to send you this via Antegua that you may bestir your self before a promise is made; and that you may find freinds and this oppress'd people relief is the hearty wishes of S^r y^r most humble servants

"WILL. SKINNER.

"AND^r JOHNSTON."

1736, Dec. 10th. Temple Lawes to Sir Thomas ———. Dated at Jamaica and unaddressed. A duplicate copy "per Capt. Poynter."

"Dear Sir Thomas—My last to you was of the 12th Sept^r giving you an acc^t of what progress I had made in getting in your friend's debts: and likewise of the deplorable condition of our Island and of the fatal consequences of the Gin Act to the Sugar Colonys in generall. This only serves to enclose you the reasons why some of the Council, who have been abused by the President for not giving their assent to a Bill calculated for no other end but to make him a present of £125, have thought fit to withdraw their attendance from the Board during his administration, and to beg the favour of you to stand by us and to use your utmost interest with the Board of Trade and Secretary of State to support us, in case the President should misrepresent the proceedings of the Board, since we have done nothing more than in support of his Majesty's prerogative and of the King's instructions which he would have broke thro', and for our opposing him in which he taxed us not only with a breach of duty to his Majesty, but a violation of our oaths, in a speech at the close of that Sessions of Assembly.

"If this won't justify us, I don't know any gentleman that has any regard to his honour and reputation [who] would sit at that Board only to be made a tool of, or else to be insulted and abused for not sacrificing his understanding and the interests of his country to the private views of a man who has accidentally got into power. For my part I can swear for myself and can take upon me to answer for the other three gentlemen that we neither have nor can be thought to have any private views, nor any other purposes to serve than the common good of the Island and his Majesty's service. We have no salaries nor posts of profit, on the contrary we are oblig'd to be at an extraordinary expence of 2, or £300, a year in giving our attendance upon the publick service, besides the loss of so much time from our famillys and plantations.

"I beg Sir you will represent this matter in such a light to the Board of Trade and the Duke of Newcastle, if we may be justified and supported in the opposition we have made to a President that would have broke thro' a positive* instruction from the King."

The following is the enclosure above referred to. It is endorsed "Reasons why four of the Council withdraw during M^r Gregory's Administration."

* Vide the Instruction to Mr. Cunningham not to pass such a Deficiency Law.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

"Some reasons why we, the underwritten Members of his Majesty's Council, do for the present withdraw our attendance from the Board.

"1st . . . Because the President during his whole Administration hath taken upon him to act in matters of the greatest importance not only without but contrary to the advice and consent of the Council.

2^d . . . That the Council having been oblig'd to a tedious attendance of fourteen weeks during the last Sessions of Assembly were greatly harrassed in their persons injur'd in their fortunes and abused in their stations without any reason that we conceive but to force their assent to some clauses in the deficiency and Rum Bills, which they judg'd partial and unreasonable.

3^d . . . That the present Session of Assembly was called without the advice of the Council, and without any pressing necessity that we are informed of unless it were to procure those clauses to be pas'd in some law before the arrivall of a Governor.

4th . . . That during those Sessions of Assembly the Council having rejected some Bills that did not seem necessary the President did in his speech at the close of the last Session insinuate that the Council were not only wanting in their duty to His Majesty and this Island but regardless of the oaths they had taken in their stations, an imputation to which we shall forbear to give the proper epithet, but which appear'd to us so horrid that nothing should have prevail'd on us to have given our attendance at this Board, but that the number of the Council (until this Session) was so small that we could not withdraw ourselves without a manifest obstruction to the publick business.

5th . . . That as we have not yet receiv'd from his Majesty's Principall Secretary of State and Lords of Trade, any redress for Mr. Gregory's conduct, pursuant to our most humble Address to His Majesty and representation to his Grace and their Lordships, we conceive the Council may be lyable to be insulted on the like occation by any of their fellow Councillors who may hereafter assume the Government.

For these and severall other weighty reasons which we think not proper at this time to insert we think it inconsistent with our honour our character or our interest to give our attendance longer at this Board during the present administration and therefore we take the liberty to withdraw from the same.

EDWARD CHARLTON.

HENRY DAWKINS.

WILLIAM GORDON.

TEMPLE LAWES.

St Jago De la Vega
November 27, 1736.

1737, April 15th. A letter from Richard Fitzwilliam, Governor of the Bahamas. Dated at New Providence, and endorsed by Lord Wilmington "Received April 19th 1738." 5 pp.

The writer answers complaints that had been made against him by Cuthbert Jackson, John White and others, and asks for preferment.

1737, June 30th. Edward Trelawny, Governor of Jamaica, to Lord Wilmington. Dated in London. 3½ pp.

"My Lord—Our foreign Plantations being under the protection of His Majesty's Council where your Lordship presides, I beg leave to lay before you some reasons for not removing any of the eight companies now established by Parliament in Jamaica.

. I am then fully persuaded that your Lordship's prudence and just regard for the welfare of His Majesty's Plantations, will not allow you to come into a measure that will weaken and render insecure so valuable a part of them, and that you will not be of opinion to take a step of such consequence to Jamaica as the withdrawing half the forces from thence, without being moved to it by the Legislature of the Island, who your Lordship may be assured will be glad to save the subsistence money they pay to the soldiers as soon as their safety will allow them to do it."

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSB.

[1737.] The Case of James Buchanan of London merchant and others concerned and interested in the ship Scipio, Alexander Mackpherson master. Undated.

The case relates to the capture and recapture of this ship in Jamaican waters.

1739, April 22nd. Governor Trelawny to Lord Wilmington. Dated in Jamaica.

"I put off the meeting of the Assembly as long as it was possible: they met on the 13th of March; they persisted in renewing the former clause to tax the Jews. Having received no farther orders from His Majesty and the former Act which provides for the subsistence of His Majesty's Troops being to expire next day, I consulted the Council, who unanimously advised me, for the reasons hereunto annexed, to pass the Bill, in which Bill the country pay of each private soldier is increas'd from six to eight rials per week. I hope your Lordship will be of opinion that I could not avoid doing so without exposing His Majesty's troops to famine, and the country to disorders which might arise from their mutiny, of which they were formerly guilty upon the like occasion."

1739, Nov. 12th. Governor Trelawny to Lord Wilmington. Dated in Jamaica.

"My Lord—Mr. Sharpe acquaints me how much I am obliged to your Lordship for my success in the five Councillors I recommended, a point of great consequence to me in the beginning of Administration; nor am I a little obliged to your Lordship for the great share you had in the order of Council whereby I had a discretionary power to pass the Bill wherein the Jews were taxed for the current year. Give me leave to return you my most humble and sincere thanks, and to assure your Lordship of my constant endeavour to deserve the continuance of your protection by acting zealously and disinterestedly for his Majesty's service. Since it is his Majesty's determination that I shall not for the future give my consent to a separate tax on the Jews, I will take care not to disobey his commands, tho' I much fear it may embroil me with the Assembly, and hinder them from giving the usual subsistence to his Majesty's independent companies.

On the 6th of this instant Samuel Dicker and Rose Fuller Esq^{rs} and Sir Simon Clarke Baronet were sworn into the Council, pursuant to his Majesty's several orders for that purpose. I delayed swearing in Samuel Whitehorne Esq, upon account of the complaint made against him in the petition and affidavit hereunto annexed. I have communicated them to him and had his answer, but wait for the reply of the complainant. As Mr. Whitehorne was recommended by me I think I ought to be the more cautious in admitting him into the Council, before he purges himself more satisfactorily of this charge, being of opinion that if it is proved, it is of such a nature that by my 67th instruction he ought not to be admitted into any publick trust or employment and especially into this, which is the greatest. Edward Garthwaite Esq^r the fifth Councillor ordered to be sworn is absent from the Island."

P.S. Vice-Admiral Vernon sailed from this place the fifth inst to attack Porto-bello."

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

1740, May 3rd. An Extract from the Journal of the Council of Jamaica of this date. Signed by Samuel Williams, Secretary and Clerk to the Council. 2½ pp.

1740, May 14th. The Honorable Robert Byng, Governor of Barbadoes, to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Pilgrim. 1 page.

The writer will transmit to the Board of Trade several Acts which have passed the Legislature and desires his Majesty's leave to appoint Reynold Hooper Esq^{re} to fill up the vacant seat of one of the Councillors.

1740, Sept. 10th. Extract from a Letter from Thomas Penn Esq^{re} to Mr. Paria, dated at Philadelphia.

"You will find the scheme for raising men in America had had a very good effect, and I believe about 4600 will be carried, from these Colonys; and though this Province cannot furnish the number my Lord Monson proposed, yet, the eight companys are a considerable number, and are now compleat. Mr. Freame has turned soldier, and has the command of one. We have eight ships ready for their imbarcation, and they are to go on Board in a few days; the behaviour of the Governor, [the Lieut. Governor Theophilus Thomas?], upon this occasion, I cannot help, again, telling you has been such as every man would wish to hear of his best friend, his zeal for the service, and desire to obey his Majesty's commands, has surmounted all the difficultys that have been thrown in his way; but, I believe, there are not many who could have conducted the affairs in the same manner, and brought it to a period. He visits all the companys; sees them perform their exercises, makes speeches to encourage them, and sets before them the great advantages that will attend their serving their country, cautions them against desertions, and gives them mony, out of his own pocket, and, in every branch of the business, acts the most disinterested, and generous part that 'tis possible for any man to do; every gentleman here has endeavoured to do what service they could, and none, but brutes, could avoid it, when they considered the duty they owed their country, and the good example set them by their Governor, who deserves the best Government in the King's gift; great care has been taken to get the best provisions for the men, at the very lowest rates, the Governor scorning to make one penny to himself; and, I hope, when they come to the place of rendezvous, our batalion will make as good a figure, as any of our neighbours."

[Circ. 1740.] The humble petition of John Mason and Samuel Mason of Connecticut gentlemen To the Right Hon^{ble} the Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations: Sheweth—

That a former petition from your petitioners, in behalf of the Mohegan [or Mobican] Indians, and as trustees for them and their lands, And also another petition proved by two persons' oaths to be signed by no less than 57 of those Indians themselves having been presented to his Majesty and referred to your Lordships, your Lordships were pleased to hear the partys thereon on the 19th and 20th of Dec. 1739.

. in humble hopes that your Lordships will be pleased to advise his Majesty to grant that whole relief your petitioners beg leave to submit the following matters to your Lordships' consideration.

1. That the Indians' clear right to the lands in question, appears incontestably from the solemn judgment unanimously pronounced by Colonel Dudley and the others of Queen Ann's Commissioners in Aug^t 1705—which judgment, tho execution thereof remains to be done and is suspended, is not avoided.

2. That it was the people of Connecticut who prayed for the Commission of review of that solemn judgment

3. That the late Commission which issued, was only in lieu and stead of that which Connecticut themselves had applied for but not taken out.

4. That this late Commission (which was so grossly abused and perverted by the Rhode Island Commissioners) has answered no one end, for which it was issued.

5. That the Indians, nor yet your petitioners, have been guilty of any the least misbehaviour therein, whereby to forfeit their undoubted rights

6. That it has been the boast and glory of this Crown to have founded its Empire in America upon equity and the free consent of the natives, but the grievous wrongs and injustice done those natives by particular men and petty communities, (and of which the late is a most flagrant instance) casts a stain and blemish upon the English nation, and grievously cries for justice and redress. As well also as deserves the same in point of prudence, least the neighbouring tribes to our Settlements should go off to other nations, which it has always been thought good policy to prevent.

7. That no tribe in America ever shewed so much affection or fidelity, or rendered such signal services to this Crown and its subjects as the Mohegans have done; it appearing by the said former judgment, that they freely gave the first settlers the greatest part of their lands, and that they also constantly supported and defended them therein, with their blood and with their lives, upon every occasion, in all their wars, and against every enemy.

8. That the royal faith and honour was, in a most solemn manner pledged and given to this faithful tribe, that they should be preserved in their own reserved lands, as appears in the said former judgment, where Colonel Dudley and the rest of the Queen's Commissioners did in her Majesty's behalf return the Mohegans thanks for their zeal and affection to her Majesty's crown and Government and the interest of this nation, and assured them that her Majesty would be always ready to take care of them and their people, both in protecting of them & in *preserving of their rights and property*s.

9. That without a Commission of review, their rights and propertys thus wrongfully invaded must be inevitably lost

10. That what the Crown allows on this occasion does not quite defray the expence here

11. That it will not be at all necessary that these expences should be again repeated but the present desired Commission will be the last, if his Majesty shall be pleased to direct the same to proper Commissioners, and to direct, as was done in the first Commission to Colonel Dudley, and as was also done in the late Commission [for settling the boundaries] between New Hampshire and the Massa[achusetts] Bay, that an appeal should be [allowed to be] made from the Commissioners determination to his Majesty in Co[ouncil]l; the judgment on which appeal will for ever close and put an end to the matter.

12. That upon the last Commission the Rhode Island Commissioners publicly avow, (upon their own minutes) that in open defiance of the royal Commission and the express comands therein contained, they absolutely and repeatedly refused to look upon the former proceedings, which they were comanded to examine and review—to hear the Indians themselves, whom they had summoned and who were present in court

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

and desired to be heard, to hear the trustees for the tribe, who were also present and prest to be heard, or to hear their co[unse]ll Mess^{rs} Shirley and Bollan two gentlemen of character whom at a large expence they had got to attend the Commissioners, to defend the rights of these poor people. After all which yo^r Petitioners humbly hope your Lordships will consider the whole that was done by such Commissioners, as a gross abuse and piece of injustice and utter nullity . . .

13. That it is evident that the pretended release from Ben Uncas would not bear the least opposition or examination, for if it would, the Rhode Island Commissioners would gladly have permitted some one body to have been heard against the same . . .

14. That truth is sometimes so very prevalent that it will break out and shew it self notwithstanding the utmost endeavours of artful men to hide and cover the same, and which appears in the present case, for that, of the Rhode Island Commissioners' own shewing, Ben Uncas, if ever he was Sachem, was denied to be such by the tribe long before the time of his pretended rel[ease]. It was c^omanded that pending the Commission nothing should be so much as attempted to the prejudice of the Indians, and yet, that pretended release was gained, in point of time long subsequent to that Commission and just when the Commissioners were going to sett—By the Indians repeated deeds of trusts, long since and repeatedly recorded upon the publick records in Connecticut; by the judgm^t of Coll. Dudley and the rest of the Queen's Comm^{rs} in 1705; by the publick Laws of Connecticut of 13th Oct. 1692 &c., In order to prevent these Indians from being defrauded, the legal trusts of their reserved lands were vested in your petitioners' ancestors, and no deeds from the Indians were to be good without the express consent of their trustees had thereto, which is not pretended to have been had in this case . . .

"15. Besides all which, by the last accounts receiv'd from thence your petitioners have undoubted information, that the tribe threaten the said Ben Uncas with death for endeavouring to betray and prejudice their rights, and are full of bitter complaints of the injustice done them, and are restrained by gentle measures used by your petitioners' family, (who have ever been patrons to them for more than a century past) from going off to other nations not in friendship with the English, and even from revenging themselves upon their oppressors, merely from the expectation that upon a representation of their wrongs your petitioners shall obtain justice for them from his Majesty."

1742, May 25th. J. Wimble to Lord Wilmington. Dated at New Providence.

"My Lord,—Pardon me in this, knowing your Lordship's sincerity and value that you have for the British subjects, I take this liberty to acquaint your Lordship of my unhappy misfortune of loosing my ship October last past, on a reef lying three leagues west from Atwood's Keys, latitude 23.10 N. one of the Bahama Islands at nine o'clock in the night by the means of the person that had the command of the watch alter'd his course 3 points Easterly from orders which ran me ashore and by good providence sav'd all our lives and in a few days in my boat I got down to Providence which being upwards of 100 leagues from me, purchasing there a sloop from Capt. [Thomas] Frankland, Commander of His Majesties ship the Rose which he had lately taken from the Spaniards. I mann'd her with 40 men and mounted ten carriage guns and ten sweevels. [I] entered then in concer[t]ship with Capt. Davidson of the St Andrew of Rhode Islinds mounting 16 carriage guns with 60 men and on the North side of Cuba in the Old Streights of the Bahamas in the latter end of April

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

last we had the good fortune to take 4 small Spanish schooner[s] tho' of little worth, which we sent to Providence in order to be condemn'd and with an account of one of his Majesty's Seventy gun ships being cast away upon the Islands of Tordudas to leeward of Cape Florida a month before. The Spaniards knowing of this they sent 2 or 3 vessels down with about 400 men in order to take them, but the English men having got their guns on shore and their stores, fortifying themselves against any attempt of this nature prevented the Spaniards of their design, killing 3 of them, and the others return'd to the Havana, upon which the Governor of that place sent down four vessels more with 8 or 900 men to attack them the second time but what success they had I know not, I and my concert would willingly have gone down to their relief by [?but] my pilot and people would not consent to it. This news I had from the Spanish prisoners with an account of 12 sail of Spanish Man of War all lying fitted at the Havana bound to Carthagena. In a day or two afterwards we met with a Spanish ship from Cales to the Havana mounting 30 guns and 250 men and passengers. I lay under her stern for two howers and my concert not coming up and at last having the misfortune to receive a chain shot from the ship's stern chace guns which took my left arm off, about 5 inches from my body, not acquainting my people of this for some time being afraid of discouraging them, loosing a great deal of blood I fell down upon one of the guns and being taken up and carried down to my surgeon and lieutenant dropt off, from the ship's stern & speaking with my concert consulting with him they thought proper to quit the ship—this being unknown to me I was more concern'd for the loss of this valuable Prize (as she might have been if this Accident had not happened to me and my concert had come up) than I was for the loss of my Arm.

If His Majesty would trust me with a 20 gun ship the Spaniards should well pay for it.

I have got further Affidavits of the losses I sustain'd in Gov^r Rogers time, which I hope will give your Lordship full Satisfaction of the truth of the same, if ever I live to get home to England I shall depend once more upon your Lordship's goodness for payment of the same.

His Majesty's Ship the Rose is lately arriv'd here from S^o Carolina, which will go out in a few Days upon a Cruize—I am afraid (here being but few hands upon the Island) I shall be obliged to go to North America to be mann'd or else to return soon for England.

I have been kindly used here by the Governor in all my misfortunes.

Secretary Rice is also arrived here from North Carolina and gives an Acc^t that Gov^r Johnson was well when he left that Place, but he has left entirely Cape Fair & settled at Edenton.

The Spaniards have 7 Sail of Privateers fitted out of the N^o Side of Cuba cruising on the Northern Coast of America and are daily sending in Prizes to Cape Francoi, a French Port in Hispanola.

We have no Command of our men in a Port, they leave us when they please that I am almost tyerd of Privateering. If your Lordship will be so good as to procure me a small Ship in the Navy station'd here at New Providence, I would not doubt but in a short time to behave as such to give full Content to my King and Country as long as the War should hold, God sparing my Life, a line from Your Lordship of this nature directed to New Providence would be very acceptable.

J. WIMBLE."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

[1742.] An undated Petition from Sir Thomas Robinson, Bart, to the Lords of the Treasury (on his appointment by Letters Patent to be Governor of Barbadoes), for a warrant for the usual allowance or such sum as His Majesty shall think fit.

Enclosed is the following memorandum:—

"26th May 1721. Lord Belhaven receiv'd 1500^{li} for Services performed and to be performed to his Majesty as Governor of Barbadoes.

13th Sept^r. 1722. M^r [Henry] Worsley had the same Allowance.

1 July 1731. M^r Chetwynd had the same Allowance.

8 July 1732. Lord Howe had the same Allowance.

29 Oct^r 1737. Sir Orlando Bridgeman had the same Allowance.

13 Sept^r 1739. [The Hon.] M^r [Robert] Byng had the same Allowance."

[1747 ?] Extracts out of a letter from M^r Matthew, Governour of the Leward Islands, to M^r Yeamans dated Antigua March 7th. [1½ pp].

The extracts refer to the necessity of putting the Islands into a state of defence.

1754, Sept 9th. A scheme to drive the French out of all the Continent of America. Signed by Thomas Cole. 26½ pp.

LETTERS AND PAPERS RELATING TO THE SIEGE OF QUEBEC.

1758-1759.

1758, Dec. 21st. Lieut.-General Sir Richard Lyttleton, K.B., to Brigadier General the Hon. George Townshend (afterwards 4th Viscount Townshend and 1st Marquis Townshend). Dated in Cavendish Square.

"My dear George,

I beg you will lose no Time, but come to Town directly; I am not allowed to explain myself by this letter, but you may be sure my Reasons are very cogent. I should not otherwise write in this manner, but it is highly important to you to lose no Time.

Your Faithful Friend,

RICHARD LITTLETON."

[P.S.] Lord Orford's Game is not arrived.

Dec. 28th, 1758. The same to the same. Dated in Cavendish Square.

My dear Brigadier,

Lord Legonier was yesterday in the Closet, your affair was mention'd and very Graciously agreed to by His Majesty. I congratulate you most sincerely upon the honour this spirited, and magnanimous acceptance of yours, will do you in the World, as soon as it becomes known; & upon the Glory you will obtain, and I flatter myself the short Time you will be absent, and the small risque you will probably run, in this Enterprize, will in some degree reconcile good Lady Ferrers to it; I pity her from my Heart, but her Religion, & Philosophy will I hope, enable her to bear up under it; & that she will consider how different her Lot is, from the many widow'd wives, who mourn from Year to Year the Absence of their Husbands. I hope you will let her know that in all this matter, I have had nothing more to do than to lend my Hand to the Marshall, & as a Friend zealous for your Glory to applaud with all Mankind a Resolution that you yourself have taken.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

I am ever, my Dear George, your most Faithfull & Affectionate, RICHARD LITTLETON."

1759, March 14th. Rev^d Robert Leeke to Lady Ferrers. Dated at Great Snoring. 6 $\frac{1}{4}$ pp.

The Postscript is :—

"I am told by those who have been at N. America that tis very probable, as the winds have greatly favor'd, that Mr Townshend [your husband] by this time is in Sight of the Country, or not unlikely to be landed in it."

1759, April 24th. Brigadier Amherst (afterwards Lord Amherst) to Brigadier Townshend. Dated at New York, and addressed to the "Hon^{ble} Mr Townshend, Brigadier General.

"Dear Sir,

I had the pleasure on the 13th of this month of receiving your very obliging letter of the 5th of March ; your kind assurances of friendship to me, of which I have so often had proofs, make me very happy and I shall try to prove myself deserving of the continuance of it.

I am in great hopes that this Campaign may be attended with such success as will give me an opportunity of meeting you, but I wont flatter myself you will remain in this part of the world ; I should be sorry you did any longer than you like. Your assistance in the service where I am would be a great help, and very agreeable to me, and you may be assured I would make it as much so to you as I could.

Colonel [the Hon. Roger] Townshend will inform you of every thing that passes here, so that I will trouble you no more at present than that I shall gladly seize every occasion that may offer to convince you of the regard and esteem with which I am,

Dear Sir,

Your most Humble and most Obedient Servant

JEFF. AMHERST."

1759, June 7th. Colonel the Hon. Roger Townshend to Lady Ferrers. From the "Camp at Fort Edward."

"Dear Lady Ferrers,

It is with the greatest pleasure that I can inform you I received a Letter from [my brother] George a few days ago dated at Hallifax May the 1st, the whole Fleet was arrived safe & he was in perfect health ; I have taken care to supply him with fresh Provisions of all kinds, & a large quantity of Vegetables & Roots of all kinds, which are very necessary after a long Sea Voyage, he will want nothing while he is up the River [St Lawrence] that the Continent of America affords & he requires to be sent. Our affairs at present appear very favorable, no accounts as yet of the Enemy having received any Reinforcements, from Old France, & our Fleet under Adm^l Durel is certainly so very high up the River that it is impossible for them to receive any this Year without a superior Fleet which it is impossible for them to fit out. My opinion of Gen^l Amherst as an honest good Man, & my attachm^t to him as a Soldier I thought wou'd never allow me to wish that I might serve under any other person in America, but the tye of Brother & Friend united is too powerful & I confess nothing ever gave me more real concern than not being employed on the same Expedition. I shall write to you by every Pacquet, may our Armys all be successful & Canada reduced this Year, George return home in

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

safety to receive the praises due to him from his K[in]g & Country for his truly noble & spirited behavior in assisting at the Reduction of Canada, the consequence of this conquest can be no less than our giving Peace to France on any terms we please. My love to [my nephew] George & your little folks, & believe me nobody can have a more real regard, affection, & Friendship for you & your Family than your Affectionate Brother & real Friend,

R. TOWNSHEND.

P.S. Since I wrote this the Lt Governor of New England writes the Army & Fleet were all well at Louisburg, June the 3^d, & expected to sail up the River on the 12th. Adm^l Durrell has been successful and sent in four Prizes. We have no doubts of success. Our Army crosses the Lake in this month or early the next. The Enemy have got up the River a few merch[an]tmen with Provisions & one Frigate before the adm^l arrived at his Station, they are of no consequence."

1759, July 11th. Rev^d Robert Leeke to the same. Dated at Great Snoring.

. . . . "When I took my Leave of him, I desired him to accept from me as the best Present I or any one else could make him, w^{ch} was a Noble Collection of devotions suited to all Occasions, the Use of this I told him would engage Providence on his Side, & provid^{ce} would be his only Security. He thanked me, and told me he should make use of it, but must let no other officers know, that he had such a book by him. So prophane is the Army, that they think the help of God is of little or no Mom[en]t " 1759, July 20th. Admiral Sir Charles Saunders to Brigadier Townshend. Dated on board the 'Stirling Castle' and unaddressed.

"My dear Sir,

By General Wolfe's desire I have sent you three Long boats for the Hautbitzers great and small, and the Royal mortars, I shall soon send for Cannon as the General designs to make his Attack above the Town. I am with the greatest regard

Dear Sir

Yours

CHAS. SAUNDERS.

[P.S.] I believe it wou'd be best not to let the Enemy see these thing[s] removed."

1759, Sept. 6th. Brigadier Townshend to Lady Ferrers. Dated at "Camp Levi," and unaddressed.

My Dearest Charlotte

I hope Mr Perceval will arrive safe & bring you these two letters from me. The Happiness of writing to you is beyond all I know. My Concern for your sufferings, my affection for you & your Dear little ones, convince me how unfit I am for this Scene, which another Month will thank God give a Conclusion to. The Captive Women & Children which I see every Day brought in here, often tell me what I am & who belong to me, but above all, the malencholly News I received the Day before yesterday upon my arrival here from the cursed Camp of Montmorenci of my poor Brother's death has reproved me for not consulting my own nature more, when I ask'd you to [let me] return to the Army. It had then pleaded for you, when you did not plead for yourself & I had not been now in a Scene of Ambition, Confusion, & Misery; and you oppress'd as I know you must be, with Terroures & affliction. I dare say poor Lady Townshend too now starts at every knock at the Door. Let us look up with hopes my Charlotte to the Disposer of all things & trust he will in his Mercy & Goodness do all for the best. I have wrote a line to poor Lady Townshend to comfort her by convincing her of my own Health & safety. One month more will put an End to our Troubles. I never served so disagreeable a Campaign as this. Our unequal Force has reduced our Operations to a Scene of Skirmishing Cruelty & Devastation. It is War of the worst Shape. A Scene I ought not to be in, for the future believe me my dear Charlotte I will seek the reverse of it.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Genl Wolf's Health is but very bad. His Generalship in my poor opinion—is not a bit better, this only between us. He never consulted any of us till the latter end of August, so that we have nothing to answer for I hope as to the Success of this Campaign, which from the Disposition the French have made of their force must chiefly fall to Genl Amherst & Genl Johnson.

God bless you my most Dear Wife, my blessing to my Children, my good George in particular, and thank him for his Letters. I have constantly thanked God for the success in the Innoculation, a most comfortable circumstance for you. Mr Barker has been slightly wounded. Mr Gay quite recover'd & join'd us. Our Campaign is just over. I shall come back in Adl Saunders's Ship & in two months shall again belong to those I ought never to have left—Adieu—Your most affect^d Husband, & faithfull friend

GEO. TOWNSHEND.

[1759? Sept.] Lady Townshend, to her daughter-in-law Lady Ferrers. Undated and unaddressed.

"Dear Lady Ferrers

I take the benefit of being a little better in my health to day to thank you for your kind letter some times being very incapable of writing a single line.

I hope Charles' last letter to you afforded you a relief to your spirits. I trust in God we shall all soon be in a much happier situation by receiving the good News we most ardently wish for.

My Compliments to Lady Elizabeth Compton and affectionate Love to the children.

[1758, Sept. 3rd.] Lieut. Genl John Huske to the same. Dated "Fryday noon."

"My Lady

I have the infinite satisfaction to acquaint you that Genl Townshend was in fine health & Spirits at the Seige of Quebec on the 5th of July, the day it commenced. This comes by express to Gov^t this day. But as Col^o R[oger] Townshend is desperately wounded at the seige of Tyconderogo, under the Command of Genl Amhurst, I take the liberty to send you this by Express that you may place full faith & entire Confidence that it is not the Genl but Colonel Townshend that is wounded.

The express comes from N. York, so your Ladyship cannot possibly have any Letters from the General.

The news is great,

Tyconderogo & Crown Point are taken by Genl Amhurst, Aud Niagara is taken by Genl Johnson (General Prideaux being killed during the Seige) after a severe Battle with a French Army sent to raise the scige. I am this moment going to Oxfordshire post, or should send your Ladyship all the particulars, being, with the greatest deference etc.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

J. HUSKE."

1759, Sept. 10th. Rev^d Robert Leeke to the same, from Great Snoring.

"My very h^d Lady

I had the hon^r of your Ladysps this day, & should have gone immediately to Rainham, & deliver'd y^r Message to my L^d in Person, & deliver'd it with all the tenderness w^{ch} the Subject required, & with all the Concern you feel for the loss of Col^l Roger [Townshend] & for my L^d the Parent: But my L^d is not at Rainham, he hath been upon an hired Seat over since the Middle of July last, at the Edge of Hartfordshire, within 12 Miles of London Nigh the new house Admiral Byng built just before he suffer'd—but I shall write to my L^d this day & by Letter acquaint him of y^r Kind Concern for his Ldsp & for the great affliction you feel for the loss of his Son.

Y^r Ladysps Letter says, that the Troops with y^r husband landed nigh Quebec the 5th of July last, if so I wonder we have not heard from that part of the world Since, either of the troops being repulsed or the Place taken—if neither Event hath happened then there hath been a long Siege, & I fear many of our Men must have suffer'd, when order'd to march against Stone Walls. . . . M^{rs} Leeke presents her duty . . . we both Pray God to compleat all our happiness in bringing Brigadier Townshend safe into his own Country . . .

RT, LEEKE."

1759, Sept. 13th. Admiral Saunders to Brigadier Townshend. Dated on board the "Stirling Castle," and unaddressed.

"Dear Sir,

The loss of our friend General Wolfe gives me the greatest concern which in some measure is taken off by the great Victory of today: as I have not heard how you are situated, I have sent all the 24 Pounders, with their Ammunition, that I had Boats for, till those are cleared that are now above. I heartily wish you farther Success, and should be glad to know what I can do to promote it. I have had the dispatches General Wolfe sent me to go with the great Ships. They are not gone, and I shall keep them till I have Yours. I beg my best Compliments of General Murray and that you will believe me most sincerely

Yours—

CHA^s SAUNDERS.

Same date. Lady Townshend to Lady Ferrers.

"My dear Lady Ferrers,

Believe me nothing but the being incapable of writing a single line should have prevented me thanking you for your tender concern for me.

I trust in God that he will preserve the most dear thing to us in life and from that dependance am still able to support myself enough to be in hopes to exist to receive that greatest of blessings.

E. TOWNSHEND.

[P.S.] Charles is with me and writes to you by this post."

1759, Sept. 15th. Hon. Charles Townshend to the same. Dated at Grosvenor Square.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

"Dear Madam,

I am very happy to think that any letter from me has given you any relief: and I shall watch every opportunity of informing your Ladyship of whatever account we receive that can help to alleviate your fears and support your mind. I would say much more, both of your situation, Lady Townshend's, my own, our late unhappy common loss, & many other subjects, but indeed I am not able to bear the reflexions they bring with them: if it were in my power by any means to assist you, I should be rejoiced to find myself so useful, but, as that can not be, I must not add to your grief by dwelling upon the cause of it.

The wind is contrary and no ship could have come up the river this day: as soon as any news arrives, you will learn it from me. All things go well, as you know from the last account I sent you.

Lady Townshend continues as she has been: she desires her love. I beg my Compliments to Lady Elizabeth [Compton].

I am D^r Madam

most affectionately yr's

C. TOWNSHEND.

1759, Sept. 15th. Lord Townshend to the Rev. Robert Leeke? Unaddressed.

"Sir—I received the favour of yours by our last Post which informs me of L^d Ferrers's kind enquiry, through you, after my health under the great affliction which I now labor under from the severe calamity lately befallen me; and I beg that you will be pleased, when you write to her Ladyship, to return my best thanks to her Ladyship and to assure her Ladyship that my best wishes do always attend her and all belonging to her, and that you will believe me to be, Sir, etc.

1759, Sept. 16th. Brigadier-General Monckton to General Townshend. Dated "Camp at Point Levi," and unaddressed.

"Dear Townshend,

I have look'd over such of the Gen^l Papers as related to the Publick—and can find none that can be of any Service to you—there is, his Commission, the Private Instructions you saw, Copys of Contracts with M^r Baker, and some Reports of Stores &c. As to the Plan of Quebec, it is not amongst his Papers—But I am told that M^r Keller has a Copy.

I should be glad to hear how you go on—Am sorry to hear that you are out of Order.

I am Most Sincerely yours

ROB^t MONCKTON.

P.S. I shall write to Gen^l Amherst [and I] should therefore be glad to know our Kill'd & Wounded & what it is supposed the Enemy lost &c."

1759, Sept. 17th. Lady Townshend to Lady Ferrers.

"My dear Lady Ferrers,

No situation of my mind or health can ever prevent me from thinking and being anxious for you and your Dear Children. Charles writes by this post to you. I trust in the Almighty God that he will soon bless us with the safe return of our most Dear George.

Your ever Affect.

E. TOWNSHEND.

My best wishes to Lady Elizabeth Compton."

Same date. Charles Townshend to the same. Dated at Grosvenor Square.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

" My dear Lady Ferrers,

I should not forgive myself if I omitted writing one post after knowing you are pleased to hear from us, even when we have nothing new to relate. As yet, the Government have received no further accounts from North America ; but, as I before observed, delay proves caution in the Siege, & caution in that gives us Security. Let me now desire you to conclude whenever you receive an Express that it brings you good news, for otherwise I shall be obliged to defer one day sending you any such account if it should not come to me on a Post day, least the Express should alarm you. I should not chuse to detain you one minute from the news I know your heart beats for, & yet I should not chuse to frighten you by the sudden manner of its arrival, for which reason I desire you will remember to receive whatsoever express I send with confidence & as a Friend.

I beg my affectionate Compliments to Lady El[izabeth] Compton. Nobody loves or honors you, or more earnestly wishes your speedy relief from the unhappy anxiety you live in than

Dear Lady Ferrers

Your affectionate

C. TOWNSHEND."

1759, Sept. 18th. The same to the same.

" Dear Lady Ferrers,

I write again that you may not be alarmed by my Silence, and am happy in the hope of being of the least degree of convenience to you : whose situation claims compassion from every body, and naturally gives me the utmost pain. A ship arrived yesterday from Boston but, having touched at other ports in the voyage, it brings nothing new, yet it is so far agreeable as it confirms the former account I gave you. Yesterday I heard from Lord Townshend, who suffers as we all do, & bears his part in the common calamity. It would be in vain, could I prolong this letter by writing news to you, for to us frivolous things are painful, and, by attempting it, I should only torture myself without relieving you. Lady Townshend desires you will consider her as writing by this letter, and I add, for your consolation, that she is rather better than she has been. My best Compliments attend upon Lady Eliz. Compton."

1759, Sept. 19th. The same to the same. Dated at the Privy Garden.

" My dear Lady Ferrers,

As you may possibly read in the Prints that two Ships are arrived in the River from New York, and might be alarmed for that reason if you did not hear from us, I beg leave to assure you that both the American Ships sailed from New York many days after [before ?] the last Packet Boat came away. Nothing new therefore is come by these Ships.

Upon reasoning with some persons of rank & intelligence in the administration upon the accounts we have, I find it is the general opinion that Quebec will fall without any action, as it is now so invested, no provisions can be carried into it, and the army of the enemy, with the Citadel, will, it is believed, be forced to capitulate or starve. This, I am sure, is a prospect you will be pleased with, and I hope you will every day have fresh reasons to rely upon the speedy and safe return of my Brother.

Lady Townshend desires her love : We beg our compliments to Lady Elizabeth Compton.

I am your most affectionate

CH. TOWNSHEND."

Same date. Lord Northampton to the same. Dated at Castle Ashby.

"Dearest Madam

I cannot defer one Instant thanking your Ladyship for your most obliging letter; I wish it had been possible for us to have had your Company as I think you would not have been displeased at a Ceremony I had so long wished for, and that you was in some measure the leading Instrument to the Performance of it, by your very Seasonable and Lucky Drum; I beg you will not make any apologies for keeping Betty from us I am vastly glad she can be of Service to you. I hope you will soon have no further occasion for her. I beg you'll present my love to her.

Lady Northampton] desires her very best & particular Compl^{ts} to y^r Ladyship Dick Bagot desires you would give his best love to his Niece Lady Elizabeth & that she would provide plenty of Colliflower against the next time she sees him I will not detain you any longer than to add my love to [your son] George.

[P.S.] Lady Northampton sends her love to her new laughing Sister & hopes that Mr V[ine]r will soon make her enter into the Matrimonial State"

Same date. The Countess of Cornwallis to the same. Dated at Brome.

"My dear Lady Ferrers,

As your Letter was directed to Culford I have but this moment received y^r comfortable account of the state of things at Quebec I was very sorry for poor Roger, and did apprehend your spirits wou'd at this time be ill suited to receive such a shock Roger was very amiable & likely to make a figure in his profession. I am glad to hear the Children are well. My L^d, and Molly, desire to joyn with me in assuring you of our best wishes Believe me

My Dear L^{dy} Ferrers

Affectionately y^m

E. C.

1759, Sept. 20th. General Townshend to the same. Dated at the "Camp before Quebec," and unaddressed.

"My Dearest Life my Dearest Charlotte—

We have gained a great Day, the particulars you will read in the publick Gazette. Tho I was not in the warmest part of the action; yet I had more shotts near me than in any other action I've seen. It has pleased God to preserve me for my Charlotte & my George & the rest, and to restore me to you whom alone I have found good & gratefull to me. I have never forgot you in any part of the Campaign. The command of an Army is as disagreeable as any other. Men are as mean here as in any other profession.

I fear I have not time to write to any other friend. My love to them all.

I am impatient to see you and am my Dearest Life ever your most affectionate & faithfull Serv^t

GEO. TOWNSHEND.

[P.S.] My love to Lady Townshend & Charles & to Mr Vyner & Betty. Desire Mr Vyner to look out for two or three Hunters for me.

Do not think my Dear Life that any Command tempts me to stay. The Troops will soon go into Garrison & then I can sett out with the Admiral.

I'm sure my Dear Little ones are well."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1759, Sept. 22nd. Rev. Robert Leeke to the same.

"My very Good Lady

. We are all here under great Concern for poor Roger Townshend. Every Body laments him extremely, as a well dispos'd young Gentleman, a good Soldier, & I really believe a mighty honest, openhearted Gentleman. Such is the Cruelty of War that it destroys Numbers of our fine youth, I trust in God, that all will go well with our great dear friend before Quebec. I begin to presage it will do so, & I begin to think it long to hear the Event of the Siege, it surely must be over by this time.

As I mentioned in my Last, I was vastly pleas'd with Lady Betty's new hon^r. I do not know any one more deserving of it, & I hope e're long to wish her Joy again of a more Substantial Blessing, I mean a good husband, I think she deserves all that this world can do for her. Now I am congratulating give me Leave, My Lady, to congratulate y^r Noble family on my L^ds Marriage into one of the Beaufort family—I think my L^d hath chosen the very best family in England to be ally'd to & from such an happy Union, of the Northampton with the Beaufort family, I foresee every thing will come that is great & good. There is so much dignity, & worth in each family, that every hon^r, & every dignity of this life will unite in this happy Pair, & I dare say the Blessing of God will go along with the whole"

1759, Sept. 29th. Lady Townshend to the same.

"Dear Lady Ferrers,

I can say nothing at present in the least favourable in respect to my health therefore will avoid dwelling upon so uncomfortable a subject.

Mr Charles Townshend set out on thursday Night for Adderbury; he entreated Lady D[alkeit]h to be in town herself or to consent to his staying here with me to wait for M^r Townshend's Arrival; but she would not hear of his proposal persisting still that she should not be in London for an hour or at Sudbrook nor should he remain here from Adderbury even till fryday Morning, by this fatality for I can call it by no other name I am now deprived of the Comfort and support of his Assistance and Company who never left me till twelve o'clock at night.

The North East Wind continues and is directly contrary for having any News from Quebec when it changes I some times think of seting out for Portsmouth; here I shall not remain.

My best wishes and Compliments attend Lady Elizabeth Compton. My affectionate Love to the children.

E. TOWNSHEND."

1759, Sept. 29th. George Buckton to the same. From Tamworth.

A business letter. It is addressed "To the Hon^{ble} Gen^l Townshend —Tunbridge Wells," but it commences with "My Lady" and concludes with "I am your Ladyship's etc."

1759, Sept. —. Charles Townshend to the same. Dated at the Privy Garden, "Thursday."

"Dear Lady Ferrers,

I am desired by Lady Dalkeit to inform your Ladyship that she never received any letter from you by M^r Sykes, and she is very much concerned to think there can, from any cause, have been the least appearance of neglect in her. She has made a very particular enquiry, & is assured neither of our Servants ever received the letter from M^r Sykes.

I have the satisfaction to assure your Ladyship that a ship has arrived here from Boston with an account from Quebec, dated as far as the 13th

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

of July ; from which we learn that the navigation of the River was found very good ; that Mr Wolf[e] had taken a safe Camp on the South Side of the river St Laurent ; that the landing had been made without loss, that the Town was open to our artillery & our Camp covered from the enemy's ; that the French force[s] were behind the Town of Quebec, that Mr Wolf[e] could wait without annoyance for Mr Amherst ; that the French force is very small, & that the Siege may possibly be carried without any action, certainly without any great resistance. This account is believed in by the Ministry, and I earnestly hope soon to prove the truth of it by congratulating you upon the safe return of my Brother Townshend. If you are inclined to be alarmed by the delay recollect that such delay can only be the effect of caution in the steps of the Siege ; which caution is our common security for the success of it, & (for which I am more sollicitous) a farther argument of my Brother's safety.

Forgive me if I omit the pain of speaking of our late misfortune : my heart sinks under the blow, and nor time nor any thing can efface the impression.

Lady Townshend has wrote herself : and Lady Dalkeith has gone to Adderbury.

You will always hear whatever I have to tell that can relieve your miserable, affectionate situation.

I am very affectionately

yr's

C. TOWNSHEND."

1759, Oct. 2nd. Lady Townshend to the same. Dated in London.

" Dear Lady Ferrers,

Nothing but the Apprehension that the seeing me would agitate your spirits too much and consequently be prejudicial to your health, could prevent me from coming to Tunbridge.

Every body agrees that the first time the Wind changes from the North East we must hear from Mr Townshend but as yet it is full East.

The poor Norfolk Militia by being pent up so long in the Barracks at Portsmouth are all a dying of the bloody Flux.

Sr Armand Woodhouse is come to town to see Lord Barrington to endeavour to get them relieved, but Mr Pitt's being out of town makes it impossible for their having any immediate redress by being removed from that duty.

My health is so affected for the last three days that I can with difficulty write this.

E. TOWNSHEND "

1759, Oct. 5th. Brigadier General Murray to General Townshend. Unaddressed.

" Sir,

I this moment had the honour of yours. The shaving Trunk I think myself obliged to you for, and I enclose an order for the reestablishment of it. I doubt not of its being presented a few weeks after your arrival in England. As I am sure you are desirous to serve your country it certainly will avail itself of your inclinations and nobody can wish you greater success in every thing you undertake than I do. I remember we did joke about the chairs. I am of your opinion that they are too heavy for the field. I thank you however for the offer. I send the Map you mention & wish I had any thing more worth your acceptance. I have a few embroider'd birch curiosities which lady Ferrers would like perhaps, and you may not have met with any like them. You will oblige me if you will accept of them. As I am to stay here you know I can easily get others for my female friends in England.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

I shall look for the letter you mention, take a copy of it, and deposita the original with you. Since so black a lye was propogated I think myself very happy that you will be on the spot to contradict whatever Ignorance, or Faction may suggest.

I have no copy of the paper I sent by you to Gen^l Wolfe concerning his Scheme of landing between Point au Tremble and St^t Augustin, but the publick orders are a sufficient proof of his intention to do it, and likewise of the suddenness of the thought of landing when we did. Indeed his orders throughout the campaign shows little stability, strata-gem, or fixt resolution; I wish his friends had not been so much our Enemys, his Memory would probably have been dearer to his Country than now it can be. We are acting on the defensive, you have the Execution of the plan, and I am well perswaded you will manage it with as much tenderness to the memory of the poor Gen^l as the nature of things will admit of.

I find I am not to have the honor of a visit from you so I must take the opportunity of wishing you a good Voyage, & a happy meeting with your friends. I am—Sir

Your most obedient humble Servant

JA. MURRAY."

1759, Oct. 6th. Rev. Robert Leeke to Lady Ferrers.

"My very hon^d Lady

. . . . Give me Leave to observe to y^r Lordship, that I a little fear, least y^r Ladyships Spirits should Sink a little, because Good News is long a Coming from Quebec. My Lady, as y^r Ladyship believes, that Provid^{ce} will Conclude this Great affair & all others for the best upon the whole, under Such a thought of an Entire Confidence in God, there is no room for any discomposure—besides as there is no bad news hitherto, y^r Ladyship may be sure, that had any Evil happen'd to the General, his friends abt him would have sent a Message—No News therefore is good News—& I must own for myself some time ago my heart was very sad, whenever I thought of him but of late it hath been much otherwise, & therefore my Mind inwardly presages that all is well. That y^r Ladysp may be ever Easy & well & meet the General soon in Great Safety is the most ferv^t prayer & most Cordial wish of y^r Ladyships most Obed^t & most humble Serv^t

R^r LEEKE."

1759, Oct. 14th. Lord Townshend to the same. Dated at Rabley.

L^d Townshends Complements to L^y Ferrers and is extremely obliged to her for the account she has been so kind as to send him of M^r Townshends perfect Health, and is glad to hear that her Ladyship and the Children are all well.

1759, Oct. 23rd. Brigadier Murray to General Townshend. Dated at Quebec and unaddressed. Endorsed "General Murray."

"Sir!—Captain Fraser writes to his correspondent here that you have been pleas'd to speak well of me to some of the great people at home. This is very obliging and deserves my thanks. I never doubted of your doing Justice to all men, & I shall be glad of an opportunity to convince you how truly I am—Sir—Your most obedient & most humble Servant,

JA. MURRAY."

1759, Oct. 30th. Rev^d Robert Leeke to Lady Ferrers. Dated at Great Snoring.

"My Good Lady

As I had the hon^r to receive from y^r Ladyship the pleasing Account first of Mr Townshends safety & immediately after, the hon^r he had got at Quebec. To both w^{ch} I returned my most hearty Congratulations as I do now again & again with the highest Joy I think my Soul ever tasted.

Give me leave now to rehearse with pleasure before y^r Ladysp the many dangers I observe Gen^l Townshend hath escaped during the Campaign.

If we begin with the long Voyage of nine Weeks passage on the Sea, all w^{ch} time, twas a great mercy he Enjoy'd his health, as he never had been Us'd to the Sea much before. When the fleet went up the river St Lawrence there was 3 weeks passage againe—the passage was attended with Infinite danger, to our people at least, who knew little of it. On the way up they met with Six fire Ships Sent down to meet them, with design to have burnt our fleet, w^{ch} they narrowly Escaped, & must have destroy'd them, had the fire Ships met them in a Narrow part of the Channell.

The day after they Landed at St Orleans, a Violent Storm arose, w^{ch} dashed many of the Transports to pieces which had it been only one day Sooner, must have destroy'd the whole fleet & perhaps Every Soul perisht.

After they Landed M^r Wolfe says in his Letter They made two Attacks upon the Enemy & was Each time repulsed wth Great loss, & he says further, had be not in one of those Attacks Call'd back the troops imediately, Brigadier Townshends Corps had been Expos'd to Great hazard—a Great escape here, & I think in this instance & some others I see in Gen^l Wolfe a great tenderness for M^r Townshend.

On the Great Attack when the Victory was got, we had 5 thousand Men only, the Enemy ten, our Army marcht up against a most terrible fire, & held their own till they advanc't within 40 or 50 yards of the Enemy, Wolfe on the right, Moncton in the Center, & Townshend on the left, here in these moments was the utmost danger, Wolfe shot in 3 different places of his body, Moncton quite thro his, & Townshend Escapes. If ever I saw a visible protection of Providence over any one on Earth, I see it now over Gen^l Townshend. God's goodness to him deserves our Utmost wonder, love & thanks.

If there is any one in the world that did not wish Gen^l Townshend well in this Expedition, Let them look on him Now with Confusion of face, when they see him live, when many brave men fell abt him, when they see him not only live but live to finish a Victory, w^{ch} brave Gen^l Wolfe began—when they live to see him at the head of his Victorious troops Enter the Enemys Great Capital, & see him send word to his Majesty under his own hand, that the Victory was thus Concluded by his own Policy & under his own direction. He hath over come hitherto, winds & storms, a bad Climate all sorts of dangers both by Sea & Land, indeed Every thing, that can make an Expedition terrible, himself untoucht, not a finger aking amids[t] the wounds, death & destruction of many brave men of our own, and many more Experient Soldiers & marks men of the Enemy.

Let us thank God for this Inexpressible Mercy, & beseech him to preserve him safe from dangerous Storms in his way home. I am a little afraid the Military Glory he hath got this Expedition should encrease his taste for it, & make him fond of the Wars, w^{ch} I don't like, for I think still, as I always did, he can serve his Country better at home, but I hope a good peace will be the Consequence of taking Quebec & then there will be an End of all our Wars for the present.

Let me Now observe to y^r Ladysp what I see at home Since the great News Came: a prodigious Joy in all the Villages Nigh me striving who shall out do Each other; in Market Towns they illuminate &c. Tho it

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
—

is observed some choose to be in darkness, whilst others set up their lights, but higher up in the Country, I do not hear that they have Exerted themselves like what is done ab^t Fakenham & Walsingham & the villages adjacent.

The Great things have been successively done by our Arms all Summer yet Prince Ferdinand's Victory & that at Quebec is the Greatest of all, but Quebec is of the Utmost Importance to the Kingdom & will be of all others most Conducive to an Early & solid peace. The surviving Generals therefore that Commanded at Quebec will ever be seen by the King & Kingdom in the highest pitch of Glory & Esteem.

I hope y^r Ladysp amidst all this Joy is very well"

[1759, Oct.] Lord Townshend to the same. Dated at Rabley,— "Wednesday noon."

"Lord Townshend rejoices most heartily upon the happy news L^d Ferrers has been so kind as to send him this morning of the Surrender of Quebec and that M^r Townshend is safe & well; and does most sincerely congratulate her Ladyship upon these happy events, which he hopes will have the further good effect of giving perfect ease and quiet to her Ladyship[s] mind and that her Ladyship[s] health will be restored. He hopes the children are all well."

1759, Dec. 1st. Rev. Robert Leeke to the same.

"Oh Good Lady Ferrers,

I heartily bless God, that I have in my power to wish you Joy of this most Glorious Event—an[d] happy Meeting again with Dear General Townshend w^{ch} I do most heartily: I do not remember any Event in life past ever fill'd my heart with a More Substantial & Exalted pleasure. No words can Express w^t I feel. I feel it as it Conduces Equally to y^r Ladysp's happiness as well as M^r Townshends.

I need not mention to y^t Ladysp that this good Event Sets every Noble prospect in life before you—oh how great is the goodness of God, you see it now & taste it in great abundance. Oh! Lady Ferrers what a firm Reliance upon Providence will it not do? What is not the Goodness of God willing to do for those that depend upon him. I shall always think that y^r Ladysp's Prayers & mine too, have been a great help to M^r Townshend's Security. I shall thank God for this Mercy along with his other blessings to me & beg under this most Joyfull Event, that y^r Ladyship will please to Accept My Congratulations along with M^r Leeke's for there will be None that will Send it more affectionately.

R. LEEKE."

1759, Dec. 2nd. The Countess of Cornwallis to the same. Dated at Culford.

"My dear L^d Ferrers

I am infinitely obliged to You for Your early notice of M^r Townshends safe arrival. My L^d desires to joyn with me in assuring M^r Townshend, that he has no Friends more truly happy than we are with his safe and glorious return that you will always be as fortunate, and as happy as You are at present is the most sincere wish of

Y^r most Affec:

E: C:

[P.S.] My L^d Molly & Harry desire their kind Comp^{ts} to M^r Townshend & Y^r self."

1759, Dec. 4th. Thomas Beevor to General Townshend. Dated at Hethel.

"My Dear Sir

I could not without the greatest injury to my inclination, and ingratitude to your friendship, omit paying You my most early respects, on your safe Arrival in this Kingdom: I sincerely congratulate You, on the happy success of an Expedition, which had been by all accounts impracticable, but for the uncommon bravery, and vast superiority of Abilities, in the Commanders of it; in which capacity (Peace to the Manes of poor Wolfe) I cannot help enjoying the happiness of your fortunes in being left the person to compleat it. As Your fate was the chief circumstance of my first enquiry, when I found it so glorious, I cou'd not but reflect with transport, on the situation, in which You were now placed; respected, and honour'd by your Countrymen, belov'd by all your friends, and bless'd, doubly bless'd in one of the worthiest, and best of Women; to whose anxious and frequent prayers You may perhaps be indebted for that very life, which is now so great an Ornament to You: this without the least exaggeration, is now your lot, and 'tis indeed a happy one, your future scene will doubtless be a great one; but pardon my friendship, when I tell You, that I think You merit the one, and will never fail to grace, and dignify the other; Macte Virtute, my Dear George, and believe me when I assure You, that no happiness attending You, will ever give a more real or greater pleasure to any one, than to your Sincere & faithful friend and humble Serv^t

THO^s BEEVOR.

[P.S.] Mr^s Beevors & my Compliments to Lady Ferrers."

1759, Dec. 7th. Miles Branthwayt to the same. Dated at Gunthorpe.

"Dear Sir—I beg leave to congratulate you & Lady Ferrers on your safe Arrival in England . . . we are all of us very impatient to kiss your hand at Cranmer & to congratulate you upon your great Success in conquering Quebeck . . . Mr^r Gay has not heard from his son since the taking of Quebeck, which gives him & us great uneasiness . . . Mr^s Branthwayt begs that you will accept & make her best Comp^{ts} to Lady Ferrers, Lady Compton, & your little family & that you will accept the same from Dear Sir" etc.

1759, Dec. 8th. Lord Shaftesbury to the same. Dated at Exeter.

"Lord Shaftesbury presents his most sincere and affectionate Compliments to Mr^r Townshend, and is extremely thankful to him for the favour of Mr^r Townshend's inquiring after him in Grosvenor Square. L^d Shaftesbury intended before this to have paid his Compliments by letter, and to have acknowledged the the Honour of the Public regard shewn him by Mr Townshend in the excellent address at the Head of Lieut Col: Wyndham's book, but business leaves him at present no time for writing. He can not conclude this Note without informing Brig^{er} Townshend of the perfect Harmony subsisting between the Dorsetshire and Army Corps now doing duty together here I propose returning into Dorset very soon. Lord Shaftesbury's respects wait on Lady Ferrers."

Same date. Earl Poulett to the same. Dated at Hinton.

"I take the liberty of troubling my honoured friend & kinsman, wth a letter I received from a friend of mine whom I sh^d be very glad to serve, & as I am retired in the country (by being a cripple) I dont know where to apply more properly, w^{ch} I hope will excuse the trouble of this letter.

I am glad at the same time of an opportunity of congratulating you on a safe return, & with so much Glory & success, in w^{ch} every English-

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MRS.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

men takes part, but more particularly those who have the honour of being related to you.

After being a Cripple for more than two years I begin to feel some benefit from a Remedy I have tryed for about 5 weeks past, even at this time of the year, against all the disadvantages of weather.

If I knew who had the managem^t of the new Militia bill, & had the heads of it sent me, I might perhaps be able to add something to it, who beg leave to assure my honoured Kinsman that I am wth the highest regard & greatest respect" etc.

Same date. W. Clarke Woodbine to the same. Dated at Swafham.

"Dear Sir—Mr Cha^s Brown thinks himself under the highest Obligation for you so kindly looking over the past, in his Affair, says there is Nothing he so much wishes for as a Comission, and that too by your means, it will he says, give him a daily opportunity of proving to you how much he owes to your Favour, & also to the Memory of his & my much lamented Friend Col^l Roger [Townshend]" etc.

Same date. J. Burslem to the same. Dated at Bosworth.

"Honrd Sir.—Please to accept my sincere Congratulations upon the very great Success abroad" etc.

1759, Dec. 9th. Edward Davy to the same. Addressed.—"For The Hon: Brigadier General Townshend at his house in Audley Square, London."

"Worthy Sir.—I sincerely congratulate your safe Arrival, in England and wish you may live many years, to wear those Laurels in y^r Native Country, which by facing so many Foreign, Dangers, you have so greatly won" etc.

Same date. Alexander Johnson, First Lieut. of Artillery, "to the Honble Generall Townshend." Dated at Plymouth.

After making suggestions in Tactics and for the improvement of cartridges this letter concludes as follows:—

"Was is not for fear of incroaching too much on your Patience, [I] would propose a plan for keeping up, dureing the approaching Peace, all the Infantry, Saylors, and Marines, at a very little Expen^{ce} to the Nation, but must refer that, either to another Opertunity, or my being honour'd with your Company in Town: [I] must inform you that Cap^t Phillips obtain'd a Company in the Artillery from being a First Lieut.

You'll excuse my courting your Favour, when you consider the Advantage that may accrue to me from haveing the Interest of a Military Gentleman, endowed with your generous Publick Character and Accomplishments; to deserve the Continuance of which, shall allways be the Study of he, who has the Honour to be, Sir" etc.

Same date. Benjamin Nuthall, Wine merchant, to the same. Dated at Lynn.

"Amongst the Multitude of Your Friends permit me to congratulate You, on your safe Arrival in England, after so many Perils, & the Acquisition of so much Glory. The great & useful Service w^{ch} You have finisht for Y^r Country, will even Speak of you & for You wth distinguish'd Honor in this & Future Ages.

I am with the greatest Respect, Sir," etc.

1759, Dec. 10th. John Helder to the same. Dated at Snailwell.

Hon^{bl} Sir—I beg leave to trouble You with a line to acquaint You, that I expect receiving about the latter end of Christmas Your half years Rent, for the three farms

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.
—

I wish You Joy, on Your great Success abroad, and sincerely adore the Divine Goodness, which has preserved You, & brought You safe home, to Your Good Lady, & Dear Children and other Hon^{bl} Relations The Great Mercy shown in sparing & preserving You, has given me another Proof, of the Care of the Divine Providence. You have been carryed thro' the Dangers of the Stormy Ocean, & thro the more dangerous Opposition, of Enemies, in Battle, and return'd in Health & Safety, with Honour, to Your Native Land: I hope Your Gratefull Acknowledgments to Heaven for Goodness and mercy following You tho' this voyage, and that the same distinguishing Goodness towards You will run paralell with your Line of Life; & fit You for Eternal Glory, hereafter. I remⁿ—Hon^{bl} & Great Sir—Your Dutifull Serv^t—

JOHN HELDER."

1759, Dec. 11th. Edmond Thomas to the same. Dated at Wenvoe Castle, Glamorganshire.

"Sir.—After begging Leave to join in the Congratulations which every will wisher to his Country pays you, or means it in his own Breast, on your Return after such Interesting Success to every Englishman, I must acknowledge your Goodness to a poor unfortunate Young Man, whom I cannot but feel a concern for, C. Northey, whose Sufferings in a Cause of Glory, will I hope atone for his former Indiscretions. I wish to God you would prevail with his Brother to let them do so with him. I know he entertains a personal regard for you & what you say will have weight with him. Indeed every Motive of Humanity & even Good sense & Decency require it of him, but I must say he has been too hard on this Occasion, for it is impossible the Young Man can subsist with[out] some assistance from his friends till he has a provision made for him. I have wrote to several of them on this Occasion as well as Mr Northey.

I beg pardon for taking this Liberty with you, but your Humanity will I am sure excuse it from one who is with the greatest Regard, Sir," etc.

1759, Dec. 12th. John Jones to the same. Dated at Fakenham.

[Sir]—It would have been Impertinence for one in my Situation sooner to have offered my Congratulation to my most Worthy Friend Gen^l Townshend on his safe Arrival and tribute of thanks for his Services to his Country; but if you'll now permit me to tender the same and to assure you they proceed from a sincere Heart brim full of Joy tis all I have to ask, save that You'll accept the Offer of my most respectful Duty and Services to your Hon^r and Lady on all Occasions for I am, Sr,

Your Hon^{rs} Obliged and Ever Obed^t Serv^t

JOHN JONES."

1759, Dec. 13th. Nockold Tompson to the same. Dated at Norwich.

"Sir—After receiving the Congratulations and Compliments of your Country in general and of your many friends in all parts of it, I now presume to trouble you with mine, on your very laudable Conduct, the success of which, sufficiently bespeaks its Praise, especially when compared with the unfortunate and unsuccessfull Efforts of the many who live to deplore their own Misconduct, for this you have not only the happy consciousness of your own Mind but also the universal Voice of the Nation; Among the first the Citizens of Norwich in their publick Address exulted in the relation this County stood in, to him who added Quebec to his Majesty's Dominions. . . . I will not take up any more of your Attention, than only to assure you with what ardent Esteem I have" etc.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1759, Dec. 15th. Rev^d T. O. Young to the same. Dated at Swafham.
"Dear Sir,

. . . . Every body here & all over the Country mention you with the most warm & grateful attachment, & pay all possible Veneration to your Character—I am confident you will see it in the looks & behaviour of every one you meet with

T. O. YOUNG.

1759, Dec. 22nd. James Quin to the same. Dated at Bath.
"Sir

From a Hart full of Love, Esteem and Gratitude you have the most sincere Congratulations. May your Honours and Happynesses of ev'ry kind be equal to the warmest Wishes of, Sir,

Your ever faith full and most obedient Servant

JAMES QUIN.

1759, April 30th, to Sept. 18th. A MS. book in cardboard cover endorsed "Orders of General Wolfe," 84 pp.

The phonetic spelling of this manuscript suggests that the orders were written from dictation by a non-commissioned officer.

1759, June 10th. Dispositions generales pour s'opposer à la descente depuis La Riviere St Charles jusqu' au Sault de Montmorency, de meme que pour se retirer derriere la rivierre St Charles dans le cas que l'on fut forcé à la descente. Projet pour deffendre cette Rivierre et ordre de Bataille pour combattre et pour camper pendant toute La Campagne. 5 pp. foolscap. Subscribed "A Quebec le 10 Juin 1759" and signed "Le Ch[evali]er de Levis."

This document seems to have fallen into General Townshend's hands on the fall of Quebec.

1759, June 26th to Oct. 10th. General Orders issued to the troops before Quebec between there dates. A stitched MS., in a clerk's hand, without cover or title. 108 pp.

1759, July 28th to Sept. 13th. Rough notes relating to the siege of Quebec between these dates. 5 pp. foolscap.

The account given in these notes of the movements of the British forces on Sept. 13th, when Quebec was captured and Gen^l Wolfe was killed, is as follows:—

Sept. 13th. The Troops landed below the place intended owing to the rapidity of the Tide.

Just before we were ordered to land Capt. Smith, a very active & intelligent Officer of the light Troops, informed the Brigadiers that the naval Officer who was to conduct the first detachment down the River assured him that if he proceeded down by the S[outh] side of the River the Current was so strong that they should be carried beyond the place of attack & probably below the Batteries & the Town & thereupon the Brigadiers (there not being time to report & receive Gen^l Wolfe's directions thereon) authorised him to carry them down the N[orth] side of the River & fortunately it was follow'd, for even there the Boats could only land before daybreak considerably below the place of attack (l'ance Gardien) & Col. Howe (now Sir William) found he was below it, & Major Delauney a very active & enterprising Officer who had a command in the light Corps, saying the place was higher up the River, & the Colonel knowing the Consequence of the Enemy's perceiving at day light our situation & being reinforc'd, he order'd that Officer to attack where proposed & very gallantly himself scrambled up the rocky height in his front by which he turning to his left he attack'd & drove the Enemy from their position & most happily facilitated the success of the former up a narrow precipice with an abbatis & a battery just over it which was firing on them.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Just at daybreak another most fortunate circumstance contributed to the success of this critical operation, when the first corps for disembarkation was passing down the N[orth] side of the River & the French Centries on the banks challeng'd our boats, Capt. Fraser who had been in the Dutch Service & spoke French, answered—la France & vive le Roy—on which the French Centinels ran along the Shore in the dark crying—laisser les passer ils sont nos gens avec les provisions—which they had expected for some time.

When Brig[adie]rs Monkton & Townshend arrived to support them Brig. Townshend put his Men in boats behind the Ships which the Enemy was battering, landed them safe, and followd Gen^l Monkton's [column] to the Ground where the General was forming his line to oppose the Enemy, who was passing with all expedition under their Comander [in] Chief Mons^r de Montcalm the River St^e Charles.

The Troops marchd forwards with the utmost alacrity to possess the rising Ground & were drawn up in a line of battle opposite the Town. Col. Howe with the light Troops was sent to take possession of a 3 Gun battery at St^e Michel which executed he drove in all the small parties which were posted on the heights & annoyd our Columns going up the Hill.

In forming the line Brig^r Monckton commanded the right, Brig^r Murray the Center & Brig^r Townshend the left, which when forming with Lascells Regiment only was attacked by the Americans & Indians, which he kept in check behind a long roadway assisted by the gallant behaviour of Capt. — who had quitted a House by mistake which protected the front of the Brigadiers position, but on finding his mistake he dashd back again—attacked them with Bayonets & put all to the Sword within the House. The Brigadier being reinforced by his second Battalion then maintaind his position whilst the Enemy being formed between the Town & our line came down & attacked our front. They were received with the greatest firmness, just before this Gen^l Wolfe came towards the left & finding all secure on there, he returned to the Center & received a mortal wound in the head & soon after another in the breast & died before they c^d carry him to the Water side. Gen^l Monckton was wounded in the breast. Our Troops had charged the Enemy close & repulsed them & pursued them part into the Town the rest down the River St^e Charles. Brigadier Townshend was left with one Battalion, when Monsieur de Bougainville was marching from the Woods in the Rear to attack him. He sent his Aid du Camp to collect the Troops as fast as they could & took a position towards the Enemy behind a Ravin & got up 2 pieces of Cannon, & when they were firing he had the mortification to hear that they had brought wrong ammunition, on which as the Enemy was forming in the Edge of the Woods he orderd the Officer to fire with a considerable degree of Elevation, & maintaind his position till reinforced by the return of some of the scatter'd forces, from the pursuit.

1759, Augt. 28th to Sept. 12th. "Copies of Papers that were wrote by General Wolfe and the Brigadiers, before the Operations above the Town of Quebec in 1759." 12 pp.

1759, Sept. 13th. "Return of the Kill'd and Wounded at the Battle of Quebec."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

The total is 658 officers and privates killed and wounded, and 3 missing.

The following is the list of the General and Staff Officers killed and wounded:—

Major Gen^l Wolfe, killed; Brig^r Gen^l Monckton, wounded; Major Barré, Adjut^t Gen^l, wounded; Colonel Carleton, Q^r M^r Gen^l, wounded; Capt. Spital, Major of Brigade, wounded; Capt. Smyth, Aid de Camp, wounded; and Lieut. Benzell, Engineer, wounded.

1759, Sept. 17th. Copy of the "Capitulation of Quebec as it was 18th. proposed y^e 17th 7^{ber} 1759 & also such as was agreed upon y^e 18th." In French and English, eleven Articles. Signed by Admiral Saunders, General Townshend and Mons^r de Ramsay, Commandant of Quebec.

The chief clauses to the effect that the garrison is to march out with all the honours of war, and that the property and religion of the inhabitants are guaranteed.

1759, Sept. 20th. General Townshend to William Pitt. Dated at the "Camp before Quebec Sep^r y^e 20th 1759—Copy of y^e letter sent "to y^e Secretary of State, Sep^r y^e 20th 1759." Endorsed Quebec—Copy of my Relation of the Action to M^r Pitt."

Sir, I have y^e honour to acquaint you with y^e success of his Majesty's arms on y^e 13th instant in an action with y^e French in y^e heights to y^e Westward of this town.

It being determined to carry y^e operations above y^e town, the post at Pointe Levy & Isle d'Orleans being secured, General Wolfe marched with y^e remainder of his forces from Pointe Levy y^e 5th & 6th & embarked them in transports which had passed y^e town for that purpose. In y^e 7th 8th & 9th a movement of y^e ships was made up y^e river in order to amuse y^e enemy now posted along y^e North Shore. The transports being extremely crowded & y^e weather very bad, y^e General thought proper to cantoon half his troops upon y^e South Shore, where they were refreshed & reembarked upon y^e 12th at one in y^e morning. The light infantry commanded by Col^l Howe, y^e Reg^{ts} of Bragg's, Kenedy's, Lascelles, & Anstruther's, wth a detachment of Highlanders & y^e Royal American Grenadiers, y^e whole being immediately under y^e command of Brigadiers Monckton & Murray, were put into y^e flat bottom'd Boats & after some movements of y^e ships made by Admiral Holmes to draw y^e attention of y^e enemy up y^e river y^e boats fell down wth y^e tide & landed on y^e N. Shore within a league of Cape Diamond an hour before daybreak. The rapidity of y^e tide of ebb hurried y^e boats a little below y^e intended place of attack, which obliged y^e light Infantry to scramble up a woody precipice in order to secure y^e landing of y^e troops, & to dislodge a Captain's post which defended a small entrenched road where y^e troops were to move up. After some firing y^e light infantry gained y^e top of y^e precipice & dispersed y^e Captain's post, by which means y^e troops wth very little loss from a few Canadians & Indians in y^e wood got up & immediately formed. The boats as they emptied were sent back for y^e second disembarkation which I immediately made. Brigadier Murray being detached wth Anstruther's bataillon to attack a four gun battery on y^e left was recalled by y^e General who now saw y^e French army crossing y^e River St Charles. General Wolfe thereupon began to form his line of Battle, having his right covered with y^e Louisbourg Grenadiers on an eminence, behind which was Otway's, on y^e left of y^e Grenadiers were Bragg's, Lascelles, Kenedy's, Highlanders & Anstruther's. The right of this body was commanded by Brig^r Monckton & y^e left by Brig^r Murray: his rear & left were protected by Col^l Howe's

MARQUES
TOWNSEND
MSS.

light infantry who was returned from y^e 4 gun Battery which he had found abandoned & y^e Cannon spiked up. Webb's was formed as a Reserve in y^e Center with large Intervals between their Subdivisions, & Lawrence's soon after detach'd to preserve our Communication with our Boats. General Montcalm having collected y^e whole of his force from y^e Beauport side & advancing us shewed his intention to flank our left when I was immediately ordered with Amherst's Battalion which I formed en Potence. My numbers were soon after increased by two other Battalions as they arrived. The Enemies lined the Bushes in their front with 1500 Indians & Canadians & I have reason to think most of their best marksmen, which kept up a brisk tho' irregular fire upon our whole line, who bore it wth y^e greatest patience & good order, reserving their fire for y^e main body now advancing. The right of y^e French line was composed of half y^e troops de la Colonie, y^e Battalions of La Sarre & Languedoc wth some Canadians & Indians; their center Column was formed by y^e Battalions of Bearn & Guienne, & y^e left was composed of y^e other half of y^e troupes de la Colonie wth y^e Battalion of Royal Roussillon. Such was as near as I guess their line of Battle. The French brought up two small pieces of Artillery against us & we had been able to bring up but one gun which being extremely well served galled their Column exceedingly—My attention to y^e left will not permit me to be very exact with regard to every circumstance which passed in y^e center, much less to y^e right. But 'tis most certain that the attack of y^e Enemy was very brisk & animated on that side, our troops nevertheless reserved their fire to within 40 yards which was so well continued, that y^e Enemy everywhere gave way. It was then our General fell at y^e head of Bragg's & y^e Louisbourg Grenadiers advancing to charge their Bayonets. About y^e same time Brigadier General Monkton received his wound at y^e head of Lascelles. On their side fell y^e French General Mons^r De Montcalm & his second in command since dead of his wounds on board our fleet. The enemy in their confusion flung themselves into a thick copse wood in their rear & seemed preparing to make a stand. It was at this time that each Corps seemed in a manner to exert itself wth a view to its own peculiar character. The Grenadiers, Bragg's & Lascelles drove on y^e Enemy with their Bayonets. Brig^d Murray briskly advancing upon y^e enemy the troops under his command completed y^e rout on this side, when y^e Highlanders supported by Anstruther's took to their broad swords & drove part into y^e town &—part over y^e river St. Charles. The action on our left & rear of our left was not so severe. The houses into which y^e light infantry were thrown were well defended, being supported by Col^l Howe who taking Post wth two companies behind a small copse, & frequently sallying upon y^e enemy who attackt them drove them often into heaps. Against y^e front of which body I advanced fresh platoons of Amherst's Reg^t which prevented their right wing from executing their first intention. One of y^e Royal American Battalions being detached to a post which secured our rear, & y^e other being sent to fill up y^e space the battalions advanced wth General Murray had vacated, I remained with Amherst's alone to support these posts & keep y^e Enemies right in check. The efforts of y^e Enemy on this side cou'd never break in upon this disposition & y^e hopes of a great body of Indians & Canadians who waited impatiently to have fallen on our rear in case of a defeat were entirely frustrated.

This, Sir, was y^e situation of things when I was told in y^e action that I commanded. I immediately repaired to y^e center & finding that y^e pursuit had put part of y^e troops in great disorder I formed them as soon as possible. Scarce was that effected when Mons^r de Boncainville with about 2000 men, y^e corps from Cap rouge & that neighbourhood, appeared in our rear. I advanced two pieces of light artillery & two Battalions towards him but upon two or three shots he retired. You will, I flatter myself, agree Sir that it was not my business to risk y^e fruits of so glorious a day & to abandon so commanding a situation to give a fresh ennemy battle upon his own terms & in y^e midst of woods & swamps where he was posted. I have been employed from y^e day of Action to that of y^e Capitulation in redoubting our camp against any insult, making a road up y^e precipice for our Cannon, getting up y^e artillery, preparing y^e Batteries, & cutting off y^e communications of y^e Garrison with y^e country. The 17th a flag of truce came out with proposals of Capitulation about noon before we had any Battery erected. I sent y^e officer who had come out, back to town allowing them four hours to capitulate or no further treaty. He returned with terms of Capitulation, which with y^e Admiral were considered, agreed to, & signed on both sides by 8 o'clock in y^e Morning y^e 18th instant. The terms you find we granted, will I flatter myself be approved of by his Majesty considering y^e Ennemy assembling in our rear, y^e inclemency of y^e season—which would scarcely admitt of our bringing a gun up y^e precipice. The critical situation of our fleet from the Æquinoctial gales calling for our immediate attention, add to this y^e entring y^e town in a deffensible state against any attack which might otherwise be attempted against it in the winter. This I hope will be deemed sufficient considerations for granting them y^e terms I have y^e honour to enclose you—I herewith send you a list of y^e killed & wounded & y^e list of French Prisoners as perfect as I have yet been able to obtain it. I believe their loss that day might amount to 1500 they have at least now 500 wounded in their Hospital General. Another list of y^e artillery & stores in y^e town, as well as those fallen into our hands at Beauport in consequence of y^e Victory. The inhabitants bring in their arms very fast & chearfully take y^e oaths of allegiance to his Majesty. By y^e last intelligence from deserters Mons^r De Levy now commands their army. He is returned some say with troops from the Montreal side. They are collecting their scattered forces at Cap Rouge, his left extending by different posts as near us as old Loretto 6 miles from our camp. Their regular Battallions are now reduced to 150 men each & are in great want of provisions. I shou'd be wanting in paying my due respects to y^e Admirals & y^e Naval Service if I neglected this occasion to acknowledge how much we are indebted for our success to y^e constant assistance & support we have received, & to y^e perfect harmony & immediate correspondence which has prevailed throughout our operations in y^e uncommon difficulties which y^e nature of this country in particular presents to military operations of a great extent, & which no army can in itself solely supply. The immense labour in y^e transportation of artillery stores & provisions y^e long watchings & attendance in boats, y^e drawing up our artillery even in y^e heat of y^e action, it is my duty short as my Command has been to acknowledge for that time how great a share y^e Navy has had in this successful campaign.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

I have y^e honour &c. &c. &c.

GEO. TOWNSHEND."

1759, Sept. 25th. Copy of a proposal [Signed by General Townshend and unaddressed] for a military demonstration with 600 or 800 men on the South Shore [of the River S^t Lawrence]. Dated 25th September, but endorsed "General Townshend's Proposal—Quebec—Sept^r 23^d 1759."

Same date. General Townshend to ——. Dated at the "Camp before Quebec" and unaddressed. Copy.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MISS.

"Dear Sir—The method of sending this will I hope sufficiently excuse y^e shortness of the Relation. It being determined to carry [on] the Operations above the Town, the corps at Montmorenci pass'd over to Point Levi. The Posts of Isle Orleans & of Pt Levi being secured, y^e General embark'd y^e Troops in Transports on y^e 5th & 6th: after some movements up y^e River to amuse y^e Enemy, we landed on y^e 13th [and] surprised a French post on y^e N[orth] Shore, within 3 miles of y^e Town. Our Troops to about 3500 met Mon^r de Montcalm's Army from y^e Beaufort side upon y^e Heights before y^e Town. He began the attack, and was repulsed twice. The firmness with which our Troops bore y^e Tirallerie of all their Indians Canadians &c. for a considerable time, preserving their Fire for their Regulars; & the home attack which they made upon the latter with their Bayonets, when they came down to y^e Charge, decided y^e Day. The Highlanders seconded by Anstruthers pursued them to y^e Gates of y^e Town with their Broad Swords. We had but 2 Peices of Cannon up & but one played for a considerable time. We took 5 besides a great quantity of Artillery & Stores which fell into our Hands, on y^e Beaufort side—as well as in y^e Town which surrender'd, before we had a Battery ready, on the 18th Instant in y^e morning. We lost poor General Wolfe who fell in the warmest part of y^e Engagement. Gen^l Monckton was wounded near the same place & about y^e same time. Mon^r de Montcalm & y^e second in Command were also killd. Their Regulars sufferd extreamly—We have a great many of their Officers prisoners. We compute our loss at about 500 killd & wounded; theirs about 2000. The remains of their Army is assembling, & cantoon'd about St Augustine. Mon^r de Levi commands. Mon^r de Boncainville had a separate Corps of 1500 men who came upon our Rear just after y^e Action was over, attacked one of our Posts & sufferd a good Deal. I write this to you by order of Gen^l Monckton, who tho' wounded in the Breast, is in so fine a way as to be able to do all business but write—I have y^e Honour to be with the most gratefull respect—Dear Sir—Your most faithfull & affect^o

GEO. TOWNSHEND."

[Quebec].

1759, Sept. 26th. General Townshend to General Amherst. Dated at the "Camp before Quebec." A draft "sent y^e 27th."

"Dear Sir—Having General Monckton's Commands to write you a Relation of y^e Action of y^e 13th, which decided the Fate of this Town & I hope will contribute not a little to y^e total reduction of Canada; I have y^e Honour to send you a Copy (I believe pretty exact) of my account of that Victory to y^e Secretary of State. Were I really to attempt to point out the most striking cause of this successful stroke I must attribute it to the admirable & determined firmness of every Brittish Soldier in y^e field that Day; conducted by y^e manifest ability of the Officers at this respective Posts. Victory or no Quarter was I may affirm in every Man's Face that Day; the Ground we scrambled up in y^e morning, the motions of y^e Enemy to surround us, the Time of Tide & y^e Heights which command y^e Boats taught us this lesson, and thank God the whole army made a proper application.

Gen^l Monckton, who is so well recovered as to command us, will I conclude write to you upon y^e Intelligence he has of y^e Situation of the remains of y^e French Army & how far Things may admit or not of any further movement on our Side. This is not my province. He proposes to leave Gen^l Murray Commander at Quebec. I cannot consequently whenever y^e Army becomes a Garrison be of any use here, & may embrace y^e leave to return to England you so long ago bestowed upon me. I am sorry y^e advancement of y^e Season will not allow me to pay my respects to you in America, but shall only say that I shall be one of y^e very many who shall think himself happy to serve under y^r command. We heard this Day by a Deserter, you had taken Montreal. I hope t'is true. Voila donc Mon^r de Levy investié.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

I hear I have got Barrington's Regiment. Alas what a Bouquet this had been a Year or two hence for poor Roger. I assure you I return thoroughly wounded from America. I loved him sincerely.

My respects to all who do me y^e Honour to remember me & forgive me Dear Sir for not sending you y^e relation of y^e Action in my own Handwriting. I had made a thousand Blots. I hope to pay you my respects upon more momentous occasions.

I am with y^e most Sincere respect—Y^r most faithfull & obed Serv^t

GEO. TOWNSHEND.

[P.S]. There were two field Peices & not only one up in the Action."

LETTERS, ETC. (MISCELLANEOUS).

1700-1791.

[Circ. 1700]. R. H. to Lord Townshend? Undated and unaddressed. "My deare Lord

What I had reserved about me w^{ch} was 500^{li} necessity hath given to Doctors & Apothecaries; & by what is to be seen by me, to very little purpose, for I am scarce alive. That little flame which is left, if I can get to April may be restored at the Bath. My Brother hath a litter which I did use thither last Summer; but it is such a torment to ride in it, that I dread the very thoughts of it. Al this is a beggers preamble to you to give him a Coach & horses. That is to say let the Coach be inside & outside as plaine & as meane as may be, not of capacity for more then two to ride in it: only I pray You that it may have two doors, & glasse windows in the doors, that it may be made so long & of such contrivance, as that I may lie on a quilt in it. For the horses, I care not what they be, so they will but draw me twenty mile in a summer's day. This gentleman wil wait upon you, if you have any thing to Command him in this busines, who knows how to convey it to me. The God of heaven & Earth blesse you with al gifts temporal & eternal.

Amen saith

Your

R. H."

1701, May 19th. Edward L'Estrange to Lord Townshend (the 2nd Viscount Townshend), Dated at Mileham, and addressed "To the R^t Hon^{ble} The L^d Viscount Townshend at his house in St James Street—These present."

"My Lord—My 2 Young Masters were very Well yesterday. Only the youngest was a Little froward wth the Cutting of a Tooth."

After giving the replies of the following gentlemen to his Lordship's offers of Commissions in the Lieutenantancy and Militia of Norfolk—Colonel Wodhouse, Sir Ralph Hare, Sir Edward Ward, Major Houghton, L^t Colonel John Harbord, Sir Roger Potts, and Sir Francis Guybon; All these gentlemen are willing to serve under Lord Townshend, and rejoice at his Lordship having been appointed Lord Lieutenant of Norfolk.—The letter concludes with the following postscript:—

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
—

"My Lord—I just now Rec^d a Let^r from Major Philip Stebbings the present Treas^r for the Militia Mony, who desires mee to present his Service to yo^r Honour, & begs the Favour to be continued Treasurer, He is counted an honest & substantiall Man, and has bin Mayor of the City of Norwich, he is a Grocer by Trade, and lives in the Market place, & voted for our Kn^t at the last Election."

1701, Augt. 4th. James Calthorpe to his dear cousin "Mr. Richard Lemon at y^e 3 Nuns near Water Lane in Fleet Street London."

"I am most heartily concerned for the loss of our good friende and I must say my good lord and lady are little less . . . my servis to y^r sister and cos Cooper."

1701, Augt. 15th. The Freedom of the City of Norwich conferred on Lord Townshend at this date. In Latin, on parchment, with the Corporation Seal attached. Signed by WILLIAM RAYLEY Chamberlain.

1701, Nov. 20th. William Cooke to Lord Townshend. Dated at Ason and unaddressed.

"Since the sodaine & surprizeing dissolution of Parliam^{nt}, & before I received the honour of your letter, I had intimation that those Gentlemen who mett at Norw^{ch} on Saturday last had taken effectuell care to give notice of a generall meeting to be held on Saturday next at the King's head in Norw^{ch}; I did heare alsoe that the Candidates to be proposed to the County would be your selfe & S^r John Holland to whom I cannot imagine there will be any opposition" . . .

1701, Nov. 26th. From the same to the same. Dated at Ason and unaddressed.

"Since my L^d Townshend's servant delivered me your letter I have received one from S^r Jacob Astley telling me he intend[s] to stand againe for the County . . . soe neare & honorable a Relation as S^r Jacob Astley concerning himselfe at this time I must beg your pardon if I stand neuter" . . .

1701, Dec. 12th. Samuel Fuller to Lord Townshend. Dated at Yarmouth and unaddressed.

"the slippery trick the Dissenters acted in the Election here, has so much disgusted those of the Church part as will not vote in conjunction with them & if [it] were not for a particular Obligation to yo^r Self [I] believe would all be on the contrary part, but as farr as I can guesse there will be few faile you, besides here has been no intimation from S^r J[acob] A[stley] of his resolutions of standing."

1702, April 20th. Francis Spellman "to M^r Lemon att the Three Nuns near Fleet Bridge in Fleet Street London:" Asking for assistance and begging for a line directed to him at his lodging "att the Golden Cock near East Gate Rochester."

1702, Nov. 2nd. Edmond Hamond to Lord Townshend. Dated from Southwoolton and addressed "for The Right Honble. The L^d Townshend in Soho Square London." An estimate of the value of certain timber in Helvington Wood and Patchy Wood. "The timber is distant from Wells a Sea port but 8 miles and much of it except some great trees may be carryd thither for 8s. p load."

170³/₄, Feb. 18th. Dr. Tenison, Archbishop of Canterbury, to Spencer Compton. Unaddressed, and signed, "yo^r affect^{ve} Friend Tho. Cantuar."

"Good S^r.—There is a Bill to preserve Libraries &c. brought into the House of Commons: and if I well remember, You were named together with S^r John Holland & M^r Compton, for the bringing of it in. I have procured a Copy of it, & I hope it will be much amended before it comes up to Us; I am not against the Design of it but I think it breaks in upon the Jurisdiction of the Queen, the Archbishops, divers Deans & others in their Peculiars, letting in upon them, the B^p of the Diocese & his officers. . . . I would therefore, gladly speak wth you about this Bill, that it may be so amended wth You, as to have no Opposition in our House." . . .

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1704, Sept. 6th. W. Wyndham to his "most Dear Brother Ashe Windham Esq^r at Felbrigg," "at the Queens head in Cornhill London." Dated from Nordlingen . . . "I have wrote to my mother at Felbrigg twice since my legge is of, and once to Aunt Martha Ashe at Twitnam Gadford will be a Lt New commissions will hardly be given out till his Grace gets to the Hague and then I hope to have one amongst the rest. Palmes is made a Brigad^r I cant imagine what is become of the Spaw waters I doubt the waters are spoiled and so the money lost"

1704, Oct. ^{18th}/_{24th}. The same "To the Hon^{ble} Roger Townshend Esq^r in Norfolk.—By Swaffham Bagg." From Nimigue. It was no small grief to me that I was not in a statu quo to give an account to you that you might hear of the fate of y^r Friends as well as the Victory [at Blenheim], but now all that is old, and so is the loss of my legge, but I can assure you I make no doubt of being in a condition again to serve her Majesty and my most dear Benefactors at Rainham, as well as ever, but I pray God to send it more in my power. Coll Palmes who was the day after the Battle made a Brigad^r gott himself and the Reg^t the greatest Honour & Reputation that you can well think, and truly I believe hardly any one was more instrumental to the Success of that Day Your Expression of Concern for me totches me as sensibly as an Amputation but I must desire that you will have no further Pity or thought of that Matter for I have not the least Notion but of being as easy and happy as ever"

1705, May 2nd. Robert Britiffe to Lord Townshend. Unaddressed. The writer describes the election the day before of a Mayor of the town he writes from.

1705, May 12th. The Bishop of Norwich to the same. Addressed "To the right hon^{ble} my Lord Viscount Townshend at Rainham in Norfolk."

The writer has written to the Lord Treasurer about a case he alludes to.

1705, May 29th. The same to the same. Addressed as the last. "My Lord,

At length I found my Lord President [the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery] who is much your Serv^t in the affair likely to come before her Majesty. He adviseth that affidavits should be made of the crimes set forth in the Petition. I begin my journey to morrow for Norwich, where I shall be most ready to receive your Commands.

I am, my Lord,
Your Lord^{ps} most faithful humble Serv^t
J. NORWICH."

Same date. Thomas Pelham to the same (his son in law). Addressed as the last. "I am much pleased with y^r Success at Norwich, at the same time I had a letter from my Brother wth the Sussex Poll w^{ch} was thus Trevor 1867, Parker 1416, Peach 1397, Lumny 895, but the Sheriff in favor of Parker made illegal Adjourn-m^{ts}. So a Petition and Actions will certainly follow. We are in great heart upon the Prospect of a good House of Com^{ns}."

1705, June 28th. Richard Leman to the same. Addressed "To The R^t Hon^{ble} Charles Lord Viscount Townshend att Raynham, Norfolk.
These : Humbly : Present."—"When I paid M^r Mason the coal monger the money according to your order I asked what price he would serve your Honour for for what you should have occasion for in the winter he told me he would venter to doe itt att 29s. p chaldron.

I have sent the things Mr. Watts wrote for yesterday by the Waggon this morning.

[P.S.] There is a late report about town that the Lord Keeper will be outt of his place in a very short time : and [that] Mr. William Cowper [is] to succeed him ; M^r Serjeant Weld is of this opinion."

1706, February 17th. Rev^d Stephen Gardiner to the same. Dated at Norwich and addressed to Lord Townshend in London. The writer entreats his Lordship's interest to procure him some preferment and mentions "My worthy Friend D^r Trimmer has promised me his assistance for that purpose."

1707, Jany. 2nd. Marquis of Kent, Lord Chamberlain, to the Hon.
Spencer Compton Esq^{re}, Treasurer of the Household of Prince George of Denmark.

"S^r—Having last Year upon Acc^t of some disputes att the Gentⁿ Walters Table, given directions to the Gentⁿ Ushers not to permit any Page of the Presence to sit at the same Table wth them they having never had that liberty till of late, I am inform'd that M^r Lucas one of the Prince's Pages notwithstanding he had Notice of the Order refus'd to obey it during his waite last Month, w^{ch} Contempt of his I desire may be represented to his Royall Highness.

I have now sent the Gentⁿ Ushers the same Order in writing and hope you will take care that the Prince's Pages of the Presence may be directed to submitt to it as well as the Queen's."

1707, March 23rd. N.S. Earl of Galloway to the same. Dated at Valencia.

Recommending to his protection Mons^r Jandraut (Gendraut), and mentioning that Lord Godolphin had promised to take care of him.

1707, April 10th. Edward Ashe to Lord Townshend. Dated in London and unaddressed.

"My Lord.

I was in hopes instead of this impertinent letter to have waited on you before this time att Rainham butt buisness, w^{ch} I think the more one hates the more itt pursues one, will necessarily deprive mee of that pleasure I fear for three weeks or a month longer. The only chance I have for seeing y^r L^oshp sooner is the attendance att the next meeting of the Parl^t on Monday the 14th, when doubtless there is some very extraordinary business to be done, that could occasion so short & so surprising a Prorogation. The reason People talk on here is to prevent frauds that Merch^{ts} may committ by draw-backs & reimporting those goods from Scotland Custome free. I wish a method may be found that may not prejudice the Customs here nor yett be any Infraction of the Union, butt this is thought to be very difficult, & for ought I kuow may be worth y^r L^dshp a journey from Rainam to consult about.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

'Tis certain the method our very good Freind the Secretary gott to pass the House of Commons was not approv'd by the Lords, w^{ch} has occasion'd the disappointment those had who expected to have heard a speech from the Queen last Tuesday.

Ash Wyndham is come to town & assures mee of your good health as I can y^r L^{dshp} of all y^r Freinds in town; I wish you much Mirth & Satisfaction att Norwich as to the Politicks I'me out of pain, I make no doubt butt Whiggism will be trimphant. When ever y^r L^{dshp} appears att the head of itt, that so good a Cause may ever find so powerfull a support is the desire of etc.

[P.S.] My humble service to S^r Cha : Turner and Mr. Walpole."

1707, April 25th. Edward Nicholas to Spencer Compton.

Recommending the bearer (Mr. Godfrey who was chief clerk to Lord Bellomont whilst the latter was Treasurer to the late Queen) to Mr. Compton's favour.

1707, June 3rd. N.S. Mons^r D'Allonne to the same. Dated at the Hague.

The writer notes that in future the acquittances of his pension are to be filled in with the name of Mr. Compton whom he congratulates on his new employment.

1707, Augt. ^{3rd}/_{14th}. Lord Gallway to the same. Dated at Bellpuig.

"I heartily wish y^{ou} joy of your new employment [as Treasurer of the Queen's Bounties] w^{ch} will give me from time to time the occasion of troubling you in the behalf of the poor widows that are now under y^r care. I enclose to you a List of some of the chiefest objects of Charity, w^{ch} I hope will come under no exception, in case there be any alteration made in the establisht list, their husbands having been killed in this Service.

I add to this list an old infirm Lady t^{would} be a charity & great satisfaction to her if her pension was altered in her Granddaughter's name.

The Lord Treasurer [Godolphin] has been often troubled in fav^r of Mr. Genrault, for a pension suitable to his employ^t in the King's service. I thought by Mr. Nicholas's letters that these things had been settled, her Ma^{ty} doing me the honour to allow of my recommendations in these matters."

1727, Augt. ^{7th}/_{18th}. Horatio Walpole to Robert Walpole. Dated at Paris and unaddressed. Endorsed at a later date "Mr Walpole to S^r Rob^t Walpole." [This letter has been misplaced.]

"Dear Brother—The enclosed is worth notice at this time of day when alterations are making at this Court to show that the Cardinal designs to make none wth regard to measures, of the Union wth England; as I have hinted in my dispatch to the D[uke] of Newcastle; but I did not think fitt to send it as part of my dispatch because the person that writes it speakes of you & me in a manner too personall for me to send it directly to the King; thō I thought it necessary to observe that the Jacobites despair entirely of doing anything wth the Cardinal; His Eminence in my last Conversation wth him took notice of the publick news mentioning my Lord Chesterfeild was to come hither as minister; and enter'd with me a good deal into his L^{rdps} Character, and seemed to think that a person of his youth witt & vivacity, was not the properest minister to treat wth one of his Eminence's age, meekness, & sedateness, but I assured him that I knew nothing of his coming hither, althō I could not conceal from him my desire of going home; he replied he

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

hoped not, till the generall pacification was finished; I must not omitt telling you that I do not regard, (after what you hinted to me) what the publick prints say about his Lths Embassy hither; but I can tell you for certain that Mr Arbuthnott the Banker here, has lately received from his Brother the Doctor advice that Lrd Chesterfeild spoke to the Doctor himselfe to write to him & to tell him that he should want his assistance in settling his family here, & providing things necessary for it because it would be very large; this the Banker has sayd as what the Doctor had wrote to him more than once; I am y^r most affect^d &c.

H. WALPOLE.

[P.S. The] Pretender has been at Lorrain & I believe is returned again to Italy."

1707, Nov. 6th. Lord Godolphin to Lord Townshend. Unaddressed.
My Lord.

The Queen being now fully at Liberty to follow her own inclinations in disposing of the place of Captⁿ of the Yeoman of the Guard to your L^p. She has commanded mee to acquaint you, that she is ready to give it you, as soon as ever you come to town; and as far as it consists with your own Conveniency, I should think the sooner, the better, in such a case, as this is; My inclinations have always been very sincere to serve y^r L^p whenever it was in my Power, & if the success I have had in this affair bee agreeable to you, it will bee a very great Satisfaction to

My Lord

Y^r L^{ps} most obedienthumble serv^t

GODOLPHIN."

1708, June 12th. N.S. Lord Gallway to Spencer Compton. Dated at Lisbon.

Thanking the latter for the care he takes of those persons recommended to his protection by the writer, and asking for a copy of the list of pensioners that has been signed by the Queen.

[1708?] July 21st. Lord Dartmouth to Lord Townshend. Dated at Queen's Square, Westminster.

"My dear Lord,

I know you will have goodnes enough to pardon my puting your L^p in mind of an honor (you were so kind to tell me iast Winter) you intended to doe my poor famillie in standing Godfather to my next Child, which is now come to light, and is so larg a Boy that I have some thoughtis of making him a Bishop (if the High Church last long enough). My Lady Halifax has promised to doe me the Honor to be Godmother and I will lett you know the tother Godfather, as soon as I know it my self but truly I have troubled so many people upon the like occation, that for that and another good Reason which you will easily gess, I am resolved to have no more Children, I thanke God I have but one Girle, to three Boys, which is some comfort. Pray let me know who you will appoint to be your proxy and believe me My dearst Lord with great obligation and Truth your Lordships

Most affectionate Faithfull Humble Servant

DARTMOUTH."

1708, Sept. 28th. John Turner "To His Royall Highness George Prince of Denmark." Enclosed in an outer cover, addressed "To The Hon^{ble} Mr Boyle Secretary off State att his office att the Cockpitt, Whitehall."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

On the outer cover is the following memorandum:—"Putt into the Gen^l Penny Post office in Broad Streett by M^r Turnor."

The writer offers his services to Prince George in very mysterious language. He would appear to have been either a lunatic or an Alchemist.

1708, Oct. 8th, N.S. Lord Gallway to Spencer Compton. Dated at Lisbon.

"I writ to you some time since to recommend to your favour Cap^t la Motte Blaguy. . . . I take the liberty to give you the trouble of this to desire you will be pleased to encourage and countenance the said Cap^t la Motte, in what may relate to the Widows and other Ladies to whom the Queen has granted pensions upon my recommendation, he being a very fit person to manage that affair." . . .

1708, Dec. 18th. Robert Britiffe, M.P., to Lord Townshend. Unaddressed.

"Norfolke att present affords us little news. All things are easy & people satisfied with the new Parliament. I heare some of our Suffolke Members like their own Country neighbours better then the conversation of the present H. of Commons & are come to keep their Christmas in the Country. S^r J[ame]s Preston was buried the last night, Mr F. Neave of Ringland the last week, & Mr Suckling the week before. Our new High Sherriff is not yet sworne nor fined, an Under Sherriff my Friend Mr Churchman is obliged to your Lordship for your kindness to him" . . .

1709, March 15th. A. Wyndham to the same. Unaddressed.

"My Lord,

Since y^r writing one this day, I hear the Lords without much bustle, & without any Division have passt sentence on the three last Articles; and have agreed on the following Question to be debat^d tomorrow the Tories reserving to themselves a liberty of altering it if they think fit.

That the Commons having made good the Articles of Impeachm^t agst D^r S[acheverell] he is guilty of a high Crime and Misdemean^r.

Instead of an Act to prevent such Doctrines as S^rs for the future, there will be an injunction to all the Clergy, not to meddle with the Toleracon, Administracon & Politicks.

I am

Y^r Excellency's

most devot^d &c.

A. WINDHAM."

1709, May 27th. Samuel Fuller to Lord Townshend. Unaddressed. Dated at Yarmouth.

Congratulating his Lordship on his appointment as Ambassador Extraordinary at the Hague, asking whom he shall support as a representative of the borough in Parliament in the place of Colonel Townshend recently deceased, and suggesting that Horatio Walpole should stand for Yarmouth.

1709, June 18th, N.S. Draft of a letter from Horatio Walpole to Samuel Fuller in answer to the last.

1709, June 18th, N.S. Draft of a letter from the same to his "Uncle Walpole."

With reference to a M^r Gibbons whom the latter has recommended to Lord Townshend as a clerk. As Lord Townshend's stay at the Hague is uncertain & as on the conclusion of a peace the young gentleman would again be adrift the writer cannot encourage him to come over. The writer has been kindly recommended by M^r Fuller to Lord Townshend as proper representative for Yarmouth in the place of Collonel Roger Townshend and has good hopes of success if his relations will join their endeavours to Lord Townshend's.

Same date. Draft of a letter from the same to his Brother Robert.

It concludes :—"I remember [the] L^d Treasurer upon M^r Craggs acquainting him that his L^d's recommendation sec[u]red at the borough where M^r Harnage is elected named me, but when M^r Craggs fairly made the expence the Objection his L^d shew'd an inclination to make that easy, but upon notice that none but M^r Harnage could carry it, that matter drop'd what may be properly done this way I leave entirely to your discretion however. I am willing to goe as far as 100*l*. or so to serve the Queen in Parliament as Manwaring says."

1709, July 24th. Robert Mann to Horatio Walpole. Dated in London and addressed "To Horatio Walpole Esq^{re} at the Right Hon^{ble} the Lord Vis^t Townshends in the Hague."

Introducing a gentleman (not named) and mentioning that "Lady Townshend comes next week."

1709, Augt. 4th. The same to the same. Addressed as the last.

"Sir—By your Uncles Command: I am to desire you to petition my Lord Townshend: in behalf of one M^r Hackwell: who the Col^l hath sometime since recommended to his Ldsp for a Yeoman of Her Maj^{ties} Guard: and which his Lordship promis'd to think of, but his Grace the Duke of Leeds interfer'd in the last Vacancy: but now there's an other and which M^r Poyntz will give him an Account of: tis y^r uncles earnest Request my Lord will be pleased to provide for him and that you'll let me know his Pleasure that I may signifie it to Hackwell. I hope My Lady and her Family gott safe to the Hague."

1709, Augt. 7th. D^r C. Roderick to the same. Dated at Kings College Cambridge, and addressed "To the worthy Horace Walpole Esq^r at His Excellency the L^d Townshend's, Hague."

The writer explains what he has done in the matter of getting Ch^r. Perin Edwards, who was 11 years old and in the 2nd Form, on to the Eton Foundation. The postscript is as follows—"When I came home last night from Eton the bearer Mr. Perkins Fellow of S^t John's & y^r country man came to offer me this oppertunity being to go Chaplain to the Marquise of Caermarthen in his new experiment-ship."

† 1709, Augt. ^{9th}/_{20th}. Spencer Compton to the same. Dated in Londoⁿ and unaddressed.

. The court Marriage I mentioned in my last Letter is not yet own'd, but I c^d never hear any reason for making it a secret; The Dean of Windsor is made B^p of Chichester, and D^r Robinson succeeds him as Dean of Windsor."

1709, Augt. 14th. H. Wither to the same. Dated at Alresford.

. "We got a Sixteenth place [on the Eton Foundation Election-Bill] which if it happens this year will be soon enough, if not I hope we shall have a forward one the next, for our reputation in the Schoole is very good."

1709, Augt. 16th. A. Windham to Lord Townshend.

"My Lord,—M^r Payne is dead, and [I] suppose y^r Lord^p will have abundance of Sollicitations ab^t it. Mr. Kendall writes me word that he has put in his claim; Major Houghton too has some hopes from his own necessity, & your wonted goodness to him.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

There will be no occasion for a clerk till Mic^e Sessions, and I believe. No body w^d be more generally acceptable than my Uncle."

1709, Sept. 16th. From J. [or. S.] Houghton in London to Horatio Walpole at the Hague.

"Sir—I ought sooner to have apply'd to you & crav'd your friendship & interest in moving my Lord in my Behalf for the Office of Clerk of the Peace for Norf: void by the death of Mr. Payn."

1709, Sept. ^{18th}_{24th}. Spencer Compton in London to the same at the Hague.

. I hope Madame Guirand has before this time been with you, to return you thanks for solliciting in her behalf, the Warr^t for her Pension is signed I heartily congratulate with you the great Victory the D. of Marlborough has obtained, though a great deal of pains is taken to lessen it here. I suppose you have heard of L^d Gower's death, but I am sure the Dutchess of Beaufort's must be News, for she was brought to Bed yesterday of a Son, and dy'd this Morning.

1709, Oct. 3rd, N.S. Cap^t John Massey to the same. From the Camp at the Siege of Mons.

. "The first day I mounted the Trenches Major Mortimer that Superseded me was kill'd, Notwithstanding I dont find that Vacancy will be any advantage to me or any of the Second Officers. Coll. Clayton is dangerously wounded in eye. Our Regim^t has already very much Suffered."

1709, Oct. 18th. Robert Atwood to Lord Townshend.—"I yesterday received advices from Yarmouth [about a contest at the approaching municipal election.] M^r Fuller & M^r Luson at the same time advised me that Capt. Milleson was just then expiring and desired I would wait on Coll^l Walpole to know if his place at the Fort was secured for Capt. Spooner."

1710, March 3rd, N.S. John Vallance to Horatio Walpole. From London.

The writer this day sent M^r Walpole's Peruque, to the care of M^r Gilbert Black, Merchant at Rotterdam, and has requested the latter to forward it. As he has taken all possible care in choice of hair as well as of fashion he hopes M^r Walpole will like it.

1710, April 5th. Edward Hopkins to Horatio Walpole. Dated in London and addressed "To Horatio Walpole, Esq^r, at M^r Secretary Boyle's office at the Cock Pitt."

. "tis in behalf of one M^r Dubois who has some time serv'd the government at Brill."

1710, April 11th. James Barbon to the same. Dated in London and addressed "For Horatio Wallpoole Esq^r wth the Right hon^{ble} the Lord Townshend at the Hague."

"Sir,

By my L^d Duke of Boltons Comands You have the trouble of this, who desires the favo^r of You to give the Enclosed the Spediest Conveyance You can to Coll. Crofts."

1710, April 22nd, N.S. James Craggs to the same at the Hague.

. . . "M^r Stanhope & I arrived at Frankfort the 19th ins^t, he went away the same day by the way of Swisserland, I was obliged to stay for my chaise w^{ch} I had left to be mended 6 posts of, & w^{ch} came up next morning. I intend to take Venice in my way, & hope to meet my Master at Genoa about the 5th of next month."

1710, April 26th, O.S. Peter Marescoe at Rotterdam to the same, addressed "For Hieroe Warpoole Esq^r at the Right Honorable the Lord Townsend Plenipotentiary from Her Majesty of Great Britain—Inn Hague."

"Sir,

This morning the Baron de Weltez sets out for Berne in Switzerland; I am now going, to make the best of my way, for the Brill hoping to save this Pacquet; I shall acquaint Robert Pringle, Esq^r of the five guineys rece^d (from you) so soon as I come to London."

1710, May 2nd. James Pelham to the same. Endorsed "Mr Pelham Camp before Douay, May the 2^d. Red: May the 6th."

"Dear Horace,

. . . . I am convinced you intend to keep your promise of making me a great man I waited on Mr Cardonell by his discourse to me I did not find I was likely to succeed so soon as I think it convenient at this time, he spoke to me of a Company in an old core w^{ch} with the Liberty of disposing [of] my own Comission would enable me to buy a Troop of Dragoons."

1710, May 20th. James Calthorpe "To Mr Thomas Ward att Raynham in Norfolk—by Swaffham Bagg."

On business. Dated in London and franked by Horatio Walpole (M.P. for Lostwithiel).

1710, June 15th. Robert Mann to Horatio Walpole. Dated in London, and addressed: "To Horatio Walpole, Esq., Secretary to the Embassy at the Hague."

The writer acknowledges a money draft, and says: "I shall not give any Account of the new Revolutions; presuming y^r Brother the Treasurer this post writes [to you]."

1710, July 12th. Lord Cornwallis to the same. Dated at Brome.

. . . . "pray send me word whether you come over next winter and if you doe not think this Nation is not run mad. You can not expect any news from hence haveing ben out of town this month my wife gives her Service to you [and I] pray mine to your Master."

1710, July ^{7th}/_{18th}. Capt. Edward Harrison to the same. Dated at Amsterdam and addressed to "Monsieur Walpole, Secretair de l'Ambassade chez son Excellence My Lord Tounshend ambassadeur de La Grande Bretagne at La Haye."

"At my arrivall here from the East Indies on the 5th Inst., I came up to this Citty in hopes to hear of my Brothers but in vain and hearing that you are at the Hague whom I remember to have seen often among them makes me take this freedom desiring you will favour me with a Line or two [to tell me] where they are and how they doe. He to whom the Inclos'd is directed was formerly at sea with me and I heard in India that he had a commission in Coll^l Hills regiment pray Sr doe me the favour to enquire if he is in Flanders and send him this by the first post if we are not soon call'd away I intend to come and thank you at the Hague and desire you will command me anything in my way."

1710 [Augt?]. Colonel John Harbord to Horatio Walpole. Dated at "Hell Voet Sluys Sunday Noon." Addressed "To the Hon^{ble} Horace Walpole Esq^r Secretary to his Excellence the Lord Townshend at the Hague."

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

" Dr Secretary,

After my humble harty and most affectionate Duty to my ever Honrd Lord & Ma[ste]r Our good L^d Lieuten^t her Maties Great Ambassadors and Countrys Frnd wth all the acknowldgm^{ts} I am capable of making, w^{ch} I must leave & recomend to Yo^r Friendship &c. &c. I must not forget Yo^r great Kindness to me both in my goeing and returning. And to desire Yow if my good Lord continues his thoughts of sending any Renish to drinck her Maties health & his Lord^{sh} & the Peace and prosperity of these kingdoms together wth Our Allyes &c. I pray let it be sent to M^r Archibald Hoop Merch^t on de Haring Vliet at Rotterdam. I herewith send an Old 20 p. of Gold desiring Youl gratifye Yo^r Clark for my Pass and give the rest to his Lord^{sh} Butler. I have Nothing to ad but that I came of 10 how^{rs} to late for the fleet wherein was a Yorkshire Ma[ste]r [who] w^d ha set me probably but this time neer Gunton where if it shall please We get safe home & Youl be soe kind [as] to call Youl very Much Oblidge,

Yo^r True friend & Serv^t

J. HARBORD."

1710, Augt. 26. The same to the same. Dated at Grinley, and addressed as the last.

" Dr Bro: Sinner,

This must in y^e first place return my very affectionat as well as humble Duty and Service to his Excelencie Our good L^d and Mast^r her Maties Plen^{ty} Potenciary in this Critical Junct^{re}, w^{ch} is all I dare say, &c. Nor must I omit my harty thanks for y^e hono^r & favour I rec^d from his L^d and to Yo^r Self for yo^r very friendly care and kindnesse and helping me forward, but y^e Days Pleasure I had at the Hague lost me my Passage in y^e Fleet w^{ch} I came of[f] 10 how^{rs} short of.

And the Packet I came over in (y^e Eagle) being the worst Saylor of all y^e five was soe Neer being taken by a fr[ench] Privateer of 14 or 16 guns, as he had his Boat in y^e Tackle to com aboard us, and soe small hopes remaind of escaping Dunkerk—as divers Gent. disposed of gold to a sort of Cormor[an]t Damzel who really swall[owe]d it as fast as we have seen Jugl[e]rs play wth balls or. . . . She swall[owe]d 12 Span[ish] Pistol[e]s of one Gent. & besides w^t she took in of others, a Diamond ring wth div^{rs} Stones of an Ancient Ladys, went y^e same way. She offered me much Kindnesse that way but that Little I had left being engaged, I left y^e Cabbin full of that Sort of buisynesse, and was the only Gent. Passeng^r admitted on y^e Deck, to see y^e Sport. I must own I had rather chose to ha ben wth my gun in a fur close—tho wthout Brecheas, but preferd y^e fresh Aire, rather than dying in a hole, soe I had the pleasure of seeing all y^e Sport, such as t^{was} & That it pleased God to give us a longer time. For our Ma[ste]r & Gunner & Doct^r being perfect Mast^{rs} of saying & all Working like true English Men, wth the Ships Crew, having in a few Mom^{ts} strained all their Canvas & by the help of Oars turnd y^e Ships head a differ[en]t course to that ye fr[ench] Man was running vppon us: in that very inst^t, it pleased God to send so fresh a Gale, as before y^e fr[ench] could bring their Ship about, he could bring No more Guns to bear on us, then he had bestowd before. We had y^e hono^r to give y^e first gun, For w^{ch} y^e ball going Pretty Near, aft^r a Short Pause he gave us 4, and we returned two, being y^e rest of our Little broad Side: w^{ch} he gave us 3 or 4 for, whereof one brusht Our Main Mast, & so We parted—& soon after the Wind rose very high, and a dismal Night it was, wth Rain alsoe but it blew directly for us, w^{ch} was another Signal Evidence of Gods care of us. Having, to Lighten Our Ship for runing whilst y^e Privat[ee]r was coming on us,

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

thrown over Most if not all our Stones [ballast]. And I have I thank God found No ill Effects of lying east 4 Nights, whereof y^e last Wett, having given my Cabbin Most of y^e time to an Ancient Decayed Gent. woman. And I verily believe a true Religious good Woman, And that her Prayers contributed not a little Towards Our Preservacon.

As to my Petition That if by My Life I might contribute towards y^e Peace & Welfare of my Country and continue my care of y^e Poor Might be Acceptable to God, I des[ire]d to Live, and I know little else earnestly to Pray for. I suppose our good L^d as heard I have yielded to the Importunity of his L^{ds} Relations & friends, Tho I dare say No care or Temperance, Can Preserve my old Cotage in London. If You can Excuse this trouble, & what Follows w^{ch} is to pray Youl make y^e best enquiry you conveniently can at Yo^r Leasure, and send me y^r answer. M^r Gylby y^e own^r of y^e Sunck is my Next Neighb^r here, and Particul^r friend, as his Grandfather Cole Gylby was—& Govern^r of New Work [Newark?] in y^e Rebellion in Car 1st time & died Dp. Govern^r of Hull, in Car 2^d time and is a very worthy deserving honest Whig.

Our great Du[ke] Enq[uire]d after our good L^d & Mast^{rs} health last Munday & yesterday drunk it very heartily wth y^e s^d M^r Gylby; at honest M^r Thornhags, & I am Sincerely

Y^r true Lov^r & Ser^t

JO. HARBORD."

[Enclosed in a Description of "the Sunk," an Island in the Humber, of about 2,000 acres, situated about ten miles below Hull. It is for sale, and the writer states it is rapidly growing larger through fresh deposits of earth].

1710, Sept. 11th. Samuel Fuller to Lord Townshend. Dated at Yarmouth and addressed "These—To His Excellency The L^d Visc^t Townshend Her Majesty of Gr^t Britains Ambassador At [the] Hague. —Paid 3^d."

About Election matters. The writer is heartily engaged in the interest of M^r Windham and Colonel Harbord.

1710, Sept. 22nd. The same to the same. Unsigned.

"My Lord—I writ to your Lord^p last post giving you a full acct of our County affairs, and recommending to your Excellency the writing a letter of thanks to John Berney of Westwick Esq^{re} who is zealous for us to the last degree; and who is a Gentleman worth the endeavouring to secure in the Whig Interest. . . . the Honour of such a letter from your Lord^p will be taken most kindly and affix him to our party. Whereas on the other hand, if he should leave us Negus & he w^d joyn, fling out Preston and carry a great body of men away that are now with us.

His Brother's [Richard Berney's] standing for Norwich is an unlucky buisness at this time, for it forces him to act for the Tors in the city. Council^r Britiffe rides for us from house to house under Sir Jacob's [Sir Jacob Astley's] own nose; & I hear from good hands that Serjeant Wells will come at the head of 30 men from Bury. We are in daily Expectation of the dissolution but our Election here [Norfolk] cannot be before the 11th of October. I am y^r Excellencys most obedient "&c."

[P.S.] Young Knight the Flegg Lieuten^t to Capⁿ Symonds has flung up his Commission, because wee opposed his being a Commissioner of the Tax at Ferriers instance. Captain Symonds desires it may be given as soon as y^r Lord^p please, to Thomas Cooper Jun^r a good man."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1711, Feb. 13th. Alexander Cunningham to Lord Townshend. Unsigned. Dated at Venice.

... "yesterday we had the cutting [off] the bull's head and the fireworks performed w^t great solemnitie, and on Sunday we are to have a bull beating in the palace Our Merch^{ts} tell me the taking of Minorca is fatal to them in teen days think to goe for Rome where I shall want for your Ex^{ties} Commands. . . . My Lord Lonsdale gives his most humble service to your Ex^{tie} and trulie has behaved himself mightie well this Carn[iva]l in all respects. I'm extreamlie pleased w^t him.

1711, Feb. 20th. The same to Horatio Walpole. Dated at Venice and addressed "A Monsieur Mons^r Hor^e Walpool Secretair de Sa Maj^{tie} Britanique chez My Lord Townshend à la Hay Holland."

... Mr Molesworth came hither last week and next week is to set out for Florence. . . . We think to stay a fortnight longer.

1713, Jan. 2nd. Joshua Beadle to Lord Townshend, from London, addressed to Lord Townshend at Raynham Hall.

The writer has agreed to purchase for his Lordship six chances in the present lottery at three guineas each chance.

1713, July 25th. Edward Ashe to the same, from London. Congratulations on his Lordship's marriage.

1713, Augt. 18th. Charles [Trimnell] Bishop of Norwich to the same.

The writer's wife presented him with a son on the 1st inst. "My Lord Sommers and My Lord Cowper did me the honour to stand for him."

1714, Feb. 23rd. Thomas de Grey to Lord Townshend. Dated at Merton.

... "Ar[thur] Branthwayte tells me he acquainted y^r Lordship with his desires to gett into the Parliament House, that you were pleased to encourage him in it & that upon his failing at Castle Rising you told him you thought some double election might be made, when he might be brought in upon the second choice

1715, April 30th. John Fleetwood, Consul at Naples, to "The Right Hon^{ble} the Lord Vicount Townshend his Majesties principal Secretary of State.—Whitehall."

The writer begs his Lordship's acceptance "of a Cask of Lachrimæ" and if the vintage had been better he would have also sent some of Horace's Falernian.

1715, July 28th. Thomas Parker to the same. Unaddressed.

Hopes Mr. Grovenor may have the command of one of the troops of horse of the Staffordshire Militia. . . . Cap^t Levinge Sir Richard's son [a relation of the writer's] should certainly be taken care of the first opportunity and have a pension in the mean time. . . . he has been 10 years a Capt. always at his Post, stands first in the list of those recommended by Brigadier Gore. . . .

1715, Sept. 11th. Lord Cornwallis to the same. Unaddressed. Enclosing letters.

1715, Sept. 23rd. R. B. to Tobias Jenkins, M.P. for York. Dated at Blyth and directed "To Toby Jenkins Esq^r Member of Parliament at M^r Hardings a Book sellers In—S^t Martins Lane—London—Free."

"I have yours of the 17 Instant, your Frank was struck out & 4^d Charg^d Postage Davidson's Roguery in delaying finishing the [Salt-]Pan has broke my measures of coming to London at Mich[elmas]. S. tells me Burdon is to pay but 28^s p tun for his & my Salt, Burdon has loaded 100 Tun last weeke with you the price I know not—depend upon it I can settle a Trade to make 40^s p Tun all the years round . . . tis said Sr Jn^o Delavall is going to London by my L[ord] Scarborough's request & will be made Deputy Governor to Tyn Mouth Castle the truth I know not . . . Divers Reegm^{ts} gon for Scotland what the Event of that will be God knowes.—I am yr Faithfull Friend & humble Ser^t

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

R. B.

[P.S.] If youl come doune by Sea, I will goe up to London with you by Sea, when you return, if I can possibly do it.

P.S. Morpeth—Just now Mr Lambert is come to Tom Marrs. I got him privateley to ask if my Lord design'd for Lincoln shire this winter. He sayes my Lord will not stirr this winter from Widderington.

1715, Sept. 24th. Sir Samuel Molyneux to Lord Townshend. Dated at St James's.

Application having been made to His R.H. the Prince for a Grant of the Office of Chamberlain of Caernaeonshire, Merionethshire and Anglesey in North Wales to be made during Pleasure to Mr Warburton of Chester, when the said Office should become Grantable by His R.H. and His Royal Highness being desirous to comply with the said Request if His Patent for the Principality of Wales were pass'd, Mr Warburton has not thought fitt to make application to his Majesty for the Same although the affairs of the Country do require the Immediate Constitution of such an Officer without produceing an Assurance to your Lordship that it is agreeable to the Prince's desire that he should have the Employment. Is therefore directed by His Royal Highness to let your Lordship know that he doth entirely approve of the said Mr Warburton's applying to his Majesty for the Grant of the said Office During His Majesty's Pleasure and hopes your Lordship will give him your Assistance and Protection therein.

Same date. A letter from the University of Cambridge to the same. Thanking his Lordship for having procured for the University a grant from the King of the library of the late Bishop of Ely [D^r John Moore.] Signed by the Vice-Chancellor the Rev. Thomas Sherlock (afterwards, successively, Bishop of Bangor, Salisbury, and London), and by Robert Grove, Registrar of University.

1715, Sept. 27th. William Prestland to the same. Unaddressed.

. "Col. Wodehous[e] sent me this morning how poor Mr L'Estrange is dead & with great earnestness begs your favour for Mr Roger L'Estrange his son."

1715, Oct. 4th. Copy of Lord Townshend's reply to the University of Cambridge.

His Lordship acknowledges the above letter, and promises to embrace every opportunity of testifying his affection for the University.

1715, Nov. 28th. Lord Stawell to the same. Unaddressed, dated at Aldermaston.

The writer, who is afflicted with the gout, begs his Lordship's permission to write to Lord "Boolingbrooke" on the latter's private affairs, and to give him an account of the favours that Lord Townshend had shown to Lady Bolingbroke.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1715, Dec. 26th. Earl of Portland to the same. Dated at St James's Square, and unaddressed.

My Lord—I hope y^r Lord^{sh} will excuse my not having obey'd y^r Commands sooner, in sending this to y^r House. Some family busines, which now is over has prevented me; When I had the honour to see you last in the Drawing Roome, I told y^r Lord^{sh} that I desir'd not to change my name, but beeing oblig'd to chuse one by which my son must be call'd, that I had chose that of Titchfield; I desire y^r Lord^{sh} will give all the dispatch you can to this matter, as you was pleas'd to promise you would, & you'll extreamly oblige him, who is with sincerity & respect,—My Lord—Your Lord^{sh}—Most obed^t & most humble servant

PORTLAND.

Note. The writer was created Duke of Portland and Marquis of Titchfield in the following July.

1716, July 5th. Edward Southwell to Spencer Compton. From Whitehall.

“S^r—I am commanded by my Lord President to desire you would attend at St James's-tomorrow at 12 a Clock, in order to your being Sworn of his Ma^{ty}s most Hon^{ble} Privy Council.”

171~~6~~⁷, Feb. 27th. Defeazance from S^r Lambert Blackwell to the Lord Carpenter for 2000^l in the loan to the Emperor—Copy.

“KNOW ALL MEN by these Presents that I S^r Lambert Blackwell of St James's Westminster Kut do hereby for me my Executors & Administrators acknowledge and declare that so far as the sum of twenty two thousand Guilders Currant Money of Amsterdam in the Emperor's loan in Holland, in my name and under the Care of M^r George Clifford & Co. of Amsterdam is for the proper account and risque of the hon^{ble} Lieut. Gen^l George Carpenter, & was by his order pay'd for out of the produce of two thousand pounds Bank Annuities.”

1718, July 1st. Spencer Compton to ——. Draft. Unaddressed. Dated in St. James's Square.

“S^r—I have received y^r Letter of the 18th of June, with the several Papers inclosed with it; The Fact is so clearly stated by M^r Jodrell that I can add nothing to it; & I conceive that I am no proper Judge of the reasonableness of the Demand, the Speaker never having had, that I know of, any Inspection or Contrroll over the Bills of the Serjeant at Arms. This I beg you to represent to the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury.

I am with the greatest respect etc.

S. COMPTON.”

Note. M^r Paul Jodrell's Report to the Treasury in favour of the Serjeant-at-Arms' Memorial (claiming payment of certain fees for arresting and keeping in custody Matthew Prior) will be found in the printed Calendar of Treasury Papers under the date 8 May 1718. The above letter was evidently written in obedience to the following Treasury Minute:—“13 June 1718. Desire M^r Speaker to give my Lords his opinion as to the reasonableness of this demand [of M^r Thomas Wiburg, Serjeant-at-Arms].”

1720, Sept. 28th. William Gordon to ——. Dated at Paris and unaddressed.

To advise that the writer is forwarding, through M^r Arbuthnot at Rouen, a small box addressed to Mr George Ouchterlony containing four wigs made by Mons^r Broussin, and that the writer has paid for the wigs 220 francs.

1730, Jan. 1st. Lord Conningsby to Lord Townshend. Unaddressed.
Dated at "hampton Court in herifordsheir."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

The writer begs Lord Townshend to prosecute one Edward Witherston, who has been pricked for sheriff of Herefordshire, as he is a notorious Jacobite; and the writer states that he has forwarded to his Majesty in Council affidavits "to prove him guilty of an insurrection if not a Rebellion."

1721, May 21st. Lord Carpenter to the same.

Begging his Lordship to procure the removal of the attachment that has been laid on some monies in the hands of Sir Lambert Blackwell, as the monies really belong to the writer.

1721, June 8th. Lord Findlater to the same. Dated at Edinburgh and unaddressed.

"My Lord—I doubt not bot Your Lop hes ane accompt from the Duke of Argyll of our proceedings att the election the Earl of Aberdeen hes caried the return in his favours by a majority of five, bot ther are several objections made against the titels and qualifications of so manie of thos [who] voted for him that I believe that matter may yet be re-trived in the house of Lords and concerning this a full memorial will be sent, the Earl of Eglintoun would unquestionable [have] prevailed bot that [the] E. of Aberdeen had preingadged mannie befor the E. Eglintoun sett upp and al the English Lords sent ther Proxies and lists for Aberdeen; the torie Lords wer also prevailed upon by the late E. of Carnwath, Mr Lock of Carnwath and Mr Munk who used al ther interest and influence for Aberdeen bot in a general election I am certain the Duke of Argyll would have a considerable Majoritie, it is lyke the Squad may misrepresent my voting for [the] E. of Eglintoun bot I had no directions from the King or his Ministrie to doe for either and as I told Your Lop when I had the honour to wait of You the D of Argyll hes given me full assurances of his friendship and [the] E of Eglintoun is my near relation. I am sure I sha ever be most dutiful to His Majestie and His Government and ther was fullie as manie who have posts in the Government that voted for [the] E of Eglintoun as ther wer of the voters for [the] E [of] Aberdeen I relie upon Your Lop[s] protection to me in my absence and You shall ever command what service is in my power and wishing Your Lop al success and prosperitie in your administration I am."

1721, Sept. 12th. Charles Lovell to the same. From Dover.

After acquainting his Lordship with the intestine Divisions & Com-motions into which this Corporation is plunged since the Election of Mr Berkeley & Mr Furnesse, the writer goes on:—

"I Have Endeavourd to behave with all the Prudence that possable I could in this Affair; but I know, that I have been represented to the Duke of Dorset, w^{ch} am sorry for; altho' can't help it.

On Monday morning my Lord; a Gentleman sailed in the Eagle Pacq^t Boat with a Fine Gale of wind at S.W. for Ostend. I soon perceived that he had a Mind to go of In Cogg; by a Messenger I sent to him; So I never waited upon him, nor don't know his name, nor did I take any notice of his going of, to the Port Master General in my Daiary.

As I can never think of y^r Lordshipp, without being filled with a due Sence of y^r Goodness to me; So I Humbly hope that it will alwaies be beleived that Nobody can be more perfectly devoted to yo^r Lord-shipp's Service than (My Lord)—yo^r Most Dutifull & most obedient Humble Servent, CHA. LOVELL."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1722, June 7th. Duke of Somerset to Spencer Compton. Unaddressed.

The Duke congratulates Mr Compton on his Election for the County of Sussex, and sends his humble duty to the Prince of Wales. He has given orders to the Keepers in Hampton Court Harte Park to obey Mr Compton's "warrants to kill twelve Brace of Fawnes and six Brace of Fat Bucks this Season for the Prince's Service."

1722, Sept. 22nd. Sir David Bulkeley to ———. Dated at Burgate near Fordingbridge and unaddressed.

Refers to commands lately received from Mr Walpole.

1722, Sept. 25th. Edward Nicholas to Spencer Compton. Dated at "Spring Garden" and unaddressed.

"Sir,—I met accidentally with Mr Feilding who said Something as if there might be Something like an Opposition wth the house meets on the Choice of a Speaker, this makes me trouble you with this to let you know that tho I set out to morrow for the West I will be back before that day, and if such a thing is suspected I should be glad you would let me know it, that I might use my little interest with some of my Western Acquaintance to prevail with them, to doe as I am sure I will who am."

1723, Dec. 23rd. N.S. Thomas Crawford "To the R^t Hon^{ble} Robert Walpole Esq^r Secretary of State &c." Dated at Paris and endorsed "Mr Crawford—Dec^r 23^d N.S. 1723—Rec^d Dec. 16th O.S."

Private letter—"Sir—Your Brother writes to you and to My Lord Townshend so fully the state of things here that I shall only take the liberty by this occasion to joyn my opinion of 'em in general with his, that in all human probability, this Court will not only att present goe on in concert with us towards the establishing the publick tranquillity of Europe with the same warmth that it did before the D[uke] of Orleans' death, but likewise seek to live in a particular friendship and good understanding with us, at le[a]st for some years, which I hope will be all we shall want of 'em to putt us in a condition of being as indifferent about the continuation of it as they may be.

I beg leave to return you my humble acknowledgements for the goodness you have been pleas'd to shewe me in ordering the payment of my little arrears att the Treasury, of which Mr [Horatio] Walpole has given me notice, and to assure you that I shall endeavour all my lifetime to merit the continuation of your favour and protection, by acquitting myselfe in the best manner I can as an honest man in the discharge of any trust that may be given me, and by a most sincere and gratefull attachment to you and your family which has engaged me by the strongest motives.

I am with the greatest respect—Sir—Your most humble and most devoted servant

THO. CRAWFORD."

1724, Augt. 20th. Stephen Poyntz to Lord Townshend.

A letter on trust matters. It concludes:—"I have at last gott letters from the Captⁿ of the Portmahone who is at the Nore and (as he says) ready. I hope to wait on your L^{ty} about the middle of next week for my Credentials & Instructions and to embark on Monday sennight if possible."

1724, Jan. 20th. A memorandum:—

Recd at the Excheq^r this 20th Day of Jan^y 17²⁴ for the R^t Hon^{ble} the L^d Visco^t Townshend's one Quarter's secret service due at X^{mas} last

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
—

750 : 0 : 0

p ^d at the Treasury	-	1	1
„ Auditors	-	4	16 6
„ Pells	-	2	16 6
„ Tellers	-	11	5
Civil List Tax [at 5 per cent]		18	15

- 38 : 14 : 0

711 : 6 —

1724, March 12th. A memorandum:

Fees for Passing the R^t Hon^{ble} the Lord Viscount Townshend's New Privy Seal for 1000th Secret Service.

Signet Office	-	1 : 18	0
Office Keeper	-	2	6
Privy Seal Office	-	2 : 15	6
Office Keeper	-	5	0
Stamps	-	6 : 0	0
Treasury	-	2 : 2	0
Stamps for the Warrant		7	6

£13 10 6

1725, May 11th. Dr. Samuel Knight to Spencer Compton. Dated at Ely and addressed.

“I am going forward with the life of Erasmus, intending to make it as perfect as possibly I can especially as to that part of it that he spent in England . . . I did hope to have had my book out of the presse before August but materials increasing upon me & having several Heads engraven from the paintings of Holben which are lodged in several distant places I fear it will not be ready long before the next meeting of the Parlemt^{nt}”

1725, May 12th. Mrs. S. Ibbot to the same. Dated at Shadwell and unaddressed. Begging Mr. Compton to subscribe for a copy of Mr. Ibbot's sermons.

1725, May 22nd. John Tabor to the same. Dated at Lewes, and addressed “To The Right Hon^{ble} Spencer Compton Speaker of the House of Commons humbly present these.”

Requesting Mr. Compton to recommend the bearer, Mr. Norton to the Duke of Dorset as a tenant for his Grace's farm at Hangleton.

1725, May 29th. The Duke of Montagu to the same. Addressed “To the Right honorable S^r Spencer Compton.*

“Sir, I take it to be a Duty incumbent on me to acquaint you that the ancient Rites in conferring the knighthood of the Bath, whereby each Candidate was obliged to be attended by three Esquires of honor, bearing Coat Arms like is confirmed by the Seventh Article of the Status of the Order of the Bath, & that these Statuts further direct, these Esquires shall in the Ceremony of this Order, be habited in Surcoats delivered from his Majesties Wardrobe, & also that their Arms shall be affix'd, to the back of the Seats, under the Stalls of their respective Knights, [in King Henry the Seventh's Chapel in Westminster Abbey] in enameled Escutcheons, & during the Term of their several Lives, these Esquires shall enjoy all Rights, Priviledges, Exemptions & advantages which the Esquires of the Sovereigns Body, or the Gentlemen of

* Mr. Spencer Compton was created a Knight of the Bath, on the revival of the Order, on the 18th of May 1725.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

the Privy Chamber do lawfully enjoy, or are entituled unto by virtue of any Grant Prescription or Custom whatsoever & their eldest Sons shall have & use the addition and Title of Esquires in all Acts Proceedings & Pleadings &c^a. You are fully appris'd that the Dignity of any regular Military Order, will be maintain'd by an exact observance of the Statuts I must therefore request you to transmit as soon as possible the names of those Esquires with the respective places of their residence & what Coat Arms they are severally entituled unto, that his Majesties Royal Intentions, in this respect may be fully answered."

July 7th, 1725. William Inge to the same. Dated at Thorp Constantine and unaddressed.

After high encomiums on the Speaker's address to the Managers for the House of Commons against "The Great Offender" (the Earl of Macclesfield) the writer goes on to say that he has shown his zeal for religion by his endeavours to encourage the building of a new church and the providing a Churchyard in Birmingham.

1725, Sept. 14th. William Munday to the same. Unaddressed.

With the greatest Submission I do presume to write this to your Honor to acquaint you of the State of Mr. Travers health. When I returned from Coventry he had been delirious some daies, but was grown sensible again, since w^{ch} he has seemed to continue so, but is so very weak, & likewise bedrid, and able to take only a little Sack Whey downe, that Mr Holditch his Nephew & the Apothecary &c think he can't last long. . . . Mr Cary has ordered me to give your Honor the earliest Notice of his Death, and I will do it if possible. I hope whoever has the Succession [to Mr Travers office in the Prince's household], your Honor will vouchsafe me the Favor of your Recommendation

[P.S.] A letter will come soonest to me at William's coffee house in Dover Street."

1725, Sept. 16th. The same to the same.

"R^t Hon^{ble} Sir, My Dear Master departed this life 25 Minutes past twelve the bearer my Brother brings this Notice from Sir," etc.

Same date. Henry Powell to the same. Dated at Richmond old Park and unaddressed.

The Prince's wines on new racking are grown better beyond Expectation. The writer is told that Mr Clayton is to be Mr Travers's successor.

1725, Oct. 7th. J. Butler to the same. Dated at Warminghurst Park and unaddressed.

"Sir, Mr Eyre wrote me word last night his son Thomas Eyre, who is y^e young person y^e Princesses were inoculated from, was Yesterday to deliver his Petition to y^e East India Company to go this Year in their Service as Factor to Bengale; He says his son has already served them gratis upwards of 4 Years, that he has rec^d pretty good assurances from some of y^e leading Directors that he shall go? if in y^e Station of a Factor as he petitions, he shall then be favoured, as Mr Eyre is told some others have been, wth almost a Year of y^e Usual Time, but if he must go [as] a Writer only, & begin his 5 Years of Service abroad, & loose his 4 Years of Service here, in which he has spent a great part of his Fortune, Mr Eyre thinks it will be something hard, therefore has desired me to mention this to You, since one word from You S^r to Gov^r Harrison, or S^r Mathew Decker can't fail of Success, if you would honour him so far."

1725, Oct. 15th. Sir Matthew Decker to the same. Dated from St James[s] Square and unsigned. Addressed at foot to "The Hon^{ble} Sir Spencer Compton" and endorsed "Sr Math^w Decker."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

... "as to Mr Eyre's affair, he is a young Gentleman, between 19 and 20 year, and under 21. The Comp^y never sends out any body for factor, of w^{ch} I gave a hint to y^e Gentleman yesterday when he brought me your Letter. I don't mention this to insinuate that he shall or can not go, this year in y^e said post, for I am in great hopes that I shall obtain this for him, and if others should know his age, that we may even at your Consideration, break thro' this rule, but onley if I should miscarry in this Design, and that he goes out as a writer, that it will not be y^e worse for him, in point of advancement hereafter, for in this Case, I'll procure him a year or Two in his Time, so that by our way he may come as soon to be a Junior Merchant (w^{ch} is y^e Channel of advancement) as if he went out a factor this Season, but as I say here before I flatter myself I shall be able to compass this."

1726, Augt. 13th. Robert Corker to the same. Dated at the "Hotwell Bristoll" and unaddressed.

"Hon^{ble} Sr

The Death of my Dear wiffe in Jan^{ry} last prevented my Journey to Londⁿ w^{ch} I was determined to begin in that month, & my Reumatick disord^r Encreasing I was advised to drinke these waters w^{ch} I have been using Ever since y^e beginning of June last & I praise God wth very good Success. Upon y^e News (w^{ch} I rec^d here) of M^r Vincent's death after y^e Coynage was begun, thinking it both for the Princes & the Countrys Service & for y^e Security of the Tyn Manufacture that the Assaying thereof should be perform'd by a Sworne Officer I recommended to y^e Depty Assaym[aste]r as he had begun to goe through y^e Coynages & discharge y^e duty of Assaying y^e Tyn wth y^e utmost Skill & Care untill his Royall Highness signified his further pleasure wth respect to y^e Assaymⁿ Office, and as I have been always watchfull for y^e preservation of this branch of his Royall Highness's Revenue & likewise to keepe up the reputation of this Noble Commodity wth Success hitherto & haveing heard some complaints of y^e badd quallety of Tyn lately sent abroad, I thought this was my Duty & hope Sr it will meet yo^r Approbation.

Assoon as I heard of this Demise I likewise judged it proper to write a Letter to M^r John Johns (y^e present Acting Mayor of Lostwithyell) who wth his Brother lately Deceased have kept y^e Mayors Office of that Borrough betwixt them (sometimes alternately) for at least 20 y^{rs} putting him in minde of some discourse wee had formerly in w^{ch} They both promised me to devote them Selves to y^e Princes Service for one Member at least. They haveing then promised one to M^r V[incent]t but he assuering them y^e interest he made was alsoe for y^e Pr[ince of Wales] & using Some further prevayling Arguments it was to little purpose to proceed any farther at that time wth those people of w^{ch} I tooke y^e liberty then to give y^r Hon^r an Acc^t and as I judged this a proper Juncture to renew our correspondence I wrote him two lett^{rs} on y^e Subject from hence and presume to send you both his lett^{rs} enclosed in answere to mine I dont perfectly know upon what foot y^e Borrough of Lostwithyell stands at present whether theres any dispute at Law about y^e Mayoralty nor whether any Measures are taken to engage this Borrough, but my zeale for his Royall Highnesses Service prompted me to goe thus farr w^{ch} I hope will excuse my freedome & if herein I have yo^r Approbation I shall esteeme myself happy as I shall at all times in executeing any of yo^r Commands.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

S^r, I lately received a letter from M^r Nicholson Master of the Pewter^{ers} Company full of Complaints of y^e badd quallety of y^e Tyn in generall of Ladiday [Lady-day] Coynage w^{ch} is very surprizeing since I never before heard of a whole Coynages Tyn complained of, & wth his letter he sent me the Ma^r & Wardens Essays [assays] of 5^{rs} [sic] and 9^{rs} Tyn taken by them, which letter & accounts I have sent to M^r Cary fearing I have already given You too much trouble & if it be thought convenient noe doubt M^r Nicholson will Attend any time & Explain himself further on this Complaint.

I shall only crave leave to add my humble Opinion that the Deputy Assayma^r (at least) should be a persone of Judgm^t in Mettals to be able to take a true Essay in Tyn especially & to be a man alsoe of Probity y^e honour of the Comodity & Security of the Tyn trade depending very much on a faithfull & skilfull discharge of the Duty of his Office.

All w^{ch} is most humbly Submitted to yo^r great Wisdome by " etc.

1727, June 18th. Horatio Walpole to George Tilson. Dated at Paris and unaddressed. Endorsed, in George Tilson's handwriting, under this date, "M^r Walpole—&r[ecieve]d 1st p Walton near Delder."

"Dear Sir—I hope this will find you safe over [the] water, & overtake you at the Hague, thō by what M^r Robinson tells me who arrived here last night, I am afraid his Lrd will have been gone farther not intending to stay above two or three days there, whereas I had heard he would continue at least a week in Holland; especially at this juncture when the Pensionary is given over, and great intrigues are on foot for his successour, the accounts we have had here speak very favourable of M^r Slingerlandt, thō his frequent & violent indisposition by the gout may be a great objection to him; by the first safe conveyance lett me know how this great affair is like to goe.

The inclosed pacquet for Lrd Townshend is a sample of Cambrick, sent me privately from S^t Quintin being made of Scotch thread, this is an affair that should be managed wth great caution & secrecy at present for fear of giving jealousy to our freinds here; and perhaps nothing should be hastily done in it at this juncture, the envy against our Commerce is butt too great already, I am y^{rs} most affec^td &c.

H. WALPOLE."

1728, Feb. 12th. Robert Britiffe "To The Right Hon^{ble} the Lord Lynn att his house in Whitehall."

The writer is sending Court rolls and Surveys of the Manor of Shipdham.

1728, June 29th. Thomas Consett to Lord Wilmington. Dated in London and unaddressed.

"My Lord—A Year is not a Day to the happy but the unfortunate think every Minute a Day & every Day a Year. The Application of the latter Part of this Maxim approaches too near myself, & my Heart [is] so full of it, that I am not able to add more than that I am—My Lord—Your Lordship's most obedient humble serv^t.

THOMAS CONSETT."

1728, Augt. 30th. Edward Harrison to Lord Townshend. Dated in London and unaddressed.

... "Grayham y^r Apothecary has been dangerously ill but I am told he is upon the recovery. We have no manner of news from abroad but they begin to talk at Paris, of returning all hands to the Congress in order to do business, and the French are terribly disappointed by the Queen's bringing another girl after such mighty preparations to celebrate the birth of a Dauphin" ...

1729, Jan. 14th. Robert Mann to the same. Unaddressed.

The writer has searched the books of Chelsea College and cannot find that M^r Gibbons has been on any pension list since 1717.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1730, Jan. 11th. Robert Daniel to the same. Dated at Brussels.

"My Lord—I intreat Your Lordship will have acceptably my most hearty wishes, that all manner of Blessings may attend Y^r Lords^{ps} during the Course of the New-year we are entering upon, & that Y^r. Lords^{ps} may long enjoy the Fruits of that great Work the establishing a general Peace, in the transacting of which Y^r Lords^{ps} has had so great a Share.

I beg leave to improve this opportunity to remind Y^r L^p of my humble Request, to be considered for the 7 or 8 hundred Pounds I am the worse, since I am at the Pension & lost the Freedom of Postage. I have the greater hopes of Y^r L^p's countenancing my Request, by that Your Lordship approved of it to the Earl of Chesterfield."

1730, April 20th. Robert Britiffe to the same. Unaddressed.

.... "I hope I shall be excused putting your Lordship in minde of a promise of giving the place of Clerk of the Peace to my nephew M^r Britiffe upon the death of M^r Berney. I hear he was very ill the last week"

1730, Augt. 1st. A. Cracherode to the same?

About his Lordship's trusteeship under the Earl of Bradford's Will.

1730, Nov. 15th. Lord Hobart to the same? Dated at Blickling and unaddressed.

.... "I think myself very much obliged to you for so readily accepting of me I am not certain whether your Lordship intends to let the Furniture remain in the House if so I very readily agree to the Proposal of giving two hundred Pounds for it 'till Michaelmas next" 1731, April 24th. Edward Harrison to Lord Townshend. Unaddressed.

My Lord, I should not have been so long without enquiring after your Lords^{ps} health if I had not mett with a new sort of work, that I little expected. No sooner had I finished my India labours for the season, and begun to promise my self some recess from business, but the rupture of the Woodwards where I have kept my Cash many years, came upon us like a thunder clap without any manner of warning and to the great surprize of all mankind. It was my particular misfortune to have paid in a great deal of money in March most of which should have been paid away the 25th, and on the 24th they stoppt payment & shutt up shop.

Being the greatest Creditor in this unhappy affair, I could not think it prudent to refuse being one of the Assignees, to have an eye to my own concern and endeavour to save as much as possible out of the wreck. By what I have allready experienced, I flatter my self, that it will be well for me and all the concernd, that I did accept it, but it is a great addition to the other business I had upon my hands, and will cost me a great deal of time, and close application, the credit of the shop having been very extensive, in so much that I can already see we shall have the accounts of above six hundred people to settle, before any dividend can be made of the effects; and the best part of them are in English houses at Lisbon & Cadiz, but in secure hands for as farr as I can see at present, and upon the whole I believe there will be no great loss at last, tho it will require much time and patience to bring matters to a conclusion.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

We are the more surpriz'd at this bankruptcy because the men have always liv'd close, and at no manner of expence more than absolutely necessary. They have had more business than all the Bankers in the City putt together. All the gold and silver imported and exported ever since the year 1720, has passed thro their hands, and thereby they must have been gainers of £4000 p^r ann^m, besides the profit of a very great and constant circulation of Cash. It does not appear that they have ever drawn any sums of money out of the shop for their own particular account and benefit, nor that they have ever dealt for one thousand pounds in Stock of any kind. But tis plain they have been grossly abused & cheated by extravagant and knavish Servants, & have given a large credit to some of the Jews who have overtraded themselves, & cannot pay otherwise than by giving us their assignments of their goods at Lisbon and elsewhere, which we choose to take rather than pull them to pieces, and among them is the famous Pinhero in for £57000. He is the person that was negotiating a Loan with Kinski for the Emper^rs service some time before your Lord^{sh} left us.

There is also one Paz a famous Jew gone off for a great sum of money, and thereby four or five considerable houses in France and Holland are undone, more will soon follow in France Spain & Italy if the Flota money is not deliver'd, and on reasonable terms, which I see little or no likelihood off at present. As to our new Treaty, the Dutch are debating the Accessions, the French are mute, and we have no answer yett from Spain that I can learn. I have advice from Mr Tinker, by whom Mr Gore sent the diamonds, that he is well arrived at Porto Bello and hopes to find a good market for them at the approaching fair. From the E^t Indies we have no ship yett arriv'd but two are daily expected. I thank God we are all in pretty good health at present, tho' the N.E^t winds have been very severe for six weeks, and done much mischief both to the fruit and corn; there begins to be a great demand from France for corn, and some ships Ladings are allready bought up for that market. I am afraid your old Servant Cap^t Cooper of the Townshend packet is lost, between Falmouth and the Corunna; Sam. Buckley and I shall be the greatest sufferers. However amidst these losses and disappointments (which I cant say sett quite so easy upon me as they would have done in my younger days) it will be great comfort to me to hear that your Lord^{sh} enjoys good health in your retirement."

1731, June 9th. N.S., Hon. Charles Compton, British Consul-General in Portugal, to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Lisbon and un-addressed.

"My Lord,—It was no small satisfaction to me to find that you approved of my Actions in the Affair of the Mediterranean Passes we hear the Bill is past, that was depending in Parliament to make the forging such Passes felony which I hope will put a stop to the Counterfeiting any more. Your Lordship so kindly desires to hear as soon as M^{rs} Compton is delivered that I am under an indispensable obligation to acquaint you by this first opportunity that she was brought to bed of a Girl the fourth Instant, and also to return my sincere thanks for the Honour you do us in standing God-Father to this new born Child I am with the greatest Respect My Lord, Your Lordships most Dutyfull Nephew & most Obed^t humble Servant CHA: COMPTON."

1731, July 3rd. Edward Harrison to Lord Townshend.

"My Lord,—I could not bring my self to trouble you upon the loss of my grandson Dear Neddy [Townshend] having ever since been under a terrible suspense with respect to [his brother] George's safety, till yesterday when to the great comfort of us all the Doctors agreed to pronounce him out of danger. I make no doubt but L^d Lynn has constantly advised your Lords^{ps} of what has passed, I have not dared to venture into the house, during this calamity, for fear of my daughter [Lady Lynn] I have not been wanting in making your compliments to M^r Gore. Our last letters from Portobello gave hopes of a good market [for your diamonds] and I wish may go well with Spain till we get clear of them and if they catch me again in their corn I will give them leave to pound me. Till we give them up our annual ship, and some other useless things we shall never be well with them for a year together"

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1732, Jan. 12th N.S. Hon. Charles Compton to Lord Wilmington.
Dated at Lisbon and unaddressed.

. "Our chief talk here, is upon the gold and great Quantity of Diamonds the last Rio Fleet hath brought; on the arrival of which, the King of Portugal under pretence of discovering who had brought Gold in a clandestine manner, seized all the letters that came by it, & ordered them to be opened, which put the People of Business in great fear; those who had run any gold were ordered to deliver it up or to say to whom it was sold, or go to Prison; A Method likewise was taken in Relation to Diamonds, all that came in Letters, of which tis said there was a vast quantity, were seized, & the letters after some time sent to the several Persons to whom they belonged. But as there is no Law against importing of Diamonds less severity was used for the discovery of them. By this method the King has got into his own Coffers almost all the Gold that was run, no less than 2880 Pounds Weight & a great part of the Diamonds that came in the Fleet, & it is not yet determined how the Proprietors of either are to be treated. The Penalty of running Gold is very great, Confiscation with Banishment or the Gallies, & the temptation to it is also great, the King's Quinta & Duty of Coinage was before last year upwards of 26 p. Cent., but now by a New Law it is reduced to about 20 p^r Cent. I have by this Post wrote to the Duke of Newcastle more particularly on the affair of Diamonds, & I beg you will give me leave to lay the same thoughts before your Lordship, which are as follows—as the Increase of Diamonds from the Braziles is a growing Trade I conceive the Duty in England upon rough Diamonds may prove in time a disadvantage to the Nation. If a duty was paid only on cut Diamonds imported, it might not be amiss; but to lay a Duty upon rough stones, the greatest part of which are sent abroad after they are cut seems to be discouraging a trade which leaves a great deal of Profit behind it. The Price of Cutting of Diamonds I am well informed is one with another twenty shillings a Carrat; a hundred thousand Carrats therefore cut in England, will leave in England a hundred thousand Pounds, & this Quantity from our best advices may at least be reckoned will come yearly from the Brazile Mines. I include not in this Computation Freight & Commission, which are no inconsiderable Articles. While Diamonds came only from India & the Trade were solely or chiefly in our own Hands, there could be no ill Effect in laying a duty upon them, but since the Discovery of other Mines, the Case is quite altered, & it is easy to foresee that People will prefer those Places in Europe, where no Duty is paid, & where there is no Risque of Seizures. England has at present the Reputation of Cutting Diamonds better than any other Nation perhaps it might be right to preserve the Advantage it has gained; for doubtless in a little time the Number of Diamond Cutters will encrease;

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

& if greater Encouragement be given in France, Holland & other Places, it is reasonable to believe that Workmen who follow Encouragement, will soon appear, & who may arrive in time to as great a Perfection as those in England. Besides the Duty on Diamonds is small, and as they are easily run, I am apt to conclude his Majesty reaps very little Benefit from it, nothing I imagine in proportion to the Disadvantage the Continuance of this Duty may prove to the Nation. I have submitted this to his Grace's better Judgement as I do now to your Lordship's, whether the Affair is worth the Consideration of a British Parliament. I cannot conclude without offering Mr^r Comptons most humble Duty to your Lordship."

1733, Jan. 21st. John Waple to Lord Townshend. Dated at Symonds Inn and unaddressed.

"Mrs. Harrison writes me word that her Broker acquaints her that some small matter might be made of York Stock if so yo^r Lordship will please to consider whether it may not be advisable to part with it."

1733, Sept. 29th. Charles Bridgeman to Lord Townshend? Dated in London and unaddressed.

"My Lord,—Just after Your Lord^p spoke to me at Hamp[ton] Court on Sunday last, my good Friend & Patron ordered me to desire my Cosin Bridgeman not to engage his Vote, & this was the whole of his order at that time: I was since down with my Cosin at Hartford, & he very kindly promis'd me he would not; While I was with him, he told me that S^r Tho^s Clark & Your Lord^p were in the same intention of nominating a second Candidate [for the borough of Hertford], which I was glad to hear, hoping it was what my Patron meant, but as it was not then certain to me, I could request my Cousin no farther. Yesterday I attended my Patron at Hamp[ton] Co^t and acquainted him with what I had done, and likewise that I found Your Lord^p & S^r Thomas joyn'd in nominating Mr^r Braccy [Nathaniel Brassey], he was pleased to say that whatever Your Lord^p & S^r Thomas Clark did, he should approve; this I was glad to hear, & it occasions this Letter to Your Lord^p, not doubting but the great regard my Cosin has for him & You will induce him to declare his other vote, for the Person You recommend . . .

P.S. I have acquainted him I have wrote to Your Lord^p. If there is occasion for a Letter to me please to direct it to my house in Broadstreet near Poland Street S. James's, London."

1733, Nov. 27th. Earl of Gainsborough to Lord Townshend. Dated at Exton and unaddressed.

Asking that "Walgrave, or Symons the late Deputy" to Spencer the Post master at Stamford may be appointed to succeed the latter who has been dismissed for negligence and insolence. "There is a report that one Bletsoe, a Bonesetter, is designed by Lord Lovell [the Post Master General] at yo^r intercession of Mr^r Cust, for yo^r office in case Spencer is remov'd: But if he is put in yo^r whole Town of Stamford will be in an Uproar, & I shall take it extremely ill that Cust sh^d be indulg'd in his Request for a noisy, bullying Fellow, hated by all yo^r Town, & I be deny'd in mine for one out of 2 Men who have good Characters . . . Mr^r Goodhall, a Friend of mine, is one prick'd [for sheriff] for this next Year. He really has not 6 pounds a year in the County, & has begg'd of me to get him excus'd " 1733, Dec. 24th. Robert Britiffe to the same. Unaddressed.

"My Lord,—I was favoured with your Lordship's & tooke an opportunity to write to Mr^r Lucass who is concerned for Mr^r Beagham in his

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS

affaires, that he w^d pay the Rents due or else w^d lett Mr Beagham who lives in London know that if the money is not paid within a Month he must expect to meet with trouble upon that omission.

I am a stranger to the Gentlemen in this County or City of Norwich who have a Right to vote for Members of Parliament for the University. I spoke to Capt. Scottowe, who hath a Son (tho removed from Cambridge) [who] hath a Vote, to send to him & engage him for Mr Townshend & not to engage his second Vote att present, D^r Fowle who is Brother to Commissioner [John] Fowle of the Excise Office, hath a Vote. I spoke to him yesterday—he said he knew six more who he hoped to engage. Mr Townshend had sent to him he told me he had sent two Letters to him & never rec^d any Answer of either, which I find gave him some uneassiness. I shall take care to use my Interest as farr as I can upon this occassion. If L^d W[inchilse]y will not allow his Brother [Mr Edward Finch-Hatton] to declare to joyne or not Mr [Thomas] Townshend sh^d come to some resolution in what manner to act, for I apprehend itt may be difficult to prevaile upon persons to suspend their second Vote.

Itt seemeth to be the opinion of our Freinds that wee stand well in this County tho I beleive there never was soe much paines taken upon an Election, or Arts & Insinuations made use of to prevaile upon the Freeholders cf all denominations, as hath been used by S^r E[dmund] B[acon] & his Freinds they are indefatigable & no Costs spared, our Freinds are also industriouse, I had Mr Lucass of Shipdham with me yesterday who I have att last brought to declare for us & to give me leave to make use of his name & declare he is soc. I have been several times attempting itt, but c^d not prevaile upon him to declare before. He was with S^r R[obert] W[alpole] when in Norfolke, but I am told gave some hopes that [he] w^d not directly promise. He hath now assured me of his Vote & interest which I hope may bring us att least twenty Votes, w^{ch} w^d have been against us. He himself was always in a different Interest. He is an Attorney, but I am satisfied he hath more than 1000^l. per Ann. I begg [you] will excuse the length of this.

RO: BRITIFFE."

1733, Jan. 6th. The Hon. Augustus Townshend to "Lord Lynn at his house in Duke Street near S^t James square London." Dated at Madras.

"I have made a very bad Voyage but I hope I have improv'd myself so much as to make it up to me for you no they are both to my own advantage I hope my dear sister is well & all nephews as is

Your most affectionate
Brother

A. TOWNSHEND."

1734, July 6th. Robert Britiffe to Lord Townshend.

The writer does not approve the deed sent by Mr Amyas for Lord Townshend's purchase from Mr Cotton of an estate at Honingham, but has prepared an Article to answer his Lordship's design.

1734, Oct. 6th. Thomas Minors "To the Right Hon^{ble} The Lord Lynne at Denham." Dated in London, at the sign of the Vine in Lombard Street.

"My Lord—I think it my Duty humbly to acquaint your Lordship of the Death of Mr [Charles] Shales, who was principally concerned in the Execution of the Office of his Maj^{ties} Goldsmith, to which Office I was admitted & sworn in by Your Lordp^s Appointment: Mr Shales dyed the 5th inst of a Dropsy, and was 73 Years Old. And as by Mr.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Shales Death the Execution of my said Office is devolved wholly upon me in joint partnership with Miss Mary Shales (Mr Shales Daughter) I take this Opportunity till I can have the honour of waiting upon Your Lordship in Person, to beg the Continuance of your Lord^{sh} Protection."

1734, Jan. 19th. Thomas Eyre, of the East India Company's Service, to Lord Wilmington. Dated at Fort St David.

..... "the General Notion of the former flourishing Condition of Business in the Indies is still so strongly retain'd in England and with so little reason, that the sending a Writer out is reckon'd a mighty Boon, tho' in fact (pardon Sir the freedom of Expression) it is but an Errant Phantasma and he would go barefoot for what he could do for himself without the help of some Patron or Friend to assist him for the few first years of his time here, and it is much the same in proportion to the Degree of the higher Stations" 1735, Sept. 8th. Charles Townshend to Lord Lynn. In a child's handwriting.

Dear Papa,

I hope you are well and my mamma and I hope that Suffolk as agreed with my mamma and you and M^{rs} dinely. I hope we shall have the pleasure of seeing you all down here if you have any time to spare we received a couple of cakes a sunday last pray send us down a suit of cloes for we want some sadly. I left my grandmamma and my sister and mis wastel in very good health ; pray give my duty to my mamma and thank her and m^{rs} dinely for their kind letters.

I am your most obedient son C : Tow :"

1736, April 13th. Sir William Billers to M^{rs} Harrison "att her house in Cavendish Square." Dated in Cheapside.

To ask, on behalf of Capt. Tolson and himself, that M^{rs} Harrison will weigh off the next day the Rattans she had sold to them at 45 shillings for two hundred and a half weight w^{ch} is computed at 1000 rattans.

1738, Feb. 24th. Thomas Lowndes to Lord Townshend. Dated at Whitehall.

"My Lord

Your Lordship may remember when You was Sec^y of State that I carryed through the Carolina contract by your Lord^{sh} Countenance without giving your Lord^{sh} any trouble. For I never once waited upon You.

It is now in my power to shew your Lord^{sh} and the rest of the Noblemen and Gentlemen of Norfolk how to keep your Tenants from being imposed upon by the Butter Factors without laying any restraint upon Trade. What I have to offer is of the greatest Consequence to your own and your Neighbouring Counties ; I mean this as a small return of Gratitude. For I am with the greatest respect " etc.

1737, June 9th. John^d Amyell to Lord Townshend ? Unaddressed.

The writer expects Mr.^r Branthwayt will perfect certain conveyances when he is in town.

1737, Aug. 2nd. Edward Weston to Lord Townshend. Dated at Whitehall and unaddressed.

The writer encloses a copy of his letter to Mr. Scottowe and will forward the latter's answer.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSB
—

1737, Nov. 17th. Robert Parker "To The Worshipfull Alderman Harvey of Norwich." Dated at Comenda Fort on the coast of Guinen.

"S^r—I sende you a sample of Cotton the growth of this Cuntry, spun by the Natives on long Powles, as they walke up and down the Fields, it may be had I believe in considerable quantiteys, I desire the Favour of you to advise if it may not be useful in some part of your Manufactur and the just Value of it. An other thing is worth your notice, the large quantity of Says, Persetts, Long Ells, &c. that comes upon this coast to severall Thousand pound p Ann, are most of them caried up into the Cuntry some Thousand some Fifteen Hundred Miles, th'are take a Peices and unwove, and again made into Cloath of thier own devising, I purpose if possible to sende you a Sample of the Negroes Ingenuity, if an Opertunity offers before the Ship sailes, Youll be surprised at an other thing, that out of a Hundred or a Hundred and Fifty thousand Pounds worth of Cloaths of all soarts that annally comes upon this Coast, how, they should be consumed amongst a People that never wears either Cap Coat or Breches, nor make use of any in their Household Furniture, all that prodigious Stock of Goods is consumed, except what they take a peices, as I observed before, in having fine Cloaths of all the different soarts, about two Ells long w^{ch} they weare about their Wasts, and lye in a Nights, their riches seames to consist in that, some has Ten to Fifteen apeice of such Cloathes and then the Capushears, as they are called or properly our Cuntry Justices, they have from Ten to Twenty and some Fifty to a Hundred and Fifty Wives & Concubines, these must all have Dashes or Presents of Cloaths, and then their Kings exceeds Solomon, I wont say in Wisdom, but in Wives & Concubines, and they must be all supplied wth Store of fine Cloaths, the demand some time is so great that if a Ship of a Hundred Tun was loaded, wth what pleases them, w^{ch} I really beleiv might all be furnisht out of your Citty, such a considerable Loading might, I say at some times be sold off in three or four Days, and pay'd for in the finest of Gould, or that w^{ch} is as good Eliphants Teeth, without being concerned in Slaves. You would do well to wrigt to some Friende in London to get an abstract of Ten or Twenty Guinea Voyages from the Debentures then youll se what Species of Goods are usually sent upon this Coast. There is a Vast Number I know of Chiloeas Gingams Cuttances Bombay Stuff Teer-suckers Cherryderreys Chints Aligars Celampees &c. ; of all East Indey goods I am verely well assured that most of all these might be either imitated or some thing in lew [lieu] sent from you to supply the place w^{ch} would set to worke a vast number of Hands, better that our own Cuntry People should earne moneys that give such incourigment to the Chines [Chinese] & Indians.

As I remember when S^r Robert Walpole was at Norwich in 1738 by an Invitation from your worthy Bodey he made a Speach which was after printed wherein among other things at the conclusion he assures your worthy Bodey he will make it his Studey to promote the Trade and Manufacture of Your Great Citty, I know him to be a Gentlmⁿ of so much Honour that he onely wanted an Opertunity and now one will be flung into his Hands, he was so good to me at my first asking w^{ch} was but three days after I landed from Georgia & Carolina in September was Twelve Munnth. to recomende me to be principall Agent at Gambia, the African Directors paid me a great deale of respect upon that Acc^t and offered me to my Choice either that or Widaw, another place upon this Coast, but upon inquiry boath them places being unholson, and the Comp^y as usuell incisting upon [my] buying up so much of their Stock w^{ch} at that time did not consist wth my Pocket

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

having laved out severall hundred Pounds in Georgia in erecting Saw Mills and brought them to great Perfection, w^{ch} was as fine Cut as ever any Wainscott sawn in Holland, samples of w^{ch} I sent to Parisburg, Savana, and Charles Towne and some to the Trustees in London, after I had brought my Works to that Perfection that the Mills wth a little addition would have earnt me a Thousand Pound or Twelve Hundred Pound Sterling p Ann, I was by the Violence of that Government, drove from my Workes, by three armed boats sent up purposely to destroy them. I came to England hoping redress from the Trustees, but to their great Honour and Justice they paid me never a Farthing, the Truth of it is I promised the poore deluded People there to set their Oppressions in a faire Light, as I did, and tould S^r Robert Walpole at my first interview I would do it at the Hazard of my Life, these were the reasons why I had not money to purchase the Comp^y Stock.

If my Thoughts should be approved off then I am perswaded if you aske S^r Robert Walpole to recomende me to be one of the Principalls of this place in the roome of M^r Elson deceived, it may easiley be dun, it will then put it into my Power effectually to serve you and take all Opertunitieys of advising you from time to time what may advantage the true Interest & Trade of the Citty of Norwich, please to let me have your thoughts, in duplicates for feare of miscariage directed to me to the Care of my Wife M^{rs} Eliz. Parker in Lynn."

1738, June 22nd. A. Windham to Charles 3rd Viscount Townshend?
Dated in "Lester Street" and unaddressed.

... "Madam Woolmoden [Valmoden] is in Pall Mall wth her Husband, but is at Kensington several hours in the day: She has fine black eyes, & brown hair, and very well shap'd; not tall, nor low, has no fine features, but very agreeable in the main. She appears at the drawing-room like one that has been used to the courts of Princes. It is not doubted but that she will soon have an Apartm^t at Kensington.

It is not known where Admiral Haddock is gone, whether to the Straits, or to the W. Indies.

Lord Hardwick has lent M^r Erle of Heydon 16,000^l at 3 & $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent: and I heard yesterday of a Gentlemen who has borrowed money on the S[outh] S[ea] Annuity at 2 & $\frac{1}{2}$.

I was on Monday at L^d Bolingbrook's Country House. They expect^d him there every day: and the News of this day speak of his coming: tho' I could see no preparation in the Kitchen for it: the House & Estate is now upon sale: for w^{ch} reason I suppose the Gardens are quite neglected.

Your Lord^{sh} is scheming so for the good of the Country, that all Norfolk men are full of your praise."

1740, March 26th. Rev. Edward Francklin to Lord Townshend.
Dated at Rainham and unaddressed.

"My Lord—I had answered your Lordship's most kind Letter before this, but did not return from Wisbech till last Saturday, having been desired to preach the Assize Sermon at Bedford. And it being so near Lady Day I was willing to defer writing two posts longer that I might send your Lordship a Receit in part of a year's Composition, which I do with the utmost gratitude and thankfulness. M^r Case has not been yet at leisure to examin with me the Writings relating to Rainham Livings, but as soon as he can spare a Day I shall be ready. Your Lordship's Commands with regard to the present Representatives I shall most diligently and zealously perform, and I hope your Lordship will not fail of the desired success. I have nothing material to write about the present Opposition being so lately return'd into Norfolk, but only that at Wisbech enquiry has been made for saleable Estates of small value in this County and one is already bought at the price of Fourscore Guineas by a person who is known not to be able of himself to purchase. Whatever I shall be assured of with respect to this Affair that may deserve your Lordship's knowledge I shall take care faithfully to transmitt, and what may lye in my Power in this or any other Way to serve your Lordship I shall take the highest Pleasure in thereby testifying how much I am etc.

EDW^d FRANKLIN.

[P.S.] I hear that Young M^r Horace Walpole is to be joyned with M^r Thomas Townshend for the University of Cambridge next Election."

1740, Nov. 2nd. George Harrison to Lord Townshend. Dated at Balls and unaddressed.

" . . . I am to see M^r Glinister here on Wensday which will enable me to give a more perfect account of his success in obeying your Lordships Comands."

1741, March 27th. Hon. Horatio Townshend to Lord Wilmington. Dated at New Ormond Street and unaddressed.

About the heavy discount on French bills.

1741, May 9th. Sir John Hynde Cotton to the same? Dated at Madingley and unaddressed.

Thanking his Lordship for espousing the cause of the writer's son in the Cambridgeshire election.

[P.S.] . . . "my Marlbro' Election kept me a few days too long."

1742, April 1st. Lord Lymington to the same?

A letter of compliments.

1742, May 22nd. Hon. George Hervey, afterwards Earl of Bristol, to Lady Townshend. Dated at Ickworth and unaddressed.

"Madam,—I am very sorry to find by a letter from Lord Lincoln, that after your Lordship had done me the honor to write to me, the post had done me the favor to loose it together with his, what a disagreeable miscarriage, how unkind an abortion! I should have thought that these things only cou'd have happened to M^{rs} B——l. Are you not surprized, Madam, how I came to learn these technical words? I heard them but today. Your Ladyship's friend M^{rs} Eldred has taken no notice of us since we came into the country, but we have had the honor of two or three Aldermen with their Ladys & Misses. I beg if you hear of any Camp there is to be in England, or of any new regiments that are to go abroad, you wou'd be so good as to let me know, for else these are my quarters, & you will find my calculation about my staying in the country too true; for tho' I was told when first I came down, I was only to be here ten days or a fortnight, yet now that time is expired there is no probability of my going to town. Has your Ladyship got your house in the country? I shall grow so rich during my retreat, that if the widow insists on ten additional Guineas, you may draw for it from my Banquers at Bury. May I enquire how Lord John does? It is relatively to you that I am solicitous about his health, since I remember some very gloomy days in Grosvenor-street on his account. Lord Bristol often drinks your health to me, which is seconded with infinite pleasure by me, my poor flirtation is never included; you accused me Madam, of having a violent passion, the fact I own tho' not the person to whom it was

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

apply'd, it was they who did apply who cou'd lay the chief claim to that, & to the entire esteem, of Madam

Your Ladyship's

Most obedient humble Servant,

G. HERVEY."

1742, Aug. 12th. Hon. George Compton to the Earl of Northampton. Dated in London and unaddressed.

A business letter.

1742, Aug. 19th. Lord Hervey to Lady Townshend. Dated at Ickworth Park, and unaddressed.

"Madam—The last Post (the most welcome Messenger that ever arriv'd at Ickworth) brought me the Honor of your Lady^{sh} Letter; & tho it is impossible for any Body to be more obliged & pleased than I was with the Favor of so agreeable a Distinction, yet it was no small Alloy to that Pleasure, to feel the Severity, as well as Politeness of your Reproach, in condescending to thank me for giving, what I ought to have pay'd my humblest & warmest Acknowledgments to You for your Indulgence in receiving: since I am very sensible when you allow the Copy a Place in your House, you confer an Honor upon it, equal to the Pleasure you give the Original, when you admit him there.

If there was a Dearth of Talk (too often mistaken for Conversation) in the Party you mention, I think a more proper Addition could not have been made to it, than that you tell me of, since as far as the bare Evacuation of Words can contribute to make such Partys what they call go off well, I will stand Godfather to all their Lungs, & would as soon answer for Articulation flowing constantly through the Channels of those Mouths as I would for Water in the Channel of the Thames.

I am very sorry to hear poor Winnington has in reality been downright ill, & am sure the Symptoms must have been very strong when your Infidelity on that Chapter could be converted into Faith: but if I was in his Place I could never forgive your drawing any Parallel between him & the Man with whom you coupled him on this Occasion, since I think Nature has made as full as great a Difference in the Furniture of the Insides of their Heads, as I dare say the Faces of their Wives will do in the Ornament of the Outsides.

I had some thoughts once of sending this Letter to my Servants in London, with Orders to have it smoak'd like a Westphalia-Ham, in a London Chimney, before it was presented to Your Lady^{sh}, knowing how little Chance it must have to be well received when you reflect it is the uncorrected Produce of the intolerable Rusticity that must reign threescore miles from London; but upon second Thoughts fearing no Quarentine would be deemed by Your Lady^{sh} sufficient to purge it of such a Plague, I laid this Project aside, resolving to lose no time in assuring you with how much gratitude warmth & Truth I am—
Madam

Your Lady^{sh}'s

Most obliged & most obedient humble Servant

HERVEY."

[No date.] From the same to the same. Dated "Tuesday morning" and unaddressed.

"Your Lady^{sh} does my Taste great Honor to think it worth consulting in any thing, & a very undeserv'd one if you let it be any Guide to your's with regard to what I now send back to you. As far as my Plate-Skill goes I think them very pretty, but as uselessly pretty

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MRS.

Your Lady^{sh}'s

HERVEY."

Yesterday we were reviewed by our grey headed Marshall [Prince Charles of Lorraine] who it seems only waited for us to strike his Blow for we expect to march in a day or two having this day received bread

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

& forrage for six days. The French have abandon'd Antwerp leaving four thousand men in the Citadell which some People imagine we shall besiege, but if I may be allowed to anticipate the Maneuvre of a great Generall I shou'd think we wou'd goe upon the Maese for two reasons, first the deficiency of forrage we shou'd find in the Pais reconquis, second the facility of joining the Austrian reinforcement that has been at Venlo for some time past.

On the other side you will find an accurate account of our strength having rode round the whole Army this morning and taken down the number of Squadrons & Battalions it consists of.

I intend tomorrow to goe to Hogstraten there to see the Pandours & Hussars. As soon as we join the Imperialists we shall have a Line of Battle which I will send you of my own Drawing.

My Compliments to all sentimental People. You know how few they are.—I am.—Y^r aff^o Friend &c. &c. &c. &c. &c. &c. &c. &c. &c.

HEN. NISBET.

Batts^s 70.

Austrians	-	-	30
English	-	-	04
Han[overian]s	-	-	16
Hessians	-	-	06
Dutch	-	-	14

Total - 70

Squad^s 154.

Austrians	-	-	70
English	-	-	09
Han ^r	-	-	26
Hessians	-	-	08
Dutch	-	-	41

Total - 154

exclusive of the 20,000 Imperialists."

1746, Sept. 30. General John Campbell (afterwards Duke of Argyll, to Lady Townshend. Dated at Inverary.

My dear Lady Townshend. It is high time that I should in private life follow the example of some of His Majesty's rebellious subjects who have come in and surrender'd to the Royal Mercey hoping forgiveness.

You know that some time after the loss of my late Mistress I put myself under your wing as my Queen; as to you my Princess I own but one crime, that of Omission, yet, to so good, so kind a friend, even that calls alowd and demands asking pardon and forgiveness, I ask it, I expect it, and considering (as I think I wrote your Fatt friend and Neighbour [? Sir Robert Walpole.]--) the Crime carried with it its own punishment by being so long deprived of a most agreeable Correspondence, I hope for the best.

When I told your Ladyship that I have wrote more for these last ten Months by-past than any Clerk in Office you'll tell me it is condemning my self, I deny it, I was not pleasing my self which would not have been the Case had I been writing to you; In short since I left London and arrived in this Country I can not say that I have had one agreeable or pleasant Moment, Nothing but hurry and anxiety of minde; excessive fatigue, together with a great deal of bad health. . And since I return'd here from my Island expedition most'ly confined to the House and so worn' out that I begin to think of another world, I wish it was Whitehall. But before I leav this, Christian like, I desire once more to be forgiven by my friends, and doe most frankly forgive my Enemys, I have t'is true had some revenge off them, and may say that in my Turn I gave them (as they did me) no small trouble and I think did some good to the cause I was engag'd in, But I must, I will have done with my self, but never with you; for in truth I am with the utmost Sincerity, affection and esteem Dear Lady Townshend's most obedient &c. &c.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

JOHN CAMPBELL.

P.S.—I rejoyce with you, pray tell me if Miss Townshend is as handsome as ever after that dangerous but natural operation the small-pox? Is Mr. Townshend as much in love with you as when I left him? and lastly is his father jealous of him? I can't say but I am.

I condole with you for the loss of a friend, make my Compliments to those you chuse to see in private at White-Hall particularly Lady Sophia T: and our Missie; tell her I must and will kiss her when meet,—but very gently.

Put Lord Baltimore in mind of me, I love him as I hope he does me, ask him who knows it, If at my first setting out I had not a very pretty Jaunt from Portsmouth by Sea to this Country.

The Expedition I undertook in Quest of the Younger Adventurer. Round and through what is call'd the long Island (for I visitted, landed, and marcht through most of them as well as the Isle of Skie, to wich place I traced him) is some what curious, You will further tell his Lordship that I look't inn at St Kilda which in the Map is lay'd down to be 20 Leagues to the Westward of the Harris and North Uist, but I think it is not so much. From all which if he is not nervous he can give your Ladyship some notion of the Navigation. Pray tell him likewise that I was so happy as to meet with a most agreeable Com-plaisant Commodore who not only enter'd heartily into my Schemes but gave me full powers so as that I was in effect a kind of Lord Admiral.

After communicating to Commodore Smith my Intelligence; what I intended, and that I desired only the Furnace Sloop and a Folkstone Cutter (he had with him) together with the arm'd Wherries I had fitted out before his Arrival. He consented and approved of my Plan, But like himself (a most Judicious Sensible Humane Man) told me that it was not much out of his way and that he must attend me with two 40 Gun Ships to take care I was not pick't up by a French Privateer, In short he was Zealous and like a father to me, ply'd off and on St Kilda till the Search was made. And gave Orders that any of the 20 Gun Ships I mett at Sea should be at my disposal, and sent me such Provisions as by the Returns from the Sloop and Cutter be found necessary. I mention all these particulars only to shew Lord Baltimore that Sea, and Land Officers who have nothing but the Service at Heart may be brought to agree; And I must further observe that there was not a Captain or Commander upon this Station that made the least Difficulty in taking their Orders from me.

Having forgott myself, fancying I was talking to you this P^t St^t has swell'd beyond the Bounds of a letter, so that I must have done—and leav it to another opportunity off giving you and his Lordship some further Account of this last forementioned Expedition in which I had very near succeeded. As a proof of which I hereto add what Captain O'Neil who was taken prisoner by one of my Parties and sent to the Earl of Abermarle sett's forth in His Declaration or rather Examination, I have it under his own hand and you shall see it. "The Prince [Charles Edward] and O'Neil went to the Hills and stay'd there all night, after which we heard that General Campbell was at Bernera so that wee were then surrounded with Forcess and was at a loss what to do, Wee mett a Younge Lady one Miss [Flora] McDonald. Captⁿ O'Neil advised the Younge Lady to assist the P. in making his Escape to the Isle of Skie, which she at first refused, but by Force of Argu-

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
2 —

ments and telling her that the Prince should be in Women's Dress she at last consented; she parted with us and desired we should stay at Corrodale till we should hear from her, which we did for two Days without hearing from our Younge Ladye; this made the P. very uneasy thinking she could not performe her promise, so that at last he determin'd to send O'Neil to General Campbell to let him know he would surrender himself Prisoner, But while in this thought a Message came from the Younge Lady desiring us to come to the Point of Rusnith [Roseneath] where she would wait [for] us."

The Younge Lady, the Lady Clanronald and all concern'd in the escape are sent Prisoners to London. I can not but say I have a great deal of Compassion for the Younge Lady, she told me that she would have in like manner assisted me or any one in Distress. Adieu Adieu Dear Lady Townshend.

My Comp^{ts} to the lively M^r Townshend.

If your Ladyship has any Commands for me to direct to Edinburgh.

You have spoild [my son] Frederick he gives himself airs and won't write to me, I have some thoughts of forbidding him White-Hall as a punishment."

1747, June 5th. Jasper Bull to Lord Townshend. Dated at the New River Office and unaddressed.

Mentions Lord Townshend's dividends on a half share: Xmas 1745, £50. 11^s.; Mids^r 1746, £52. 11^s.; Xmas 1746, £47. 11^s.; and Mids^r 1747, £65. 3^s. 7^d.

1747, June 16th. Horatio Walpole to the same. Dated at the Cockpitt and unaddressed.

. . . "I learn by other good accounts that the compromise in choosing M^r Armine [Woodhouse] & your son [George—to represent Norfolk in Parliament] will certainly take place I sett out for Woolterton on Fryday early, & purpose if my infirmity will permitt, to be there on Sunday.

The Parliament certainly breaks up tomorrow, will be dissolved by Proclamation, and the Writs will bear teste on Monday next."

1748, June 2nd. Hon. Charles Townshend to Lord Townshend Dated in Jermyn Street.

. . . . "The illness of which I complained in my last, is entirely removed I congratulate you upon the revolution in the corporation of the Fens & upon the change of measures which the Duke of Bedford has declared shall follow from it. Lord Duplin tells me has not only turned out the old officers, but that he has openly professt a design of amicably & resolutely carrying into execution that plan for the interest of all partys which you and others have been so long contending for Roger is in great health and desires me to present his duty to you. My love waits upon my sister."

This letter bears an endorsement "This Letter is dated the 2 July 1748 it ought to have been dated June the 2^d 1748.—My son Charles' letter to me."

1748, [June] 19th. The same to the same. Dated "Sunday the 19th 1748" and endorsed "This letter was wrote in the summer 1748."

"I am sorry I can not begin this letter with a report of the Bishop of Salisbury's answer to your Solicitation [on my behalf]

Since I wrote last I saw M^r Bacon who heard the same account from L^d Dupplin that I gave you of the late changes of administration in the Fens

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

I have hitherto been kept in London or rather from my journey to Scarboro' by Solicitations from Yarmo[uth] for Mr Morton & others, which are material on account of the persons desiring them in the next week I shall set forth I have been to see Sr W. Calvert, my Uncle Tho: Townshend, Mr Cornwallis, Mr Pointz & my Aunt Molly at their several houses in the country

I have lodged in Craven Street since I left your house because I was not willing to hire new lodgings for so short a time" 1748, July 15th, N.S. Hon. George Townshend to the same. Dated at Endhoven.

. "however dissadvantageously my presence has stolen by under the shade of Silence & the Cloud of Awe, yet that I am known enough to you to bid myself assert, & to persuade myself I shall be behind when I do myself the Justice to assure your Lordship that no Son whose Interest whose success in every View, & whose opportunity of gratifying every Desire depended entirely on the Duration of his Fathers days, ever felt a deeper concern, or a more fearful alarm at an incertitude of what was so worldly essential to him, than I did from the contents of your Lordships letter Such my Lord is my just concern at your illness.

[P.S.] Our Army is now in Cantonment & the Duke is to set out for England in a few days it is not determined who is to attend him as yet."

1748, [July] 17th. Hon. Charles Townshend to the same. Dated at Scarborough "Sunday the 17th 1748."

. "though it is a great while since I set out it is but a few days since I came here. Upon trial I found myself unable to bear the fatigue of a long stage & a journey of three hundred miles by short stages is a work of time there is another reason why I should be willing in particular to accept at this time a seat at the Board of Trade. Your present allowance to me is a very large one, larger not only than what I as your younger son could have asked, but than perhaps you can out of your encumbered estate conveniently pay & therefore I could wish to give you relief by receiving a creditable post as a Lord of Trade from the Government. I do not know how this would suit with the interest to be kept up at Yarmo' which certainly a seat at the Admiralty would strengthen & establish immovably. Mr Pelham is just returned from his tour & if you approve it I will write to him."

1748, July 17th. Rev. William Samuel Powell to the same. Dated at "St John's College" and unaddressed.

Endorsed by Lord Townshend "Mr Powell's letter to me about the Election of a Chancellor at Cambridge."

The writer promises to promote the Duke of Newcastle's election to the Chancellorship in succession to the Duke of Somerset who is thought to be dying.

1748, July 26th, N.S. Hon. George Townshend to the same. Unaddressed. Dated at Eindhoven and endorsed by Lord Townshend My Son George's letter to me.—Rec^d on the 20th July 1748 O.S."

. "It is certain here that H.R.H. the Duke will soon set out for England but what day or who he will take with him remains still a most profound & impenetrable Secret Our Army is here in the most perfect State of Inaction, the Beauty, Address, Discipline & Spirit of our Troops is really a most maloncholy object when such are unsuccessfull and are so unfortunate as to be oblig'd to give up such a

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Cause. The other day we used to inly ruminate the Enemy's irresistible Superiority, an[d] now the greatest Part inly ruminate the reduction the Nation will soon be oblig'd to make, and in one day discharge a number of Men from her Service that no other Nation in Europe would be glad to engage & entertain in a time of the most settled Tranquillity"

[P.S.] I hope my Sister [Audrey] is well & [my brother] the Captain [Roger Townshend] when you heard from him, my love to them both."

1748, July 31st. Hon. Charles Townshend to the same. Unaddressed. "I hear L^d Anson succeeds to L^d Monson's office & his removal makes a vacancy at another board my love waits upon my sister."

1748, Augt. 16th, N.S. Hon. George Townshend to the same. Unaddressed, dated at Eindhoven.

The writer hopes to have the honour of attending H.R.H. [the Duke of Cumberland] to England & begs leave to draw on Mess^{rs} Child by next post for his "Quateridge" [or his allowance].

[P.S.] "I have received from Norfolk the Compliments & Invitation of the Gentlemen of the Constitution [club] Feast for the 1st of August. I hope they have given you the same Notice on this occasion that the Feast may have been attended with Rainham Venison."

1748, [August] 19th. Hon. Charles Townshend to the same. Dated "Friday the 19th 1748," and endorsed by Lord Townshend :—"Mem. This letter wrote about the latter end of the summer."

1748, Sept. 2nd. Sir Thomas Hare to the same. Dated at Stow near Downham. Endorsed by Lord Townshend :—"Sir Tho^s Hares letter to me about Denver-Sluice and our Sute depending thereon."

1748, Sept. 13th, N.S. Hon. George Townshend to the same. Dated at Eindhoven.

. "not being one of those who had the honour of being named to attend his Royal Highness & being assured on the contrary that his Royal Highness would not stay above a fortnight: I thought it better not to apply for Leave of Absence. In case the Duke should stay in England longer than expected or his Return be defer'd for any time I shall not fail of waiting on you as I shall upon s^{uch} Information immediately apply for Leave.

I am sorry I cannot enliven my letter with some sort of News, so supinely is every thing abroad involved either in dull Inaction or impenetrable secrecy."

1748, Sept. 17th. Hon. Charles Townshend to the same. Dated in Carey Street.

The writer has been staying in the town to press the claims on the Treasury of some of his Yarmouth constituents.

. "Dr Dyom will be with you in some part of this month, but at present he is in Derbyshire. Dr Hardinge thinks me the better for Scarbro' but as my appetite is less than ever it was, I doubt whether I have made any advance towards general health. [my brother] Roger is at Hampton Court, & when I have said this I have said all I know of him for he has never been here since I came, and writing letters is not his custom."

1748, Sept. 26th. Copy of a long letter from Lord Townshend to his son George explaining how Child and Co. had come to return his Draft for Quarterage.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.
—

1748, Sept. 28th. Draft in Lord Townshend's handwriting of a letter asking Colonel Dusy [Duncie?] to give his son Roger (who is Ensign in the first Regiment of Guards) a month or six weeks leave. He has been with his regiment eight or nine months and his age is between 17 and 18 years.

1748, Oct. 1st, N.S. Hon. George Townshend to Lord Townshend. Dated at Eindhoven.

The writer is astonished at Mr Child protesting his Draft for £200. It concludes: "I find myself too much concern'd to say anything that can entertain your Lordship at present & therefore will take my leave with my usual declaration & which no Circumstances can ever alter that I am with the greatest respect Your Lordships most Dutifull Son."

1748, Oct. 10th. Copy of a letter from Lord Townshend to his son George. Dated at Rainham.

About the returned Draft.

1748, Oct. 15th, N.S. Hon. George Townshend to Lord Townshend. Dated at Eindhoven.

... "I shall only thank you for the candid & paternal manner in which you have review'd the whole affair & for the immediate redress you have given it. I propose waiting on you in Norfolk within a few days after I arrive in England. I am afraid the Service of Parliament will be such as will afford but little pretence for my absence being call'd a neglect of my Duty to my Country. His Royal Highness [the Duke of Cumberland] likes the Greyhounds I gave him so much that he has desired me to secure him another brace not very nearly allied to the former that he may be able to secure the breed for Windsor." ...

1748, Oct. 15th, O.S. Draft of Letter from Lord Townshend to his son George, urging him most strongly to visit his constituents as soon as he arrives in England "as he ought to do if he desires to be ever chosen again by the County."

1748, Nov. 2nd. Hon. Charles Townshend to the same. Dated in Craven Street.

"Dear my Lord,

... When I came here I found many letters of notice from my friends whom Mr Pellham had desired to advise me of his intention to give me the seconding [of] our address, but I came too late & lost the opportunity in despite of his endeavors who delayed naming any other person until Sunday night when Mr Cha: Yorke was appointed. Mr Pellham told me on Tuesday how sorry he was this had happened & added he was the more sorry as my appearance on this occasion would have given him an opportunity of honourably mentioning me to the King, who would have been by this means prepared to grant readily what Mr Pellham said he every day thought of asking for me ... Mr Stanhope is now dying & I am confident I should have succeeded him if I had been concerned on Tuesday last. Mr Pellham hinted this to me, & I am sure he is impatient to serve me" ...

1748, Nov. 5th. Hon. George Townshend to the same. Unaddressed. Dated at Eindhoven. Minuted by Lord Townshend. "My son George to me Rec^d on the 31st Oct. 1748, O.S."

Assuring his father that he will proceed to Rainham immediately he arrives in England, and begging him to dismiss one of the grooms he has sent with three horses to Rainham.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1748, Nov. 9th. Sir Edmund Bacon to the same. Dated at Garboldisham and unaddressed. Endorsed "Sir Edmund Bacon's Letter concerning Stibbard & Guist Comona."

The writer, who claims to possess a right of Freewarren at Ryburgh and Guist granted by Edward the Second and confirmed by Henry the Eighth and Queen Elizabeth, complains that trespassers have sheltered themselves by giving out that Lord Townshend will protect them.

1748, Nov. 14th. Copy of Lord Townshend's answer to the last.

1748, Nov. 19th. Sir Edmund Bacon to Lord Townshend. Dated at Garboldesham, and unaddressed.

The writer offers to dine with his Lordship on Friday next, and will have great satisfaction if matters may then be accommodated.

1748, Nov. 29th. Hon. George Townshend to the same, at Rainham. Dated in Craven Street.

As I have now gone through the Ceremony of waiting on the Royal Family & kissing hands, attended this day the Opening of Parliament & voted his Majesty an address of Thanks for his Speech I shall wait on you in the Country immediately my brother Charles was this Evening taken very ill Doctor Harding hopes he will soon be better my Brother was in such Pain that when I arrived he could utter but very little" 1748, Dec. 2nd. Copy of Lord Townshend's answer to the last. From Rainham.

1748, Dec. 3rd. Copy of a letter from Lord Townshend to his son Charles, from Rainham. A letter giving advice, and expressing regrets that Mr Pelham had been so unfortunately disappointed in his kind intentions.

1748, Dec. 5th. Copy of a letter from Lord Townshend to his brother Horatio acquainting him that he is sending him the horse called White Stocking.

1748, Dec. 6th. Horatio Walpole to Lord Townshend. Dated at the Cockpitt and unaddressed.

About the interest on a £3000 Mortgage (due to the writer's daughter Mary) with reference to the bankruptcy of Lord Townshend's agent Mr Sutton.

1748, Dec. 8th. George Townshend to the same, at Rainham. Dated in Craven Street.

. . . . "We have no News in Town worth sending you, the attention of the Political Part is chiefly engaged on the Northumberland Election which is to be heard at the Bar of the House. Mr Allgood opposes much personal Merit & behaviour in the late perilous times with as it is said a good Cause against Lord Ossulstone the Court Member & a great reluctance is expected on some part of the Court Members to support him" 1748, Dec. 8th. Hon. Charles Townshend to the same. Dated in Leicester Street and unaddressed.

"Dear my Lord.

. . . . I have asked Mr Pelham for the vacant seat in the Admiralty but he tells me he can not promise it to me, that he will mention me among the Candidates to the King & say that it is your request that I may have it. Sir P[eter] Warren insists upon it & I believe will be complied with. As I am not only not advantageously

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND.
MSS.

known, but not even personally to his Majesty it is little likely I shall have his preference."

1748, Dec. 9th. The same to the same, at Rainham. Dated in Leicester Street.

The writer has seen Mr Pelham who holds out no hope of his obtaining the desired preferment and was not much pleased with his Lordship's letter.

1748, Dec. 10th. Copy of Lord Townshend's answer to Horatio Walpole's letter of Dec^r 6th about Mr Sutton's becoming a Bankrupt.

Dec. 14th, 1748. Copy of a letter from Lord Townshend to the Duke of Newcastle.

Congratulating his Grace on his return to England and begging him to use his influence on behalf of the writer's son Charles that the latter may be appointed to the vacancy at the Board of Admiralty caused by the death of Mr Stanhope.

1748, Dec. 14th. Robert Masters to Lord Townshend. Unaddressed, dated at Benet College. [Corpus Christi College, Cambridge].

"I am just now return'd from the election of the Duke of Newcastle our Chancellor, whereupon I beg leave to congratulate y^r Lordship as bearing so near a relation to him The Master of Peter house died here the night before last, & 'tis confidently said will be succeeded in that preferment by Dr Keene . . . Mr Greene of St Johns, & Mr Younge of Trinity our Publick Orator, are talkt of as Candidates for the Regius Professorship but which or whether either will succeed in his application [I] cannot speak with any degree of certainty" 1748, Dec. 15th. Horatio Walpole to the same. Dated at the Cockpitt and unaddressed.

Endorsed by Lord Townshend "Horatio Walpole's Letter to me acquainting me of his being satisfied of my paying the Interest due on his Daughter[s] Mortgage to Mr Sutton his Agent."

1748, Dec. 16th. Copy of Lord Townshend's answer to his son George's letter of Dec^r 8th.

The writer urges his son to do little favours for Norfolk people in order to increase his popularity with the small freeholders.

1748, Dec. 17th. "Copy of Lord Townshend's letter to John Sharpe Esq. about Mr Sutton's being a Bankrupt and his Desire to have his Deeds placed in other hands."

1748, Dec. 21st. The Duke of Newcastle to the same. Dated at Newcastle House.

"My dear Lord

I had the honor of Your Lordships letter, relating to the late Vacancy in the Admiralty, & had before acquainted Mr Townshend, as my Brother had done also, that it would not be possible to serve him upon that Occasion, & indeed the King was then resolved to give it to Mr Villiers, which he has since done. Your Lordship may be assured that my Brother & I shall be extreamly glad to shew our Regard, to One so very deserving in himself, & so very nearly related to us, as Your Lordships Son; I am very sensible of Your Goodness & Inclination towards us, & shall do every thing on my Part to deserve the Continuance of it, being with great Truth, my Dear Lord, Your most affect humble.

Servant

HOLLES NEWCASTLE.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1748, Dec. 22nd. John Sharpe to the same at Rainham. Endorsed "Mr Sharpe's letter in answer to mine about my Title Deeds which are in Sutton's Hands."

1748, Dec. 27th. Hon. George Townshend to the same. Dated in Craven Street and unaddressed.

"I should have been with your Lordship before in the Country if my Brother Charles had not had a very severe relapse just when he proposed to set out . . . Mr George Selwyn I hear intends to wait on you with us in consequence of your Invitation . . .

We have no News in Town except that one of our Transports with a great Number of Invalids & thirty four Officers is gone to the Bottom but I hope we shall hear it still contradicted.

The Northumberland Election is at last given up by the Ministry, the Iniquity of the Sheriff in Lord Ossulston's behalf having been too flagrant to admit of his Conduct appearing before y^r House."

1748, Dec. 29th. Draft of a letter from Lord Townshend to his son Charles, begging the latter not to come down to Rainham.

1749, May 3rd. John Noyes to Lord Townshend, in Albemarle Street. Dated at Gray's Inn.

The writer is informed that the half of a King's Share in the New River Company will be extremely well sold at £3000, and that it is thought £2750 is more likely to be offered for it.

1749, May 30th. Thomas Nuthall to the same. Dated at Crosby Square and unaddressed.

"I wrote to your Lordship by the Penny Post last night, that I had agreed for the sale of your [half] Share of the New River Cop^y. £2801 was the price" . . .

1749, Oct. 7th. D. Rushworth to the same. Dated at the County Hcepital Northampton and unaddressed.

An application for a contribution towards the support of the Charity.

1749, Nov. 10th. Charles Hardinge to the same. Dated at Buxton and unaddressed.

"My honoured Lord

. . . The D[uke] of Devonshire's memory is not exact as to the pedigree of Miss Belvoir, & the Confederate Filly, but he says they are both as famous & as high-bred, as any Mares in England. The D[uke] of Rutland has promis'd me the pedigree of Miss Belvoir, & I shall see him soon. Fleece'em is the finest Horse I ever saw. Black-Legs is dead: As to your Lordships desire not to be stinted in the Number of Mares, I will answer for it you shall find no difficulty . . . As for Sir F[rancis] Drake's Mare, I find he has been ofer'd 150 for her & therefor I have said nothing to him upon that head" . . .

1750, July 4th. Invitation from the Constitution Club at Norwich to Lord Townshend, begging him to accept the enclosed ticket for their Feast. Signed by the Stewards, T. Hardingham, C. Newman and Ja. Scott.

An engraved ticket for a Constitution Feast at the Kings Arms on a later date, viz. August 1st, 1755, filled in for "The R^t Hon. Lord Viscount Townshend" now accompanies this letter.

1750, July 5th. Michael Houghton to Lord Townshend. Dated at Dalham.

With reference to the letting of a farm.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1750, July 8th. Samuel Arnall to the same. Dated at Newmarket.
 "young Ebony is not arriv'd hear yet. Mr Pitt desird me to give his Duty to your Lordship & to let your Lordship know that young Ebony shoul go 3 or 4 days in a close of his which has very good Rowin in it Mr Pitts close is 4 acers & better & has a house to put the mare & foal in if requird" 1750, July 13th. The same to the same. Dated at Newmarket.

 "Last night I Rec'd your Lordships of the 9th which I should a had sooner but was then at Peterborough to ride a Mare of my Lords which was 2nd out of 6. Mr Crofts mare woon. She was out of a Childers mare & got by my Lords Arabian. Ebony is this day arrivd with hur filly at her foot safe at this Place & are both well" 1750, Dec. 12th. John Sharpe to the same.

 Informing his Lordship Mr Hood the clerk to Mr Sutton's Commission of Bankruptcy has found all his deeds and is ready to deliver them to Mr Child or his Lordship and the mortgagees.

1748, May 8th. Augustus Hervey, afterwards Earl of Bristol, to Lady Townshend. Dated on board the "Phoenix in Vado-Bay," and unaddressed.

"Tho' I have never receiv'd one line from D[ea]r Lady Townshend since I left England, yet I cannot help writing one now by Capⁿ Foulks who has the Adm^l's Leave for three Months, & who has been abroad with me the whole time of my being out: he will tell you how well Jemmie is that I have taken him into this ship with me, & shall take all the Care of him in my power. The Sea has given him an opportunity to practise his wild Spirit, & tho' a little endanger'd by the Heat of our warm Climate, yet all is well again; he is forgiv'n on promises of future reserve; The young Dog got ashore when I was up at Turin, & went astray.

Pray now let me ask you (for I know you are sincere) what has prevented your writing to me after promising—was it that you had promis'd or was it that you heard of my Success and at once imagin'd I became Worldly? If either, permitt me to say you are to blame, I'm sure Mr Selwyn will agree with me, & Mr Hume will condemn you. I have wrote three or four letters to you, and am heartily sorry if you have never had them; I'm sure you'll repent of not having wrote to me, when I tell you that except [from] my Mother, I have receiv'd no letter from any Relation; I have [had] only one from my Uncle Aston ever since I have been out of England.

I shall referr to Cap^t Foulks all Particulars concerning myself & be content with telling you, that if 'tis Peace, I hope not to see England [for] some time, as I'm in a Ship that I flatter myself will be station'd here.

You cannot expect to hear any News from me; and to tell your Ladyship the Truth I'm at a loss for a Style at present, least if I write in my usual one to you I shou'd offend, because I have not had the Satisfaction since I have been out to hear your approbation; for which reason I had better be quick in assuring you that this is only for an opportunity of convincing you that Nothing can prevent my ever remaining—Your Ladyships—Most faithfull & Obed^t humble serv^t.

A. HERVEY."

[No date]. The same to same. Written at "Portsmouth Tuesday Morning," and unaddressed.

"Tis probable D[ea]r Lady Townshend that you may have flatter'd yourself my being out of Town wou'd prevent your being troubled with

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

me longer, but you see I'm as incapable of refraining from this kind of proxy Visit when absent, as I am solicitous of ever being with you in person when possible. I own this miserable Situation I'm now in, better qualifies me for a correspondent of yours than was I induced to be one of the World from the imaginarry pleasures of a gayer place: The People here I think are rather more fit to converse with than any where else, for they raily appear too ignorant to be knaves: yet with all this Temptation, I'm inclined to wish myself among the Wise Great again. The D[uke] of Hambleton is here, very ill; on my Arrival I went to see him, as I was in a Sea Port Town, I thought myself nearer my home than he c^d [be], & therefore was in hopes to be of service to him, in getting his People and things on b[oar]d for him; but I found he had alter'd his Intentions of going by sea to Lisbon; he so is weak, he can't undertake the Voyage for fear of his Stomach, having been twice taken with very severe Vomitting of Blood—they say he can't (poor Man) live many days longer; No Wonder! for the Instant he recovers a little, he drinks 'till four, five, & six in the Morning. I'm going to live aboard for the Time I am here, how long it will be before I can ask [for leave] I know not. for my Ship is not yet quite ready for the Dock; tho' I hope I shall be able to meet Mr Townshend, & methinks I w^d not desire to be happy while he is otherwise; had I a probability of ever being so. No, I have learn't to love him from Character, & my soul shall sympathize with his; It has been charm'd, when perhaps his was in raptures; why should it not mourn, now his is in Sorrow. Yes, believe me if I cou'd alleviate the Pains he now feels, by taking a share to myself, I wou'd support my additional Burthen without a groan. Adieu I imagine I must have tir'd you; I wish you'd endeavour if 'twere possible you cou'd me, by reading your sentiments. God bless you, here are impertinent people coming in on Bussiness & I can only beg you to be assur'd that I am not capable of saying I was, if I was not most sincerely.—Y^r faithfull affectionate & Obed^t Ser^t

A: HERVEY.

[P.S. Please direct]. To me Command^r of the Princessa at Ports-mouth."

1751, Oct. 9th. Lord Townshend to Henry Pelham. Draft in the handwriting of Lord Townshend. Dated at Rainham. Unsigned and unaddressed. Endorsed "Copy of My Letter to Mr Pelham."

"Sir—It gave me no small concern wheⁿ I had the honor of waiting on you last, to find that the request I then took the liberty of offering to you surprized you in the manner you were pleased to say it did. It is now 30 years since I first came into Parliament, and the request I made to you that I might be allow'd to have a share in the subscription for Ann[uitie]s and Lottery, in case there should be one granted for next year, is the first of this kind I ever made to you or to any Minister since I have been in Parliament. You know, Sir, for how very small a part of the 30 years I have held any place from the Court and if, under these circumstances, I did ask for a larger share in the subscription than may be usually given to every particular person who has the good fortune to be favoured by you, I really do not see why you should be so much astonish'd at my request, as you seem'd to be.

If many Persons who have raised large fortunes by the indulgence they have mett with in being permitted to advance their money to the Public on all occasions have been admitted into such subscriptions upon all occasions of this kind to such a degree as has entitled them to a quantity of Tickets from every subscription little inferior to what I have

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

desired at this time, can it be thought any presumption in me who have never in the course of 30 years, troubled any Ministry with any solicitations of this kind, to express my hopes that I might be favor'd for only one year with a number of Tickets perhaps a little larger than what has been allow'd to them or to some of them, as often as they have subscribed ?

I have been credibly inform'd by Persons speaking upon authority which cannot be doubtfull in this case that a Merchant in the City was allow'd to subscribe in his own name 100,000*l.* in this last subscription for Ann[uitie]s and Lottery, this sum entitled him to 3333 Lottery tickets.

If the near relation which I have the honor to bear to you, the desire I have (for reasons perhaps not entirely unknown to you) of being able to do something for my family, the obligations which you are so kind as to profess you have to my Father, incline you to show to me any degree of favor beyond the instance I have given, I shall be obliged to you for it ; if not I beg leave to remind you of the promise you lately made me that I should have leave to make such a subscription as shall produce a quantity of Tickets equal to the highest number which shall be allow'd to any other particular person whatsoever.

I trouble you with this letter as I have found from experience that when I wait upon you I can never have an opportunity of speaking my whole mind to you without interruption.

I am with great Respect and Regard—Sir—Your most Dutifull and affectionate humble servant."

1752, March 12th. Josiah Tucker (afterwards Dean of Gloucester) to Lord Townshend. Dated at Bristol and unaddressed. It was probably sent under a cover addressed to the Author of 'National Thoughts.'

"S^r—I was in London when You did me the Honor to send your National Thoughts, w^{ch} came in two Covers, neither of them Franked ; W^{ch} Omission I very readily impute to y^e Carelessness of y^e Book-seller. Your Sentiments as to y^e Connection between Morals & Commerce are entirely the same with my own ; And I have always looked upon y^e Notion, that Commerce is founded in Luxury, to be a very fatal Mistake. The true Foundation of National, Extensive, & lasting Commerce are such Artificial Wants as are either virtuous in themselves, or at least not inconsistent with Virtue ; And every Deviation from this Rule promotes Commerce in the Body Politic no otherwise than as a Fever may be said to promote the Circulation of y^e Blood in the Body Natural.

I find y^e present deplorable State of our Poor, in the Consequences of w^{ch} all Ranks & Degrees must necessarily be involved, is come to such an height as to put several eminent & worthy Persons to think seriously of a Remedy :—But without pretending to y^e Spirit of Prophecy, or depreciating any Scheme that has been offered, I will venture to foretell, That no effectual Cure can be had for y^e Evil, till y^e Common People are excluded from their present Influence in the Business of Elections. And let us suppose y^e best Schemes imaginable & y^e best guarded, they will immediately degenerate in our present Circumstances into Electioneering Jobs. Indeed all Parties will exclaim ag^t each other for doing such bad things, but all will do y^e very same in their Turns. And y^e only Cure of y^e Evil, is y^e Removing of y^e Temptation.

You have considered y^e Case of y^e Bounty upon Corn with great Exactness. But y^e Exportation of Corn is not so encouraging a Trade as is commonly imagin'd; And there is scarce a Merchant who hath followed it for ten years together, but complains that he has lost money. And indeed there is some Reason; for it is a kind of Lottery, in w^{ch} there are a few Prizes & many Blanks

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

As to y^e Manufacture of Spirituous Liquors, We all see y^e Inconveniences arising from y^e excessive Use of them in these Kingdoms, but we seem to think, that no Harm ensues from y^e Exportation of them to our Customers abroad. Whereas in my humble Opinion, whatever is pernicious to our Customers, will in y^e end be detrimental to Ourselves. And y^e Havock, w^{ch} Rum hath made among y^e Indians on y^e Continent of America, is a melancholly Proof of this Observation. But, indeed we do export considerable Quantities of home made Spirituous Liquors to Africa, & other Places; And cheap enough;—An eminent Merch^t of this Place assuring me, that he can get any Quantity from Worcester to be delivered at Bristol from 14^d to 15^d p Gall: the Duty being drawn back.

Thus, S^r, I have ventured to give my Thoughts with that Openness & Freedom, w^{ch} yo^r Goodness will excuse, as considering it to proceed from an upright Intention. If I have not been sufficiently reserved in my Stile & Application to You, the Ignorance of yo^r Quality must be my Excuse. And I remain," etc.

1752, April 2nd. Lord Townshend to Rev. Josiah Tucker. Copy. Dated at Grosvenor Street, and endorsed "Copy of my Answer to M^r Tucker's letter Dated April 2^d 1752." 5 pp.

"Sir—Not long since a letter from you was left at my house by a Porter inclosed under Cover directed to me by another hand. I had great pleasure in reading it and was still more pleased when I considered that it gave me some pretensions to trouble you with one, and to express my hopes that I may have the satisfaction of seeing you when you shall be up in Town again. Your Remarks on National Thoughts are made with great Candor. That Pamphlet was, I believe, wrote & printed in a very great hurry to answer a particular view just at the time when it was published; and I have good reason to believe that the Appendix was drawn up in great haste after the Pamphlet was sent to the Press. If this be the case, it is not a matter of surprise that what is offer'd in that short appendix, upon a Point of so extensive a nature as that of the Bounty on Corn is, should not carry that clearness in Proof which every one might expect and has a right to demand before he does give up a general receiv'd opinion which he has embraced, and more especially upon a point where as a Landowner he is greatly interested. Tho' I cannot within the compass of a letter pretend to demonstrate to you how great the Damages are which do arise to the Nation and to the Farmer in particular from the Bounty which is allowed on Corn, yet I do beg leave to say that I think that the truth of this Proposition may be demonstrated as clearly as any Proposition in Euclid I know from the reason of things and from information that there is no Nation in Europe which has or can grow Corn so cheap as England has done for some years past. But I must deny the consequence drawn from hence that therefore you should allow a Bounty for exportation. For it is an absurd piece of extravagance, pardon the expression, to allow a Bounty to export what will find a Vent without it and the Bounty in this and all cases (if the exporter does sell the Corn abroad proportionally cheaper on that account, which perhaps is but seldom the case) must have this bad effect of enabling foreign Countries to feed their Manufacturers and Labourers of all kinds at a cheaper rate with our own produce than we can feed our own. A great deal more may be said on this subject which I must now omit But give me leave before I conclude to say in answer to yours that if I could be satisfy'd that the abolishing the manufacture of Spirituous Liquors in England would put a stop to the manufacture of those Liquors in all Countries, I should readily agree to have the manufacture of them totally stopt here. But as I think our Debauchery of this kind would in such case be supported by foreign liquors intirely, we should under such a Regulation not only loose our people[s] but give great encouragement to a foreign manufacture, and consequently be the sooner ruin'd One word more to another Point. It is my Opinion that if we could be so happy as to break through the Custom of Annual S[essio]ns of P[arliament] we should soon find that Electioneering Jobbs and Jobbs of all kinds would be less frequent. My meaning is that there should always be a P[arliament] existing in the Kingdom but that it should not meet in time of Peace oftener than once in 3 years. I would not have a law to fix this but the Commons in time of peace should grant supplies for 3 years. Excuse the trouble I give you here and favour me when you come to London with an Opportunity of explaining my self more clearly and fully than I can do in a letter, which I have wrote in some hurry, my time being now and having been for some time past pretty much taken up with business.—I am—Y^r most Obedient Serv^t."

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

1752, April 5th. Rev. Josiah Tucker to Lord Townsend. Dated at Bristol.

"My Lord—This Morning I had y^e Honour to receive a L^r from your Lordship; for w^{ch} I think myself obliged to make a speedy Acknowledgment in y^e most humble Manner. Your Lordship's Goodness is very great, & deserves my particular Thanks for overlooking some expressions in my Letter, not sufficiently respectful to a Person of yo^r Rank & Station. I really did not know, Who was concerned in National Thoughts, & therefore wrote to M^r Doddesley the Publisher, to request him to direct my Letter to y^e Author, & send it to him: And your Lordship has been pleased not only to accept y^e Sincerity of my Intention, but to honour me with a most obliging & instructive Letter.

Tho', my Lord, I cannot yet see all things precisely in the same light that you do, I begin to make some Approaches towards it; & find, that as to y^e general Plan & fundamental Principles of Commerce I am so happy as to have my Sentim^s approved of by yo^r Lordship in every particular. And I wish every Land Owner in G. Britain thought of Commerce, y^e Increase of People, & of their Industry and Morals in y^e Manner Your Lordship hath so justly recommended to them, & joyned in vigorous Resolutions of destroying Monopolies, exclusive Privileges, Companies, & Preemptions of every kind: For most undoubtedly all these are prejudicial to y^e time, National, Landed Interest. If we had greater Numbers of People, y^e Question about y^e Expediency of a Bounty upon Corn wo^d cease of course, because there wo^d be a sufficient Price in our own Markets. But as y^e Case stands at present, I wo^d not, for my own Part, take away the Bounty from y^e Exporter all at once, but lessen it by Degrees, & at y^e same time encourage the Encrease of our People by proper Laws, & a well founded Police.

In National Thoughts I observe all y^e Schemes offered, are of y^e preventive kind; that is, they are rather calculated to remove y^e Temptation, than to punish y^e Crime. This is beyond Dispute, y^e best Method upon every Acc^t; & y^e thing y^e most wanted of all others in these Kingdoms. In short I cannot help declaring my Opinion to your

MARQUESS'
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Lordship, That tho I believe our Laws in general are as good as most of our Neighbours, our Police is y^e most defective, & y^e worst calculated to prevent y^e Subject from transgressing y^e Laws, of any in Europe : Indeed we are multiplying Temptations, & laying new Baits of Pleasure every Day, & then make a Wonder, that our People are grown so abandoned & debauched.

Your Lordship is pleased to observe, that Farming is a Species of Manufacture ;—I think so too ; And am so pleased with y^e Idea, that I beg leave to make y^e following Remark :—Farming is not only a Manufacture, but y^e most important, & requires as much Skill & Application to make a Figure in it, as any Trade whatever. And yet y^e Art of Farming has been surprisingly improved within these last few Years : tho no Persons were obliged to serve a regular Apprenticeship to this Business ; why therefore sho^d there be any Apprenticeships served to other Trade, w^{ch} are confessedly more easily attainable & of less Consequence to y^e Publick ?

I most humbly thank your Lordship for your kind Invitation w^{ch} I shall embrace with Pleasure when I come up to Town. This will probably be y^e next Winter, if I can finish a Task w^{ch} is now set me ; viz. To write a Treatise upon y^e Principles of Commerce for y^e Use of y^e Prince of Wales, & to be entitled, The Elements of Commerce & Theory of Taxes. If your Lordship has minuted down any Thoughts having a Tendency to these Subjects, I hope your Lordship will pardon the Presumption, if I desire to be honoured with a Sight of them. And I remain, with very great Esteem and due Respects.

JOSIAH TUCKER."

1752, April 13th. Lord Townshend to the Rev. M^r Tucker. Copy.
5½ pp.

This letter is a closely reasoned argument against Corn Bounties ; it concludes :—

"One would think from the general cry of people that Corn is a drug, and that therefore it is impossible to find a foreign Markett for it, and that it cannot all be consumed at home. We must lower our Rents, Tennants cannot pay their Rents, they will be undone and such like exclamations from all Landlords as well as Tenants ; I say that when I hear all this I conclude that the general sentiments of people are, that the poverty of a Nation is created by plenty, and vice versâ that the Wealth of a Nation consists in its having a scarcity of every thing, that when Corn is in plenty here there is less profit gott by sending it abroad than when it is scarce at home For my part I think that the Wealth of a Nation consists in being provided with plenty of every thing. I think that England is at present in a very unnatural State, Money is cheap and every thing else is dear. This situation she is brought into by the many absurd Laws we have, and it is the most dangerous situation that any trading Nation can be in. And I fear that unless some of these Laws be repealed that we shall soon see a decline of Trade. This observation on our present state added to that of the melancholly state of the lower class of People was the occasion of the attempt I made this last winter to draw up a Bill for opening the course of Industry, a Copy of which I herewith have taken the freedom of sending to you inclosed under two other different Covers ; and I hope you will excuse its not being a fair one. If you shall find it worth your notice I should be glad to hear your thoughts upon it. I am satisfied I have tired you as well as myself with this letter. I must therefore take my leave of you and will with your approbation trouble you on some other occasion with what I did intend now to have offered to you relating to our Poor Laws and upon the subject of our Taxes."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1752, April 22nd. Rev. Josiah Tucker to Lord Townshend. Dated at Bristol and unaddressed.

"Your Lordship has been extremely obliging & condescending, I sincerely thank You for it: But I beg leave to express my Obligations more particularly for having my Prejudices removed by y^r Lordship's kind Instruction. You have sufficiently convinced me that Bounties cannot be of any National Service to a Manufacture w^{ch} is passed its Infancy. . . . If y^e Nation was eased of this Expence, the Savings might be applied to making up the Deficiencies in certain Branches of y^e Revenue, w^{ch} I hope will be occasioned one Day or other, by a Repeal of these absurd Laws, w^{ch} pay a Tax upon Raw Materials, & other Articles necessary for carrying on a Manufacture. . . . It seems a Land Carrier may carry Coals to what Distances he pleases, without paying any Tax; But a Carrier by Sea must pay a Duty from one Port to another; And this too in a Country whose Glory it is to be a Maritime Power. And to complete y^e Absurdity, this Coal w^{ch} is taxed if used in y^e carrying on any of our own Manufacturers, shall be sent to all our Rivals to be used by them Duty free. . . .

I am mightily pleased with yo^r Lordship's general Remarks, & manner of accounting for People's frequent & gross Mistakes in y^e Affairs of Commerce: It certainly is as yo^r Lordship observes, by arguing from Particulars to Generals; whereas in this Case a Man sho^d form to himself a General Plan drawn from y^e Properties of Commerce, & then descend to particulars & Individuals, & observe whether they are co-operating with y^e general Interest: Unless he doth this, he studies Trade only as a Monopolist, & doth more Hurt than Good to the Community.

When Your Lordship is at Leisure I shall be very glad to be favoured with yo^r Thoughts on Taxes; And from what I have seen already, I promise to myself much Advantage & Instruction. It seems to me, that y^e Affair of Taxes may be compared to the Pruning of a Tree; w^{ch} if done with Judgm^t, will make y^e Tree grow y^e better certain it is that a judicious Application of Taxes to check y^e Follies & prune away the Excessences of High Life, & prevent y^e Idleness, Dissoluteness, & Intemperance of the Poor, is so beneficial to Commerce that it may be much questioned whether y^e whole of Trade doth not derive all its Motions from it. If Ale & Strong Beer were at 1^d a Quart, all our Manufactures would be ruined.

I rejoyce greatly to find that yo^r Lordship has taken in hand y^e Repeal of y^e 5th of Q. Elizabeth, [cap.] May you prosper in it.

Our Manufacturers in this Part of y^e World are all ready to petition for y^e Opening of y^e Turkey & Hudsons Bay Trade; And, wo^d soon appear with proper Representations, if they had any Person of Weight & Spirit to head them in Parliam^t. I beg pardon, my Lord for this very long & tedious Letter."

1752, May 5th. Horatio Walpole to Lord Townshend. Dated at the Cockpit.

"My dear Lord,—If this finds your L^{dp} in the Country, & you have leisure enough to look into your late father's Political papers, I should be glad to have a sight of those letters that he wrote & received while he was Ambassador in Holland in the late Queen Ann's reign, because I have under my Consideration, some Posthumous Works of the late Lord Bolingbroke, & the sight of your father's papers might be of Service to

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

sett in a true light, the false & scandalous misrepresentations of the transactions in w^{ch} Lord Townshend had been greatly concerned. You will excuse this Liberty & believe me ever to be with the greatest respect."

1752, May 6th. Lord Townshend to the Rev. Josiah Tucker. Rough Draft, dated at Rainham.

Sir—I came to this place on Friday last when I rec^d your most obliging letter of the 22^d last Inst.

The Bill I sent to you was drawn out pritty early in the last Session, but not before the House of Commons were actually enter'd upon the consideration of various Schemes for forming new Regulations in the poor Laws; and as I then found that the Ministry endeavour'd all in their power to prevent any matters being offer'd to Parliament which might protract the Sessions and disappoint His Maj^{ty} in his intentions of setting out for Hanover in this Spring, I chose rather to lay the Bill aside for the next Sessions, when the hurry which appear'd in this would not exist and people might, as I thought, possibly be better inclined to give it some degree of consideration when offer'd at a time of more leisure.

The earnest desire I have to see this point brought before Parliament may move me to present this Bill, tho' I do not think my selfe in any degree well qualified for such a task and I wish I may be so fortunate before the time comes as to prevail on a more able Person to present this or some other Bill of the like purport. You need not give your self the trouble to send back the copy I sent you, but let me have the additional clauses you propose. And when you come to Town we may consider the whole together.

I happen'd one morning long before I troubled you with National Thoughts, to shew the Bill to an acquaintance of mine, who is a Member of the House of Commons and our Conversation turning afterwards on Trade, he recommended to me your Reflections on the Expediency of a Law for the Naturalization of Foreign Protestants which I soon afterwards sent for. I thought it the best Pamphlet I ever read and I sent several copies to Norwich, Lynn and to different parts of Norfolk and Suffolk.

In my enquiries for this Pamphlet I mett with your Essay on Trade published in the year 1750 which I must confess was likewise new to me. From this work I found that your general maxims of Trade are good and pure, & that your knowledge in all the Branches of Trade is very extensive & far beyond mine

I agree with you entirely in your general plan of Trade, that all Companies, and exclusive Priviledges ought to be abolish'd. All Monopolies in every shape are destructive to the Trade and good order of the Community. I think as far as I have been able to consider it that your Essay on Trade is a most masterly performance But I do not agree with you in what you propose for regulating the Poor or in your Courts of Guardians, nor can I be of opinion that a Militia can under any supposed circumstances be tolerable in a trading and free Nation.

You will wonder, but it is very true, that I had not seen or even heard of S^r M[atthew D]ecker's Essay on the causes and Decline of the Foreign Trade till I found it quoted in your Essay. I have since got it and have dipp'd into it, though I have not had time to read it through regularly. I like it much. The general maxims are good but he sometimes mistrusts their guidance in the application of them to particular cases He desires very truly that where Trade and Industry are left open and free to their natural courses labor will be cheap and that the price of manufactures are determined chiefly by the price of labor. That in the woollen manufactory the price of the manufacture to that of the material, wool, is as 3 to 1. That a Bounty on exported wool thô absurd and destructive hurts that manufactory only, but that a Bounty on Corn, as it supplies the Foreigner with our Corn at a cheaper rate than an Englishman can have it, makes his labor cheaper than the Englishman's and consequently enables him to under-work is in every manufactory. Notwithstanding all this sound Doctrine he proposes to form Companies and to erect Magazines of Corn in every County for the management of our Corn. A most surprizing absurdity and inconsistency!

If Trade and Industry and all our Ports were thrown open, and all Duties, Prohibitions, Bounties, and Monopolies of every kind whatsoever were taken off[f] and destroy'd as you have very judiciously proposed, you would, I am perswaded, soon find that private Traders here would erect Warehouses for Corn as they have done for other manufactures and we should then have them on a reg[ular] and natural footing and this Island would then be, as Holland has been, the great market of Europe for Corn. But as long as the Bounty remains this cannot be if Trade and all matters relative to it were put on your Plan money and every thing would be in great plenty and very cheap and the nation would be rich and powerfull. And could I be [so] happy as to see your Plan establish'd I should not be alarm'd if I heard that the King of France was chosen King of the Romans. All Europe must bow to England when in such a Situation.

Your Remark on the Regulation of the Duty on Coals give me new information I did not know that this Tax was so absurdly circumstanced as you inform me in your letter, and your observations upon it are very just.

I agree with you in every observation you have made in your letter upon our Laws of Trade but I cannot agree to what your neighbour the Merchant asserts that we do export great quantities of spirituous liquors to Africa and diverse other Countries. He is mistaken, we do not export any Spirituous Liquors to any part of the Globe but to the Coast of Africa and no great quantities go thither

You seem to think that if the Bounty on Corn was taken off[f] and Trade in general put on the Plan you have recommended that Ale & strong Beer would be sold at 1d. a Quart. I really cannot see how it is possible to suppose that Ale and strong Beer should fall to that price or to any price near that.

Your general plan would promote a general spirit of Industry and must in consequence in its operation reform the morals of the poor; when the poor are allow'd the priviledge of making use of their senses they will not be so inclinable to drown'd them as they now are in the lazy idle way of Life in which our Laws oblige them to live. Lay aside the custom of annual Sessions of Parliament and the general disposition of the rich will be reform'd. But no further on this Head

P.S. I am glad to hear that the manufacturers in the West begin to see their own interest and I wish them encouragement and success in their present desire. If you approve of it I will try if I can find out one of the House of Commons who may disposed to head them."

1752, June 1st. Rev. Josiah Tucker to Lord Townshend. Dated at Bristol and unaddressed.

. "I find you fix upon that Method of raising Taxes, wch is mentioned in y^e Essay on Trade p. 148, 149. And indeed I do give my opinion now, as I have done it there, that it is so much y^e best, & very practicable; And now were once our Taxes put upon that Footing, I do agree with yo^r Lordship, we need not care, who is Emperor of Germany or K. of France. Our Finances wo^d then be upon a right Foundation, all Trade free, & Ports open: And y^e whole Edifice of Governm^t might be compared to a stately Structure where y^e nicest Proportion was observod, & where all y^e Parts mutually strengthen each other

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

The Plan of y^e Treatise I am now upon is as follows:

1. I consider in a Preliminary Dissertation y^e Commercial nature of Man as arising from two distinct Principles, & different kind of Wants, viz. Self Love & Social Love; Animal Wants & Social Wants. And as y^e Entranc in o Society multiplies all our Wants, & Self Love is much the strongest Principle in Human Nature; hence I infer; that every Man is naturally a Monopolist

If I do not tire Yo^r Lordship I wo^d add one subject more: M^r Addison in his Travels speaking of the Rep[ublick] of Lucca, has the following remarkable Observations:—

“It is very pleasant to see how the small Territories of this little Republick are cultivated to the best Advantage; so that one cannot find the least Spot of Ground, that is not made to contribute to the Owner.—This Republick is shut up in the Great Duke’s Dominions &c.” Here My Lord, You see all y^e Disadvantages of Situation; not one Sea-Port, or Navigable River: And yet all the Proofs & Symptoms of a flourishing Commerce. Is it possible therefore to get some Insight into the Police & Regulations in this Republick for an Encrease of People—Preservation of Good Morale—Free Trade—Sufficiency of Current Coin—and judicious Taxes? If a proper Information co^d be procured of the Particulars perhaps some Use might be made of it in an Application to ourselves; And we might learn what the Size of Hercules wo^d be, by Measuring his Foot.—I am, etc.

JOSIAH TUCKER.”

1752, July 2nd. “To the Honorabill Lord Townshend att His House in Grovner square—London—this”

Honrabil my Lord—I hombely beag your Lordships pardon for troubling your Lordship with any thing of this kind but I have bin lame this 2 years of y^e Roumits as thay call it & have had all most all the Doctars in London & have bin in hige parke Hosptel but got no Good & thay all say as nothing will do me any Good but y^e Bath & there I can not goo for I have nothing to go with. God hellp me for it hase cost me above 3 scouer pounds all wrady but as my Housband was an olld sarvant to your Lordship & I had y^e Honer to sarve your Lordship some time till wee mariyed & both sarved your Lordship soberly & honistly but I had y^e misforting in maring your man Bing[a]men Higgins that is all y^e offence I hope wee ever did as I no of & I hope & dont dout that your Honer will be so charatibell & good as to besto something of a poor lame cripill for if I can not git to go to Bath I will to y^e Dockter Ward I must gitt to goo som whear or to y^e parish if I dont git my Lims—My Good & Hornabill Lord I shall for ever pray for your Lordship & am your Dutifull & obedent & Houbmill sarvant

GRACE HIGGINS.

I log att M^r Brook’s in Lankister Courte next Door to y^e French Horne in new Bond Street Grovner Squear. I must gitt out of town for cheapnes.”

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1752, July 13th. Rev. Josiah Tucker to Lord Townshend. Dated at Bristol and unaddressed.

My Lord—Yesterday's Post brought me a most obliging Letter from yo^r Lordship. . . .

I am to set out y^e 20 for Wales, in order to take Possession of a small inconsiderable Prebend in the Church of St Davids; but shall hasten back with all possible Expedition, & hope to be in Bristol again by the beginning of August, to throw myself at your Lordship's feet. If you come here by y^e 3^d or 4th; I flatter myself that nothing but inevitable Accidents will prevent me from writing to you. And I have y^e greater Desire of doing it, as I hope to improve by y^e Honour of your Conversation in many particulars, of w^{ch} at present I very much doubt my own Judgment:—Only as to y^e Bounty on Corn I make no scruple to declare that I am entirely convinced by yo^r Lordship's Arguments; And if ever my Pamphlet on Naturalization sho^d have a second Edition, I shall be very glad to let y^e World know, to whom I am obliged for that Emendation. If Your Lordship will please to admit me as yo^r Disciple, I hope to make up in Docility what I may want in Judgment.

I find by y^e daily Papers, that there is a subscription of Noblemen & Gentlemen all over England for the Preservation of y^e Game.—I have no Objection ag^t such a Design: But, my Lord, you are y^e only Nobleman I can find, who expresses any Concern for the Preservation of Trade; An Object certainly as well worthy y^e Attention of Persons of Birth, Rank, & Fortune, as Hares and Partridges.

I send a duplicate of this Letter to yo^r Lordship's House in Town, lest y^e present sho^d miscarry.

JOSIAH TUCKER."

1752, Augt. 17th. William Gale to the same. From Chippenham. Returning thanks for a book, and sending compliments.

1752, Sept. 18th. Earl of Orford to the same. Unaddressed. Dated "Tuesday Sep. 18th," and endorsed in Lord Townshend's handwriting "1752—Sep^r the 18th L^d Orford's letter to me."

"My Lord—As there has been a Subscription set on foot for yearly Races at Swaffham, and it seems to be the Sence of the Gentlemen of the County in general that such a Meeting is wanting, I should be much obliged to your Lordship if you would show your Approbation of it, by giving me leave to set you down as a Subscriber. As your Lordship has formerly been a Friend to the Turf elsewhere, I flatter myself you will not be unwilling to encourage it in your own County, and that you will excuse the liberty of this Application from—My Lord—Your Lordships—Most Obedient humble Servantt

ORFORD."

1752, Nov. 27th. Augustus Hervey to Lady Townshend. Dated at Genoa and unaddressed.

"This is the third letter I have wrote to your Lady^{sh} since I have been abroad; & I must repeat my usual complaint of never hearing from you—tho' I must own it has been y^r former kind Indulgence that has only intitled me to expect it now—As to George [Townshend] I look upon him as a Man burried in the Matrimonial Sepulchar & till he is wak'd out of his Tomb by the Squalling of half a dozen Bratts expect to know no more of him: But I confess (let me vent myself by chideing) I did not imagine Lady Townshend wou'd so shortly forget one of her Chimney Corner party. Your Lady^{sh} has a thousand subjects to write of that you know are interesting to me—your own Well fare, George's (toute ingrate qu'il est), in short write of Die Junke

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

any thing that relates to you & recalls the many hours you have permitted me to pass away at Whitehall. For my Part unless I could send you a Month's Sun or a Basket of Fruit, I know of nothing in this Country that would give you a moment's pleasure or amusement. For unlike our Lady Caroline's, our Lady this, our Lady that, our Miss this, our Miss that, the Women are all so poor that their outsides are no better adorn'd than the Insides of the Men; they are as dirty & as Frippery as their Gallants are vain & ignorant, & the Commerce of the one as little desirable for want of a right Pride; as that of the other is from a wrong one. There is nothing more common in Italy than to see a great Princess who will return a Visit to no Lady of an inferior Title, strolling round the Streets for amusement & in a continued Conversation wth her own Footmen who to facilitate this entertainment walk on each side of her Coach, holding by the Doors. They play for Half-pence wth the utmost Avidity; & he that will be cheated of three & six pence never fails of going away wth the Reputation of being the most gallant man of the Company. I was delighted wth a thing say'd the other day by one of their own Countrymen w^{ch} putt their understandings in a light equally true & ridiculous. The Italian Women (say's he) are such Fools that if three of them are gott together; tis possible that one may say 2 & 2 makes 4, another that 2 & 2 make 5, & whilst the dispute grows warm, the third shall be embarrass'd w^{ch} to decide for. The Men are not in a Form, one Degree higher: they are too proud to seek or suffer the Company of their inferiors; too jealous to be pleased with that of their equals; & too ignorant to be able to bear their own. However I have had the good Fortune to meet wth two or three here who both know 'tis possible to communicate one's Ideas in other Languages besides Italian, & have a notion of there being inhabited Country's beyond the Alps; two Branches of knowledge that few Gentlemen or Ladies on this Side of them arrive at. I pass a good deal of my time wth them & wth more pleasure than I have done any part of it since I left Lisbon. Indeed I have been ill with a Pleurisie, & therefore bad Health, or bad Objects, I dont know w^{ch}, or perhaps both, have quite cured me of flirting; 'tis so long (tell Lady Caroline) since I have seen so spruce a Toylet as hers, that I have hardly the Idea of one; and if I venture ever again to accost a fine Lady, I believe it will be blushing, stuttering, twisting my Thumbs, & so much in the style of Sr Willfull Witwood, that if the Lady refused to fetch a Walk I should be extreemly puzzled for a second Question to putt to her; & in much greater Confusion to ask her the last Favour, than any Woman in France or Italy I believe ever felt in granting it. Your Lady^{sh} wont credit this change perhaps; & I wish I did not feel it, but I am absolutely an old Fellow. I rejoice in basking in the sun; every Limb is a Barometre, & foretells Rains, Winds, Snows &c.—I begin to tell storys of what I was; pretend to despise Pleasures I am past taking; rail at Wine because I drink none (nor have not since I left England) condemn gaming because I have no spare Money to play; & like the Dog in the Manger stare at every charitable Gentlewoman, that throws her oats to these Animals who are glad to eat them; tho' perhaps like most other reformers my only quarrel to the Banquet, is not being bidden or not having an Appetite. Now Dear Madam after what I have acknowledged myself dwindled into; 'twill be impudence to expect y^r Lady^{sh} will allow such a Creature much of y^r time; but 'till I come to a pair of Spectacles, a news-paper, and a Pipe, & confining my whole Conversation to Virtue & Vice w^{thout} having a view to either in my Conduct I flatter myself now & then you'll hear me relate extraordinary things over a Cup of M^r

Johnson's good Chocolate in a Morning; & when M^{rs} French or Lord Waldegrave's engaged sometimes allow me to make a fourth in an Evening at Whist: & whatever changes you may discover in my Person, Parts, or Conversation there is one w^{ch} I'll venture to assure y^r Lady^{sh} you will never find, w^{ch} is my being otherwise than—Madam—Your most faithfull Oblig'd & Obed^t Serv^t

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

A. HERVEY.

Forgive my having made as many Blotts as lines but I have not time to write it over again. I am going to a very great Ball & Feast, & the Post will be gone too early in the Morning for me. I beg a thousand kind things to George & respectfull ones to Lady Ferrers—for all the rest speak of me (as Othello says) as I am—nothing extenuate."

1753, Jan. 20th. Lord Townshend to his son Charles Townshend. Rough draft; unsigned.

"Dear Charles—I was most extremely concerned and surprised upon reading the contents of the letter your servant brought to me on Wednesday last. I am thoroughly sensible from what I have experienced from your constant and uniform conduct towards me that nothing I can offer on this occasion to dissuade you from your present scheme will or can have any effect. But give me leave to remind you that if your income in your present situation is so strait and severe as you represent what a melancholy situation must you and your Lady be in if you marry with the additional income of only £700 per annum at the most. The reversionary expectations which as you say attend the Lady's fortune are not as you truly observe objects to a person in your situation. Advice from me is never agreeable to you nor would you ever throughout the whole course of your life hitherto attend to it so that I shall not detain you long even on this occasion.

I am indeed very sorry to hear that you have enter'd upon such a scheme and project as this is, but it is your own and I will have nothing to do with it.

I am equally surprised to find that you call on me to make up the fortune of this match. It is not in my power to advance anything on any such like occasion; nor were it in my power would it be in my disposition to make any advance upon a match which cannot be made suitable to your present circumstances. I desire therefore that I may hear no more of this, and am determined to give no further answer about it.

I am with best wishes for your prosperity

Yours most affectly.

1753, March 12th. W. Bowyer to Lord Townshend.

"My Lord—That you may not think I have been remiss in executing your Commands, I beg leave to inform your Lordship that I proposed to the Public Advertiser to insert an Advertisement of the Letter on Industry as published in the Gazetteer. But I was rejected as one that offered at an Absurdity. We could sooner lay open all Privileges of the City than break through such a Punctilio.

I take the Freedom underneath to draw up the Clause of the Act in the Sense I understood your Lordship. I have forgot the very words otherwise I would have adhered more closely to them.—I am, my Lord—y^r Lordship's most dutiful & obed^t humble Serv^t

W. BOWYER."

[At foot] "AND be it enacted by the Authority aforesaid that all Persons whatever shall be at Liberty to use, exercise & follow any

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

manual Labour, Art, Mistery or Occupation now used & exercised, or which shall be hereafter used and exercised in any Parish, Precinct, Hamlet, Borough, Town or City Corporate throughout England and Wales and Berwick upon Tweed, any Law or Custom to the contrary notwithstanding. SAVING nevertheless to all Bodies Corporate all such other Rights, Privileges, & Immunities as they now respectively enjoy.

Or if a PROVISIO is more approved of,

PROVIDED always that this Act shall not extend to prejudice or infringe any other Rights, Privileges or Immunities which the several Bodies Corporate throughout England, Wales, and Berwick upon Tweed do now respectively enjoy."

[1753, March.] Rev. Josiah Tucker to the same. Undated and unaddressed. Endorsed by Lord Townshend "Answ^d on the 17th March 1753."

"My Lord—I am just returned from a Set of honest Merchants, true Friends to Trade. They have some intentions of printing off a 1,000 Letters of last Tuesday's Gazetteer, to disperse about, but have a Scruple whether they can justify it, without y^e Leave of y^e Author. Now as I imagine the Author may be known to Your Lordship, I hope you will pardon this Application for Consent. It is a pity, so excellent a Peice was not put into every Man's hand in y^e Kingdom. The Post is just setting out; I am, my Lord, with due Thanks for all Favours—Yo^r Lordships ever obliged—and most humble—Servant

JOSIAH TUCKER.

P.S. [My] Humble Respects wait on M^r Townshend."

1753, May 5th. John Watkin to Lord Townshend. From Yelvertoft. Asking for his Lordship's influence to procure him the appointment of Steward to Sir Jacob Astley at Hillmorton.

1753, Dec. 6th. Hambleton Custance (Sheriff of Norfolk) to George Townshend, M.P. for the County of Norfolk. Dated at Norwich and addressed "To the Hon^{ble} George Townshend, Esq^r—Member of Parliament—in South Audley Street—Westminster."

"Sir—It is with great Concern that I am obliged to give you any Trouble on this or any other Occasion, but I find myself necessitated to request your good offices with M^r Pelham and the other Lords of the Treasury in my Behalf, on account of another unlucky Escape of the Smuglers &c. from the Castle: The manner by which it was effected you will find by the enclosed w^{ch} is an Abstract of a Letter to me from the Deputy Sheriff, & in w^{ch} you will observe that two of the five Smuglers are retaken. I beg leave to assure you that nothing shall be wanting on my part for the Recovery of the rest, having sent out proper Persons to every part of the Coasts of this and the neighbouring County. I am with the utmost Respect—D^r Sir—Your most faithfull & obed^t humble Serv^t

HAMBLETON CUSTANCE.

1753, Dec. 26th. Rev. Robert Potter to ———, From Reymerton.
... When first I married [my stepfather] M^r Colman persuaded me to entrust him with £340 (my wife's money) promising to give me security for it" etc.

1754, Oct. 5th. Copy of a letter from Lord Townshend to the Rev. Philip Yonge, D.D., Master of Jesus College, Cambridge. Dated at Rainham, and endorsed by Lord Townshend "Copy of my letter to the Vice-Chancellor of the University of Cambridge."

"Sir—Having observed that several public Exercises have been lately instituted in your University with premiums annexed to them for the improvement of Education by the advancement of Knowledge, and that among these provisions no encouragement is given for the Study of the Theory of Trade, I take the liberty of desiring to know from you, Sir, whether it will be agreeable to the University if rewards of the same nature with those lately granted in the other branches of learning should be given for the promotion of this.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

It is unnecessary for me to point out the infinite advantage which would result to the Public if young men could be led early in Life to a diligent Study and correct knowledge of a Science so very important in it self and so intimately connected with the affairs and Interests of this Kingdom as the subject of Trade is; nor have I any view in making this Proposal but to express in part the gratefull sense I have of the many obligations which my Family have received from the University of Cambridge by an Institution which I should hope they would approve of, as it is but one step more in the System lately began, and as I am confident that, if it be accepted and strictly pursued, it will contribute to the honour of the University and the solid advantage of the Country. I am—Sir—Your most obedient humble servant [TOWNSHEND.]

1754, Oct. 6th. Rev. Dr. Yonge to Lord Townshend. Dated at Cambridge, and endorsed "The Vice Chancellor's letter to me dated Oct. 6, 1754 in answer to mine of the fifth Instant."

"My Lord—I have just now rec^d the honour of your Lordship's letter, & will take an early opportunity of communicating it to the Heads of Colleges. Your Lordship's great attention to the publick good is as conspicuous in your generous offer as your regard to this University, which can never do enough to repay the obligations it owes to your Lordship's Family.—I am, my Lord—Your Lordship's—most obed^t humble ser^t P. YONGE."

1754, Oct. 12th. Duke of Newcastle, Chancellor of the University of Cambridge, to the same. Dated at Claremont.

"My Lord—I am very much obliged to your Lordship for your very kind letter, and for your proposal to encourage in our University the Study of Trade, & Commerce, which is certainly of such infinite Advantage to this Country. I expect to see the Vice Chancellor soon, and will then consider with him, how to proceed, and in what manner your Lordship's views for promoting that scheme, may be best answer'd, & your kind Intentions take Effect. In the meantime, allow me to assure you, that Nothing shall be wanting on my part, which may contribute to the Success of such an useful Design, & I beg leave in the Name of the University also to return you my Thanks. I am with the greatest Truth & Respect—my Dear Lord—your Lordship's—most obed. Humble Servant HOLLES NEWCASTLE.

1754, Oct. 14th. Horatio Walpole to Lord Townshend. Dated at Wolterton, and unaddressed.

"My Lord—I took the liberty some time since to ask the favour of Your Lrdp to communicate to me your late father's letters & papers as ambassador & Secretary of State, being employed in spending my Leisure hours to vindicate the administration in w^{ch} his Lrdp was concerned from the false & injurious calumny of the late Lrd Bolingbroke's posthumous works. I have gone so far as [to] what relates to the negotiations in 1709 & 1710, in w^{ch} Your father was Ambassador & Plenip^y signing with the D. of Marlborough; and his papers relative to that transaction in w^{ch} he had so great a share would be of great use to me in making my work more perfect & correct; the communication of them for w^{ch} I will give

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

you a receipt, & faithfully return them to Your Lrdp again, will extreamly oblige him who is with the greatest respect—My Lord—Your Lrdps—
Most obed^t & most humble Servant. H. WALPOLE.

The Rough Draft of Lord Townshend's reply to this letter is dated at Rainham Oct^r the 19th 1754, and runs as follows:—

"Sir—My Father did during his retirement here in the Country in the latter part of his Life determine to write a History of his own times; which he had entered upon, and thò he died soon after, yet as he had resolved rather to take the trouble on himself of drawing up this Historical account than to leave it to any other hand, I think that he has by such his resolution plainly signified to me his inclination and desire that these papers which he has left in my custody should not be perused or made use of by any other hand. I should otherwise have been glad to have complied with your request and am with the greatest Regard—Sir—Your most obed^t humble Servant"

1754, Oct. 17th. Rev. Dr. Yonge to Lord Townshend. Dated at Cambridge and unaddressed. Endorsed "The Vice Chancellors letter to me dated Oct. 17 1754. Rec^d on Saturday the 19th of Oct^r 1754."

"My Lord—At a meeting of the Heads [of Colleges] on tuesday last I communicated to them your Lordship's letter to me, and I have their commands to return your Lordship their thanks, and to assure your Lordship of their desire to promote all kinds of knowledge in the University. That of the Theory of Trade, how beneficial soever it may and must be to the Publick, is so entirely foreign to the present System of our Education that the introduction of it will most probably be attended with some difficulties. But as those difficulties do not lead us to decline the acceptance of your Lordship's Offer, which we for our parts are ready to receive with great gratitude, so we hope that they will be soon overcome when your Lordship's Design shall be more fully explain'd. Before I communicate this affair to the rest of the Univer^y it is my Duty to make his Grace our Chancellor acquainted with it, who is so good to us as to condescend to take into his consideration every thing that concerns the honour and Interest of the University.—I am, my Lord—Your Lordship's—most obed^t humble ser^t

P. YONGE."

1754, Oct. 26th. Lord Townshend to the Vice Chancellor of Cambridge (Dr. Yonge). In duplicate. The original draft in Lord Townshend's hand, and a corrected copy. Each 5 pp.

"Sir, I am much obliged to you for having communicated to the Heads [of Colleges] the Proposals I took the liberty of making through you to the University, and it gives me great satisfaction to hear from you that they have so entirely approved of my Motives & design in making it

The premiums I would propose to give are twenty Guineas each to the Authors of the two best Dissertations which shall be made by gentlemen of the University of any Rank or Degree upon Subjects included within the Theory of Trade, and appointed by those who shall be the Judges at the time under this Institution. The Prizes to be given according to the opinion of the Judges, and either to be delivered in money or vested in any other shape as shall be determined, previous to the execution of the design itself, at a meeting of the Heads. The Persons I should desire to name for Judges are the Vice Chancellor for the time being, the present Master of Trinity [D^r Robert Smith], the present Master of Christ's College [D^r Hugh Thomas] and two other Persons from the Body of the University to be named by me;

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

& the three first of these Judges to continue such as long as they are Heads of the University, and the two last as long as they are resident in it; reserving to myself a power, which I perceive has lately been reserved in like cases, of filling up the vacancies which shall happen I could wish the Dissertations might be wrote in the English Language and that those which carry the Prizes might be read by the Authors of them in public on a Day to be appointed near to Commencement"

1754, Nov. 3rd. Dr. Philip Yonge to Lord Townshend. Dated at Cambridge, and unaddressed.

"My Lord, I have communicated your Lordship's last favour to the Masters of Trinity and Christ's in particular, and this day in the customary speech at the expiration of the V[ice] Chan^c's office I made the senate acquainted with your Lordship's kind design. The two masters desire me to pay their compliments to your Lordship, and there seems to be no doubt of the senate's giving your Lordship a testimony of their gratitude to your Lordship as soon as my Successor shall be establish'd in his office. Doc^r Thomas will be elected, and will probably take his seat tomorrow.—I am, etc.

P. YONGE."

1754, Nov. 5th. Lord Townshend to Dr Philip Yonge. From Rainham. In duplicate. An undated rough draft in Lord Townshend's hand, and a fair copy headed "Copy of my letter to Dr Yonge." Both unsigned.

"Sir—I return you many thanks for the candor you shewed to me by [the] reception you gave to the Proposal I offered to you when Vice-Chancellor, and for the countenance you have given to it by your recommendation of it to the Senate in the customary Speech at the expiration of that Office. I likewise beg that you will be pleased to present my compliments to the two Masters, with my thanks to them for their kind acquiescence to that part of my scheme which relates more particularly to them, and am most heartily glad to find it is your opinion that the Senate will approve of what I have taken the liberty to offer as a method for introducing the Science of Trade into your University."

1755, Jan. 18th. Lord Townshend to Dr Hugh Thomas, Vice-Chancellor of the University of Cambridge. Draft in Lord Townshend's hand.

"Sir—Dr Yonge your late Vice-Chan^r having informed me, in his letter on the 3^d of Nov^r last, that he had acquainted the Senate with my late Proposal to the University in his customary Speech at the expiration of the Vice-Chan^r's Office, and that there seemed to be no doubt of the Senate's approving of it, I have some hopes that my Proposal may be received tho' I have not yet heard anything further relative to it.

There was one point left unsettled in my letters to Dr Yonge which was the nomination of the two Judges from the Body of the University: and it may not be improper I should name them now in case the University should admitt of the introduction of the Theory of Trade in the manner which has been proposed. The Persons I should desire to appoint, under the conditions which have been mentioned in my former letter to your late Vice-Chancellor, are the Reverend M^r Courtail of Clare Hall and the Reverend M^r Balguy of St John's College. I am—Sir—Your most obed^t humble Servant"

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1755, Oct. 29th. The same to the same. A draft in Lord Townshend's handwriting. Dated at Rainham.

"Sir—Mr Greaves having intimated to me that you expressed to him, when I had the honor of meeting you and several of the Heads at Fulburne, some desire that I would draw up some questions on the Theory of Trade, I have taken the liberty of sending to you the inclosed paper containing such questions on that Subject as have occurred to me.

I am very doubtfull whether these questions are so perfect as they ought to be; and do hope therefore that you will be pleased to give them no further regard than you shall find they do deserve; and I have with greater chearfulness complied with your request being satisfied from your candor that you will not think that by offering these questions to you and to the Gentlemen who have the direction of this Institution, I am presuming to dictate to those who have more knowledge and better judgement than myself. If there be any among them which can be made proper questions, such will receive your corrections, if there be not any such you will reject them all. I am with Truth—Sir Your most obed^t humble serv^t."

[The Questions enclosed].

"What influence has Trade on the Morals of a Nation?

On what circumstances does the populousness of a country principally depend?

Has a free trade or a free Government the greater effect in promoting the wealth and strength of a Nation?

Can any restraints be laid on trade or industry without lessening the advantages of them? And if there can, what are they?

Is there any method of raising taxes without prejudice to Trade? And if there is, what is it?

What are the uses of money in trade?

Is it more for the advantage of a trading nation to have regular troops or a Militia?"

1755, Nov. 15th. Capt. the Hon. Roger Townshend to his father Lord Townshend. Dated at Mitcham.

"My Lord—I did not receive your Lordship's Letter till yesterday on my return to this place after a Weeks absence & attendance on Sr John Ligonier who has acted a very sincere & friendly part towards me; I acquainted your Lordship with Sr John Ligonier's having appointed me one of his Aid[es] de Camp a favor I had no right to expect from him as I was scarcely honor'd with his Acquaintance; the many advantages that must of course arise to me in my Profession from the Friendship & Opinion of that Great Man made it of all other the most desirable Post in our present situation of Affairs. It has always been customary for General Officers to name and chuse there own Aid[e] de Camps & I don't believe there is an Instance of its ever having been refused before; to make the refusal the more cruel and severe the Duke [of Cumberland] has consented to Lord Loudon's appointing Cap^t Campbell who is in the same Regiment with me & of the same Rank & did not apply till many days after me; thus my Lord am I deprived of the same means of recommending me in my Profession which every other Cap^t in my Profession enjoys. What is the real Cause of the Duke's hatred to me I am not in the least able to guess, Sr John Ligonier asked him if my behaviour either in my profession or towards him had been disagreeable to his Royal Highness; he said he had no kind of objection to any part of my behaviour since I had been in the Army but that I positively should not be his Aid[e] de

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Camp; S^r John has been extreamly hurt at the Usage he has been treated with & has several times endeavoured to dissuade him from such barbarous behaviour but without success. The General is determined he will name no other person & the Duke is determined not to consent. It is very hard that my Brother's Quarrell with the Duke shou'd be continued to me. I was in no ways concern'd in it nor did I ever say a Word in the least tending to reflect or call in question any part of the Duke's conduct, but yet he is determined I shall not rise in my Profession. It does not become me to treat a person in his Station with that Freedom which I really think his hard Usage of me deserves; I can conclude nothing less from his Cruelty towards me but an absolute Scheme of driving me out of the Army. How much more noble wou'd it have been in a Great Man to have waited till he had caught me erring in me [sic] Profession; he might then have employed all his hatred against me without drawing upon him[self] the odious Names of Cruelty & Tyranny. Every independent Person has condemned the Duke extreamly & several of his Friends have declared they endeavor'd to persuade him from it. It is a melancoly Subject for me to think off, let me behave with ever so much Bravery & Conduct & deserve Preferment, as long as he commands I shall remain in my present Post. I honor & love the Army & the only Ambition I have in this World is to do my Duty in my Profession & [I] desire to be made an Example off if I am guilty & neglect[ful], but to be punish'd when I am conscious I am innocent is treatment every Man of spirit & honor must feel & complain off. I have troubled your Lordship with a real state of my Case S^r John Ligonier will do me the Justice to confirm it; I suffer so much at present from the Duke's treatment & my disappointment that I am afraid my Letter may be confused which I hope you will excuse; our Regiment is ordred to march on Wednesday to East Grinstead where my Company will be quartered it is in Sussex.

The House of Commons satt till Six OClock on Friday Morning M^r Pitt & many other members spoke ag^t the Address; I am much obliged to you for the 50£ Note you was so kind as to send me & am youre Dutiful Son.

ROGER TOWNSHEND."

1755, Nov. 28th. Rev. Edmund Law, D.D., Master of Peterhouse, to Lord Townshend. Dated at Peter House and unaddressed. Endorsed, under the same date, in the hand of an amanuensis, "Dr Law (Vice Chancellor of Cambridge) his letter to me approving those questions I sent."

My Lord—I received the favour of your Lordship's Letter to my Predecessor, with the Questions inclined, w^{ch} appear to be all very proper, & will I hope be properly treated of in their Season; I shall not fail to lay them before the persons appointed to determine finally on this Subject at the usual time, & do myself the honour of acquainting your Ldship with their determination, w^{ch} I don't doubt but will prove agreeable to y^r Ldships good & generous intention, & thereby be the highest satisfaction to—my Lord—your Lordships most obedient humble Serv^t

EDM. LAW."

1756, Jan. 21st. The same to the same. Dated at Peter House and unaddressed. Endorsed, under the same date, by Lord Townshend, "Dr Law (Vice Chancellor of Cambridge) his letter to me inclosing 2 printed Copy's of the Question on the Theory of Trade for the year 1756—Answered on the 26th Jan^y 1756."

"My Lord—I rec^d y^r Lordships Commands by M^r Powel[1] & immediately call'd a meeting of the Commissioners to settle the Question for

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

this year, as y^r Lordship will perceive by the inclosed, w^{ch} if it prove agreeable to y^r Lordship's intention it will be the greatest satisfaction to all the persons concern'd & in particular to—My Lord—Your Lordship's most obedient humble servant

EDM. LAW."

1756, Jan. 26th. Lord Townshend to Rev. Dr Law. Copy. Dated at Rainham, and endorsed in Lord Townshend's hand, "Copy of my letter to Dr Law Vice Chancellor of the University of Cambridge in answer to his dated Jan^y the 21st 1756 in which he sent me the printed Copy of the Question on the Theory of Trade for the [year] 1756."

"Sir—I received the favor of yours by last Post, with Two printed Copies of the Question which the judges have order'd for this year.

The ingenuousness of my temper obliges me to confess to you that I did not imagine I should be so unfortunate as to find that every one of the Questions, which I took the liberty of offering to the consideration of the Judges would be rejected by them; and that I am much disappointed to find that the question, which was placed first on the paper, was not approved of.

The Question I mean is this, what influence has Trade on the Morals of a Nation.

This is in my opinion the best Question that can be put on the subject of the Theory of Trade. I should take up too much of your time if I was now to enlarge on this Question: I shall therefore only beg leave to mention, one remark or two which occur to me upon the Question which the Gentlemen have thought proper to publish for this Year.

The first part of their Question to wit, What causes principally contribute to render a Nation populous? would, I allow, be a very proper question, if the words which follow had not been made part of the question, & what Effect has the populousness of a Nation on its Trade? and the Question without this addition would have been of the same purport with one of the Questions I sent to you, tho' expressed in different words.

The question I allude to is this. On what circumstances does the populousness of a Nation principally depend?

The Theory of Trade like all other subjects of Science must be allow'd a free and unprejudic'd inquiry.

But the Freedom of the first part of your question is destroy'd by the latter part of it. For this addition must be understood in some respects as explanatory of the former part of the question, and it likewise indicates that those, who form'd the question, are of opinion that they [sic] are more causes than one which do principally contribute to render a Nation populous, and that they apprehend that the candidates for prizes on the Theory of Trade might neglect to enlarge on that of Trade.

But suppose it be allow'd that Trade if the only cause, or one of the principal causes which contribute to render a Nation populous; does it follow that the populousness of a Nation must necessarily increase the trade of it. If Trade be the cause of the increase of people, it cannot surely properly be said that the populousness of a Nation is the Cause of Trade, for the effect can never produce its cause.

Suppose a Nation become very populous from the greater freedom it enjoys in Trade than its Neighbours are possess'd of; and let us suppose that on a Sudden these freedoms are taken away by impolitick laws which restrain their Trade, such as lay heavy burthens upon it by taxation on necessities of Life, by duties on imports and by bounties on exports, and throwing every branch of Trade into some kind of monopoly, will any one think that in such a Case the number of its people can support the Trade, or rather must not the consequence of the loss of its Freedom in Trade be a loss of its people? Is it not evident that numbers of its people must fly into other countries for employment where Trade is less incumbered and more free.

MANUSCRIPTS
TOWNSHEND
MS.

The answer therefore to the latter part of the Question viz. and what Effect has the populousness of a Nation on its Trade, seems to me to be, that it cannot necessarily have any effect at all upon its Trade.

I have here from the good wishes I have for the success of this new institution taken the Liberty to express my Thoughts to you on this question proposed for this year. You will I hope excuse this freedom and believe me to be—Sir—Your most obed^t & humble Serv^t”

[TOWNSHEND].

1756, Jan. 28th. Rev. Dr Edmund Law to Lord Townshend. Dated at Cambridge, and endorsed in Lord Townshend's hand, “Dr Law (Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge) his letter to me in answer to mine of the 26th Ins^t.”

“My Lord—I receiv'd y^r Lordship's favour of last Post with concern as it gave the parties in the Trust committed to them by your Lordship the severe mortification of perceiving how far they had fail'd in their endeavours to discharge it acceptably. As I had the honour to bear some share in this Trust, I think myself obliged to lay before y^r Lordship as plain & particular an account of our Conduct as I am able to recollect. After reading over all y^r Lordship's Propositions & the very obliging Letter w^{ch} accompany'd them, a previous Question was put whether any variation in them might be agreeable: When it was the opinion of those who appear'd to have the best means of being acquainted with y^r Lordship's real Sentiments, that such alteration w^d not give offence. We had then a long consultation on the Subject, & the first Question relating to the influence of Trade on Morals I apprehend[ed] might be postponed on acc^t of the great corruption for some time visible among the trading parts of our Nation; witness the late uproar rais'd about the general Naturalization & Jew Bills. The second Question seem'd to be pitch'd upon chiefly for its seasonableness in our present Situation, & the addition made to it in order to bring the general Design of y^r Lordship's Institution more directly & immediately in view, as well as give the greater scope to writers on this Subject, by not only explaining how far Trade sh^d be consider'd among the principal causes of well peopling a Country, but likewise shewing in what respect the number of Inhabitants must put a People on employing many of their hands that way, & thereby reciprocally of encreasing & improving the materials, & promoting the several branches of Trade by repeated Trials.—But I am not presuming to dispute these points with y^r Lordship. The Question ought undoubtedly to have been sent to your Lordship before it was published, w^{ch} omission, with any other impropriety, I hope y^r Lordship will be so good as to excuse from persons so little conversant in subjects of this kind.

I beg leave to congratulate y^r Lordship on your late recovery & am in all duty—Your Lordships—most obedient humble serv^t.

EDM. LAW.”

1756, Feb. 16th. Lord Townshend to Rev. Mr. Powell. Draft. Unsigned and unaddressed. Dated at Rainham.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

"Dear Powell—I was indebted to you for one letter, before yours of the 15th came to my hands this morning, which I should have acknowledged if I had not been unwilling to give you too frequent interruptions; and it was once my intention to send you the Vice-Chancellor's answer to my letter (which I now here enclose for your perusal) but I was afterwards of opinion that there was no necessity for giving you the trouble of a letter upon the late absurd conduct of your Vice-Chancellor, since what was done could not be prevented. I have indeed had a good deal of difficulty with my self to avoid sending the Vice-Chancellor an answer to his letter. It concerned me very much to find that the Vice-Chancellor has been pleased to insinuate in his letter that my dislike to the very absurd question which has been advertized and which contains no more than that the cause produces the effect and the effect the cause, arises from my being displeased that the questions I sent were rejected; tho I had expressed in my letter which accompanied them, my assent that they should be corrected or rejected as the judges should think most proper.

What I said in my last letter to the Vice-Chancellor was that I thought myself unfortunate that all my questions should be rejected; and I cannot see, with great submission to his sentiments, why the circumstance of my having expressed myself in this manner, as I did in the letter which accompanied the questions, should make it improper in me to give any opinion on the question they have fixed on? or that there is any inconsistency in my conduct under any construction. I say'd correct any of the questions or reject them all as you shall judge most proper; will the Vice-Chancellor suppose that, when I wrote this, I could imagine that any one of my questions would have been so altered as to be made nonsense or that they would all be rejected for to give place for a more improper question than any of them?" etc. etc.

1756, May 22nd. Rev. R. Browne to Lord Townshend. Dated at Walton. Asking to be appointed to the living of Hanbury which will shortly be vacant by Dr Horberry's acceptance of a college living.

1756, June 2nd. Lord Middleton to Lieut.-Colonel the Hon. George Townshend. Dated at Wollaton.

"S^r—I am concerned for the occasion of your letter, having been in hopes peace would have subsisted in the neighbourhood of Tamworth this whole parliament, and as your's and Lord Weymouth's interest seem'd, for I was much a stranger to the transaction, to unite in the last election the change of the Uncle for the Nephew [Viscount Villiers in the seat of Thomas Villiers] I should have conjectur'd would have made no alteration in the agreement. I have no property in the town, nor ever cultivated any interest by purchase near it having no other view than being a promoter of unanimity among my acquaintance, and by having now resided so many years at Wollaton my influence in the place is not worth requesting; but small as it is in case of opposition it must go in conjunction with my old friends who I suspect will not be forgetfull of Mr Floyer's hard fate [at the Tamworth election in 1741]. I am with great regard" etc.

1756, June 11th. "A copy of a Letter to Lord Jersey upon the affairs of Tamworth." Dated at Audley Square.

"My Lord

When I had the Honour to see you at my House you seemed to desire I would give your Lordship no vexatious Opposition at Tamworth, to which I very readily assented & further declared I would inform your Lordship as early as possible with my Determination with respect to the ensuing Election—I came to Town last night and can assure your Lordship that notwithstanding the appearance of an Agreement made at the last Election at Tamworth with respect to future Vacancies—totally without my Knowledge and tending to prevent my Family Interest from having the least Weight there, yet my Lord, as I do not now intend to oppose Lord Villars [Villiers], I have avoided any Measures which may put him or his Friends to any Trouble or Expence.

MARQUES
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

I hope your Lordship will do me the Justice to believe me when I assure you that altho' I cannot concur in the measure as settled, yet that I rejoice in any Circumstance which gives so much Satisfaction to one from whom I have received so many Civilities, & for whom I have so much regard & respect, & am My Lord—y^r Lords^{ms}—Most obed^t Humble Serv^t

GEO: TOWNSHEND."

1756, June 11th. Lord Jersey to Lieut.-Colonel the Hon. George Townshend. Dated at Grosvenor Square—"6 o'clock Afternoon."

"My dear Sir—I no sooner received your most obliging letter of this morning than I endeavoured to pay my Acknowledgements in Person. They are so warm, & so sincere as I can't forbear conveying them by this the most likely Opportunity first to reach you; I know nothing that may have passed on former Elections, but I have many reasons to rejoice that there is to be no Opposition on this; They are not altogether selfish, but regard families that I must ever esteem, and not only families, but Persons; particularly Lord Weymouth and your self; It may be improper for me to say more at present than that I have the highest Value for you both, & to assure you which I do with the greatest truth that I am with the most friendly regard—Your obliged & faithfull humble Serv^t—

JERSEY."

1756, June 24th. Rev. D^r Law to Lord Townshend. Dated at Peter House and endorsed by Lord Townshend "D^r Law Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge his letter to me—Received and Answ^d on the 26th June 1756."

"My Lord—I have the pleasure to acquaint your Lordship that your Lordship's prizes for this year are adjudged to [the Rev.] M^r [William] Bell of Magdalen College, & S^r Lobb of S^t Peter's College, whose Dissertations shall be transmitted to your Lordship as soon as they have been read before the University. There were nine in all & several very good ones, w^{ch} your Lordship may at any time command from—My Lord—Your Lordship's most obedient humble Serv^t EDMUND LAW."

1756, June 26th. Lord Townshend to Rev. D^r Law. Endorsed "Copy of my Answer to D^r Law Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge letter to me dated the 24th Inst."

Sir—I received your Letter of the 24th Inst this morning, and shall in answer only mention in a few words that when you, the Vice Chancellor of Cambridge, did in your letter of the 28th of Jan^y last seem to charge me with inconsistency of conduct and did mention in that letter, that the first question relating to the influence of Trade on Morals might as you apprehend be postpon'd on account of the great corruption for some time visible among the trading ports of our Nation; witness the late uproar raised about the general Naturalization & Jew Bills, I did resolve to let the Institution drop so far as I have been concern'd in it and to give my self no further trouble about it, you need not therefore give yourself the trouble of transmitting to me the two Prize Dissertations.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

There is not any moral Duty which is not of a Commercial nature. Freedom of Trade is nothing more than a freedom to be moral Agents. And since a free moral Inquiry into this most interesting Theory, on the Observance of which the happiness of this Life and of the next do entirely depend, cannot be allow'd at your University I have done, and have nothing more to add than that I am—S^r—Your obdt humble Serv^t."

1756, Oct. 22nd. Richard Dacres to Lord Townshend. Dated at Gibraltar and endorsed "Rich^d Dacres Letter to me from Gibraltar acquaint[ing] me that he had embarked my barb Horse on board the Rising Sun for England, and likewise inclos'd a Bill for Charges [of] keeping at Gibraltar from April 1756 to [the] time the Horse was embarked."

"My Lord—I have the honour to acquaint your Lordship that I have embarked on board a Transport Ship called the Rising Sun, Daniel Peak Master, an Iron Grey Barb Horse for your Lordship, being the same which was purchased long since by M^r Petticrew, & left in my charge by [Lieut.] Gen^l [Thomas] Fowke [Governor of Gibraltar] at his departure from hence. I used all possible efforts to get him a passage on board a Man of War, but found it impracticable, and indeed I think he is safer where he is, by being in a large commodious Ship, under Convoy, and were he in a Man of War he must run the Risque of being thrown overboard in case of meeting an Enemy. He is embarked in extreme good order, & has excellent Accomodations aboard, & I much hope that he will arrive safe & prove entirely to your Lordship's satisfaction

In the same Ship with your Lordship's Horse I have embarked a Mare for H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, & a horse for M^r Thistlewayte of Hampshire, and the Man who has the care of them home, & who is named Thomas Bicknell is to return to Gibraltar immediately after he has delivered them. I have made no Bargain with him for his Time & Trouble, but have left that matter entirely to the Owners of the Horses.

It will give me great Satisfaction to hear that the Horse is safely delivered into your Lordships hands, & meets your Approbation, after the great Sums and frequent disappointm^{ts} which I am sensible he has cost; and if your Lordship will be pleased at any time to honor me with your Commands I shall be proud of the opportunity of shewing with how much Respect & Attention I have etc.

RICH^d. DACRES."

Same date. A copy of the above letter, endorsed "1757—March the 25th—A copy of Richard Dacres letter the original of which was sent this day to Mess^{rs} James & Tho^s Tierney Merch^{ts} in Mark Lane."

1757, March 8th. William Fitz-herbert to the Hon. George Townshend. Dated at Boyle Street, Dublin.

Enclosing the writer's views on the Militia.

1757, March 19th. Thomas Bicknell to Lord Townshend.

"My Lord.—I am the Person orderd over from Gibraltar to take under my care a Barbary Mare belonging to the Prince of Wales and a horse of the same Country for your Lordship having from the 18th October to the 31st of January continually had the Inspection and care of your Lordships Horse. The necessary expenses as to Feeding &c. I have been paid for being so much out of my own Pocket, but my Care Trouble and attendance I humbly beg leave to refer to your Lordships Goodness and Generosity. Any Commands of your Lordship may be directed for me at L^t General Fowkes in South Audley Street which will be most gratefully remembered by my Lord your Most Humbly Obedient Servant,

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSB.

THOS. BICKNELL."

June 18th, 1757. William Pitt, afterwards Earl of Chatham, to the Hon. George Townshend.

"Dear Sir,

Tho I can have nothing to inform you of relating to the Duke of Newcastle's transactions, in order to a junction, which you are not acquainted with from his Grace, I should be extremely happy of an opportunity to have some conversation with You, on a Subject, which but just now has taken its final and conclusive turn, and must receive a Negative or Affirmative Answer. The D. of Newcastle and Lord Hardwicke have repeatedly declared to Lord Bute and myself that They could add nothing to the efforts already made with regard to the Points of difficulty, now immoveable and in their express Opinions, necessary to be comply'd with, as neither They nor their Friends are disposed to resist any further. I am obliged to be at home on business to morrow morning, which, I hope, will be my Apology for taking the liberty to propose to you so great a trouble, as that of calling at my House to morrow between ten and eleven, if it be not inconvenient to you to do me that honour. I am ever with the truest esteem and respect.

Dear Sir

Your most obedient and most humble Servant
W. PITT."

Friday 7 o'clock.

This letter is endorsed with the following memorandum in the handwriting of the Hon^{ble} George Townshend:—

"N.B: This was the first time for about a fortnight I had heard any thing from M^r Pitt, during which time the Negotiation for a Ministry went on in his & L^d Bute's the D[uke of] Newcastle's & Lord Hardwicke's Hands.—On the Friday night June the 18th 1757, I received this Letter & the next morning waited on him with my Brother, & to our Astonishment heard him avow the ridiculous & dishonest Arrangement of Men which is now to take place—not the least adoption of any Publick System of Measures being declared or even hinted at by him.

Upon this occasion I without hesitation declared my resolution to be no part of it—my Brother did the same.

GEO: TOWNSHEND."

London, June 20th 1757.

1757, Nov. 6th. Capt. the Hon. Roger Townshend to his father. Dated at Winchester and unaddressed.

My Lord—I received your Lordship's kind Letter with the inclosed Bill of 50£. on M^r Child for which I beg you to accept of my most sincere thanks. The Letter you was so kind as to write to me before I went on our late unfortunate & disgraceful Expedition [to Westphalia], with the enclosed Note I did not receive 'til I was on board the Man of War & had no opportunity of acknowledging the receipt of it. I appropriated it to the use it was intended for & discharged my Serv^t, & I give your Lordship my word of honor that I will in every respect adhere & keep to that Scheme of Oeconomy which I know is absolutely necessary for my own happiness & will I hope recommend me to your Lordship's favor and opinion.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

I beg leave to declare myself intirely ignorant of my late servant's conduct concerning the Old Chesnut horse, your kindness to me on every occasion if I have a spark of gratitude in my composition, must make it impossible for me to act so low & base a part; I hope extravagance has been my greatest Crime, & as I have suffer'd & know that it was you alone that freed me from my misfortunes, it would be unpardonable conduct in me towards your Lordship, if the business of my life was not to follow that Plan lay'd down by you & do everything in my power that was most agreeable to you.

I've parted with the 2 Mares & the Brown Gelding, I did not recollect when I sent my Servant your mentioning the Chestn^t horse was disposed off. I can easily furnish myself with a strong horse & that with the Black Colt will be all I shall keep.

An Inquiry is much talked off into the Conduct of our General [the Duke of Cumberland] that commanded our late Expedition [in Westphalia], it was well named the secret Expedition, for without a real & honest Inquiry takes place it will ever remain a secret to me.

Our going to America early in the spring seems at present to be believed. I cou'd wish for a better. A commission eight years a Captain is being very much out of luck, but however if they will not prefer me I can't help it, and must be contented to go upon another Expedition with the Buffs.—Your Dutiful Son.

RO : TOWNSHEND."

1758, Feb. 12th. The same to the same. Dated on board the Namure and unaddressed.

"My Lord—The ships are ready and Admiral Boscawen came on board last night, we wait only for a fair Wind; the Ships orderd to sail with us are, Namure, Adm^l Boscawen; Royal William 90 Guns, Princess Amelia 80, Invincible 74, Lancaster 74, Vanguard 74 to join us at Plymouth, Prince of Orange 64, Centurion 60, Burford 74, Eight winterd at Halifax [in Nova Scotia], several are already gone with convoys; when the whole Fleet is collected together it will amount to 24, Sail of the Line besides Frigates; a Fleet superior to anything the French can fit out.

I have been apply'd too by a friend of mine to solicit your Lordship in his favour, for a Scarfe, when you have a vacancy; his name is Derby he lives at Winchester, if you are not under Engagements to any other person Mr Derby will think himself highly honor'd & infinitely obliged to your Lordship for the Scarfe. I know him to be a worthy good Man & I should be happy in obtaining him this favor of your Lordship

Your Dutiful Son

RO : TOWNSHEND."

1758, Sept. 26th. Hon. Charles Townshend to his mother.

"My dear Lady Townshend,—Your Ladyship has heard from my Brother Townshend that he has been so kind to us as to call at Adderbury in his journey from Bristol to London; and, tho' his visit was short, it was long enough to manifest, what I was very happy to find, that he never was in better health or spirits. The success of the Militia in every County in which it has been at all countenanced, & the notorious opposition or contempt of the L^d Lieutenant in every County in which it has been ill received or forgotten, fully proves how indifferent at least, if not favorable, the general opinion of the kingdom is to the measure; which I should hardly have mentioned to your Ladyship,

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

if the measure itself were not the Child of your Son ; which I know from most pleasing experience, is a consideration of great & irresistible weight in your judgment. George seems more intent upon his command in the army than ever I saw him : The retreat of his formidable & abdicated Enemy [the Duke of Cumberland] ; the disreputation of almost all the senior officers hitherto employed, & the infinite Honor naturally bestowed upon commanders successful in this perilous time all unite in indulging & inflaming his original Genius & uncommon Talents for the army.

He seems also to be not a little urged & accelerated by the quick rise & very promising prospect of preferment & command now opening to Roger ; whose situation must improve every day, as his ability grows from experience ; opportunitys occur from his situation ; and advancement follows from his service. General Amhurst speaks of his diligence, attention, & capacity in the most favorable language, & I should do him injustice if I did not acknowledge, how much he is likely hereafter to make a very considerable figure in a profession, whose importance & necessity grows too fast upon us in this Country.

I learn from Lady Essex's letters to Lady Dalkeith that she lives entirely with Lady Ferrers at Bristol : Lady Ferrers gives the same account of their intimacy in her letters ; which I only mention without comment ; entreating you not to construe my words, til I see you, & from a desire of obviating prejudice, not affecting disguise.

Last week we sent you some venison & two Pineapples ; did they arrive safe, or where (sic) they good ?

Lady Jane Scott left us on Sunday ; as she came, she went, oppressed, unintelligible, wretched, healthy & whimsical, a monstrous appetite : good nights : occasional unguarded cheerfulness, & premeditated spleen & despondency are certainly no proofs of real illness & yet these are all the symptoms of it she has. I wish she is not in danger of a complaint still worse than ill health.

A thousand thanks to you for the many Gazetts you have sent us : They are infinitely agreeable to us, and most so, as they are testimonies of your affection : which is, in the estimation of us both, the most valuable possession we have or can enjoy in life.

If I have in any thing a real satisfaction it is in acknowledging the happiness I have in your affection & in saying in return how sincerely & invariably I am—Your most affectionate & faithful

C. T.

[P.S.] Lady Dalkeith bids me say for her whatever words can say in declaring her love & Honor for you."

1759, July 23rd. Charles Burney to Philip Case. Dated at Lynn and endorsed, " Mr Burney to Mr Case about Musick."

" Sir,

I fear I shall not be able to propose any useful hints as to the Furniture of the Barrel Organ you mentioned to me, unless I was informed what Stops it contained, what is its Compass, together with the Size & Number of its Barrels. However I will suppose it capable of performing the following Pieces, w^{ch} in the serious Way w^d if well adapted to the Instrument afford great pleasure to the admirers of such Compositions.

1. Corelli's 8th Concerto (or the favourite movem^t in it).
2. He was despised & rejected—in Handel's Messiah.
3. Powerful Guardian—set by Dr.
4. Return O God of Hosts—in Samson.
5. Tis Liberty alone—in Judas Maccabeus.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSB.

6. Handel's Second Organ Concerto, or Part of it.
7. Geminiani's 1st Concerto op. 2^{da}, or Do.
8. King of Prussia's March.
9. March of the 3^d Regiment of Guards.
10. Hasse's 1st Concerto.
11. Rendé mi il Figlio mio, del Sig^r Cocchi, nel Ciro riconosciuto.
12. The Symphony & last Movem^t of Handel's Coronation Anthem.

If these Compositions or any Part of them should be approved & practicable, it will be necessary to have them judiciously suited & adjusted to the Genius of the Organ & filled up with such Simphonies & accompanym^{ts} as will best compensate for the Want of a Voice in the Songs or a Number of Instruments in the other Pieces.—I am, Sir,—Your Most Obed^t & Most Humble Servant,

CHAS. BURNBY."

1759, Nov. 27th. Judith Irving to Lord Townshend? Unaddressed.

A letter asking his Lordship for his interest in procuring promotion for the writer's husband Major Irving.

1759, Feb. 15th. Robert Johnson to the Hon. George Townshend. Dated at Sandy, Bedfordshire.

"Sir,—When I purchas'd M^r Long's Estate at Cavenham in Suffolk, he told me you had given your consent to inclose a small piece of ground that lay between two of my Closes near the house; but as I am now become the proprietor and have some thoughts of putting that Scheme in Execution, [I] don't think myself sufficiently justify'd to take out a writ to do it, without acquainting you therewith and haveing your farther permission for that purpose. If there is any thing I can do for you in that Country or elsewhere, please to command, your very assured Humble Ser^t Rt. JOHNSON."

1760, Dec. 2nd. Edward Weston to Lord Townshend. Dated at Scotland Yard, and unaddressed.

"My Lord—Having long been solicited by M^r Case my deputy in the Office of Clerk of the Peace [for Norfolk], who I understand is honoured with Y^r L^{ds} particular Regard, to surrender that Place to him; As the Value of it to me is of late years so greatly lessened, (partly by the Decay of Business, & partly by the Claim of my said Deputy to Fourscore Pounds p^a ann. out of the Profits, in lieu of 50 or 60, for which he long executed the Office) that it has brought-me-in this last year no more than 19rd; I have at last determined to comply with those solicitations. And, as I am obliged to y^r L^{ds} for the long Enjoyment, which I have had of it, I think it incumbent on me to acquaint you with my Resignation, hoping it will not be disagreeable to you, & taking the same Opportunity to return my sincerest Thanks to Your L^{ds} for so great a Mark of your Favour, & to assure you that I am with the greatest Gratitude, as well as Respect, & shall be always—My Lord—Your L^{ds}—Most obliged, and most obedient humble Servant

E. WESTON."

1761, May 15th. A receipt for a "Moiety of the Expences of the [Norfolk] County Election 1st April 1761."

It begins:—"To 63 Staffmen and Chairmen at 10^s each;" and ends:—"Paul Ald[erman] Rogers your Subscription to the Norwich roads 10.10.0, and ends "Total 102.5.6" with the following receipt at foot.

"1761. May 15th. Rec^d of the right hon^{ble} Geo: Townshend by the hands of M^r Cha^s Townshend One hundred and two Pounds five Shillings and Sixpence in full of the Contents by me

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

NOCKOLD TOMPSON."

1764, Feb. 12th. Lieut. William Brograve, R.N. (commanding the Albany Sloop in Portsmouth Harbour) to the Hon. George Townshend.

The writer begs General Townshend to use his influence so that he may sail in the Albany, or in a larger ship, under the orders of Admiral [Sir George] Pocock [K.B.], on the Expedition then on foot [for the capture of the Havanna].

March 2nd, 1763. Lord Townshend to his son Charles. Draft, dated at Rainham.

"Dear Charles—You may remember that about the beginning of last Dec^r upon reading the paragraph in the General Evening Post, which informed the Public of your Resignation of your former Place, I immediately wrote you a letter from Balls expressing my joy and congratulations to you on that wise guiding of your self, as you did by this act put your self into that state of indepen[den]cy which was necessary to enable you to act that truly patriotic part which your country seemed more immediately to call for at that time. If I contradicted the general forms of behavior which prevail at this time in troubling you with a letter on that accasion and it be not the mode now for a Parent to shew any concern for the welfare and happiness of his Son, you acted like a man of fashion in taking no notice to me of that letter and in preserving that silence towards me, which had been observed by you towards me for a considerable time before I wrote that letter and which you have not broke through.

As I am too old to alter and cannot easily extirpate that Parental concern and affection, which, by a long indulgence of them, are deeply rooted in my heart, you will I hope forgive me that I do now trouble you again, tho^t not with that joy which attended my other letter, with a transcript of a paragraph out of the North Briton of Saturday last which is as follows, viz.

That great reformer of abuses, the new Whig head of the board of Trade, has just condescended to stipulate for an additional Salary without Power, as the price of his support of this Tory government. I am—Dear Charles—Yours most affec^t" 1763, May 24th. Rev. T. O. Young to the Hon. George Townshend. Dated at Caius College Cambridge.

"Dear Sir—I have not been able to purchase one of the Caricatura's of Wilk[e]s—They are only at the Coffee houses—A Printseller has promis'd me two by to morrow night. If he does not disappoint me, you shall receive them on Saturday.

I am, Dear Sir, your most affectionate and faithful servant

T. O. YOUNG."

1763, June 2nd. Hon. George Townshend "To M^r Otley at the Angel, St Edmunds Bury, Suffolk." Dated at Newmarket.

The writer begs Mr Otley to hand the enclosed letter to a Serjeant or Corporal of the Norfolk Militia who would call for it.

1764, March 17th. Colby Bullock to George fourth Viscount Townshend (afterwards first Marquis Townshend). Dated at Shipdam and unaddressed. Endorsed "M^r Bullock on his appointment of Executor to the late Lord's Will."

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

"My Lord—The sense of the obligation and Duty I owed to Your Lordship's Father when living, will I hope excuse the liberty I now take of expressing my very sincere and deep concern to you at his Death. . . . Mr Case informs me of your having seen the Will, which I have not yet done, nor shall do, 'till I am assured from Your Lordship of your consenting to my acting in it. If my Name and Agency therein receive your approbation, it will be my constant endeavour to cooperate with the other Gentlemen in the best manner I can of performing the Trust reposed in us ; but if your Lordship shall on any account judge me to be improper, I shall without reluctance decline all concern in a Business, to which Obedience to the deceased Lord's commands is the sole motive I can have of proceeding to take my share in it."

1764, April 30th. Hon. Charles Townshend to the Duke of Newcastle. Dated at Grosvenor Square. [Copy.]

My dear Lord—I have this Evening the Honour of Your Grace's Letter, which is writ upon so many very interesting Subjects that I am not able to resist the desire it has raised in me of speaking my Sentiments fully to Your Grace, tho' with the utmost deference.

Your Grace's knowledge of the World and great experience in public business necessarily make me distrust any opinion of mine from which you differ ; yet, upon further Reflection, I have not found reason to change the Idea I lately expressed to you of the temper, character and deadness of the Time we live in. Recollect, My Lord, the ingratitude you have yourself met with : the desertion of the Majority of the Whiggs ; the many great names and Familys who have abandoned all Union from obligation and consanguinity, upon the frivolous distinction of supporting the Person of the King : the successful attack made upon the freedom of the Press : the quiet reception of every Act of Violence offered to Persons and to Things, and the perfect state of tranquility in the City and in the Counties which now seemingly takes place under a Ministry, lately so odious, and still so rash :—Are not these proofs that the national Temper is subdued ? That Opposition, by so often deceiving, has lost the power of raising Confidence ? And that indifference and distrust are become habitual and general ? I wish any degree of Spirit, Care or Attention were able to reform this Error, or to awaken Men to a Sense of Danger, but I expect it not, and, I should disguise, if I did not frankly confess to you that I despair of any such Revolution.

Your Grace seems to regret that a stand was not made upon the unjustifiable treatment of our Friend the Duke of Devonshire ; I had not, at that time, the Honour of being in His Grace's Confidence, and therefore I know not what he himself wished ; but, certainly the gradual overthrow of the Whiggs at Court was too quietly submitted to in the several preliminary steps, and could never, in my opinion, have been completed, if it had been at first resisted. Each separate personal injury was, I fear, too far considered as an individual case, whereas, if the very first Attempt had been made a common Cause, the defence of the whole would probably have been not difficult. I agree with your Grace, that the Minority, in defiance of all Disadvantages, made the Ministry and the Crown look pale upon their Numbers in one part of the last Session, and it is now said perseverance and activity would have given Success. Perhaps this may be true ; but, if it be, what was the sudden and secret Cause which slackned their Activity ? Some impute it to jealousy ; but to jealousy in whom, and of whom ? others to inattention ; these to disunion, and those to want of suitable and interesting Questions of Business. As to the Visit to Cambridge, I know how loudly I have been condemned for that absence; but, My Lord! such loose Censure does not even dwell upon me; especially when it comes from Men with whom I have acted voluntarily, not by compact; from Opinion, not Obligation, and who have no right to circumscribe any one Sentiment or direct any one Action of my political conduct: in whose Plans I had originally no participation, whose Systems I am not bound to adopt, and to whom I stand, in no Sense, nor any degree accountable. Let them distribute their wild Panegyric and Censure over their Glass as Wine warms and Prejudice dictates; I shall still, unmortified by their harmless disapprobation, be ever pleased with having obeyed your Commands, and endeavoured at least to assist my Friend Lord Hardwick and his Family at Cambridge. I say this as often as I hear it, which is almost every Day, from some of our most zealous Friends who continually speak of this Event, either in direct Terms of blame, or by insinuations which are more offensive.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

The Duke of Devonshire and Lord Rockingham have done me the Honour of dining with me this Day, but we were not alone, and our Conversation was at large. Your Grace hoped something would have been settled, and you see the necessity of a Summer Plan preparatory to the Winter. I have said this: but my Idea goes farther, and you will forgive me if in this critical Minute, perhaps the last of deliberation I should open my Mind freely; in the language of a Man who would bring things to a decision; and who, being at liberty to act as his judgement advises, waits for the communication of such a systematical and probable Plan as may induce and justify those who shall again embark.

For myself, I am of Opinion, My Lord, that the Minority should be strengthened, if it can be done upon proper Terms, by a connexion with Lord Bute, or with Lord Holland, or by the reconciling Lord Temple and Mr Pitt with Mr Grenville. Because I think the Party in the House of Lords is weak, in the Court, odious, and in itself not sufficient to success; at least with this Parliament, when there is only one Court, so young a King; at the close of an unpopular War, and in an Age of extravagance, indigence, immorality, and indifference.

I presume not to enter into the reciprocal aversions and late resentments which may be to be considered under this Head; too new in the Confidence of Your Grace and the Duke of Devonshire, and too much a stranger to the Voice of the Duke of Cumberland, to venture upon so private a Subject; I only express my wish, and presume to suggest what I think expedient and necessary to give opposition, force.

Could both of the former of these be done, or (which I still more wish) could the Family reconciliation be accomplished, the next Thing would be to review the Minority and to allot to particular Men their separate Departments in speaking to individuals; from which revisal and explanation it would be learnt how far late inactivity has lessened Numbers, what may be hoped upon another Trial, and what Assistance is requisite.

To gain upon the Minds of the People a Daily Paper, upon the Plan of one of the present Prints, should be set up, and circulated, diligently, but quietly; and two good Pens should be employed to write from Materials, suggested by Men of Knowledge, and subject to their inspection. Some leading Men in each Town through the several Counties should be admitted to Confidence, and be persuaded to give their Clubs and Districts the Tone of Conversation, recommended from hence.

A Committee should be appointed to consider and prepare Heads of Business for the next Winter, and in one Word the Kingdom should be kept warm, and the Chiefs attentive and laborious during the recess.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Mr William Baker should be desired to put the City in motion, both as an Example to other Counties, and as an attack nearest home.

Your Grace will perhaps say, this is mighty well : but reconciliations with Lord Bute or Lord Holland, and the restoring of Harmony between warm and alienated Relations are all impossible, and I shall believe it upon your Testimony ; presuming only to add, that if that be the case, I should apprehend the Minority, unable, as it now stands, to break the Ministry, unwilling to accept the only Allies useful or necessary, and composed of parts not perfectly united, may possibly not much advance in another Session ; weakened by the conclusion of the last, perhaps lessened in Numbers, certainly in public opinion : No general Warrants to arraign : no extraordinary Measures, and no ground of Debate but the Army, the Navy and the several disputable Speculations which may occur about the State of the Debt and the Condition of Public Credit.

I must again beg Pardon for taking up so much of your Time, but my mind is full both of matter and anxiety. I could not resist the Impression, and it is perhaps right I should take an Opportunity of saying not only what, but all I think to Your Grace. My View in doing it is honest, for I profess I wish to see decision, and have long tried to enforce that Doctrine. As things now stand, the Ministry are strong, the Minority not in strength or reputation : Lord Bute forced to keep neutrality at least, and the public grown familiarized to an Administration they see so little opposed : Mr Legge I fear will not recover : Mr Pitt seems withdrawn into himself, and retired to his Family and Amusements : other Men act as they did, seldom seen and inexplicit, while the Ministry diligently pick up Individuals every day who see no other prospect, nor hear of any other Union. For my own part, I prefer, it is evident, the Characters, Claims and Interests of those I have voluntarily supported to those of all other Men, and, if any hope should remain of Success, there is no situation or advantage I would not again risque or sacrifice ; but, My Lord, it must be [with] a reasonable hope of success, resulting from Union, Plan, Activity and Strength. I am far from being in a Condition to make even this prudent, after my Family disappointments and the little favour I have ever met with from former Administrations, but there is nothing I would not do to support those I prefer upon a System which has in it any Evidence of real concert, consistent Plan, and solid grounds of Strength. I have now suggested the Means which have occur'd to me, but I am as open to consider any other, and only dread the loss of more time in more broken Consultations, imperfect Plans, and indecisive Seasons. Let me add, that the generous manner in which Mr Pitt behaved to the whole Party last Year, his Name, his Weight, his Talents all make his concurrence a necessary part of any Union ; and I should very much fear any Plan would be found ineffectual, which had not both the lustre of Mr Pitt's accession to it, and the declared and active support of Lord Hardwick's Family, few Men in this Country being equal to Mr Yorke in that Importance, which I thank God still results from Abilities, Integrity, and Independence.

I will certainly wait upon Your Grace at Clermont, and the Duke of Devonshire says he will bring me.

The Bishop of London [Dr Sheldon] is expected to die every Minute, and Warburton is declared to be his Successor. Lord Sandys has accepted a Pension of £1,500 a Year which he consented to take on Condition he was permitted to draw up the Reasons of the Grant, which Privilege of drawing his Nightcap over his Eyes was, I believe, never refused to any Deserter at his Execution.

I beg my Compliments to the Duchess of Newcastle: I have just seen Conway who will dine with your Grace at Claremont on Friday, if we should learn from the Duke of Devonshire that Your Grace approves of that Day."

1765, June —. A receipted bill for wine.

Lady Townshend is debtor to John Cole and paid 7s. for four bottles of Port wine and 3s. 6d. for two bottles of Lisbon.

1765, Aug. 2nd. George Shirley to Lord Townshend. Dated at Lower Eatington.

"My D^r Lord—By a Messenger from Tamworth who arrived here last night at 11 o'clock, I rec^d the enclosed, & an other from L^d Aylesford expressing his great inclination that M^r Smith shou^d be in your Lordship's interest. His Lordship's letter to me I have sent to M^r Willington by the return of the Messenger, & shall follow it this evening . . . I have seen M^r Meacham of Stratford whose brother is with us, & he tells me his father in law, who is concern'd for Lord Weymouth, thinks his Lordship's interest much lessen'd by the present Contest, & has no hopes of success"

1765, Oct. 29th. An Agreement between Lord Townshend and Lord Weymouth concerning the Burgh of Tamworth. [Dated at Grendon Hall.]

In Consideration of the present Contest against M^r [Edward] Thurlow the Candidate upon the Mannour Interest being dropt, and of Lord Townshend's concurring in his Election; Lord Weymouth agrees that upon Lord Townshend and M^r Luttrell contributing each Five Hundred Pounds towards it, Lord Weymouth will provide a Seat in and during the next Parliament for a Person to be named by Lord Townshend; that such Seat shall be found for [sic] Weobly, unless Lord Weymouth can purchase another certain Seat, in which Case Lord Townshend and Lord Weymouth are to pay in equal Proportions so much of the Price of it, as shall be given on the Score of securing Re-Elections:

But if the Seat shall be found at Weobly, in case of the Death of Lord Townshend's member at Tamworth, the Member he shall have named for Weobly shall vacate his Seat.

It is further agreed that Lord Weymouth will use his Interest to fill up one half of the Corporation with Lord Townshend's friends, as soon as can be done with Security and Convenience to the United Interest.

[Signed] TOWNSHEND [and] WEYMOUTH. Witness[es] ROB. BERTIE [and] S. STANTON.

Same date. An election agreement, dated at Grendon Hall.

"An agreement between Lord Townshend, M^r Luttrell, and the Under-written, relative to the Borough of Tamworth;

M^r Luttrell and his Friends who now support the Castle Interest engage in Consideration of Lord Townshend naming M^r Luttrell in that Interest at the next General Election to support henceforth the Nomination of the two Members which shall be recommended by the Manour and the Castle thereby to promote the future Tranquility of the Town by resisting any third Interest.

But it is understood and agreed that in Case M^r Luttrell should happen to die during the next Parliament the Nomination of a Member to succeed him shall fall intirely to Lord Townshend.

[Signed] TOWNSHEND; J. LUTTRELL; S. PIPE; J. OLDERSHAW; Jⁿ^o WILLINGTON. Witness[es] ROB. BERTIE [and] S. STANTON.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

1766, Jan. 8th. Draft letter of Lord Townshend to Mr Whiston
Dated at Rainham.

"Mr Whiston

Your Sincerity & Integrity makes me desirous of preserving your Acquaintance, and the promise you made me of communicating your Observations upon the Necessities of the Poor, & the means of relieving them, affords me an occasion of giving you these Assurances.

By a friend of Tamworth, I have this opportunity of repeating my good Wishes to you; It is the more agreeable to me because no Election depending, it cannot be so directly interpreted as an interested Compliment, an Influence I know your honest Heart disdains; but when I confess my Desire to consult you for the Sake of Thousands & to derive assistance from you in many Instances which perhaps my Rank cannot so easily procure, I am sure you will readily contribute, & you may be assured that I will not only most earnestly consider the Lights which you may afford me upon this Subject; but that I will either apply them myself, or recommend them to others of more Ability in such a Manner, as may contribute to the Success of that Measure which every honest & humane Man ought most devoutly to wish.

The Distress of the Poor in this Country is certainly a Circumstance which reflects the greatest disgrace to [the] Honour of this Great Country, and occasions the most radical National Imbecillity. Both as Christians & Legislators it cries out against us; whoever can adjust & establish this great Point will deserve more Honour than Twenty Modern Cato[']s with as many admiring Senates at his Heels. If I am not mistaken the American Colonies have in 25 Years doubled the Number of their Inhabitants from G^t Brittain (I exclude Foreigners entirely in the Computation) How many more have starved here that might have work'd there! or at home? Luxury among one part & Misery with the Other is daily expelling our Inhabitants by Thousands & then we are surprised that our Empire should be moving.

Adieu my worthy friend I heartily wish you & y^r Family, all health & shall allways be happy to be of use to you & to them.

Yr friend & Wellwisher

TOWNSHEND."

1766, June 5. Hunt Walsh to Lord Townshend. Dated at Dublin, and unaddressed.

..... As to the state of our Politicks, we have had a variety of Disputes during the course of this Sessions, which have probably made a greater noise on your side of the water, than they have upon the Spot. The Patriots began the Sessions with a Minority of about ten, but on the Address to His Majesty for limiting the time of our Parliaments sitting, they mustered above ninety, and upon several other motions had between fifty and sixty, a great matter of Debate among us rises from a power our privy Council assumes of stopping our Bills, and not letting them go to England after they passed our House; the Parliament do not allow there is any Law for this. Sir William Osborne, and Mr Flood, are the chief in the Opposition and are certainly very able Men, we are fond of imitating our Neighbours, and set up for great asserters of liberty. By the last Packet there is a report that you are to succeed Lord Rochford at Madrid, if so we can not expect to have the Pleasure of seeing you here for some years. I am, my Lord" etc.

1766, June 21st. Castell? Bacon to the same. Dated at Elcham.

"My dear Lord,

I beg'd y^r L^dship in my last Letter that You would be so good as to give me a Hurdle of old Hounds to hunt the Otter. The

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Bearer is the Person, who is to look after the Hounds & therefore if You can supply me with a Hurdle, please to order them to be delivered to him.

I am very much obliged to You for the Intelligence You sent me, & I dare say, that You will very soon be sent for to the Queen's House.

I see by the Gazette that L^d Granby is no longer L^d Lieut. of Derbyshire, for I thought he would have been continued in it at least, 'till the Duke of Devonshire was of Age.

C. BACON.

1766, June 24th. Dingley Ashham to the same. Dated at Conington, and unaddressed.

. "I am sorry you've lost so many of yo^r young [grey] hounds. I have some of the same litter I sent you as clever as any w^hever, and enter as well—there was one sent by mistake w^h if too little for you I shall be glad of again—the best respects of all here wait on you and Lady Townshend."

1766, June 25th. C. BACON to the same. Dated at Elcham.

My Dear Lord

I am much obliged to You, for the trouble You have given yourself in endeavouring to furnish me with Hounds for Otter Hunting, But from the present State of your Kennel, I beg You would not think any more about it, for I shall continue to wage War against the Otters insidiously, with Traps Steelfalls &c. instead of open force. I was well informed that Newfoundland Dogs are the best in the World for Otter hunting, & therefore last year Commodore Palliser was desired to bring some over with him, & accordingly did so, He ordered a man to lead them up from Portsmo[uth]. Whether the man was an American or not, I dont know, but that he was a villain is most certain, for not liking his errand, & out of revenge as is supposed to the Boatwain, from whom he rec^d his immediate Orders, in coming to Town, he made the Dogs swallow pieces of Sponge & thereby killd them all—The Commodore is to bring some more over, when he returns, & I hope they will arrive safe—Our intercourse last Year with the Plantations in every respect, was very shocking & bad "

1766, Oct. 24th. Charles Townshend to Lady Townshend. Unaddressed, but indorsed "Cha. T. to his Mother."

Dear Madam.—Your Ladyship will forgive my not having sooner informed you of the calamity which we have suffered in our Family by the death of M^r [Campbell] Scott, but, in the affliction of Lady Dalkeith under so very severe a misfortune, I have really been incapable of any attention beyond herself. I had the good fortune of being able to break the sad news gradually to her, and time to bring S^r W. Duncan & M^r Hawkins within reach before she suspected any thing. By these means the immediate shock was in some degree alleviated, and the blow itself the better resisted. Soon after bleeding, she sunk into a calm habit of melancholy, and I led her into a discourse upon her only remaining son. His character, his settlement in life, & his return to comfort & support her. This turn of discourse had the effect I wished, for it induced her to communicate what she felt & served to divert her mind to fresh objects. I took the moment & sent for the Duke [of Buccleugh] by express.

Yr's most affectly,

C. T."

c c 2

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

G[rosvenor] S[quare] Oc[tober] 24, 1766.

1767, May 30th. William Wilkin to the Dowager Lady Townshend.
Dated at Fordham.

"We should have been much better than any could have expected, but we have every day constant heavy or great rains, and the weather over and above cold, which hurts the Stocks of all Sorts of Cattle, and nothing grows, what will be the end of these unnatural times, I can't judge as yet, I have been very wet two Days, and that have given me a great Cold, which I hope will not last long. My Doctor advises me to bleed which I purpose to do this morning. It is a very sickly time in the low Countrys, and in the Isle of Ely"

1768, Augt. 12th. Lieut.-Colonel George Williamson to "His Excellency Lord Viscount Townshend." Dated at Woolwich.

"My Lord,

I have had the honor of a letter from your Lordship and am very unhappy to find I have given you some offence in too anxiously soliciting for my Son's Promotion [I] had no other meaning by speaking to Lord Granby than hoping that his Lordship's recommendation of my Son would render the Young Man more worthy of Your Lordship's Patronage"

1768, Augt. 14th. Dr Richard Chenevix, Bishop of Waterford, to the same. Dated at Waterford.

"My Lor[d],

I take the first opportunity, when I think your Excellency may be returned to Dublin, to express my most dutiful acknowledgements for the great honour you did me in coming to the Episcopal House. I wish I had been more in readiness to receive your Excellency in such a manner as your own high rank, as well as your Station entitles you to, but I arrived but the day before your Excellency, and when I was in Dublin I didn't think your Excellency would honour me so soon with your Presence. I must make you my Excuses for not having sent you some cold Provisions to Dungannon Fort, but I was absolutely ignorant that it was a Place destitute of Accomodation, and didn't know it till after your Excellency was gone from Waterford. Tho' I am unwilling to trespass upon your time, yet I must beg leave, before I conclude, to express my gratitude for the many marks of affability and kindness with which your Excellency has been pleased to honour me and which I shall always remember with due sentiments. I am with the utmost regard respect & submission

R. WATERFORD."

1768, Sept. 27th. John Powdick to the same. Dated at the General Post Office.

The writer solicits his Lordship's interest to procure him the appointment of Post Master at Thetford.

1768, Nov. 13th. Rev^d Francis Wollaston to the same. Dated at East Dereham.

The writer begs Lord Townshend to forward his views as to an exchange of his living for another.

1768, Nov. 22nd. Richard Woodward to Lady Townshend. Dated in New Street and unaddressed.

The writer begs her Ladyship's influence with the Lord Lieutenant in favour of his son-in-law Cap^t George Robinson, who sold out of the 65th Regiment in Aug^t 1767, and who would willingly again purchase.

1768, Dec. 8th. Rev. Francis Wollaston to Lord Townshend. Dated at Charterhouse Square.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

“As to Mr de Grey, his illness was a tedious fever which ended in abcesses formed in his throat, that were very painful and dangerous, as they sometimes prevented his swallowing. We hope however he is now out of danger”

1768, Dec. 20th. Robert Wilmot to John Lees. Dated at St James's.

“Lord Frederick Campbell arrived in Town last Saturday. I have called twice but had not the good Fortune to find his Lordship. I am told that Lord Percy and Sir George Macartney will set out some day this week for Dublin.”

1768, Dec. 23rd. Rev. Francis Wollaston to Lord Townshend. Dated in Charterhouse Square.

My Lord—I am afraid Your Excellency will think me impertinent in again troubling you with a repetition of my application I understand the Rectory of Bow in Cheapside is shortly to be resigned, & is in the gift of the Arch-bishop of Canterbury; whether Your Excellency would chuse to procure that for me from him (in the manner you proposed with my Lord Duke of Grafton; or in any other method you see proper) which being better than my vicarage is more than I could get by exchange or Your Excellency may perhaps not chuse to ask for it

PS.— I have since heard that the Arch-bishop intends to compliment the Duke of Grafton with it, so that if from either of them Your Excellency could procure it for me, it would lay me under the highest Obligation.

1769, Jan. 1st. O. Wynne to the same. Dated at Haslewood.

“My Lord,—I have just heard that You intend to pay a Visit at Elphin, & Boyle, in a few days, and to shoot at Rockingham, if so, I flatter myself that I shall have the honor of seeing Your Excellency, & Your friends, at this Place.

I am just twenty Miles from Boyle, and the Road is very fine, I think I can promise You some pleasant Shooting, & You will see a Romantick Country; if I find that I am to expect the honour of Your Company here, I shall be ready to assist you with horses or Carriages, I am with the greatest Respect, Your Excellency's much obliged, etc.”

1769, Jan. 21st. Rev. Francis Wollaston to the same. Dated in Charterhouse Square.

“I am sorry to find by him [Mr Lees] that Your Excellency seems to have misunderstood my intentions concerning the resignation of Dereham; the Rectory of which, being a Sinecure of £300 p an. & compatible with anything, is by itself, in general estimation, equal to any other living of £600; & therefore was not in my thoughts to part with. But the Vicarage of about £200 p an., if Your Excellency could obtain for me a living in or near London, would thereby be vacated. If, in exchange for that part of my living which is of £200, I wish by Your Excellency's interest to obtain one not less than £300, I hope you will not think me unreasonable”

1769, Feb. 17th. Capt. William Wolseley—“at Mrs. Berner's, grocer, Pantion Street Leaster Fields, London”—to Lord Townshend.

The writer, who has been 14 years in the army and served three years in Germany, gave £3,500 for his Troop in the 8th Dragoons and now is unable to sell in the regiment above the Regulation price. The value of his commission, and £17,00 his wife's fortune, is all that he has to subsist on after selling out. Cornet [William] Clive of Lord Pembroke's Regiment, [the 1st Dragoons] brother to Lord Clive, and Capt. Falkner of the Guards, are desirous of purchasing the writer's Troop.

MARQUESS
TOWNSEND
MSS.

1769, May 6th. Lieut. John Crosse, Commander of the Hornet Sloop of War, to Sackville Hamilton. Dated at Dublin, and addressed to Sackville Hamilton Esq^r at the Custom house.

The writer, having been desired to assist in apprehending John Connor a proclaimed smuggler, explains that he is under orders to sail for Liverpool, where he expects to find orders to deliver up his command; but that he will call at the Isle of Man on his way to Liverpool and will acquaint the commanding officer of the King's ships, who he doubts not will repair to Dublin without delay.

1769, May 9th. Sackville Hamilton, Principal clerk to the Commissioners of the Customs and Revenue in Ireland, to M^r Waite of Dublin Castle.

Enclosing the last, by direction of the Commissioners, to be laid before the Lord Lieutenant.

1769, Aug. 9th.—H. William Wilson to Lord Townshend. Dated at Kirby.

"My Lord—I was honoured wth your two Letters the same post, and take the first opportunity of returning your Lordship thanks for your very obliging Offer of your house at Rainham which I should wth great pleasure [have] accept'd of, but since my last I have buried my Uncle of Didlington who has left me Sole Executor so [I] shall spend [a] great part of the Sporting Season there, but shall always be happy to pay my Respects at Rainham on your return" 1769, Aug. 10th. Rev. Francis Woolaston to the same. Dated at East Dereham.

"My Lord—The solicitude of all my friends to have me once more settled in their neighbourhood, together with my own inclinations urged me last summer to make application for a removal from hence: & I would apply no where but to Your Excellency though I could have wished to have received some advancement at Your Excellency's hands, & therefore did decline one opening by way of Exchange last winter; I could not refuse an offer that has since been made by the Bishop of Rochester [D^r Zachariah Pearce] at the request of my brother Heberden; nor with so aged a Bishop could I delay passing through all the forms at once: & therefore, being summoned last week to London from whence I returned yesterday, [I] was a few days since collated to the Rectory of Chislehurst in Kent; a situation most agreeable & on all accounts most desirable. I hope your Excellency will excuse me in this. It is my maxim to keep always steady to my principles, & [to be] gratefull to benefactors; among whom I have hoped and shall hope always to reckon Your Excellency."

1769, Oct. 28th. Mrs. Robert Orme to her sister-in-law Lady Townshend.

Dear Madam,

"I have long wished for an Occasion of writing to you but the Resentment of all my Family except that of my poor Brother Charles was so great that it deterr'd me from making any other Application but Sir William Draper who was so feeling and human as to have at heart a Family Reconciliation filled me with joy at his Account of your great Benevolence Compassion and good Will. It is therefore Madam in Consequence of what I think my Duty that I trouble you with this Letter to return you my most gratefull thanks for your kind and affectionate Behaviour, and also to beg of you dear Madam to use all your Influence upon my Brother to forgive me and my Children, and be assured that I shall ever retain the most most grateful Remembrance of it.

Clyst, October 28th.

AUDERY ORME."

1769, Dec. 28th. Rev. K. Percival to ——. Dated at Dublin, and unaddressed.

"Lord Townshend has not had a satisfactory sessions, the conclusion of which you see in the Votes of the Commons . . . the Opposition he met with laid him under a Necessity of giving whatever he had to dispose of to such Members as supported him in the House. This has in a great measure put it out of his Excellency's Power to do anything for my brother William . . . My Brothers Health is declining, & the Expenses of his Family encreasing, his eldest Son has been above a year in the College, his Second is Apprentice to a very respectable Merchant, & his third still at School; they are all very well disposed, & behave intirely to the Satisfaction of their Friends" 1770, Feb. 18th. Simon Fraser to Lord Townshend. Dated at Percy Street.

"My dear Lord—I have been very much concerned these two weeks, that no information reached me upon material Matters, which deserved your Lordship's Attention. I called at Lord Weymouth's Office the morning after The Duke of Grafton's resignation, and I was told that an official Letter had been sent to acquaint your Excellency of it, and as the most experienced Politicians could not guess what effect that Event would have upon the present Administration, it was necessary to wait the fate of two or three questions in the house of Commons, before a Conjecture could be formed about Lord North's Situation; and by the division yesterday in both houses, it is evident, that the Ministry has got additional Strength. I have desired that the Minutes should be sent to your Lordship, and by them, you will see the Motions which were made Yesterday in the house of Commons, by Mr Dowdswell, and in the house of Peers by Lord Chatham seconded by Lord Camden, and it was an exceeding good debate. The Duke of Grafton Lord Gower, and Lord Mansfield distinguished themselves upon the Side of [the] Administration. To day the Countenances of the friends of Government is cleared up, and all partys agree, that we shall have no Change this Winter. I have taken some trouble to enquire about your Excellency's Situation, and I sincerely believe that it is seriously intended to continue your Lordship in the Government of Ireland, and to support you firmly in it. The many unforeseen events which have happened here, rendered it impossible to give the Dispatch transmitted by Mr Swan a final and decisive Consideration, Mr Wood told me yesterday that he carried it by Lord Weymouth's desire last Sunday to Lord North, and that it would, in all probability be answered in the Course of the week. I hope it will be entirely satisfactory to your Excellency and that you will be enabled to govern Ireland upon true Constitutional Principles, and to bring forward some independent gentlemen who have supported your Lordship's Administration at the risk of their own political existence.

Lord Legonier cannot live many days. The Duke of Gloucester will certainly have the first Regiment of Guards, and I have heard it surmised every where that Your Lordship has very good pretensions to the third; I humbly submit it, if your Excellency may not apply to His

MANUSCRIPTS
TOWNSHEND
MSA.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MRS.

Majesty, by a Letter addressed to Lord Weymouth, there cannot be any impropriety in this Application, as there is no Commander in Chief at present, if Your Lordship shall think proper to inclose the letter to me, I will take Care to deliver it, and perhaps an opportunity may offer of having some Conversation with the Secretary of State [Lord Weymouth] upon the Subject.

General Cornwallis desires to be very affectionately remembered to Your Lordship and he wishes to have his Regiment quartered this year at Waterford, & if it makes no alteration in the arrangement of Quarters it would be very agreeable to me. The General, in the most delicate, & tender manner desired me to mention his wish, to have an Ensigny in his own or some other Regiment for a very near relation of his. He is well aware of the difficult Situation in which your Excellency must be frequently placed with respect to political Connections, and he is far from desiring this instance of your Excys kindness to him, if it lays you under any inconvenience."

1770, April 10th. The same to the same. Dated in Percy Street.

"My dear Lord—I had the honor to see Lord Weymouth this Morning, and was happy to find that he had an Opportunity to receive His Majesty's Pleasure so soon, upon the most material part of your Excys Dispatch; it will be transmitted to Your Lordship by this night's Post, and as the Parliament is not to meet it will not be necessary for me to apply to any of the Members to repair to Ireland. Mr Conolly left town last Sunday; and he will give you an Account of what passed in the house of Common here about Irish affairs; Deyson's Pension is much talked of; and I find that it is disclaimed by some of the Ministry; if it is considered as good ground for opposition here, Your Excys may imagine how much may be made of it in Ireland" 1770, May 1st. Lord Barrington, Secretary of War, to the same.

The writer informs the Lord Lieutenant that the latter had been appointed a Lieut.-General.

Same date. Viscount Clare, M.P. for Bristol and ex-President of the Board of Trade, to the same. Dated in London.

"My dear Lord—I feel in common with my late Brothers, Messrs Ellis and Grenville, your Excellency's very kind attention to our Interest, altho I do not mean to avail my Self of it, as I hope to qualifie in Ireland. But my Obligation to your Excellency is the very same. I know how well you understand and have at heart the Importance of the Linen-manufacture to Ireland. I wish that others Natives of that Country, who are indebted to it not only for their Existence but for the means of preserving it, members of both Houses here, were half so zealous in their Endeavours for its Service: but many of them forsooth, are too great to bend their Attention to such low Concerns, and we were left, as usual, in the House of Commons with very few indeed belonging to Ireland either by Birth or Fortune, to determine upon the Continuance of the Bounty now given in common to certain Species of British and Irish Linens exported from Great Britain. The Friends of Manchester took advantage of this thin Attendance to come to a Compromise with the Scotch, by which a Part of the Bounty was to be taken off from those Linens and apply'd to chequed and striped British Linens. I soon perceived and exposed the Injustice of this Proposition. The Scotch adhered to the Compact with us, and the Friends to this Expedient did not venture to propose it in a formal Question to the House. The Bounties upon Linens will be continued. But as it proposed to give also a small Bounty upon British chequed and striped Linens, I shall try whether we can not obtain the same for those of the manufacture of

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

Ireland, which are now prohibited to be imported here by an excessive Duty. I shall also endeavour to have the Bounty upon white and brown Linens of Great Britain and Ireland, which is now absurdly confined, extended to printed Linens of the same Species. But in neither of these Propositions have I much hopes of succeeding.

I wish when there is a Vacancy at the Linen-Board, to be appointed a Trustee; and, without much Vanity, my Country-men ought to wish it at least as much as I do; for I mean, when I return into Ireland to make myself as much as I can master of that important subject.

I hope I said nothing in my last Letter to convey an Idea to you as if you had been reflected upon by your Country-man, or any other person, in the Debate upon the Irish Pensions. Not a Glance of that Tendency was thrown out: and when Justice was done to your Love for Ireland manifested upon that and every other Subject, it was Praise, not Vindication. I do not believe we shall rise quite so soon as was believed. I think we shall sit three weeks longer, even if no extraordinary Event should happen. Wilkes is my near Neighbour, and passes every Day before my Door as unnoticed and unattended as any other Passenger.
CRAGGS-CLARE."

1770, May 26th. Rev. T. O. Young to Lady Townshend. Dated at Northchurch.

..... "Now our Parliament is up, the News Papers seem to turn their patriotic attention to Irish grievances, & the Guild of Merchants begins to share the Paragraphs with our Common Council."

1770, June 2nd. Lady Mary Compton to the same. Dated at Bruton Street.

..... "for the last three Weeks, they [i.e. fires] have been more wanted than in the Depth of Winter. The [King's] Birthday [June 4th] being so near, I imagine as soon as that is over, the Town will empty very fast; a few people will be obliged to attend, till her Majesty's Month is up."

1770, June 5th. Mrs. Elizabeth Drummond to the same. Dated at Wimbledon.

..... "I think you managed very cleverly about my Lady Arden [the Countess of Egmont]. I wish it had been an English Peerage, but as she wisht to have it, I own I am very happy it is done, I really was much surprised for I had never heard a word of it till she came & told me it was done. I suppose you have heard of all the Weddings & of the New Club. I fancy it will not last long. Some friends of yours is of it, & I have been told is sorry for it but have not resolution to scratch their Names out.

1770, June 8th. Hon. John Townshend to the same (his mother). Dated at Eton.

1770, June 10th. Mrs. Manby to the same. Dated at Denver Cottage.

... "I suppose your Ladyship has heard that Lord Buckinghamshire is going to be married to Miss Conolly a young Lady of blooming Fifteen. Mr Henry Dashwood is going to be married to a Daughter of Sir John Rous's, she is very young. It is thought they won't marry till Sr Tho^s Peyton is dead.

J. MANBY."

1770, June 10th. Hon. George Townshend to the same (his mother). Dated at Eton.

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSB.

1770, June 11th. Mrs. Turner to the same. Dated at Warham.

... "This corner of the county is at present quite gay [I] assure your Ladyship that both Concert's & Play's are with in our reach. The Former we owe to a few Gentlemen, who in the Spring agreed to meet once a Month at Fakenham, eat together there, & have a little Musick before & after their repast—as they were most of them performers on some instrument, a little addition to their Band was deem'd sufficient, & to procure that a Guinea each was to be subscribed, out of which their Dinner was likewise to be furnished. . . . Ladies can gain admittance only with Tickets, but of them every subscriber has the disposal of two. . . .

The plays are at Walsingham—the Lynn Company arrived there about Ten Days ago—open'd the Theatre (commonly called a Barn) on Wednesday last, & propose acting constantly three times a week during their stay which [I] fancy will be at least a Month longer. . . .

Private Letters, as well as the Publick Papers, say Lord Buckingham is very soon to be married to Miss Connolly [I] cant say I am at all surprized at the shortness of the time he allots to Mourning: tho' own I am exceedingly so to find that Cupid, & not Plutus, influences him in his present Choice. . . .

A. TURNER."

1771, Jan. 22nd. Sir George Savile, M.P. for Yorkshire, to Lord Townshend. Dated at Rufford.

The writer begs that his Lordship will appoint Ensign Nicholls (Senior Ensign of the 54th Reg^t, and formerly in the writer's Regiment of Militia) to a Lieutenantancy as it is understood that a Company is to be added to each Corps on the Irish Establishment.

1771, Augt. 30th. Lord Sandwich, First Lord of the Admiralty, to Lord Townshend. Dated at the Admiralty.

"My Lord

I am honoured with your Excellencies letter recommending Captain Schomberg to succeed to the vacancy in the Dorsett Yacht, and tho' by a letter I have from him at the same time he seems inclined to accept that Command if it should be offered to him, yet I am persuaded when he comes to reconsider the matter, he will not persevere in that pursuit, as I have informed him by letter that the person who retires to that Command cannot have any claim to be employed in active Service in his Majesties Navy in case of war, or future desire to go to Sea, in a Line of battle Ship.

What I have hitherto said relates however only to Captain Schomberg, but I am coming to a more disagreeable part of this business, namely, that there is another person strongly recommended by Lord Rochford for this Command, & recommended many months ago, who is disposed to take it on the usual conditions & as a retirement out of the active Service of the Navy, what am I to do between your Lordship's & L^d Rochford's desire? You are both my friends, & friends from whom I have received the most essential proofs of kindness. . . .

SANDWICH.

[P.S.] I mention nothing about Captain Shirley for whether it is him or Captain Schomberg, it is exactly the same thing to me, upon the conditions above mentioned."

1771, Sept. 4th. Captain Alexander Schomberg to the same. Dated at Windsor.

"I would not again venture to be so importunate in my Correspondence, were it not that I find myself under the disagreeable Necessity of explaining to you the impropriety (I will not call it by a

MARQUESS
TOWERSHIP
MSS.

harther name) of Lord Sandwich's interposition & misinterpretation when he writes to you of the determined incompatibility of my acceptance of the Dorset Yacht with my future employment in any active Service. His Lordship may have determined this in his own Mind, but the fact is incontrovertibly otherwise: & when I had the Honor of waiting on his Lordship, I gave him a Case in Point. I mentioned Cap^t Weller who commanded a 74 Gun Ship in the last War after having been for some time Commander of the Dorset Yacht, & who is now, on account of his bad Health on the list of retired Admirals, to which his Lordship replied that he was not then at the [Admiralty] Board." . . .

1771, Sept. 9th. The same to the same. Dated in London.

"Impatient at the Earl of Sandwich's conduct I hurried to Town, but it will be a Week before I can see him & I fear unless your Lordship is pleased to move again I shall be defeated. The Time presses. & I wish to save [the] post. Your Lordship will forgive my writing to you as it were on one Leg but delays are dangerous & I have made up my Mind for having again the Charge of your Person across the Sea.

My Noble Lords at Whitehall think me weak enough to leave my Cake and gnaw the Streamer but they are mistaken.

Your Lordship is the best ju[d]ge of their power; they may tear the Yacht from me, but they shall not gain, what they labour at, my Consent.

Excuse this Hint & this hurry my Lord I have thought it right to give you this intelligence, & I hope I have not misjudged."

1771, Sept. 11th. Solomon Schomberg to the same. Dated in Whalebone Court, Lothbury.

"Allowing for human Infirmities, my Conduct in a Period of upwards of three very expensive Years in your Excellency's Service, has, (unless, Indigence is criminal) been strictly irreproachable; What Debts I have contracted, were created by Necessity, unavoidably incur'd by my Situation, by Illness & other adventitious Circumstances, & not through Choice or Extravagance." . . .

1771, Oct. 2nd. Lord Sandwich to the same. Dated at the Admiralty.

"My dear Lord,—It gives me great pleasure to be able to inform Your Excellency, that I have contrived to accommodate the person recommended by Lord Rochford, otherwise than with the Command of the Dorset Yacht; & that I am therefore ready to obey Your Commands upon that Subject.

I must beg however before the Commission is made out, to receive your final & explicit determination between the Captains Shirley and Schomberg; your last letter went on a supposition that Captain Schomberg would not accept it; but whither he is extremely indigent, or extremely insatuated, or whither he may think my situation here not permanent I know not, but he persists in his acceptance of the Yacht if it is offered to him; contrary to the opinion of his best friends, and of every Officer in the Sea Service with whom I have conversed upon the occasion. I am sure, my Dear Lord, you who are a Military Man, & have the most proper notions of the sort of delicacies due to the preservation of a military character, will not think the carrying passengers for emolument is a proper school for a person that is to command a fleet; if lucre is a person's object let him have it, but then do not let him aspire to honours that for the good of the Service must be pursued thro' a different channel. I own I wish you had never mentioned his name upon this occasion, as it will probably lose an Officer to the Navy

MARQUESS
TOWNSHEND
MSS.

who might hereafter have made a considerable figure in his profession : & will postpone a very good man who you wish to serve [Captain Shirley], who is related to your family, and who I think much the properer man for the employment in question."

1771, Dec. 19th. Hugh Massy to the same. Dated at Suire Castle, near Cashell.

The writer begs Lord Townshend to appoint Simon Durdon Esq^{re}, of the city of Limerick, High Sheriff of that county for the ensuing year.

1772, Feb. 19th. Capt. Alexander Schomberg to the same. Dated at Dublin.

The writer suggests a plan for attacking Copenhagen should we ever break with the Danes.

1775, March 8th. John Hely Hutchinson, Provost of Trinity College Dublin, to the same. Dated at Trinity Coll.

This letter refers to an appointment which the writer has recently received from the Government.

1785, July 24th. Lord Orford to the same. Dated at Norwich.

My D^r Lord

I am sorry to inform you that Master Money ascended alone under the British Balloon at four o'clock yesterday afternoon. The Balloon rose to a great Hight & took a direction towards the Sea. . . It was seen entering over the Ocean about a League south of Lowestoff at a very great Hight at Six of Clock. By which Circumstance I am greatly apprehensive for his Safety. Nor can I account for his thus continuing in the Air but that by some accident perhaps the String which connects the Valve was broken or by the Collapsion of the lower Part of [the] Balloon (for twas not half full) the String w^{ld} not act upon it. It gave me great Concern to hear that Your Lordship had received a Wound from your own Sword. I hope you are now perfectly recovered & that we shall soon see you in the Country.

ORFORD."

1786, Jan. 30th. Arthur Young to the same. Dated at Bradfield Hall.

"My Lord

The more I reflect on your Lordship's discovery in feeding cattle and sheep with the trimmings of plantations the more important it appears to me ; & I am confirmed in the opinion by that of every person I have mentioned it to. This makes me anxious to have y^r Lordship's account of it, w^{ch} I hope you will favour me wth. It will convince the world that y^r retirement when in the country is no less dedicated to the service of mankind than y^r more active exertions have been, to promote that of the State.

I was lately in High Suffolk to view their cows, & met with a good farmer who wanted a farm ; his name Kent ; I told him of y^r Lordship's & believe he will go to see it."

My most respectful Compt^s to Lady Townshend—I hope she will by & by let a Cow rival a greyhound.

1791, Feb. 21st. The Chevalier D'Eon to the same. Addressed to "My Lord Marquis of Townshend—No. 14 Weymouth Street."

M^{lle} D'Eon est bien fâchée de ne s'être point trouvée chez elle quand Milord Marquis de Townshend lui a fait l'honneur d'y passer. Depuis ce tems elle a été incommodée, Sans cela elle auroit été lui presenter ses respects & à Milady.

Si Milord a la bonte de lui faire dire le jour & l'heure qu'elle peut le voir elle si [sic] rendra avec empressement ; l'homme qui garde la porte de Milord dit à toutes le personnes qu'il ne connoit pas que Milord n'y est pas.

1791, March 4th. Lord Orford to the Marquis Townshend. Dated at Eriswell.

"My D^r Lord

May I beg of your Lordship to send the Inclosure to L^d Frederick. I am now to return your Lordship Thanks for L^d Sheffield's Pamphlet in which as in all his Lordship's there is much to be approved of, tho' not the whole work. I cannot for instance agree with his Lordship & the Yarmouth merchants that t'woud be right to take off the Penalties to which ships are liable for smuggling Corn. The Argument that the Owner shou'd not suffer for the Fault committed by his Captain is not consistant to the Laws of this Country which in every Instance make the Master responsible for the offences of his Servants. Your Lordship's Coachman for Instance driving your empty Carriage against an other you tho absent cou'd be obliged to pay all Damage incurr'd, & I am persuaded that if the Penalty was to be changed from Confiscation to one Hundred Pounds agreeable to L^d Sheffield's Proposal that the whole Corn Bill wou'd be reduced to a Piece of Waste Paper, for the Merchant wou'd run so small a risque whenever t he Markets either at Home or Abroad were so high as wou'd indemnify him for speculating on the Chance of Detection.

Farming & Farmers go on well this Winter. Corn continues increasing in Price and I am certain from my own returns that they have not had so good a Year among many Past as the Last.

If you chuse to breed by a very fine Indian Wild Boar sent from Madrass to L^t C^o Hughes, now at Houghton you will be welcome to serve as many Sows as you please."

INDEX.

A.

Abbot, Adam, master of ship ; 89.
 Abercorn, Earl of (1724) ; 142.
 Abercromby, James, attorney-general in South Carolina ; 270.
 Aberdeen :
 provost of, fined and imprisoned ; 32.
 illegal impositions on ; 85.
 Duke of Argyll at ; 185.
 Earl of (1721), election concerning ; 343.
 Abergavenny, Lord (1734) ; 244.
 Abingdon :
 Earl of (1712) ; 210.
 — commissioner ; 211.
 — governor of the Tower ; 217.
 — and Elizabeth Shirley ; 228, 228, 230, 231.
 — (1715), militia under ; 167.
 Lady ; 224, 228, 229.
 Abney, Lady ; 228.
 Ackland, Sir Hugh ; 187.
 Acworth, Sir Jacob, surveyor ; 116.
 Adams :
 Richard, valuation by ; 202.
 Capt. Samuel ; 60.
 Adderbury ; 314, 315, 394.
 Addine, Mr. ; 10.
 Addison, Joseph, quotation from his Travels ; 878.
 Admiralty, the, suppressed orders by ; 59.
 Adventure, the ship ; 89, 98.
 Abye, William, suit by ; 138, 139, 141.
 Aguilon, Duchess of, Lady Richelieu ; 69.
 Agutter, Mr. ; 252.
 Aire, camp before ; 74, 75.
 Aix la Chapelle, waters of ; 191.
 Alatamaha river ; 256.
 Albany :
 the Senecas near ; 269.
 the sloop ; 397.
 Albemarle :
 Duke of (1664) ; 26, 40.
 — (1666-67), letters of ; 27.
 Earl of (1710) ; 73.
 — (1746) ; 361.
 Lady, accident to ; 248.

Aldenham ; 5.
 Aldermaston, letter dated at ; 341.
 Aldrich, Mr., tutor at Cambridge ; 13.
 Alexander :
 Mrs., of Edinburgh ; 196.
 A., letter of ; 194.
 James, of New York ; 297.
 Algiers, English consul at, his pay ; 126.
 Allicant castle, siege of ; 198.
 Allein, Richard ; 254.
 Allen :
 James ; 290, 291.
 Jeremiah ; 290.
 Allgood, Mr. ; 366.
 Almenara, battle of, account of ; 72.
 killed and wounded at ; 71, 72.
 Alresford, letter dated at ; 335.
 Alsace :
 Strasburg and ; 87.
 Upper, the French and ; 65.
 Alva, Duke of, in Flanders ; 2.
 Ambassadors :
 plate and allowances of ; 50.
 and agents abroad, English, their pay and allowances ; 126.
 Ambrose, Edward ; 211.
 Amelia, Princess, the ship ; 394.
 America :
 plantations in, papers relating to ; 254 et seq.
 — report on ; 294.
 silk from ; 263.
 scheme for driving the French from ; 306.
 Indians of, effect of spirits on ; 372.
 the ship ; 89.
 Amherst :
 Jeffrey, Brigadier afterwards Lord, in Canada, letters of, &c. ; 307, 309, 315.
 his battalion at Quebec ; 325.
 letter to ; 327.
 General, his opinion of Roger Townshend ; 395.
 Amsterdam ; 342.
 letters dated at ; 54, 64, 74, 75, 107, 337.
 English ships at ; 60.
 Admiralty of ; 73.
 the ship ; 60.
 Amyas, Mr. ; 358.
 Amyell, John, letter of ; 354.
 Anabaptists or Menonists ; 63.
 Ancaster, Duchess of ; 248.
 Anderson, James, letter of ; 161.

- Anderton :
 Francis ; 168.
 Sir Francis, of Lostock ; 164.
 Hugh ; 168.
 Andrews :
 —, interpreter ; 259, 260.
 Mr. ; 207.
 — letter to ; 209.
 Sir Jonathan ; 211.
 Tho., of Tower Hill ; 215.
 Anglesey, Earl of :
 (1676), warrants signed by ; 44, 45.
 (1714), his marriage ; 224.
 Anguaise, Mr. ; 13, 16.
 Anne, Queen :
 letter to ; 49.
 celebration of her birthday ; 79.
 document signed by ; 80.
 bequest to the poor by ; 132.
 her Bounty, return concerning ; 147.
 address from the Tower Hamlets to ; 215.
 her letter about Nova Scotia ; 295, 296.
 her illness and death ; 220.
 her funeral ; 221.
 Ancey, army at ; 56.
 Annesley, Mr. ; 229.
 Anson, Lord (1748) ; 864.
 Anstis, John, Garter ; 114.
 Anstruther, his regiment at Quebec ; 324, 327.
 Antigua, letter dated at ; 306.
 Antwerp ; 157.
 le Grand Laboureur ; 78.
 English secretary at, his pay ; 126.
 abandoned by the French ; 360.
 Aoust, the valley ; 55.
 Apalachée, bay ; 269, 270.
 Apethorpe, letter dated at ; 36.
 Apothecary's bill ; 20.
 Appermont, Madlle. d' ; 88.
 Appleton ; 27.
 Nathaniel, pastor in Cambridge, Mass. ; 280.
 Apsley, Sir Peter, treasurer of James, Duke of York ; 35.
 Aragon ; 77.
 Arbuthnot :
 Dr. ; 333.
 Mr., banker in Paris ; 338.
 — at Rouen ; 342.
 John, commission to ; 201.
 Arches in Spain, the allies at ; 69, 70.
 capture of ; 70.
 Arden, Lady ; 409.
 Ardinge, Jhon ; 10.
 Ardoch, Argyll's army at ; 184.
 Argyll, Duke of :
 payments to, for Prince George's regiment ; 201.
 (1709), letter of ; 204.
 (1711), going to Spain ; 80.
 (1715), sent to Scotland ; 160.
 letter of ; ib.
 at Edinburgh ; 161.
 his tenants of Morvene ; 164.
 his services at Edinburgh ; 166.
 Argyll, Duke of—cont.
 despatches of Townshend and Stanhope to ; 173-186.
 (1716), his pension ; 102.
 (1720) ; 106.
 (1721), election concerning ; 343.
 lands belonging to ; 195.
 Argyllshire :
 Gen. Gordon in ; 164. compensation for losses in ; ib.
 militia of ; 177.
 inhabitants of ; 195.
 Arlington, Lord, letters of and to ; 25, 27, 29.
 Armstrong :
 letter of ; 112.
 John, of the Ordnance ; 223.
 Army in 1709, list of ; 128.
 Arnall, Samuel, letters of ; 369.
 Arran :
 Lord (1716) ; 233.
 — and Lady ; 239.
 Countess of, Dorothy, letters of ; 223, 227, 231.
 Arwell, Mr. ; 10.
 Arzeliers, Marquis d' ; 64.
 Ascough, Allen, a Jacobite prisoner ; 168.
 Ash, Ashe :
 Ben., letter of ; 129.
 Edward, clerk of the Ordnance ; 222.
 — letters of ; 331, 340.
 Martha, of Twickenham ; 330.
 Ashby ; 246.
 letters dated at ; 218, 219.
 See Castle Ashby.
 Ashes, Lancaster ; 164.
 Ashley :
 Lord (1671) ; 28.
 Abraham ; 255.
 Ason, letters dated at ; 329.
 Assayment office ; 347.
 Astell, William, ship owner ; 90.
 Astella, Mr. ; 209.
 Astley, Sir Jacob :
 letters of ; 25.
 agreement by ; 127.
 candidate for Norfolk ; 329.
 and the Norwich election ; 339.
 his steward ; 332.
 Astwell ; 228.
 Athol :
 clan of ; 194, 195.
 Duke of (1715) ; 175.
 — his son ; 199.
 Attleborough, Massachusetts, discovery of iron ore at ; 277.
 Atwood, Robert, letter of ; 336.
 Aucherarder, letter dated at ; 163.
 Audley, Thomas ; 7.
 Augustus, King :
 and the Polish crown ; 53.
 dethroning of ; 57.
 and the Czar ; 65.
 proposed advance of money to ; 105.
 document signed by ; 117.
 Aurelle ; 55.
 Australia, company for colonizing ; 139.

Austria :

House of, and the Pope ; 52.

the Succession in ; 121.

battalions furnished by ; 360.

Aylesford, Lord (1765), and Tamworth election ; 401.

Aylsham, poor house at ; 41.

Ayrshire nobility and gentry, charges against ; 81.

Asilia, in Carolina ; 256.

B.

Bachwell, Col. ; 245.

Bacon :

Lady, her first marriage ; 17.

Anthony, bequest to ; 5.

Castell, letters of ; 409, 403.

Edmund, brother of Sir Nathaniel ; 37.

Sir Edmund ; 187, 353.

— letters of ; 366.

— deputy lieutenant of Norfolk ; 124.

Edward, son of Sir Nicholas ; 6.

Francis, bequest to ; 5.

Sir Francis (1669), letter of ; 27.

N., letter of ; 22.

Sir Nathaniel, letters and papers of ; 1-22 passim.

— executor ; 16, 17.

— his wife Dorothy ; 11, 17.

— letters of ; 24.

— his will ; 37.

Nathaniel, son of Sir Nicholas ; 6, 7.

— commissioner ; 11.

— high sheriff ; 11.

Sir Nicholas, letters to ; 1, 3.

— his will ; 4-7.

— burial of ; 7.

Robin ; 24.

Thomas ; 211.

Badgers of corn ; 2.

Badinel, his petition ; 125.

Bagot :

Dick ; 313.

Mrs. Frances ; 230.

Bahamas, governor of ; 265, 300.

Ballie, George, instructions signed by ; 89.

Baker :

Alderman William, petition of ; 272.

Sir William, his influence in the City ; 400.

Balaguer, camp at ; 68.

Balguy, Rev. Mr., of St. John's College, Cambridge ; 385.

Ballard, George, letter of ; 245.

Balloon, a, ascent of ; 412.

Balls, co. Herts ; 397.

letter dated at ; 357.

Baltic, the, Sir John Norris's Expedition to ; 89-102.

Baltimore, Lord (1746) ; 361.

Bamberg, Bishop of, disgraced ; 123.

Banfield, Sir Copplestone ; 172.

Banister Hall, Lancaster ; 164.

Bankers, bankrupt ; 349, 350.

Banshaid, Sir Edward ; 10.

Bar le Duc, the Pretender at ; 158, 159, 163, 177.

Barage, waters of ; 191.

Barbadoes :

governor of ; 115.

— Byng ; 302.

governors of, their pay ; 265

— their allowances ; 306.

Barber, Francis, letter of ; 36.

his two livings ; ib.

Barbon, James, letter of ; 336.

Barcelona ; 65.

letter dated at ; 68.

threatened siege of ; 79.

cavalry at ; 116.

Barclay, David, sale to ; 255.

Bardewick, Mr., agent in Russia ; 147.

Bardsey ; 164.

Barge belonging to Prince George, valuation of ; 204, 205.

Barker :

Mr., wounded ; 309.

Peter, of Whitby ; 359.

Barley, price of, in 1602 ; 12.

Barnardiston, Sir Nathaniel ; 211.

Barnstaple, election for ; 137.

Barnwell, John :

answers by ; 254.

commissioner ; 255.

report by ; 296.

Baronet, a, fees paid on creation of ; 37-38.

Barons, directions on creation of ; 38-39.

fees paid by ; 39.

Barré, Major, wounded at Quebec ; 324.

Barrier, the, papers concerning ; 48, 49, 50, 58, 87, 88.

Barrington :

his regiment ; 328.

Lord (1759) ; 315.

— (1770), letter of ; 408.

Barronghe, Thomas ; 2.

Barsham, Thomas, letter of ; 19.

Bartenstein :

his power at Vienna ; 123.

his spleen ; 124.

Barton, Mr., messenger ; 162.

Baruer, Mons., letter of ; 88.

Bastinatoes, letter dated at ; 116.

Bateman :

John ; 211.

Thomas ; 211.

Bath ; 182, 242, 244.

letters dated at ; 120, 322.

waters of ; 191.

the, order of, proposed revival of ; 114.

— ancient rights on conferring ; 345.

Bathurst, Sir Benjamin, treasurer of James Duke of York ; 35.

- 'Baville, M. de, in the Cevennes; 53.
 Bayly, Bayley :
 —, and Capt. Carstairs; 83.
 —, fined and imprisoned; ib.
 the carrier; 167.
 Thomas; 137.
 Baynes, William, of Tower Hill; 215.
 Bayonne, ship from; 107.
 Beach, Capt. Henry; 208.
 Beaconsfield; 242.
 Beadle, Joshua, letter of; 340.
 Beagham, Mr.; 352, 358.
 Beak, Mr.; 89.
 Beale, Colonel, at Charles Town; 271.
 Bearcroft, Philip, alderman of Worcester; 158.
 Beard, opera singer; 242.
 Beauchamp, Ephraim; 211.
 Beauclerk :
 Lord Sidney; 248.
 Lord Vere, of the Admiralty; 148.
 Beauford galley; 270, 271.
 Beaufort :
 family; 314.
 Duke of (1686); 25.
 — proprietor in Carolina (1720);
 255, 257.
 — in Paris (1727); 200.
 Duchess of, her second marriage;
 230.
 — (1709) her death; 336.
 Beaumont, Mr., at Dantzic; 92.
 Beauvoir, Richard; 211.
 Beaves, William; 211.
 Beckham, Thomas, articles against; 41.
 Bedford :
 assizes; 356.
 Earl of (1576); 8.
 — a prisoner; 11.
 Countess of; 21.
 Duke of (1748), and the Fens; 362.
 Beddingfield :
 Amy, letters of; 1.
 Christopher, letters of; 25.
 Sir Henry, letters of and to; 18, 19, 25.
 Beer, transportation of; 12, 13.
 Beever, Thomas, letter of; 318.
 Belcher, Jonathan, governor of Massachusetts Bay; 274.
 letters of; 275-292 passim.
 Col. Dunbar and; 278, 279, 282, 288.
 his son Jonathan; 278, 280, 288, 289, 292.
 Belhaven, Lord (1721), governor of Barbadoes; 806.
 Bell :
 Robert; 2.
 Sir Robert, elected for Norfolk; 28.
 William, of Magdalen College, Cambridge; 391.
 Bellew, Lady; 192.
 Bellemont, Lord; 332.
 Bellpuig, letter dated at; 332.
 Benbowe, Mr., payment to; 58.
 Bender; 79.
 Bengal, governor of; 149.
 Benjamin, the ship; 89.
 Benson, Colonel, in Spain; 80.
 Samuel; 211.
 Sir William; 211.
 Benyon, Richard, governor of Fort St.
 George; 149.
 Benzell, Lieut., wounded at Quebec; 394.
 Beresford, Rich.; 254.
 Bergen op Zoom, siege of; 153.
 Berkeley :
 Lady, her lands in Rudham; 37.
 Mr., elected at Dover; 348.
 Berlin :
 letters dated at; 65, 73, 81, 82, 84,
 118.
 English envoy in, his pay and allowance; 126.
 Bermuda, governors of, their pay; 265.
 Bernard :
 François, letters to; 191.
 Louis, of Lezan, petition of; 145.
 Berne; 337.
 letters dated at; 74, 76, 78, 81, 85,
 86.
 Council of; 88.
 Bernera, General Campbell at; 361.
 Berners, Mrs., of Pantton Street; 405.
 Berney :
 Mr., clerk of the peace for Norfolk;
 349.
 John, of Westwick; 339.
 Richard, candidate for Norwich;
 339.
 Bernsdorf, Count, project by; 104.
 Bernstorff, Mons., paper addressed to;
 118.
 Bertie :
 Mr.; 207.
 Lady Anna, letters of; 282, 284.
 Catherine; 280.
 Mrs. Eleanor; 233.
 H.; 257.
 James; 255-257.
 — commissioner; 211.
 Robert, agreements witnessed by;
 401.
 Berwick; 183.
 Berwick, Duke of :
 (1709) his army; 56.
 (1715); 161.
 his adherence to the Pretender; 165.
 guards under; 168.
 Betenson, Sir Edward; 211.
 Bethune :
 capitulation of; 78.
 governor of; 73.
 Beuzelin, Fran., letter of; 129.
 Bewdley election, proceedings at; 41.
 Bezons, Marshal; 55.
 Bicknell :
 Thomas; 392.
 letter of; ib.
 Bidelf, Mr.; 229.
 Bilbao :
 letter from; 88.
 English merchants trading to; 134.
 Billers, Sir William, letter of; 354.

Billingsgate; 192.
 Binbrigg, John; 11.
 Birch, Serjeant; 137.
 Bird, Robert; 211.
 Birmingham:
 letter dated at; 160.
 Jacobite riots at; 159.
 new church at; 246.
 Edward, petition of; 36.
 Bishop's Castle, election for; 137.
 Bisset, Brigadier Andrew; 138.
 Black:
 Mr., of Rotterdam; 75.
 Gilbert, of Rotterdam; 336.
 Blackeman, Robert, bequest to; 6.
 Blackett, Sir William; 169.
 Blackhall, John; 211, 213.
 Blackmore, Thomas; 211, 218.
 Blackwell:
 Sir Lambert; 107.
 — declaration by; 342.
 Bladen, Martin, commissioner of trade;
 296.
 Blagand, laird of; 34.
 Blair, Hary, letter to; 190.
 Blairgowry, the Jacobites at; 161.
 Blake:
 Mr., proprietor in Carolina; 257.
 Joseph; 255.
 Blakeney, Col.; 286, 290.
 Blakeway, James, of Shrewsbury; 158.
 Blakeway, William; 211.
 Blancher, —, conviction of; 27.
 Bland:
 Lieut.-Colonel, wounded; 71.
 Lady Francis; 249.
 Blandford, Marquis of, in Paris (1727);
 200.
 Blankets, consecrated; 52.
 Blathwayte, William, report by; 254.
 Blenheim, battle of; 330.
 Bletsœ, a bonesetter at Stamford; 352.
 Blickling; 1.
 letters dated at; 7, 249.
 Bliss, M. de, of Orleans; 191.
 Blondall, Thomas; 10.
 Blount:
 Sir Christopher; 10.
 J., letter of; 212.
 Blundell, Lord; 137.
 Blunt:
 one, and the Lottery; 82.
 Mr., letters to; 190, 212.
 Blyth, letter dated at; 340.
 Boddington, —, merchant; 52.
 Bohemia, King of, at the Hague; 22.
 Bolingbroke, Lord:
 letters of; 104, 220.
 (1715), his departure from Paris;
 157.
 Lord Oxford and; ib.
 his negotiations for the Pretender;
 165.
 and the Duke of Orleans; 174.
 (1738), expected in England; 356.
 his posthumous works; 375, 383.
 Bollan, Shirley and; 304.

Bolton:
 Captain; 214.
 Duke of (1710); 336.
 Bombay, governor of; 149.
 Bombury, Sir Henry, charged with high treason; 46.
 Boone:
 Charles; 211.
 Joseph, agent for Carolina; 255.
 Bordeaux:
 letters dated at; 207, 208.
 wines of; 208.
 petition dated at; 134-136.
 Boreel, Mons., letter to; 112.
 Boristhenes, the river; 57.
 Borlum, laird of, to be seized; 173.
 Bornholm:
 Swedish cruisers near; 92.
 Sir J. Norris off; 93.
 island of; 96.
 English squadron off; 98, 99.
 Boroughbridge, Duke of Argyll at; 173.
 Boscawen:
 —, in Cornwall; 162, 163.
 Admiral, expedition under; 394.
 Boston, New England:
 letters dated at; 275-292.
 clergy, memorial of; 279, 280.
 Brattle Street; 280.
 North and South churches in; ib.
 Hollen Street; ib.
 ships from; 314.
 Bosworth, letter dated at; 320.
 Bothmar, M.; 101, 102.
 Boucher, Mrs., her house; 224, 226.
 Bougainville (Boncainville), M. de, at Quebec; 323, 325, 327.
 Boulby, Alderman, of Whithy; 359.
 Boulogne; 193.
 Bourbon, Duke of, George I.'s letters to;
 114, 115.
 Bourne, Lancaster; 164.
 Bournonville, Duke of:
 conference with; 118.
 his negotiation in Spain; 120.
 Bouverie, Mr.; 242.
 Bowles, Brigadier Phineas; 138.
 Bowman, Henry:
 letter on behalf of; 210.
 petition of; 212.
 memorial of; ib.
 Bowyer, W., letter of; 381.
 Boyle:
 Lord Townshend at; 405.
 Henry, secretary of state; 49.
 — letters to; 48, 49, 53, 58, 61, 64, 68.
 — letter of; 66.
 — extracts from his despatches; 60.
 — out of office; 76.
 — wine for; 82, 83.
 Brabant:
 Count Mansfeld in; 20.
 governor of; 88.
 Bracknell, letters dated at; 238, 241.
 Braddyll:
 Rog., letter of; 129.

- Braddyll, Thomas, governor of Fort William; 149.
- Bradfield Hall, letter dated at; 412.
- Bradford, Earl of (1780), his will; 349.
- Bradshaw, Sir Roger, letter to; 186.
- Braemar, document dated at; 160.
- Bragg, his regiment at Quebec; 324, 325.
- Brailli, Mons.; 192.
- Brandenburg, Elector of; 19.
- Branthwaite:
Mr.; 354.
Arthur; 340.
Miles, letter of; 319.
- Brassey, Nathaniel, nominated for Hertford; 352.
- Brattell, Daniel; 211.
- Brattle, justice of the Tower Hamlets; 210.
- Brazil, the diamond mines in; 351.
- Breadalbane:
Earl of (1715), his escape; 164.
— his castles taken; 182.
clan of; 194, 195.
- Breame, Robert, master of a ship; 74.
- Breckon, Miles, of Whitby; 359.
- Breda; 61.
treaty of; 155.
- Bredah, the ship; 116.
- Brent, Humphrey; 213.
letters of; 209, 213.
letter to; 212.
- Brest; 165.
- Bretland, Hannah, letter of; 250.
- Brewse, Sir William de; 1.
- Brewster, Samuel; 211.
- Briançon:
the French army at; 53.
advance on; 56.
French re-inforcements near; 58.
- Bridgeman:
Charles, letter of; 352.
Sir Orlando, governor of Barbadoes; 306.
- Bridges, William; 211.
- Bridgewater, Earl of:
(1676), warrant signed by; 44.
master of the horse to Prince George, his perquisite; 204.
- Bridport, election for; 187.
- Briel, letter dated at; 87.
- Brigge, Gregorie; 10.
- Brill; 336, 337.
- Bristol; 194.
letters dated at; 132, 270, 372, 373, 375, 379.
to be the rebels' place of arms; 174.
Hotwell; 347.
- Bishop of (1710), Dr. Robinson, letter of; 129.
- (1714), Smallridge, letter to; 157.
- — — — —, letter of; 132.
- Earl of (1742); 357.
- Britiffe:
Robert, letters of; 330, 334, 348, 349, 352, 353.
— his nephew; 349.
councillor; 339.
- Brittany:
Duke of (1709); 52.
ports of; 196, 197.
- Brockholes, Mr., of Cloughton; 164.
- Broglio, Duc de (1729), letter of; 121.
- Broglio, Count de, letter of; 142.
- Brograve, Lieut. William, letter of; 397.
- Brome, letters dated at; 313, 337.
- Bromley, Mr. or William:
secretary, letters of; 220, 221.
his place; 26.
Speaker; 143.
- Brompton on Cape Fear river; 262.
- Brooks, Mr., of New Bond Street; 378.
- Brookside, Lancaster; 164.
- Broussin, M., his wigs; 342.
- Brown, Browne:
Major, letters received from; 164, 165, 166.
— at Preston; 169, 170.
Master, arrest of; 162.
Charles; 320.
Rev. R., letter of; 390.
Richard, documents signed by; 26.
Robert, letter of; 190.
- Bruere, George, of Great Marlow; 145.
- Bruges, letter dated at; 157.
- Brunaud, M., letter of; 207.
- Brunswick:
letter dated at; 113.
Congress at; 87.
Duke of (temp. Jac. I.), his visit to England; 21.
- Brussels:
letters dated at; 57, 62, 65, 73, 74, 79, 121, 166, 349.
Charles II.'s court at; 23.
- Bruyninx, Mons. Hamel, conference with; 118.
- Brydges, Mrs., of Duke Street; 191.
- Buchanan, James, his case; 301.
- Bucke, Mr.; 10.
- Buckenham Castle; 19.
- Buckholt, Mr., of Prince George's household; 202.
- Buckhurst, Lord:
(1579); 7.
(1596); 9.
Thomas (1601), letters of; 12, 13.
- Buckingham, Duke of:
(1622); 21.
(1676), sent to the Tower; 44.
set at liberty; 45.
(1714); 220, 224.
- Buckinghamshire:
elections in; 134.
Lord (1770), his marriage; 409, 410.
- Buckler, John, ship owner; 98.
- Buckley, Samuel; 350.
- Buckton, George, letter of; 314.
- Buckworth, Mr., tutor at Cambridge; 13-15.
- Budworth, Timothy, valuation by; 202.
- Buenos Ayres; 66, 72, 85, 128.
- Buenretiros, treaty made at; 112.
- Bugnot, Colonel, proposal by; 81.

Bulkeley:
 Sir David, letter of; 344.
 Sir Dewey, candidate for Bridport; 137.

Bull:
 Jasper, letter of; 362.
 William, Speaker of Assembly of South Carolina; 267, 268.
 — letter of; 268.

Bullen, George, sent to the Tower; 45.

Bullock, Colby, letter to; 397.

Bulwick; 250.

Bumper sloop; 270.

Buncombe, —, his play Junius-Brutus; 244.

Burchett, Josiah:
 secretary to the Admiralty; 59, 115.
 letter of; 81.

Burford, the ship; 94, 394.

Burgate near Fordingbridge; 344.

Burghley, Lord:
 documents signed by; 3, 4.
 and Lady, bequests to; 7.

Burgos in Spain; 80.

Burgundy, Duke of (1710); 65.

Burke, Toby; 200.

Burn-Parker, John, consul at Oporto, his pay; 126.

Burnet:
 Bishop, and Lord Wharton, verses on; 46, 47.
 T., memorial signed by; 274.
 William, governor of Massachusetts Bay; 273.
 — memorial on behalf of his children; 274.
 — governor of New York; 296.

Burney, Charles, letter of; 395.

Burnham, petition from inhabitants of; 18.

Burrell, Peter; 137.

Burris, Onalow, secretary at Antwerp, his pay; 126.

Burslem, J., letter of; 320.

Burton-on-Trent, church of, brief for; 214.

Burt, Thomas:
 a non-juror; 139.
 letter to; 140.

Bury St. Edmunds; 339.
 bankers at; 357.
 the Angel; 397.

Bushell, Mr.; 10.

Bushy; 249.

Bute, Lord (1757); 393.
 (1764); 399, 400.

Butler:
 Mr., of Rawcliffe; 164.
 Lady E.; 239.
 J., letter of; 346.

Butter factors; 354.

Batts:
 Mrs., bequest to; 7.
 Sir William; 2.

Buxton, letter dated at; 368.

Buys:
 Willem; 51.
 Mons., letters of and to; 69.

Byles, Mather, pastor in Boston, Mass.; 280.

Byng:
 Admiral, his house in Hertzs; 310.
 Sir George, orders signed by; 59.
 — instructions signed by; 89.
 — fleet under; 139.
 — on the Irish coast; 160.
 Robert, governor of Barbadoes; 265, 306.
 — letter of; 302.

Byron, Richard; 211.

C.

Cabal, the (1720), designs of; 104.

Cable, Thomas, bell-ringer, petition of; 221.

Caderhielm, Mons., a prisoner; 65.

Cadix; 66, 128, 196.
 English merchants at; 349.

Cadogan, General William, afterwards Lord; 49, 68.
 wounded at Mons; 57.
 his aide-de-camp; 57.
 the Emperor's praise of; 88.
 letter of; 166.
 in command of Dutch troops; 179, 180.
 his plan of operations; 181, 183.
 in Scotland; 186.
 at the Tower; 216.
 his secretary Pearce; ib.
 (1716), letter to; 133.
 (1722); 138.
 on the Council; 192.
 Col. Dunbar and; 283.

Caesar:
 Charles; 211.
 Sir Julius; 19.

Cairnes, Sir Alex., grant in Nova Sootia to; 296.

Calais; 190.

Calder, laird of, his men; 195.

Callendar, Earl of (1675), garrison put in his house; 84.

Callicut, on the Malabar coast; 133.

Calthorpe:
 Sir Christopher, letters of; 25.
 Sir James, letter of; 35.
 James, deed by; 29.
 — letters of; 329, 337.
 Mr., his wife's portion; 37.

Calverley:
 Sir Walter, letter to; 125.
 Ellinor, petition of; 214.

Calvert:
 Mr., clerk of the Council; 38.
 Sir W.; 363.

Cambray:
 letter dated at; 114.
 French camp at; 62.
 Archbishop of, Fenelon; 108.

Cambric, manufacture of; 114.

Cambridge:

corporation, members of, discommoned; 127.

university, vice-chancellor of; 127.

— persons discompanied by; 127.

— address to George I. from; 133.

— vice-chancellor, &c., letter of;
341.

— grant of Dr. Moore's library to;
341.

— electors of; 353.

— election for; 357.

— election of chancellor; 363.

— chancellor of; 367.

— regius professorship at; 367.

— Lord Townshend's prize essay on trade; 382-392.

Bennet or Corpus Christi College, bequest to; 6.

— letter dated at; 367.

Caius College; 397.

Christ's College; 384, 385.

Clare Hall; 385.

King's College; 335.

Magdalen College; 391.

Peterhouse; 387, 391.

— mastership of; 367.

St. John's College; 335, 363, 367, 385.

Trinity College; 367, 384, 385.

— cost of living, &c. at, 1603-1609;
13-17.

Massachusetts, pastor in; 280.

Richard; 138, 139.

— his attorney; 138.

— his book keeper; 139.

— petition of; 140.

Cambridgeshire, election for; 357.

Camerons, the, of Lochiel; 195.

Camina; 148.

Campbell:

Captain, aide-de-camp; 386.

Lieut.-Col., of Finab; 164.

Colin, witness; 156.

Sir Duncan, of Lochnell; 164.

Francis and A., letter of; 164.

Frederick; 362.

Lord Frederick; 405.

J., letter of; 159.

John; 137.

— letter of; 166.

General John, letter of; 360.

— his expedition in quest of
Charles Edward; 361, 362.

Neill, minister of Renfrew; 178.

Campden:

letter dated at; 245.

church, inscriptions in; 245.

Lord (1770); 407.

Canada, the French in; 307 et seq.

Candles, made from bayes; 278.

Cantellon, Richard, banker; 157.

Canterbury, Archbishop of:

(1596); 9.

(1668), letter of; 25.

(1704), Tenison, letter of; 329.

Canterbury, Archbishop of—cont.

(1721) Wake, letter of; 108.

and M. Valois de Terrefort; 135, 136.

Cantillion, Mr., of Albemarle Street; 238.

Cape Breton, report concerning; 294, 295.

Cape Fair; 305.

Cape Fear; 258, 262, 264, 270.

description of; 262.

Carac, sloop taken by the Spaniards; 148.

Carbery, Lord:

George; 36.

(1675), warrant signed by; 43.

Cardigan, Lady; 241.

Cardonnel, Adam; 68, 69, 73, 81, 337.

letters of; 79, 128.

Cardross, Lord:

finned and imprisoned; 33, 34.

his wife's conventicles; ib.

garrison put in his house; 34.

Carew, Sir W.; 172.

Carey, Captain; 65.

Carie, Sir Hinerie; 10.

Caris, Mons. H. de, letter of; 163.

Carleton, Colonel, wounded; 324.

Carlisle:

governor of; 169.

Earl of, Garter given to; 21.

— (1718), letter of; 169.

— (1787), and Lady Irwin's match;
248.

Carlsrona, British fleet near; 98, 99.

Carlton, Lord (1720), proposed secretary of state; 106.

Carmarthen, Marquis of (1709); 335.

Carnarvon, Lady; 248.

Carhon, Moses, letter of; 129.

Carns, Mr., of Halton; 164.

Carnwath, Earl of, the late (1721); 343.

Carolina; 254, 256.

Carolina:

answers to queries about; 254, 255.

North and South, agreement for sale
of; 255.

governors of, their pay; 265.

Carpenter, General George:

wounded at Almenara; 72.

his dragoons; 159, 161.

court-martials under; 170.

letter of; 170.

his grievances; 170, 171.

slow motion of; 173.

ordered to attack the Northumberland rebels; 176, 177.

at Preston; 178.

Lord, payment on account of; 342,
343.

Lord (1730); 122.

Carr:

R., warrant signed by; 43.

Col. T., certificate by; 152.

Carron, Mr., of the French church at Wapping; 129.

Carson, Cornet, killed at Almenara; 71.

Carstaires, Captain, charges against; 83.

- Carter:
Mr., gardener; 205.
John, petition of; 145.
- Carteret, Lord:
(1721); 108.
(1722), letter to; 137.
(1730); 122.
in Cornwall; 162.
letter of; ib.
(1734); 243.
(1742); 126.
proprietor in Carolina; 255, 257.
- Carteret, Edward, Postmaster-General,
letter of; 192.
- Carthagena, French ships near; 77.
- Cartis, Captain, of the St. James; 148.
- Cartwright, —, niece to Lord Townshend;
86.
- Carus, Thomas; 168.
- Cary:
Mr.; 346, 348.
Dr. Nicholas, libel by; 44.
— his wife Amée; ib.
— fined; ib.
Walter; 207.
- Case:
Mr.; 356, 398.
— deputy clerk of the peace for
Norfolk; 396.
Philip, letter to; 395.
- Cashe, Mr.; 10.
- Cashel, Suire Castle near; 412.
- Case:
John, alderman; 211.
Sir John; 213.
- Castile; 77.
- Castle Ashby; 220, 237, 238, 239,
248–254 passim, 318.
- Castlecomer, Lord (1715), petition signed by; 130.
- Castle Howard:
letter dated at; 190.
Lord Carlisle at; ib.
- Castle Rising, election for; 340.
- Catalonia:
French army in; 55.
recruits for; 65, 67.
campaign in; 79.
army in; 86.
- Catawba Indians; 269.
- Cathcart, Colonel; 84.
- Cattell, John, master of ship; 140.
- Cave, Sir Ralph, letter of; 18.
- Cavendish:
Lord (1675), sent to the Tower; 43.
— his discharge; 44.
Lord James; 137.
- Cavenham, Suffolk, estate at; 396.
- Cayley, William, consul at Faro, his pay; 126.
- Cecil:
Mr.; 244.
Sir Robert, document signed by; 12.
— letter of; 7.
- Cell, Duke of, his powder; 51.
- Cenis, Mount, passage of Daun's army over; 53, 56.
- Centurion, the ship; 394.
- Cevennes, the, expected rising in; 53, 54, 71.
- Chamber, Thomas; 211.
- Chamberlain, the Lord (1596), his charges against Sir F. Wyndham; 10.
- Chambery, the French army at; 56.
- Chamley, Richard; 10.
- Chandler:
Dr. Edw., Bishop of Durham; 125.
Richard, commissioner of Customs;
150.
- Chandos, Duke of (1720); 106.
- Charie, Mr., of St. James's Street; 192.
- Charion, Mons., letters of; 74, 76.
- Charles, the Royal, ship; 27.
- Charles, William, parish clerk; 216.
- Charles Edward, Prince, expedition in search of; 361.
- Charles I., when Prince, his Spanish match; 21.
- Charles II.:
blank commission signed by; 23.
warrant signed by; 27.
his bad circumstances; 155.
- Charles III. of Spain; 52.
his recognition; 54. regiment raised by; 80.
- Charles VI., Emperor:
letter of; 88.
letters of and to; 107.
- Charles XII. of Sweden.
See Sweden, King of.
- Charles Town or Charleston; 260, 268.
petition on behalf of inhabitants 266. great fire at; ib.
other losses at; ib.
letter dated at; 268.
fortification of; 271.
- Charlton, Edward, protest by; 300.
- Charlley; 226.
- Chartreuse, the; 56.
- Chatham:
English men-of-war at; 196.
Earl of (1770), motion by; 407.
- Chattahoochee river; 269.
- Chattsworth:
Richard; 168.
- Chauncey, Mr.:
letter to; 190.
- Chauncy, Charles:
pastor in Boston, Mass.; 230.
- Chaworth, Patrick; 137.
- Checkley, Samuel:
pastor in Boston, Mass.; 230.
- Chelsea:
letters dated at; 207, 210.
College, books of; 349.
Horse ferry at; 157.
Hospital, Commissioners of; 210, 212.
- Chenevix, Dr. Richard:
letter of; 404.
- Cherburgh, taking of; 153.
- Cherokee Indians; 261, 269.
- Cheshire, Mr., of Devonshire Square; 190.
- Chester:
town major of; 168.
Lady; 238.

- Chesterfield, Earl of, his going to Paris ; 332.
- Chetwen, — ; 229.
- Chetwynd :
 Mr., governor of Barbadoes ; 306.
 John, at Turin, letters of ; 51, 53, 60-73 passim.
 — letter to ; 59.
 William, of the Admiralty ; 115.
- Chicheley, Tho., warrant signed by ; 43.
- Chichester, Bishop of (1709) 335.
- Chicken, George ; 254.
- Chicksaw Indians ; 259-262, 269.
 reports of General Oglethorpe's audiences with ; 259, 262.
- Child :
 Messrs., the bankers ; 364, 365.
 Mr. ; 369, 398.
- Chippenham, letters dated at ; 118, 379.
- Chislehurst rectory ; 406.
- Chiswick ; 249.
 letter dated at ; 210.
- Chitney, Mr. ; 73.
- Chitty, Joseph, Russian merchant, petition of ; 146, 147.
- Chocktaw or Chacktaw Indians ; 261, 269.
- Choisy, Mons. de, letter of ; 108.
- Chomley, Cholmley :
 Mr., his marriage ; 224.
 Hugh, letter to ; 359.
- Chorley, Charles and Richard ; 168.
- Chouet, secretary, letter of ; 85.
- Chronicle, the, libel called ; 44.
- Churchill :
 his dragoons ; 178.
 General Charles, his regiment ; 201, 204.
 Major William, letter of ; 201.
 — debt due to ; 204.
- Churchman, Mr., under sheriff ; 334.
- Cintra, letter dated at ; 252.
- Clanronald :
 Captain of ; 164.
 Lady ; 362.
- Clare, Viscount, letter of ; 408.
- Claremont ; 400, 401.
 letters dated at ; 109, 383.
- Clarendon, Earl of, opinion of ; 74.
 (1784) ; 245.
- Clarke :
 governor of New York ; 269.
 Mr. ; 27.
 Sir Samuel ; 213.
 Sir Simon, of the Jamaica Council ; 301.
 Thomas, witness ; 156.
 Sir Thomas ; 352.
- Cloughton, Lancaster ; 164.
- Clayering, John, of Great Marlow ; 145.
- Clayton, his regiment ; 166, 177.
 Colonel, governor of Inverness ; 198.
 — wounded at Mons ; 336.
 Mr. ; 346.
 Jasper, letter of ; 116.
- Clement, Louis, letter to ; 192.
- Clendwarton township ; 11.
- Clere, Sir Edward, letters of ; 1, 7.
- Cleve, country of ; 19.
- Cleveland, William, left in command of the Baltic ; 101, 102.
 instructions to ; 102.
- Clifford :
 George, & Co. ; 107.
 — of Amsterdam ; 342.
- Clifton, Henry, plaintiff ; 17.
- Cliftons, Mr., of Lytham ; 164.
- Clignet :
 Mons., letter of ; 65.
 — postmaster at Leyden ; 76.
 Nicholas, letter of ; 55.
- Clive, Lord (1769), his brother ; 406.
- Club, the October ; 78.
- Clutterbuck, Thomas, of the Admiralty ; 148.
- Coach hire, charges for ; 212.
- Coals :
 sea, exportation of ; 41.
 price of ; 331.
- Cobbett, Major Robert :
 sent to the Tower ; 43.
 his discharge ; 44.
- Cobham :
 his dragoons ; 178.
 Lord (1596) of the Council ; 9.
 — (1716) ; 102.
 — (1722) ; 138.
 — (1784), his house and gardens ; 239, 240.
 — (1739), letter of ; 124.
 F., letter signed ; 8.
- Cochrane, Lord ; 33.
- Cockburn :
 James, at Turin, letters of ; 54-58, 61, 67, 71, 76-78.
 — memorial of ; 150.
 John, letter of ; 64.
 — of the Admiralty ; 115.
- Cocky, Mark ; 107.
- Coddington, John, statement by ; 232.
- Coghill, Marmaduke ; 142.
- Coke :
 Mr., judgment by ; 9.
 Sir Edward, quotation from ; 125.
 upon Littleton ; 236.
 vice-chamberlain ; 248.
- Cole :
 Christian, letters of ; 52, 69.
 John, wine merchant ; 400.
 Thomas, scheme by ; 306.
- Colebrooke, —, merchant ; 52.
 John, letter of ; 191.
- Colis, Dr. ; 240.
- Colleton, J. ; 255, 257.
- Collier, J., letter of ; 207.
- Collington, warrant by ; 34.
- Collins, John, sheriff of Treworgan ; 208.
- Colman :
 his land scheme ; 288, 290.
 Mr. ; 382.
 Benjamin, pastor in Boston, Mass. ; 280.
- Colmenero, Count of, the Duke of Marlborough and ; 75.
- Cologne, the Pretender at ; 200.
- Comet, a, appearance of ; 27.
- Commerce, Tucker's correspondence with Lord Townshend on ; 371-379, 382.

- Commerce, the Pretender at ; 166, 200.
 Commonwealth, the, proclamation concerning; 38.
 Como, Signor, letter to ; 121.
 Compton :
 in the Hole, Northants ; 236.
 Lord, letters of ; 238.
 — his school at Fulham ; 238-242, 250-254.
 Mr. ; 10.
 Lady Anne, letter of ; 238.
 Lady Betty ; 236.
 Charles, consul in Portugal, letters of ; 247, 350, 351.
 — envoy, his pay and allowance ; 126.
 Mrs. Charles, letter of ; 252.
 Lady Elizabeth ; 309, 310, 311, 312, 314.
 — letters of ; 241, 242, 247, 248.
 George, letter of ; 358.
 Col. Hatton, letter of ; 162.
 Gen. Hatton, letters of and to ; 218.
 Dr. Henry, Bishop of London, letter of ; 129.
 Lady Jane, letters of ; 247, 251, 258.
 Lady Mary, letter of ; 409.
 Lady Penelope, letters of ; 237, 238, 241, 246, 248.
 Spencer, petitions and letters to ; 127-131.
 — report by ; 129.
 — Speaker ; 132.
 — oath taken by, as privy councillor ; ib.
 — member for Eye ; 137.
 — Paymaster-General, letter to ; 138.
 — letters addressed to ; 144.
 — his accounts, &c., as treasurer to Prince George of Denmark ; 201-204.
 — treasurer to the Prince of Wales ; 205.
 — letters of and to ; 206-208, 329-336 passim, 342-345.
 — Speaker ; 207.
 — elected for Sussex ; 344.
 See Wilmington, Earl of.
 — Vinate ; 241, 242.
 Concannen, Matthew, of Jamaica ; 297.
 Confians, army at ; 56.
 Conformity, the bill of ; 25.
 Coninek, Baron ; 51.
 Coningsby, Lord (1721), letter of ; 343.
 Conington, letter dated at ; 408.
 Connecticut :
 governor of ; 276.
 petition from ; 302.
 Connor, John, a smuggler ; 406.
 Conolly :
 Mr. ; 408.
 Miss, her marriage ; 409, 410.
 Consett, Thomas, letter of ; 348.
 Constabill, Sir William ; 11.
 Constant, Nicholas, master of ship ; 89.
 Constantinople, Sir William Hussey at ; 130.
 Cont, Samuel, master of ship ; 89.
 Conway, letter dated at ; 158.
 Cooke :
 —, killed ; 27.
 Thomas ; 212.
 William, letter of ; 329.
 Cooper :
 Captain, of the Townshend packet ; 350.
 Thomas ; 339.
 — his falling out with R. Markham ; 8.
 William, pastor in Boston, Mass. ; 280.
 Coote, Robert ; 11.
 Cope, James, envoy, his pay and allowance ; 126.
 Copenhagen :
 letters dated at ; 67, 79, 81, 82, 84, 93, 98, 100, 101.
 D. Pulteney at ; 58. ship detained at ; 98.
 plan for attacking ; 412.
 Coram :
 Captain ; 288, 289.
 Horatio Walpole and ; 288.
 Corben, Mr. ; 228.
 Corbett :
 Ann, letter of ; 24.
 Sir John ; 23.
 — election of ; 23.
 Myles, commissioner ; 11.
 Corbiere, Anthony, letter of ; 65.
 Cordil, Sir John ; 29.
 Corker, Robert : of the Duchy of Cornwall, his accounts ; 207.
 letter of ; 347.
 Corn :
 its export prohibited ; 2, 3.
 carrying of, prohibited ; 12.
 petition for transportation of ; 12.
 dearth of ; 41.
 bounty on, arguments concerning ; 371-379.
 bill, the ; 418.
 Cornelius, Capt. Thomas, petitions of ; 209.
 Cornwall :
 and the West, Jacobites in ; 162.
 tinners in ; 163.
 Duchy of, papers relating to ; 205.
 sheriff of ; 207.
 tin trade in ; 347, 348.
 Cornwallis :
 Lord (1676), indicted for murder ; 45.
 — (1710), letter of ; 337.
 — (1715), letter of ; 340.
 Countess of, letters of ; 313, 318.
 General ; 408.
 Mr. ; 363.
 Sir Charles, letter to ; 18.
 Corrodale, Charles Edward at ; 362.
 Corson, Nate ; 230.
 Cosby, Colonel, governor of New York ; 297, 298.
 Cosnall, Mr. ; 10.
 Cosnok, laird of ; 34.
 Costa, Anthony da, letter of ; 129.

Cotes:

- Dr.; 246.
- Lady Dorothy, letter of; 233.
- John, franks by; 228-230.

Cottington, Sir Francis; 22.

Cotton:

- Mr. and Mrs.; 229.
- Mr., his Honingham estate; 353.
- John; 168.
- Sir John Hynde, letter of; 357.
- Robert; 168.

Cottrel, Sir Clement; 88.

Coulade, French general; 177.

Council, Privy:

- letters of and to; 12, 18, 19, 20, 23.
- members of, oath taken and fees paid by; 133.
- letters and orders of; 220, 221.
- minutes of; 162, 163, 187, 192.

Coupar of Angus; 161.

Couraud, John, letter of; 121.

Courtail, Rev. Mr., of Clare Hall, Cambridge; 385.

Courtney, Courtenay, Lady Anne; 223.

- letters of; 220, 233, 234, 235.

Coventry; 346.

- Lord (1737), and his sons; 252.
- H., warrants signed by; 43, 44.
- William; 148.

Coverdale, William, of Whitby; 359.

Cowper:

- Lord (1718), a godfather; 340.
- Lord (1730); 106.
- Lady; 248.
- William, to be Lord Keeper; 331.

Cox, Sir Robert and Lady; 252.

Coxe:

Archdeacon, letters printed by; 104, 109, 120.

- Dr., his memorial about Carolina; 254.
- reports on his claim; 254, 256.

Cracherode, Anthony:

- report by; 190.
- letter of; 349.

Craggs:

- James, secretary, &c.; 137, 334.
- his illness; 107.
- in Spain, letters of; 68, 72.
- in Lancashire, letters of; 169-171.
- letter of; 386.
- of the Ordnance Office; 222.

Cranke, P., of Tower Hill; 215.

Cranmer; 319.

Crauenburgh, Mons. de; 70.

Craven, Earl of:

- (1676), warrant signed by; 44.
- proprietor in Carolina (1730); 255, 257.

Crawford:

- Lord (1745), his corps; 152.
- David, letter of; 210.
- J., certificate of; 217.
- Thomas, letter of; 344.

Creek Indians, Upper and Lower; 260, 261, 269, 270.

Cricklade, election for; 137.

Crispe:

- Mr.; 210.
- J. D., letter of; 212.

Croft:

- Dr., his sister; 239.
- his school; 239, 240.
- Mr., his mare; 369.
- or Croftes, Sir James; 3, 4.

Crofton, Edward; 142.

Crofts:

- Colonel; 336.
- Mrs.; 239.

Cromarty, Earl of, chamberlain of Ross; 160.

Cromen, an Irishman; 27.

Cromwell, Lord (1600), imprisoned; 10.

Cronslot (?), Russian fleet at; 91.

Crooke, Jo., letter of; 18.

Crosby, Major William; 192.

Crosse, Lieut. John, letter of; 406.

Cuba; 116.

Culford; 313, 318.

Cumberland, the, Sir J. Norris's ship; 90-99 passim.

Cumberland, Duke of:

- Commander-in-Chief; 152.
- (1748); 363, 364, 365.
- (1755), Roger Townshend's disfavour with; 386, 387.

Cunningham:

- Colonel, recommended by Wade; 198.
- Lieut., affidavit by; 102.
- Mr.; 194.
- Alexander, letters of; 73, 75, 84, 840.
- Henry, letter of; 297.

Curacao; 148.

Curson:

- Mr., muster-master of Norfolk; 19.
- Robert, petition of; 98.

Curzon, Henry, letters of; 11.

Cust, Mr.; 352.

Custance, Hambleton, letter of; 382.

Customs, Commissioners of; 150.

Czarenburg, Madlle.; 62.

D.

Dacres, Richard, letter of; 392.

D'Aix, Marquis, letter of; 121.

D'Alais, Isaac, secretary at Hanover, letters of; 77.

Dalham, letter dated at; 368.

Dalkeith, Lady; 314, 315, 395, 403.

D'Allonne, Mons., letter of; 382.

Dalrymple, Sir David; 187.

Dalton, Mr., of Thurnham; 164.

Dalzell, a Jacobite; 170.

Dampier, Captain, his voyage round the world; 188, 141.

- Danby, Earl of, warrants signed by ; 43-45.
 Dandridge, Captain, of the South Sea Castle ; 271.
 Daniel, Robert :
 letters of ; 121, 349.
 agent in the low countries, his pay ; 126.
 Dantzig ; 51.
 plague at ; 55.
 Sir J. Norris at ; 92.
 Danube, the river ; 79.
 Danvers, Col. Henry :
 sent to the Tower ; 43.
 his discharge ; 44.
 Darcy :
 Conyers ; 103.
 Sir Conyers, grant to ; 132.
 D'Arseiller, Marquis ; 55.
 Dartmouth ; 194.
 election for ; 137.
 the ship ; 63.
 Lord, afterwards Earl of, letter of ; 333.
 — (1709), report by ; 137.
 — (1710), made secretary of state ; 67.
 — (1718), letters of ; 217.
 — (1714), ; 220, 324.
 Dashwood, Henry :
 his marriage ; 409.
 Dasoune, Mr. ; 10.
 Daun, Marshal :
 review at Orbassano by ; 53.
 at Ossois ; 54.
 Prince Eugene's nephews with ; 54. operations by ; 56.
 at Turin ; 58, 65, 68.
 leaves Turin ; 69.
 Davall, Sir Thomas ; 311.
 Davidson, Captain of the St. Andrew ; 304.
 Davies :
 Sir Charles ; 10.
 Sir John ; 10.
 Rev. R., letter of ; 131.
 Davis, Mr., of Rotterdam ; 80.
 Davy, Edward, letter of ; 320.
 Dawkins, Henry, protest by ; 300.
 Dawson, J. ; 255.
 Dayrolle, English Resident at the Hague ; 107, 109.
 Dayrolles, Mr., at Leyden ; 193.
 Dean, Forest of ; 136.
 Deane, John, consul in Flanders, his pay ; 126.
 Decker, Sir Mathew ; 346.
 letter of ; 347.
 essay by ; 376.
 De Grey, Mr. :
 his health ; 359.
 his illness ; 405.
 Deguenfeld, Countess of ; 109.
 Dehn, Baron, letters of and to ; 118.
 Delafaye, Charles :
 letter of ; 121.
 letter to ; 120.
 certificates by ; 127, 146.
 Delamotte, Captain, of the Dispatch ; 148.
 Delauney, Major, at Quebec ; 322.
 Delavall, Sir John ; 341.
 Delawarr, Lord :
 (1709), groom of the stole to Prince George, mem. by ; 202.
 his fee and perquisite ; 204.
 Deloraine, Earl of (1715) ; 186.
 Denham, co. Suffolk, bequest to ; 40.
 Denmark :
 and Sweden ; 62.
 alliance with ; 64.
 privateers of ; 65.
 fleet of, and the Swedes ; 91, 92, 96.
 English squadron provisioned by, &c. ; 94-101.
 English envoy to, his pay and allowance ; 136.
 King of ; 22.
 — (1709), in Holstein ; 52.
 — his neutrality ; 53.
 — his attack on Sweden ; 58.
 Queen of ; 93, 94.
 Dennett, Robert ; 211.
 Denton, Judge ; 239.
 Denver :
 sluice ; 364.
 cottage ; 409.
 D'Eon, Chevalier, letter of ; 412.
 Deptford, the ship ; 81.
 Derby :
 —, a chaplain ; 394.
 election for ; 137.
 Derbyshire, lord lieutenant of ; 408.
 Dereham, East, Norfolk :
 letter dated at ; 404, 406.
 vicarage and rectory of ; 405.
 Dering, Edward, deputy clerk of the Council in Ireland ; 142.
 Derwentwater, Earl of :
 (1715), letter to ; 168.
 Lord Carlisle's interview with ; 169.
 his relations with the Jacobites ; 169-172.
 proposed hostage ; 171.
 Desbouverie, Sir Edward ; 137.
 Desbouvrie, Mr., death of ; 244.
 Devisseau, Sieur, advertisement concerning ; 78.
 Devonshire, Duke of :
 (1716), proposed President of the Council ; 102.
 (1717), his house ; 190.
 (1720) ; 106.
 (1726), his succession to Lord Galway ; 114, 115.
 (1734), and Ireland ; 243.
 (1749) ; 368.
 (1764), his political influence, &c. ; 398, 399.
 Charles Townshend and ; 399.
 (1766) ; 403.
 Devonshire, the ship ; 60.
 Deyson, his pension ; 408.
 Diamonds :
 cutting, profit on ; 351, 352.
 sale of ; 350, 351.
 seizure of, in Portugal ; 351.

- Diccinson, Roger; 168.
 Dicker:
 Dr. Lee; 291.
 Samuel, of the Jamaica Council; 301.
 Didlington; 406.
 Diemar, General, envoy from Hesse; 118.
 Dieppe, letter dated at; 190.
 Diligence, the ship, loss of; 140.
 Dillon:
 —, in Ireland; 177.
 Robert, letter to; 191.
 Dimples, Lancaster; 164.
 Dingwall, election of magistrates at; 195.
 Dirckens, Nicholas; 107.
 Dispatch, the ship, taken by the Spaniards; 148.
 Dnieper, the river; 51.
 Dobree, Peter, of Monument Yard; 150.
 Dockmanique, Paul; 211.
 Docminique, Paul, commissioner of trade; 296.
 Doddington, George, orders signed by; 59, 89.
 Dodaley the publisher; 378.
 Dolben, Sir John; 246.
 his son; 241.
 Dolep, Andrew, valuation by; 204.
 Dolman, Thomas, warrant signed by; 45.
 Donachadee; 177.
 Donaldson, Captain, of the sloop Carac; 148.
 Doncaster, Earl of (1622); 21.
 Dorington, Colonel; 168.
 Dormer, Brigadier, his regiment; 170, 178.
 wounded; 178.
 Dornbusch; 98.
 Dorothy, the ship; 89.
 Dorp, Madlle.; 78.
 Dorpere, Lewis de, letter of; 129.
 Dorrell, John; 211.
 Dorset:
 corps at Exeter; 319.
 yacht, commander of; 410-412.
 Duke of (1721); 348.
 — (1725), farm of; 345.
 Duchess of, her illness; 243.
 Dorval, letter signed; 192.
 Dorwind; 91.
 Douay:
 siege of; 64.
 camp before; 67, 68, 69.
 capture of; 69.
 rendition of; 78.
 camp before; 337.
 Douglas:
 Brigadier, his regiment; 63.
 Colonel, his claim on France; 121.
 — his marriage; 248.
 Dove, Daniel, alderman of Cambridge; 127.
 Dover:
 letters dated at; 162, 343.
 divisions in the corporation; 343.
 port, tax for improvement of; 4.
 Dowdswell, Mr., motion by; 407.
 Doweall, Mr.; 10.
 Downe, Lord (1715); 169.
 Downham, William, of Bristol, petitions of; 194.
 Doyly, D'Oyly:
 Major; 218.
 Robert; 211.
 Sir William, letters of; 23, 26.
 — his government of Yarmouth; 26.
 Drake:
 Sir Francis, his mare; 368.
 Thomas, letter of; 251.
 Draper:
 Mathew, of Landguard Fort; 102.
 Sir William; 406.
 Draycott:
 Mr., examination of; 192.
 Mrs., letter to; 191.
 Dresden:
 document dated at; 50.
 letters dated at; 82, 83, 86.
 Drewry, Drury:
 Drew; 2.
 Sir Drew, letters of; 1.
 Driscall, —, arrest of; 162.
 Drummond:
 Lord (1710), letter of; 64.
 — (1711), proposal to intercept his letters; 157.
 General, imprisoned in Dumbarton Castle; 38.
 Elizabeth, letter of; 409.
 John, letter of; 75.
 Dublin:
 letters dated at; 402, 407.
 Arrars Key; 191.
 Boyle Street; 392.
 Latins Court; 191.
 Trinity College, provost of; 412.
 Dubois:
 Cardinal, Lord Stanhope's effects placed with; 115.
 Mr., at Brill; 386.
 Du Casse, Cornet, wounded; 171.
 Ducie, Colonel; 365.
 Dudley, Colonel; 295.
 commissioner; 302, 303, 304.
 Duffus, Lord (1716), and Mr. Wich; 187.
 Dullingshams, farm of; 6.
 Dumbarton Castle, General Drummond a prisoner in; 33.
 Dumbane, Argyll's army at; 184.
 Dumfries, Earl of; 83.
 Dunbar, Colonel David, surveyor-general of woods in America; 276-279. letters and petition of; 282, 294.
 a bankrupt; 288.
 Duncan, Sir W.; 403.
 Dunch, Mrs., her daughter; 243.
 Duncombe:
 J., document signed; 28.
 Sir John, letter to; 28.
 Dundas, Mr.; 194.
 Dundee, the Pretender's supporters at; 161.
 Dungannon fort; 404.
 Dunkellin, Lord (1714), his marriage; 227.

Dunkirk; 338.
 letter dated at; 191.
 Italian soldiers at; 8.
 demolition of; 89.
 English resident at, his pay; 126.
 Dunmeath, co. Banff; 187.
 Du Plan, Mons., letter of; 125.
 Dupplin, Lord :
 letter of; 162.
 arrest of; ib.
 (1748); 362.
 Dupuis, Mons., his intrigues; 71.
 Durdon, Simon, of Limerick; 412.
 Durel, Admiral, English fleet under; 307, 308.
 Durham :
 justices of; 125.
 Bishop of (1789), letter of; 125.
 — Crew; 186.
 Dusseldorf; 76.
 Dutton, Sir John; 289.
 Dychfield, John, mayor of Lynn; 1.
 Dyom, Dr.; 364.

E

Eades, Elizabeth, petition of; 215.
 Eagle packet, her encounter with a privateer; 388, 339.
 Earl, an, fees paid on creation of; 39.
 Earle, Colonel Giles; 137.
 Earmer, Mrs.; 252.
 East Grinstead; 387.
 Eatington, Lower, letter dated at; 401.
 Eccles, letter dated at; 19.
 alehouses in; ib.
 Eccleston, Captain; 168.
 Economy, political, arguments relating to; 371-379.
 Eden, William, letter of; 160.
 Edenglassie; 187.
 Edgecomb, Mr.; 244.
 Edinburgh :
 documents dated at; 144, 157, 161, 166, 348.
 illegal impositions on; 35.
 election for; 137.
 defence of, against the rebels; 166, 177.
 memorials dated at; 194.
 postmaster of; 191.
 Allan's Close in; 198.
 the Cross; ib.
 Canon Gate; 190.
 Castle; 161.
 — Lord Cardross a prisoner in; 33.
 — arms, &c., in; 173.
 — attempt to surprise; 178, 174.

Edinburgh—cont.
 Castle, governor and lieutenant-governor of; 198.
 — proposed repairing of; 197.
 Tolbooth; 161.
 Edmonds, John, letter of; 129.
 Edwards, Chr. Perin, at Eton; 335.
 Egerton :
 Sir Thomas, letter of; 7.
 — Lord Keeper; 12.
 his regiment; 166.
 Eglinton, Earl of (1731); 343.
 Eindhoven, letters dated at; 363-365.
 Elcham, letters dated at; 402, 403.
 Elderton, John; 212, 218.
 Eldred, Mrs.; 357.
 Elizabeth, Queen, her health; 1, 7.
 judges threatened with removal by 9.
 Elizabeth, Princess, of Bohemia; 19.
 Elliott, Captain, his marriage; 248.
 Ellys, Sir John, vice-chancellor of Cambridge University; 127.
 Elphin, Lord Townshend at; 405.
 Elphinstone, Lord, secretary; 41.
 Elsinburg; 97.
 governor of; 99.
 Elsinore :
 consul's house at, burnt; 87.
 Grounds of; 93.
 Sir J. Norris at; 98, 94.
 Elston, Captain Robert, alleged murder by; 142.
 Elton, Sir Abraham; 194.
 Ely :
 letter dated at; 345.
 Isle of; 404.
 Bishop of (1716), the late, his library; 138.
 Gershom, of Jamaica; 297.
 Emeth manor; 18.
 Emmanuel, Prince, of Soissons; 54.
 Envoys, &c., English, abroad, their pay and allowances; 126.
 Erasmus, life of; 345.
 Eriswell, letter dated at; 413.
 Erle, Mr., of Heydon; 356.
 Ernie, J., warrants signed by; 44, 45.
 Erwyn, Major; 157.
 Espernon, Duke d', reported death of; 22.
 Essex :
 election for; 137.
 Earl of, his rebellion, persons implicated in; 10, 11.
 Lady (1758); 395.
 Esson, Mr.; 356.
 Etheredge, Sir John, of Great Marlow; 145.
 Etheridge, Sir James; 211.
 Etherington, Walter, letters of; 102, 131.
 Ethersey, an Oxford Jacobite; 167.
 Eton School; 48, 244, 385, 409.
 Eugene, Prince; 51.
 at the Hague; 63.
 illness of; 69.
 memorial to; 77.
 his negotiations with Villars; 87.

- Eugene, Prince—cont.
 governor of Brabant; 88.
 of Soissons; 54.
- Eustace :
 Mr.; 209.
 R., letter of; 192.
- Evans :
 General, his regiment in Ireland;
 174.
 Mr., with Argyll in Scotland, his indisposition; 182, 184.
 Mons., letter to; 191.
 John, merchant, case of; 180.
 Captain Thomas, his death; 144.
- Eveleigh, Samuel; 254.
- Evelyn :
 James, letter of; 122.
 John, commissioner of Customs;
 150.
- Evesham :
 mayor of; 239.
 corporation of; 249.
- Examiner, the, its attack on Marlborough;
 78.
- Exeter, letter dated at; 319.
- Exton, letter dated at; 352.
- Eye, election for; 137.
- Eyre :
 Mr., his son Thomas; 346, 347.
 Thomas, letter of; 354.

F.

- Fairfax :
 Lord, petition to; 24.
 Brian, commissioner of Customs; 150.
- Fakenham; 318.
 letter dated at; 821.
 manor; 19.
 the flying post at; 25.
 festivities at; 410.
- Falconer, John, sale to; 255.
- Falkirk, battle of; 151.
- Falmouth; 350.
 Lord (1723); 205.
 Lord Warden of the Stanneries, letter
 of; 208.
 (1734); 243.
- Falsham; 14.
- Farinelli; 242, 246.
- Farmer :
 Mr., messenger; 222, 223.
 or Fermor, Col. John; 137.
- Farming :
 opinions touching; 374.
 notes on; 412, 413.
- Faro, English consul at, his pay; 126.
- Farrington, General; 49.
- Farwell, Colonel, deputy governor of the Tower; 216.
- Faverge, camp at, letter from; 56.

- Feast, Felix; 211.
- Feilding, Mr.; 344.
- Felbrigg, Norfolk; 330.
- Fellowes, John, letter of; 129.
- Felton, T., letter of; 27.
- Feltwell, letter dated at; 17.
- Fenner, Edw., letter of; 18.
- Fens, the, corporation of; 362.
- Fenwicke, John, President of Council of South Carolina; 268.
- Ferdinand, Prince, his victory; 318.
- Ferguson, witness; 156.
- Fermor :
 Mr. and Mrs.; 243.
 Colonel John; 137.
 Thomas; 243.
- Ferrers :
 family; 245.
 Lord (1784); 245.
 — letters franked by; 224 et seq.
 — his gout; 225.
 Countess, Selina, letters of; 224,
 225, 227.
 Lady, wife of George Lord Townshend,
 letters to; 307-328.
 — Lady Essex and; 395.
 Mr., of Walton; 232.
 Dame Anne, letters of; 223, 225,
 226.
 Sir Henry; 46, 245.
 Sir Humfrey, petition of; 46.
- Fielding, Lady Betty; 244.
- Finall; 65. recruits at; ib.
- Finbo :
 Captain; 95.
 Major, at Copenhagen; 101.
- Finch :
 Lord Chancellor, warrants signed by;
 43-45.
 Mr., payments to; 37.
 — letter to; 111.
 Jeremiah, master of ship; 140.
 William, letters to; 112, 113.
- Finland; 117.
- Findlater, Earl of :
 (1714); 220.
 (1721), letter of; 343.
- Finlay, Robert, petition signed by; 130.
- Fisheries of Newfoundland; 294, 295.
- Fishermen, English and French, disputes between; 102.
- Fitzherbert, William, letter of; 392.
- Fitz Warine, Barony of; 41.
- Fitzwilliam, Richard, governor of the Bahamas; 800.
- Flamborough, the ship; 270, 271.
- Flamstead, John, his observations of the Heavens; 201.
- Flanders :
 Duke of Alva in; 2.
 the French in; 53.
 English consul in, his pay; 126.
 English troops brought from; 221.
- Fleetwood, John, consul at Naples; 340.
- Fleming :
 Count, Polish minister; 70.
 Tho., letter of; 18.

- Fletcher, James, mayor of Cambridge; 127.
- Fleury, Cardinal de :
letters of; 111, 112, 113.
and Lord Chesterfield; 332.
- Flood, Mr., of the Irish Parliament; 402.
- Florence :
English envoy at, his pay and allowance; 126.
letters dated at; 52 et seq. 66.
- Flotard, David, proposal and memorial by; 54.
- Floyd, Mr., letter to; 192.
- Floyer, Mr., at Tamworth; 390.
- Flushing, panic at; 2.
- Foglioso :
letter dated at; 71.
the French at; 73.
- Foley, Mr., of Stoake Hall; 215.
- Follers, Captain; 276.
- Fontainebleau, letters dated at; 110-114.
- Fontenoy, battle of; 152.
- Foot, Samuel, of Cornwall; 208.
- Forbes :
Mr.; 75.
John, letter of; 159.
- Ford, Mr., a Jacobite; 160.
- Fordham, letter dated at; 404.
- Fordingbridge; 344.
- Forest, the Black; 87.
- Forfar, Lord (1715), killed; 179, 180.
- Forrester, Lord, wounded at Preston; 178.
- Forster :
general of the Jacobites; 168-171.
Nicholas, mate of a ship; 149.
Thomas, letter to; 163.
- Fort Edward, camp at; 307.
- Fort Frederick, fort at; 294.
- Fort St. David, letter dated at; 354.
- Fort St. George, governor of; 149.
- Fort William :
governor of; 149.
garrison of; 184.
road to Inverness from; 198.
- Fortescue :
J., letter signed; 8.
Jo., of the Council; 12.
- Foster, Mr.; 10.
- Fosterburn, Danish fleet near; 92.
- Foulks, Captain; 369.
- Fountain, James, letter of; 25.
- Fountaine, James, letter to; 192.
- Fowke, General, governor of Gibraltar; 392, 393.
- Fowle :
Dr., his vote; 353.
John, of the Excise Office; 353.
- Fowler, Benjamin, of Tower Hill; 215.
- Fox :
Mrs., witness; 156.
Sir Stephen, letter of; 210.
Thomas, charge against; 144.
- Foxen, —, killed at Mons; 57.
- Frampton :
justice of the Tower Hamlets; 210.
Thomas; 211 213.
- France :
intended invasion by; 35.
Protestants of; 50.
army of, operations of; 55.
— its great distress; ib.
— destitute state of; 63.
help from Genoa to; 59.
and the English succession; 83.
losses incurred by; ib.
negotiations by; 87.
fishermen of, their disputes with the English; 102.
treaty with, opinion in Holland on; 103;
refugee ministers from; 108.
treaty of Spain with; 112.
secret treaty between the Emperor and Spain affecting; 119.
aggressions on Hudson's Bay Company by; 128.
her assistance to the Pretender; 165, 188.
her refusal to support the Jacobites; 174.
suspected of fomenting the rebellion; 177.
ambassador from (1718); 217.
and the red Indians; 260-262.
settlements of, in America, dangers from; 268, 269, 272.
her claims in Newfoundland; 294, 295.
her settlements in Louisiana; 296.
privateer of, encounter with; 333.
Queen of (1728), her confinement; 348.
- Francia, M., at Calais; 190.
- Francke, E., letter of; 168.
- Franklin, Rev. Edward, letter of; 356.
- Frankendale, siege of; 22.
- Frankfort; 76, 836.
letters dated at; 157, 159.
Lord Peterborough at; 78.
- Frankland :
Sir Thomas, memorial, &c. of; 149.
Captain Thomas, of the Rose; 304.
- Fraser :
Captain, at Quebec; 816, 323.
Simon, letters of; 407, 408.
clan of; 195.
- Freake, John :
libel by; 44.
imprisoned; 44, 45.
- Freame, Mr.; 302.
- Frederica town, Georgia; 271.
- Fredricksberg; 93, 94, 97, 99.
- Freiburg garrison; 87.
- Freind, Sir John, execution of; 35.
- French, Mrs.; 245, 381.
- Friend's Adventure, the ship; 89.
- Frieze, Prince of; 80.
- Frost, Simon, deputy secretary of Massachusetts Assembly; 281.
- Fulburne; 386.
- Fulham :
letters dated at; 129, 218.
Guillibeaup's school at; 239-242, 250-254.

Fuller:

- Mr.; 336.
- Rose, of the Jamaica Council; 301.
- Samuel, letters of; 329, 334, 339.

Fullerton, Mr.; 22.

Furnesse, Mr., elected at Dover; 343.

Fury, Mr.:

- agent at Vienna; 88.
- agent for South Carolina; 270.

G.

Gadford, Lieut.; 330.

Gage:

- Viscount, petition of; 136.
- Col., his regiment; 168.

Gainsborough:

- Lady; 238.
- Earl of (1738), letter of; 352.

Gale, William, letter of; 379.

Galexin, Prince, his operations on the coast of Finland; 92.

Galicia, troops for; 196.

Galway, Earl of (1707), letters of; 331-334.

Gamble, Mathew, commissioner; 11.

Game, preservation of; 379.

Garboldisham, letters dated at; 366.

Gardiner:

- Dr. Bernard, letter of; 157.
- Rev. Stephen, letter of; 331.

Gardner, Captain:

- of the Two Sisters; 148.
- of the guards; 406.

Garlies, Lord (1722), letter to; 191.

Garrard, Sir Samuel; 211.

Garthwaite, Edward, of the Jamaica Council; 301.

Garton, William, grant to; 8.

Gartaide, James, his case; 190.

Gascoigne:

- G. le, letter of; 3.
- Richard; 168.
- his last statement; 186.
- letters of, &c.; ib.
- one; 172.

Gascoin's powders; 251.

Gascoyne or Gaskin, condemned for horse stealing; 131.

Gatcomb, Mr.; 290.

Gates, Mr., musician; 242.

Gawdy:

- Sir Bassingbourne; 12.
- Sir Henry, letters to; 18, 19.
- Sir Robert, candidate; 21.
- Sir Roger; 21.
- Lady Winifred; 37.

Gay, Mr.:

- his play; 42.
- in Canada; 309, 319.

Goldenlew, Count, Danish fleet under; 95.

Gendrant or Genrault, Mons.; 330, 331.

Geneva; 157, 159.

letters dated at; 64, 82.

Genevre, Mount; 56.

Genoa; 337.

letters dated at; 73, 379.

ships of, proposed seizure of; 59.

English men-of-war at; 63, 64.

Lord Rochford at; 64.

General Wade at; 77.

account of society in; 379.

George I.:

letters of and to; 88, 107.

his letter to the Duke of Orleans; 109.

his letters to the Duke of Bourbon; 114, 115.

proclamation of, at the Tower; 220, 221.

at Greenwich; 222.

his coronation; 222, 225.

the Lords Justices and; 225.

address from Cambridge University to; 133.

petition to; ib.

George II.:

his accession; 118.

letter to; 118.

Lord Townshend's correspondence with; 120.

his letter to Louis XV.; 120, 121.

addresses to; 14.

petitions to; 145, 146.

his Queen's illness; 243, 244.

George, Prince, of Denmark:

accounts, &c. relating to; 200-215.

valuation of his effects after death; 202-204.

state of his regiment; 201, 204.

disputes in his household; 331.

letter to; 333.

George, brigantine, taken by the Spaniards; 148.

Georgia:

charter for; 258.

governor of, General Oglethorpe; 258.

trustees of, letter of; 259.

— memorial of; 271.

number of its inhabitants; 267.

the Spaniards' attack on; 270, 271.

saw mills in; 356.

Germany, conference about Protestants in; 108.

Germerseheim; 87.

Gerrard, Sir Gilbert, his daughter Charlotte; 136.

Gertruydenberg:

French ministers at; 63, 71.

letter dated at; 69.

conferences at; 70.

Ghent, letter dated at; 68.

Gibberish language, letters in; 158-156.

Gibbons, Mr.; 334.

his pension; 349.

Gibraltar:

- defence of; 111, 112, 115, 116.
- proposed restoration of; 119.
- Commons' address concerning; 146.
- chief justice of; 149.
- to be given to Spain; 197.
- Colonel Clayton at; 198.
- camp before, advices from; 199.
- letter dated at; 392.

Gibson:

- Mr.; 209.
- Thomas, assignments to and by; 129, 180.
- William, letter of; 85.

Gilkindie, laird of; 184.Gill, Robert, keeper of the lions; 216.*Gin Act, effects of; 299.*Girona, capitulation of; 79.*Gironne, siege of, raised; 79.*Gladman, John, letter of; 26.*Glasco, Mr., of Dublin; 191.*Glasgow:

- provost of, fined and imprisoned; 32.

mayor of; 162.regiments from Ireland at; 166.*militia of; 175.*Gleane, Sir Peter:

- letters of; 25, 29.

his dispute with Lord Townshend; 30.Gledhill, Mr., governor of Placentia; 285.*Glen, James, governor of South Carolina, letter of; 264.*Glengary, letter to; 164.*declaration of; *ib.Glinister, Mr.; 357.*Gloucester, Duke of (1770); 407.*Gloucestershire and Dr. Sacheverell; 64.*Glover:

- Richard, petition on behalf of; 214.

Thomas, petition of; 214.Goddard, Mr.; 77.*Godfrey:

- Mr.; 332.

Sherman; 211.Godolphin:

- Lord Treasurer; 49.

— resignation of; 73.— (1707); 331, 332.— letter of (1707); 333.— letter to; 130.Lord (1784); 243.— (1746), letter of; 359.*Colonel, letter to; 206.*Colonel Sidney, letter of; 206.*Sidney, letter of; 208.*Godsalve, Thomas, letter of; 23.*Goertz, Baron, memorial of; 62.*Gohre in Holland, letter dated at; 103.*Gold, seizure of, in Portugal; 351.*Goodfellow, Charles, ship owner; 90.*Goodhall, Mr.; 352.*Goosnargh, Lancaster; 164.*Gordon:

- Duke of (1725), his followers; 195.

General, in Argyllshire; 164.Gordon—*cont.Alexander, clerk of Council of South*Carolina; 268.*Sir George, of Edenglassie; 187.*John, petition of; 187.*Patrick, of Dunmeath; 187.*Sir Robert; 181.*Robert; 208.William, letters of; 159, 342.— protest by; 300.*Gore:*Brigadier; 340.*Lady; 258.Mr.; 246, 350, 351.— his park at Tring; 240, 247.*J., letter of; 125.John; 107.— of Tower Hill; 215.Lady Mary; 246.— her death; 250, 252.*Ralph, of the Irish Council; 142.*Thomas; 137.*William, commissioner; 211.*Goreum, John; 211.*Gorhambury:

- document dated at; 2.

Sir N. Bacon's property at; 4—6passim.gallery at; 41.*Goring, Lord (1734), his wine; 240.*Gorts, Baron, treasurer of Holstein; 98.*Goslingar, S. von; 51.*Gosport, the ship; 63.*Gottenberg, Swedish ships at; 96.*Gottorp, Princess of, case of; 58.*Gould, Nathaniel, grant to; 132.*Gouvan, Mr., English minister at; 193.*Governors, Colonial, salaries of; 265.*Gower, Lord:

- (1709), his death; 336.

(1715); 172.(1742), letter to; 150.*(1770); 407.*Grafton:Duke of, the Duchess of Queensberry and; 42.— Lord Lient. of Ireland; 142.— (1768); 405.— (1770), his resignation; 407.*Duchess of, petition of; 46.*E., of Chelsea; 157.*Graham:

- apothecary; 348.

Mr., and Mons. Petkum; 89.Henry, of Braikness; 187.*Mungo, of Gorthie; *ib.Walter, letter of; 190.*Grainite, Jhon; 11.*Granby, Marquis of (1766); 403, 404*Grant:

- his followers; 195.

Brigadier, at Edinburgh; 161.A., letter of; 159.*Grantham, Lord:

- (1737); 248.

See Robinson, Thomas.Granville, George; 255.*Grappe, Ralph; 168.

Grauntam, William; 10.
 Graves, John, letter of; 286.
 Great Snoring, letters dated at; 307, 309, 316.
 Greene:
 Mr., of St. John's, Cambridge; 367.
 Thomas, mayor of Lynn, letter of; 27.
 Greenway, Mr., a Jacobite; 167.
 Greenwich:
 letter dated at; 3.
 George I. at; 222.
 palace and park keeper of; 127.
 Gregon, Robert, petition of his widow; 146.
 Gregory:
 Mr., protest against; 299, 300.
 David, professor of astronomy; 201.
 Gregson, Mr., attorney; 188, 139, 141.
 Grendon Hall, agreements dated at; 401.
 Grenelle, Plain of; 81.
 Grenville, Mr.; 399.
 Gresham, Lady, Ann, letter of; 11.
 Gresham, Alexander; 11.
 Grevyll, Sir Fulke, letter of; 19.
 Grey, Thomas de, letter of; 340.
 Griffin, Captain, of the Seahorse; 148.
 Grimaldi, Mons.; 107.
 Grimani, Cardinal, viceroy of Naples; 55.
 Grisons, the league of; 88.
 Grogarine; 16.
 Groome, Samuel; 212.
 Grosvenor, Mr.; 340.
 Grove, Robert, registrar of Cambridge University; 341.
 Guastalla, Duke of, his daughter's marriage; 52, 54.
 Guernsey:
 letter dated at; 150.
 jurats of; 150.
 Lord (1714); 221.
 Guiche, Duke de; 177.
 story about his guards; 81.
 Guillibean, Nicholas, schoolmaster at Fulham, letters of; 239-242, 250-254.
 Guinea coast, Comenda Fort on; 355. production of cotton, &c. there; ib.
 Guipuscoa, ports of; 196.
 Guirand, Madame; 386.
 Guiscard, Marquis de, his wounds; 82.
 Guist, free warren at; 366.
 Gulick, siege of; 22.
 Gullman, Mons., letters of; 157, 159.
 Gulston, Mr., memorial of; 284, 285.
 Guns, &c., belonging to Prince George, valuation of; 204.
 Gunthorpe, letter dated at; 319.
 Guybon, Sir Francis; 328.
 Guy-Dickens, Melchior, envoy, his pay and allowance; 126.
 Gwyn, Francis:
 secretary at war; 219.
 letters of; 220, 221, 222.
 Gylby, Mr., and the "Sunk" island; 339.
 Cole; ib.

H.

Hackney; 211.
 Hackwell, Mr.; 334.
 Hadame, Sir John, a prisoner; 10.
 Haddock, Admiral; 356.
 Hague, the; 22.
 Alex. Stanhope at; 48.
 Viscount Townshend at; 48 et seq., 334-340.
 articles signed at; 51.
 letters dated at; 69, 70, 116, 159, 332, 336.
 treaty at (1708); 49.
 French ambassador at; 87.
 farm near; 232.
 Hale, Henry, letter of; 74.
 Hales:
 Mr., Protestant commissioner; 58.
 John, letter of; 210.
 Robert, order signed by; 143.
 Halifax:
 Nova Scotia; 394.
 George Townshend at; 307.
 Captain, of the Richmond; 149.
 Lady, a god mother; 333.
 Hall:
 Stephen; 211, 213.
 Thomas, master of ship; 99.
 Halton; 164.
 Hamburg; 8.
 letters dated at; 50 et seq., 80, 81, 83, 85.
 diary of affairs of; 52.
 the priests at; 55.
 Hamilton:
 Duke of; 33.
 — (c. 1750), illness of; 370.
 Marquis of; 22.
 — Lord Basil, his son; 170.
 James, letter of; 194.
 Sackville, letter to; 406.
 — letter of; ib.
 Hamond:
 governor of Landguard Fort, complaint against; 131.
 Edmond, letter of; 329.
 Francis, governor of Landguard Fort; 102.
 Hampshire:
 the ship; 97.
 New; 273.
 — boundaries of; 276, 278, 287.
 — encroachments by Massachusetts on; 276.
 governor of, Col. Dunbar; 278, 279, 294.
 Hampton Court; 352, 364.
 document dated at; 3.
 co. Hereford; 343.
 hart park; 344.
 Hanbury, living of; 390.

- Handel; 242.
 music by; 395, 396.
 Hangleton, farm at; 845.
 Hammer, Daniel, letter of; 264.
 Hannah, the ship; 89.
 Hanover:
 letters dated at; 79, 109, 110.
 Elector of, acknowledgment of; 51.
 — and the allies; 61.
 — and the Hildesheim bishopric; 80.
 secretary at; 77.
 battalions furnished by; 360.
 Lord Stanhope at; 106.
 Hanse Towns, envoy to, his pay and allowance; 126.
 Harber, Edward; 10.
 Harbord:
 Colonel; 339.
 John, deputy lieut. of Norfolk; 48.
 Col. John; 328.
 — letters of; 337-339.
 W., letters of; 25.
 Harcourt:
 Lord, letters to; 104.
 — (1712), commissioner; 211.
 — (1714); 220.
 — (1734) and Lady; 243.
 Lady, accident to; 243.
 Simon, clerk of the Crown; 211.
 Hardine, Major, recommended by Wade; 198.
 Harding, Mr., of St. Martin's Lane; 340.
 Hardinge:
 Dr.; 364, 365.
 Charles, letter of; 368.
 Hardingham, T., of Norwich; 368.
 Hardwicke:
 Lord (1738), loan by; 356.
 — (1757); 393.
 — (1764), Charles Townshend and; 399, 400.
 Thomas; 213.
 Major Thomas; 213.
 Hardy:
 Captain, in Georgia; 271.
 Sir Thomas, admiral; 91.
 Hare:
 Dr., his marriage; 61.
 Dr. Francis, letter of; 74.
 Sir Ralph; 328.
 — letter to; 26.
 Sir T.; 29.
 Sir Thomas, letter of; 864.
 Harling, Sir F. Lowell at; 19.
 Harnage, Mr., his election; 335.
 Harnage, Mr., debt due to; 204.
 Harrington, Earl of:
 (1719); 134.
 (1730), secretary of state; 120.
 Harriott, Mr., bailiff at Astwell; 228.
 Harris:
 —, Sir R. Townshend's suit with; 23.
 Richard, of Tower Hill; 215.
 Harrison:
 Capt., master of ship; 89.
 Mr., messenger; 179.
 Mrs.; 352.
 Harrison—cont.
 Mrs., letter to; 354.
 Capt. Edward, letter of; 337.
 Edward, governor of the East India Company; 346.
 — letters of; 348, 349, 350.
 George, letter of; 357.
 Harrow; 241.
 Sir N. Bacon's lands in; 5.
 Highwood Hill near, waters at; 248, 249.
 Harte, Edward; 10.
 Harvey:
 alderman of Norwich, letter to; 355.
 General, his squadron at Almenara 72.
 Mrs.; 190.
 William; 187.
 Harwich; 79, 179.
 harbour; 131.
 mayor of; 131.
 Harwood, Ralph; 211.
 Haalemere, election for; 137.
 Haslewood, letter dated at; 405.
 Hatfield, Herts; 45.
 Hatton:
 Lord, examination before; 33.
 — warrant by; 34.
 — bribes received by; 35.
 Lady; 21.
 Sir Christopher; 4.
 Edward Finch; 353.
 Havannah; 116.
 expedition against; 153.
 Moro Fort, near; ib.
 Haversham, Lord (1716); 102.
 Havre; 200.
 embargo on ships at; 174.
 Hawk, the snow; 271.
 Hawkins:
 Mr.; 403.
 John, commissioner; 211.
 Hawley, Colonel; 184.
 Hay:
 Lord; 162.
 — his letter; ib.
 — (1715), wounded; 179.
 Willie; 194.
 Lord William; 175.
 Hayne, Christopher, letter of; 129.
 Hazelwood:
 Capt. John, of Wapping; 211.
 — of St. Bartholomew; ib.
 Heaton, Richard, petition of; 216.
 Hedges:
 Sir Charles, letter of; 48.
 — administrator to Prince George; 202.
 Heidelberg, capture of; 22.
 Heigham, letter dated at; 25.
 Heinsius, A.; 51.
 Helder, John, letter of; 320.
 Helloughton, townsmen of; 25.
 Helvington wood; 329.
 Helvoetalsuys, letter dated at; 337.
 Hemp, importation of; 89.
 Hendry, —, killed; 27.
 Heneage, T., letter signed; 8.

- Hepworth, T.; 254.
 Herbert:
 J., of the Council; 12.
 —, and Bewdley election; 41.
 Hereford:
 return of papists at; 160.
 Bishop of (1686); 25.
 Herefordshire, sheriff of; 343.
 Herferd, Richard; 10.
 Herne, Thomas, letter of; 129.
 Hertford, election at; 352.
 Hertfordshire, Sir N. Bacon's lands in; 5.
 Hervey:
 Lord (1742), letters of; 358.
 Augustus, letters of; 369, 379.
 George, letter of; 357.
 Hescoth, Thomas; 137.
 Hesketh, Cuthbert; 168.
 Heskett, Mr., of Goosnargh; 164.
 Hesse, battalions furnished by; 360.
 Hesse Cassel, Landgrave of; 117, 118.
 Hethel, letter dated at; 318.
 Heveningham:
 Sir Arthur, high sheriff of Norfolk;
 12.
 — letters to; 18, 19.
 Sir Henry, letter to; 18.
 Hewett:
 Mr., of the Tower Hamlets; 213.
 — letter to; 212.
 Heydon:
 Norfolk; 356.
 Sir Christopher; 2, 10.
 — commissioner; 11.
 — letter to; ib.
 — and the Aylsham poor; 41.
 Sir John, his daughter; 1.
 William, commission to; 2.
 Heygate, William, lease by; 37.
 Hide, Captain, his company at the Tower;
 216.
 Higgins:
 Benjamin; 378.
 Grace, letter of; 378.
 Highworth, election for; 137.
 High Wycombe; 178.
 Hildesheim, bishopric of; 80.
 Hill:
 Colonel, his regiment; 337.
 Mr.; 229.
 Abraham, report by; 254.
 — commissioner of Trade; 296.
 Christopher, bargemaster to Prince
 George; 204, 205.
 John, commissioner of Customs; 150.
 — of Shrewsbury; 158.
 Lieut.-Gen. John, letter to; 219.
 Hillmorton; 382.
 Hillsborough, Lord; 137.
 Hinchinbrook, Lord (1722), his death;
 191.
 Hinton, letter dated at; 319.
 Hobart:
 Lord (1780), letter of; 349.
 — (1734); 242.
 — (1743), letter of; 359.
 Sir John, letter of; 29.
 Sir Thomas, letters to; 19.
 Hodges:
 Jos., letter of; 129.
 Sir William, letters of; 67, 72, 85,
 128.
 — his son; 82.
 — alleged debt due to; 127.
 Hodgson, Mr., of Leighton; 164.
 Hodshon, Albert; 168.
 Hodson, Mr.; 291.
 Hoghland, island of; 91.
 Hoghstet, battle of; 201.
 Hogstraten, army at; 360.
 Holbein, his paintings of Erasmus; 345.
 Holden, Samuel, of the Russian Company;
 146, 147.
 Holderness, Countess of; 109.
 Holditch, Mr.; 346.
 Holiday, alderman; 11.
 Holland:
 Spanish ships taken by; 66, 67, 69, 128.
 its attitude towards Sweden; 91, 92.
 opinion in, on the French treaty; 103.
 English ambassadors and envoys to, their pay and allowances; 126.
 and the Pretender; 158.
 troops from, for the Duke of Argyll;
 179, 180, 188.
 English memorial to; 188.
 battalions furnished by; 360.
 farm in; 232.
 Lord (1764); 399, 400.
 Mrs.; 146.
 Sir John, letters of; 23, 28-32,
 passim.
 — candidate; 21.
 — speeches of; 30.
 — his regiment; 41.
 J., agreement by; 127.
 Sir John, candidate for Norfolk; 329.
 Sir Thomas; 21.
 — at Quiddenham; 19.
 Holley, Lieut.-Col., at Manchester; 159.
 Holmes, Admiral, at Quebec; 324.
 Holstein; 61, 62.
 Duke of, and Russia; 117.
 Holt, Joseph, of Whitby; 359.
 Home, Sir Patrick, of Polworth, imprisoned; 32, 33.
 Honeywood, Honeywood:
 —, his regiment; 178.
 Sir Philip, troop under; 152.
 Robert; 137.
 Honingham, estate at; 353.
 Hood, Mr., clerk; 369.
 Hoop, Archibald, of Rotterdam; 337.
 Hooper:
 John, master of ship; 89.
 Reynold, councillor at Barbadoes;
 302.
 Hope, Colonel, governor of Bermuda;
 265.
 Hopkins:
 Edward; 137.
 — letter of; 336.
 Henry, complaint against; 18.
 Hopman, Mr., at Dantzic; 92.

Hopson, Capt. Edward, in the Baltic; 91, 93, 94.
 instructions to; 93.
 letters of; 94, 95.
 letter to; 95.
 Hopton, Richard, of co. Hereford; 215.
 Horberry, Dr., of Hanbury; 390.
 Hornet sloop; 406.
 Horses :
 belonging to Prince George; 202, 203.
 for racing, &c.; 368, 369, 392.
 Horsey :
 Colonel, agent in Carolina; 257.
 — certificate concerning; ib.
 Richard; 107.
 Horsley, Thomas, letter of; 158.
 Horswell, Capt. Richard; 60.
 Horton :
 Mr., letter to; 185.
 Rev. Walter, letters of; 231, 235.
 Hosier, Admiral, orders to; 115.
 letter of; 116.
 Host, Ja., deputy-lieut. of Norfolk; 124.
 Hotham, Sir Charles, his regiment; 198.
 Houlton, John, letter of; 129.
 Houghton :
 Norfolk; 413.
 — letter dated at; 109.
 Major; 328, 336.
 — letter of; 336.
 Daniel, information by; 166.
 Sir Henry, militia under; 168.
 J., agreement by; 127.
 Michael, letter of; 368.
 Howard :
 Mrs.; 142.
 Edward, of Norfolk; 168.
 Thomas, his quarrel with Lord Cavendish; 43.
 — sent to the Tower; 44.
 — discharged; ib.
 Howe :
 Lord, governor of Barbadoes; 265, 306.
 Lady; 252.
 Col. or Sir William, at Quebec; 322, 323, 324.
 General; 49.
 Howick, rebels at; 166.
 Hozendorff, Charles, his pay; 126.
 Hudson's Bay : Company, petition of; 128.
 trade; 875.
 Hugatan, M., papers by; 118.
 Hugh, Dr., his case; 36.
 Hughes :
 Lieut.-Col.; 413.
 Dr. Owen, Lord Townshend's suit against; 28.
 Hull; 99. smuggling at; 150.
 deputy governor of; 339.
 Robert, letter of; 129.
 Humber, the; 179.
 "Sunk" island in; 339.

Hume :
 Mr.; 250, 369.
 Gustavus; 142.
 Hungary : war in; 80, 82.
 regiments in; 87.
 envoy from; 125.
 Queen of, her distressful state; 126.
 Hungate, —; 24.
 Hunsdon, Lord :
 letter signed by (1578); 4.
 — (1579); 7.
 (1587), his expedition to Scotland; 8.
 Hunstanton; 24.
 Hunt :
 Dr., of Balliol College, letter to; 190.
 Henry; 211.
 J., of Tower Hill; 215.
 Hunter, Robert, governor of Jamaica,
 letter of; 297.
 Huntly, Marquis of :
 (1715), and the Camerons; 164.
 proposals by; 180, 183, 185.
 Hardd, Francis; 150.
 letter of; ib.
 Huske, General John, letter of; 309.
 Hassey, Sir William, ambassador, claim by his widow; 180.
 Hutchison, Mr., proprietor in Carolina;
 257.
 Hyam :
 Mr.; 288.
 Thomas, sale to; 255.
 Hyndford, Earl of, envoy, his pay and allowance; 126.

• I.

Ibbot, Mrs. S., her husband's sermons;
 345.
 Iberville, Mons. d'; 83.
 letter of; 102.
 despatch to; 186.
 Ickworth, letter dated at; 357, 358.
 Ilkeshall (?), lands in; 6.
 India, East, Company; 346, 347, 354.
 petition of; 133.
 their petition for protection against privateers; 149.
 Indian Emperor, the play; 359.
 Indians, American, Gen. Oglethorpe's audiences with; 259-262.
 descriptions of tribes; 269, 270.
 Indies, West, Admiral Hosier's expedition
 to; 115.
 Inge, William, letter of; 346.
 Ingham, sheep at; 5.
 Ingoldsby, Lawrence, merchant, petition
 of; 134.

- Inverary, letter dated at; 360.
- Inverness :
 gentlemen of; 195.
 proposed new fort at; 197.
 Castle, proposed lieutenant-governor of;
 198.
 — repairing of; 198.
 — road from Fort William to; 198.
- Invincible :
 the galley; 145.
 the ship; 394.
- Ipswich, recorder of; 136.
- Ireland :
 Protestants of, celebration in London
 by; 130.
 Council of, report on Wood's half-pence by; 142.
 regiments brought from; 174 et seq.
 projected rebellion in; 184.
 parliamentary doings in (1766); 402.
 Lord Townshend's government of;
 407. injuries to trade of; 408.
- Irmingland, lands, &c. in; 17.
- Irving :
 Major; 396.
 Judith, letter of; 396.
- Irwin :
 Lord (1721), letter of; 106.
 — his dragoons at Weymouth;
 106.
 — (1722), Lady Lechmere and;
 190.
 Lady, her marriage; 248.
- Islay, Earl of :
 (1715); 164.
 letter of; 157.
 (1716) Lord Clerk Register; 102.
- Islington, plague among cows at; 228.
- Islip; 242.
- Italy :
 Prussian troops in; 66, 68.
 state of opinion in; 84.
- Ivrea :
 plain at; 57.
 camp near; 58.
- Ivy, Captain, of the Prince William; 148.
- Jaffreys, George, Governor Belcher's opinion of; 279.
- Jamaica :
 letters dated at; 297, 299.
 governor of, Hunter, letter of; 297.
 —; 300, 301.
 the Jews in; 301.
 election of Council at; 301.
- James I. :
 his son's marriage; 20.
 and the Palatinate; ib.
 his entertainment of the Duke of Brunswick; 21.
 Count Mansfeld's message to; 22.
- James II. :
 discharge signed by; 35.
 coronation of; 30.
 petition of Parliament to; 42.
- "James III." :
 proclamation by; 168.
See Pretender, the.
- Jansen, Sir Theodore, payment due to;
 107.
 transfers by; ib.
- Jedburgh; 166.
- provost of, fined and imprisoned; 32.
- Jefferys, Jefferis :
 Mr.; 79.
 James, letters of; 79, 83.
 William, letter of; 270.
- Jenkins, Tobias, letter to; 340.
- Jenks, Joseph, governor of Rhode Island; 276.
- Jennings, Sir John :
 to succeed Admiral Norris; 77.
 instructions signed by; 89.
 in pursuit of the Pretender; 185.
- Jersey :
 election of jurats; 124.
 New, governor of; 298.
 — letter of; 297.
 — government of, its separation from New York; 297, 298.
 Lord and Lady; 249.
 Lord (1756), letters of; 390, 391.
 — and Tamworth election; ib.
- Jewell, William; 211.
- Jewels, &c. belonging to Prince George;
 202, 203.
- Jobber, Lieut., wounded; 71.
- Jodrell, Paul; 143, 342.
 report by; 342.
- Johannah, the sloop; 148.
- Johns, John, of Lostwithel; 347.
- Johnson :
 justice of the Tower Hamlets; 210.
 General, in Canada; 309.
 Mr., his chocolate; 381.
 Lieut. Alexander, letter of; 320.
 Bastwick, commissioner; 211.
 Sir Henry, commissioner; 211.
 Sir Nathaniel, grant to; 258.
 Robert, letter of; 396.
 — governor of South Carolina;
 258.
 William, commissioner; 211.
- Johnston :
 Aud., letter of; 299.
- J.
 Jackson :
 Cuthbert; 300.
 Robert, English Resident at Stockholm; 84, 90, 92, 99.
 — letter to; 97.
 — letter of; 98.
 — his expenses at Stockholm; 107.
- Jacobite letters and papers; 158-200.
- Jacombe, Robert; 187.

Johnston—cont.

- Governor Gabriel, of S. Carolina ; 305.
- letters of ; 258, 262, 264.
- complaint against ; 264.
- his brother Samuel ; ib.
- his pay ; 265.
- Jolles, Jolle, Captain, in the Baltic ; 91.
- Jones :
 - Mr., of All Souls College, a Jacobite ; 167.
 - Edward, of Shrewsbury ; 158.
 - John, letter of ; 321.
 - T., interpreter ; 259, 260.
 - Sir William, letters of ; 25.
- Jonnes, Elleap ; 10.
- Jorye, Joseph ; 211.
- Joye, Charles, payment due to ; 107.

K.

- Kainard, Charles ; 161.
- Kane, Col. Richard, letter of ; 116.
- Kaperdish ; 194.
- Keeling, Captain, of the sloop Thomas ; 148.
- Keene :
 - Dr., of Peter House, Cambridge ; 367.
 - Benjamin, letter to ; 114.
- Keimar, Mr., at Wells ; 25.
- Keith :
 - , witness ; 156.
 - Sir William, representation by ; 297.
 - petition of ; 298.
- Kelly :
 - Dennis, Jacobite ; 192.
 - Jonathan, of Dartmouth, petition of ; 194.
- Kemp :
 - Mr., payments to ; 14, 15.
 - John, Henry, and Robert, their lands ; 17.
 - Sir Robert, letters of ; 25, 29.
 - his election for Norfolk ; 28.
 - Major Thomas ; 213.
- Kendall :
 - Mr. ; 335.
 - John, muster master ; 40.
- Kenmure, Lord, letter to ; 163.
- Kennedy :
 - his regiment at Quebec ; 324.
 - Captain, at Warsaw, his furlough ; 63, 70.
 - Sir Gilbert, mem. on ; 187.
- Kensington ; 49, 245.
- letters dated at ; 220, 296.
- court at ; 143.
- Prince George's lodgings at ; 202.
- Palace ; 356.
- Kent :
 - Marquis of (1707), letter of ; 331.

Kent—cont.

- Duke of, Lord Justice ; 225.
- proposed (1716) Lord Steward ; 102.
- , a farmer ; 412.
- the ship ; 116.
- Keppel, —, governor of Bethune ; 73.
- Ker or Kerr, Colonel, his dragoons ; 161, 199.
- slow motion of his regiment ; 173.
- Keurakin, Prince, letter to ; 113.
- Khune, Frederick and Rudolph ; 49.
- Martin Christian ; ib.
- Kilby, and Governor Belcher ; 289, 290.
- Kildrammy lordship, Lord Mar's address to ; 160.
- Killigrew :
 - Col., at Lancaster ; 170.
 - Lady, letter of ; 130.
 - F., letter of ; 142.
- Killitruiman, proposed new fort at ; 197.
- Kilrawack, his clan ; 195.
- Kimberley ; 11.
- Dr. ; 245, 246.
- Kincardine, Earl of ; 33.
- Kinersleaye, Francis ; 10.
- King :
 - Chief Justice ; 138.
 - Daniel ; 211.
 - Sir Peter ; 106.
 - Rupert, of the Ordnance Office ; 222.
 - William ; 211.
- Kingston :
 - assizes ; 131.
 - Duke of, proposed (1716) master of the horse ; 102.
- Kinloch, James, clerk of Council of South Carolina ; 267.
- Kinsdale, letter dated at ; 152.
- Kinselagh, Captain, of the Prince William 148.
- Kinski ; 350.
- Kiog, Bay of ; 100.
- Kirby :
 - letter dated at ; 406.
 - John ; 211.
 - Robert ; 211, 213.
- Kirkland, Mr. ; 227, 247.
- Kirkton, a minister, persecution of ; 33.
- Kitson, Francis, valuation by ; 202.
- Knight :
 - flag lieutenant ; 339.
 - Robert ; 107.
 - Dr. Samuel, letter of ; 345.
- Knightley, Valentine ; 41.
- Knightsbridge ; 359.
- Knipe, Sir Randolph, ship owner ; 50.
- Knollys, Knowles :
 - Sir Francis, documents signed by ; 3, 4.
 - Sir W. ; 12, 18.
 - letter of ; 7.
- Knyke :
 - Bay of ; 93.
 - (or Ruyck ?) ; 94.
- Knyvett :
 - Elizabeth ; 11.
 - Lady Elizabeth ; 37.

Knyvett—cont.

- Sir John, his troop of volunteers; 41.
- Nathaniel; 11.
- Sir Philip, abroad; 19.
- Thomas, commissioner; 11.
- Königsberg; 98.
- Königseck, Count, his new post; 124.
- Kyrby, justice of the Tower Hamlets; 210.
- Kyrke, Robert, grant to; 8.

L

- Lafelt, battle of; 152, 153.
- La Fontaine, Mr., letter to; 191.
- Laid, Jhon; 10.
- Lake:
 - Sir John, commissioner; 217.
 - Sir Tho.; 19.
- Lambert:
 - Mr., at Morpeth; 347.
 - John, letter of; 129.
- Lancaster:
 - rebel gentry about; 164.
 - rebel prisoners at; 170.
 - the ship; 394.
- Landen, battle of; 201.
- Landguard Fort; 102.
 - governor of; 131.
- Langdale, Jordan; 168.
- Langholme, mutiny at; 166.
- Languedoc, Sir J. Norris's descent upon; 71.
- Lapie, Madlle.:
 - appeal on behalf of; 127, 129.
 - her petition; ib.
- La Porte, Capt., killed at Almenara; 71.
- Larche, the French at; 73.
- La Roche, Laroch, Mons.:
 - letter of; 199.
 - Mr., of Prince George's household; 202.
- Lascelles, his regiment at Quebec; 323, 324, 325.
- Lassen, document signed; 96.
- La Tour, M., letter to; 192.
- Latton, William, consul at Tetuan, his pay; 126.
- Lauderdale:
 - Duke of, matters relating to his administration in Scotland; 30-35.
 - and Duchess of, bribes received by; 35.
 - Earl of (1654); 40.
- Laurens, Thomas, letter of; 87.
- Law:
 - Rev. Dr., of Peterhouse, his correspondence with Lord Townshend; 387-392.
 - Stephen, governor of Bombay; 149.

Lawes, Laws:

- John, letters of; 57, 62, 65, 68, 73, 74, 79.
- Temple, letter of; 299.
- protest by; 300.
- Lawsonne, Mr.; 10.
- Lay, John, Resident at Dunkirk, his pay; 126.
- Laydon, Sir Christopher; 10.
- Layer's conspiracy, letters connected with; 190-192.
- Lazaretto, the; 75, 76.
- Leach, Mr., usher; 239.
- Leake, Rev. Robert, letters of; 307, 308.
- Leaster, Francis; 10.
- Le Bas, Mrs., letter on behalf of; 128.
- Le Brune, letter signed; 191.
- Lechmere:
 - Lord, Nicholas; 136.
 - Lady; 190.
- Le Camus, M., a French officer; 78.
- Le Connu, the spy, letters, &c. of; 193.
- Lee, Edward; 211.
- Leeds, Duke of (1709); 335.
- Leeke, Rev. Robt., letters of; 314, 316, 318.
- Lees, John:
 - secretary to the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland; 152.
 - letter to; 405.
- Leeward Islands, governor of; 115, 306.
- Lee Warner, —, deputy lieut. of Norfolk; 124.
- Legge, Mr.; 400.
- Legh, Francis; 168.
- Leghorn; 133.
 - forts at; 66.
- Leheup:
 - Mr.; 291, 296.
 - deputy lieut. of Norfolk; 124.
 - Isaac, commissioner of Customs; 150.
 - Peter, receipt by; 137, 138.
- Leicester, Earl of (1576); 8.
 - (1716); 102.
- Leighton; 164.
- Leman:
 - Richard, letter of; 331.
 - Sir William; 211.
- Lemon:
 - Mr., of Fleet bridge; 329.
 - Richard, letter to; 329.
- Lenthall, William, Speaker, petition to; 24.
- Lentilo, Mr., Dutch minister; 91.
- Leominster, Lord and Lady (1734); 243.
- Leonard, Capt. James, information against; 190.
- Lepipre, Peter, letter of; 129.
- Lerida; 55, 71.
- Lesson, island of; 95.
- Le Strange, L'Estrange:
 - Mr., his death; 341.
 - his son Roger; ib.
 - Edward; 48.
 - letter of; 328.
 - Sir Hamon; 11, 21.

L'Estrange—cont.

- Sir Hamon, letter of; 21.
 — letter to; 19.
 Nicholas, letter of; 24.
 Sir Nicholas, his wife's portion; 37.
 Leverington; 26.
 Levinge, Captain, son of Sir Richard; 340.
 Levis:
 M. de, in command of the French; 322, 326, 327, 328.
 camp, letters dated at; 308, 311.
 Lewes, letter dated at; 345.
 Leweston, letter dated at; 226.
 Lewisham, Lady:
 Lord North and; 245.
 Lewkener, Sir Edward, his children and estates; 36, 37.
 Lexington, Lord (1699), report by; 254.
 Leyborn, Mr., of Naleby; 164.
 Leyburne, John; 168.
 Leyden:
 letters dated at; 55, 65.
 postmaster at; 76.
 deputy of; 193.
 printing at; ib.
 Lesan, in Nismes; 145.
 Liane, William; 11.
 Libraries, bill for preservation of; 329.
 Lichfield:
 letters dated at; 228, 229, 230.
 cathedral close; 231, 235.
 Lord (1734); 248.
 Liège, the Pretender at; 200.
 Ligne, Princess de; 121.
 Ligonier:
 Lord (1758); 306.
 — (1770), his expected death; 407.
 Sir John, his aide-de-camp; 386.
 Lille, army at; 63.
 Lincoln, Earl of:
 (1577); 3, 4.
 (1720); 106.
 Lindsey, Earl of (1676), warrant signed by; 44.
 Linens, bounty on; 408, 409.
 Linlithgow:
 provost of, fined and imprisoned; 32.
 illegal impositions on; 35.
 Earl of (1676); 34.
 Lintz, Lord Peterborough at; 79.
 Lion, the ship; 85.
 Lippe Schaumbourg, Count de la, letter of; 110.
 Lisbon; 8, 66, 125.
 letters dated at; 333, 334, 350, 351.
 Charles Compton at; 252, 254.
 English merchants at; 349.
 Lisle, Lord (1622); 21.
 Littleton, Sir Edward; 10, 232.
 Liverpool; 406.
 Livingstone, Capt. William; 270.
 Livonia; 117.
 Lluellin, Richard, letter of; 172.
 Lobb, —, of St. Peter's College; 391.
 Lochaber, the Camerons of; 164.
 Lock, Mr., of Carnwath; 343.

- Lock, William, letter to; 191.
 Locke, Thomas; 8.
 Lockhart, Mrs., aunt to Lord Forfar; 180.
 Lodge, co. Lancaster; 164.
 Loftus, John, valuation by; 204.
 L'Ogle, Charles, of the French church at Wapping; 129.
 London and Westminster:
 the great fire; 27.
 alarm in, on Lord Sunderland's resignation; 67.
 recorder of; 136.
 dissenting ministers of; 108.
 Gunmakers' Company; 204.
 Admiralty Office; 81, 410, 411.
 Albemarle Street; 89, 108, 368.
 — fire in; 237.
 Audley Square; 320, 390.
 South Audley Street; 382, 393.
 Axe Yard, Westminster; 247.
 Bedford Row; 255.
 Bennet Street, St. James's; 192.
 Bishopsgate Street; 125.
 Bloomsbury Square; 138, 209, 212, 247.
 Bond Street, fire near; 238.
 New Bond Street, Lancaster Court; 378.
 Bridge; 222.
 Broad Street, Post Office; 334.
 — near Poland Street; 352.
 Bruton Street; 409.
 Carey Street; 364.
 Cavendish Square; 306, 354.
 Charing Cross, Old Man's Coffee House; 191.
 Charles Street; 233.
 — the Dial in; 232, 233.
 Charterhouse Square; 405.
 — Yard; 173.
 Cheapside; 354.
 — Bow Rectory; 405.
 Church Street, Soho; 142.
 Cockpit; 27, 104, 176, 205, 217, 333, 386, 366, 367, 375.
 Conduit Street, Clare's Coffee House; 191.
 Cornhill, Queen's Head; 330.
 Covent Garden, Wills' Coffee House; 191.
 — opera of; 242.
 Craven Street; 368, 365, 366, 368.
 Crosby Square; 368.
 Devonshire House, Westminster; 166.
 Devonshire Square, Bishopsgate; 190.
 Doctors Commons; 74.
 Dover Street; 237, 246, 248.
 — William's Coffee House; 346.
 Drury Lane, Elephant and Castle in; 163.
 Duke Street; 122.
 — St. James's; 353.
 — Westminster; 191, 192.
 Essex House; 11.
 Exchange Alley; 191.
 the Fleet, prisoners in; 10.
 Fleet Bridge; 329.

London—cont.

Fleet Street, Water Lane; 329.
 — Wine Office Court; 192.
 Frith Street, Soho; 248.
 Golden Square; 242, 244, 248.
 Gray's Inn; 22, 368.
 — expenses at; 15, 17.
 Great Wild Street, Howell's Coffee House; 192.
 Grosvenor Square; 310, 311, 319, 378, 404.
 Grosvenor Street; 208, 244, 357, 372.
 "Hand-in-Hand" Insurance Office; 152.
 Hanover Square; 191, 192, 208.
 Hatton Garden; 216.
 Haymarket; 212.
 the Horse Guards; 75, 78, 79, 80.
 — the Great Room at; 138.
 Hyde Park Hospital; 378.
 Jermyn Street; 362.
 King's Bench Prison; 139, 140, 141.
 — bequest to prisoners in; 7.
 King Street, Covent Garden; 108.
 Leicester Fields; 162, 205.
 Leicester Square; 88.
 Leicester Street; 356, 366, 367.
 Letter Office; 40.
 Lincoln's Inn; 149.
 Lincoln's Inn Fields; 192.
 Lombard Street, the Vine; 353.
 Lothbury, Whalebone Court; 411.
 Mark Lane; 192, 392.
 Monument Yard; 150.
 New River Office; 362.
 Newgate; 144, 186, 187.
 — prisoners in; 10.
 Norfolk Street; 191.
 Northampton House; 18, 19.
 Ormond Street; 191.
 New Ormond Street; 357.
 Old Bailey; 144.
 Old Palace Yard, Westminster; 25.
 Pall Mall; 228, 231, 356.
 Pantion Street; 88.
 — Leicester Fields; 405.
 Percy Street; 407, 408.
 Piccadilly; 108, 212.
 General Post Office; 192, 404.
 Poultry Compter; 145, 146.
 — prisoners in; 10.
 Privy Garden; 312, 314.
 — grant of; 122.
 Queen's Square, Westminster; 338.
 St. Andrew's, Holborn; 216.
 St. James's, letters dated at; 97, 109, 114, 115, 120, 132, 145, 217, 220-222, 341, 359, 405.
 — Church; 224.
 — Palace; 45.
 — Place, the Dial House; 359.
 — Square; 48, 228, 230, 232, 286, 342, 347.
 — Street; 328.
 — Dog and Duck in; 192.
 St. Katherine's; 7.

London—cont.

St. Martin's Lane; 340.
 St. Paul's; 217.
 — burial of Sir. Nich. Bacon in; 4, 7.
 Scotland Yard; 206.
 Serjeants' Inn; 18.
 Smithfield, rotten oxen burnt in; 228.
 Soho Square; 329.
 Spring Garden; 344.
 Strotton Street, Westminster; 166.
 Symond's Inn; 352.
 Temple; 280, 289.
 Middle Temple; 44, 292.
 Tothill Fields, oxen burn in; 228.
 Tower, letters dated at; 162, 172.
 — and Tower Hamlets, papers relating to; 209-223.
 — warrants of commitment to; 48-45.
 — lions in; 216.
 — office of lion keeping in; 219.
 — prisoners in; 10.
 — bell ringing in; 221.
 — governor of, his pay; 217.
 — pay, &c. of the garrison; 219.
 — guns, orders for firing; 217-223 passim.
 — Hamlets, list of commissioners for; 210.
 — Militia of; 162, 213, 221.
 — Hill, petition about planting trees on; 215.
 — Street, Czar of Muscovy's Head in; 214.
 — Water Lane; 276.
 — Traitor's Gate; 215.
 — wharf; 222, 223.
 — Iron Gate stairs; 209.
 Treasury Chambers; 49, 50.
 Westminster Abbey, Queen Anne's funeral in; 221.
 Westminster Hall; 122.
 Westminster New Chapel; 157.
 Weymouth Street; 412.
 Whitehall, letters dated at; 19, 20, 23, 26, 27, 48, 67, 74, 75, 81, 82, 83, 87, 93, 95, 106-114, 127, 138, 142, 162, 206, 217-224, 354.
 — Gate and Banqueting House; 122.
 Wood Street Counter, prisoners in; 10.
 York House; 5.
 Bishop of (1676), warrant signed by; 44.
 — (1712), Compton, letter of; 129.
 — (1714); 224.
 — (1764), dying; 400.

Long:
 Mr., his estate at Cavenham; 396.
 Alexander, master of ship; 89.
 Sir Robert, appointment of; 28.
 Thomas, sheriff of Cornwall; 207.
 Marston, lands in; 37.

Lonsdale, Lord:
 (1710); 67, 73, 76, 84.
 (1711); 340.
 L'Orme, M. de, of Orleans, letter to; 191.
 Lorraine:
 the Pretender in; 177, 338.
 English agent in; 158.
 Prince Charles of; 359.
 Lostock, co. Lancaster; 164.
 Lostwithel, mayor of; 347.
 Lotteries; 77, 79, 81, 82, 126, 340, 370, 371.
 Loudoun, Earl of:
 (1714); 220.
 (1734), grant to; 122.
 (1742), memorial of; 151.
 (1755), his aide-de-camp; 386.
 Louis XIV.: review by; 62.
 his French and Swiss Guards; 81.
 his death; 89.
 Louis XV.:
 his illness; 120.
 letter of George II. to; 120, 121.
 Louisburg, English forces at; 306.
 Louisiana, French settlements in; 296.
 Lovat, Lord:
 petition in favour of; 173.
 his good services; 181, 185.
 Duke of Argyll's intercession for;
 ib.
 assured of the King's pardon; 185.
 charges against; 196.
 Love, John, letter of; 129.
 Lovell:
 Lord (1733), Postmaster-General; 352.
 — (1734); 243.
 Charles, letters of; 162, 343.
 Lowell, Sir Francis, at Harling; 19.
 Lowestoft; 26. balloon near; 412.
 Lowndes:
 Isaac; 239, 251, 254.
 — letter of; 251.
 — grant of lands to; 265, 267,
 268.
 Thomas, letter of; 354.
 — of Westminster, lands in trust
 for; 267, 268.
 William, letter of; 129.
 Lowther, Mrs. Jane, her garden at Whitehall; 123.
 Loyal Charles, ship taken by the Spaniards; 148.
 Lubeck; 97.
 Bishop of, memorial of; 58.
 Lucas:
 Lord, governor of the Tower; 217.
 Mr., page to Prince George; 331.
 — of Shipdham; 352, 353.
 Samuel, mayor of Harwich; 131.
 Lucca, republic of, Addison's remarks on;
 378.
 Lucy:
 George, letter of; 159.
 Richard, Lord Shaftesbury and; 45.
 Ludlow Castle, the ship; 63.

Ludowick, Count; 2.
 Lumley:
 Lord (1715), at Preston; 171.
 Lady; 41.
 Lumny, candidate for Sussex; 331.
 Lumsdon, Lady, garrison put in her house; 84.
 Luneville, the Pretender at; 159.
 Luson, Mr.; 336.
 Luttrell, J., and the Tamworth election;
 401.
 Lyme, the ship; 85.
 Lymington, Lord (1742), letter of; 357.
 Lynn:
 letters dated at; 26, 27, 320.
 port of; 12, 13.
 mayor of; 27.
 mayor, &c. of, claim by; 11.
 its losses by pirates; 22, 27.
 injuries from the Dutch to; 41.
 theatrical company from; 410.
 Lord (1728), letters to; 348, 353, 354.
 — and Lady; 351.
 Samuel, letter of; 219.
 Lyons; 55.
 Lytham; 164.
 Lyttleton:
 General Sir Richard, letters of; 306.
 Sir Thomas, memorial of; 148.

M.

Macartney:
 General George; 138.
 Sir George; 405.
 McCaines, George, affidavit by; 200.
 Macclesfield, Earl of (1725), impeachment
 of; 346.
 Macculloch, Mr.; 263, 264.
 Macdonald:
 family, Jacobites; 172.
 of Glencoe; 125.
 of Glengarie; ib.
 of Keppock; 195. of Klenronald; ib.
 Alex., memorandum by; 164.
 Flora, her assistance to Prince
 Charles Edward; 361, 362.
 Mackenzie:
 clan of; 195.
 secretary to Lord Stair; 70.
 Dr., of Worcester; 251.
 George, letters of; 82, 83, 86.
 Mackinnon, clan of; 195.
 Mackintosh:
 clan of; 195.
 laird of; 199.

- Macky, J., letter of; 74.
 Maclean, clan of; 195.
 McLean, Sir John, his discovery; 153.
 witness; 156.
 Macleod, clan of; 195.
 Macniell clan, of Rannay; 195.
 Macpherson :
 clan of; 195.
 Alexander, ship master; 301.
 Maddingley, letter dated at; 357.
 Madras, letter dated at; 353.
 Madrid; 116.
 documents dated at; 112, 196.
 Maen; 98.
 Mahon, Port; 77.
 letter dated at; 77.
 Maitland, Captain, a French officer; 34.
 Malabar coast; 133.
 Malaga; 283.
 Malplaquet, battle of, rejoicings over; 57.
 Malt, Act concerning; 78.
 Malton :
 Earl of (1734); 244.
 (1739), letters of; 125.
 Man, Mr.; 10.
 Manby, Mrs. J., letters of; 409.
 Manchester :
 letter dated at; 159.
 troops at; ib.
 dragoons at; 178.
 Mandell, Captain Nicholas, suit by; 138,
 139, 141.
 Maneres, Francis; 10.
 Manesty, Sprig, of Tower Hill; 215.
 Manlove, Nathaniel; 211.
 Mann :
 Mr., a tutor; 24.
 Horatio, envoy, his pay and allowance; 126.
 Robert, letters of; 80, 209, 334, 337,
 349.
 Mannheim :
 siege of; 22.
 letter dated at; 110.
 Manning, Richard, his memorial; 119.
 Mannington, letter dated at; 21.
 Mansel, Sir Robert; 22.
 Mansfeld, Count :
 in Brabant; 20.
 his message to James I.; 22.
 Mansfield, Lord (1770); 407.
 Mar, Earl of :
 (1715), his call to arms; 160.
 letters of; 160, 161, 163.
 instructions by; 164.
 English rebels to join; 174.
 to be treated as a rebel; 177.
 his advance to Aughterarder; 178.
 his proposals declined; 180. reasons for declining terms with; 183.
 (1722), letter to; 190.
 Marais, Mons. des, ambassador; 35.
 Marchmont, Lord (1725), letter of; 114.
 Marescoe, Peter, letter of; 337.
 Maresfield, Sussex, petition from; 130.
 Marie, Mount, taking of; 20.
 Mariot, Jan and John; 1.
 Markham, Robert, his falling out with Thomas Cooper; 8.
 Marlborough :
 election for; 357.
 the ship, attacked by privateers;
 149.
 Duke of; 51, 52, 63.
 — letter of; 75.
 — instructions to; 49.
 — extracts from despatches to and from; 60.
 — Torcy's comments on; 71.
 — scurrilous attack on; 78.
 — at Woodstock; ib.
 — gone for Holland; 79.
 — reported death of; 83.
 — drinking his health; 102.
 — (1709), his victory; 336.
 — (1715); 183.
 Countess dowager of, petition of;
 129.
 Marlow, Great, petition from inhabitants
 of; 145.
 Marr, Tom; 341.
 Marshall :
 Mr.; 8.
 Henry; 211.
 John, letters of; 247, 248.
 Marshalsea, the, prisoners in; 10.
 Marshland in Norfolk; 18.
 Marsone, —, his regiment; 166.
 Martha, the ship; 35.
 Martin, Martyn :
 Benjamin, secretary to Georgia trustees; 259, 271.
 John, letter of; 219.
 Jos., ship owner; 90.
 Captain Matthew, of the Marlborough; 149.
 Thomas; 137.
 Martynists, the, the judges and; 9.
 Mary and Elizabeth, the ship; 89.
 Maryburgh, petition of inhabitants for a minister; 199.
 Masham, Lady, death of; 244.
 Mason :
 Mr., letter to; 18.
 — coal monger; 331.
 John and Samuel, of Connecticut,
 petition of; 302.
 Robert, valuation by; 204.
 Massachusetts :
 letters, &c., concerning; 272.
 clergy of, memorial of; 279, 280.
 Massy :
 Mr., watchmaker; 233.
 Hugh, letter of; 412.
 Capt. John, letter of; 336.
 Master, Harcourt, of Tower Hill; 215.
 Masters, Robert, letter of; 367.
 Mather, Samuel, pastor in Boston, Mass.; 280.
 Matthew, Mr., governor of the Leeward
 Islands; 306.
 Manger, Henry, of Guernsey, letter of;
 150.
 Maul, Mr.; 194.

- Maurepas, Count of; 142.
 Mayence :
 letter dated at; 75.
 Elector of; ib.
 — battalions furnished by; 80.
 Mayes, widow, at the Tower; 216.
 Maynard, Sir W., warrants signed by; 44, 45.
 Meacham, Mr., of Stratford upon Avon; 401.
 Mead:
 Dr. Richard; 211.
 Samuel, paper signed by; 144.
 Meadow, Philip, report by; 127.
 Meadows, Philip:
 report by; 254.
 commissioner of Trade; 296.
 Meath, Earl of:
 (1715), petition signed by; 130.
 (1724); 142.
 Mechlin; 2.
 Mecklenburgh, paper about; 117.
 Medici:
 Cardinal of; 52.
 — his cap; ib.
 Francesco Maria; 54.
 Medina Celi, Duke de, imprisoned; 64, 65.
 Mediterranean, the:
 English fleet in, suppressed instructions to; 59.
 passes, forgery of; 350.
 Medley, Thomas; 11.
 Medley, the, journal; 75, 78.
 Medowes, Sir Thomas, letter of; 27.
 Melford, letter dated at; 29.
 Menace:
 Benjamin, mayor of Worcester; 158.
 Samuel, of Worcester, information by; 158.
 Mendes, Ferd., letter of; 129.
 Menonists, or Anabaptists, Swiss, emigration of; 63.
 Meredyth, General; 49.
 Merrett, John; 289.
 Merricke, Sir Gillam; 10.
 Merry, Captain John; 211.
 Merton, letter dated at; 340.
 Metcalfe, John; 211.
 Methuen:
 Mr., his relation; 106.
 Paul, orders signed by; 59.
 Methven, laird of; 182.
 Methwin, Mr., proposed secretary of state; 106.
 Methwold manor:
 steward of; 17.
 spoiling of; 18.
 orders concerning; 19.
 Mexico, bay of; 269.
 Meyerfeld, General; 58.
 Micklethwait, Jo.; 164, 165, 166.
 Middleton:
 Earl of, his administration of affairs in Scotland; 32.
 Lord (1735); 246.
 — (1756), letter of; 390.
 Milan; 53.
 letters dated at; 54.
 and the Pope; 52.
 conference at; 74.
 Castle, governor of; 76.
 duchy of; 88.
 Mildenhall, lands in; 6.
 Mileham, letter dated at; 328.
 Militia, the, success of; 894.
 Miller, Mrs., instructions to; 164.
 Milleson, Captain; 386.
 Mills, Mr., merchant; 192.
 Millward, Mr.; 229.
 Milner, Thomas, of Whithy; 359.
 Minors; 116.
 to be given to Spain; 197.
 taking of; 340.
 Minors, Thomas, letter of; 353.
 Mississippi:
 scheme; 207.
 description of; 255.
 river; 269, 272.
 Mitcham, letter dated at; 386.
 Mitchel, one, charge against; 34.
 Mitchell, agent for the Menonists; 68.
 Mobile, French settlement of; 269.
 Moble, description of; 255.
 Modena; 55.
 Duke of (1723), letter of; 109.
 Mohican Indians; 302, 303.
 Mole, Christopher, secretary of the East India Company; 149.
 Molesworth:
 his dragoons; 178.
 Colonel, his regiment; 144.
 Mr.; 84.
 — at Venice; 340.
 John, letter of; 76.
 Molyneux, Mollineux:
 Lord (1715); 164.
 Mr.; 187.
 S., petition signed by; 130.
 Samuel, minute by; 207.
 Sir Samuel, letter of; 341.
 Monckton:
 Brigadier, wounded at Quebec; 323, 324, 325, 327.
 Sir Philip, his seditious letter; 45.
 R., report by; 127.
 Gen. Robert, letter of; 311.
 Money, Master, his ascent in a balloon; 412.
 Monger, Peter; 211, 213.
 Monk, Lord General, proclamation by; 23.
 Monmouth, Duke of (1676), order signed by; 44.
 Monroe, Colonel; 196.
 Mons, siege of; 57, 386.
 Monson, Lord:
 (1740); 302.
 (1748); 364.
 Montagu:
 cousin to Craggs; 69.
 Duke of (1725), letter of; 345.
 — (1734), grant to; 122.
 Duchess of, her riches; 245.

Montagu, Wortley; 75, 132.
 Montauban, siege of; 23.
 Montcalm, M. de, at Quebec; 323, 324, 325, 327.
 Monteleone, Marquis of, letter of; 119.
 Montferrat, the Duke of Savoy's rights in; 80.
 Montgomery:
 Earl of; 21.
 Lieut.-Col., wounded; 71.
 Sir Robert; 256.
 Montmeillan, French army at; 56.
 Montmorenci, camp of; 308.
 Montrose:
 the Pretender embarked at; 185.
 Duke of, memorandum by; 187.
 — (1716), Lord Clerk Register; 102.
 Moody, James, certificates of; 217.
 Moor, the ship; 95.
 Moor, Moore:
 Captain, wounded; 71.
 Colonel, in the Apalachés settlement; 270.
 Dr., his library; 138.
 James; 254.
 Dr. John, his library; 841.
 Morals, effect of trade on, arguments concerning; 386-392.
 Mordant, General; 49.
 Mordaunt, Colonel; 288.
 Moredike, deputies at; 61.
 Morfort, Thomas, declaration by; 132.
 Morgan:
 Mr., secretary to Lord Treasurer (1617); 38.
 Edward, and Capt. Welbe; 138, 141.
 Hugh; 7.
 Morley, George, ship owner; 99.
 Morpeth; 341.
 Lord (1784), suit by; 245.
 Morrell, Hugh:
 letters of; 25.
 paper by; 41.
 Morries, Jhon; 11.
 Morris, Lewis, governor of New Jersey, letter of; 297.
 Morrison, his regiment; 177.
 Morrow, Mr.; 194.
 Morse, John, alderman of Hereford; 160.
 Mortimer, Major, killed at Mons; 336.
 Morton:
 Earl of; 33.
 Mr., of Yarmouth; 363.
 Joseph; 254.
 Morville:
 Count de, letter to; 142.
 Mons. de, letter of; 113.
 Moscow:
 letter dated at; 61.
 the court at; 65.
 Motte Blaguy, Capt. la; 384.
 Moundeford, Sir Edward, letter of; 17.
 Mount, Richard; 211.
 Mounteagle, Lord (1600), imprisoned; 10.
 Mountjoy, Lord:
 (1715), petition signed by; 130.
 (1724); 142.

Moxon, Joseph; 211.
 Mulberry trees, planting of; 263.
 Mulcaster, Henry; 211.
 Mull, Isle of, the Macleans in; 195.
 Mullins, Jo.; 7.
 Munchhausen, Baron, letter of; 119.
 Munday, William:
 petition of; 206.
 memorials of; 207.
 letter to; 208.
 letters of; 346.
 Mundeford, Edm., commissioner; 11.
 Munden, —, his regiment at; 178.
 Munk, Mr.; 343.
 Munro:
 Robert, letter of; 159.
 Sir Robert, memorial of; 151.
 clan of; 195.
 Murray:
 Brigadier-General James, letters of; 315.
 — at Quebec; 323, 324, 325, 327.
 — in Canada; 310.
 Lord Charles, a Jacobite; 170.
 Lord John; 198.
 Thomas; 22.
 Musgrave:
 Charles, of the Ordnance Office; 222.
 Christopher, order signed by; 221.
 Musgrove, Mr., complaint against; 209.
 Music, letter about; 395.
 Myckilborn, Sir Edward; 10.
 Mynne, Nicholas, letter of; 7.

N.

Nairn:
 election of magistrates at; 195.
 Lord (1715), letter of; 172.
 Naison, Captain, wounded; 71.
 Naleby, co. Lancaster; 164.
 Namur, the ship; 894.
 Nancy; 166.
 the Pretender at; 159.
 Naples:
 and the Pope; 52.
 expected tumult in; 55.
 consul at; 340.
 Nargan, Sir J. Norris at; 91, 92.
 Nassau:
 Count, killed at Almenara; 71.
 House of; 109.
 Lady Francis, her marriage; 248.
 the ship; 85.
 Navarre, troops for; 196.
 Navy, the:
 scheme for relief of widows of officers; 145.
 papers concerning; 147, 148.

Naylor, Mr., his writings; 74.
 Neale, Henry, payment to; 116.
 Neave, F., of Ringland; 334.
 Nedham, William, of Jamaica; 297.
 Needwell, Culverwell; 143.
 Negus:
 Francis; 102.
 and the Norfolk election; 389.
 Neist, Col. at Preston; 172.
 Nelson, William; 168.
 Neptune snow, ship plundered by the Spaniards; 148.
 Neth, Mons. L. du, admiral of Holland; 91.
 Netherlands, the, news from; 20.
 Neufville, Sir Robert; 116.
 Neustadt; 92.
 pass of; 87.
 Neville, Lieut., wounded; 71.
 Newark, election for; 137.
 Newborough, Ann, letters of; 48.
 Newburn, Carolina, letter dated at; 264.
 Newcastle-upon-Tyne; 359.
 rebels about; 170.
 coals from; 12.
 Newcastle:
 Duke of; 145, 257, 258, 273, 382, 393.
 (1723, &c.), letters of; 109, 367, 383.
 letters to; 111, 112, 118, 116, 259, 367.
 (1748), Chancellor of Cambridge; 363, 367.
 (1764), Charles Townshend's letter to; 398.
 Newfoundland; 88, 144.
 report concerning; 294, 295.
 claims of France in; ib.
 dogs, for otter hunting; 403.
 Newman, C., of Norwich; 368.
 Newmarket; 49.
 letters dated at; 369.
 Newport, Lord:
 (1675), warrant signed by; 43.
 (1715); 232.
 New Providence, letters dated at; 300, 304.
 New Orleans; 269.
 New River Company, value of shares in; 362, 368.
 Newton:
 near Wisbech; 26.
 Dr. Henry, letters of; 52 et seq., 66.
 — presents to, on leaving Rome; 84.
 Sir Isaac, commission to; 200.
 Newtown, Colonel, his dragoons at Manchester; 178.
 New York:
 letters dated at; 307.
 governors of; 269, 296, 297.
 assembly at; 276.
 companies posted at; 296.
 Niagara, taking of; 309.
 Nicholas:
 Edward; 137.
 — letters of; 332, 344.

Nicholas—cont.

Edward, treasurer to Prince George of Denmark; 200.

William; 213.

— agent to the Tower, letters of; 217, 218, 219.

— certificate by; 223.

Nicholls, Ensign; 410.

Nicholson:

Mr., of the Pewterers' Company; 348.

Colonel; 295.

John, warrant signed by; 45.

Nicolotti, the, the Doge of; 84.

Nieron, Lieut., wounded; 71.

Nightingale, Mr.; 162.

Nightingall, Mr.; 172.

Nimeguen, letter dated at; 330.

Nisbet, Henry, letter of; 359.

Noailles, Duke de, his army in Catalonia; 86.

Noble, Edmond; 211, 213.

Nonsuch, court at; 7.

Norcross, Nathaniel, petition of; 26.

Nordlingen, letter dated at; 330.

Norfolk:

restraint of exportation of grain, &c., from; 2, 3.

justices, letters to; 2, 3, 4.

— letters of and to; 12.

— decision by; 17.

— petition to; 18.

— instructions to; 48.

loan raised in; 8.

flax and hemp sown in; ib.

marshland in, sea walls of; 11.

transportation of corn from; 12.

commissioners of sewers; 12.

musters in; 13.

train band of militia in; 12.

musters of militia; 18-20, 26, 40, 329, 397.

contribution for the Palatinate in; 20.

militia, at Portsmouth; 315.

benevolence levied in; 19.

impressment of seamen in; 20, 48.

subsidies in; 23.

gentry, petitions of; 24.

effect of civil wars in; ib.

gaol, prisoners in; 25.

conventicles in; 26.

vice-admiral of; 27.

elections for; 127, 329, 339, 358, 362, 365.

election expenses in; 30, 396.

clerk of the peace; 336, 349, 396.

feeling about Dr. Sacheverell in; 64.

congress; 242.

butter factors in; 354.

sale of estates in; 357.

Constitution club of; 364.

theatricals in; 410.

Norreys, Lady:

her sister; 230.

at Oxford; 232.

- Norris, Sir John:
 his squadron; 64.
 at Vado; 66, 67, 68. off Barcelona; 68.
 at Languedoc; 71.
 letter of; 77.
 Sir John Jennings to relieve; 77. expected at Vado; 78.
 despatches of; 89.
 cruising from Port Mahon; 77.
 in the Baltic, instructions for; 89, 97, 100.
 letters of and to; 85, 97-101.
 number of his ships; 89.
 letters on his proceedings; 90-102.
 at the Admiralty; 115.
- North:
 Lord (1734), and Lady Lewisham;
 245.
 — (1770), his government; 407.
 Sir Robert, letter of; 7.
- Northampton:
 races; 253.
 county hospital; 368.
 Earl of (1603), letter to; 13.
 — (1609), letter of; 18.
 — (1611), Henry; 11.
 — letter of; ib.
 — (1675-77), constable of the Tower, warrants to; 43-45.
 — (1712, &c.), lieutenant of the Tower Hamlets, letters and papers
 of; 209.
 — (1735), letter of; 246.
 — (1742), letter to; 358.
 — (1759), letter of; 313.
 — his case about the Tower Hamlets; 210.
 — (1673), his regiment; 28.
 Countess of, Elizabeth Shirley, letters to; 223 et seq.
 — Jane, letter of; 237.
- Northchurch, letter dated at; 409.
 rector of; 104.
- Northey:
 C., appeal for; 321.
 Sir Edward; 211.
 William; 211, 213.
- Northumberland:
 Roman Catholics of; 169.
 rebels of; 176.
 election; 366, 368.
 Earl of (1622), at Petworth; 21.
 Duke of (1714); 220.
- Northwick; 245, 246, 247.
 letters dated at; 239, 252.
- Norton, Mr.; 345.
- Norway:
 ships from, taken; 84.
 Sweden's designs on; 97, 98.
- Norwich:
 documents dated at; 10, 12, 13, 26, 29, 48, 151, 321, 331, 382.
 mayor of; 29.
 — and the charter; 26.
 corporation, Lord Townshend and;
 28.
- Norwich—cont.
 assizes at; 28.
 petition from; 42.
 address from citizens of; 321.
 Castle; 48.
 — escape of smugglers from; 382.
 King's Head, meeting at; 329.
 militia of; 329.
 freedom of, conferred on Lord Townshend; 329.
 election at; 339.
 its suggested trade with the Guinea coast; 355, 356.
 Constitution club; 368.
 King's Arms; ib.
 ascent of a balloon from; 412.
 Bishop of (1662), letter of; 25.
 — Anthony, letter of; 36.
 — (1705), letters of; 330.
 — Trimmell, letters of; 159, 340.
 — (1715), letter to; 166.
- Nottingham, Earl of:
 (1601); 12.
 (1703); 153.
- Nova Scotia; 283, 294.
 report concerning; 295, 296.
- Nowell, Alex., dean of St. Paul's, document signed by; 7.
- Noyes, John, letter of; 368.
- Nutfield, New Hampshire; 286.
- Nuthall:
 Benjamin, letter of; 320.
 Thomas, letter of; 368.

O.

- Oatlands, letter dated at; 4.
- O'Brien:
 and the Pretender; 199.
 Lieutenant John, killed in Spain;
 144.
 Mary, petition of; 144.
- Oczakow; 57.
- Ogleby's Homer; 86.
- Oglethorpe:
 General James, governor of Georgia,
 letters of; 258.
 — his audiences with the Chick-saws; 259-262.
 — his bills of exchange; 272.
 — member for Haslemere; 137.
 Sir Theophilus, his regiment; 201.
- Okover, —; 228.
- Oldershaw, J., agreement signed by;
 401.
- Olivares, Count d', letter to; 21.
- Oliver, Mr.; 290.
- O'Niel, Captain, Jacobite prisoner; 361.
- Opie, Captain John, at Leghorn; 133.

Oporto, English consul at, his pay; 136.
 Orange:
 Prince of (1572), at Mechlin; 2.
 — near Gulick; 22.
 — (1677), his chamberlain; 45.
 — the ship; 394.
 Princess of (1734); 241.
 Orbassano, review at; 53.
 Ordnance, Board of, letters of; 222.
 Orford, Earl of:
 (1709), E. Russell, orders signed by;
 59.
 — (1720); 106.
 — letter of; 118.
 — declines commissionership of the Admiralty; ib.
 (1752) Walpole, letter of; 379.
 — (1753); 306.
 — (1785), letter of; 412.
 — (1791), letter of; 413.
 Organ, Barrel, the, Burney's letter about; 395.
 Orkney:
 Earl of (1715); 170.
 — (1737), governor of Edinburgh
 Castle; 198.
 bishopric of; 187.
 Orleans:
 rue des Minimes; 191.
 Duke of (1715), his daughter; 165.
 — (1723), letter of Geo. I. to;
 109.
 — and the Jacobites; 174.
 — his death; 344.
 Orme, Mrs. Robert, or Audrey, letter of;
 406.
 Ormes, —, his congregation; 139.
 Ormonde, Duke of:
 (1676), warrants signed by; 44, 45.
 (1713), commander-in-chief, letters
 of; 217.
 (1714); 220.
 (1715), his flight; 158.
 his leaving Paris; 163.
 (1726), expedition to be commanded by; 196.
 his designs in Scotland; 165.
 Forster and; 171.
 his escape; ib.
 and the Duke of Orleans; 174.
 letter to; 218.
 Orogna, ship building at; 196.
 O'Rorke, Mr., Jacobite; 200.
 Orrery, Lord:
 (1711); 79.
 (1716); 102.
 Orrme, William; 11.
 Osbaldiston, Alexander; 168.
 Osborne, Sir William, of the Irish Parliament; 402.
 Osnaburg:
 court at; 100.
 letter dated at; 118.
 Ossois, Marshal Daun at; 54.
 Ossulstone, Lord (1748); 366, 368.
 Ossuna, Duke d', his flight; 64.

U 24953.

Ostend:
 letters dated at; 74, 163.
 traders to East Indies from; 133.
 Pretender's ships at; 159.
 men to be embarked at; 196, 197.
 Otley, Mr., of Bury St. Edmunds, letter
 to; 397.
 Otter hounds; 402, 403.
 Ouchterlony, George; 342.
 Oughton, Colonel Adolphus:
 letter of; 157.
 letter to; 159.
 Oulx, letter dated at; 73.
 Ovington, letter dated at; 27.
 Owen, Massey; 212.
 Oxenden, Sir George, charge against;
 248.
 Oxford:
 letter dated at; 157.
 recruiting at; 157.
 coach journey to; 232.
 election at; 233.
 sword blades &c., found in; 166, 167.
 Jacobite tumults in; 166.
 robberies near; 167.
 All Souls' College; 167.
 Balliol College; 190.
 Cat Street; 166.
 Wadham College; 166.
 theatre in; 233.
 Cross Inn; 250.
 road; 242.
 Bishop of (1715); 166.
 Earl of (1712), Harley, commissioner; 211.
 — (1713), letter to; 218.
 — (1715), his bad turn to Boling-broke; 157.
 — (1715), his answer to the Jacobites; 160.
 — (1734); 244.

P.

Padua; 73.
 letter dated at; 75.
 Paget, Mr., his courtship; 228, 230.
 Paine:
 Sir Joseph, letters of; 25.
 Tobias, mayor of Oxford; 166.
 Painter, —, search for; 163.
 Palatinate, the:
 contributions for recovery of; 20.
 great distress of; ib.
 Palatine, the Elector, preparations against;
 19.
 Palliser, Commodore; 403.
 Palmer, Katherine; 41.

F F

- Palmes :
 Colonel, at Blenheim, made Brigadier; 330.
 General; 49.
 General Francis, at Milan; 53.
 — letters of; 54, 56.
 — at Vienna, letters of; 61, 74, 80.
 Guy, teller of the Exchequer, assignment by; 129.
 William, father of Guy; 180.
Palmquist, envoy; 62.
Pansecola, description of; 255.
Papillon, Mr.; 36.
Paris:
 news letters from; 81, 157, 163.
 letters dated at; 109-114, 120, 121, 193, 332, 342, 344, 348.
 rue Christine; 191.
 rue Dauphin; 190.
 rue Montmartre; 192.
 rue de St. Pierre; 191.
Paris, Mr., letter to; 302.
Parker:
 elected for Sussex; 331.
 Eliz., of Lyn; 356.
 Sir Harry; 245.
 Robert, his letter about the Guinea coast; 355, 356.
 Thomas, letter of; 340.
 William, of Hackney; 211.
 Mrs., her marriage; 227.
Parkins, Sir William, execution of; 35.
Parliament:
 elections to; 80.
 appointment of clerks in; 143.
 of 1708, opinions about; 384.
 election of Speaker; 344.
 meeting of, Lord Townshend's views on; 378.
Parmell, John, a prisoner; 11.
Parnell, John, judge in Ireland; 192.
Parr, —; 21.
Parratt, William; 10.
Parris, Alexander; 254.
Parry, Sir Thomas, letter of; 19.
Parson's Green; 252.
Parsons:
 Humphrey; 211.
 Sir John; 211.
 Mr., of Charterhouse Yard; 173.
Partridge, Richard:
 of Water Lane, brother of Governor Belcher; 280.
 letter of; 276.
 letters to; 288, 290.
Passage, in Biscay; 66.
Paston, William; 1.
Patchy Wood; 329.
Paterson:
 Lieut., wounded; 71.
 Hugh, at Boulogne; 193.
 John, letter of; 190.
Paul, Robert, report of; 150.
Paulet, Lady Nassau; 239.
Paucefort, Mr., his memorial on Guy Palmes; 129.
Payne, Mr., clerk of the peace for Norfolk, death of; 335, 336.
Paz, a Jew, absconding of; 350.
Peach, candidate for Sussex; 381.
Peake, Daniel, master of ship; 392.
Pearks, Benjamin, alderman of Worcester; 158.
Pelham:
 Henry; 363.
 — his letter about Thos. Robinson; 123.
 — and Charles Townshend; 365, 366, 367.
 — letter to; 370.
 James; 187.
 — letters of; 67, 69, 337.
 — answer to; 68.
 Jemmy, certificate for; 74.
 Thomas, commissioner of Trade; 296.
 — letter of; 330.
Pels, Andrew, and Company; 107.
Pemaquid, fort at; 294.
Pembroke, Earl of:
 (1720); 106.
 (1734); 243.
 (1737), dragoons under; 151.
 (1769), his regiment; 406.
 and Montgomery (1677), charged with blasphemy; 45.
Pendarves, William, letter of; 206.
Pendarvis, Alexander; 211.
Pendlebury, Colonel; 218.
 at the Tower; 215, 216.
Penn:
 Thomas, letter of; 302.
 William, letter of; 63.
Pennsylvania:
 Menonist emigrants to; 63.
 governor of; 298.
Penzance, sessions at; 306.
Pepper:
 Colonel, at Oxford; 167.
 General, at Almenara; 72.
Perce:
 Sir Charles; 10.
 Sir John; 10.
Percival:
 Lord (1730), petition of; 258.
 Rev. K., letter of; 407.
 William; ib.
 Samuel, of Tower Hill; 215.
 Mr.; 13, 308.
Percy:
 Lord (1768); 405.
 Francis, alderman of Cambridge; 127.
Perkins:
 Mr., fellow of St. John's, Cambridge; 336.
 Richard, master of a ship; 85.
 Robert, petition of; 46.
Pero, Isaac, letter to; 148.
Perouse, Valley of, Protestants in; 52.
Perth:
 letters dated at; 163.
 the Jacobites about; 161, 166, 174.
 rebels about; 180, 181, 184, 185.
 proposed road to; 198.
 Amboy, New Jersey; 298.

- Peryra, Mr.; 76.
 Peter the Great:
 envoy from; 88.
 his letter to Geo. I.; 88.
 Peterborough:
 races; 369.
 Earl of (1676), warrant signed by;
 44.
 — (1711), letters of; 78, 79, 80,
 87.
 — his mission; 82.
 — (1728), letter to; 119.
 — letter of; 120.
 Petkum, Mons.:
 his proposals; 58, 59.
 letters of; 61, 83, 89.
 Pettecum, M. de, secret advice by; 164.
 Petticrew, Mr.; 392.
 Pettus, Sir John, letter of; 26.
 Petworth; 21.
 Peyton, Sir Thomas; 409.
 Pheasant, the ship, plundered by the Spaniards; 149.
 Phenney, George, surveyor-general of Customs in America; 264.
 Philadelphia, letter dated at; 302.
 Philarchus, letter of; 156.
 Philip II. of Spain; 2.
 Philip IV. of Spain, letter of; 21.
 Phillips:
 Captain; 320.
 Lady; 181.
 Benjamin, alderman of Hereford;
 160.
 Francis, valuation by; 204.
 Samuel, of Cornwall; 207.
 Phillipee, Adolph, Speaker of New York
 Assembly; 276.
 Philotheus, Jacobite letter to; 155.
 Philpott, Nicholas; 137.
 Phipps:
 Sir Constantine; 191.
 William, letter to; 191.
 Phoenix, the ship; 44.
 Pickarden, Thomas, master of ship; 89.
 Piedmont:
 Germans in; 52.
 day of thanksgiving in; 56.
 Marshal Daun in; 72.
 Pigott, Chidly, letter of; 89.
 Pilgrim, letter dated at; 302.
 Pinhero, loan negotiated by; 350.
 Pinner park; 5.
 Pipe:
 S., agreement signed by; 401.
 Piper, Count, a prisoner; 68.
 Piracy, suppression of; 20.
 Pirates:
 ships taken by; 22.
 injuries done by; 27.
 Pitfield, Alexander; 211.
 Pitt:
 —, his regiment; 178.
 Governor, letters to; 189.
 Mr., of Newmarket; 369.
 Mrs., her marriage; 324.
 William, the elder; 315.
 Pitt—cont.
 William, letter to; 324.
 — speech of; 387.
 — letter of; 393.
 — (1764); 399, 400.
 Chas. Townshend's opinion of; 400.
 Placentia:
 governor of; 285.
 French claim on; 295.
 Plague among cows; 228.
 Platel, Pierre, valuation by; 202.
 Platen, Countess of, her daughter's marriage; 110.
 Playter, Captain; 148.
 Plesington, Mr., of Dimples; 164.
 Plessen, Mons.; 166.
 Plowden, Mr., his daughter; 252.
 Plym Stock, the ship; 89.
 Plymouth:
 letter dated at; 320.
 haven; 8.
 Pocock, Admiral; 397.
 Points, payments for; 18, 16.
 Pointz, Mr.; 363.
 Poland:
 King Augustus and; 53.
 affairs of; 70.
 the succession in; 105.
 Protestants of; 109.
 envoy to England from; 117.
 English envoy to, his pay and allowance; 126.
 Poley, Richard, letter of; 116.
 Polignac, Abbé de; 61.
 letters of and to; 69.
 Pollexfen, John:
 report by; 254.
 commissioner of Trade; 296.
 Polwarth, Lord (1716); 102.
 Pomerania, the Swedes in; 62, 92.
 Pomfret, Lady; 243.
 Pont la Vachette; 56.
 Poole, Richard, alderman of Hereford;
 160.
 Pope, the:
 (1709), difficulties of; 52.
 his bad health; 54, 55.
 Pope, wardrobe keeper; 209.
 Popham, Jo., of the Council; 12.
 Popple:
 Mr., governor of Bermuda; 265.
 William, certificate by; 127.
 — letter of; 296.
 Porreel, P., letter of; 129.
 Portella, camp at; 68.
 Porter, James, commissary at Vienna, his pay; 126.
 Portland:
 Earl of (1715), letter of; 342.
 Duke of (1726); 115.
 — (1728), letter to; 297.
 — (1734), grant to; 122.
 Port Mahon; 138, 141. ships sunk near; 122.
 governor of; 122.
 Porto-bello:
 attack on; 301.
 fair at; 350, 351.

Portsmouth; 397.
 letters dated at; 116, 369.
 affidavit made at; 200.
 barracks; 315.
 the ship; 60.

Portugal, affairs of; 78.
 English envoy to, his pay and allowance; 126.
 alleged debt owing by; 127.
 King of, Fred. Augustus; 49.
 — seizure of gold and diamonds by; 351.

Potter, Rev. Robert, letter of; 382.

Potts :
 John, letter of; 21.
 Sir R., letters of; 25.
 Sir Roger; 328.

Poulett, Earl (1714); 231.
 (1759), letter of; 319.

Poulteny, Daniel; 137. See Pulteney.

Powdick, John, letter of; 404.

Powell :
 Mr.; 207.
 Rev. Mr., letter to; 389, 390.
 Henry, letter of; 346.
 Rev. William Samuel, letter of; 363.

Powis, Duke of (1715), taken up; 160.

Poynter, Captain; 299.

Poyntz :
 Stephen, at the Hague, letters of; 58-64, 70, 344.
 — letters to; 110, 111.
 Mr., at Paris and Soissons; 120.

Prade, Mrs.; 241.

Prats del Roy, in Spain; 144.

Pratt, Chief Justice; 138.

Prestland :
 Mr.; 61.
 William, letter of; 341.

Preston :
 letters dated at; 169, 170.
 election for; 137.
 rebel gentry about; 164.
 signatures of loyalists dated at; 168.
 battle of, account of; 178.
 lieut.-governor of Edinburgh Castle; 174, 198.
 —, his regiment; 178.
 and the Norfolk election; 339.
 Lady; 241.
 Sir James, burial of; 334.
 Thomas; 211, 213.

Pretender, the; 88.
 at Venice; 119.
 Bolingbroke and; 157.
 movements in favour of; 158, 163.
 at Bar le Duc; 158, 159.
 his pretended mother; 159.
 his designs; 164, 165.
 his proclamation; 168.
 his movements in France; 177. reported to be in Scotland; 181-184.
 projects on behalf of (1726); 196.
 movements of; 199, 200.
 in Lorraine; 333.
 the Young, Prince Charles Edward, General Campbell's expedition after; 361.

Preveran, Daniel, letter of; 114.

Price :
 Baron, commissioner; 211.
 Charles, of Jamaica; 297.
 Matthew, letter of; 157.
 Robert, baron of the Exchequer; 210.
 Uvedale; 211.

Prices, illustrations of; 13-17, 94, 202-204.

Prideaux, General, killed; 309.

Primrose, Sir Archibald, Lord Register of Scotland; 83.

Prince, Thomas, pastor in Boston, Mass.; 280.

Pringle, Robert; 337.

Pringle, Samuel; 254.

Prior, Matthew, fees for arresting; 342.

Privateers, the East India Company's losses from; 149.

Prosperity, the ship; 99.

Protestants, oppressed; 58.

Prussia :
 troops of, in Italy, agreement concerning; 66. strength of army; 119.
 King of (1710); 60.
 — his illness; 73.
 — his son a keen whig; ib.
 — his complaint against the States General; 86.
 — (1715); 91.
 — (1734), reported death of; 241.
 Prince Royal of; 80.

Püchler or Puckler, Mr; 98.
 letter of; ib.

Pudner, Captain, of the Severn; 85.

Puerto Rica; 148, 149.

Pulteney :
 Mr.; 170.
 Daniel, letters of; 58, 60, 67, 68, 79, 81, 82, 84.
 — memorial of; 65.
 — reflections by; 68.
 — commissioner of Trade; 296.
 J., report by; 127.
 William, secretary at war, letters of; 222.

Purbeck, Lord (1677), sent to the Tower; 45.

Purcell, Mrs. Margaret; 205.

Pye, Lady; 230.

Pymont; 116.
 letter dated at; 110.

Q

Quakers, the, and Carolina; 255, 256.

Qualification Bill, passed by the Lords; 79.

Quarantine, observations on ; 107.
 Quebec; 269.
 siege of, papers relating to; 306 et seq.
 Queensberry:
 Duke of (1711), letters of; 79, 81.
 — (1704), papers by; 153.
 Duchess of, mem. by; 41, 42.
 Quesne, Mons. de, letter of; 64.
 Quiddenham, Sir T. Holland at; 19.
 letters dated at; 28.
 Quin, James, letter of; 322.

R.

Rabley, letters dated at; 316, 318.
 Raby, Lord (1709); 58.
 at Hanover; 77.
 letters of; 80–85.
 his regiment in Spain; 80.
 his departure from Berlin; 81, 85.
 Radburne, John, letter of; 129.
 Radford, John, sent to the Tower; 44.
 Radnor, Earl of (1714); 221.
 Ragotzy, Prince, and the Emperor; 80.
 Rainsford, Mr. Justice, opinion by; 27.
 Ramos, Diego, declaration by; 116.
 Ramsay, M. de, commandant of Quebec; 324.
 Ramsey, Mr., his mission to James I.; 22.
 Ranelagh:
 the ship; 77, 85.
 Earl of, Paymaster-General; 217.
 Lord and Lady; 244.
 Rantzan, document signed; 96.
 Ratisbon; 80.
 document dated at; 119.
 diet at, Protestant ministers at; 57, 59.
 Evangelical conference at; 108.
 Ravanel, Captain, wounded; 71.
 Rawcliffe; 164.
 Rawlins, Mr.; 240.
 Rayley, William, chamberlain of Norwich; 329.
 Raymond, Sir Robert; 211.
 paper signed by; 144.
 Raynham or Rainham Hall, Norfolk; 27, 58, 87, 330, 331, 340, 356, 364–370, 376, 397, 402, 406.
 East, Ludgreves in; 87.
 Martin, townsmen of; 25.
 Re, Claudio Francesco, letter of; 121.
 Rea, Lord, his clan; 195.
 Reade:
 Robert, letter of; 25.
 William, consul at Tripoli, his pay; 126.
 Reading; 212.
 Redall, Peter, a prisoner; 11.
 Redburn; 5.
 Redgrave; 6.
 Reed, Sir Thomas; 137.
 Reede, Baron L. de; 51. de Renswoode, Baron F. de; ib.
 Reeve, Richard, merchant, petition of; 134.
 Rehbinden, General:
 sent to Briançon; 53.
 his advance towards Briançon; 56.
 reinforced; 58.
 Renard, Mr., his letter on South Sea affairs; 107.
 Renfrew, minister of; 178.
 Retford, East, election for; 137.
 Revel, ships under Sir J. Norris at; 91, 93.
 Reymerston, letter dated at; 382.
 Reynold, Sir James, Chief Baron; 264.
 Rhine, the, operations on; 19.
 Rhode Island:
 governor of; 276.
 government of; 293.
 commissioners of; 303, 304.
 Rhone, the:
 French troops on; 56.
 overflow of; 83.
 Rice, Secretary; 305.
 Richards, Gen. Michael, of the Ordnance; 223.
 Richardson, Lord (1661), letter of; 25.
 Richelieu:
 Lady; 69.
 Duke de, letter of; 113.
 Richmond:
 Surrey, court at; 8, 12.
 — House; 205.
 — old park; 346.
 Duke of (1784), grant to; 122.
 Alex., letters of; 190, 191.
 the ship, captured by the Spaniards; 149.
 Riga:
 siege of; 65, 70.
 protection of trade at; 91, 92.
 the ship; 138, 140.
 Rindge, Mr., recommended for Council of New Hampshire; 280.
 Ripperda, Duke of, project laid before; 196.
 Riva, Mons., letter to; 109.
 Rivers, Earl:
 (1712), governor of the Tower; 210.
 (1712), master of the Ordnance; 211.
 Robartes, Jhon, a prisoner; 11.
 Roberts:
 Mr., consul at Elsinore; 87.
 Francis, commission to; 200.
 Robinson:
 Dr., dean of Windsor; 335.
 or Robertson, Alex., of Strowan; 198.
 Capt. George; 401.
 Dr. John, Bishop of Bristol, letters of; 127, 129.
 Sir John, deputy constable of the Tower; 46.

Robinson—cont.

- John, letters of; 50 et seq.
- Robert, Chief Justice of Gibraltar, letters of; 149.
- Sir Thomas, governor of Barbadoes, petition of; 306.
- Thomas, envoy at Vienna, letters of; 111, 118, 122–124.
- his desire to quit Vienna; 123.
- his pay and allowance; 126.
- Robison, Mrs., death of; 249.
- Robson, Robert, of Whitby; 859.
- Rochegude, Marquis de, letter of; 88.
- Rochelle, siege of; 22.

Rochester:

- deanery of; 109.
- East Gate; 829.
- Bishop of (1714); 224.
- (1769); 406.
- Earl of (1685); 25.
- letter to; 80.

Rochford, Earl of:

- his dragoons; 67.
- killed at Almenara; 71.
- (1710), at Genoa; 64.
- (1766) at Madrid; 402.
- (1771); 410, 411.

Rockingham:

- Lord Townshend at; 405.
- Lord (1764); 399.

Roelore, Mons. de, governor of the Cevennes; 58.

Roderick, Dr. C., letter of; 385.

Rogers:

- Captain, letter to; 205, 206.
- governor; 305.
- Mr.; 192.
- Paul, alderman of Norwich; 396.
- Woodes, governor of Bahamas; 265.

Rogue, Count de la, sent to the Tarentaise; 54, 55.

Roban, Duke of, his relief of Montauban; 22.

Rolleston, Elizabeth, letter of; 240.

Rollinson, William, letter of; 208.

Rollo, Lord (1715); 188.

Rome; 116.

- letter dated at; 66.
- the Cardinals at; 52.
- the Pretender at; 197.

Romney:

- the ship; 81.
- Earl of (1705), the late; 127.

Rondeau:

- M., and the cambric manufacture; 114.
- Claudius, English Resident in Russia, letters to and of; 146, 147.

Rose, the ship; 304, 305.

Rosencrantz, M., letter of; 64.

Roseneath, Point of; 362.

Ross, chamberlain of; 160.

Rosse, clan of; 195.

- General, his regiment; 67.
- Lieut.-Gen. Charles, letter of; 68.
- his nephew; ib.

Rothes, Earl of:

- (1715), his treatment by the rebels; 183.

Duke of Argyll and; 184.

governor of Stirling Castle; 186.

Rotterdam; 75, 80, 81, 85, 336.

Haring Vliet; 338.

Rouen; 342.

letter dated at; 192.

Rouille, Mons. de; 51.

Rous, Sir John, his daughter; 409.

Rouse, Anthony; 10.

Roussillon, the, troops from; 56.

Row:

—, a dyer; 163.

Mr., Lord Nairne and; 173.

Rowalland, laird of; 84.

Rowdon, Mr., payment to; 38.

Roxburgh, Duke of, at Edinburgh; 161. (1722); 192.

Rudding, Mr., letter to; 29.

his dairy burnt; 30.

Rudham, East, lands in; 37.

West, manor of; ib.

Rufford, Notts, letter dated at; 410.

Ruffs, payment for; 18.

Rugen, Danish fleet at; 95.

Rushout:

Sir John; 137, 238, 242.

— and Lady; 248.

Lady Anne, letters of; 239, 240, 242, 247, 250, 251, 252.

— her misfortune; 247.

Rushworth, D., letter of; 368.

Russell:

Brigadier Richard; 138.

Sir William, of Chippenham; 36.

Russen, Mr., of High Wycombe; 173.

Russia:

Czar of, his son's marriage; 58.

fleet of; 91.

negotiations with; 105.

Sir Chas. Wager's private opinion of; 116, 117.

Duke of Holstein's relations with; 117.

English envoy to, his pay and allowance; 126.

Company, letters of and to; 146, 147, to help the Pretender; 197.

Ruth, Mr., and the Pretender; 199.

Rutland:

Earl of (1600), imprisoned; 10.

Duke of (1720); 106.

— (1749); 368.

Ruyke (?), bay of; 99.

Ryburgh, free warren at; 366.

Rycaut, Captain, petition of his widow Charlotte; 136.

Rye, the ship; 270.

Rymer, John, of Whitby; 359.

Ryswick:

Peace of; 60.

treaty of; 217, 294.

S.

- Sabula, Don Phelipe de, letter to; 116.
 Sacheverell, Dr.:
 trial of; 63, 64.
 foreign notions regarding; 76.
 his defence; 128.
 prosecution of; 136.
 articles against; 384.
 death of; 160.
 St. Alban's:
 St. Michael's and St. Stephen's parishes; 5.
 mayor of; 6.
 Duke of (1784); 248.
 St. Ander, ships at; 197.
 St. Andre, camp at; 74.
 St. Andrew, the ship; 804.
 St. Andrews, Archbishop of, murder of;
 34.
 St. Bernard, Mount; 57.
 St. Charles river; 322, 323, 324.
 St. Claire, master of; 183.
 St. David's, church of; 379.
 St. Gall, abbots of; 42.
 St. George, Oliver; 142.
 St. Jago: island of; 138.
 de Cuba; 149.
 de la Vega, document dated at; 300.
 St. James, the ship, of Bristol, captured by the Spaniards; 148.
 St. John:
 Mr., or James, deputy surveyor-general in Carolina; 258, 268.
 Henry, secretary of state, letter of;
 75.
 — letters to; 77.
 — document signed by; 80.
 St. Johnston's, punishment of its citizens;
 32.
 St. Juan, Spanish ship; 148.
 St. Kilda; 361.
 St. Lawrence river; 315.
 St. Lo, Mr.; 297.
 Saintloe, Justice; 178.
 St. Malo, shipping burnt at; 153.
 St. Omer; 73.
 St. Petersburg; 91-93.
 document dated at; 88.
 proposed visit of the Pretender to;
 197.
 letters dated at; 147.
 College of Commerce at; ib.
 St. Quentin:
 cambric manufacture by Protestants
 at; 114.
 cambric from; 348.
 St. Remy, General de, his march to the Chartreuse; 56.
 — his troops; 58.
 St. Saphorin, M. de:
 letter of; 78.
 opinion of; 108.
 St. Simon's, Georgia; 270, 271.
- Salisbury:
 Bishop of (1689), letter to; 35.
 — Burnet, verses on; 46, 47.
 — (1748); 362.
 Earl of, Robert, Garter given to; 21.
 — secretary; 41.
 — (1676), James, sent to the Tower; 44.
 — set at liberty; 45.
 Lady, her son; 243, 244.
 — at Bushy; 249.
 the ship; 157.
 Sallesberie, Captain, slain; 11.
 Salt trade; 341.
 Salter, R., letter of; 126.
 Salterton, Mr., postmaster 40.
 Salvati, Abbé, nuncio in Paris; 52.
 Sandall, Thomas; 11.
 Sanderson:
 Captain, his ship; 79.
 Lady Mary; 244.
 Sandfield, Captain Haver; 138.
 Sandroski, Comte de, letter to; 115.
 Sandwich, Earl of (1771), letters of;
 410, 411.
 Sandy, co. Bedford, letter dated at; 396.
 Sandys:
 Lord (1764), his pension; 400.
 Mr.; 239.
 Mrs.; 249.
 Santee river; 256.
 Saragossa, victory near; 74.
 Sardinia:
 Spain's designs on; 87.
 King of (1729), letter to; 121.
 Sargeant, Thomas; 211.
 Sarsfield, Mons., ships under; 133.
 Saunders:
 Sir Charles, admiral, letters of; 308, 310.
 articles of Quebec signed by; 324.
 Saundes, Lord (1600), imprisoned; 10.
 Savana river; 256, 269.
 Savannah, in Georgia; 259, 260.
 Savile, Sir George, letter of; 410.
 Savoy:
 English army in; 57.
 Duke of (1709), and the allies; 51,
 55, 56, 65, 67, 68, 74.
 — treaty with; 52.
 — his designs; 53.
 — his treaty; 54.
 — his difference with the Emperor;
 54.
 — his rights in Montferrat; 80.
 Saxlingham House; 7.
 Saxony, Elector of, Fred. Augustus, letter
 of; 49.
 Scarborough; 249, 258, 259.
 Charles Townshend at; 259, 263, 264.
 Lord (1715); 341.
 — (1734), and Ireland; 243.
 — (1737), illness of; 249.
 Scarf, a, [i.e., a chaplaincy] application for; 394.
 Scarisbrick, Robert; 168.
 Schack, Baron, Russian envoy; 88.

- Schaub, Chevalier; 109.
 Schenckinckh, B.; 254.
 Schlestadt, M., letter to; 68.
 Schestedt, M.:
 Danish Secretary of State; 99, 101.
 letter to; 100.
 Schleunitz, —, letter of; 113.
 Schmettau, Baron de, Prussian ambassador; 66.
 Schomberg:
 Capt. Alexander, his desire to command the Dorset yacht; 410, 411.
 — letters of; 410, 412.
 Solomon, letter of; 411.
 Schonen:
 the Swedish army in; 57.
 province, the Danes in; 71. intended Danish descent upon; 97-100.
 Schönborn, Count, paper by; 55.
 Schulenberg, General, in the valley d'Aoust; 55.
 Schutz:
 Baron, letter of; 48.
 — scheme by; ib.
 Colonel; 244.
 Mons., letters of; 49, 50.
 Scipio, the ship; 301.
 Scotland:
 Lord Hunsdon's expedition into; 8.
 Lauderdale's administration of affairs in; 30-35.
 conventicles in; 33, 34.
 levies for France in; 34.
 General Assembly of the Church of, address of; 144.
 conspiracy in (1703), papers concerning; 153, 156.
 the rebellion in (1715); 160 et seq.
 arrangements for landing, &c. of the Pretender in; 165.
 rebels in, Duke of Argyll's operations against; 173-186.
 the Pretender's reported landing in;
 181-185.
 memorials concerning; 194.
 the Highlanders, proposals about;
 194, 195.
 Gen. Wade's scheme for securing the Highlands; 197-199.
 General Campbell's search for
 Charles Edward; 361, 362.
 Scott:
 Captain, of the Romney; 81.
 Campbell, death of; 403.
 Ja., of Norwich; 368.
 James, of Berlin; 109.
 Lady Jane, her threatened malady;
 395.
 Jonathan, of Shrewsbury; 158.
 Scotti, Marquis; 107.
 Scottowe:
 Capt., his son's vote; 353.
 Mr., letter to; 354.
 Scroop, Baron; 288.
 Seago, Sampson:
 petition of; 131.
 information by; ib.
 Seahorse, the ship; 148.
 Seamen, impressment of; 20, 27, 48.
 Seaton, —, search for; 157.
 Seckman, document signed; 96.
 Seine, the river, overflow of; 81, 83.
 Selkirk, rebels at; 166.
 Selwyn:
 Mr.; 369.
 George; 368.
 Sempill, Lord (1745), his regiment; 151.
 Seneca Indians; 269.
 Seranno, Antoine, at Havannah; 116.
 Seton's logic; 13.
 Setter, Capt. David, of the Portsmouth;
 60.
 Severn, the ship; 85.
 Seville; 121.
 Seymour, Edw., Speaker, warrants of; 43, 44.
 Shadwell; 345.
 Shaffiroff, Baron Peter von; 147.
 Shaftesbury:
 election for; 137.
 Earl of (1676), sent to the Tower; 48.
 — visitors to; 45.
 — (1759), letter of; 319.
 Shales:
 Charles, death of; 353.
 — Mary, his daughter; 354.
 Sharp, Sharpe:
 Mr.; 301.
 J., his bill; 288.
 John, letters of; 368, 369.
 — letter to; 367.
 W., clerk of the Council; 146.
 William; 264.
 Shaw:
 Capt. Daniel, letter of; 152.
 — his services; 152, 158.
 John, valuation by; 204.
 Sheerness; 97.
 Sheffield, Lord, his pamphlet (1791); 413.
 Shelburn, Earl of, Henry; 36.
 Sheldon:
 Colonel; 168.
 Mrs.; 252.
 Shelton:
 Mr., secretary in Carolina; 257.
 Ralph; 2.
 Shepheard, Philip; 211.
 Sherburne, Col. Henry, in New Hampshire; 279.
 Sheriffmuir, Lochiel at; 164.
 Sheringham, Norfolk, pier at; 9.
 Sherley, Sir Thomas, house sold by; 21.
 Sherlock, Rev. Thomas, vice-chancellor of Cambridge; 341.
 Sherrard, Bennet, assignment to; 130.
 Sherwin, Mr., a Jacobite; 167.
 Shipdham:
 court rolls of; 348.
 letter dated at; 397.
 Shipworth, Mrs.; 241.
 Shirley:
 family; 245.
 governor of Massachusetts, letter of;
 292.

Shirley—cont.

- and Bollan; 304.
- Captain, and the Dorset yacht; 410-412.
- Lady Anna E., letter of; 230.
- Lady Barbara; 224, 232.
- letters of; 228, 229, 237.
- Elizabeth, afterwards Countess of Northampton, letters to; 223 et seq.
- George, letter of; 401.
- Henry, letter of; 236.
- Lawrence; 224.
- letter of; 223.
- Sir Robert, his daughter; 234.
- Sir Thomas; 245.
- Short, Joseph, commissioner; 211.
- Shortip, Mr., letter to; 191.
- Showley, Lancaster; 164.
- Shrewsbury:
 - Jacobite riot at; 158.
 - Earl of (1614); 18.
 - Duke of, in France; 158.
 - (1714); 220.
- Shrimpton, Mr., of High Wycombe; 173.
- Shute, governor of Massachusetts Bay:
 - petition of; 272.
 - reports, &c. on; 273, 274.
- Shuttleworth, Mr.:
 - of Brookside; 164.
 - of Turnover; ib.
- Sicily:
 - King of; 87.
 - asked to help the Pretender; 165.
 - priests of; 113.
- Silesia:
 - lands in; 59.
 - bonds upon; 107.
- Silk, John, commissioner; 211.
- Silver Street, house in; 6.
- Simcoke, Robert, valuation by; 202.
- Simond, the ship; 258.
- Sinzendorf:
 - Count; 51.
 - Torcy's comments on; 72.
- Sissill, Gregory; 11.
- Skelton, Mr., grant of lands to; 265.
- Skinner:
 - Brinley, allowance to; 126.
 - Samuel; 211, 213.
 - Will., letter of; 299.
- Skottowe, Thomas, letter of; 124.
- Skye, Isle of; 361.
- Slick, Count, envoy; 53.
- Slingelandt:
 - Mons.; 348.
 - letter to; 158.
- Sluys, siege of; 22.
- Smaggett, Peter, letter of; 243.
- Smallridge, Dr., Bishop of Bristol:
 - letter of; 132.
 - letter to; 157.
- Smart, John; 211.
- Smedley, Rev. Jonathan, petition concerning; 130.
- Smeth, Ralph; 10.

Smith, Smyth:

- Captain, at Quebec; 322.
- wounded at Quebec; 324.
- Commodore, in search of the Pretender; 361.
- Mr., and Tamworth election; 401.
- quartermaster, wounded; 71.
- Daniel, of Harwich; 131.
- Jack, at the head of the new whigs; 73.
- John, master of ship; 89.
- administrator to Prince George; 202.
- Sir Owen, expenses of; 17.
- Portland, his daughters; 227.
- Capt. Thomas, in the Baltic; 91.
- Thomas, letter of; 191.
- Thomas; 254.
- descriptions by; 253.
- William, his lands; 17.
- his expenses at Cambridge; 13-17.
- Smithson, Hugh, commissioner; 211.
- Snailwell, letter dated at; 320.
- Society, the Friendly; 152.
- Somers, Lord (1713), a godfather; 340.
- Somerset:
 - Duke of (1720); 106.
 - (1722), letter of; 344.
 - Chancellor of Cambridge University; 363.
- Sound, the, squadron sent into; 53.
- South Sea:
 - scheme; 104, 105.
 - company, directors of; 107.
 - their effects; 107.
 - transfer of stock; ib.
 - Monteleone's claim on; 119.
- Castle, the ship; 271.
- Southampton, Earl of (1600), imprisoned; 10.
- Southeek, Earl of (1715); 185.
- Southwark, Christ Church; 131.
- Southwell:
 - Edward, letter of; 342.
 - orders signed by; 221, 222.
 - Sir Robert, warrant signed by; 44.
- Southwoolton, letter dated at; 329.
- Spagg, James; 212.
- Spain:
 - navy of; 8.
 - the proposed marriage of Prince Charles; 21, 23.
 - the French troops in; 55, 56.
 - ships of, captured by the Dutch; 66, 85, 67, 69, 128.
 - and Sardinia; 87.
 - and Gibraltar; 111, 112, 115.
 - treaty of France with; 112.
 - negotiations for the Pretender with; 197.
 - ratification of treaties with; 220.
 - King of, his advisers; 113.
 - his claim to the French crown; 119.
 - secret treaty of the Emperor with; 119.
 - supply of wool from; 134.

Spain—cont.

- list of British ships captured by; 148, 149.
- asked to help the Pretender; 165.
- attack on Georgia by; 271.
- Colonel David Dunbar in; 283.
- privateers of; 297, 305.
- ships captured belonging to; 305.

Spelman:

- Charles, letters of and to; 25.
- Rev. Charles, vicar of Congan; 152.
- Francis, letter of; 329.
- Sir Henry, letter of; 18.
- godfather; 24.
- Henry son of John, petition of; 151.
- his services abroad; 151, 152.
- Sir Henry; 151.
- his son; 152.
- Henry, of Wickmer; 152.
- Sir John; 152.

Spencer:

- , postmaster at Stamford; 352.
- Mr., letter to; 191.

Spinola, Marquis:

- his army; 19.
- before Gulick; 22.

Spire, garrison in; 21.

Spirits, manufacture of, arguments concerning; 373.

Spital, Captain, wounded at Quebec; 324.

Spooners, Captain; 336.

Spragge, Sir Edward; 27.

Stables, Edward:

- letter of; 143.
- address signed by; 144.

Stadion, Count, letter of; 75.

Staffordshire militia; 340.

Stair, Earl of:

- (1710), letters of; 62, 70, 73.
- (1715), despatches from; 174–177.
- ambassador, his pay and allowance; 126.
- French view of his conduct; 186.
- Duke of Orleans and; 186.

Stamke, Mons., at Wenersberg; 98.

Stamford:

- postmaster at, appointment of; 352.
- Earl of (1699), report by; 254.
- (1709), report by; 127.

Standish, Ralph; 168.

Stanhope:

- Mr.; 15.
- at Genoa; 64.
- at Barcelona; 65.
- at Seville; 121.
- at Frankfort; 386.
- of the Admiralty, illness of; 365.
- his death; 367.
- Colonel; 122.
- his regiment; 178.
- Alexander, memorial of; 48.
- General James; 49.
- at the battle of Almenara; 70.
- his aide-de-camp; 71.
- near Lerida; 71.
- wounded; 72.
- his reverse; 77.

Stanhope—cont.

- J., of the Council; 12.
- Sir John; 11.
- Lord, John, Master of the Posts; 41.
- (1720); 106.
- his residence at Hanover; 106.
- his death; 106.
- his effects left with Cardinal Dubois; 115.
- Mr., Secretary of State, his letter on the French treaty; 103.
- letters to; 103.
- letter of; 104.
- extracts from his letters; 111.
- his despatches to the Duke of Argyll; 173–186.
- Colonel William, letter to; 106.

Stanley:

- Sir John, letter of; 205.
- Thomas; 168.

Stanton, S., agreements witnessed by; 401.

Stanyan, Abraham:

- envoy to Switzerland; 48, 64.
- letters of; 78, 81, 82, 85, 86.
- at the Admiralty; 89.

Stanyford, Ambrose, consul in Algiers, his pay; 126.

Stanyon, Temple, clerk of the Council; 146.

Star, a new blazing; 27.

Starembourg, Mons. de; 63.

Statton, Mr.; 51.

Staunton, or Staunton Harold, co. Leicester; 224, 225, 226, 227, 227.

Stawell:

- Edward; 75.
- Lord (1710), his brother; 75.
- (1715), letter of; 341.

Stebbing, Major Philip; 329.

Steele:

- Captain, commissioner of stamps; 87.
- Richard, petition signed by; 130.

Steeres, Walter, examination of; 192.

Steers, John, attorney; 192.

Steinghens, Mons.; 82.

Stephens:

- Arthur; 212.
- Robert; 212.

Stepney, George, report by; 254.

Steward, Peter, petition of; 214.

Stewart:

- of Appin, attainted; 195.
- Captain, with the Duke of Argyll; 184.
- John, letter of; 29.
- of Innernitty; 198.
- Sir Thomas, witness; 156.
- William; 196.
- Stiffkey or Stewkey; 1, 14, 15.
- Sir N. Bacon's lands at; 5, 6.
- building of house at; 6.
- paper dated at; 10.
- lands in; 37.

- Stileman, —; 21.
- Stirling :
- troops at; 178.
 - Castle; 175.
 - governor of; 186.
 - the ship; 308, 310.
 - Walter, memorandum on; 187.
- Stoake Hall, co. Hereford; 215.
- Stockholm; 68.
- documents dated at; 62, 98.
 - plague at; 84.
 - British minister at, letter to; 90.
- Stoken Church; 242.
- Stolpe in Pomerania; 64, 65.
- Stow, near Downham; 364.
- Stowbridge, Norfolk; 18.
- Stowe:
- letters dated at; 124, 162.
 - visit to; 240.
- Stralsund, British minister at, letter to; 90.
- Strange, John, letter of; 125.
- Strasburg; 50.
- plundered by the French; 65.
 - news from; 87.
 - and Alsace; 87.
- Stratford:
- Mr.; 249.
 - upon Avon; 401.
- Strickland:
- Captain, of the Nassau; 85.
 - Captain Charles, in the Baltic; 91.
 - Sir William; 244.
- Stuart, Sir James; 187.
- Stubbe, Richard, commissioner; 11.
- Studley, letters dated at; 251, 253.
- Sturler, —, his regiment; 184.
- Suckling, Mr., burial of; 334.
- Sudbrook; 314.
- Suffolk:
- justices; 8.
 - members for; 334.
 - Earl of (1614); 18.
 - letter of; 19.
 - Lady, her removal from court; 242.
- Sunderland; 359.
- collector of; 125.
 - Earl of (1709); 52.
 - letter to; 48.
 - letters of; 59, 108.
 - (1710), resigns office; 67.
 - proposed keeper of the Privy Seal; 102.
 - (1720), proposed Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland; 106.
 - Lady (1746); 359.
- Surat Bar; 133.
- Sussex:
- election for; 381.
 - Earl of (1576-7); 3, 4.
 - (1600) a prisoner; 11.
- Sutherland:
- Earl of (1715), letters of; 159, 160.
 - his son Strallinaver; 160.
 - (1715), Lord Lovat and; 185.
 - his clan; 195.
 - James, governor of South Carolina; 256.
- Sutlers at the Tower; 214, 216.
- Sutton:
- Mr., bankruptcy of; 366, 367, 369.
 - Brigadier Richard; 137.
 - William; 8.
- Suze, march towards; 58.
- Swaffham; 58.
- letters dated at; 320, 322.
 - rares; 379.
- Swallow:
- Mr., minister at Wyssett; 17.
 - the ship; 95.
- Swan, Mr.; 407.
- Sweden:
- English letters for; 68.
 - declaration from; 82.
 - Norway ships taken by; 84.
 - Sir John Norris's expedition against; 89-102.
 - ships of, list of; 96.
 - compared with the English; ib.
 - losses by British merchants from; 90.
 - claims against; 91.
 - English envoy to, his pay and allowance; 126.
 - King of; 22.
 - Charles XII. (1709), his victory; 51.
 - the Dnieper crossed by; ib.
 - reported defeat and death of; 55.
 - his recovery and incredible march; 57.
 - his affairs; 58.
 - invaded by the Danes; 62.
 - his troops in Pomerania; 62.
 - rebels in his service; 100.
 - his camp at Swinesund; 98.
 - declaration by; 80.
 - his love of wandering; ib.
 - fears about his return; 70.
- Swift, the snow; 271.
- Swinesund, camp at; 98.
- Switzerland:
- emigration to Pennsylvania from; 63.
 - Protestant Cantons of; 78, 88.
- Sykes, Mr.; 314.
- Symonds, Captain, 339.
- Symons, deputy postmaster at Stamford; 352.

T.

- Taatman, Capt. John, in the Baltic; 91.
- Tabor, John, letter of; 345.
- Talbot:
- Lady; 248.
 - Mr.; 167.
- Talcott, Joseph, governor of Connecticut; 276.

- Tamworth; 238.
 letter dated at; 314.
 election at; 246.
 election for; 390, 401.
 — agreement concerning; 401.
 Lord (1714); 224.
 — death of; 226.
 — (1716); 237.
- Tankerville, Lord (1696), commissioner of Trade; 296.
 (1716); 102.
- Tarentaise, the, French forces in; 54.
- Tate, Mrs.:
 at Northampton races; 253.
 Mr.; ib.
- Tatem, Samuel, merchant, petition of; 184.
- Tatler, the; 74.
- Tatton, Major-Gen. Williams; 188.
- Taxes, &c., arguments concerning; 371-379.
- Taylor:
 Daniel; 212.
 James, letters of; 67, 74, 75, 78, 79, 80.
 Jonah, alderman of Hereford; 160.
- Temple:
 Lord (1764); 399.
 Sir Richard; 78.
- Tenison, Archbishop, letter of; 329.
- Terhuyden camp, letter dated at; 359.
- Termitteu, Henry; 107.
- Terrell, E., letter of; 129.
- Terrington, repairs at; 11, 12.
- Tessier, Dr.; 241.
- Tetuan, English consul at, his pay; 126.
- Thames, the; 221, 258.
- Thames Ditton, letter dated at; 208.
- Thatcher, Mr., a Jacobite; 167.
- Thetcher, Thomas, legacies by; 288, 290.
- Thetford:
 election for; 137.
 mayor, &c., imprisoned for contempt; 46.
 the flying post at; 25.
 postmaster at; 404.
- Thierry, Chateau, the Pretender at; 177.
- Thistlewayte, Mr., of Hampshire; 392.
- Thomas:
 Edmond, letter of; 321.
 Dr. Hugh, of Christ's College, Cambridge, letters to; 385, 386.
 Samuel, of Shrewsbury; 158. and Henry, the ship; 89.
 sloop, taken by the Spaniards; 148.
- Thomlinson, Mr., agent for New Hampshire, his charges against Governor Belcher; 283-285.
- Thompson, Thomson:
 Mrs., suspected murder of; 243.
 Anthony, secretary at Paris, his pay; 126.
 Quartermaster, Lord Irwin's letter about; 106.
 William, recorder of London, letter of; 102.
 Sir William, letters of; 124, 186.
- Thornbury, Timothy; 211.
- Thornhagh, Mr.; 339.
- Thornhill:
 Robert; 211.
 — steward of the Tower Liberty; 212.
- Thorp Constantine, letter dated at; 346.
- Thorp, Daniel, gunner; 219.
- Thorpe, Robert, petition of; 267.
- Three Martins, the ship; 89.
- Threlfall, Mr., of Ashes; 164.
- Thurlow, Edward, candidate for Tamworth; 401.
- Thurnham; 164.
- Thynne, Frances, letter of; 226.
- Tiberon Bay; 116.
- Tierney, James and Thomas, of Mark Lane; 392.
- Tighe, R.; 142.
- Tilson:
 Christopher; 82.
 — letters of; 49, 50.
 George, letters of; 49, 81, 82, 83, 108, 112, 113.
 — letters to; 110-116 passim, 121, 122, 348.
 — papers by; 117.
 — papers endorsed by; 193.
- Tin, assaying of; 347, 348.
- Tinker, Mr.; 350.
- Tippinges, Thomas; 11.
- Titchfield, title of; 342.
- Titley:
 Mr., letters to; 48.
 Walter, envoy, his pay and allowance; 126.
- Tockenbourg in Switzerland; 48.
- Toledo, English army near; 77.
- Tolson, Captain; 354.
- Tomkyns or Tomkins, Thomas, letters and petition of; 145, 146.
- Tompson, Nockold:
 letter of; 321.
 receipt by; 397.
- Tomson, Robert, master of ship; 89.
- Toninghen, provisions brought into; 87.
- Torey, Marquis de; 51, 174.
 letter of; 71.
 letter to; 61.
- Tordudas, islands of; 305.
- Tories, their notion of foreign politics; 108.
- Torrington:
 Lord (1716), his estate; 235.
 Lady, illness of; 244.
- Toulon; 67.
 men-of-war at; 76, 77.
- Tournay:
 reduction of; 57.
 army at; 63.
 Dutch deputies at; 68.
- Tourville, George; 218.
- Towneley, Richard; 168.
- Townley, Mr., of Townley; 164.
- Townshend:
 Lady (1499), her will; 1.
 Lady Anne, wife of Sir John; 37.
 — letters of; 18, 24, 25.

Townshend—cont.

- Lady Anne, wife of third Viscount, letters of; 309-311, 314, 315.
- letters to; 357, 358, 360, 369, 379.
- Viscount, Horatio first (1662, &c.), letters of and to; 25, 37 et seq.
- grant to; 26.
- his mineral property; 27.
- his verdict at Norwich; 28.
- his wife's death; 29.
- his dispute with Sir P. Gleane; 30.
- fees paid by; 39, 40.
- Charles second, letters of; 25.
- (1701), Lord Lieut. of Norfolk; 328.
- letters to; 48, 328 et seq.
- his embassy to the Hague; 48 et seq., 334-340.
- instructions to; 49.
- letters of and to (1709, &c.); 49 et seq.
- extracts from despatches to and from; 60.
- Torcy's comments on; 72.
- his recall; 80.
- his return to England; 81.
- (1713), his marriage; 840.
- (1714), letter of; 222.
- (1715), letters of and to; 93, 95, 157-170.
- (1716), his dismissal; 103, 104.
- (1721), the seals given to; 106.
- letter of; ib.
- his despatches to the Duke of Argyll; 173-186.
- fees for his secret service money; 345.
- his letter to George II.; 118.
- his correspondence with George II.; 120.
- his papers when at the Hague; 375, 383.
- Charles third, letters of; 311, 316, 318, 362 et seq., 396, 397.
- his refusal to show his father's papers; 384.
- (1751), his letter about lotteries; 370.
- his National Thoughts; 371 et seq.
- (1752), his correspondence with Tucker on commerce; 371-379, 382.
- his proposal to establish a prize essay at Cambridge; 383-392.
- George, fourth Viscount and first Marquis, his papers relating to the Siege of Quebec; 306-328.
- (1766), letter of; 402.
- letters to; 397, 402 et seq.
- Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; 137.
- Mr. (1701), candidate for Norfolk; 127.

Townshend—cont.

- Mr., candidate for Cambridge University; 353.
- Ann, letter of; 24.
- Augustus, letter of; 353.
- Charles, secretary at war; 153.
- letters of; 310, 311, 312, 314, 354, 359, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 403.
- letter to; 366.
- at Addisbury; 314.
- his desire for office; 363, 364, 365, 366, 367.
- illnesses of; 366, 368.
- his proposed marriage; 381.
- his resignation; 397.
- his letter to the Duke of Newcastle; 398.
- Dame Eleanor, leases by; 1.
- George, letter of; 131.
- commissioner of Excise; ib.
- member for Norfolk; 151.
- Captain George, aide-de-camp; 152.
- George, his illness; 351.
- letters to; 382, 390-393, 396, 397.
- candidate for Norfolk; 362.
- letters of; 363, 364, 365, 366, 368, 390-393, 397.
- his marriage; 379.
- his memorandum on Pitt's letter; 398.
- his military ardour; 395.
- and the Duke of Cumberland; 387.
- Henry, master of ship; 131.
- Sir Horace, letters of; 11.
- his marriage; 86, 37.
- suit against; 37.
- letter to; 28.
- Horace, at the Hague; 58.
- Horatio, letter of; 357.
- letter to; 366.
- Jemie; 369.
- Sir John, of Brampton; 1.
- letter to; 11.
- his wife Anne; 11.
- John and George, letters of; 409.
- John, Robert, and George; 1.
- Lady Mary, bequest by; 40.
- Neddy, his death; 350.
- Sir Robert; 18.
- Sir B., will of; 1.
- Sir Roger, letters of; 1.
- letters of; 11.
- petition to; 19.
- his apothecary; 20.
- letters to; 20-24.
- elected for Norfolk; 23.
- his suit with Harris; 23.
- fees, &c. paid on his baronetcy; 37, 38.
- Roger, son of above, letters of; 20, 24.
- (1584), lease to; 37.
- son of Sir John; 18.
- (1704), letter to; 330.

Townshend—cont.

- Colonel Roger (1709), member for Yarmouth; 884.
- Roger, in Canada; 307.
- letter of; 307.
- his wound and death; 309, 310, 313, 314, 328.
- letters of; 386, 393, 394.
- (1748); 362, 364, 365.
- his character; 395.
- Thomas, letters of; 25.
- letter to; 30.
- candidate for Cambridge University; 357.
- uncle of Charles; 363.
- William, letters of; 1.
- packet; 350.

Trade:

- Board of, reports of; 127, 273, 296.
- Charles Townshend and; 363.
- report and queries by; 254.
- president of; 408.
- and Plantations, commissioners for; 134, 140.
- petition to; 302.
- and Commerce, arguments relating to; 371-379.

Lord Townshend's prize essay at Cambridge on; 388-392.

Trafford, John; 168.

Trancherberg, General, at Almenara; 72.

Travers:

- Mr., his death; 346.
- Samuel; 207.

Treaties, list of; 49.

Treby:

- George, letters of and to; 106.
- secretary at war, letter of; 138.
- Col. George; 137.

Trefusis, Mr.; 243.

Trelawny, Trelawney:

- Edward, letter of; 205.
- governor of Jamaica, letters of; 300, 301.
- Sir Jonathan, Bishop of Winchester, letter of; 166.

Trepland, Sir David, of Fingask; 198.

Tresham, Mr.; 10.

Trevor:

- elected for Sussex; 331.
- Colonel, killed at Almondbury; 71.
- Sir John, opinion of; 143.
- Robert, envoy, his pay and allowance; 126.

Trieste; 125.

Trimble, Rob., gunner; 219.

Trimmer, Dr.; 331.

Trimnell, Dr., Bishop of Norwich, letter of; 159.

Trimpe, John; 10.

Tring; 239, 240, 249.

Mr. Gore at; 240.

Tripoli, English consul at, his pay; 126.

Triumph, the ship; 27.

Trobridge, Fran., letter of; 129.

Truro, letter dated at; 208.

Tryon:

- Mr.; 245.
- Mrs. M., letter of; 250.
- Lady Mary; 249.

Tuam, Archbishop of, Singe; 142.

Tubbinge,—; 21.

Tucker, Josiah, afterwards Dean of Gloucester, his correspondence with Lord Townshend on Commerce; 371-379, 382.

Tuillies, M., of Paris; 191.

Tuition at Cambridge, payments for; 13-17.

Tullamoore, Santry; 142.

Tunbridge Wells; 314, 315.

Tunstall, a Jacobite; 172.

Turenne, Mrs.; 240.

Turginton, Mr., surrogate; 29.

Turin:

- letters dated at; 51 et seq., 60-78 passim.
- English envoy at, his pay and allowance; 126.

Turkey, strength of army; 83.

Turner:

- Mrs. A., letter of; 410.
- Sir Charles; 332.
- instructions signed by; 89.
- John, letter of; 333.

Turnover, Lancaster; 164.

Turretin, M., of Geneva; 159.

Tuscarora Indians; 270.

Twickenham; 330.

letter dated at; 223.

Twinn, Samuel; 211.

Two Sisters, brigantine taken by the Spaniards; 148.

Tyburn; 144.

Tyconderogo, siege of; 309.

Tydd St. Giles; 26.

Tydd St. Mary's; 26.

Tyldesleys, Mr., of Lodge; 164.

Tyney:

- township; 11.
- manor; 13.

Tymworth, sheep at; 5.

Tynemouth Castle; 341.

Tyrrall, Sir John, proprietor in Carolina; 257.

Tyssen:

- justice of the Tower Hamlets; 210.
- Francis; 211.

U.

Uckfield, Sussex, petition from; 130.

Unit, Robert, of co. Hereford; 215.

Urber,—; 21.

Urquhart, Major, a prisoner; 185.

Utrecht, treaty of; 88, 89, 121, 186, 188, 215, 295.

Uxelles, Marshal d'; 61.

letters of and to; 69.

V.

- Vachette, Pont la; 56.
 Vado:
 Sir John Norris's fleet at; 66, 67, 68, 78, 85, 86.
 bay; 369.
 Valdenz, Count de, governor of Milan;
 76.
 Vallance, John, letter of; 336.
 Valmoden, Madame, description of; 356.
 Valois de Terrefort, Ganien de, petition
 of; 134-136.
 Van Benting, Heer, challenge to; 45.
 Van Brants, Christopher; 107.
 Van Dam, Mr., of New York; 297.
 Vandenberg, Mons., letter to; 87.
 Vander Beck, general of the Dutch; 179, 180.
 Vander Dussen, letters of and to; 69.
 Vandermeer, Mons.:
 letter of; 112.
 letter to; 113.
 Vander Nath, Count, of Holstein; 98.
 Van Dussen, P.; 51.
 Vanguard, the ship; 394.
 Van Ittersum; 51.
 Vansittart, Mrs.; 239.
 Venables, Catherine, letter of; 234.
 Venice; 73, 337.
 letters dated at; 52, 69, 84, 119.
 operas at; 76.
 Lord Peterborough at; 87.
 festivities at; 340.
 Venlo, Austrians at; 361.
 Venner, Charles; 212.
 Vere:
 Lord, complaint by; 285.
 Mr., commissary; 101.
 Verelst, Harman:
 letter and petition of; 272.
 letter to; 270.
 Vernon:
 Vice-admiral; 301.
 Bowater; 137.
 James, commissioner of Excise; 131.
 — order signed by; 145.
 — certificate by; 146.
 Veron, Sir Robert; 10.
 Versailles; 81, 120.
 letters dated at; 111, 112, 113.
 Vetch, Colonel; 295.
 Vicery, Mr., a Jacobite; 167.
 Victoria, the ship, of Ostend; 133.
 Vienna; 65, 116.
 letters dated at; 61, 74, 80, 88, 88, 113, 122.
 treaty at (1689); 49.
 Lord Peterborough at; 79, 80.
 envoy from Turkey at; 83.
 treaty of; 113.

Vienna—cont.

- secret treaty at; 119.
 English envoy in, his pay and allowance; 126.
 commissary at, his pay; 126.
 Sir William Hussey at; 130.
 the Pretender to visit; 197.
 Vilers Brulin, camp at; 70, 78.
 Villars:
 Marshal, at Cambray; 62.
 — his negotiations with Eugene;
 87.
 Villetes, Arthur, envoy, his pay and allowance; 126.
 Villiers:
 Mr., at the Admiralty; 367.
 Thomas, envoy, his pay and allowance; 126.
 — member for Tamworth; 390.
 Villinghen; 87.
 Vincent:
 Mr., assayer, death of; 347.
 George, of Oxford, sword blades found in his house; 166.
 Nicholas, letters of; 207, 208.
 — his illness and death; 208.
 Violl, a, payment for; 13.
 Virginia; 148, 271.
 and Carolina; 256.
 Viscount, a, fees paid on creation of; 39.
 Vivares, the, rising in; 54.
 Vivian, Charles, commissioner of Stamps;
 87.
 Vohnson, Captain, letter to; 190.
 Vyner, Mr.; 313.
 Vyvian, Sir Richard, his arrest; 163.

W.

- Wace:
 Mr.; 134.
 John; 138.
 Waddel, Mr., a Scotch student; 193.
 Wade, General:
 at Genoa; 77.
 his scheme for securing the Highlands; 197-199.
 Wager, Sir Charles:
 letter of; 116.
 his opinion of the Russians; ib.
 memorial, &c. of; 147, 148.
 Governor Belcher and; 285, 288,
 289, 290.
 Waite, Mr., of Dublin Castle; 406.
 Waldegrave, Lord (1752); 381.
 Walden, Lionel; 168.
 Waldo, —, and Governor Belcher; 289, 290.

- Waldstettin, Count, protocol signed by; 119.
- Wales:
- North, application for the office of Chamberlain in counties of; 341.
 - Prince of (1715-23), expenses of his household; 205.
 - (1716), letter of Geo. I. to; 103.
 - his servants; 143.
 - and Princess of (1717), banished the court; 190.
 - (1724), petition to; 194.
 - (1756), horse for; 392.
 - Princess of (1725), petition to; 142.
- Walgrave, —, of Stamford; 352.
- Walker:
- Edward, warrant signed by; 43, 44.
 - Hovenden; 254.
 - James, commissioner; 211.
 - Jo.; 7.
- Walkinshaw:
- letters of; 193, 194.
 - John, of Scots Town; 198.
- Wallenrodt, Count, letter of; 109.
- Waller:
- Edmund, of Great Marlow; 145.
 - Nehemiah, pastor in Roxbury; 280.
- Walsmsley, Mr., of Showley; 164.
- Walpole:
- Norfolk; 26.
 - Captain, wounded; 85.
 - Edward, letters of; 1.
 - Geoffrey, letter of; 77.
 - Horace, candidate for Parliament; 357.
 - Horatio, at the Hague, &c., letters of and to; 49, 51 et seq., 62-67, 72-89, 109-114, 120, 122, 128, 137, 157, 199, 332, 334, 335, 348, 362, 367.
 - to be paymaster; 160.
 - memorials endorsed by; 187, 188.
 - Captain Coram and; 288.
 - and Yarmouth; 334.
 - his daughter Mary; 366.
 - his applications to examine the Townshend papers; 375, 383, 384.
- Robert, afterwards Sir Robert, frank by; 58.
- serious illness of; 67.
 - his employment; 77, 78.
 - Cox's memoirs of; 104.
 - proposed chancellor of the Exchequer (1720); 106.
 - letters of and to; 109, 110.
 - comptroller of accounts; 138.
 - at the Treasury; 160.
 - petition to; 265.
 - letter to; 332.
 - his encouragement of trade; 355.
- Walsh, Hunt, letter of; 402.
- Walsingham; 318.
- theatre at; 410.
 - Sir Francis; 3, 4.
- Walsoken; 12, 26.
- Walter:
- Henry; 194.
 - Peter, candidate for Bridport; 137.
- Walters, Captain; 148.
- Walton:
- letter dated at; 390.
 - upon Trent; 247.
 - marshlands in; 26.
 - West, manor; 12.
- Walton, Mr., of Windermere; 164.
- Waple, John, letter of; 352.
- Wapping; 211.
- French church at; 129.
- Warburton:
- Mr., of Chester; 341.
 - Dr., and the bishopric of London; 400.
- Ward:
- Dr.; 378.
 - Alexander; 211.
 - Edward, deputy-lieutenant of Norfolk; 48.
 - Sir Edward; 328.
 - John, commissioner; 211.
 - Katherine, letter of; 231.
 - Thomas, letters of; 25.
 - of Raynham, letters to; 58 et seq., 70, 337.
- Ware, Captain, of the George; 148.
- Warham, letter dated at; 410.
- Waring, Thomas; 254.
- Warminghurst Park; 346.
- Warner:
- John, of Spitalfields; 211.
 - Col. Philip, charged with the murder of his brother; 43.
 - transported to Barbados; 44.
- Warren, Sir Peter; 366.
- Warsaw, letters dated at; 62, 117.
- Warwick:
- letter dated at; 159.
 - muster at; ib.
 - Earl of (1576); 3, 4.
- Wasner, Baron de, letter of; 125, 126.
- Wassaw, on the coast of Finland; 92.
- Waterford; 408.
- letter dated at; 404.
 - Bishop of (1768), letter of; 404.
- Waters, Mons., banker at Paris; 190, 191.
- Watkin, John, letter of; 382.
- Watson, Mr., payment to; 38.
- Watts, Mr.; 331.
- Way, Captain, of the Loyal Charles; 148.
- Webb:
- Cornet, killed at Almenara; 71.
 - General, his regiment; 222.
 - Thomas; 212.
- Webber, Samuel, messenger; 158.
- Webster, Sir Godfrey, ship owner; 90.
- Wecke, Henry, of Worcester, rioter; 158.
- Weekes, Mr., gaoler; 28.
- Welbe, Capt. John, a prisoner, case of; 138-141.

Welbore, John, deputy recorder of Cambridge; 127.
 Welby, W., commissioner; 11.
 Weld, Serjeant; 331.
 Welderen, J. de; 51.
 Weller:
 Alexander; 211.
 Captain, of the Dorset yacht; 411.
 Welling, Governor, his intriguing character; 81.
 Wellingborough; 250.
 Wells:
 Norfolk; 98.
 — timber near; 329.
 Parson, of Massachusetts; 287.
 Serjeant; 339.
 Weltez, Baron de; 337.
 Welton, Dr. Richard; 211.
 Wendall, Colonel; 291.
 Wenersborg; 98.
 Wentworth House, Yorkshire; 125.
 Wenvoe Castle, Glamorgan; 321.
 Weobley or Welby, elections for; 137, 401.
 Wesel, letter dated at; 76.
 West, Thomas; 10.
 Westbys, Mr., of Bourne; 164.
 Westmorland, Earl of:
 Mildmay, second; 11.
 — letter of; 36.
 (1728), letter to; 256, 257.
 certificate of; 257.
 Weston, Edward:
 letters of; 354, 396.
 letter to; 124.
 Westphalia, expedition to; 393, 394.
 Westwick, lands at; 5.
 Weymouth:
 Lord Irwin's dragoons at; 106.
 Lord (1770); 407, 408.
 — his interest at Tamworth; 390, 391, 401.
 — (1714), illness of; 225.
 — death of; 226.
 Wharton:
 Lord (1676), Philip, sent to the Tower; 43.
 — his discharge; 45.
 — Bishop Burnet and, verses on; 46, 47.
 Duke of (1726), his project to restore the Pretender; 197.
 — his conduct before Gibraltar; 199.
 Thomas, commissioner; 211.
 Whatcot, letter dated at; 251.
 Wheatley, co. Oxon; 242.
 Wheeler, Thomas; 11.
 Wheller, Jhon; 11.
 Whigs:
 their notion of foreign politics; 103.
 their attempts to influence George I.; 104, 105.
 Whiston, Mr., letter to; 402.
 Whitby, inhabitants of, petition from; 359.
 White:
 Captain, seditious letter of; 46.

White—cont.
 Christopher, a prisoner; 11.
 John; 211, 300.
 Ralph, master of ship; 89.
 Thomas, candidate for Retford; 137.
 Whitechapel:
 Rummer Tavern; 213.
 Buckle Street; 214.
 Whitehand, Henry; 211.
 Whitehorne, Samuel, of the Jamaica Council; 301.
 Whiteman, Jo., his death; 191.
 Whittingham, Mr., of Whittingham; 164.
 Whitworth:
 Lord (1721), at the baths; 108.
 Mr.; 288.
 Charles, declaration by; 57.
 — letters of; 61, 64, 65, 114.
 Wiburg, Thomas, serjeant-at-arms; 342.
 Wich:
 Mr., approval of; 187.
 Sir Cyril, envoy, his pay and allowance; 126.
 John, at Hamburgh, letters of; 51 et seq., 60–62, 80, 81, 83, 85.
 Sir Peter, his son; 60.
 Wickers, W.; 51.
 Wickmer; 152.
 Widdrington; 341.
 Lord; 170.
 — his relations with the Jacobites; 170–172.
 Wigan:
 letter dated at; 171.
 General Willes' forces at; 178.
 prisoners at; 170.
 Wiggshall township; 11.
 Wightman, General Joseph; 138.
 Wigton, postmaster of; 191.
 Wilcox, Mr., messenger; 162.
 Wild:
 Mrs., of Bennet Street; 192.
 John, his reprieve; 102.
 Wildgoose, Cornet, wounded; 71.
 Wilkes, John, caricatura of; 397.
 Wilkin, William, letter of; 404.
 Wilkins:
 Mr., letters to; 191.
 Mrs., letter to; 192.
 David, letter to; 191.
 Wilkinson, Thomas, mayor of Hereford; 160.
 Willes, General, at Preston; 169, 170, 171, 178.
 William:
 Prince, ship taken by the Spaniards; 148.
 Royal, the ship; 394.
 and Mary, the ship; 131.
 William III., the attempt to assassinate; 35.
 Williams:
 Da., letter of; 18.
 Samuel, of Venice; 73, 76.
 — secretary of Jamaica Council; 303.
 Wm. Peer; 137.
 — paper signed by; 144.

- Williamson:
Col. George, letter of; 404.
Sir Joseph, warrants signed by; 44, 45.
- Willington:
Mr.; 401.
John, agreement signed by; 401.
- Willis, John, valuation by; 202.
- Wills:
Captain, wounded; 71.
Charles, petition of; 214.
- Wilmott, Thomas, letter of; 74.
- Wilmington, Earl of:
Spencer Compton, made President of the Council; 145.
letters to; 124-126.
(1734), notes by; 122, 124.
(1737), at Harrow; 249. letters to; 149, 150, 258, 275-304 passim, 348, 350, 351, 354, 357.
See Compton, Spencer.
- Wilmington, Cape Fear river, township called; 264.
- Willmot, Willmot:
Mrs.; 230.
Joseph, commissioner; 211.
Robert, letter of; 405.
- Wilson:
Captain, of the Pheasant; 149.
H. William, letter of; 406.
- Wimble, J., letter of; 304.
- Wimbledon, letter dated at; 409.
- Winchester:
letter dated at; 393.
Bishop of (1715), Trelawney, letter of; 166.
- Winchelsea:
Lord (1733), his brother; 353.
— (1734); 244.
Lady; 224.
- Winckley, H., of Banister Hall; 164.
- Windaw, coast of; 92.
- Windermore; 164.
- Windham, Wyndham:
Lieut.-Col., his book; 319.
Mr.; 339.
Mrs.; 61.
Arthur, deputy lieut. of Norfolk; 48.
Ashe, letter to; 330.
—, letters of; 334, 335, 356.
Clare, commissioner; 211.
Sir Francis, letters of; 1, 2, 8, 9.
— judgment by; 9.
— charges against; 9, 10.
W., his campaign in Flanders; 330.
— letters of; 330.
Sir William; 172.
— letters taken upon; 162.
— proclamation against; ib.
— his kinsman Carteret; 163.
— escape of; 174.
— his papers seized; ib.
— letters of; 215, 216.
— secretary at war (1713), letter of; 218.
- Windridge; 5.
- Windsor:
letter dated at; 410.
- Windsor—cont.
journey in coaches to; 212, 213.
Dean of; 335.
— Dr. Robinson; 127.
Castle, constable of; 102.
Dixie, of the Ordnance Office; 222.
- Wine, bill concerning; 82.
- Winnington:
—, and Bewdley election; 41.
Sir Francis; 29.
- Wintworth, Benning, to be lieut.-governor of New Hampshire; 291.
- Winwood, Sir Ralph; 18.
- Wisbech; 26, 356, 357.
Lake of, ship called; 131.
- Wisdom, Mathew, information by; 166.
- Wishart, William, moderator of the Church of Scotland; 114.
- Wismar, garrison at; 97.
- Wissenbourg, Mons. de; 63.
- Witham or Wetham, Gen. Thomas; 137.
- Wither, H., letter of; 335.
- Witherington, Lord (1715), Lord Carlisle's interview with; 169. See Widdrington.
- Withers, Lawrence, letters of; 26.
- Witherston, Edward, charge against; 343.
- Wittewrong, Sir John, petition of; 133, 134.
- Wivenhoe, contentions in; 19.
- Woburn; 249.
- Wodehouse, Woodhouse:
Colonel; 328, 341.
Sir Armand; 315.
Armine, candidate for Norfolk; 362.
Henry; 2.
Sir Henry; 7.
Sir Philip, of Kimberley, letters of and to; 10-12, 18, 25.
— articles signed by; 18.
— sheriff of Norfolk; 19.
- Wolf, Captain; 148.
- Wolfe, General:
his campaign in America; 308.
his health and character; 309.
his death; 310, 323, 324.
opinions of his military skill; 309, 316.
book of his orders; 322.
his campaign; 315, 317, 324, 325.
- Wolfenbittel:
Duke of, letter to; 113.
Princess of, her marriage; 58.
- Wollaston, Rev. Francis, letters of; 404-406.
- Wollaton, letter dated at; 390.
- Wolley, J., letter signed; 8.
- Wolseley, Capt. William, letter of; 405.
- Wolterton; 362.
letter dated at; 383.
- Wood:
Lieut., wounded; 71.
Mr.; 242, 249, 407.
Sir Henry; 28.
William, report on his half-pence; 142.
- Woodbine, W. Clarke, letter of; 320.
- Woodcote; 237.

Woodhouse. See Wodehouse.
 Woodstock; 78, 242.
 Woodward, Richard, letter of; 404.
 Woodward, the, bankruptcy of; 349, 350.
 Wool trade, regulations affecting; 3, 4.
 Woolwich, letter dated at; 404.
 Worcester; 251.
 Jacobite riot at; 158.
 Bishop of (1662); 26.
 Earl of (1601); 12.
 — (1614); 18.
 — master of the horse; 41.
 — (1676), warrant signed by; 44.
 Worms, garrison in; 21.
 Worsley:
 Lady; 225.
 Henry, governor of Barbadoes; 306.
 Wren, Sir Christopher, commission to; 201.
 Wright:
 Jhon, a prisoner; 11.
 Mr., 252, 263.
 — of Loughborough; 232.
 Rev. John; 211.
 Thomas; 211.
 — valuation by; 204.
 William; 211.
 — of Oxford; 166.
 Wybergh, Thomas, his parole; 168.
 Wybourg, taking of; 70.
 Wycherley, Richard, letter of; 247.
 Wye, Mr., letter to; 192.
 Wyndham. See Windham.
 Wynne:
 —, his regiment; 178.
 Sir Rowland; 244.
 O., letter of; 405.
 Wysett, petition for minister at; 17.
 Wyvill, Major J., letter of; 159.

Y.

Yardley, Samuel, of Worcester, information by; 158.
 Yarmouth, Great; 131, 179, 180, 359.
 letters dated at; 27, 329, 334, 339.

Yarmouth, Great—cont.
 defence of; 7.
 its losses by pirates; 22.
 crane quay in; 26.
 Sir W. Doyle at; 26. safety of; 27.
 and Norwich corporation; 28.
 repair of haven at; 29.
 elections at; 336, 339, 363. smuggling corn at; 413.
 Lord (1674), letter of; 28.
 Yates:
 Abraham; 247.
 John, letter of; 23.
 Yeamans, Mr., letter to; 306.
 Yelvertoft, letter dated at; 382.
 Yelverton:
 Chr., letter of; 18.
 attorney-general; 38.
 Yeoman, John, of Whitby; 359.
 Yonge, —, payment to; 38.
 Dr. Philip, of Cambridge, Lord
 Townshend's correspondence with;
 382-385.
 York, archbishop of (1579), death of; 7.
 Yorke:
 Mr.; 400.
 Charles, his appointment; 365.
 Young:
 Arthur, letter of; 412.
 Rev. T. O., letters of; 322, 397, 409.
 Rev. Thomas Patrick, copies made
 by; 104.
 Mr., of Trinity, Cambridge; 367.

Z.

Zamboni, John James, envoy from Poland;
 117.
 Zeeland, island of; 99.
 Zinzendorf, Count; 60.
 conference with; 118.
 project sent to; 104.

LONDON : Printed by EYRE and SPOTTISWOODE,
Printers to the Queen's most Excellent Majesty.
For Her Majesty's Stationery Office.

Mr. Brit.

^ HISTORICAL MANUSCRIPTS COMMISSION.

ELEVENTH REPORT, APPENDIX, PART V.

THE
M A N U S C R I P T S

OF THE

EARL OF DARTMOUTH.

Vol. I.

Presented to both Houses of Parliament by Command of Her Majesty.

L O N D O N :

PRINTED FOR HER MAJESTY'S STATIONERY OFFICE,
BY EYRE AND SPOTTISWOODE,
PRINTERS TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

And to be purchased, either directly or through any Bookseller, from
EYRE AND SPOTTISWOODE, EAST HARDING STREET, FLEET STREET, E.C., and 32, ABINGDON STREET, WESTMINSTER, S.W.; or
ADAM AND CHARLES BLACK, 8, NORTH BRIDGE, EDINBURGH; or HODGES, FIGGIS, & CO., 104, GRAFTON STREET, DUBLIN.

1887.

[C.—5060.—IV.]

Price 2s. 8d.

Robert G. Lundy.

INTRODUCTION.

A short report upon the collection of the Earl of Dartmouth was drawn up by the late Mr. Horwood and printed in the Second Report of the Commission in the year 1871. Circumstances did not allow of a complete account of the contents being made at that time, and Lord Dartmouth very readily consented that a more exhaustive report should be prepared, the papers having been put in the meantime in chronological order and otherwise rendered more suitable for examination. The present report has been drawn up by Mr. W. O. Hewlett. The documents therein calendared range in date from 1660 to the beginning of the present century. It has not been thought necessary to include notices of the letters of earlier date, though some of those relating to the Civil Wars form the most interesting part of the Collection, as all of them of any historical value were freely used by Mr. Eliot Warburton in his work on Prince Rupert and the Cavaliers, and the general account of them already given by Mr. Horwood seems sufficient for historical purposes.

Some biographical details of the chief members of the Legge family, to whom the large majority of the letters calendared are addressed, will help to explain the circumstances under which many of the documents came into their hands. These details we get from A Genealogical account of the Descendants of Thomas Legge, of Legge's Place in Kent, who lived in the reign of Edward the Third, a manuscript volume in the handwriting of the first Earl of Dartmouth, which forms part of the collection.

“ William Legge, eldest son of Edward Legge and Mary Walsh, was brought out of Ireland by Henry Danvers, Earl of Danby, President of Munster, his godfather, who had promised to take care of his education. He was sent into the Low Countries to serve under Prince Maurice of Saxony. On his return to England he was made groom of the bedchamber to Charles I., and had a commission as lieutenant-general of the Ordnance, under Lord Newport as general, in the first expedition against the Scots in 1639. He served in Rupert's regiment in the battle of Newark, was taken prisoner at Dunsmore Heath and again at Lichfield.

"In 1644 he was governor of Chester and Oxford, and at a later date was one of the three companions Charles I. chose to accompany him in his flight from Hampton Court. Referring to the latter occasion Lord Clarendon writes of him—

"Legge had had so general a reputation of integrity and fidelity to his master that he never fell under the least imputation or reproach with any man. He was a very punctual and steady observer of the orders he received, but no contriver of them, and though he had in truth a better judgment and understanding than either of the other two (Ashburnham and Berkeley) his modesty and diffidence of himself never suffered him to contrive bold councils."

After the death of Charles I. William Legge was imprisoned in succession at Plymouth, Bristol, and Arundel, where he obtained leave to go abroad. In 1650 he went with Prince Charles into Scotland, was wounded, and taken prisoner at Worcester. With the aid of his wife he made his escape in women's clothes out of Coventry gaol. During the Commonwealth he was busy in many Royalist plots, and on the restoration of monarchy he reaped the reward of his fidelity by the bestowal upon him of his old places in the Bedchamber and the Ordnance, a company of foot in the Tower, the King's house in the Minories, the lieutenancy of Alice Holt, and Woolmer forests in Hampshire, a pension of 500*l.* a year for his own and his wife's lives, &c. His wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Sir William Washington, of Packington, co. Leicester. He died Oct. 13, 1670 (not 1672, as the monument in Trinity Church, Minories, states, which his grandson puts down as a mistake of the stonecutter) in the eighty-third year of his age.

George, eldest son of Col. William Legge, born about 1647, educated at Westminster and at King's College, Cambridge, was sent to sea at seventeen years of age under Sir Edward Spragge, and commanded the Pembroke in 1667, the Fairfax in 1671, and the Royal Catherine in 1672, and served in both the Dutch wars. He also succeeded to the command of his father's company of foot, became governor of Portsmouth in 1673, and in 1678 was made Master of the Ordnance. In 1682 he was created Baron Dartmouth, and, in the following year, was commissioned as admiral of the fleet to demolish Tangier, for which service he received a gratuity of 10,000*l*. During the reign of James II. Lord Dartmouth continued to stand high in royal favour, and he was placed in command of the fleet sent out to intercept the expedition of William of Orange. In 1691, being suspected of treasonable correspondence with James, he was committed to the Tower, where he died suddenly about three months after his imprisonment.

William Legge, the only son of the first Lord Dartmouth, was nineteen years old at the death of his father. He also was educated under Dr. Busby at Westminster, and went to King's College, Cambridge, where Dr. George Stanhope, afterwards Vicar of Lewisham and Dean of Canterbury, was his tutor. On the accession of Queen Anne he was sworn a privy councillor, in 1710 became Secretary of State, a year later Earl of Dartmouth, and in 1713 Keeper of the Privy Seal. He died on the 15th December 1759, and was succeeded by his grandson, his son Lord Lewisham having died on 29 Sept. 1732, aged 30.

The following anecdote of Queen Anne is taken from the same manuscript:—

“Queen Anne a little before she died told the Earl of Dartmouth that she never had bought a jewel for her own use in her whole life, and of all the vanities in the world looked upon them as the greatest; but thought they were proper for presents, because a great value in a small compass. The Earl of Oxford brought Mr. Pitt's great diamond to Queen Anne, and told her several gentlemen of the House of Commons said it was pity it should go out of the kingdom, and had a mind to move in their House to have it presented to Her Majesty. She desired he would stop the motion, for she should be very sorry to see the people's money thrown away upon such a bauble for her, and told the Earl of Dartmouth she thought it was a much greater pity that Greenwich Hospital was not finished.”

Among the documents of the Restoration period of which copies or abstracts are given in Mr. Hewlett's report may be named:—friendly letters of Prince Rupert to Colonel William Legge in 1661 when on a mission to Vienna, and of the Duke of Ormonde to the same, giving glimpses of the difficulties of his Irish government ; two or three ships' journals including that of the Royal Katherine, when commanded by Captain George Legge, afterwards first Lord Dartmouth, in the naval engagements with the Dutch fleet under Admirals De Ruyter and Van Tromp in 1673 ; with a letter to the Duke of York describing one of the conflicts at sea ; letters of Lord Vaughan, afterwards Earl of Carbery, and of Lord Culpeper from Jamaica ; some papers illustrating the English occupation of Nieuport in Flanders, in 1678 ; and the letters written between 1679 and 1682 by the Duke of York when he was banished the Court. A few extracts from this curious series were printed by Sir John Dalrymple in his Memoirs of Great Britain and Ireland, and are referred to by Sir James Mackintosh, but it seemed desirable that the opportunity should not be missed of printing the whole of them without omission or alteration of any kind, as they afford no slight clue to the character of James II.

For the history of the English possession of Tangier, the unfortunate dowry brought to Charles II. by Catherine of Braganza, the materials in this collection are very rich. Passing over a few letters of Colonel Henry Norwood, one of the first governors or commanders of the garrison there, we come, under the date of 1678, to an account of the inhabitants and a survey of all the houses and other buildings in the city. To about the same period may be referred an undated paper headed "An Establishment for Tangier," which gives details of the pay and cost of maintenance of the entire garrison, from the governor downwards, and is otherwise curious as an illustration of the requirements and expenses of a military establishment in those days. A year or two later in date are many letters addressed from Tangier to Co. George Legge, as one of the chief officers of the Ordnance, which give accounts of many skirmishes with the Moors, and are evidence generally of the very unsatisfactory position which the English garrison and inhabitants occupied owing to their unpleasant neighbours both on sea and land. Notable among these correspondents are Martin Beckmann, afterwards knighted, and still remembered as an engineer and painter of sea pieces, and Colonel Percy Kirke, who was the last governor of the city. As is well known, in 1683 it was resolved by Charles II. to demolish the fortifications and to evacuate the place, and George Legge, recently made Lord Dartmouth, was placed in command of the expedition sent out to Tangier to accomplish those objects. The original instructions of the King to Lord Dartmouth for this expedition are among the numerous other letters and papers bearing upon it. Among the men of note who took part in the affair were Samuel Pepys, Sir, then Captain, Cloudesley Shovel, and Sir John Berry. There is a good letter of George Byng, afterwards Lord Torrington, but at that time a young lieutenant engaged in a difficulty with the Spanish governor of Gibraltar. A few of Pepys's papers concerning the Tangier commission have already appeared in print as have also one or two of his letters of later date to which we shall shortly refer; but they are so little known that it did not appear advisable to break the continuity of the series by passing such with a brief notice and a reference to the work in which they may be found at length.

With the exception of two or three letters of Sir Henry Shere, who was attached to the army sent in pursuit of the Duke of Monmouth, there are few letters of consequence for the reign of James II. until we come to the end of September 1688, when Lord Dartmouth was placed in command of the English fleet sent out to intercept the Dutch under the Prince of Orange. The correspondence of the following three months fills about 150 pages of the report and is a very important contribution to the history of that most eventful time; a few of the papers were used by Sir John Dalrymple (whose letter referring to them is printed at the end of Mr. Hewlett's Report), but for reasons given above, all of historical value have been calendared. Lord Dartmouth's most active correspondent at this time was Samuel Pepys, Secretary to the Admiralty, who transmits the King's instructions and the current news almost daily; there are also many letters in James's own hand, one of which, written on December 10 just before his own flight, refers to the desperate condition of his affairs and to his having been obliged to send away the Queen and the young Prince "to secure them at least, whatsoever becomes of me." As all the public men of the day, including the Prince of Orange, were in communication with Lord Dartmouth at this time, little more need be said of the value of these papers. An important supplement to them is a manuscript volume containing copies in Lord Dartmouth's handwriting of letters written by him to the King and to Pepys during the expedition.

In 1691, Lord Dartmouth, as already stated, was apprehended for high treason and put into the Tower, where he died. He drew up a curious account of his arrest and examination before the Council, which will be found printed in the report. There are few letters between the date of his death and that of the appointment of his son as Secretary of State in June 1710.

The second Lord Dartmouth was raised to an earldom in September 1711, and promoted to be Lord Privy Seal in 1713. His correspondence with his colleagues and others during his official career does not throw much new light on the intrigues of the later years of Queen Anne's reign, but it will help the historical student to form a picture of the times. Among the papers are many letters of Lord Dartmouth, or copies of them in his hand, to the Queen, giving items of news, proceedings of the Council, and the like, with the Queen's replies written by herself. Two letters of Swift and one of Prior will also attract notice, as well as those from Robert Harley, Earl of Oxford, written from the Tower during his imprisonment. After this date, there is little of interest in the papers until we reach the reign of George III., if we except two or three chatty letters of Lord Orrery to Lady Kaye, written from Bath in 1731.

The second Earl of Dartmouth, grandson of the first Earl, after holding one or two minor offices of State, was appointed Secretary for the Colonial Department in August 1772, and continued in that post until November 1775. The family papers between these dates are rich in material for the history of the struggle for American independence, but it will be sufficient in this Introduction to direct attention to them generally. Lord Dartmouth's most frequent correspondents at first are Governor Hutchinson of Boston, and Joseph Reed, who writes from Philadelphia on the state of public feeling in America. When the hostilities begin, Generals Gage and Sir William Howe, Admiral Graves, Governors Carleton, Wentworth, Francklin, and others are among the writers; some of their letters are addressed to Governor Legge, of Nova Scotia, who as a connexion of Lord Dartmouth's family, and whose own conduct in managing affairs led to an extensive and instructive correspondence forming part of this collection. A long letter of John Wesley protesting against the war is also remarkable. Finally attention may be drawn to the numerous holograph letters of George III. to Lord Dartmouth, commenting on the state of affairs in America and on other subjects. Interspersed with these American papers are some letters of Lord North and other less prominent politicians.

The succeeding Earl of Dartmouth was President of the Board of Commissioners for Indian affairs; among his papers are some long and important letters of the Marquess Wellesley and the second Lord Clive. To him also are addressed many holograph letters of members of the Royal family, chiefly in recommendation of persons desiring employment in India or elsewhere.

HISTORICAL MANUSCRIPTS COMMISSION.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE EARL OF DARTMOUTH.

PRESERVED AT PATSHULL HOUSE, WOLYKERHAMPTON.

1660, June 18.—Paper headed "Reasons desired to be delivered in Parliament why Sir Richard Onslow of Surrey should be excepted out of the Act of Indemnity."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

The chief reasons were—he was impeached of high treason at Oxford by the late King; in July 1642, he went with armed force to Kingston and carried away Sir Thos. Mallett, then judge of assize, to London, where he was committed to the Tower; in Nov. 1642, with the like armed force he pulled down the King's Powder Mills at Chilworth and carried away the materials for making powder; when the King went to the Scots, in a speech he compared his Majesty to a hedge hog, saying he had then wrapped himself in his own bristles. &c.

LETTERS of Prince RUPERT to Col. WILLIAM LEGGE.

1661, April 1st.

"Deare Will,

I have hardly recouvr'd this sea voyage which was favorable enough as to my health, for after the first dayes offer to Neptune I used that ceremony noe more. That which most trobled us was after wee came in sight of our port a greate storme of raine, the wind easterly, which lasted a whole night; on Thursday morning the tide not serving for the mase (Maas?) we rune into Gore. I can tell you of noe adventures, only one which was to meete one Master (or Major) Buskins, whoe desiring to goe over with me, having seriously not knowne him before, I easily gave way to it. By his discourse I found quickly that the Lord Chancellor was not his freind, and that his cheefest disigne of coming over was to have a letter from my mother and one from me in his behalfe to his Majesty; how this will take effect you may easily imagine. Sir Robert Welsh is heere alsoe, whoes desirs (I find alreddy) are to goe with me to Vienna, which I shall alsoe not allowe. I hope Coll. Wheeler hath ben pleased to lett you knowe how that there was left a fier balle in the little closett; my people tell me since that they left a little barrell of powder, I was very angry with them for it, but I hope it will not be thought a plott. More news att pressent you must not expect. This is in hast as you may gesse by writting; I durst not writt in the same hand to our Master, soe faire well deare Will, I am yours."

April 24

May 4

1661, Hague.—"Deare Will, by the last post I wrote to you of my arrivall to this place. I was retarded by Mr. Blackwell's correspondent whoe insted of paying the monys upon sight by unecessary delays kept them, and consequently me and my horses and train, heere tell this post. Pray lett Mr. Blackwell know this from me and that I could have noe ducats from the marchant, but was faine to pay almost one in the hundred to have them elsewhere; alle this is contrary to his promis and my dealing with him, which as Mr. Vermüden can tell you was free enough. In my last I wrote to you of one Major Buskins or

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Buffkings, he is gone without a letter, he may perchance be offended att it, but I hope, not knowing the person nor the difference between him and the Lord Chancellor, my freinds will not blame me for it. I put of Sir Rob. Welsh alsoe from going with me into Germany. The Emperor's Resident heere assures me that mostof the Princes of Germany have consented to send the Emperor ayd against the Turcks, but they desire a Genarall of their owne may comand them and have liberty to come bake att his master's comand. This will be as ill lickt one as the demand some of the Rinish Princes mack to the Hogenmogenden (?) for the restitution of Spesett (Spesshardt?) and Reinberg. If the Turke were quiet this might prove an ill begining of a correspondence; these heere I am informed peake high language about their herings, which they say shall be maintained with alle the power and force they have. The Prince of Orange is att Cleve, whether I intend with all the speede.

These inclosed pray deliver, that not directed to our cosen Sea-broucke, and pray remember my service to alle my freinds. The Lord Craven hath not done very well in my mother's buisnesse and my brother's, shee therefore is not very willing he should have the doing of any thing about it till shee her selfe be acquainted. I found the poore woman very much dejected that I could not tell her the time she might expect to be sent for; pray acquaint the Chancelor with this, and the King with the news I towld you. I almost forgott to tell you a nother story which be pleased to acquainted (sic) the D. of Albemarle with. You have doubtlesse seene a lame Polish Prince some time at White-halle with passports a beggin; this noble soule is taken and in prisoned att Alikmare, hath but twice bin burnt in the bake before this misfortune befell him. The Duke, I am sure, will remember him and what my jugement was of the fellow."

1661, May 18. Cleve.—"Deare Will, I am come thus farr, where I meete with greate alarums and preparations of warr on alle sides, both Turke and Sweds arme. This Elector is in reddinesse, fearing the Sweds' trechary, the Emperor is preparing alsoe for to with stand the Turke, but I am confident if Peace can be made there, as I doubt not it may, since it rests but upon a tribute which is desired from the Transylvanians, the troops will not want employment elsewhere. The Soucke (?) commands now in cheefe, a fellow that rune from the Sweds with a summe of mony. By the next I shall be able to write more of these things then now I can, this I must add that the Hollanders boast much, awouing openly that if the King doth trouble the Hering fishing they will mantaine it with the sword. I tould some that butter and cheese would doe better. Pray lett the King knowe alle this, as also the Lord Chancellor. I mett heere with on De Rues an Ingenir, the ablest man in his profession that ever I saw, of whoem I had alreddy spoken to the King. If the fortifications of Portchmouth goe on I wish his advice might be taken, for noen fortifys soe well and soe cheap and fast as he; he hath att present in hand Calkar, a place twoe miles of, of 4 Royall Bastions, out workes his way, and batteries placed which tell you are almost over the moate cannot be dismantled, really the finest that ever were made, and all will not cost 8^m pounds st. He makes any earth serve for his casemats and uses noe stones to them, he uses no sodds, he mingls his earth somtims with sande, some time with other earth or gravell as he finds occasion, and with beating makes it soe hard that the shaking of the guns can noe waies disorder his batteries. In fine he is a man very extraordinary in all meckaniques and chiquaneur; he is now going for Denemark to the King there whoe sent for him, in six weeks he will be bake, if it please our King to lett him have the plotte of Portchmouth he will make a disigne which I am confident will please him best of any. Prince Maurice is the surest person to direct the sending it to him, whose will alsoe give more particularly his character. Pray lett the King knowe that Du Son is alive, rose from the dead, I think. My service to alle our freinds especially those in the Bedchamber. I am your most faithful freind.

I hope you received mine I sent you from Hage, it was the 2nd . . .
. . . inclosed to our cosen Sheabrook (?).

As I was writing De Rues comes in, whose beds me assure the King that he will bring people I meene worke bases which shall save the King halfe in halfe-of the costs he has a way of working which noen has soe good. Prince Maurice can tell the King more of him. Pray neglect not this man and tell Sir Rob. Murray of him with my remembrances, alsoe that I mett with Campher woode which smelt of it and had the Campher in it, as alsoe with a distilled pure raine water which dissolved gowld (?).

1661, Whitsunday [June 2]. Maintz.—“Deare Will, from Cassell I wrote to you, and sent you some considerations a good freind of mine desired mee to send touching Pomerania. I long to heere that you have received them. I mett heere a envoye which intended for England sent from the Emperor, he seemes much troubled at the news which he mett with heere of King’s marriage with Portegall’s King’s daughter. I have done what I could to make him goe on but as yett he is not resolved farrther then Brussels; there he will stay for orders. To-morrow I leave this place soe directly for Vienna. Since departed &c. &c. (sic). I heere for sertaine that the Queene of Bohemia is gone for England but on what terms I knowe not. Pray doe me the favor to lett me understand the truth of it, for when I left the Hage there was noe such thing in hand. The Elector heere is very civill to me, I delivered the King’s letter to him, upon which he assured me to bee assisting in alle things to me; he alsoe towld me of a foudre (?) of Reihnish wein he sent me, Sir Kellem [Kenelm] Dickby hath the disposall of it, to whom the whole cargason is directed. Pray aske it of him and drink it in remembrance of your freinds, soe faire well, I am yours.

I will not trouble the King by bitts from Vienna, he shall have a full accept [of] alle his comands.”

1661, June 22. Vienna.—“Dear Will, I have but jus time to tell you that though I have ben heere 8 daies alredy the Spanish Embassador has not ben to see me nor noen of the Grand Ministers; if this be out of pett or God knowes what will quickly discover it self. A freind of mine att my coming assured me that there where but twoe difficulties which hindred my advancement to the generallship of the horse, the one was my beeing noe Roman, the other that the Marquis of Bade and Generall Feltzengmaister de Souche would take ill if I was advanced before them, and as hee thought both theise small impediments might easily be over come, especialy the first, on which he was assured most ded depende.

I can see soe small preparations for a warr against the Turke otherwaies then for a defenceing one, in which resting in the sunne and getting the Hungarian Siknesse will be the greatest danger. I have not gott one silable from you, pray faile not to write as oft as you can, soe faire well deare Will.

Your faithfull freind.

I allmost forgott to tell you how that Comte Lesley’s cousin, I forgott his name but I remember that his sister was married to S^t (or S^r) Michel, this man ded me the favor to send over a booke to Counte Leisly intitled the Iron Age in which it speekes most base language of me and my actions in England. It is dedicated to Jake Russell, but I am confident if honest Jake had reade the booke he would broken the translator’s head. Besids what he saies of me, he extols Cromwell actions and doth noe right to this or the late King. One Haris translated it, pray inquire after the booke and judge if it was not a Scotch trick to send it.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

The best news I can write is that the Hungarian wine shall not be wanting. I have found a way to send it by Wurtzbourg, and soe it shall goe but 28 leagues by land. By the next I shall be able to give the King an accompt what the answer was to his letter, as yett there is nonne, the hunting retards much busnesse. Pray remember me kindly to my Lord Chauncelor, tell him must expect a long letter from me the next weeke. My service to our cosen Sheabrough.

Moubray is the name I forgott."

1661, July $\frac{10}{8}$. Vienna.

"Deare Will,

I did not write to you the last weeke because I intended to see the ishu of some things heere before it. Att last the Marquis De Fuentes late Ambassador for Spaine came to visit R[upert?], I beleeve the new one prest him to it, well beleiving that Rp. [Rupert] else would not have given him the like. The most part of the said Marquis's discourse was of this mariage of Portugall, which extreamly troubles him, he would needs laie alle the fault upon D. Or. and Lord Chancelor whos he saied intended to bring K. into a warr with Spaine. He complained alsoe that the Baron Batteville did very ill to send Lord Bristoll out of England, when a dogge with a letter tide to his collar would have served to have desired the Princess of Parma, for by this meanes, saied he, one that could have assisted our interest was wanting. He inquired very much how it came that the Lord Chancelor and the Spanish Ambassador Baron Batteville fell out, but Rp. [Rupert] knew nothing of alle this, we could give noe answer. This day Rp. [Rupert] intends to visit the Marquis De Fuentes, if any thing occur betweene them I shall striv to writ it before the post goe; in the mean time be pleased to knowe that Rp. [Rupert] is but cowlidly used by the ministers, they would have him demand the generalship before there is an apparance of a subsistance, nay before what is owing in arreare by the Peace of Munster be made sure unto him, to which Rp. [Rupert] doth noe wais incline, especially since he had the intimation given him that his religion was an obstacle to his advancement in the warr. The Emperor, Emperatrice, and Archduc are extreamly kind to Rp. [Rupert], but none of the Counsellors have done him the honor of a visit; the reason I beleeve is the mariage above saied. The Turck hath possessed a passe called in Dutch the Iron (?) Port, it was most foolishly over seen by our Commander who lay with 6,000 men not farr from it. Monticuculy is posted with the rest of the army consisting about 30,000 neere the Danube. There is no speech yett of a Reichs day, and before there be you may be confident that noe great buisnesse against the Turks can be done, neither doe I find any greate desire in these people to have any assistance from Protestants nor from any but Roman Catholiques. Pray lett the Lord Chancelor knowe alle this and remember me to him, Duke Ormond, and the rest of our friends. The Hungarian wine is like to be very good this yeare. Faire well, deare Will, I am yours.

I wrote you word of some wine which was sent to Rp. by El. of Maintz, Kalem Dikeby hath in his hands. Rp. [Rupert] intends you should make use of it, a foudre is the quantity. For God sake if there by any liklyhood of any breach with Spaine, lett us knowe it by times, it concerns us to knowe it, Ile assure you. Adieu,

My service to my cosen."

1661, August 6, N.S. Vienna.

"Deare Will, for this time the King will have the longest letter, I am forced to give in a memoriall to the Emperor concerning the monys due to us Brothers by the Peace of Munster, and for my own particular, which payment goeth on but slowly. It is true that monys is comodity in greate request in this court and scarce enough, but yett meanes may be found to satisfy my particular if they please. I must confesse the Empr^r is kind enough to me, but noe visit yett from the Grand Consellers. Monticumly marches for Transilvania to-morrow, Soche stay on these frontiers, yett for alle this I doe not beleeeve that any warr is intended. Comte Stroci now att Paris has order (as it is sayed) to goe to our K. My Service to our Cosen, so faire well, deare Will, &c.

I could wish the wine you presented to my Lord Chancellor was worth his acceptance. I hope some Hungarian wine I am making provision of will be."

1661, Sept. 4. Vienna.

"Deare Will, I am not able to write to you of any subject but of one, which I confesse doth trouble me in the highest degree, and doth concerne our Master as well as my selfe. The stori is this, the Elector Pallatin hath ben pleased to write to a Prive Consellor of this court in these terms—what King of England's ambassador doth negotiate with the Porte, Elector Palatin knowes not nor what is intended by him against the hows of Austria, Prince Rupert whoe is intimate with King of England and his Privi counsellor can tell (if he please). Alle this is a brotherly trick you'l say, but I thank Good they heere doe little beleeeve what he saies, only this, the Pr. Porcia towld me that theire resident gave them notice that the Eng^l Turkey ambassador doth animate the Turke to falle into Germany; my reply was that he was rather an ambassador to the English marchants and not the King's, and that I beleeeved that hee had noe such orders from our King, and that if any such thing could be layed to his charge his Majesty would not be pleased att itt, well knowing that he rather desired a warr against the Turkes then to assist or harden them against any Christian prince. I am now asking leave to see my friends in English againe. Pray lett the Queen my mother knowe alle this as well as the King and Lord Chancellor. By heven I am in such a humor that I dare not write to any, therefore pray excuse me to alle for not writing this post. I received yours in which you write the newes of Holmes' returne. The next post I will give Mr. Venmüden thanks my self for the particular intelligence he sent me. Faire well, deare Will, I am yours.

It is complained of that Lord Sandwich ded send to vew the fortifications of Alecante in Spain where he was since his being att Algir. Pray assure our cosin that noen rejoises more att her recouvrey than myself."

1661, Aug. 18. Vienna.—"I am in noe small paine for our Cosin (Sheabrooke crossed out?) since I heare she hath gott the small poxe, pray God shee falle not into the Frenchified Phisians hands, soe lett blode and dye. What I write to you concerning Pomerania if you remember was with this caution that if you lickt it one should be sent to R. whoem he might inform alle. Times are dangerous especially now, letters are not safe noe where, therefore pray take heed what you write, especially of that. Wee have had heere a prayer of 40 howers long for Monticumly good successe in Transilvania. This day Starenberg and hee is to jone. R. hath given in his memorials to Emperor and hath spoke to the Arch Duke and Prince Porcia to assist his interest which both have promised to doe but our President of the Chamber (which is the Exchequer) gives little hopes of getting much more than he has done alredey, which is not the six part due not of the whole sume due by the peace of Munster, but by a contract made by the late Emperor and R. since. By the end of this weeck I shall knowe much more of my buisnesse. Wonder not att Sr Fr. Dorington, for he perhaps takes ill I made him not my steward judge you if I had reason to doe it. I hope to be with you before your next sitting. Faire well, dear Will, I am Yours."

"For Mr. William Legge, Groom of his Majestie's Bedchamber, at Court."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

1661, Sept. 9, N.S. Vienna.—“Deare Will, by the last wrote to you the kind usage of my brother the Elector to me, as alsoe the good office he ded the King in this court. I thank God he hath not reched his barbaros intentions. I am now barganing for Hungarie wine, which is the cheefest buisnesse I have heere, the Emperor is gone to Ebersdorf 2 leagues of, where he expects my greihounds to course a stagge. The warst news wee heere from Monticumly is, that there is noe cheefe comander but him selfe in heath (sic. health?), the Turkes retire but threaten to come nex spring with a pusant army. I am afraid that before this harvest passe they may make a plundering cavaliade into Stiria, which if they intend it will hardly be hindered, this is alle news I can tell you att present. Faire well, Deare Will.”

1661, Sept. $\frac{1}{4}$. Vienna.

“Deare Will,

I receaved yours dated the $\frac{23 \text{ Augt}}{2 \text{ Sept}}$, but yesterday. I shall never take ill when King or Lord Chancellor mind their greate occasions more then to write, soe that they forgett not me. I am now departing from hence that is to say macking way for it, my goods goe by Ratisbon, soe by land to Würtzburg, and from thence by water the rest of the journey; this course our Hungari wine shall take alsoe, and perhaps gather a kind of Franconi Muscadine wine which will be lickt I beleeeve. Pray God the sicknesse of our good Elector hinder not this my disigne. There is a courier come from the army, but what he brings God knows; if it had ben good news wee should have had it divulged before now. To-morrow I goe to Court to see the Emperor before he goeth to Newstat, which will be on Munday, and returns Saterdag following, toward which time I shall be reddly to begin to take my leaves. The Empe^{tee} was sike of a fever but is recouvred. I am glad that Holmes hath given the King satisfaction, but I would willingly heare what is resolved concerning the whole buisnesse; pray give him thanks for remembring his ould master, the orange flower butter will be very acceptable. Pray remember my service to the General, and tell him that [I] am very glad to heere of his recouvry; it was before I knew he had been sicke. If my Lord Lindsay be att court the same to him with the dolefull news that poore Royall att this instant is dying, after having ben the cause of the death of many a stagge. By heaven I would rather loose the best horse in my stable.”

1661, Sept.—Vienna.

“Deare Will,

In my last I wrote word how that many general officers are fallen sick, now I must tell that Comte Staremborg is dead since Sporhe, and Marquis of Bade sick still, and as the Impratrice towld me her selfe that Monticumly him selfe is sicke alsoe. Souche that commands those that stay on these frontirs made a Cavaliada into the Turkes' dominions, tooke some oxen, few prisnors, shew his teeth and came bake; if this drawe not the Turkes into these parts the divell is in them. These inclosed will give you more information then I can have time to write att present, only this take with you, the Hungarian wine is marching of the river towards Ratisbon, 4 tonne or 8 pipes which I hope will serve our Court this winter. The later end of this month I begin my journey towards you. Faire well, dear Will.

My service to Lord Chancellor, Duke of Ormond, and the rest of our friends, especially our cosen Shebr[ough].”

1661, Oct. 22
Nov. 2. Franckfurt.

"Deare Will,

I am not att alle sorry for what happenes att the combatts you mention betweene the Dow^r and Mo^{rs}, God of heaven continue such blessing to them. In my last, I towld of a sea disigne heere in Germany, Elector of Brandebourg is the cheefe actor in it; and now I gott hether I may tell you (under rose) that he alsoe made me write the buisnesse I sent you out of Westphalia. I am afraid I shall not now meete with him, yett shall make alle diligence that way. Lord Chancellor's letter I receaved and answered it, I pray God the letter be not lost if by the next post I receive not word from you that you receaved it, I will not faile to write to him againe from Cassell. Pray be pleased to remember his Majesty to give order for the transport of the Hungarien wines from Rotterdam, which in 20 days I hope they will be come thether. Before this come to your hands I hope the Duke of Yorke will have given order for a Fregatte for me, soe that I hope suddainly to see you. Till then faire well, deare Will."

1661, Oct. 11.—J. B. to Mr. Waller.

In regard of the inconveniences received by Sir Hardresse [Waller?] and Col. Fleetwood by being lodged in an alehouse, they desire Col. Legge (who professes a great kindness for them) to solicit the Lieutenant of the Tower for their removal to a house at the disposal of Capt. Marsh, one of Col. Legge's head clerks. If the Lieutenant do not readily incline to it they are willing to give him 20*l.* per annum, and good security for their true imprisonment.

1662, June (?) 20. Dublin. The Duke of Ormonde to Col. Legge.

"I doubt not of your concernment for the good successe of all the King's affaires in what hand soever they bee, and I am confident you wish that parte of them that are comited to my care may thrive under it for my sake. My Lord Chauncellor (with whom you say in yours of the 10th you had discours of the state of this place) was able to tell you I allways doubted the computation sent over by the Lords Justices would not hold, and you have had some proof that I am no ill husband for the King, whatever I am for myself, you know some neare relations of my owne that were enough in want could not prevaile with mee to help them out of the King's purs, though I had warrant for it and the example of my predecessors, and that I am beleevved in that poynt hard harted; and yett all that will not doe the worke. My Lord Tresurer could not reasonably think wee would make use of our haveing had 130,000*l.* as an argument to get 60,000 more; but if Mr. Secretary Bennett had produced a letter I writ to him at the same tyme that from mee and the Councell went (a copy of which I now send you) there hee would have seene mention made of the 100,000*l.*, and a more naked perhaps then wyse discovery of my stratagem to get the Regiment over, which how necessary it is and how dangerous it may bee to let it fall you are able to speak to. I think the mater will resolve to this question, whether because the Lords Justices and Councell first, and then I were mistaken in our calculation, therefore Ireland shall bee left to shift for itself; or whether if it bee not able to pay the force necessary to keepe it quiet, it bee most councellable to suply the defect out of England or to lessen the army till it may bee suported by Ireland—and these questions with our humble opinion in referrence to Ireland shall bee as clearly stated over as the mater will beare—then let them send money or reduce the army (for one of them must bee donne) as shall seem most practicable and safe. I shall rest satisfied in the performance of my duty in preventing if I can, and if not in bearing the ill accident that may hapen.

HARL. OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

I observe that as wee mentioned not the suplys sent over, so is there no notice taken there of the alteration of the booke of rates for excyse and custom from what it was when it was transmitted, by which alteration that maine parte of the revenue calculated must faile us in a great proportion, which in so much is an absolution from the undertakeing wee are charged with. To remedy this there will shortly goe hence an Act explanatory of the Act for Customs and Excyse; if they will not let that passe wee should grow (to rich ?) and yet will have us keepe armys, is it not requireing a tale of bricks, without allowing the straw.

I am in some doubt my Lord Treasurer may take it ill that I made no application by letter to him, I am sure my not doing it was to give him ease, yet at the same tyme I writ to Sir Philip Warwick but have not had so much as an acknowledgement that hee had received my leter. I desire you would without giving knowledge of my apprehension discover whether there bee anything of this or not—and so God keep you.

Let mee or my wife heere at large from you concerning my lord of Chesterfield and all that mater."

1662, Aug. 5. Tower.—Capt. Geo. Wharton to Col. William Legge, at Alderman Wybrant's in Dublin.

"I received yours of April 30th (sic) from Dublin last night, which rejoiceth your friends exceedingly as bringing with it the glad tidings of your safe arrival in Ireland; and the rather for that they so seasonably succeed the false reports here in town. First, of a mischief upon the illustrious person of the Duke of Ormond, and that by a mastiff dog's falling on him (and him only !) in Chester, which endangered his life; and then that he all his noble retinue were cast away in the storm."

Last Wednesday the Queen mother came in her coach from Greenwich to Lambeth, where the Duke of York's barge waited for her, and brought her to Whitehall. Next day the Royal family were feasted at Putney, by Sir W. Throckmorton.

The King and Queen are suddenly expected at Whitehall by Thursday come se'nnight at furthest. In order to which the Lord Mayor and City companies are trimming their barges, preparing pageants and what not.

Ordinance matters.—The Surveyor is gone to fetch his wife from Newcastle, and Mr. Clark is not returned as yet from his at Bourne. Yesterday Sir William Compton was at the Gunfield to try an experiment of a Granado shot from a demi-canon against a butt, by a little Frenchman who is said to have been recommended for his skill by Prince Rupert, the effect of which was he could not hit the butt, though he shot twice and the shells broke both times as was expected. Howbeit, a second essay is intended in another place, but no more there for fear of mischief, which some passengers but narrowly escaped.

Foreign News—a letter from Sir Thomas Margan relates the Spanish and Portugal armies so near one another that a field battle must needs very suddenly ensue; but the Exchange news was that the Spaniard declines fighting, in hope that the scorching heat of that climate (so much exceeding ours) will quickly spoil our English courage. "Your brother Col. John Legge, presents his fairest respects to you; he is gone, I think, this very day for Dunkirk."

1662, Oct. 14. Tower of London.—Capt. Geo. Wharton to Col. William Legge, at Dublin.

Business matters. "The only news here (which drowns all other) is the sale of Dunkirk to the French for 700,000 pistoles; most say 'tis gone already, but I hope if the Londoners will but contribute anything like towards the charge of keeping it, 'tis yet retrievable. Howbeit the merchants are all of a flame, and the discontented parties interpret everything in the worst sense, and to the dishonour of the King and his Council." Secretary Nicholas (growing old and impotent) is succeeded by Sir Henry Bennet; some talk also of the Lord Treasurer intending the like retirement.

[1662?] Reports by Col. Legge on the fortifications of Londonderry, Carrickfergus, Charlemont, &c.

1662-3, Jan. 10. Dublin.—Col. Ed. Cooke to Will. Legge, Esq., Whitehall. "Dear Sweet-William." Has returned from his Christmas gambols on the "Curroe of Kildare," as hawking, hunting, coursing, and horse racing, to his Irish tribunal. At the Castle all well, Lady Ossory has dropt down a slender daughter. Mr. Ogilby gets money apace, and his actors reputation; though nothing but the conspiracy of foul weather and good company can betray the writer to see the inside of his new-mended theatre. Sends humble service to Legge's lady, his brother and sister Graham, Harry Washington, Dick Lane, and all bedchamber backstair friends.

1663, June 25. Dublin.—The Duke of Ormonde to Col. Legge. "I have yours of the 20th, it made good haste, for it arrived here last night. Present my humble thanks to the good Duke for the liberty hee gives mee. I shall upon no suspection endamage or dishonour any body hee ownes or has lately ownd with his permission(?) As soon as the yong gentleman comes hee shall bee employed and the other displaced. Tell the Duke I am much satisfied with Rawden in the last businesse and in his diligence since the discovery.

In return to your advertisements you may know that two considerable things are this day in agitation, the tryall of the conspirators here, and the taking up of all fire armes throughout the kingdom, with all the Scottish sylenced ministers in the North who are a dangerous artillery; what I shall doe with them I know not, only I take it to bee reasonable that if they trouble mee a great deale I may trouble them a little. This going by Sir Arthur Forbes (a worthy gentleman) I will not feare to tell you that I finde my Lord Berkley inclines to parte with his place of Presidency, and that I have tould Mr. Secretary Bennett that no President were beter then an unable or an absent one. I know also that a motion is made from some of Conaght that they will buy out the Presidency and the apurtenances, so an Act may passe for abolishing the office for ever. You know what I have sayd to you concerning that place; consider how it may bee brought about and let mee know by some trusty messenger or in cypher what I am to do towards it to the King or any other.

Hasten the warlyke acoutrements of my troope, and in the meane tyme send mee word what they cost that I may order the payment there. Granger is not yet come, the proper tyme for him to doe the service hee under[takes] drawes on. I am yours."

1664, Oct. 22. Castle Cornett.—Chr. (son of Lord) Hatton to Col. William Legge. Reports on the state of Guernsey as to ammunition, fortifications, &c.

1664-5. Jan. 18.—Col. Henry Norwood to Col. Legge.

1665, May —.—Three or four friendly letters from the Earl of Arran to "Dear Will."

1665, August, Sept., &c. The Tower.—Capt. Geo. Wharton to Col. William Legge, at the Court, at Oxford. Some letters on ordnance matters, containing a few references to the effect of the Plague in his neighbourhood.

1664-5, Jan. 18. Tangiers. Col. Henry Norwood to Col. W. Legge.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

"Yours of the 9th of October came to me by the Dover under whose convoy you sent us the best provisions of all their kinds that I ever saw to come from your office which I impute solely to your care of this place, and God reward you for it!" Wishes his (Legge's) nephew Spragge had come on the occasion.

"I should . . . tell you a long story of my own uneasy kind of life in this place if it were reasonable to use your interest for my removal . . . there is no present remedy but patience, which because it is an ingredient I leaven all my meat & drinke withall, you may hope to see me retourne laden with abundance of virtue, a meere saynt."

1665, Sept. 2. Kilkenny.—The Duke of Ormonde to ——. "Though I have been landed neare 5 weekes I have received few letters out of England and to say truth have sent as few thither. . . .

When I tell you the Exchequer is empty and the people most dismally poore, I shall not neede to tell you that all things are in a terrible disorder. The short is the English Acts inhibiting the transportation of fat catell and our trade with the Western plantations must be repealed as to so much, or haulf the army must bee disbanded, or many must bee sent out of England to maintaine it. Nor will the taxing of those Acts serve the turne (?) till wee have had peace long enough to fall again into our way of trade. I have said this to my Lord Chancellor and to my Lord Arlington, that it may bee added to the computation of the charge of the warr, for it will certainly fall out to bee the case; and so you may tell the King."

1665, Oct. 25. Dublin.—The Duke of Ormonde to Col. Legge. "I finde my Lord Arlington as senceible as I could wish him of the condition of this kingdome, and I am verily persuaded hee is not the lesse so in my consideration, who must suffer with it and for it, how dilligently so ever I shall behave my self in discharge of my duty. I confesse I have known it in a more desperate condition, but never in my life so destitute of mony as it is now; if it were in the kingdome the mater were the lesse how much the people payd, because it is presently spread amongst them againe, but when it is not above ground, I know not what wee can make of all the subseidys thay shall give us. Our Parliament meetes tomorow, and I think well resolv'd to passe the bill and to doe all thay are able for the King, but to bee as sure as I can this will bee a busy time with mee amongst them. . . .

I understand Ballynekill belonging to Ridgeway Earle of Londonderry is to bee sold, it is a fine lordship, a good old title within ten mile of Killkeny and I am tould may bee had cheape."

1665, Oct. 25.—The Earl of Ossory to Mr. William Legge, at Oxford.

"Deare Will . . . I hope ere long to have the hapines of seeing you in England, the greate bill being that which is all our busines at present, the Parliament meeting on Thursday next. I am glad you have so good wines at Oxford, I hope wee may drinke of them without the inconveniency which befell us upon such an occasion when wee were yong men. Captain Anglesy and his souldiers have had divers encounters with Sir Maurice Eustace and his concerning a possession of the late Lord Chancellor's house; the fort was severall times taken and retaken by storme, but in the end the peare overthrew the knight, entring in person with sword and pistole with a fiercenes equaling that of the Bishope of Munster's. This makes all the discourse of Dubblin, if any other happens worth your hearing it shall be told you by your &c.

[P.S.] My rallyng my Lord of Anglesy is only to yourself."

1665, Oct. 31.—Capt. Geo. Wharton to Col. W^m Legge.

"We have yet many soldiers daily falling sick in the Tower, but sent out to preserve the rest. And (by what I hear and observe) I fear this week's bill will not afford so great an abatement of the sickness as the last did, very many still falling sick and dropping off unexpectedly, especially such as return fresh out of the country."

HARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1665, Nov. 16. The same to the same.

"We had news yesterday on the Exchange of a great defeat given the Dutch by the Bishop of Munster, wherein 3,000 are said to have been slain upon the place, and 1,000 taken prisoners, upon which the French succours are returned, re infecta. . . . The Bill of Mortality I have enclosed, to the end you may see what prospect we have of better health."

1665, Nov. 18. Dublin.—The Duke of Ormonde to the same.

"I have yours of the first of the month with an accompt of the Parliaments being broke up and this kingdom not quite undon at a blow, as it would have bin if that Act had past. It is well wee have time to looke about us before the next assault, and to prepare our defence."

1666, April 2.—Articles of Peace made and concluded between his Excellency John Lord Bellasyse, Baron of Worlaby, Captain-General of the King's armies in Africa, Vice-admiral of his navy on the coast of Barbary, Governor of Tangiers, &c. on behalf of Charles II., and the most excellent Lord Cidi Hamet el Hader Ben Aly-Guyan, Prince of West Barbary, &c. (Translation.)

1666, May 5. Dublin.—The Duke of Ormonde to William Legge.

"I have yours of the 20 of the last and it was wellcome haveing not heard from you of a good whyle before, and as it gave mee good hopes our fleet may beate our enemys, which is the only sure way to get us friends. I doe observe not only a great backwardnes on that syde to relieve us with any thing wee want, but something that lookes lyke a designe to take from us the use of those things God and nature have given us, and indeed there is so generall a discountenance put upon the improvement of this kingdome, as if it were resolved that to keepe it low (?) to the degree of miserable were to keepe it saf. I doubt that maxime is not so politick as the contrary which was that of our forefathers, and that it may too late bee found so. They who are of this opinion will perhaps oppose the seting up of salt peeter workes if wee went about it, yet I would bee glad to bee instructed by you what I may doe in order to it."

1666, May 30. Carickfergus.—The Duke of Ormonde to Col. William Legge.

"Yours of the 22 instant found mee here upon an occasion that will I beleeeve have made the more noyse by my comeing, but in such a time as this I doe not thinke any such disaster too litle to bee early looked to. I am not sory I tooke the jurny since it will save mee an other I meant to have made this sumer; and that it has given mee good proof of the steadynesse of the Regiment and of the hors (?) I found in my way. If a garison or two more had taken the same cours as the mutineers expected, and as they had the same reason, I know not where or how the mater would have ended; but now the hanging of some of these and the paying of the army 6 months of ten will I hope give us quiet as to such maters, till the King shall have considred my representations of the general condition of the kingdome and taken resolutions concerning it. The short is wee must have freedome of trade or constant mony out of England, or the King will have no army or such a one as hee had beter bee without it. This I have sayd over and over, but perhaps thay will not beleeeve a man is bald till they see his braines.

I am goeing this morning to see this castle, and then to Lisvegarny to bed, thence to Dublin. God send us good newse from sea; with us

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

there have bin great stormes. The coniunction against us is formidable, and consequently our negociations abroad unskillfull or unfortunate. When I come to Dublin you shall heare againe from mee ; in the meane time I pray think of our powder (?) affaire. Farewell !”

1666 (?), June 20. Dublin.—Mary Countess of Arran to her “cousin Will. Legge.” Family matters—in postscript “I ritt wonce to you about Captaine Congreve brother who is none of your ordennary souldiers and I desired in my last to you that when thare is a place of preferment void you will put him in—he has a wife and a great maney children.”

1666, Aug. 2. Welbeck.—William, Duke of Newcastle to Col. Legge.
“Noble Sir,

I ame borne to trouble you—and this nowe is to desier you to presents my moste humble dewtye and service to his Majestie, and tell him I congratulate with my sole his Majesties late and moste glorius victory over his enemies, which will make all his neyghbor kinges stoope to him—and I praye, Sir, aquainte his Majestie that I have a fine roebuck, and to knowe wether I shall sende him upp or no ; he was taken att my litle farme in Northumberlande, theye are melencollye neshe peviahe thinges,—beleve mee, Sir, I ame pationatlye

Your olde and moste faythfull servante

W. Newcastle.”

1666, Aug. 30. Kilkenny. The Duke of Ormonde to Col. Legge.

“The last I had from you except that of the 21 instant was of the 12 of the last month ; if any you have writen betixt those times thay are gon out of the way. I pray God our late good successe at sea and land and the present good posture of our fleete may produce a peace, the only good end of all warr. It will shortly bee a fiter season for a treaty then for fighting, and therefore I hope the French will let us alone, for I am not so confident of our preparations, but that I am glad winter is so neare, which will prove an inconvenient season for French to make warr in this climate. I would bee glad wee could set up powder workes here that wee bee no more burdensome then of necessity wee must to England ; but I am utterly ignorant in all the ways of that manufacture, yet I will informe my self the best I can by the things you have sent over and let you know more of my minde. I know not what the other proiect may come to tell I shall have spoken with the Atturney (?) or received his opinion some other way, which from Munster I will send for.”

1666. Sept. 12. Clonmell. The Duke of Ormonde to Col. Legge.

“Yours of the 1 I receivd on the 7 instant though I was at Charleville, my Lord of Orrery's howse. Wee have since had from Plimouth and Main head (?) flying reports of a great victory over the Dutch obtained as thay say on the 3^d of this month, a great fighting day in our Kallenders. God send it bee true ! In my jurny I have seene excellent militia troopes as far as may bee judged by men and horses, and I have seene admirable places in miserable condition, and that the more lamentable that I am not able to repaire them Here are many of the antient nobillity in miserable condition, amongst the rest here is a very sad peere calld the Lord of Dunboyne of my name and family. The place from whence hee derives his title was the gift of one of my auncestors, and so I have recoverd it, but with a purpose, to restore it, and the rather if, as hee says hee will, he lets mee have the breedeing of his sonne, a youth of about 13 years old, as I take it. The reason why I tell you this is because if I take him I would have your assistance to place him where hee may bee bred a Protestant and a fit tutor and servant of that religion provided for him, for which I will provide allowance; and if hee shall come to any thing I would not wish him beter disposed than to your yonger daughter. Send mee your minde of this designe. I confesse it troubles mee to see men of birth incapable as well by their religion as education of those advantages and imployments that would beter become them then many that have them. And so deare Will, farewell."

[1666?] Sept. 24, Oct. 3 and Oct. 7, and later dates to Dec. 18. Kilkenny and Dublin. Elizabeth, Duchess of Ormonde, and Mary, Countess of Arran, to their cousin Col. Legge. Many friendly letters on family matters.

Other letters of the Duke of Ormonde in this year refer chiefly to some matrimonial plans in progress within his family.

1666. Paper endorsed "a list of the Navy," being a list giving the divisions of the Red Squadron and the ships, commanders, and number of men composing the same.

The like of "the White Squadron, and of the Blew Squadron, and the Fire ships added to the Fleet, as well as the names of 13 ships which came from the Straits with Sir Jeremiah Smith, and of the Merchant ships taken up to serve as men of war."

1666. Paper headed—"A list of the English Royal Navy commanded by His Highnesse Prince Rupert and the Duke of Albemarle as it was by them ranged in order of battle in the fights of June, July, and September 1666."

The Fleet is divided under the following headings :—

The Squadron sent westward with the Prince.

This Squadron consisting of 20 ships and four fire ships, the first ship in the list being the Royal James, Admiral Sir Thomas Allen, the rest of the Fleet remaining with the Duke.

The Red Squadron consisting of 20 ships and two fire ships, the first ship being the Royal Charles, Admiral Sir John Kempthorne.

The White Squadron consisting of 22 ships and two fire ships, the first ship being the Prince (burnt), Admiral Sir George Ascough (taken), Commander.

The Blew Squadron consisting of 17 ships and one fire ship, the first ship being the George, John Coppin (slain), Commander.

The following note is appended to the list.

Note.—"His Highnesse the Prince, sayled westward May the 29th with the first Squadron of this Fleet to meet the French, but arrived back again June the 3rd and had his share in the fight with the Dutch which began the 1st of June and continued till the 4th at night. Sir Jeremiah Smith, who was designed Admiral of the Blew (in the Fleet left with the Duke), being absent, that charge was vacant all the time of the four dayes engagement. Those ships in the second list marked with a x were not in the fight on the 25th and 26th July being before disabled by storms or for want of seamen left behind at the Buoy of the Nore. Although in the fifth list no third rates are mentioned yet there were (attending the Flaggs), in the Fleet when it sayled from Sole Bay on the 31st of August, the Sweepstakes, Rochester, Fountain, Richmond, Speedwell, Pembroke and Garland."

The 2nd and 3rd lists of the Blew Squadron, Red Squadron, and the White Squadron follow, and all the lists contain notes against the names of the vessels taken by the Dutch, burnt or sunk, and of the officers taken or killed.

1666-7, March 14. Mary, Countess of Arran, to her cousin William Legge. Family matters. Asks him to raise Mr. Congreve's brother, who is at present one that trails a pike in Capt. Tho. Bennett's company, which is quartered at Winchester, where he is to be heard of at Mr. Gosling's house, being the sign of the Star. Congreve is a very honest man, and has been made captain of a castle in Ireland by the Duke.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1666/7, March 16. Dublin.—The Duke of Ormonde to Col. Legge.

"My sonne Arran will bee at London perhaps as soone as this letter. His wife growes a lovely person and continues so good, that if I had a hundred children or but one, I could not love any of them better then I doe her. I never saw so much discretion in so few yeares, nor so little of humor or trouble in any of her sex of what agesoever. I know you will be glad to heare it, I am sure I am highly delighted to find it."

1667, June 1st. Tangiers.—Col. Henry Norwood to Col. Will. Legge.

Refers to the expected return of gentle George with prize money. As it is decreed that the care of Tangiers shall no longer be in him, he can most truly say that it has done no other thing in his fortune than to put him upon soliciting the Exchequer for the recovery of his estate laid out in payment of the garrison there. Recommends Lord Middleton, the person of honour set apart for this Government, to get money in his purse for the succeeding payment, as well as to satisfy the arrears of the last quarter. They continue to drive a great trade with Tetuan, 80 horses and mules being just now under the forts. The principal French merchants in Andalusia choose this place to manage their trade in Spain in preference to Faro.

1667, August 28. Lich[ield?]. George Legge to his father.

"Hon^d Sir,

I have found so kinde reception in this place, that I can neither expect nor desire more but that Mr. Archbold seemes troubled at noebodies coming with me, wherefore he resolves (upon Mr. Vernon's letter and my unckle Graham's both which advise him to it), to come and waite on you himselfe at London; but the old Ladye is very cautious of her daughter, and seemes fearfull I shall incadge her affections before things are agreeede, which truly I doe endeavor as much as in me lyeth though the mother seldome is from us. S^r, I have motioned to Mr. Archbold since that both you and him are resolved to doe what you can for us, if that the young lady liked of it, we should goe to church without any farther trouble and serimony on either party; but he seemed not very willing and replied that he had no such comition from you, wherefore, Sir, if you will please to mention something of this kinde and excuse his trouble of a journy since I am now heere, and may make an end of it without any farther dispute, you being resolved to see me live as befits your sonne and his daughter. This I hope would take som effect and make an end. Your dutifull sone, G. Legge.

1667, Dec. 4. Tangiers.—Col. H. Norwood to Col. Legge.

"You please me to the purpose in the newes of gentle George, he has revenged himselfe of the Fairfax with a witnes. Had Ned Vernon told me these tidings I should have held it for Apochrifia for his sake alone, but gentle George has ever watch'd Ned's countrywoman and made her gentle too; yet (raillarie apart), I thinke from my heart the woman has the better on't. God give them both joy!"

1668, Aug. 28. The same to the same.

Refers to Lord Middleton's coming, and to his hopes for leave to come home.

There are three other letters from Colonel Norwood, dated from Tangiers, Sept. —, Sept. 20, and Nov. 10, in this year.

1669, April 9. Tangiers. The Earl of Teviot to Col. Legge.

It will not displease you to hear that we are still alive and prosper a great deal the better that Guyland would see us hanged. You will have from this gentleman, Mr. Tho. Luke or from Harry Norwood the particular occurrences of this place We have no shot at all for the nine pounders, or the six iron 'faucons.' I have given 130 barrels of powder to Guyland and am bestowing daily more on him." Implores sudden assistance.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

MS. Book entitled:—A Journall from the Spitthead, began the 17th of July 1669, in his Majestie's Ship Resolution, to the Streights.

Endorsed—Sir Thomas Allen's Journal.

An account of the daily transactions of the Fleet under his command, between the 17th July 1669, and the 6th Nov. 1670—when the Fleet returned to Spitthead—during an expedition in the Mediterranean against the Algerine pirates.

Commences;—

Resolution. Wee sayled from Plymouth the 22, in company with us the—

S^t David. Sir John Harman.

Mary. Capt. Rob^t Clarke.

Hampshire. Capt. Rich. Beach.

Bristol. Capt. Dan^l Heling.

Portsmouth. Capt. Will. Coleman.

Jersey. Capt. Will. Poole.

Dep^d Ketch*. John Ashby.

Vic^o Fireship. Capt. Leonard Harris.

Convoys:—

Mr. Mathews in the Fredrick.

Mr. Gab^l Stasy in the †

Capt. Brown, a Scothe † Flybote.

One Wilkenson, a small vessell with cariages for Tangier.

The following are extracts from the Journal:—

Aug. 14. "We spake a Frenchman [who] came out of Mallaga, that the news from Candia was good, they had beaten the Turks out of Fort S^t Andrea and killed 10,000 of them in sallies."

Aug. 17.—Att daylight we saw a sayle ahead, the wind still west we made to him, he was affraide and altered his course, but he seeing noe remedie after 7 low'red his topsayles and stayd for us I sent my boate to bring the master aboard to heare what newes, he came from Marseilles bound for Nantes, laden with oyle and brimstone, he saw no sayles in 5 dayes' passage but shippes att anchor in Alicante Road; he gave us accompt that three of the French Fleet were come to Telloone from Candia who reported they had burnt 7 or 8 of the Algier men of warr and that Monsieur Beauford and Monsieur Bullioun with many brave officers were slayne upon sallie to rayse the siege.

Sept. 5, Sunday.—Began the warre with Algier. Capt. Beach and Mr. Brisbane went ashoare with our last result . . . they returned about 3 o'clock and brought a flatt deniall of giving any satisfaction but frivolous pretences to keepe them . . .

Sept. 7, Tuesday.—Despatched Capt. Porter in the John Pink for Alicant with a packet to His Royall Highness, one to Mr. Williamson, one to Sir William Godolphin, one to Mr. Blunden, one to Cadis, and one to Legorne, desiring Mr. Blunden to write to all the Ports that wee had begun a warr

* Deptford.

† Blank.

‡ Sic.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

Sept. 9, Thursday.— . . . I despatched the ketch to Legorne with letters thither, and to Smyrna, Genoa, and a packett to Sir Daniel Harry to Constantinople with all the transactions betweene His Majestie of Great Britaine and the Pirates of Algiers.

Sept. 12, Sunday.—About 9 o'clock we saw 10 sayle, which was Sir Edward Sprag and all the reste of our Fleete we expected.

Sept. 16, Thursday.—Sent to Tunis and Tripoly.

Nov. 26, Friday [off Algiers].—I made an excuse to heare newes from towne in sending my boats with a white flag and a letter to the Consull for the exchange of prisoners and the prisoners' letters to the Duan and their friends, but in my answer I found that they had 26 sayles of men of warre abroad and had mett with our Newfoundland fleet and done us great dammage to my great grieve, and a letter from Captain Becke who was taken oft Cape Martin laden with fruit, he wrote me alsoe that he had binne with the Aga and found him very high, yet spake as if they were content to treatse soe we could come to more moderate tearms, there being severall of the Spaniards released by the Almesny from Spaine.

1670, March 25, Friday.— . . . About 4 wee gott about Montefues, where we saw many men att worke upon a new castle, soe wee all louffed close into the shoare and spent two houres in battering of itt; they had as we could see ten gunns mounted, which they plyed quick at first, butt att last now and then a gunne; we sawe many horse and foot run away; night coming on wee went into the bay; they shott our sayles and the Maries and the Nonsuchs maineyard a third throw.

1670, March 26, Saturday.— . . . Sent our boate a shoare [to Algiers] with a letter to the Consull to change prisoners.

March 27, Sunday.—Our boate went ashoare againe to gett off those that could procure their liberty, and the Consull answered that they would not send any off by reason we did not propound any tearms towards a peace, soe we presently returned a letter to the Consull that they knew our former demands.

March 28, Munday.— . . . Sent my boate with a letter to see for an answer of my former letter. The Consull writt they had a good mind to make peace but the Duan's stomachs could not submit, and that the Bashaw would goe that day to see if they could find a way to adjust with us, he being much afraid of his new ship.

April 1, Good Friday.—Fell in within four of their men of warre, butt by night they gott away. We fired a whole broadside into the admirall who had a small Red Flag at top masthead.

June 21, Tuesday.—Wee were att anchor att Tunis about 2 afternoon . . . About 5 saw three ships . . . and made them to be of the French Squadron . . . They gott ahead to meett the Marquis Martell who had wayed and gott under sayle with a man of warre, a fireship, and his darten which had bin a fishing.

June 22, Wednesday.—My jolly boate came from towne with Mr. Baker from the Consull's with fruit and letters wherein was signified the greate kindnesse the King of Tunis and people had for us. . . . Mr. Brisbane with our gentlemen came aboard about 4 o'clock, soe hee and I consulted the matter of arguing with the Marquis by what order he stopt the Tunisie laden with free goods from unlading att Golletta, and soe gave him orders and sent him to him, who upon debate could say he had besieged the port and would lett none goe in, but would show noe order nor give under his hand for what he had done, butt answered several times he was a soldier and could nott write, and next thatt he had many suspitions that they were Jews' goods and an unlaw-

BART OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MISS.

full vessell having left his convoy to run to Port Ferene. She having alsoe bin a Prise and sold at Tunis, to which he was answered to full satisfaction in pointe of law and Articles, and wee having blocked up Algier did let French ships goe in, as takeing itt to bee a breach of peace to hinder our alies to trade with free goods, hee being convinced and much troubled was proffering that if I would suffer theirs to trade with free goods into Algiers that ours should doe the like. Upon which Mr. Brisbane returned and gave me this accompt, the Consull being then come aboard and all our Captaines well argued the business, and I considering my instructions late come of His Majestie's pleasure, which made me incapable of revenge in that matter wee agreed to send him back with the Consull, Captain Hart, and Captain Holmes, to argue over and settle that business, and if he could gett it under his hand, butt that he would not, but ingaged upon his honour that our traders should have free egresse and regresse with free goods and that he would ingage for the whole squadron, and whosoever should come for the winter guard upon that coast, and engaged on my part which given (sic) great satisfaction to the Consull and alsoe to the King and people of Tunis. itt was ten at night before they returned.

June 23, Thursday.—Sayled from Tunis att night the Consull gave me letters to all ports in the Streights to lett them know a free trade was open.

July 4, Munday.— . . . Resolved that Captain Beach with the Foresight and Nonsuch should cruse about Cape Barter untill the 16th when the Bristoll fell in with them and then they were to come together before Algier, and then wee would send to the Consull and putt Mr. Berkham a shoare to acte the businesse he had for the Kinge of Sweden.

Aug. 25, Thursday.—Gott to Malaga . . . Saw 4 ships . . . I sent in my barge, judgeing them our devision, and soe they were. Captain Beach and other Captains came aboard and gave me accompt of the whole manner of putting the six Turkes men of warre a shoare in the night and burning them, saving above 250 Christians, about 70 English.

Sept. 23, Friday.— . . Within 3 leagues of the Cape Degatt . . . We saw 7 sayles coming from the westward, the wind westerly, they proved Sir Edw. Sprag, the Mary, Advice, Constant, Warwick, Gaurland, Deptford Ketch, and Rose fireship.

Oct. 19, Wednesday.—Set sayle from Cadis.

Nov. 3, Thursday.—We saw Portland and anchored short of St. Hellens.

Nov. 4. Friday.—About eleven o'clock we wayed and plyed upp to the Spitthead where we anchored . . .

Nov. 5, Saturday.—Moored before the Docke . .

Nov. 6, Sunday.—Very ravening wind and rayne all day.

(End.)

1670, Sept. 26. Alicant Road.—Sir Edw. Spragge to Colonel Wm. Legge.

Now that the King and his Royal Highness have been pleased to honour me with the command of this fleet, I humbly beg that you will be a kind and earnest solicitor for me that I may not want whatever is necessary for the Fleet. Hitherto care has not been great. Sir Tho. Allen has not left me a farthing of contingent money for what necessities may happen to us, and the fleet in a very needy condition wanting everything. . . . I am very glad to hear that my worthy friend Sir Tho. Chichley is Master of the Ordnance, I am sure you will agree very well and your business will be much better done. . . . I intend you from this place by the Joseph Bonadventure some wine for

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

the Prince and yourself. Pray be kind to poor Hugh Kelly and his. Molly dear. I am your affectionate nephew, &c.

Some pots of venison and butter would be very acceptable in the Straits.

167 $\frac{1}{2}$, Jan. 3. Whitehall.—General Instructions for Capt. Legge, Captain of his Majesty's ship Fairfax, signed by James, Duke of York, and countersigned by M. Wren. (Printed, 16 pp., except the signatures, date, &c.)

167 $\frac{1}{2}$, Feb. 15. Casum.—Sir Robert Holmes to Capt. George Legge, commander of the Fairfax.—I have received orders from his Royal Highness to send your ship to Spithead, which I desire you to do with the first opportunity of wind and weather. But first you must take in stores, &c.

167 $\frac{1}{2}$, March 9. On board the ship St. Michael. Sir Robert Holmes to Capt. Geo. Legge. Order to cruise in company with the St. Michael between Dunnose and Cape de Hogue, to secure all ships met with belonging to Holland and Hamburg, and to bring them to the rendezvous at Dunnose.

167 $\frac{1}{2}$, March 16. On board the ship Resolution.—Order from the same to the same to have his ship in readiness to sail to St. Margaret Road.

167 $\frac{1}{2}$, March 18. Acknowledgment signed by Capt. Charles Myddelton of having received from Capt. Geo. Legge, of the Fairfax, the prize taken by him called the Lansman of Amsterdam, Capt. Hildbrand, 26 guns, with all standing and running rigging, anchors, cables, hawsers, sails and all other appurtenances to her belonging; and the hold of the ship not broken open or the goods embezzled.

167 $\frac{1}{2}$, March 18 to Sept. 1.—Orders (8) signed by James Duke of York, Lord High Admiral, and countersigned by M. Wren or Hen. Savile, to Capt. George Legge of the Fairfax.

167 $\frac{1}{2}$, Feb. 6. Whitehall.—Printed instructions for Capt. Legge, of his Majesty's ship Royal Katherine, signed by the Duke of York and Sir John Werden.

167 $\frac{1}{2}$, Feb. 11. St. Peter's port in Guernsey.—Lord Hatton to Capt. George Legge, Governor of Portsmouth. Complimentary. Capt. Archer is at work upon drawing a plot of the castle here.

1673, March to Sept. MS. entitled "A Journall or an account of this summer's expedition in His Majesties Ship the Royal Katherine, beginning the 9th day of March 1672-3."

Ends Sept. 28, 1673, and is Endorsed "Journall of H.M.S. Katherine, 1672-3. Captain George Legge."

The following are extracts therefrom:—

1673, May 15, Thursday. At 8 in the morning there was a Counsell of Warre of all the Commanders in the Fleet. . .

May 16, Friday. The French Fleet came all and anchored to the Southward of our Fleet, there being about 30 saile of men of warre of them. . .

May 17, Saturday. The Kinge and the Duke being aboard of the Royall Charles called a Counsell of Warre of all the Flagge Officers.

May 18, Sunday. The Kinge and the Duke went aboard the French Admirall this afternoon, the Earle of Ossory received a Comission to be Reare Admirall of the Blew in the St Michael, and at 8 oclock this evening the Kinge and the Duke went on shore at Rye with all the rest of the nobility.

May 23, Friday. . . . We sawe the Hollands Fleet there being about 80 saile of them in number, they rideing within the Bankes (of Flanders). . . . We with our owne Fleet lay upon the Oister Bankes where we lay till Wensday the 28th. . . .

HARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

May 28th Wensday. . . About halfe an houre past 10 oclock we with the whole Fleet set saile to go to engage the enemy. . . . We with our Red Squadron steired away E. and by N. in the van towards the north end of the enemies Fleet which was Trumps Squadron. Neere one oclock our headmost ships came within shot of the enemy and then we all haled away N.E. fighting with our larboard tackes aboard till neere 3 oclock then being neere Trumps Vice Admirall I made my signe for our fireship to clap him aboard, but a manne of warre of 50 guns coming between he grapled with him, but sunke by his side, whereupon I immediately sent my boates with men, and tooke the man of warre then we fought with our starboard tackes aboard till 6 oclock in the evening, and then tacked againe . . . till 8 and then tacked againe . . . till 10 still fighting the enemy, then being darke we left off fighting. . . . Then we continued our course W.N.W. . . . then being 5 oclock in the morning we anchored in 14 fadom water . . . upon the oister bankes. Then the enemy bare from us E.S.E. about 4 leagues, the place where we fought was very dangerous for we feared more the looseing of our ships upon the sands then we did looseing our ships and lives in fight with the enemy. After we were at an anchor I haveing some Dutch prisoners on board, which I had out of the ship our fireship grapled with, I examined them concerning their whole Fleet which engaged us, who gave me the following account of it which I suppose to be true :—

De Rutter, Adm ^{rall} of Holland	-	-	560 men	80 guns
John de Liver, Vice Adm ^{rall}	-	-	560 "	82 "
John Venes, Reare Adm ^{rall}	-	-	550 "	76 "
Aaron Venes, Adm ^{rall} to De Rutter	-	-	500 "	75 "
Van Trumpe, Adm ^{rall} for Amsterdam	-	-	560 "	84 "
Vulcher Scram, Vice Adm ^{rall}	-	-	550 "	86 "
John de Hawne, Reare Adm ^{rall}	-	-	500 "	76 "
Adrian Banker, Adm ^{rall} for Zealand	-	-	480 "	74 "
Cornelius Everson, Vice Adm ^{rall}	-	-	480 "	74 "
John Matteson, Reare Adm ^{rall}	-	-	500 "	76 "

The name of the ship and Captain that we tooke with the number of men and gunns. The Captain's name Peter Backer. The ship's name The Jupiter of Antusien. The number of men 150. The number of gunns 50.

There is in the Dutch Fleet of men of warre 75 or 76 saile; of fire ships 20; one great Dutch ship burned by a French fireship, what dammage else we have done to them we cannot as yet tell, but we sawe 5 ships on fire at 10 oclock at night when we left fight and we miss none of our owne onely two fireships that was burned; there being likewise 5 of our Commanders killed, viz^t, Cap^t Worthin, Cap^t Fowles, Cap^t Finch, Cap^t Courtney, and Cap^t Tempest.

May the 29th, 30th, and 31st. We lay at an anchor fiting of our shipes with sailes and rigging ready to engage the enemy againe.

June 4th, Wensday. The Dutch Fleet set saile and came large away to engage us about one oclock in the afternoone, then we immediately set saile with all our Fleet . . . till 4 oclock in the afternoone . . . and then Van Trumpe and his Squadron leading the van of the Hollands Fleet and Sir Edw. Spragge with his Squadron leading the van of our Fleet, Van Trumpe being about a league upon the weather quarter of Sir Edw. Spragge fires a gun, and Sir Edw. Spragge knowing that our Fleet could no way weather them immediately layes his topsailes aback to stay for Van Trumpe and his Squadron, who were immediately engaged one with the other. And De Rutter and all his Squadron bore down upon us and the rest of the Red Squadron, whom we engaged. . . . We engaged with De Rutter and most of his Squadron from

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

4 in the afternoone till 9 at night, haveing about 30 men killed and between 60 and 70 desperately wounded, and all our masts, yards, rigging, and sailes disabled, and severall of our gunns and carriages broke and disabled, and likewise all the shot that we had in the ship for the gunns on the two upper deckes spent, and being darke we left off fight.

June 5, Thursday. . . The Prince called a Council of Warre till 8 in the morning, we haveing then lost sight of the Flemings. . .

June 7th, Saturday. . . I received an order from the Prince to go up to Sheereness with the Ship. . .

June 8th, Sunday. . . We set saile . . . to go into Sheerness . . . and there anchored at one oclock.

June 12, Thursday. The Kinge and his Royal Highness came to Shereness to view the Fleet. . .

July 15th, Tuesday. The Kinge, the Duke, and all the nobility came into the Fleet.

July 17th, Thursday. We set saile with the whole Fleet.

July 21, Monday. . . At 2 in the afternoone we sawe the Dutch Fleet riding at an anchor within the Stone Bankes. . .

August 9th, Saturday. About 4 in the morning there came an Hollands East Indiaman in to the middle of the French Fleet, which was immediately tooke by them as they rid at anchor.

August 10th, Sunday. At 8 in the morning we set saile with the Fleet . . . then we sawe the Hollands Fleet . . . till 8 at night, and then the Texill bore E. distance 4 leagues.

August 11th, Monday, 8 a.m. The Hollands Fleet haveing the weather gage of us bore downe upon us and immediately engaged us . . . till noone . . . the wind then being at S.W. so that all the French Squadron got the weather gage of the Hollands Fleet, but little or no dammage to them at all, so that we had all the Hollands Fleet to engage with our Red Squadron, only Van Trumpe and his Squadron which did engage Sir Edward Spragge. At 12 at noone De Rutter and all the Hollands Fleet aforesaid being very neere His Highness the Prince's sterne we with our ship left our station which was to be ahead of him and fell asterne between him and the enemy, where we lay battering one at another till 3 in the afternoone. . . And at 3 in the afternoone we bore up to meete with Sir Edward Spragge and all his Squadron, who were then at that time engaged with Van Trumpe and all his Squadron . . . And at 6 in the afternoone we came up faire by them which we found had bin very smartly engaged the Royall Prince haveing lost all her masts, also severall other of the Blew Squadron much disabled . . . the Hollanders being within shot of us all this time. Then from 6 to 8 at night we were very smartly engaged, our masts, yards, rigging, and sailes very much disabled and severall men slaine and wounded . . . then being night we left off fight. . . The French Squadron between 6 and 8 at night when we were so deeply engaged lay to windward of all the enemy, and did not beare up within a league or two of them.

August 13, Wensday. The Generall called a Counsell of Warre, and we lay becalmed. . .

August 29, Friday. Turned up to the Boy of the Nore and there anchored. . .

September 9th, Tuesday. . . This day the Duke of Lenox his Corps came up in a ship with a black flag at the maintopmast head. . .

September 10th, Wensday. Wee received an Order from His Highness Prince Rupert to sett saile with our Shipp up to Chatham.

September 28th. . . Came up to our mooreings just above the New Docke about 11 in the forenoone, where shee lyes with safety.

(End.)

1673, April 22. Clarendon House.—The Duke of Ormonde to Capt. George Legge. Recommends the bearer Mr. Thomas Butler, commanded on board his ship, to Captain Legge's favour.

MS. A. 9. 2. 1. 1. 1.
HALL OF DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1673, May 29. [Capt. Geo. Legge?] to the Duke of York. Friday evening May 23 we came to an anchor in 13 fathom water near the middle of the Oster Bank, Ostend, bearing S. about six, and the body of the Dutch fleet E. & b. N. three leagues distance from us, spreading themselves between the Horn bank and the Raen from the E.N.E. to the E & b. S. We continued here having very much variable winds and thick weather till Wednesday May 28, about 10 o'clock in the forenoon we set sail with the winds at S.W., a gentle gale and stood E. & b. N. with our red squadron in the van towards the North end of the enemies' fleet, which was Tromp's squadron. Near one o'clock our headmost ships came within shot and then 'haled' away N.E. fighting with our larboard tacks aboard as they did, till about 3 o'clock coming in 8 fathom water near the Baniaerd sand we tacked and stood to the southward, fighting with our starboard tacks on board till six in the evening, then tacked again and stood to the northward till 8 o'clock, from which time we fought back to the southward till near 10 at night, and then with little wind steered off W.N.W. till 5 this morning, we came to an anchor in 14 fathom water, Eastcapell bearing off us E. & b. S. southerly 6 or 7 leagues distance, and the enemy ride now within the sands E.S.E. about 4 leagues from us. We have lost never a ship though they tried all the artifice imaginable to draw us upon the sands, nor do I hear of above three of our fire ships that are spent. The Cambridge, Resolution, and York are so disabled that they must be forced to go up the river to reit. Captains Worden, Courtney, Foules, Finch, and Tempest are all killed, but behaved themselves all like very brave men. Mr. Hambleton hath lost his leg, and Colonel Hublethorne is slain. Captain Voiteire in the Katherine fireship endeavoured to lay Tromp's vice-admiral aboard, but a man of war of 50 guns coming between he grappled with him, but sunk by his side, yet the man of war was afterwards taken, but her rigging, masts, and sails so much cut, and two foot water in hold our men left her, and most of the Dutch; so that whether she is sunk or gone back we know not. One of the French fireships burned a great Dutch ship, and generally all the French behaved themselves very well. What damage the Dutch have received is not known, but we left 5 fireships among them at night. They were in all seventy odd sail of men of war, and above twenty (?) fireships. I believe it will not be long before I shall be able to give your Royal Highness a better account for we are still in sight one of another. I hope they will fight us at sea being not much weaker than we, and expecting more ships daily to come to them; 3 came while we were in fight, but that hole (sic) is too little and the sands too dangerous for us to venture among them again. I received the enclosed account of their fleet from one of the prisoners that was taken in the Jupiter.

Bundle marked "1673, July and Aug. The expedition against the Dutch Fleet."

(1673?), Sept. 23.—William Penn to —.

"The Lords of Carolina want a Lieut-Governor, the Province of Virginia wants a secretary; and for aught I know either of these will answer the Bearer's ambition and merit, for which cause pray please fix on either. I am Thy very respectful friend,

WM. PENN."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1673. Printed Pamphlet, entitled "A brief relation of His Majesties and the French King's forces under my [Prince Rupert's] command with the Dutch, the 11th of August 1673, near the Texel;" and the MS. of the same.

1673. Printed Pamphlet entitled "An exact relation of the several engagements and actions of His Majesty's fleet under the command of His Highness Prince Rupert; and of all circumstances concerning this summer's expedition, Anno 1673." Written by a person in command in the Fleet.

1674. Printed Pamphlet entitled "A just vindication of the principal officers of His Majesty's Ordnance from the false and scandalous aspersions laid upon them in a printed libel entitled An Exact relation of the several Engagements and Actions of His Majesty's fleet under the command of His Highness Prince Rupert in the summer's expedition, 1673."

MS. pamphlet of 19 pages (the last page torn) entitled "A full answer to a trayterous and seditious lybell intituled 'An exact relation of the severall engagements and actions of His Majesty's fleet under the command of His Highness Prince Rupert, and of all circumstances concerning this somers expedition, Anno 1673.' Pretended to be written by a person in comand in the fleet, but spread abroad and vulgarly called the Prince's full narrative. Published as an antidote against the infectious dissent of rebellion too visibly spreading itselfe all over the Kingdom under the thredbare trick of religion."

Various MS. accounts of the engagement with the Dutch on 11th August 1673.

1673. Printed Pamphlet entitled "A relation of the engagement of His Majesty's Fleet with the enemies on the 11th of August 1673, as it has been represented by letters from the several squadrons." Published by Authority.

1673, July, &c. Miscellaneous Journals of Pilots and other Seamen on board various vessels of the Fleet on the Dutch Expedition, and Plan of the squadrons and of the English and Dutch Fleets.

MS. notes and papers, and accounts relative to the above Pamphlet on the Summer's Expedition.

"Sir Edward Spragg, Admiral of the Blew, was drowned, his boat being sunk under him by a shot from the enemy as he was going from the St. George to another ship.

The defeat of the Dutch was not so great owing to the French Fleet standing off, although signalled."

[1673 ?] Memoranda in Capt. Geo. Legge's handwriting of the services of his father Col. William Legge and of himself.

Col. William Legge was before the late war Master of the Armoury.

In the first Scotch expedition—Lieut.-General of the Artillery and Major to the Earl of Newport, then Master of the Horse (?)

In the second Scotch expedition—Lieut.-Gen. of the Ordnance, Major to Prince Rupert's regiment of horse, and Colonel of the Firelocks; and commissioned by the army to bring the address of the army (which you will find more particularly in the trial of the late King).

In the Rebellion—was in all the battles with the King's own army under Prince Rupert from Edgehill to Naseby, or the last; governor of Chester; Lieut.-General of Prince Rupert's army, particularly at Newark and "Massemour" (Marston Moor?); colonel of horse; sole commander of the Ordnance (my Lord Newport being withdrawn from the King); commander-in-chief of all his Majesty's forces in Oxfordshire, Berkshire, Bucks, and one county more, as may appear by the Commission ; was groom of the bedchamber to the late King and taken prisoner with him when he was carried to the Isle of Wight, and then laid close prisoner in Arundel Castle.

After the war to the time of the King's coming in—kept nine years in several prisons, prisoner in eleven(sic) and condemned to die by the Parliament for serving the King—com^r of the sealed knot and com^d with my Lord Bath to Monck, the army, city, committee of safety, before and at the bringing in the King.

After the King came in—groom of the bedchamber, superintendent of the office of the Ordnance ; lieutenant-general of the Ordnance ; treasurer of the Ordnance ; lieutenant of his majesty's forests Alice Holt and Woolmere in Hampshire.

I [Geo. Legge] have been—

In the King's first war with the Dutch and French—in the four days' engagement in the St. James's days (in 1666) ; captain of the Pembroke in 1667.

In the second war with the Dutch—in the Smyrna engagement and Solebay, 1672 ; Schonvelt, 4th of June, off the Texell the 11th of Aug. 1673 ; in this war commander of the York, Fairfax, and Royal Katherine ; and in several small engagements in both wars.

At land—groom of the bedchamber to the Duke of York, master of his horse, governor of Portsmouth, lieutenant of the Ordnance, master of the Ordnance, &c.

1673, 1674, &c.—Many original warrants of Charles II. to Capt. or Col. George Legge as Governor of Portsmouth.

1675, May 23. Jamaica.—Lord Vaughan to George Legge, Esq., Governor of Portsmouth. "Though I believe you have scarcely leisure or humour to consider or be concerned for things so remote, yet I was willing to let you see you have a friend in this world whom not air or climate can change from those professions I always made of respect and service to you Since I arrived here I have called an Assembly, the figure of your Parliament in England, and having in three weeks time re-enacted and made 45 laws I fairly parted with them, and now send a transcript of the Laws to Mr. Secretary Coventry for his Majesty's royal confirmation, and do not a little please myself that the Island is like to receive in my government their first fixed and established laws. I do not find but the climate, air, and people are agreeable enough to me, but the government not so glorious as was figured in England ; however I am resolved to serve his Majesty and the Island in what manner soever I serve myself, and should not have doubted being fully pleased, if his Majesty's stores had not so unluckily miscarried through the folly and madness of Sir H. Morgan being shipwrecked on the shoals of Isla de Vaca (r). In the Downs I gave him orders in writing to keep me company and in no case to be separated from me but by distress of weather ; however he, God knows by what fate, coveting to be here before me, wilfully lost me, but afterwards met with Sir R. Strickland who was following our course, being convoy for the Straits fleet, but after six hours sail as soon as he got sea room sailed directly for Isla, whereas we lay by expecting 5 or 6 days till divers of Sir Roger's fleet came up with us. I have sent the Commissioners of the Navy the master's (?) journal which confirms all this, besides the discourse Sir Harry made in London, and was wrote some gentlemen here, that he intended to come hither before me

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

I have made choice of your friend Sir John Griffith to sollicite the Island's affairs in the quality of an agent . . . and send a petition from the Council and Assembly praying his royal highness to interpose with the African Company that we may be plentifully supplied with negroes"

1675, Oct. 15.—Lord Windsor to Col. George Legge. (Two letters.) Sends his proxy to his royal highness, with the assurance that not only his vote but his life shall always be at his master's disposal.

1675, March 11. Tangier.—The Earl of Inchiquin to Col. George Legge.

This place having suffered much through the insufficiency of our late chirurgeon, and meeting with one so well qualified as Mr. Grandee for that employment I entertained him in it, and because the salary in the establishment is so small, being but 4 shillings per diem, I added as much of my own to it, rather than part with him, it being highly important that we have an able man here, which for so small a salary is not to be had; but our Commissioners, upon my request to them to double that pay, have answered me that if we have not a sufficient person here that will accept of that salary they will send us one. I do therefore make it my request to you to represent to his R. H. the necessity of having a good chirurgeon, and to prevail that the pay of 4 shillings may out of the town revenue be made 8 to Dr. Grandee.

1677, May 30 and June 19. From The Tower.—Philip Lord Wharton to Col. Geo. Legge.

Two letters, expressing his deep sense of the great grace and favour show him by his royal highness, and entreating the Duke's help in obtaining his release.

1677, June 25. Edlington, near Doncaster.—Sir Thomas Wharton to Col. Legge, Tuttle Street. On his brother's behalf.

1677 [June 30].—Philip Lord Wharton to Colonel Legge.

It highly imports him that his matter be brought on foot before the Earl of Salisbury, and if his petition be not such as gives satisfaction to his royal highness begs for a temporary liberty before the sitting of the Houses—enclosed are draft of petition and an extract from the Lords' Journal of 16 Feb. 1676–7 touching the offence of Lord Wharton 1677, July 1.—Ann Lady Wharton to Colonel Legge.

On behalf of her husband—in a postscript she hopes this hot weather will incline his highness to pity the prisoner.

1677, July 19, 22, 24.—Philip Lord Wharton to Colonel Legge. Other letters on his imprisonment, &c.

There are also three or four undated letters from him on the same subject; and one from Goodwin Wharton referring to his father.

1676, Dec. 19, 21, 23, 26; and 1676–7, Jan. 2.—Derby House.

S. Pepys to Col. George Legge, governor of Portsmouth. Five official letters on Navy and Ordnance matters. In a postscript to the last Pepys writes, after returning Legge "with interest" his kind wish of a Happy New Year—"The surprising death of my lady Duras gives a great many of your friends and mine much affliction and disorder; and truly 'tis a calamity much to be lamented."

1677, Dec. 14. Flanchford.—Lord Windsor to Mr. George Legge, master of the horse to his Royal Highness. "There is a seat in Reigate church which was set up in the cross aisle for the Lord Monson, and stands between two seats of mine. The Duke is now owner of it, but 'tis of no use of his R. H. nor any of his tenants and would much accomode my family and Baron Thurland's. I desire you will speak to the Duke to give the use of it to the Baron and myself."

HARL. OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

1677, &c.—Papers relating to the Post Office.

1678, July. — Copy of Orders of the Duke of Monmouth to Col. George Legge, or the Officer in Chief commanding his Majesty's forces in Newport (Nieuport, Flanders).

1678, July 13. Newport.—Orders signed by Colonel George Legge for the better regulation and government of the English soldiers there under his command, against drunkenness, taking goods without paying for them, affronting the religious, going into churches or convents, going without the gates of the city, being out of quarters after the tattoo was beaten, and fighting duels. Death was the penalty in nearly all cases.

1678, July 22. Newport.—Proceedings at a Council of War. Colonel George Legge, President, Col. Sidney, Lieut.-Col. Halsey, Lieut.-Col. Sunderland, Lieut.-Col. Sackville, Major Windram, Major Carr, Major Hastings. Resolutions regarding the pay and allowances to various officers and men, stores, duties of the chirurgeon, &c. Attached are "Some observations upon the town and government of Newport."

1678, July 22. Newport.—Col. Legge's warrant to Mr. John Cory, appointed judge advocate to the court, to summon a court martial, Lieut.-Col. Sunderland, President, for the trial of such soldiers as are in confinement.

1678, July 23. Newport.—Proceedings at a Council of War. Lieut.-Col. Sunderland, President, Major Windram, Major Carr, Major Hastings, Capt. Howsden, Capt. Lee, Capt. FitzJames, Capt. Askin, Capt. Norshrott, Capt. Scroope, Capt. Brewer, Capt. Shelly, Capt. Howard—. James Ponte, a sergeant under Colonel Legge, convicted of speaking mutinous words, was condemned to sit one hour upon a wooden horse with two muskets tied to each leg, afterwards to be sent back to prison until a fit opportunity happen to transport him beyond the seas. Two privates in the same regiment were sentenced to be shot for like offences, and another in Sir John Fenwick's regiment to ride the wooden horse three several days, one hour in each day.

1678, ^{July 24.}_{Aug. 3.} Newport.—An account of all the quarters assigned to the regiment of Col. George Legge, showing the streets where, and the persons with whom, each officer lodged.

1678. Paper headed "An account of the civil inhabitants of the City of Tanger, viz^t, such as have no relation to, and are independant of the garrison. In the yeare 1678."

"Free.—The number of men, English and Forrayners inhabitants	-	-	257
Free.—The number of women	-	-	104
Free.—{	The number of male children	-	86
	The number of female children	-	83
	The number of male servants	-	40
	The number of female servants	-	30

The totall of the people of Tanger - - 600

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1678. "An Abstract of a Survey and State of Tanger in the year 1678."

This gives the annual value of the houses in the city in the year 1668 as 17,701, Pss. 8., while the rack rent at the time of the survey only amounted to 5,418 Pss. 8 (pieces of eight).

It then gives the number of buildings, their situation and quality, either as inheritances, leases, quarters, King's houses, stores, churches, and into how many hands the whole is divided. It next sets forth who granted the leases, and a description of the leases; declares how many, and what people inhabit the houses; enumerates the people of the Mole, in the city, upon the Mole, and at Whitby; gives the composition of the trained bands and the army, stating that in the city and army there are 2,225 persons; states the amount of land without the walls and its uses, and mentions the names of the fifteen forts without the walls.

N.D. Paper headed "An Establishment for Tangier," and endorsed "The last intended establishment."

	£	s.	d.
"The Governor - - - - -	1,500	0	0
The Minister att 10s. per diem - - - - -	182	10	0
The Physitian att 15s. per diem - - - - -	273	15	0
The Towne Major att 10s. per diem without any manner of perquisites or other advantages - - - - -	182	10	0
Judge Advocate att 8s. per diem - - - - -	146	0	0
Chyrurgion att 4s. - - - - -	73	0	0
Chyrurgion's Mate att 2s. 6d. - - - - -	45	12	0
Quarter Master, Provost Marshall and Servants att 5s. - - - - -	91	5	0
Commissarys of the Musters att 6s. - - - - -	109	10	0
Storekeeper for the Garrison att 3s. 4d. - - - - -	60	16	8
Engineer att 6s. per diem - - - - -	109	10	0
Storekeeper of the ammunition and stores for himself and assistants att 6s. 8d. - - - - -	121	13	4
These to depend on the Master of the Ordnance. { A Master Carpenter - - - - -	54	0	0
{ A Fire master att 5s. - - - - -	91	5	0
{ A Master Gunner att 3s. - - - - -	54	15	0
{ A Gunsmith att 2s. 6d. - - - - -	45	12	0
{ 16 Gunners at 1s. per diem each, besides victualls - - - - -	292	0	0
Two Regiments of Foot each Regiment consisting of 16 companies, and each company consisting of a Captain att 8s. a day, a Lieutenant att 4s., an Ensigne att 3s., two Serjeants att 1s. each besides victualls, three Corporalls and one Drummer at 6d. each besides victualls, and 50 private ffootmen att 3d. each besides victualls, which for each company amounts to 574l. 17s. 6d. per annum, and for the said 32 companies to - - - - -	18,396	0	0
For the Eielde and Staffe Officers of the said two Regiments, viz ^t , two Colonells att 12s. a day each, two Lieut.-Colonells at 7s. a day each, and two Majors att 5s. a day each, makeing for each Regiment 438l. per annum, and for both - - - - -	876	0	0

	£	s.	d.	EARL OF DARTMOUTH'S MSS.
Fower Troopes of horse each to consist of a Captain att 14s. a day, a Lieutenant att 10s., a Cornett att 9s., a Quarter Master att 6s., two Corporalls att 3s. each, one Trumpetter att 2s. 6d. besides victualls, a Farryer at 2s. besides victualls, and 25 private horsemen at 2s. each besides victualls, makeing in all for each Troope 1,809l. 15s. 10d., and for the said fower Troopes -	7,239	3	4
For the Hospitall besides the value of the soldier's victualls when sick, added to the hospitall towards maintenance -	700	0	0
For Coles and Candles -	500	0	0
For Boatenen, Boates, Intelligence, Messages, Presents, and other Contingencies att Tangier -	400	0	0
Total thus farr being 31,544l. 17s. 4d., by paying 4s. 9d. with every 4s. 6d. will be defrayed by Twenty nine, &c. -	29,884	12	2½
To the Victuallers for victualling 1,916 men att 2s. 6d. per weeke each, viz ^t , 1,600 Foot soldiers, 64 Sergeants, 96 Corporalls, 32 Drummers, 100 Troopers, 4 Trumpetters, 4 Farryers, and 16 Gunners -	12,454	0	0
Total -	42,338	12	2½

Memorandum that the 3d. a day in money, made payable by this, our establishment to each ffoot soldier of our garrison att Tangier, shall be from tyme to tyme paid to the Colonells of each Regiment, out of which they are to furnish the said soldiers with cloathes, shirts, shooes, stockens, and other necessarys, the same to bee allwaies bought in Ireland and noe where else, and that att as easy rates as may bee, and to pay the remainder (if any), in money to the said soldiers.

Memorandum: soe that 8d. a day out of the 2s. a day made payable by this our establishment to each trooper of our garrison of Tangier shall bee from tyme to tyme paid to such Surveyor as wee shall appoint, to bee by him layd out for provideing such sorts and quantitys of horse meat as are now allowed to each horseman there, and the rerraineing 16d. a day shall be from tyme to tyme paid to the respective Captains of Horse, out of which they are to furnish the said troopers with cloathes, bootes, belts, and other necessaryes, the same to bee allwaies bought in Ireland and noe where else, and that att as easy rates as may bee, and to pay the remainder (if any), in money to the said troopers. And the Lord Lieutenant or other Cheife Governor of Ireland to take care to appoint some fitt persons to supervise the buying of the said cloathes and necessaryes for the soldiers soe as the same may be effectually furnisht good in kind, and att the cheapest rates."

167½, Feb. 15, Whitehall.—Henry Coventry to George Legge, Esq., governor of Portsmouth.

Dear Governor, I have (received?) yours and the enclosed copy to Mr. "Peepes." I went immediately to his Majesty and possessed him as well as I could with your reasons for the electing Sir John Kempthorne, and if I wanted any thing I doubt not but the D. will perfect it. As for your letter to Mr. "Peepes" I can only say this in short, it was too witty for a governor, and too plain dealing for a courtier. I shewed Sir Thomas Morgan's letter likewise to his Majesty, but I do not find much credit given to the reports. Come back a triumphant member and (against ?) Parliament, we shall all pay you great respects.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1678-9, Feb. 26.—Extract from Journal of Sir Roger Strickland's proceedings, describing his meeting with seven Turkish ships which were fighting with two Genoese men-of-war. At back is a list of his Majesty's ships in the Straits, eight in all, with nine convoys.

Letters of James, Duke of York to Colonel George Legge.

"Brussels, March 28, 1679.

I receved yours by Graham the night before I came from the Hage, and had not then tyme to write to you, yesterday morning I arrived here, and as I was at diner had yours by Carleton, who rid hard to come hether so sone, which did informe me of what I must confesse I did not expect, for tho I did beleve the thinge would have been done, yett I did not thinke that way, and I beleve he little thought or expected to have a command of that kind when he advised my being sent away; and this I hope will convince people that there was no concert bettwene us, I am sure those that thought it, or sayd it, at any tyme, were either very foolish, or malicious to me, to thinke I could have any concert with those who so ever they were that advised, and that without my knowledge, or consent, my being sent out of England. I long to heare by whose means this resolution has been taken, and what effect it will have, I shall be glad if Powel be speaker for I hope he will be my freind, and will further my returne, which you will easily beleve I long for very much, tho I was very kindly used in Holland, and am very civilly here, and I hope when so ever it is thought on that my freinds will be as carfull is they can that I may be as free there as I have been, but of this I shall say no more till I here how thing go where you are, upon the alteration you tell me is like to be, which is all I have to say to you now, but that I would have you write to me without ceremony. J."

1679, April 4, Brussels.—I see so little liklyhood of things going well in England, or of my being sent for back, that I would have you thinke of getting ready some of my horses and coaches, to send over to me, if you thinke I am like to stay any tyme on this side of the water, but not to send them away, till you heare from me againe, it being very troublesome to be here without either, I would say more but have not tyme.

April 14, Brussels.—Yours by Lewen I receved not till Wensday and wonder how you came to thinke me at the Hage, for I had not sayd I would go thither except my Daughter had been brought to bed, and of that there was no liklyhood, but now I am a going thither upon another account, which is to see hir that has gott a tertian ague, and to endeavor to undeceve those who perswade hir she is yett with Child. I intend to stay but a little there, at least I hope so, for at this time of yeare such distempers usually last but little, for I am very civilly used here, and the D. de Villahermosa was with me last night, and seems to be a very good kind of man. I do not find by your last that any thing had been moved concerning me, at least but a little in passing, I wish my freinds would consider well, whether delaying my affaire can be of any advantage to me; I feare not for the longer people are used to be with out me the harder it will in my mynd to come back, and tho I do not doubt of the continuance of his Majestie's kindnesse to me yett you know there are those about him who would be glad to keepe me from coming back to him, but of this you that are in the place are better

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

judges then I am, when to move any thing concerning me, and therefore I must leave it to your discretion. In the mean tyme it is very uneasy for me to be without coach and horses here, therefore I would have you send ouer by Ostend, Dixey and Hooper with their two setts of horses, and the hunting coaches, as also two pads and fower of the somer hunters, whereof Windsor and Griffen to be two, and this as sone as conveniently you can, for I would willingly find them here by that tyme I come back from the Hage, I thinke you had best have them embarke at Dover to be as little as they can upon the sea. Send one of the Querrys to and send one of my towne coaches and harnesses, but no horses, and that straight to Antwerp, as for your letters direct them to the Hage. I have not tyme to say more."

[1679,] April 25, Hague.—"I receved yours by Morly some days since, and shall not send him back to you till I come from Amsterdam whether I am a going to morrow, and by him shall write my mind about the affairs of my stables. I long to heare what will be the fate of the Lords, and I wonder any of them would employ such a man as Reading, to such a as (sic) Bedlow, for on can never expect good from such kind of men. I do not thinke yett of going to Breda, but intend to returne back to Bruxcelles, the begining of next weeke, and I cannot immagin why it should be thought Catholik would not flock as much to me at Breda, as at Bruxcelles, for God be thanked in this country no body is asked what religion he is of, and I see by some letters, it has been reported, that there was great resort of Catholiks to me there, which is a very untrue story, for there has hardly any come there, but if they should, what harm were there in it, for if men be driven from their owne country they must go some where and all cannot go into France, but where they find most conveniancy for them selvs, and I believe there were never fewer at Bruxcelles then now, so that they that have raised that report no doubt intended it very maliciously to me; and I cannot imagin why people should thinke it better for me to be in a Protestant country then in a Catholike, when they know it will not alter my mind, and besids if they would but consider they might know it is not convenient for me to be in this country, and Bruxcelles is nearer England, and a place where there can be no ombrage taken by reasonable men, for I cannot be more a Catholike than I am. I could say more on this subject but have not tyme. I am very glad to heare Mr Powel is like to be advanced, and truly I beleve he will be firme to me for I look on him as a man of honnor, tell Captain Russell he need not yett come but may stay so long as he thinks he may do me any service there.

Neither the Dutchesse nor my self have receved those letters you mentioned from his Majesty, nor have I had one letter from him since Sir John Werden brought me one."

[1679,] May 2, Hague.—"I receved yesterday yours by Windham and do acquiesse in my freinds opinion in not having any thing mentiond concerning me till the Lords tryal be over, tho it be very uneasy not to know on's fate, for you on the place can juge much better then than any that are at a distance, and as to the Prince of Orange he will be ready to make a turne in to England when his businesse here will give him leave but when that will be is uncertaine, for the towne of Amsterdam givs him much trouble, but now there is hops that that may be accomodated, for M. Valkenire the Burgemaister was with me when I was there, and professt to be ready to come to a good understanding with the Prince, and wos very civile to me, and sayd he would come and speake with the Prince in a few days, but we here do not know what to make of the Earl of

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Danby's coming in, and feare it my yett put things more in disorder, but a few days will explaine that riddel to us. I write constantly to his Majesty, but had none by Windham, will (sic) was a great mortification to me. You are very much in the right concerning Aston and I have written accordingly to Lord Peterborow. I intend to set out to morrow for Bruxcelles, and take Breda in my way to let the Dutchesse see it, I find by yours that people are very much mistaken in their guesses about my not staying at Breda, I assure you no Catholike that came from France, or any other of that perswation have meddled with it any way to give me any advice in it one way or other, and are discreter than those that write such lys from this side of the water, and that by their politiks do me as much harme as my greatest enemys, and do not consider all things as they should, and juge without knowing or considering all the reason of a thinge. I have written already to you upon this subject, and therefore shall say no more, but that I am sure if my freinds knew and considered all things they would see I do nothing but what is fitt to be done. As for what you would know, whether I do expect to be recaled from the King alone, or from him by the Parliament, I thinke it would be properest from him, for it was he only by whose command I came away. Tis true if they thinke it was an ill advise given him, why there is no harme in their taking notice of it, so as it be done with that respect as becoms them to him, you may easily beleuve I should very gladly be at home, but would not willingly have an attempt made in Parliament that should faile. I have been so often interrupted that I hardly know what I say and have not tyme to say more at present not to lett this bearer lose his passage in the packet boat."

[1679,] May 8, Brussels.—At my arrival at this place on Friday last, I meett with the newse of the dissolution of the old, and the chusing of a new counnelle, which you may easily beleve was a great surprise to every body here, and not only to us English but even to the Spaniards who are as much astonished at it as we are, and tho I was prepared to heare of Lord Shaftsbury's coming to court and being in favor againe yett I did not expect so total a change as I see there is, and could not beleve so many loyall and worthy men should so absolutly be layd a side. I had not yours till the day after I came, this bearer not being able to gett horces to come so fast as the post. As to what you are advised concerning Lord Shaftsbury, I confesse I cannot bring my self to it to write, as was proposed, but if you speake to Lord Townsend as from your self to sound Lord Shaftsbury, and to represent to him that he beleves it may be in his power to be well againe with the Duke, by doing any thing to oblige him, for now that he Lord Shaftesbury being well with the King, the Duke will easily be brought to live well with him, his chief exception to him being upon the King's account. He may remember that the now Earl of Danby, when Tresurer of the Navy was as ill with me as any one could be having been brought into that office whether I would or no, that so some as I saw and beleved he served his Majesty well, I was freinds with him, and a good freind to him to, some thing of this kind may be sayd, but not as from me, either by Lord Townsend, or rather by George Pitts, whom I look on as the stedyer man, and that is more my freend, but you that are upon the place can judge better then I, which of the two are properest to be made use on, or anybody els that may be fitt for it, you may employ in it, if you thinke it fitt, and that you thinke it may do some good, or at least do no harme; and I assure you I can very willingly forgive, and not only that, but live well with any that have been my greatest enemys, if they behave them selvs as they ought to his Majesty, and will live well with me, but for my begining to write to any of them before they have done some thing to shew me they have a mind to oblige me I can never bring myself to do it, nor to dissemble so much as to lett them or any others, have any hope I will ever be brought to conforme to the Church of England, as now establishd, or alter my mind in point of religion from what it is now. Pray keep the Attorney and Sir F. Winnington in their good intentions for me, and lett them know how kindly I take their endeavors for me, and thanke Lord Prive Seale from me for what he did about the Duke of Monmouth's pattent, and if he should chance to be put out, and Lord Roberts put in thanke him still, and tell the new one I hope he will continue as carfull as both he him self and Lord Anglesey had been upon such an occation, for you must know Lord Roberts did do the same thing when the first pattent was past for the Duke of Monmouth. I am very sorry to heare you are like to run any danger as to your Government, but I hope his Majestie will not be wroght upon to do so hard a thing to you, and that yours and your father's services will have so much waight, as to hinder yours and my enemys from bringing it to passe. When I wrot last to you from the Hage by Morley, I was newly come from diner from M. Odyks, and in such a hurry as I hardly knew what I sayd, so that I do not know whether I explaind my self well and I do not know what alteration this great change may make in my affairs, and whether it will delay or bring on my businesse you on the place can only know and judge when and which way to begin it; in my mind it has happned well for me that these changes were made before my name has been on the stage, and me thinks some of these new men that are now preferd may apeare more for me then they durst do before. I long to have the next letters, to see how these new Councelers will steer their course that one may judge whither they are bound, we know from whence they are come."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

[1679,] May 16, Brussels.—"I have just receved yours without a date, with his Majestie and Lord Chancellor's speeches, and long to heare what you will do in your house upon them. I shall not say my thoughts upon them, only I see but little hops of my returne and therefore would have you send over to me as sone as conveniently you can, my owne sett of horses I meane Welshes, and the Dutchesses owne body sett also, with my towne coach for the Dutchesse towne coach that need not be sent, and send me another pad, as also Cob, Cullen, Oxford, Washburne and Tufton, and lett them bring some of Hulks Spanial to shcot with all. I was this day abroad for the first tyme on horseback; I never saw my horses in so good case as they are. I have not tyme to say more, it being very late."

[Addressed] For Colonel Legge.

[1679,] May 19, Brussels.—"I receved yours by Churchill on Tuesday night last, but the English letters which should have been here yesterday are not yett come, and till I have them I shall not answer your last letter, and only tell you I do intend to go to Breda, as sone as conveniently I can, since my freinds advise me to it, tho I thinke it signifiys little, however, lett the horses I sent for land at Ostend, that they may be as little as may be att sea, by my next I shall be able to say when I shall go to Breda till when direct your letters hither."

[1679,] May 28, Brussels.—"I receved yesterday at two in the afternoon, yours of the 14th by Charleton, who lost no tyme in coming hether. I could not dispatch him soner then this night having so much to write. I send in myne to Mr. Hyde the two letters my freinds desired with very little alteration, and that but in one of them, and besids that, have writen a letter to his Majesty where I speake very freely to him of all his affairs, and of the Duke of Monmouth, and I send you here enclosed the heads of some of them that you may speake with his Majesty upon them and enlarge them, for now or never is the tyme to save the monarky. I thinke it yett in his Majesty power, but if he parts with any thing more he is gone. Be sure to make my compliments to the two Coventrys and all those that spoke for me, in your house; when you have spoken to his Majesty upon the heads, lett me know as sone as you can what he says to them. I thanke you for the pains you take in my businesse, and when in my power you shall see how sensible I am of it.

EARY OF DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

[Enclosure with the above.]

Heads you are to discourse with his Majesty upon, and to enlarge upon them so as to lett him see they are resonable.

That his Majesty aught not aprehend but that he is strong enough to deele with and punish his enemys if he will but be resolut, and stick to himself and countenance his friends. The fleett is yett his, urge the consequence and advantage of that, the gards and garrisons are also his, except Hull, which might easily be made so. Scotland and Ireland yett his if he continu Lauderdail and Ormond in them, them two kingdoms will make men of estats consider well before they engage against the King. The Prince of Orange has given me all the assurances of his serving his Majesty, what coms from him can give no jealousy as to the Religeon, he knows and is sensible he must sinke and swimme with the King, all these circumstances considered, the hazard will not be so great as some knaves and faint harted men would make him beleve. If he will bestur him self now they are not yett quite prepared, want a head, he must have a care the Duke of Monmouth does not head them, for he is the only dangerous man that can do it, if he does not, no man of quality will dare, therefore, as much as may be to put it out of his power to do harme to shew discountenance to Armstrong and young Garrat, it being of great concerne to me to represent in what a miserable condition his Majesty would be in should he submitt, to make one step more would ruine him without redemption, as letting them put in men into the Fleet, Gards or Garrisons, Irland or Scotland; that they that would go so far would never thinke themselves safe so long as he were alive, remember Edward 2, Richard 2, and the King my father.

I have sayd all this in my letter to his Majesty, but you must remind him of it and enlarge upon it.

[1679,] May 31 Brussells.—Tho it is not very necessary for me to say much to you by this bearer, who can give you an account of what passes here, yett I would not lett him go without a letter from me, to tell you againe how satisfyd I am of the pains you take in my concerns. I have charged this bearer Graham to consult with you how proper it is for him to say anything to his Majesty to the same purpose I directed you in my letter by Carleton, to speake to him of, you will have seen how he receved it, and so can judge whether it be proper to have it repeated or no, I long to heare what past on Monday, what els I have to say I refer to this bearer.

[Addressed] For Colonel Legge.

[1679,] June 7, Brussells.—I receved last night after the post was gone yours by James Walsingham, you see he made good hast tho he had not the language, this gos by Captain Crow of the Kitchen yacht, and so shall write my mind a little freely to you and tell you, that I am very glad to find his Majesty will stick to him self and part with no more. Pray keepe him up to that still, for tho I see his kindnesse to the Duke of Monmouth is so great as may yett do him harme as well as myself, yett that may be easily prevented so the maine go well. I see his Majesty has been very much misinformed as to some things concerning the Duke of Monmouth for Lord Chancellor Hyde never went about to put any jealousys into my head of my nephew. What he did about the patent was only what any man that understood the Law was obliged to, and I do not remember he ever opened his mouth to me of it, and as you very well sayd I did not live with the Duke of Monmouth after that for many years as if I had had any unkindnesse for him, and till he spake to me himself at Windsor some five or six years ago, of his having a mind to be Generall, I never took any thing ill of him, nor grew jealous of him, but after what I had sayd to him upon that subject, of my reasons against it, and that I told him then freely he was not to expect my freindship if ever he pretended to it or had it. One cannot wonder if I was against any thing that did encrease his power in military affairs as his being Colonel of the foott Gards would have done, especially when I saw he used all the little arts and artifices, by degrees to compasse his point of being generall, and I am sure if he had had but the least consideration or freindship for me, which I might have very well expected from him, he would never have thought more of being generall, but after all that he has done against me, if he will serve his Majesty as he ought, and that his Majesty lay his command upon me, I am ready to live civilly with him, tho I can never trust him; for I thanke God I have so much of a Christien, and that obedience for his Majesty as I can freely forgive him and live civilly with him. As for Armstrong I hope his Majesty will shew his displeasur to him as he sayd he would, it will be very necessary it should be done, to shew his dislike to what has been done against me. I shall be very impacient to heare what past yesterday, and shall say no more to you now because this will not go so fast as the post.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

[Addressed] For Colonel Legge.

[1679,] June 11, Brussels.—On Thursday I received yours by Carleton, and last night that by Fautry. I had by the last a very kind letter from his Majesty but no command yett to returne, he says he will advise with my best freinds about it, and then lett [me hear] from him. I write by this bearer a long letter to his Majesty, I presse him to go on vigorously as he has begun, and to shew he will do so, to send for me home. I give him my reasons for that, to which though I have not time to tell you are obvious enough, but conclude with an intire resignation to his will, as to my returning, or staying on this side of the water, and desire that I may have his positive commands in either case. I am cleerly of your mind that the longer he is of sending for me will be both worse for him as well as myself [] those who are my freinds ought to presse him to do it and ought to represent me to some of these men that are newly come into play as one who has no animosity against those employed by his Majesty, and that serve him, as Lord Halifax and others, that you think proper to speake to, you shall heare from me againe by Walsingham who I shall dispatch by the end of the weeke, my letter to his Majesty was so long as it has taken up almost all my tyme and this bearer must stay no longer for feare of missing the paquet at Calais.

I had not time to write this over againe.

[Addressed] For Colonel Legge.

[1679,] June 27, Brussels.—I received yesterday yours by James Graham and intend to dispatch him back to his Majesty by Thursday night, so that now I shall say nothing to you, but that I would have you if possible, be at London when he arrives there, that he may advise with you about my concerns.

[Addressed] For Colonel Legge.

[1679,] July 22, Brussels.—Carleton made great haste hether but what he brought not requiring a speedy answer I have kept him here till now. I am sorry to find that all that I wrot or that you and the rest of my freinds could say to his Majesty did not worke on him, but I do not wonder at it since I see he is resolved to stick to the measurs he has taken with his new Prive Councelle, who have already begun and will absolutly make him a Duke of Venice, and it is plaine they have great influence on him since he lays so much waight, or thinks others may, on what such a villan as Dugdal may say, or the ly which some marchants have made of Sir H. Tichburne, who I am shure could never say such a thing as that, but tis no wonder he fears to stick to me when he will not stick to him self, and letts all go as it will, so he may have a little as present quiat which will not last long. I am very glad you spake to him you did about Lords Halifax, Essex, and Sunderland, I have long looked on the two first as men that did not love a monarky as it was in England. I once told the first I looked on him as one of the dangerust men I knew which was all the harsh words I remember I ever sayd to him; for the second I do not thinke I ever sayd any harsh thing to him, I can remember when upon seuerall occations I stood his freind; and for the last he knows I was always kind to him. There is one thinge troubles me very much and puts od thoughts into my head, it is that all this while his Majesty has never sayd a word nor gone about to make a good understanding bettwene me and the Duke of Monmouth, for tho it is a thing I shall never seek, yett methinks it is what his Majesty might presse, thinke of this and I am sure you may draw concequences from it, which I shall not mention to you, but are obvious enough to any one that consideres, and now upon the whole matter, tho one must never dispaire, especially in a country so given to change, yett I look on my condition as very bad, and do not flatter myself with the hops of being sent for in hast, and so am arming my self with as much pacience as I can, and shall, as I have done for these many years, prepare myself for the worst that can happen to me; and pray once for all never say any thing to me againe of turning Protestant, do not expect it, or flatter your self that I shall ever be it, I never shall, and if occation were I hope God would give me his grace to suffer death for the true Catholike religion, as well as Banishment. What I have done was not hastily, but upon mature consideration, and forseing all and more then has yett happened to me, and did others enquire into the religion as I have done without prejudice prepossession or partial affection they would be of the same mind in point of religion as I am. Lord Peterborow is not yett come, when he dos I shall heare what he will say to me from Lord Danby, but sure Sir H. Goodrick either mistook Lord Danby very much or that Lord did very much misinforme him, for I never thanked him for his being instrumental in my coming away, tistrue I did thanke him, but it was for his getting his Majesty to make that declaration he did in Councell concerning the Duke of Monmouth, the very day I came away, but for the other I did not. As for the accounts of the stables they shall be sent you. I thinke now I have answered the most material points of your letter.

[1679,] July 25.—Tho I wrot the former part of this letter according to the date on't, I would not seale it up till this day to see what the English letters would bring. Bagott came last night, but neither by him or by the post had I any letters from you. I was very glad at the newse he brought of the disolution of the Parliament, which tho I do not see I can hope to be speedily sent for, yett it must have a good effect as to his Majesty's affairs and in tyme may be to me. It is strange his Majesty has not writen to me, neither in answer to what I wrot by Graham, nor now upon the breaking of the Parliament. I am not used like a brother nor a friend; presse to have some marke of displeasure shewd to Armstrong; if that be not done I know what I am to expect. I am so tyred with writing I can say no more.

[1679,] Aug. 11, Brussells.—I received yours by Noll. Nicholas on Wensday morning, by which you see he made great hast. His Majesty's letter to me was truly very kind, and I make no doubt he will continu so, he knows my stedyneesse to him, which is not to be shaken, and which I do not doubt but at last will gett the better of my enemys. I am not to expect to be sent for till after the meeting of the Parliament and tryal of the Lords, and till then I shall not presse for it any more, and to help me to beare my banishment with somewhat more pacience, I have desird his Majesty to lett both my Daughters come over hither to me, which I hope will not be refusd me since I intend they should be back at London before the meeting of the Parliament. By the next you shall heare more from me for I have not tyme now.

(Addressed) For Colonel Legge.

[1679,] Aug. 29, Brussells.—I receved yesterday as I came from hunting yours by Churchill, who you see had a very quick passage. I have now but little tyme to say any thing to you, but that I am very glad to heare his Majesty is so firme to you. I have bid Werden write to Sir A. Apsley to furnish Hilliard with mony to bring over my fox hounds, lett Hilliard know he should come as sone as he can; lett him embarke at Dover, and land at Newport, and let the horses he and the huntsmen use to have come along with them. I now begin to have good sport a stag hunting, and the country looks as if the fox hunting would be very good.

(Addressed) For Colonel Legge.

[1679,] Octo. 8, 12 at night, Brussells.—I had a quick tho a boisterous passage at sea, and good weather at land, for I arrived at Ostend before none on Fryday, and came hither yesterday evening. I shall be in great impacience till the turne of this bearer and hope there will be no alteration in my concerns, and that what was promist will be made good, it is so late and I so sleepy that I can say no more to you now. I intend to be at the Hage about the end of this weeke.

(Addressed) For Colonel Legge.

[1679,] Nov. 13, Durham.—I receved yours of the 7 at Norton just as I was a going to take coach for Richmond, and arrived here last night, and was obliged to stay here this day to lett my bagage come up, the wagons not having been able to come through yesterday. I intended to have gone to Newcastel tomorrow, but by reason of a great cold the Dutchesse has gott, and that Newcastel is a better place to stay in on Sunday then Morpeth, and then I shall be able to see Tinmouth which other wise I should not have been able to have done, and this will not hinder me from being at Edinburge on Saturday the 22; there has falen a good deel of snow yesterday in the evening, and it was as hard a frost last night as ever I knew and continus still very cold, and if theis northerly winds continu I feare I may be at Edenburge before my goods that come by sea. This gos by the post so that I shall say no more.

(Addressed) For Colonel Legge.

[1679,] Nov. 28, Edinburgh.—I receved but this day yours of the 19 by Mr. Leyburne, and have not had tyme to write to you till now since my coming hither, for what with the great store of company is here, and some long letters I have been obliged to write, I have not had any

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

leasur to my self, and truly I have had as handsome a reception here as I could desire, and have great reason to be satisfied with it, and really am so, I see by yours that this Villan Willoughby does a great deele of harme, and am of your mind that the more it is examined and enquired into the better for me. I find some here thinke that the rebellious crue in the west of this country are a preparing for another rebellion, for there is laytly come out of Holland hither one Cameron, a minister, who they say is yett a higher flyer then Welsh, he holds feild conventicles, and promises armes and officers from Holland; there will be endeavors to take him, but I believe it will be hard to do it. You will I beleve have heard of a difficulty was made by some here about my sitting in counsell, I had not tyme to write to you of it till now, and hope before this can come to you that his Majesty will have settled it as I desier, and I beleve that those that made that difficulty, are sorry to have done it, which is all I have now to say to you.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1679,] Nov. 29.—I did not write to you by the last post to lett you know I had received yours of the 19, resolving to stay till this day that I might heare what had been done by the grand jury in the Citty, as to Lord Shaftsbury, and I find it was not without reason that he gave order to have his house gott ready for him, since they found Ignoramus, which was to be expected from such a jury, and as they did their parts to save their freind, so I hope in God, his Majesty and those he trusts will be as diligent to save the monarky and them selves, and will make use of this oportunity to do it, beleve me, he has it in his hands. I have written my mind freely to Lord Hyde upon this subject, to whose letter I refer me, having not tyme to say what might be sayd to you upon this subject. Presse vigorous counsellors and lett people consider, never was a fairer oportunity for the monarky to lay hold on to save, and recover its self; sure now my friends aught to presse for my returne, speake with them about it. As for what you say concerning Newcastle, I thinke it would be very well, if that towne, or some place neare it, that would command the river, might be fortified, but of this more another tyme.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1679,] Dec. 4, Edinburgh.—I received last night yours by Turner and this morning another from you by Calvert, and was very much surprised to find by them the Duke of Monmouth coming to London without his Majesty leave and his refusing to obey his comands, I shall say no more to you now by the post but shall send Calvert back within a day or two, and then shall say more to you, tell Lord Feversham I shall then write to him.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1679,] Dec. 4, Edinburgh.—I have now severall of yours to answer of the 23 and 27 which I thought to have done by the last post, but the counsell satt so long as I had not tyme. I am glad, by the first to heare his Majesty calls some people by their right nams, and hope he will do as well as speake, with such kind of cattel that have betrayd him as well as mee. I have had a letter without a name, advising me (as you adverticed me I should) to write to Lord Feversham and to make mention of the person you named to me, but I do not desire to begin, after the usage I have had, it being their part to do it, and tho I have writen to him, have taken no notice of any such thing. I am glad to see some others are making way to come of, it is a good signe, and I shall refuse none. I find by yours of the 27 that you had had myne by Crafts, and hope that such answers as his Majesty has from the Commons, and the

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

propositions have been made by Lord of Essex and others, will awaken his Majesty and make him take such measures as becomes him, and that speedily, for otherwise it will be too late, and let people have a care of seeming expedients, and cutting of a feather, for neither of them are good, especially at this time of day. I long very much to hear what will become of Lord Stafford, and after his trial is over I hope no time will be lost and that his Majesty will take those resolute measures as may save him self and the monarchy, which will both be in great danger if he let them sit any time longer, I like very well the proposal of an act of general pardon, and shall do my part towards the advancing of it when it shall be a proper time.

[1679,] Dec. 6.—I received on Sunday yours of the 29 of the last month, and by it was very glad to find as you will easily believe, that I am like to be sent for so soon, and truly in point of reason I cannot see why it should not be, being confident nothing could encourage the Loyal party more and persuade them, and all the world, that his Majesty is in earnest, then the sending for me, and I am sure that nothing can be more the real interest of the Ministry and the Duchess of Portsmouth, then to have me with him. I see both by other letters as well as by yours that the Duke of Monmouth continues doing things every day as occasion offers its self to exasperate his Majesty against him, sure it must be very great indiscretion in him or undervaluing to the last degree the government to behave him self as he does, and if the Duke of Grafton be made Master of the horse the world will be satisfied his Majesty is still displeased with him, which is but necessary, because people began to think he was coming into favor again. I am as sensible as you can desire how much you have suffered in your private fortune, by keeping Portsmouth for these last years as you have done, and Churchill has told me how uneasy it has made you in your affairs, and therefore if I be not sent for presently I shall be content you part with it to Lord Noel, he being so very honest a man, and so well principled. After I had written thus far I received the letters of the 1st, and by them see the Duchess of Portsmouth and Lord Hyde and Mr. Seymour had pressed again very earnestly for my being sent for, and give me hopes that by this it may be positively resolved, so that till I hear again I shall say no more. I hear the Duke of Richmond is Master of the horse and Duke of Grafton Colonel of the guards. I see my being to be sent for is talked on publicly at London, for several people by there (?) last letters have had it written to them.

[1679,] Edinburgh. Dec. 8.—I received Saturday yours by the groom, and am very glad to find by it his Majesty sticks firm to his resolutions, and am of your mind that, nothing but that can secure him, and am clearly of our friends opinion concerning the City. I see the Duke of Monmouth persists in his disobedience, and cannot help having a fancy in my head upon it, which is that he has got it into his head to drive things if he can to a republic hoping then to make his self their general and Statholder as the Prince of Orange is in Holland, for I cannot think he could have behaved himself so insolently to his Majesty as he has done had he not had some such thoughts in his head. Things here continue quiet and that these feild conventiclers may not yett again be troublesome Lieutenant General Dalziel is sent down in to the west to Glasco with some of the troops to keep all things there quiet. I have said what was proper to Mr. Prince, and sure what the Duke of Monmouth has done and what others of that gang are doing will confirm his Majesty in his resolutions, for should they be altered now all were gone, and I hope if necessary this will be often repeated to him, which is all I shall say at this time

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

When you send expresses at any tyme, except the businesse required a very trust messenger, I thinke the best, cheepest and quickest way is by a flying packett as they call it here which coms a day soner then any on man can come.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1679,] December 11.—It is but a dismal prospect of affairs you give me by yours of the 4, which I receved on Thursday night, but to late to answer it then, it is what I may expect, and am prepared to receive it with that resignation which becomes a Christian, there is one part of it which would be more greves to me then all the rest, which is the command some would have his Majesty lay on me, that being the only thing I cannot obey, and I feare it is what my enemys will presse the most. I know they have all along represented to him what prejudice my being of the persvation I am, has done his affairs, and by that means hope to cover their owne faults, and because some of his minesters have downe right betrayd him, and others have taken wrong measurs, must all be layd at my doore, this is hard, and yett harder that therfor I must do a thing against concience, or els be reproched with obstinaty ruining my King, country, and family. I could, if I would, look back a good way, and shew the true ground of all our misfortunes, but that would be to long for a letter, I shall only desire you to remember the condition things were in, but in the beginning of last sommer, and whether if affairs had been well managed then, and but those resolutions followed, which they know were taken when I came first from Scotland, if his Majesty had not been in all liklihood still in a good and thriving condition, and I still amongst you, and you know I could not hinder some steps which have been made, nor could I ever suspect both his Majesty and my self could have been betrayd as we have, and now because others have brough[t] things to the passe they are, I must be prest to sacrifice my concience, and my honnor, and be thought a knave by all the world; I thanke God as long as I preserve them, I can beare any thing with pacience, and why should not I be as carfull of them both, as well as the old Earl of Dorset was at Edghill for preserving one of them, when being commanded by the King my father, to go and carry the Prince and my self, up the hill, out of the battell, refused to do it, and sayd he would not be though[t] a coward for never a king's sonne in Christendom. You are a man of concience, as well as honnor, do but thinke what a base meane thing it would be in me, besides the sin of it, to dissemble, and deny my religion, I have by God's grace never to do so damnable a thing, and lett my freinds take their measurs accordingly, and not deceve themselves and me, and lett them thinke of other ways then that of saving the monarky, they may yett be found if people will be resolut now is the tyme, for if there be any delay it will be to late. You see all things are a runing on to a common wealth, and if care be not taken the Citty will be irrecoverably lost, and his Majesty authority brought so very low, as not to be recovered, so that no tyme must be lost by his Majesty, to put a stop to all these destructive proceedings, and there is but one way which is to put an end to this sessions, to stand by him self and his old freinds, which is all I shall say till I heare how it has gone with Lord Staford.

If Captain Gunnman be not come away pray send me some good tea by him.

[1679,] Dec. 13.—I find by yours of the 6, which I had on Sondag, and by what I had at the same tyme from Lord Hyde and Mr. Seymour, that after all the hops you had of my being presently sent for, that that is not to be, and concequently new measurs are taken, and both agree from what hand it coms, I never could understand his politiks, and am sure they were never calculated for the meridian of a monarchy, and tho he be such a hero in a House of Lords, and has a tong which makes him considered there, he is lesse then other men out of his sphere, and will I doubt run the King into those inconveniences that I feare will be fatal to the Crowne, and even to his Lordship to, tho he dos not thinke it. I am glad Lord Hyde has found him out, he at least will be no longer deceived by him, I confesse I am to seek for the reasons which he has used to prevaile with his Majesty not to lett me go to him, and tho he says he is for my being sent for when a Parliament is called, I cannot help thinking that if that should be, (which yett I hope will not) he would then find some other reason to hinder it. I am glad Captain Coply is at Hull for I look on him as an honnest man ont [one] that will be my friend. Lord Argil's tryal began yesterday, and their forms in the Justice Court are so tedious, that they could not make an end of it then, but will as I beleve this evening, and have reason to beleve the jury will find the bill, and not Ignoramus, and that that Little Lord will be once againe at his Majesty's mercy. I have not tyme to write to Mr. Seymour now but shall send you a letter for him by the next post.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Since I wrot this I have had an account that the jury, of which the Marquis of Montrose was Chancelor as they call them here, have found Lord Argile guilty of treason and other crimes, so that now he is absolutely in his Majesty's hands.

[1679,] Edinburgh, Dec. 14.—It was not proper for me to answer yours I receved some days since by Lewen by the post, it is your groome I send with these, and shall keep Lewen yett some day before I send him back. I see by your last that Dorislaus complaints make it the more necessary to have the letters sent safe when they have any thinge of concequence in them, but thinke a flying paquett, except in very extraordinary occations, are better then messengers, coming faster, and lesse chargable. I am glad to heare of the preparations are making to lodg the troops where you mention for by that tyme this coms to you the prorogation must be declared, to prevent the members coming up to London. When that is over I hope his Majesty will continu his resolution of sending for me, by the tyme he resolved when I came away, for by that tyme I shall be prety well instructed with the affairs of this Kingdome, and be able I hope to shew his Majesty how this country may be both confirmed in their duty to him, and made very usfull for his service, which may be done as well when I am with his Majesty, nay better, then when I am here, and to begin it and sett it in a good way I must be with his Majesty, for things of this nature cannot well be understood by letter. I live here as cautiously as I can, and am very carefull to give offence to none, and to have no partialitys and preach to them laying a side all privat animositys and securig the King his owne way. None shall have reason to complaine of me, and tho some of either party here might have hoped I should have shewd my partiality for them, and some of my freinds have been of opinion it had been best for me to have done so, and by it have secured one side to me, yett I am convinced it was not fitt for me to do it, it being no way good for his Majesty's service which I can make out by many reasons, which would be to long for a letter. I find the generality of the best men here much troubled at the indulgence the Duke of Monmouth gott for the Phanatikks here after they had been beaten, and say it will encourage them to another rebellion. I am of that opinion, tho I do not thinke it proper to take it from them till they forfitt it againe, which they will certainly do if great care be not taken to prevent their rising in to arms. Be sure to prease my being sent for at the tyme named. I write to Lord Sunderland and Mr. Hyde to the same purpose, the soner I know it is the better, that one may have tyme to prepare for such a winter's journey, and you must have tyme also to do your part towards it where you are, for you know it will be impossible to have so many coaches here as will be necessary. I wrot this in the morning before diuer, and then receved yours of the 10th, by which I find the Parliament is to be prorogued till November next, which you may be sure was very pleasing newse to me. I do not at all wonder that some of the councell spake against the doing it, and easily beleve Sir William was one of them, knowing his principles very well. I do aprove very well of the proposal you make of the Dutchesses and my coming by sea, she is of the same mind and had rather be five or six days upon the water then go so tedious a journey againe by land, and then the winds that are good for the river are faire weather winds, so that I am absolutly for going by sea, and therefore have written that Gunman, Sanders and the Kitchen may be sent to Leith to be there by that tyme in January, his Majesty would have me come away, for tho I do not desire to sett out hence soner yett I thinke it will not be proper for me to be away longer from his Majesty and by that tyme I shall have informed my self as well as I can of affairs here, and have a proposall ready for to offer to his Majesty when I wayte on him, I having neither power nor instructions to do any thing els. I have many letters to write and so shall say no more to you now.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

I suppose this letter may find you at Portsmouth, and because I do not know what what dificultes may be made for my being sent for, should be glad you could make a step to London to see that settled.

[1679,] Dec. 25.—I had on Thursday yours of the 18th, but the Councell satt so very long that night that I had not tyme after it was up to write to you as I intended, nor can I now hinder my self from writing by this post, without staying to see what newse the tomorrow's post will bring us, being out of all pacience, to think the King will give the Commons leave to finish the remonstrance they will make, and were preparing, after the votes and what passed in this house this day sennight. Sure now no more can be expected, and I hope all temporising councells will be laid aside, and resolutions taken and vigorously persued, els his Majesty will be inevitably ruined, and the monarky destroyd, and sure those violent gentilmen will be sent home by that tyme this coms to you, I am sure they aught to be, and I sent for, or els the old Cavaliere and truly Loyal men will hardly thinke his Majesty will be in earnest, I beleve my freind will, and aught to presse it but I feare Lord Hallifax will not be for it, tho now one would thinke in reason he should, for he will want me to suport him, and the government, and if great care be not taken of the Citty, there may be great danger from thence, for I know some go about to perswade the Citty to sett up a republike, flattring them that then they will and aught to gouerne the whole nation, and you see it was for no good intent that Bethel would have brought in the Duke of Buckingham to have been a free man of London, now sure is the tyme or never for those who are truly Loyal to the King to perswade him to stand to him self, and to give him resolut councells, for a litle longer all people will be dishartend, and the infection will spread ouer all his Kingdoms by this day's worke here. You see how easily the rabble is perswaded to follow ill example, and that care is taken from where you are to gett any thing done to make a noyse, for this day some of the scolars, and prentices designed to have burnt a pope, and when the regents dissuaded their Scolars from doing it they answered, why may not we do it here as well as it was done at London. The Magistrats being informed they had entred into a bond to do it, sent this morning and ceased some seven of the Scolars, and the Lord Generall sent up into the towne two companys that there might be no tumult, how ever a few of the boys this morning brough[t] up a Pope out of a by lane into the high street, which some officers seing went toward them, upon which they ran away, having first sett fire to it, and so this days worke ended, which I beleve will make a great noyse where you are, tho all be very quiet.

MS. A. 1. 1. 1.
HARL. OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

[1679,] Dec. 28.—I receved this day yours of the 23, and now shall say but little to you, being great expectation what these extraordinary proceedings in both houses will produce, as for what you wrot about N. Nicholas, though I forgott to answer you as to him I told Churchill of it, by whom you will by this have knowne that I aproued of it. I have not tyme to say more.

[Endorsed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1679-80,] Jan. 2. Edinburgh.—I receved yours of the 23 of last month on Tuesday last, and by it see you then knew nothing of the putting of that till the end of this month, that should have been at the begining of it, the reasons given have not convinced me, but since his Majesty thinks it for his service I must be satisfyd, but I hope it will be put of no more, and if you can be at London before the end of this month to presse his Majesty if need be, that I be not then againe disapointed; you will easily beleve that those sever orders and proclamations which are latly come out against the poore Catholiks, do give me very much trouble, for that they, nor indeed no Christians deserve such usage, it will have no other effect then to ruine many an honest worthy man that has either, self or father, faithfully served our family, for those that some thinke to please with this will be satisfyd with nothing but the destruction of the monarky, and I am confident you will that that this will not hinder the petitions nor make that kind of people slacken in any manner their rebellious proceedings and I know it will do and dos me harm, tho some of my freinds at London beleve the contrary, and have write me word so; and I cannot help thinking that it was one of the strangest things in the world to lett Somersett house and St James be searched by the Justice of Peace when so ever they please, as if his Majesty were not as much master there as in Whitehall. I have sayd enough already on this subject, and so shall say no more, of this nor any other.

[1679-80,] Jan. 5.—I find by yours of the 27th of last month that people take all the pains they can to tax me with severity in this affaire of Lord Argile. 'Tis not the first wrong of that kind which has been done, as those who are acquainted with the laws of the country knew very well, and he has but to thanke him self for what has happned to him; and to shew you what wrong is done me, if I had not hindred his being fallen on in Parliament they had brought him there in as ill a condition as to his fortune as he is now. I am glad to heare that his Majesty talks of raising some more men, and of sending for Dumbarton's Regiment and should be glader to heare it were done; I hope the battallion of the gards that is at Tanger will be sent for also, and tho the Castel of Chester should not be found to be strong enough to have a magazin there, I hope however it will be garrisond againe, for it would still serve to keepe that country in awe, and to be a place for the loyal party to rendezvous at in case of needs. I do agree with you in what you say concerning the Commanders in Chief, and feare that if our councelors have not courage enough to lett me be sent for they will not go through with the worke they have begun. I do not see at all how Lord Argil's having gott away should any way furnish an argument to keepe me here, for all things are very quiet, and like to continu so, and the government here gett more strength euery day, but what will all that signify, if things do not go well where you are, and so long as Lord Halifax continues in such credit, I can expect no good. I could wish Mr. Seymour were at London, he might do much good. I have writen to him to go thither and have sent the letter to Lord Conway to send to him, I hope the two forraigne ministers you named, with the help of Lord Halifax will not whedel us into a war, if they do I know the monarky will be in great danger, and they not the better for it. Since the writing of this I have receved yours of the 31st by which I see you are now master of the Ordinance, of which I wish you joy, and that Lord Noel has Portsmouth, and am glad you have left it in so good hands, and so many sure officers in it, I am glad that his Majesty has sent for Mr. Seymour. I send you here enclosed the letter for him if he be come to towne, you may give it to him, if he be not, lett Lord Conway have it, to send him; I will by the next post send orders to Sir Allen for to pay Tom Jones, and an order for a pention for Mrs. Hilliard, I have not tyme to say more it being a Councell day.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

[1679-80,] Jan. 6.—I have receved both yours of the 30, and send you herewith an account was given me of the blazing star that you may let Mr Flamsted have it, and will speake to Captain Sanders to send the observations he has made of it, if he have not already done it. I am glad to heare Lord Hatton is desirous to have George Littleton with him, I thinke he will do very well there, and N. Nicholas much the fitter for the Lieutenant Colonel's place. Pray presse his Majesty for Min. Eliott, being of your mind that his stay on shoar will do him no good. I cannot immagin why that person should wonder I have not followed the advice was sent me in a letter from an unknowne hand, tho I guesse it was from Mrs. W., I had another to the same purpose this last weeke, but will not follow their directions, for if it be real, why should not you or Lord Feversham be spoken to, and then I can answer, for after the usage I have had, I will not be so meane as to begin, which I see the person that wrot the letters dos design, and I do beleve out of good will to me, but I will not follow hir advice. You will easily beleve how impacient I am to heare what past on Monday, for upon that depends our all, and till then I shall say no more.

[1679-80,] Jan. 12.—On Tuesday I receved yours of the 5 and in it one from Lord Noel to which I shall send you an answer by the next. I am glad to heare Mr. Seymour is come to towne, and that he is of the mind you say he is, I hope he will not be altrd by the discources of any there, and make no doubt if he continu firme, his Majesty will take right measurs. Pray do your part to keep Lord Hyde and Mr. Seymour good freinds much depends upon that, I hear that Lord Halifax, and other of the great men have privat conferences with Lord Shaftesbury or some others of that party as Essex and. Montegu, and are making faire weather with them, pray enquier into the truth of this, and lett me know it. I shall say nothing to you of Lord Argile till I heare againe from where you are of him, only the ministers in his country have followed his example and none of them have taken the test, by which one may judg what his loyalty is he so much braged on, and by that one may guess what he ment, when he sayd in his explanation, would agree with his loyalty. I have not tyme to say more, none of any kind.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1679-80,] Jan. 13th.—This is only to tell you that I have receved yours by Crafts, he came just as I had dined, by the next you shall heare from me againe, lett Mr. Hyde know I have had his letter, and that he shall sone heare from me, in answer to it, I have not tyme to say more being just come from councell, and the Dutchesse stays for me at Lord Chancellor's where we are to suppe.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1679-80,] Edinburgh. Jan. 14.—I receeved some days since yours of the 1, with Wettwang's note in it, and did not write soner to you then, now it being not necessary, and beleve you were surprisd as well as I at the putting of my returne. I hope now it will be no longer delayd and that on the 26th the yachts will be sent away for me, and that all the petitions which I heare are ready to be given to his Majesty will not make him alter his mind for their meeting sooner then in Nouember; for should he now yeald in any little thing it would spoile all and encourage the factious and seditious to presse on their unreasonable and destructive ends to the monarky, where as if his Majesty continu now firme to his resolutions they will be quite dishartned, and become better subjects, for now nothing but vigorous resolutions and actions can save the monarky, and it may be done yett, therefore pray talke with Lord Sandwith and Mr. Hyde of this, and if it be necessary encourage them to be stedy to the proroguing of the Parliament till November, and for the sending for me on the 26th, for it is high tyme I were with you.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1679-80,] Edinburgh, Jan 14.—I send you here enclosed a letter for Lord Noel, in answer to that you sent me from him. I feare Colonel Wesley is drownd going from hence into Holland in a Dutch ship; if that be, I thinke it were of concerne that a good man had his regement, for those troupes ought to have loyal men to command them, otherwise there can be no good expected from them, but the contrary. This day I had notice from Lannark that on Thursday last at none about forty horse and twenty foot well armed came into that towne and there publikly read a rebellious declaration and fixt it on the Crosse, and then went their ways. I have not read it, but I am told it is much after the purpose of the like declaration was put up after the same manner at Sanquhar before I came last hether. Duke Hamilton came and told me of it this morning and shewd me a copy of it, but it was long and so ill a hand I could not read it, he desirs that some of the troupes may be sent theether to quarter; it is his owne towne. Since I wrote this I heard the paper read at Councell, it is a very villanous one, and some troupes are ordred thether. Lett not this be used as a reason to keep me here, for it is none, this being nothing but what those rebellious villans have done severall tymes. I have not tyme to say more.

[1679-80,] Jan. 16.—On Thursday last I wrot a note to you to lett you know I had receved yours of the 9th by Crafts, which with the letter I had from Mr. Hyde, made me resolve to send Churchill, to presse my being sent for, which I looke to be as essencially necessary for his Majesty service, as my owne good and satisfaction; now is the tyme or never, for if I be not called home now, I shall have little hops on't, and must expect sooner or later to be ruind, for absent, my freinds cannot long suport me, and my enemys will be the more encouraged to persecute me. I have instructed him so fully as to this and what concerns me, that I need not say much more to you about it, having charged him at large to discourse and advise with you upon it, his Masjesty must now take bold and resolut counCELLs, and stick to them, and who dars advise him to them without I be with him, to help to suport them; and beleve me other measurs must be taken, and not departed from, and one would thinke

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

the meassurs of the former ministers should not be followed. You know some of them did make good projects enough, but their harts failed them, when it came to it, and I cannot help remembring one thing, which is, that the very same faults Lord Arlington comitted, and the same fearfull steps he trod, haue been followed by all those who have succeded him, I meane Lord Danby and Lord Sunderland, tho still at their first enterance they found fault with the other's timorousnesse and the wrong meassurs he had taken, which to some of them have proved as fatal as to his Majesty, and methinks that they come after them, whosever they be, should not steer the same course, to be lost upon the same rocks but should steer another course, and looke out for another passage, which no doubt may be found, to gett to on's port. I am glad that Portsmouth is yett in your hands, for by yours of the 11th I receved this day, I see there is great liklyhood of disorders, which I shall not feare, tho there should be any, if his Majesty would be but stedy, and how that is to be hoped for, without I be with him I do not know, therefore my being sent for must be prest, and if one cannot gett it for good and all, why not for a few days, but of this Churchill will say more to you, I am sure anybody that is not for my being with his Majesty cannot be throughly my friend. Talke of this to the Doctor, what he says to the King has waight.

I send you here enclosed a letter for the Doctor, speake to him as sone as you can, and see to gett him to presse his Majesty to send for me to him.

[1679-80,] Jan. 19.—Yours of the 12th I receved but this night after I came from councell ; it should have been here on Friday morning but I suppose the waters being out and the badnesse of the ways made the post so long a coming, and the same reason I beleve is the reason why the Saturday's letters are not yett arrived. I see Mr. Seymour is a true and a bold freind, and lays hold of all opertunitys to serve one, of which I am as sensible as he can desire and as he shall see if ever in my power, but so long as Lord Halifax is in such creadit I shall not dare flatter my self with the thoughts of being sent for, till it be done. I hope what happened at Lanerck will not have any waight if it should be used as an argnment to keep me here, for those impudent rogues disperst so sone as they had done it, and there has been no more newse of them, nor of any of that rebellious tribe since and all things are very quiet, they were but 28 horse and 16 foott. I have not tyme to say more now.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1679-80,] Jan. 23.—I had yours of the 19th by six last night, in which there was two much sayd to answer then by the post. I am glad the Parliament is dissolved, but very sorry another is called so sone, since I look upon it as only puting of the evil day for two months, and am of your mind that these temporising and half councells must in a short tyme destroy any govvernment, and much soner ours that already is so weake, that one blow more knocks it dead, and what good can be expected when tis so vissible that nothing but feare made the Parliament be called so sone, and can one expect any alteration in them for the better, I am sure I cannot, only it may make them go more cunningly to worke, and so compasse their designe of ruining the monarchy with more ease. Oxford is a better place for their meetting than Westminster at this tyme, but still tis a Parliament and the government is weake, and can never recover without some breathing tyme, which it can never have, when one sitts so very sone ; but it is called, and I feare that what I proposed

HARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

by Churchill will now hardly (?) take place, and that I shall not be sent for, and I am apt to beleve the last prorogation was made so short by Lord Hallifax, and some others, on purpose it might not be in my power when I heard of it to give my opinion to his Majesty upon the whole affaire, that they might the easier perswade him to have lett that sitt on, or call another as he has done, but of this no more till I heare how Churchill has sped, being still of the same opinion that without I be with his Majesty nothing can go well there. I confesse what you say of the message would be imposed upon Mr. Hyde to bring me, did some what surprise me, for I thought when there was a disolution such a cruel thing would not have been prest upon me, tho I thanke God I am prepared to receive it, as a suffering Christian ought to do, and with as much constancy as I can, and will endeavor to preserve a quiat mind by doing nothing that is mene or against my concience, and will still deserve the good opinion of my freinds, and lett them see I am very sensible of their standing by me, and know as much as you or any can, of the great obligations I have to Mr. Hyde, which he, if ever in my power, shall see, and you may be sure I shall take no notice to anybody of what you have sayd from him. And now I must say that except I be sent for to his Majesty I know I must look for all that is designed against me comming to passe, for if I and my freinds have not creadit enough to gett me sent for, then I am to expect to be used like a minor and to have such a bill as that passe, and indeed the last severity against me. I do not wonder that the Bishop you mention writing such a book as you speake of, if it be Dr. Barlow, as I heare from another hand, he always having had strange opinions, but should it be Dr. Gunning I should be surprised, or indeed any one that is a true sonne of the Church of England. I am sorry to see Lord Hallifax make such excuses and take such pretexts to do what he dos, he knowing very well he might have relyd on me, I having given him all the assurances of being his freind I could do. I shall now say no more to your letter, and if Churchill has not yett had his answer and be not come away, presse for my being sent for, for except that point can be gained, I see I must at last be infallibly ruined, and with me I feare will fall the monarchy.

[1679-80,] Jan. 25.—I wrot to you so latly that had it not been for a clause in Cressett's newse letter to me I should not have done it againe till I had heard from you of Churchill's being arrived, he says that tis confidently reported, his Majesty has sent a message to me, that except I go to Church, before the meeting of next Parliament he will past the bill of exclution. This is what he says, and the remarke I make upon it, is, that if any such advice has been given to his Majesto those that have done it, have braged of it, and told it on purpose to do me prejudice, and am very confident such advice has been given him, by the reports being spread abroad; do you enquire a little in to it. All things are quiat here, and like to continu so if there be no sturs in England. The Phanatiks and party here as they call them are much dejected by the disolution of the Parliament.

I have ordred Sir Allen to advice with you about giving some thing to Cressett.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1679-80,] Edinburgh Jan. 26.—Before I say any thing els to you lesst I forgett it, I must tell you that Mr. Fantry here, has desired me to write to you in favor of his brother, for whom I spake when I was in England last, that he might be joyned in commission with his father, or that his father might have leave to resign his place up to him, which last it seems now he desires, and having spoken already for him I could not refuse to do it againe now. I am told he has officiated for his father now severall years, and that he understands the place, of which you are the best judg, for if he were not fitt for it, I would not recomend him to you, but if he be, what he desires seems but reasonable to me, but you are the best judg of it. The letters which should come this day, are not yett arrived, by those which came last post my being to be sent for was much talked on, but I had it not from those I should have heard it, and till I am sent for, shall not beleve it, and I beleve Lord Halifax will do what he can to hinder it, and may chance now to make use of an argument from this country to do it, which is that there is a liklyhood of the Whiggs rising in arms againe, there is such a talke runs about, and I am apt enough to beleve they have a mind to do it, and are a preparing for it, and seuerall honest gentlemen, both from the S. and S.W. parts are of that belef and have sent me word on't, and that they are encouraged to it from England and are made beleve Lord Shaftsbury's association is signed and entered into by most countys of England. These reports are indvstriosly spread abroad to hasten the party here, and to have them in a readinesse, but I hardly thinke they will rise yett, this not being a good tyme of yeare for them, and that they expect the Parliamēt in England to see what that will do, before they stir; however all care is taken that can be, and I beleve that my being sent for would rather hinder it then advance it, for it would take away their hops of any sturs from thence, or assistance either; and if when I should be away from hence it should happen, I should be more significant and could do more good coming from England then if I had not sturd from hence, and could be here in a weekes tyme after they should be up, for a flying pacquet would bring downe the newse in three days and in five after that I could easily be here, which would be as sone as the forces could be drawne together. I say all this to you to arme you with reasons if the noyse of a liklyhood of a rising here should be vsed as an argument to hinder my being sent for. Duke Hamilton is very zealous for the finding out those who were at Lanark, and maks great professions of duty to his Majesty and says that tho he has not taken the test, that he will serve his Majesty as faithfull as those who have. After I had writen this I received yours of the 19th, and by it see the wind runs round the compas, and that it gos back against the son, which you know is for the most part a signe of fowle weather, however, if it cleere up never so little to the N.W., I shall be willing to ventur to sea, tho it blow hard still. I have been vsed all my life to ruffe weather, and can ply to windward, and you know do not love to beare up. The Councell sat so late that I have not tyme to say more now, nor so much as to read over my letter.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

[1679-80.] Edinburgh, Jan. 27.—The expresse you sent made good hast for he arrived here on Sunday before diner, and brought very welcome newse. What past in the city I am sure has rejoiced all honest men, and I am not at all sorry that the Lord Major shewd him self in his true coulours, for now he is known, and his Majesty's power in the City and their loyalty is better seen, by the Major's behaving him self as he did, and I hope it will encourage his Majesty to stand by him self, since he sees there are many thousands that have not bowed their knees to Baal. I shall now expect the yachts with great impaciency and if the wind continu as it is may expect them on Friday or Saturday next very well, and when they are once here, you may easily beleve shall not stay long, so that I shall say little to you now, hoping to be with you so sone, only as to what you wrote to me about Lord Hawly's place, it is long that I have resolved to take none in it, if it came vacant, and have given that answer to severall persons of quality that have prest me for it, so that if my mind were changed, which it is not, I were tyde up, so that this cannot be done, but I hope it will be in my power to give you greater marks of my kindnesse then that. I am sure you deserve it from me, and * [1679-80,] Jan. 29.—I was in hope before this to have had some account from Churchill of what he has done, having by the last post heard of his arrival at London, and had it not been to have written to you about the yacht, I should have done it now, and may; if Gunnman be not come away see to hasten him so sone as you can, and lett me know what the mistery of his being so long a coming has been. All things are quiat here which is all I shall say till I heare what I am like to trust to.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1679-80,] Edinburgh, Jan. 30.—The expresse that brought me yours of the 26th rode hard, for he was here by eleven last night. I am glad the Prorogation is so well over and tho it be not for so long a tyme as I thought it would, am not allarumd by it, since I find his Majesty stedy in the maine. To morrow I hope the yachts may be here, tho it has blown very ha[r]d this day since none; when they are once arrived, I shall lose no tyme in getting on board, for I long to be with you, I intend to send the waggons by sea, it will cost lesse as they tell me and will be soner with you. I have not tyme to say more now.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1679-80,] Edinburgh, Feb. 3.—Yours by the flying packett came hither but on Sunday morning at five, but the which (sic) I saw the yachts could not come away soner then Wensday or Thursday last. They are not yett come, nor can I yett expect them this day or two, the wind having been contrary all Saturday and this day. Sunday and Monday, it was good for them, but blew hard; in the meane tyme I am a getting all things ready to lose no tyme when they arrive. I had before I receved your last, upon the first notice of my being sent for, given directions for the having S^t James's prepared for me. I did consider of what you sayd against my being there, but have other reasons that wayd so far with me, as to make me resolve to be there, and therefore continu of the same mind to go to S^t James's. When I see you I shall tell you my reasons they being to long for a letter and not proper for to go by the post.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1679-80,] Feb. 10.—I had yours of the 4th, and till Church come shall say little to you, who by the letters come this night I see I may expect tomorrow or next day. Pray gett so sone as you can, and send it to me, an account of the management and pentions of the Chest at Chat-ham, and speake to Mr. Pepys to send me a copy of his relation of his Majesty escape from Worcester, and tho it should not be quite finished lett me have as much as he has done of it.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

1680, May 6. The Tower.—William Hickman and Sir Christopher Musgrave, Commissioners of the Ordnance, to Col. George Legge, Lieut.-Gen. of the Ordnance. Desire him to take steps for a general survey of the Ordnance, powder, shot, and other stores in Guernsey and Jersey, and to return to them perfect books of accounts thereof.

* Part of letter missing.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1680, May 18. Tangier.—Fra. Povey to Col. George Legge, Governor of Portsmouth, &c. The several testimonies I have had of your honour's kindness to me obliged me to acquaint your honour of the affairs of Tanger. Your honour knew well the Pleasant fields of Tanger taken in by the famous Teviott. But now I am sorry that I have the reason to acquaint your honour that Charles, Henrietta, and Giles forts are taken and the Pleasant fields sprinkled with the blood of 117 men of Charles fort, the 14th instant. I should have acquainted your honour of the ill-managed sally which was made from Tangier before, but however think it not too late. On the 9th instant Charles fort acquainted the Castle, that by signs given those of Henrietta fort could not hold out 24 hours, the soldiers mutinying, and they likewise feared a mine. His Excellency [Kirke] presently called a Council of War to endeavour the release of the men. A flag of truce was immediately dispatched to the Alcade acquainting him that his Excellency would give up the fort if the men might come away bag and baggage. The Alcade answered he did not value stone walls, it was the men he desired, and acquainted the ambassadors he wondered his Excellency lay still and did not endeavour to prevent their intrenchments and relieve those brave fellows in the forts. Upon return of the flag his Excellency called to Charles fort with the speaking trumpet desiring Captain Tralany and Capt. Senjons [St. John] to acquaint Henrietta fort that his Excellency would do his endeavour to relieve them by sally within a day or two; but that night the Commander and the soldiers gave it up unknown. The 13th his Excellency was acquainted by Capt. Tralany that the men of their fort would leave that likewise on that day, and begged his Excellency to consider of it. A council of war immediately sat, and it was concluded that the next morning they would sally out with 350 and meet those of Charles fort upon sign given from Charles fort, which was accordingly done, the 'forelone' consisting of 70 men commanded by Captain Heums of the Lord Dumbarton's regiment, the body by Major Boynton consisting of 200 men with a right and left wing consisting of 80 men. About 7 of the clock in the morning the sign was given, but the men were not commanded to advance, to a general dissatisfaction of all people. The poor men of Charles fort finding no men coming despaired, considering that they could not return because they had demolished the fort; at last ventured and were upon the enemies' trenches before any man was ordered till they were hotly engaged. The 'forelone' which had 400 yards to advance run every man, and like brave men beat off the enemies' horse bravely and likewise the foot; but at last the foot fell in upon those of Charles fort which could not get over the trenches being three and three fathoms deep, and cut them down in a minute. Captain Tralany with 117 men was killed and all their heads cut off, and I think every man had a thousand wounds. I never saw such a barbarous sight. Captain Senjons [St. John] though shot through the body got in with about 48 men; a lieutenant and ensign, 13 men and a little boy were taken prisoners. All this while those brave men of the 'forelone' killed the Moors, but the body ran away and not above 5 officers stood, he that should failed as formerly. And had not the barriers of the palisadoes been immediately shut, the body had come away and the 'forelone' perished; but as soon as they saw they could not retreat further, with a great deal of persuasion they advanced and brought off the 'forelone.' Four men of the 'forelone' were killed, a lieutenant shot through the body but will recover, and several of the body wounded. The vice-admiral manned 4 or 5 boats with barricades and went to relieve Giles fort and called the men, but the sergeant not understanding would not quit it. But one man went down and swum off, and Sir Boncher Ray's (Wrey's) brother, a volunteer with the vice-admiral, going too near to save the man, was shot dead, which was all the harm done to the boat. In this engagement we played our ordnance and destroyed their horse much; I likewise played the mortar piece upon Charles fort and destroyed them like flies. Here is no person that knew how to use it, if I had not undertook it. And I thank God I have prospered in my designs. I humbly beg your honour's pardon that I have not sent your honour an account of the stores, but hope your honour will pardon me by reason of this troublesome time.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

[Many letters in the succeeding months of this year, and at later dates, on the progress of various works at Portsmouth, written by Edw. Clarke, John Duxbury, &c.; with letters from the Ordnance Office on the same subject.]

1680, June 25. Tangier.—Major John White to Col. Legge. Capt. Fowler promised to deliver the letter. Is serious and in earnest in representing their condition; they have neither men nor money to put the town in a posture to resist their powerful enemies, their forts being taken, &c. Though there is a cessation for four months, the enemy have their guards of horse and foot within a carbine's shot of the town walls, and set their sentries upon the hills about so that they can see men walking in the streets. All the advantages are on the enemy's side. Unless a great supply of men is sent before the end of the truce it will be a hard pull with them. Calls God to witness that he would rather die in defending his king's interest than dispute with death in his bed. Cannot have less than 1,000 horse and 4,000 foot to beat them in the field; otherwise an ambassador should be sent to treat for peace, and to give them such sum of money in powder and arms for a considerable space of ground to feed cattle, and where stones can be dug to fortify the town, and make an end of the Mole. This will be a cheaper way than sending armies there. The enemy have all the skill that any Christians have, and the gunners and engineers that the Great Turk had in the taking of Candy. The Argerines will assist them in everything to get the town out of English possession, for it is a scourge to them going in and out of the Straits. Writes this that it may be communicated to his royal highness and to the king, so that a speedy remedy may be ordered against the great storm the Moors are preparing. Sir Palmes Faireborne is very civil to him upon his royal highness' score.

1680, July 19. Tangier.—Fra. Povey to Col. George Legge, Major-General of the Ordnance in the Tower. After congratulations on Legge's promotion and some remarks on the defective state of the stores, &c., the writer proceeds:—Major Beckman is very well, but cannot employ himself as yet by reason our cessation obliges us not to fortify within or without. The Alcade is bringing down a considerable army, and it is generally believed that he will break the cessation. The horse that were intended for this place are very much wished for, and I do assure your honour if they do not come our foot will signify nothing. I could wish your honour would send a master gunner for this that is here is a most ignorant sot, and two thirds of the gunners are not fit, neither have they warrants for their places Sir Palmes Faireburne was pleased to give me a commission to be Captain Controller of the Train and Ordnance of this garrison; I hope your honour will add something more, in regard it is a place of honour.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1680, Sept. 23. Tangier.—Fra. Povey to Col. George Legge. The 11th instant, arrived here the ships consigned from the Office with stores which came very seasonable, in regard the cessation betwixt the Moors and this place was to be at an end the 13th instant. I have with great trouble and charge unloaded the most part, and hope yet in 7 or 8 days more to discharge them; but do assure your honour unless your kindness be shewed in helping me with money I can never subsist in this place. I have engaged every body that has money to help me, or otherwise could not have despatched my business. I cannot but acquaint your honour that here is great want of storehouse room, and that this Office is much abused here and no ways respected. I have solicited the Governor often, but can get nothing made fit for receiving arms, which are most unfit for service by reason there is no convenience. And more I could acquaint your honour but hope if there be a peace concluded before Christmas that if your honour will permit I would very gladly come for England to pass my accounts and settle my family; and I am sure I can save this Office a thousand pounds per annum. All this I humbly present to your honour's better consideration.

The cessation being expired the Moors withdrew and acquainted us that war was proclaimed against us, and accordingly fired upon us; and the 21st instant the Governor sallied out with 1,500 men, the horse included that were lately sent, and advanced to Pole fort, and was possessed of it without any loss. Immediately Major Beckman, who is a brave man, in four hours time pallisadoed the fort round and the same night 500 men lodged in the fort; 7 men were killed that night. The 22nd we sallied out again and advanced to the outlines, where the Scotch grenadiers behaved themselves bravely and beat the Moors out, and all the day maintained the ground. The Moors were very brave but were paid off and lost abundance of men. Our loss was not above 11 men, some few wounded. I hope your honour may have an account that I have not been idle, but have done my utmost to serve his majesty and our office, and I thank God I had my education from so honourable a people as are employed there. I do assure your honour I have not slept otherwise than upon a soft deal this 3 nights.

This day we sallied out but the Governor has not thought fit to hazard our men so far as the day before, because the Moors' force increases. But I hope Pole fort is very well secured and all the line from Pole fort to Fountain fort bottom. Here is great want of arms especially firelocks. Sir Palmes Fareburne would not believe but arms were sent now, and has accordingly acquainted the Lords Commissioners, notwithstanding I shewed him to the contrary I do assure your honour that letters are intercepted which I hope your honour will prevent, and had not a particular friend done me this kindness I could not have acquainted your honour of proceedings.

(This letter, it appears by a note on the cover, was forwarded by E. Pilton from Cadiz on 7 Oct. under cover to a Mr. Watts, near the Royal Exchange.)

1680, Oct. 7. Tangier at the fortress on Pole hill.—Major Martin Beckmann to Col. George Legge.

I hope to have finished this work about the beginning of the next month; the upper rampart is now almost cannon proof round, I hope to have some cannon mounted this week. I began to sink a counter-mine yesterday morning. The enemy's battery doth very much incommode the Mole, but the other two batteries have had but small effect on my work. I have no time to make a draught of this siege or attack. We have not above 6 cannons about town to fire, 3 are broken, no gunners worth bread, no garrison so neglected. Materials begin to grow rare.

[P.S.].—We have had about 145 killed and wounded.

[1680,] Nov. 2, Edinburgh.—James Duke of York to Col. George Legge. "I have not yett heard from you, I beleve your being at Portsmouth has been the occation of it, I heare that yours and Herbert's names have been up in the house of Commons, I hope his Majesty will stick to you both or els he will be in a very ill condition, for if he yeald in that they will not leaue one truly Loyal man about him. You have already heard of the good reception I had here, I assure you it was as much to my satisfaction as I could desire, all things are very quiet here, me thinks that should make his Majesty reflect, and see, that had his ministers there served him with as much faithfullnesse, and boldnesse, as those he has intrusted with his affairs of this country haue here, he would not have so many difficultys to struggle with as he has now, lett me heare often from you."

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1680,] Nov. 22, Edinburgh.—"You will have seen by myne of the 20th, that I sent by the post that I had then receved both yours by the expresses, but had not tyme then to say any thing upon them, which now I shall. As to yours of the 14th, I do cleerly agree with you that if his Ma. do not now stand by him self before any thing further be done, it will be to late to do it afterwards, and I feare he has few or none about him, whom he will harken to, that have Loyalty and courage sufficient to give him good advice, and I see great pains is taken I shal not be neare him, and I can never do one thing, you and others of my best freinds advice me to, for I should not be an honest man if I did, and what so ever misfortune I fall under I will still have the satisfaction to serve God like a Christien and my King like a Loyal subject, and lett my enemys prevaile never so much they can never take from me a quiet mind, tho I will leave nothing undone that a man of honnor can do, to preserve myself, and the monarky, for lett some flatter them selvs as they please, if I fall that falls to, without a miracle. I see you have had some conversations with Mrs. Walle you would do well to continu it, for I do realy beleve hir to be my friend, and tho hir Lady has playd me a dog trick, and is absolutly joynd with the Duke of Monmouth and Lord Shaftsbury, yett your speaking sometymys with Mrs. Walle may be of some use, tho I can never rely on what hir mistress says. I see when one is on the declyning hand some people that one has been always very kind to, are apt to take things ill. I am sure I never gave L^d Lumly the least reason to complaine of me, for I never did him a discourtesy, on the contrary shewd him all the countenance I could, and did sollicite his concerns when so ever there was occation. I know there are other of his freinds, make the same complaint, but with no reason, and now pray lett those you named to me of the House of Commons as Lord Carleton, Sir R. Grahams, Mr. Finch, Sir Charles Musgrave, and Sir Robert Markham know how sensibly I am of their apearing for me, and that if ever in my power I shall lett them and theirs see it. I do not remember to have ever done the least unkindnesse to the first of them, except he calls my not being satisfyd with his behavior in the long Parliament, as to the King; and as to Mr. Finch I could not help disaproving some things he did in the Admiralty, and thought others more in the right, but never did him an unkindnesse, and if there be other you have not named to me, that did apeare for me, assure them the same thing. You will easily beleve yours of the 16th was very pleasing to me, to find by it, the bill was thrown out of the Lords' house at the very first reading, but it was as bad as a stab with a

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

dagger to me to heare, after Lord Halifax had spoke so handsomly for me, and managed the whole debate, he should make such a proposition as he did the next day, what shall I say to it. I would willingly not be thought of of not being very sensible of kindnesses done me, and I am as sensible as possible of his doing his part so very well at the rejecting of my bill, but can I or any body thinke him really my freind, that would haue me banished from his Majesty's presence, for he moved it, so that I am in a strait as to him, and know not almost what to do, and to say the truth what I heare they are agoing on with in the House of Lords, will be of as bad consequence if not worse to me, and much worse for the monarchy, then the bill that was thrown out, tho I shall always be as sensible as possible, of the great obligation I have to those that oposed it in your house, and threw it out in ours, (for yett I may call it so) and for all the directions are given to prepare such bills yett I hope, the same reason, and concerne, they shewd for me and the monarchy, in rejecting the bill sent up to them, when they consider well of things, hinder them from giving the Crowne its last blow, and my freinds aught to be now more vigilant then ever, for I well know my enemys will leave no stone unturned to ruine me. As to what you write concerning your self, I meane as to Portsmouth, have a care of your owne privat concerne in it, and see you do not give up your commission and have nothing for it, you have suffred but two much already upon my account and I should be very sorry you should do it in this also. Those two you mentioned had advised you to lodg your Commission in his Majesty's hands, are your freinds as well as myne, and being on the place can advise better than I, how best to secure your self, and as I have sayd to you in a former letter since you must part with it, it cannot be in better hands than the Duke of Albemarl's, who I am sure will be always firme to the Crowne, but if his Majesty does not speedily put a stop to the way things are in it will not long [be] in his power any body nay not himself (sic), and if the bill of Association be such a one as I heare, and passe, I thinke not only his Majesty person will be in great danger, but adieu to the Monarky, I hope his Majesty will be sensible of this, and he should be told it, I shall now say no more, and expect with patience what will be my fortune, and in what so ever condition I am shall be kind to you and very sensible of your serving me as you do.

[1680,] Nov. 23.—I kept this bearer till the letters came and by what past in the House of Commons as to Lord Hallifax and other things, hope his Majesty will take speedy and vigoros counsellors or he is lost. I wrot last night to Lord Hallifax before I heard of the adrese against him, thinking it much better to erre on one hand then the other, you and all honest men must now encourage his Majesty and presse him to stick to himself.

[1680,] Dec. 14.—I receved yesterday in the forenone yours of the 8th, by this bearer Mr. Feilding, and by the letters which came the day before, by the post, was informed of the Lord Stafford's being condemned, which surprised me, tho I know the malice of some against him and the gouernment, would make them presse it to the utmost, and beside all other considerations, am very sorry his Majesty will be so hard put to it, for I hope he will remember the continual trouble it was to the King his father, the having concented to the death of the Earl of Strafford, and not have such a burthen on his conscience, and on the other hand I know he will be hard prest to signe the warrant, against this unfortunat Lord. I here enclosed send you a letter to his Majesty in which I say some thing upon that subject which in case he be not yett executed I would have you deliver, but if it has been done, I would have you burne it, for I write another Letter to his Majesty concerning Lord Windsor that has nothing of that in it. I see you have given good advice to his Majesty but what will all that signify unlesse he send the Parliament home, for every moment they sitt so much the harder will they make his Majesty saving himself and the monarky, that ought to be presst and done out of hand, all other expedients being but destructive. As to what you say concerning my self, I wrot so largely to you upon that subject by the last post, that I shall say more is, that besides that in conscience I cannot do what you so presse me to, it would not be of that use or advantage to his Majesty as some thinke, for those who are truly Loyall will serve him without any such thing, and for the Shaftburian party, and republicans, they would say it was only a trick, that I had a dispensation, and that I was still a Catholik in my hart, and would go on at the same rate they do, and say that now there was more reason to be affeard of popery than ever, for that that was the reason made me do it. I could enlarge and explaine this but thinke it not necessary the reasons being so obvius, and besides I will never be brought to do it, and therefore am very glad to see by your letter, that the thoughts of his Majesty writing to me upon that subject is layd aside, for should he be once prevailed upon to do it, one might easily guesse what must sone follow after, therefore lett my freinds see to hinder such a letter, and put the thoughts of my complying with them in that point of changing my religion quite out of their heads. As I was a writing I was called out [to] see a blazing star as they call it, it is a light which rises from the west but little above the horizon and points nearest hand as I can gesse deu Est, it seems to the ei to be about half a yard broad, and in length about fiftene yards, its motion is from the S. to the N., and very swift, for within lesse then this houer it has altrd at least ten yards, as neare as I can guesse by a marke I took, by the next I will send you a more exact relation of it for I will gett some artist to observe it.

I have enclosed my letter to his Majesty about Lord Windsor's concerns in myne to Secretary Jenkins, and lett that Lord know I [have] written as he desird."

1680, Dec. 18. Tangier.—Fra. Povey to Colonel George Legge. A long letter on his difficulties with Sir Palmes Fairburne in connexion with the stores, &c. It concludes—"nothing of news is stirring more than that Sir James Leshly (Leslie) is arrived, but when he intends to go into the country I cannot learn."

P.S.—"Here is seen a comet which rises about 6 o'clock whose rays extend 800 leagues upwards, and it was observed that upon her setting fell $\frac{1}{2}$ in a minute's time. The rising as we see is W.S.W. and the utmost end of the ray leans to the north and to our sight 2 yards broad."

1680-81, Jan. 3. The fields of Tangier.—Articles of truce for six months concluded between Col. Edward Sackville, commander in chief of his Majesty's city and garrison of Tanger, &c. and the Alcade Cidi Omar Benohadu, captain general and vice king of the adjacent countries, acting on behalf of the King Muly Ismaell.

1680-81, Jan. 5. [Edinburgh?].—Colonel John Churchill [to Col. Legge?].

"Dear Cousen,

I did 2 postes agoe recive yours of the 27th of the last month, but as yett I have not recived anny from my Lord Feaversham. I see by yours to the duke that caime this day, that you are now Master of the Ordinance; I doe not doute but you are satisfied that I am glade of itt, and

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

I doe ashure you that I wish that you may live long to injoye itt, and as I wish you as well as anny frend you have, soe I will take the liberty to tell you that you will not be just to your family, if you doe not now order your affaires soe as that you may, by living within your selfe, be able in time to cleare your estaites. I will say no more on this subject att present, but when we mett you must expect me to be troublesome if I find you prefer your owne living before your children's good. My Lord of Argille's escaipe makes soe littell alterations here that I hope before now it is where you are looked on as a thing of noe great consequence; for I daire anser, if the king so pleases, the duke will soe order itt that if ther should ever hapen to be anny disturbance in this contry that he nor his family shall not be able to signefie anny thing. I have maid your complaiment to the dutchess who has comanded me to returne you her thankes, and that she dose belive you are glade she is recovered. Pray present my service to Sir Allen [Apsley?] and tell him that I have had 2 letters from Etheridge, but that I would not doe in that nor anny thing else what I did not think was agreeable to him and pray lett me know what he says. I am your your affectionate kinaman & faithfull frend & sarvant, J. Churchill.

Mr. Churchill is your nife, and your servant."

1680-1, Jan. 24.—[Sir] H[enry] A[rchbold] to his dear son the honourable Colonel George Legge, London. Business matters. "We are all entering into our new hurry of elections; many are called, or rather come uncalled, but few will be chosen, and some will not though they be called, as Mr. Finch and Sir H. Littleton who are too wise for us. Sir Charles Wolsely, Ned Vernon offer at it, but I think in vain; though Sir Charles offers as they say very bountifully. We think Sir Francis Lawly puts in as fairly as any, and it may be as hopefully, except Mr. Biddle domineer. God send us honest and sober men. I suppose you will try the other bout (?) at Portsmouth. God bless you in all your proceedings, and Bab and Will and Mall and Betty etc. with the old hen and the egg in her belly; so saith her mother and joins in all this with your H. A."

[1680-1], Feb. 2.—James Duke of York to Col. George Legge. "I had yesterday by the post yours of the 27th and write now, tho the letters will not go till tomorrow, because I am to go for Sterling early tomorrow morning to see that place, which is the great passe of this country, and intend not to be back till Saturday night. I am glad that what I proposed was so well aproved of, I hope the more it is considerd on the more will be liked, but how can any thinge be done if meassurs be not taken to put of the Parliament, and by what I heare there are very few that dare presse it, however I hope the reasons are so strange, and unanswerable that they will prevaile, for is it possible for any that wish well to his Majesty and the Monarky, to thinke this new Parliament will be in any better humor then the former, tis true they may proceede with more caution, which will be more dangerous yett, and if one may judge of the rest of England by the North this House of Commons will be worse composed then the former, for they write from thence that most of the honest gentillmen do not intend to stand, so that they will be wanted and worse chosen in their places. I make no doubt, that this and other strong arguments will be used to hinder their sitting, I heare speake of an expedien this Majesty dos intend to propose, which they say he is very fond of as thinking it will quiat and satisfy the Parliament, but I do not heare what it is, except it be what you mentioned to me under secrecy some tyme since, which by the letters came on Sunday I had liberty to take notice on; except it be that, I do not know what it is, which if it be, I am sure dos not please me, nor will I ever consent to it. By a letter from a freind of the 27th I was told it was positively sayd by some of the great leding men of the other side, that they had privatly had assurances, that Lord Hallifax's proposall of a bill of banishment should be agreed to, but lett the expedient be what it will, I am sure if they meet, lett what will be thought now, I shall be ruined, so that my freinds must presse their not meeting. I am sorry to see the cleering the court as well as counsell does not go on, for if that slacken, I feare things will not goe on well, for without stedynesse tis impossible. I do not write this post to Mr. Hyde, having no thing to add to this, lett him see it, and Churchill to, if he be yett with you, to whom I do not write in answer to his of the 27th being not sure it would find him there. The soner I could know what will be done as to the Parliament is the better, that I may take my measurs accordingly."

1681, March 29. Court of Mequinez.—Articles of Peace concluded by Sir James Lesly, on behalf of Charles II., and by the Alcade Omar Benhadu, on behalf of the Prince Abonazar Sultan Muly Ismael, &c. Emperor of the kingdoms of Fez, Morocco, Tafelett, &c.

1681, March 31.—Colonel John Churchill (unsigned) to Colonel Legge. Upbraids him for not writing more frequently. Refers to Mr. Hyde and Noll Nicolas.

1681, April 5.—The same. On Sunday night Mr. Kirk came with his letter. "I doe with all my soull wish we waire againe att London with you, and hope itt will not be long before itt may be thought reasonable. The duke has writt to the king, according as Mr. Hyde and you did desier in your letters, which is all I think is to be done by him att this time."

1681, March 31.—James, Duke of York to Col. George Legge. "I am very much of your mind in what you say in yours of the 26th, and thinke we are very much beholding to the folly of our enemys. God send the right use be made of it, his Majesty, has it now in his hand to secure him self and to settle the monarky; he must not only take resolut counsellors but resolut councilors to, and lay aside your men of expedients, and do something to encourage his old freinds, why should not I be sent for, I have mentiond it to Mr. Hyde, advise with him, and the Dr. about it, what he says you know has much waight with his Majesty, nothing but resolution can now do his Majesty good, and that will do it now, and what is for the good of the crowne must be done, and people must be no longer affraide of their shadows. For my part I look on this whole affair of Fitzharris as the hand of God, for you see what was so cunningly designd and layd with so great mallice, and so securly as they thought, and not to be hindred, is turned upon them, and may prove their ruine if the right use be made on't, but I hope it will, which is all I shall say till I heare againe from you. Sure before you have this the Parliament will be broken."

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1681,] April 2.—I had your[s] by Crafts last night before eleven, and about the same houer the night before, had heard from Frowde, by a flying packett, of the disolution of the Parliament. You will easily beleve I was very well pleased with the newse on't, it was high tyme to do it, and I hope as his Majesty has shewd so much resolution, and begun so very well, so he will continu, and hold a stedy hand over affairs, and be no longer perswaded, by men of expedients, which are governed more by their feare then any thing els, to do any thing that may look like going back

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

or feare, and I look upon those sort of men to be as dangerous as downe right knavs, it being the same thing to be betrayed by some people's fears, or treachery, nothing now can save the King and the Crowne but resolut and stedy proceedings, and I feare that unlesse I be sent for, the generallity of the world still apprehend a want of stedyneesse and not beleve there will be any. I see by yours it was not necessary for me to have sayd this to you, since you are of the same mind and are endeavouring it, it must be prest. I wrote to you on this subject by the last post, that I need say the lesse now, and as my freinds will presse it, so I am sure my open and privat enemys will hinder it if they can, with whom I make no doubt the end of the gallery will joyne, and till Godolphin, and all the rotten sheepe are turned out, it will neare be well, and indeed in my mind I could wish his Majesty would do as God commanded Gideon, which was to send home all such as fearfull or afraide, and then I make no doubt that those which should remaine would do his Majesty's businesse much better, for experience has shewd that fearfull ministers and irresolut counsellors have contributed more than any thing els to bring things into the condition they are. I long very much for the arrival of N. Nicholas to know what meassurs are taken, and how the Citty have behaved themselvs. You did very well in sending to me as you did from Oxford, for Crafts has informed me of many particulars I was glad to know which a letter could not have done, but when only hearing sone is necessary, a flying packett coms faster and as safe. I am cleerly of your minde as to what you say concerning my satisfying of people that I can forgive, which I hope should be easy enough if they will but remember the whole course of my life. I can but shew it and say it, which I always do, and my freinds must do their part and answer for me, which they may boldly do, as they shall see if I come amongst them, which I feare some that pretend to be my freinds, may not be so very forward for, and tho they will not speake downe right against it, will find out some argument that may be something plausible, as that my coming so sone might cause some disturbance which was sayd as positively when I was in Flanders, and which needs no other answer but that when I came it did not happen. They may chance to say also, that it is necessary for his Majesty's service I should stay here, to settle things and keep them quiet in this countray, as to this it may be answerd, and that truly, that I can do nothing to the entire settling of this country, till I wayte on his Majesty, having things to propose which require my beeing with him to gett them done, which would be the best way of keeping all things quiet here, and should any disturbance happen I could be sone back here, and should come with more reputation, and signify more coming from thence, then should any such thinge breake out whilst I am here; and till the middle of June, they all say here, there is no danger of any such thing, nor it cannot well be, for reasons which are very good but to long to be put in a letter, this is all I shall say now."

[1681.] April 5.—"I need say the lesse to you having written so long a letter to Mr Hyde, in answer to what Kerke brought me. He came here on Sunday night, and was, as you may easily immagin, troubled, to find by yours which he gave me, as well as by others, and his Majesty's owne letter to me, that I am still to be a banished man from his presence. I am in no way satisfyd with the reasons given for it, and must look on my self as quite ruined, a little soner or later, if I be not sone with his Majesty for, for aught I see, the same reasons will subsist that are given now, as long as there are any about his Majesty that are not my freinds, therefore it behoves you that are my freinds to consult together and to presse for my returne, I have followed advice and not prest his Majesty to it now. It is late now, so that I have not tyme to say more by this bearer, but by the next post shall write againe to you."

HARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1681, April 6.—Lord Windsor to Colonel George Legge. I have received your kind and friendly letter, do give you a thousand thanks for it, and do much allow of your maxim and rule. I have much followed that opinion and have lived in and about the Court much, and by it have spent considerable sums more than I can now easily bear the weight of, and have by absence from my estate not suffered a little. I confess I am afraid of losing the substance in catching at a shadow, for hitherto that hath been my fate, and my children are so many I dare not venture farther in that kind, unless I had some ground work to begin upon, which I hope will have its rise from your kind intelligence, which place (sic) was in our family from before the conquest and gave us our name and continued in the family to Hen. 8's reign, and then he took that and almost all our land, and gave us abbey land with the title of Windsor. I have written to Mr. Hyde to move the King, and beg you will assist me throughout in the business, as I may own the greatest part of the kindness to you.

[1681,] April 9.—James, Duke of York, to Col. George Legge. By the last letters which I had from where you are, I find no more likly hood of my being sent for then when you wrot last to me, which I confesse is a great mortification to me, being perswaded that any delay will prone fatal to me, for if I be not called home now, how can I expect it when things are once settled and some still about his Majesty who are my declared enemys, who will take advantage of my absence, and find or make new reasons why I must be keep away, and lett it be when it will they will stil find as much fault with it and be as angry at it as if done now, and if people will be affraide of doing what is fitt, because the factions say tis with a designe of introducing of popery, why then Lord have mercy upon us, but I hope the same spirite which broke the Parliament is above such apprehensions, and then I may hope to be sent for, however I rely upon my freinds that they will presse it, therefore speake with Mr Hyde and the D^r about it, to both whom I have written to the same purpose and lose no time in what is to be proposed. I am very glad to heare there is to be a Major Generall in the Citty; and that it is to be Sir James Edwards who is a right Loyall man, and that the D^r is to be put into the Customs. Things are very quiat here, and the disolution has very much disapointed and confounded all the Phanatiks' designs, so that I am confident there will be no disturbance in this country if England keepe quiat. I would say more but it is so late that I have not tyme to do it."

1681, April 12.—Report on certain works recently completed at Tangiers drawn up by Capt. St. Johns, Capt. Giles, Mr. Areleman, comptroller, Mr. Tessinn, engineer, and Francis Povey, commissioner of ammunition.

1681, April 29.—Colonel Percy Kirke to Col. Legge. In recommendation of Major Poope. Expresses gratitude to his royal highness to whom he dares not presume to write himself; but if anything extraordinary happen he will not fail to give Legge an account of it.

[1681,] April 17.—James, Duke of York, to Col. George Legge. I had on Thursday last yours of the 9th, by which I see but little hops of being sent for, and am still of the same mind that my freinds will have a hard worke of it, to gett it done, since now they could not prevaile, for the end of the gallery and those that are against it, will find new arguments to keep it of, since they have now been able to do it, and I feare if it be put of till there has been a thorough purge made, in court, and country, it will not be till the Greek Kallends, and me thinks the putting out of Scroggs, the bringing in of Pemberton, and the discountenancing of Joans, shewse yett some feare, and that Lord Hallifax has to much creadit, for so long as his timorous counsellors take place, and that the end of the gallery continus in such creadit, how can I expect any good, and I look on his project of having me in England, but not at Court as fatal and dangerous to me as any thinge my greatest enemys can project against me, and besides other reasons, do not approve of the Dutcheses going to take any waters, so long as she does not really want them, because it would insensibly bring his project to passe, there being no middle bettwene this place and being with his Majesty. However I am very sensible that you and some of my freinds have done your parts, and I shall be sure not to presse his Majesty till you that are upon the place lett me know it is seasonable. When Crafts went, I mentiond it to him, but very gently, and since have not sayd on word to him of it. I see great pains has been taken by the Duchess of Portsmouth to bring in the Duke of Monmouth. I hope my freind will continu their endeavors to hinder it, for should my enemys compass them, my businesse were indeed done. Pray lett the Attorney Generall know how sensible I am of his apearng so boldly for me as he has done, particularly in this affaire of the Certiorari. I am sorry to heare Lord Hallifax is coming back to court againe, for I am sure if he has creadit I shall not be sent for, and upon the whole, I have but a very uncomfortable prospect of my affairs, and if once they begin to talke of a Parliament I can expect nothing but ruine, for then expedients will be on foott againe, and the republican party will be so encouraged, that they will ventur at any thing. I need not say more upon this subject, those considerations being so visible and the consequences of them. Things are here very quiet, and I am confident will continu so.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

I wonder N. Nicholas is not come.

[1681.] April 24.—I have deferd writing to you and ansuring yours of the 16 in expectation of Nol. Nicholas his arrival, and by a letter I had from Mr. Hyde this day see I cannot expect him these two or three day yett, and till he coms shall say but little, and with out he bring some good newse or some hops at least, I shall have but an unpleasant prospect of my affairs. I see Lord Mack. is in wayting againe, tis a riddle to me to see two put out and he kept in, that certainly deserves much more then they, to have been used after the same manner, and it must needs discourage my freinds very much, and I confesse so long as he is so countenanced and the Duchess of Portsmouth in such credit I can expect no great good. All things are very quiet here and are like to continu so whilst they are so with you. I long to heare of Fitzharris and Smith's tryals.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1681.] May 4.—I see by yours and Lord Hyd's letters I had by Nol. Nicholas, how hard a worke you will have to bring about my being sent for, and as both of you have desired, send this bearer Churchill, to assist you in it, and to make the last tryal, for if now with your endeavors, and what I write I gett nothinge but a put of, I must prepare to endure a long banishment, and all the ill concequences which usually attend such a begining. I have writen at large to Lord Hyde and therefore shall say the lesse to you, besides that I have instructed Churchill as fully as I can, and according to advice, am content to passe my word not to meddle nor trouble his Majesty nor his Ministers with any businesse when I am with him but that of Scotland, and even

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

not with that to if he pleases also. I see by what the Doctor has told you, that he thinks I have here to fore prest his Majesty to much in businesse and to more then his owne inclinations led him, which is a very great mistake, for I can say that I haue neuer proposed any of those things which were not stuck to, as the Dutch war, the declaration, and other things; for the first I was absolutly against it, and then told his Majesty and Ministers, I feared it would run him in debt, and concequently put him into the power of the Parliament when that was done did my part as became me; for some of the other things I was for them, when proposed by the Ministers, and aproved on by his Majesty upon debate, and if puting him in mind and pressing him to go on with what was so resolved, and not changing my mind as the ministers did, was a fault, I cannot help it, and left of troubling his Majesty when I saw it was to no purpose, tho I could not have that compliancy with with (sic) the ministers to follow their examples when they altered their minds either out of feare, or other reasons, and not I am sure upon solid grounds, which has been but to vissible, and tis a cruel thing that I must beare all their loode, when I rather was their slave then any thing els, so that I feare tis for some other reason, and not that which the Dr givs, that his Majesty is affraid of having me with him, which I shall now sone see, for if after what I have sayd in my letter to him, and charged Churchill to assure him, he will not send for me, I must take it for granted that it is, as I say, and now you and all my freind must make your last effort to gett me sent for, for I shall dispare of it if it cannot be now. What els I have to say I refer to Churchill.

I have receved yours of the 29th which givs me more hops then the former did. I shall say no more but that now the Doctor must do his part and presse for my returne.

1681, May 9.—Lord Windsor to Col. Legge. Begs his help to obtain some favour from the Duke of York; "it will much discourage me to see lawyers and men of private families advanced before me, who will not stand by him when I will."

1681, May 14. Tanger.—Copies of a long report, by Major Pope, John Alsmore, controller, Major Bointon, Francis Povey, commissary of the Stores, Bernard Tessin, engineer, on work done at Tangiers and on the cost of quarters there; and of letters of Colonel Legge and the Ordnance Officers thereon. The names of the owners of houses occupied by the officers, &c., the rent paid for each house, and many other curious particulars are given in the report.

1681, May 17. Tanger.—Fra. Povey to Col. George Legge. Still complains of the defects in the Ordnance department there and of the gunners, seven of whom among those last sent had been removed by Col. Kirke as incapable of doing duty, "The firemaster is certainly a most ignorant person as to the knowledge of any ingredient except brandy." . . . The Admiral "is now before Argeere and it is hoped that he may force the Argereene to a peace. The Moors as yet continue pretty quiet but sometimes commit hostilities by taking a horse or cattle that break out of our bounds, but restore them for a small consideration. I humbly request your honour's kindness to grant me leave to make a trip for England that so I might settle my family" . . .

1681, May 18. Tanger.—Col. P. Kirke to Col. Legge. Has received all the stores and finds them in pretty good condition. The great guns are the worst that ever were in any garrison—the worst

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

gunners that ever man saw, and the master gunner not fit to command any thing. Mr. Povey has promised to give a more particular account; he is a very good man and the only one that minds his business.

[1681,] May 24.—James Duke of York to Col. George Legge. I have now received a letter from Lord Hyde since he spake with his Majesty and by it have as little hops of being sent for as ever, and see I can expect no positive answer till next weeke, for that Lord Hallifax was not expected to be at Windsor till this weeke, and when he is there I cannot help thinking he will be as much against my being sent for as any body. I hope you that are upon the place will have made use of what this villan Fitzharris has sworn against me, to lett his Majesty see what advantage my enemies take against me by my being absent, and how I shall be every day more and more exposed by it to their malice and practices, and am very confident, had I been there, he would never have had the impudence to haue sayd what he has done against me, for I could have easily proved him perjured by undenyable witnesses. All things are very quiet here, and I shall say no more to you till I heare what his Majesty resolutions are after he has spoken with those he trusts; for if I am not to go up but must stay here, I hope they will lett my daughter come to me, and then I will have more of my horses here.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1681,] May 31.—By that tyme this comes to you, you will know what has been resolved concerning the proposition I made by the last post, which Lord Hyde will have shewd you, and if that dos not take I shall have but little hops of any thing for my self; that dos, I may then hope to have leave to go up for a little tyme, but otherwise not, for by none of my letters, do I see any appearance of being sent for, but upon such an account. I shall say no more upon this till I heare further from you, I shall be very impacient till I heare of what becoms of that villan Fitzharris, who if he be rightly handled will certainly tell the truth, and not be forsworn as I am sure he is in what he has sayd hitherto. I have writen to Lord Hyde as I say I would do in my last to him and sent him a letter to make use on as he finds it convenient. All things are very quiet here and his Majesty's birthday was kept yesterday with great solemnity here.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1681,] June 7.—I had yours of the 31st of the last so layte on Saturday that I could not possibly answer it then, and by it, as well as other letters see how positive his Majesty and most of his Ministers are against my being sone sent for, and that with no day or tyme appointed is no very pleasing prospect, tho the assurances Lord Hyde gius me of Lord Hallifax's being my freind, and his being against the calling of a Parliament this next winter, as well as Mr. Seymour, maks me have more hops of good then I have expected this good while. As for what you speake of concerning yourself, I cannot immagin, why you may not keep both, it is no way inconsistent, but what is usual, and very proper, and tho the Master of the Ordinance is the more honorable yett I thinke the Governement of Portsmouth is in its self of the greater trust, and more considerable, and if they will have you part with the last, to haue the other, for which I see no reason, nor necessity, they aught to lett you find your account in it at least, but by what you say I feare it will be over before this comes to you, as for what concerns my horses I will stay till Churchill comes back hether before I will send for any more, and shall say no more till I heare againe from you.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

[1681,] June 11.—This day in the forenone his Majesty letter came to the Councell by a flying packett, for the calling of a Parliament here, on the 28th of July, and this afternone I had yours of the 7th by the post, and by it as well as by a letter from Lord Hyde see it was not thought fitt to deliver my letter to his Majesty, and thinke he did well not to give it, since such an interpretation might have been put upon it, though in my owne reason I thinke it necessary for his service, and that with in these two days, some eminent men have proposed it to me and prest me to offer it to his Majesty. I told them I would consider on't, and if they speake to me againe of it will put them of as well as I can, as for my daughter's coming I am still for it for many reasons, and hope before this coms to you, Lord Hyde will haue asked his Majesty leave for her comming as I desired him in myne of Tuesday last, and that she is ready for the voyage. I have not tyme to say more now.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1681,] June 14.—The Proclamation for the calling of the Parliament was this day published here, so that I must begin to prepare for it; we are to ride to the Parliament therefore I thinke I must have a foott cloth as when we rode at the King's Coronation, but till you heare from me by the next post do not bespeake one, because I am not yett so fully instructed as I shall be then. If Churchill be yett with you, of which I doubt, he telling me he was to come away to morrow, in his last, tell him I have no need of my robes, the Commissioner never wearing any, I had by this last post the copy of Fitzharris' inditment you sent me, and was very glad by others to find he was found guilty. By my next I will lett you know what horses I would have you send hither, I have not tyme to say more now, having been all this day very busi.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1681,] June 18.—Since I wrot last to you I have enquired as to my riding to Parliament and find that tho others must have foott clothes, I need not, and that I may use a housse, for the Lord Chancellor told me just now that when he was Commissioner he had a housse and no foot Cloth, therefore send me my housse, which was made for me when I thought of going in Flanders, with a saddle and all things fitted to it, and when my daughter coms send all the foottmen downe hither, and as sone as she setts out, send two coaches and the two setts of coach horses she has with her hither also, that they may be here before the first meeting of the Parliament, and send me downe also one pad and Fetherston, which will serve both for pad and hunter here. Windham has asked me leave to part with his place, and gos up in the yacht to London, and tells me there is a Gentilman one Hollis that is a Cupbearer to his Majesty that would buy it of him; if he be a gentilman and has the reput of an honest man, I will consent to it, but you must enquire into that. As I had writen thus far, I received yours of the 14th, and had as you see writen to severall of those points [which] are in your letter. I am sorry you must part with Portsmouth. I have not tyme to say more now.

June 18th [1681].—This bearer Robert Killgrew, who has served some tyme as volontere on borde the King's ships, has desird me to recomend him to go againe into the service, but because I do not know how he has behaved himself with those he has served with, I would not recomend him myself to the Admiralty till I knew it, but would haue you enquier after his behavior and ability, and if you have a good caracter of him from Cap. Hamilton or others he has served with, then I would have you in my name recomend him to the Admiralty and Mr. Brisban, for if he deserves it, I would be glad to shew a kindnesse to one of that family he is of; if his cousin Captain Killegrew were at London may be he also could lett you know some thing of him.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge

June 28 [1681].—If the wind had not been easterly I should not have now writen to you now, for it has been so long so that I beleve the ship with my daughter's good[s] is not yett come out of the river, and that this wind which is likely to last, may keep hir so long there, that if she keeps the coaches there till she embarke, they will not be here tyme enough for the first day of the Parliament, therefore if she be not come away when you receve this, see to order it so, if you can, as that for the tyme she may remaine wind bound, some horses may be borrowed for hir to make use on, that the two setts may be sent away to be here tyme enough and speake to my daughter and Lady Hyde about it, and tell them they would do well not to lose the first oportunity of the wind, for the north winds are like [to] governe most this quarter, which is all I shall say till Churchill's arrivall.

Pray send me the printed sayling and fighting instructions, I am very sorry to heare Captain Kempthorne is killed.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1681,] June 30.—I had yours by Churchill yesterday by whom I have had a full account of all things where you are, and hope this sett of men will not use me as most of their predecessors have done, but of this I have not tyme to say more now. You have done well to send me downe both foott cloth and housse, that I may make use of either, I am glad to be rid of Fisher if all be true that is sayd. I will do what you propose concerning Hilliard's mother, and beleve this Hollis will prove a good man, tis a good signe his being desirous to come into my service now. As to your self tis necessary you should stay where you are for I have need of you with Lord Hyde to help him and to look after my concerns there. I know tis not your fault if you do not keep Portsmouth, nor myne neither; I know no reason why you might not have both. I have writen it to others, but for all that would not have you do your self a prejudice by endeavoring to keep it, if it cannot be done without it. The caution you give me of Mr. G. is good. The Councell satt so long this evening that I have not tyme to say more.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

1681, June 30. Tangier.—Colonel P. Kirke to Colonel Legge. Begs his favour on behalf of the garrison, which is really so ill-gunned that if there were occasion it would be very hard upon them. The officers that belong to the train are the saddest souls God ever put life into. Their greatest want at present is a master-gunner who should bring with him a mortar piece of eight inches to exercise the gunners.

1681, July 2. Dublin.—Lord Longford to Colonel George Legge. Congratulates him on his being Master of the Ordnance. Intends to visit England in August. Could not till now prevail on the Lord Lieutenant to take a general survey of all the stores in Ireland, and his (the writer's) deputy and Mr. Robinson will shortly begin their progress with that object.

1681, July 8. Hewell.—Lord Windsor to Colonel George Legge. Thanks for speaking to the King on his behalf. "We have here a great many stories about the evidence against my Lord Shaftesbury. I would be glad to be able to satisfy my country neighbours of the truth. If you have leisure pray let me know it."

[1681,] July 5.—James, Duke of York, to Colonel George Legge. I am very glad to find by yours of the 30th that the true plott is like to come to

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

light, and that now no more of the innocent shall suffer, God forgive those that have been guilty of so much innocent blood, and make them sensible of their so great crimes. I hope the right use will be made of Turberville and Haynes, and then I am sure it must turne very much to his Majesty's advantage and the quiet of the Nation. I am glad you have Portsmouth still, and wish his Majesty had but a few more like your self, that considred his service as you do, and ventur as frankly as you do, which I am very confident he will consider as he aught. I am sure I am as sensible of it, as you can desire, and will do my part he may do so to. I am very sorry to heare the Prince of Orange dos opiniater so for Sidney, and is so led away with the flatterys of that party that designe his ruine as well as all the rest of our family, and would only make him a property and instrumental to bring their worke to passe, I wrote some tyme since very home to him about Sidney, but have not yett had an answer, and will write as freely to him upon that whole subject and endeavor to open his eis. I should be very glad your brother Will had the Roabs. I never liked any man's proceeding better than that of Mr. Hollis, and lett him know I shall be glad to have him in my service and that he may agree with Windham and send him downe as sone as you can. I have reason to like a man that desirs to be in my service now; as for Windham's complaint, I do not know of any the least reason he had to complaine of any of his fellow servants, only I know he behaved himself very foolishly as to some things, and if I would have taken notice of things mought have had reason to have been angry. I heare Sherif Bethel is accused of some words he has spoken against the King, and that the bill is found against him, if it should amount to any fine or forfeiture, speake to his Majesty in tyme that his Cousin my Slingsby might have it, which would be but resonable, Bethel having enjoyd his father's estate for several years. I have not tyme to say more now.

[1681,] July 12.—I have had yours of the 5 in which you tell me my Daughter was to sett out as yesterday, but if she be sett out this day tis well enough, for women are not very punctual. I am very glad to heare that his Majesty affairs are every day on the mending hand; sure what has happned of late and Fitzharris' confession must do very much good if the right use be made on't, as I make no doubt it will, since his Majesty dos now trust those who dare be so bold as to be my friends, of which number I am now absolutly perswaded Lord Hallifax is, as for Mr. Seymour I have relyd upon him, and found him to be a stedy friend, and know he will bring in others to be so, by force of reason fortifyd with friendship for me. I would say more, but it having been a councill day, I could not write till after supper, and it is now late, so that what els I have to say I must defer till next post.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1681,] July 16.—I was indeed surprised with the newse of the Prince of Orange's coming into England, as well as you were, and am of your mind as to the reason of his coming at this tyme. It must be your parts that are upon the place to look well that no harme be done, pray be very much with his Majesty when he is there, to observe what passes, and I thinke if he the Prince be spoken homly to, if his head be not quite wrong turned, his eis will be opened and he [will] see how he has been abused by those who gave him measur of affairs in England. Cargill the great feild preacher was taken two days since, and two others of his tribes with him, and brought to towne yesterday and examind before the Councill, they all sayd they were bound by the covenant to do what they did, and owned enough to hang them selvs, which I believe they will sone be.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

[1681,] July 30.—I had not tyme till now to answer yours which I had by Banks, he coming so just before the meetting of the Parliament, and Hollis came here but yesterday morning, so that till then I did not know you had writen to Lord Roscommon, to performe the cerimonial part for you, and so apointed James Grahams to rid for you, tis true Lord Roscommon sayd some thinge to me of your having writen to him, but he did not explaine that part to me, so that now I beleve, he is troubled he did not ride, which he should have done had he explained himself to me, and for Grahams he did not thinke of it till I told him I would haue him ride for you that day. I long to heare what the Prince of Orange's arrant has been, and hope his eis will be opend as to our English affairs. You will by the last post haue had an account of the first day's worke in Parliament which went very smoothly, and tho there may be some turbulent people amongst them, yett I make no doubt things will go well, tho some of them may chance to be influenced from the seditious party in England. I have had in my particular, as well as his Majesty, a great losse of the Lord Chancellor, and now I shall be obliged to take much more pains my self, I haue beged of his Majesty not to thinke of filling his place till this sessions is ouer, and I hope he will also heare me give him a true caracter of those who pretend to it before he disposes of it. When I have tyme I shall write such a letter as you propose concerning Lord Hallifax.

[1681,] Aug. 14.—I had yesterday yours by Churchill who has informed how affairs are where you are, and told me what my friends advise me to, which I shall follow, and you may be sure I shall do my part to hasten my returne. Things go very well here, yesterday we past two Acts, the first a confirmation of all the Laws for the security of the Protestant religion as now established here by Law, the other an Act for the declaring and asserting the prerogative and succession, a copy of both which I haue caused to be sent to S. Jenkins. To morrow the act will be brought in form the articles for the continuation of the sesse, for five years; the party will endeavor to bring it downe to three, but I am very confident we shall carry it for five. I have not tyme now to say any thing to you in answer to what you mentiond concerning M. Bentink, nor indeed almost of any thing els, but that Churchill has confirmed me in the good opinion I haue of Lord Hallifax, by the account he has given me now of his proceeding in the affaire of the Prince of Orange, as well as in my other concerns, which when so ever I see him he shall find. I could wish Duke Hamilton would lay aside his thoughts of popularity, it would be better for him, for in the end he will do himself no good, and in the meane tyme may be made a property to obstruct his Majesty's service. You shall heare againe from me by the next post.

[1681,] Aug. 24.—Before I say any thing to you of any thing els I mention Sir Roger Strickland to you, that you would be watchfull for him, and put the King in mind of him when any occasion shall offer, that he may be employd, he hauing now layd long out of command, but I hope now it will not be long before I may sollicite for him my selfe, for I have now writen to his Majesty to aske leave for to wayte on him so sone as the Parliament is up, for some few days, which I hope is so reasonable a request, that it will not be denyd me, and realy it is absolutly necessary for the good of his affairs in this Kingdome, where severall very necessary things cannot be settled till I speake with him. I send my letter to his Majesty enclosed to Lord Hyde, to whom I have writen so long a letter upon this subject that I need say no more upon it to you, for when I consider of it I realy cannot find one resonable argument against my having leave so go up for a few days, and many unanswable ons for it.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

If I have leave to go up I intend to leave the Dutchesse and my Daughter behind, which they will be very well content with, it not being proper for women to make such a voyage for so short a stay, however it will be necessary another yacht should be sent for I cannot have lesse than two, therefore when it is resolved on do you speake to his Majesty about it and the soner she is sent away will be the better, for I hope by this day fortnight the Parliament will be very neare an end, for by the end of next weeke I hope the acts of publike concerne will be past. If Gunnman be out of the way speake that Faisby be sent.

[1681,] Sep. 3.—This is only to tell you that I have had this night yours of the 30th and that Lord Hyde is not yett come. I long to speake with him, and am prepared for the worst, and shall still do the part of a good subject, and have the satisfaction to have done his Majesty and the crowne good service in this Parliament. I wish some where you are would take as much pains and be as stedy and resolut, and then things would go as smothly there as they do here.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1681,] Sep. 11.—I stayd to answer yours of the first which I received by Lord Hyde, till his returne, and yesterday in the afternone I had yours by H. Goring, before which I had had notice of Sir John Doncom's embassage, which did realy very much allarum us here, but by what you tell me from the D^r and by his Majesty's letter to me by Goring I am somewhat more at ease then I was, tho I must still feare the worst, as long as I am not permitted to returne, and realy what you hint to me in your letter, and what Lord Hallifax in his has more plainly sayd, and has been preest by Lord Hyde, concerning my going to church, has mortifyd me very much, since I cannot do it, for indeed I see no thing but ruine, when such meassurs are taken, as produced such a message to me, when there was no reason to beleve I would comply, for any going back or shew of feare in his Majesty or ministers must be the ruine of all, and I cannot help thinking the world will looke on my not going up now as one of them. I wish they may not, and do what I can here to hinder that belif, all the honest men here are much troubled I do not go up, as Lord Hyde can tell you, and I thinke it so absolutly necessary for his Majesty's service for the settling of this country that I do presse againe for leave to go up. I need say no more to you by Lord Hyde who will informe you of all things here, and am sorry to find he thinks his Majesty will never lett you have both the Ordinance and Portsmouth together, tho I told him I thought it might very well be for you to have both, and debated it with him, but I feare it cannot be, by what he sayd, so that at last I feare you will be put to it to chuse which you will have, I know the Ordinance is more honorable but the gouverneur of Portsmouth maks a better figur in the world, and will always be more considered.

1681, Sept. 12. Berwick.—Colonel John Churchill (unsigned) to Colonel Legge. "Dear cousen, I should make you both excuses and complements for the trouble you have bene att in sending my wife to me, but I hope itt is not that time of day betwine you and I, for without complement as long as I live I will be your frend and sarvant. My Lord Hyde, who is the best man living will give you an account of all that has passed. You will find that nothing is done in what was soe much desired, soe that sooner or laiter we must be all undone. As soone as Lwine (sic) has his papers the duke would have him take the forest (sic) oportunety by sea and com from Scotland. My hart is very foulle, soe that should I writt to you of the sade prospect I feare we have, I should

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

tiere your patience ; therfor I refere my selfe holly to my Lord Hyde and ashure you that wher ever I am, you and my Lord Hyde have a faithful friend of me."

[1681,] Sep. 15. James Duke of York to Colonel George Legge.—Yours of the 8th came not so sone to me as you thought it would for it meett Lord Hyde on his way to Barwick, so that I had it not, till Tuesday night by Churchill who went thether with him and so came back hether then. As to what you say concerning Portsmouth you will see by my letter which I wrot by Lord Hyde what my opinion is and the more I thinke of it the more I am confirmed in my mynd that you should not part with it, especyally since what you wrot to Lord Hyde, and that some people have such a mind to haue you out on't; as for what you propose concerning Major Nicholas I thinke it very reasonable he should have a Commission of Lieutenant-Governor, if you should part with it which I hope you will not. 'Twas honestly done of the Earl of Bath and the Doctor to speake as they did to his Majesty. I hope he will stand to what he sayd to them, I am sure if he dos not he will be ruined as well as I. You did very well to buy the horse you mentiond for I cannot help thinking I shall sone either make use of him for hunting or for his Majesty's service, being apt enough to beleve that if the party cannot obtaine their will of the King, by the means of those fals freinds he has about him, that they will try for a better or a worse another way, for if he stand by him self and his old freinds they have no other game left to play. I long to heare from Lord Hyde after he has been at Newmarkett, for by what he shall say to me I shall be able to judge what measurs are taken, and I should thinke that what has been done by the Parliament here should hasten people to be vigoros where you are. We have now dispatched not only all his Majesty's concerns but seuerall publike acts, for the good of the country, and encouraging of trade and the manufactors, so that there remains little to do, and to-morrow or next day I beleve, I shall put an end to this sessions of Parliament, which you see, for all what was sayd, by some of this country, at London, is like to end very well.

1681, Sept. 22. Tanger.—Francis Povey to Colonel George Legge. Ordnance matters, &c. Here is lately come into this garrison a Moor which is cousin to the King of Fez for refuge; his occasion of coming was that the king took away his estate, upon which he vowed he would come to the Christians. Some days since the king has demanded him of the governor, but what the result is I cannot give your honour an account of. About 6 days since the James galley commanded by Captain Shovell and the Sapphire by Capt. Hastings cruising west 40 leagues from Cape St. Vincent had after a very hot dispute made themselves master of the Half Moon of Argeire which was very little inferior to the Golden Horse; she had 32 pieces of cannon mounted, what number of men I can not justly say, about 40 English slaves and with one woman. The 20th instant about the same place Captain Booth in the Adventure engaged the Golden Lion of Argiere and in a short time took her; she is the same dimensions as the Half Moon, and this day it is reported that he has taken another, but as yet he has brought neither to this place. The account of it we have by Spanish boats which came from Chuchalana (sic) who say Captain Booth carried the first into Cadiz.

1681. Sept. 23.—Acts passed by the Governor, Council, and Assembly of Jamaica. The following are the chief subjects of the Acts—rates of negroes (with reference to the King's order that the African Company supply the Island with 3000 negroes annually at 18*l.* per head); quit rents; masters of ships to give security; preserving of cattle; registering deeds; foreign coins; confirmation of pious gifts; encouraging importation of white servants; regulating building; &c., &c.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1681, Sept. 28.—Colonel John Churchill to Colonel Legge. Of no importance.

[1681,] Sep. 30. Edinburgh. James Duke of York to Colonel George Legge.—I have written so fully to Lord Hyde about some things which I propose should be done here, that I need not repeat them to you. I confesse I had no great mind to have made any such proposition by letter, but this being concerning the sessions, which court is to sitt the first of Nouember, I could not delay proposing it, and by this I shall see how, what els I haue to offer, is like to relish, for if his Majesty dos not rely upon my judgment in this, I cannot hope he will harken to me in the rest, and that if he do not aprove of what I have offred, that he will lett that proposal dy, and not lett any body know I have proposed any such thing to him, for if it be not liked, it would not be well for me it should be knowne. I do not know how it will be aproved of now, but could I have gone up my self I am very confident it would haue been done, but since that could not be I chose rather to do it this way then not at all, how disadvantageous so ever it be. This bearer Banks will tell you that some of the coach horses are dead, so that you would do well to see to gett some to send downe hether to fill up the setts againe, you that are upon the place can best judg when to send them, and whether I may hope to be with you this winter or no. I am almost dosed with writing so long a letter to Lord Hyde, so that I can say no more now.

[1681,] Octo. 2.—This is only to tell you that I thinke after what hapened to this bearer Mr. Sheriden in one of the late Parliaments, he aught to be countenanced by all my freinds, and besides that I do look on him as one who will lay hold of all occations to serve me, and is an honest man. I have now knowne him for above these two years, and have never found him to have made a fals step, and always very zealous for his Majesty's service, which is all I shall say now.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1681,] Nov. 1.—On Sonday I had yours of the 25th, and by it see Lord Hyde had told you I did not forgett a concerne of yours, and you may be sure I shall still shew you what kindnesse I can, and when Lord Hyde and you thinke it proper for me to mention any thing of that to his Majesty I shall readily do it, I see you know of the proposal has been made to me concerning the Duchess of Portsmouth, and suppose before this Lord Hyde will have told you of the answer I made to it, which as I sayd to him aught to satisfy if there be no further designe in it then the securing hir of what she desires, what you say to me of Harry Savile agrees with what I heard of him from Paris a post or two ago, for there he talked of reconciling his Brother and Lord Shaftsbury, and of the necessity of a Parliament's being speedily called at London, and since he Lord Halifax drivs [drives] on a Parliament tis no wonder he is against my having leave to go up, but I hope he will be disapointed in both. As for Barwike I am absolutly against its being slighted, and instead of that am for its being repaired, and having a good magazine in it, tis of great consequence both as to England and Scotland, for it is a great bridle to the South parts of this Kingdome which are much poysoned by the Phanatiks, and in case of any thing to do in England it would be of great consequence to have arms there to put into the hands of the loyal party that are very numerous in the fower Northern shiers, and a little thing would put it in defence, as I beleve, and I am sure tis no way advisable to slight it, and would be a very great reproch to the government to do it. I heare the Duchess of Lauderdale is very angry with me for the remous which haue been made in the sessions, I do not wonder at it for some of them were hir creaturs, and she receved the late regester's pention, and some say went a share with him in the perquisites of his place, and that which vexes hir most is that she sees she can no more squeeze this country as she has done for severall years past, and gott very considerable somms of mony for this country, whilst his Majesty's treasury is run in over (?), and his Castels quite out of repaire, two of them not having one gun mounted in them. D[uke of] Hamilton was here, and is gone back into the country, says he is not yett cleere to take the test, but maks mighty professions of loyalty and readinesse to serue his Majesty if occation be. Lord Argile is here, and has not yett taken it, but by Thursday next he must or lose all his places, which he will be unwilling to do, and now that tis seen it will be stuck to it will go downe with many who seemed to scruple at it.

HARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

[1681,] Nov. 4, Edinburgh.—I had this day yours of the 30th, and am sorry you were not stood by this tyme as well as the last, but sinc that was not, I am glad you are to have some thing for it, and that his Majesty was so kind to you, and that the Duke of Albemarle is to have it, sinc you were to part with it, for he is true to the Crowne. I have had constant accounts of what has past in both houses, but have yett heard nothing from Mr. Hyde nor any of the ministers. I see the witnesses have new instructions every day, and forswear themselves lustily, as to me I am sure, and I beleve others will every day be prompted to swear new crims against me. I see I must expect the worst, I have not tyme to say more.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1681,] Nov. 5.—On Thursday last I had yours without a date, in which you give me an account Orbistoun being arrived at London and having been with his Majesty and what he says. I knew before of his being some thether but did not know his businesse. I am glad to heare he is sensible of his errors, and wish he may continu of that mind when he comes here, and that by his actions he may shew the sincerity of his words. I do not thinke Duke Hamilton will prove so bad a subject as he seems to feare, for tho he has not yett taken the test, yett when he went from hence last weeke he made all the imaginable professions of duty and loyalty could be desired, has given up an old house of his to be made garnison of, and says he will serve his Majesty as readily as any body as a commissioner of the exise or in such capacitys as he can exerce[is] without taking the test, and I feare that Lord Arran can be of little use to his Majesty's service, and not do what Orbistoun thinks he can, and besids till Lord Arran has for some tyme given good proffs of his sincerity. I thinke he is not to be relyd on, after his having behaved himself as he has done, and kept such company, however some use may be made of him, but truly I do not thinke it fitt for his Majesty's service, he should be now put into his fater's places, or indeed at all till one is surer of him, and that he has satisfied the world that he has quitted the interest and princepals of those [he] used to keep company with at London, for till then it would discourage the truly loyal men to see marks of favor bestowd on such men for only saying a dutyfull word, and may be it is by Dutchesse Hamilton's order he talks now as he dos, hoping by this means to preserve all the offices to hir family and to have as much power in that country tho hir Lord do not take the test, which may be when he sees he by his sonnes means cannot have, may make him yett before the first of January, take it. I do not yett find that many of the people of quality follow Duke Hamilton's example in not taking it, except Lord Argile, for even Lord Southeske who ran along with him in all things in Parliament has taken it, and I believe except Lord Hadington and Lord Castels, or may be one or two more of those who satt in Parliament, not any nobel man will scrupel it, it was nothing but an opinion was gott in amongst some that it would not be stuck to which made some delay the taking of it, but now it gos currantly downe, all the Advocats and Lawyers except Sir John Cuningham having taken it, and those of the ministers who scrupled it, are most of them persuaded by their Bishops, and will take it. I do not find that Sir G. Lockhart is so great with the Duke or Duchess of Hamilton as he was for he has taken the test him self, and did his endeavors to perswade Duke Hamilton to take it; all those others you have named, I know are not well affected, and they shall be observed but I do not thinke they have any designe at present, how ever all care shall be taken to prevent any they may have. I am glad to find by yours that Mr Seymour is come to you, and continus firme for my being sent for, it shows he is truly my freind, and I am sure I can look on none to be so that are not for my being sent for. I have not tyme to say more, and you will heare from Lord Hyde of Lord Argil's having taken the test, and spoild all againe by not taking it yesterday as one of the Lords of the Treasury.

[1681,] Nov. 12.—I had yours of the 5th on Thursday last but none from Lord Arran, as you sayd I should, and till I either heare from him or see him, shall say no more of him, having writen my mynd very freely to you upon his subject. I long very much to know what will become of the great statsman, and shall be of your mind, if after all this stur he gett lose. I heare M. Van Benning presses hard to engage us into a war, but I hope he will not prevaile. I am against a war now as well as I was against the last war with Holland; then I fortold the danger of it and the inconveniencies it would draw upon his Majesty, which he has found to have proved but to true, and now remember I tell you in all liklyhood it would be the absolut ruine of the monarchy, and immediatly destroy our trade; for the last part on't any man that knows the Sea cannot deny it, and for the other part any man that will but consider must know it to be true also, considering all circomstances, and the present temper of the nation, and lett one but remember how the Dutch made the peace at Nimegen, and before that at Munster, at [sic, and?] that they are marchants, who will do any thing to engrose the trade againe into their hands. I have sayd enough on this subject, and could say much more. I am sorry to find you so melancoly as to youre owne concerns. You know his Majesty is really pind to you, his ministers are so, at least those of them that are my freinds. I am the same to you I ever, was, so that a little soner or later, you will be put at ease, and pray lett me know where any stop is in your concerns that I may do my part to remoue it. As for affairs here all things are very quiat, and people seeme little concerned for Lord Argil's being put into the Castel, and for these many years this country has not been so quiat, nor so free from feild conventicles. I long to heare what will become of Lord Shaftsbury.

[1681,] Nov. [17 or 18?].—I had not tyme by the last post to answer yours of the 8th, by reason of the councill's sitting so long that night, and feare the forrain ministers and those who wish not well to the monarchy no more then to me haue prevailed so far, as to the calling of a Parliament, by the answer has been made to M. Van Benning's memorial, for that engages his Majesty more then I could wish he had been, and I feare the prospect of it will do his Majesty affairs no good; I am sure it will encourage my enemys, to designe things against me. I see you had some allarum as if there had been some desine upon Portsmouth. I did not thinke the officer you mentioned had been such a kind of man as you say he is, but this is an age to try men and know them. As to what you say concerning your parting with Portsmouth, if it must be I think Lord Noel a very good man to be in it, but I do not know why you should part with it, if you can keep it. If I be not mistaken I wrot to you upon this subject once before, but if I have not I shall tell you my thoughts upon it. The office of Master of the ordnance is I acknowledg the more honorable post, and of more profit, but the governement of Portsmouth is more considerable, and as to the circumstances you are in, and considering the state of affairs, and even your owne privat concerne, if I were in your place I had rather have Portsmouth, then the Ordinance, and would not part with the first if I could keep it, for even as to your privat concerne, if my affairs go ill, you can hardly expect to be continu'd in the Ordinance, for the same reason which will prevail to remove you from the one, will be made use on for the other, and if you can continu as you are, and keep of any alteration in the Ordinance, you may hope if I returne to have both, but after all I have sayd, if they have you part with Portsmouth, there is no remedy, and in that case, Lord Noel is a very good man, and if they do oblige you to it, I shall look on it as a very ill signe as to my self, and shall not expect you will keep the Ordinance long, but of all this you will be better able to take your measurs when the tryals are over. All things are, God be thanked, very quiat here, and like to continu so, some of the ministers have refused to take the test, but for all that it gos downe very well with most people.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

[1681,] Nov. 21.—I had yesterday yours of the 15th, in which you gave me an account of what his Majesty had sayd to Lord Feversham, but how to make that agree with what Lord Hyde say to me, and the Dr, I cannot, for by what Lord Hyde says, I see little hops of being sent for or having leau to go up, and by what the other writs, it dos not look as if I should be stuck to, for only to be sommond by writ as the Dr says, looks as if his Majesty were afraid to call me other ways, and would not stand by me when I was there. Discourse of this with Lord Hyde and the Dr and talke with Mr. Seymour to, and know his opinion what I should do if a Parliament be called, which by all letters I see is like to be sone, and lett you that [are] my freinds consider beforehand wha[t . . . torn] to his Majesty concerning me, when that is, and what I aught to presse him to, it being impossible for me at this distance to know what to say without aduice from where you are.

[1681,] Nov. 22.—You will see by what I have already writen that I did not expect to have had so good newse, and so sone as yours of the 17th brought me, which I receved this morning. I see by it and by Lord Hyde's that t'was Mr. Seymour began first. Pray lett him know how kindly I take it from him, and that I find the advantage of having so hold a freind and so true one as he is, of which I am and always shall be very sensible. I send you here enclosed a letter to him to assure it [torn] self, and pray say as kind things to Lord Feversham from me as I know he deservs from me. I was very glad to find Lord Halifax concern'd in my being sent for, I had a letter from him, which I have answered. I have not tyme to say more to you now.

1681. Dec. 10. Tanger.—Colonel P. Kirke to Colonel Legge. The bearer Mr. Povey has promised me to tell you our condition of 33 gunners there is not 10 knows the gun from the carriage; and now Mr. Povey is gone there is not 2 men in town understands the art of gunnery. . . . He is a very honest man, so pray dispatch him to us as soon as it lies with your convenience.

1681. Dec. 17. Dublin Castle.—Duke of Ormonde to Col. Legge. Amongst many persecuted French Protestants come lately over to Dublin is one Lewis Beauvall, from Rochelle. Asks that employment may be found for him in England.

1681. Dec. 18. Tangier.—Colonel Kirke to Col. Legge. Is informed that the bearer Mr. William Harmond, brother of Cap. Thos. Harmond, is very fit for the post of master gunner at Tanger.

[1681?].—Petition of the inhabitants of Gosport to Col. Legge, Governor of Portsmouth.

Complain of the loss of fresh water enjoyed by them before the digging of the works about the said town, and suggest that a traverse wall on the north side of the town would prevent the salt water from intruding upon the springs. Signed by Geo. Rennalls, Christopher Elminstone, and 5 others.

[1681-2,] Feb. 18, Edin[burgh].—James Duke of York to Col. Legge. I intended to have written to you by the last post, to lett you know I had yours of the 11th, and one of an older date which I had not answered, but the councell satt so long, after which I had a meeting with some I trust most about Lord Argil's affaire, which lasted so long as I had not tyme to write, to tell you that I aproved of your not letting my letter be delivred, for the reasons giuen, and hope it will be brought about without it, by what is sayd to me, tho if I be not sent for, before this getts to you, I shall have little hops left of seing London in hast. I should thinke Lord Halifax's behaviour and pressing for a Parliament should lessen his creadit with his Majesty which would be good for me, as well as for his Majesty, for tis impossible things can go well if he be at the head of affairs. As for what you propose concerning Mr. Aldworth I have not given leave to Mr. Holder to sell his place, nor will I lett it be sold, so that at present I need say no more about it, when I shall be at London t'will be tyme enough to consider what to do. All things are quiet here, and tho the phanatiks will hardly rise in this kingdome, as I beleve, tis not for want of will but power. I shall be very impacient for the letters are to come on Tuesday next, and hope they will bring some good newse, if not my pacience will be tryd.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

1682, Feb. 25, Edin[burgh].—I find by yours of the 18th, that you were not altogether in dispare of my being speedily sent for, tho by my other letters I had little hops left of it. I have by this post written to his Majesty to presse my having leave to wayt on him for some few days to give him an account of his affairs here and to receive his orders in some thing which I cannot so well acquaint him with except I be with him, and which is absolutely necessary for his service. I aught to have sayd this before, but was still so fed with the expectation of being sent for, that I thought it would have been done without it, and now I am sure if my letter had been delivred it could have done no harme. I hope this I have now written may do good, I am sure if it dos not my affairs are in an ill condition. I was very much surprised to find by yours, you are not yett of the councell, for I beleved you were to have been it by your place. Nobody has sayd any thing to me of it but your self, sure no body can be against it, that pretends to be my freind, and I look on it to be a greater injury to me, then it is to you, since tis because you are my servant,

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

that you are not admitted of it, and not for any other reason. I have not by me to say more to you now.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

[1681-2,] Feb. 28., Edinburgh.—I send you here enclosed at the desire of the Commissioners of the treasury, a note, concerning tents, that they desire to have made in England, for the use of his Majesty's forces here, for they cannot well gett them made here, tis the Generall gave me the paper, by which you will see the sises they desire them of; pray lett them be gone in hand with as sone as may be. I have orderd Sir A. Apsley to pay you the mony there when you shall call to him for it, lett me know what it will come to, that I may receive the mony here of the Treasury, lett me know in what tyme you thinke they may be done, and, whether you thinke the Kitchen yacht could not bring them all they being but six hundred. Yesterday I had yours by Carleton, and am now in houerly expectation of your brother Will. since you say if I am to be sent for, he is to come with it, and by the letters come this day I find it was resolved I should have leaue to go to Newmarkett to wayte on his Majesty there; if that be, lett my fox hounds and hunting horses be there to meett me I have given Sir Allen orders concerning M^r Hilliard. The Cleveland yacht is not yett arrived, which is all I shall say till I heare certainly whether I am to go or no, when I do I shall send you word whether I shall go by land or sea.

[Addressed.] For Colonel Legge.

1681-2. March 10. Tangier.—Colonel P. Kirke to Colonel Legge.

On the bad state of the garrison, from want of officers, &c.; also of a master gunner, a firemaster and an engineer.

1681-2. March 19.—Ignat. Usher to Colonel Legge.

Wishes for a commission with his cousin Tyrell, if he gets a ship.

1682, March 27. Flanchford.—Lord Windsor to Col. George Legge.

At my return I found myself a father to a son more than I had born when I parted with you, and the 'arrant' of this letter is to desire you will join with my Lady Halifax and the Bishop of St. David's in making him a Christian.

1682, April 10. London.—List of subscribers for the new East India Stock. Upwards of 800 names of persons subscribing sums varying between 10,000*l.* and 200*l.*, the total subscription being set down at 1,300,200*l.*

1682, May 10. Welbeck.—Henry, Duke of Newcastle, to Colonel Legge. Acknowledges letters of April 5 and 26. "When I was but eleven years of age I was very much obliged to your father and your uncle Robert who was pleased to be with my father at Newcastle when the first troops was raised for his Majesty in the year '42. I should be a very unworthy body if I was not perfectly your servant. I present my particular thanks to you for your commission to Charles Pratt, which I will send to Capt. Bickerstaff by the next post. I very much acknowledge your favour to me that I shall see the survey of what is to be done at Newcastle and Berwick before you present it to his Majesty in Council. Your own knowledge and wisdom will direct you better than any persons advice. I shall be sure to write to Newcastle and Berwick that you may be informed of every thing we know. I have two commissions by me to be Governor of Newcastle and the port and the new fort there; the first commission was in '67, the other in '73."

1682, June 6 and 13.—Proceedings of court martial held on board his Majesty's yacht Charlotte, concerning the loss of the Gloucester, Sir John Berry, commander, attributed to the neglect of sailing instructions by Capt. Christopher Gunman, commander of the Mary yacht. Gunman was dismissed from his command, condemned to be imprisoned during his Majesty's pleasure, and to forfeit a year's pay for the benefit of the Chest at Chatham. The court was composed of Sir Richard Haddock, president, Captains Hen. Williams, Geo. Churchill, Tho. Alline, Wm. Botham, Math. Tennant, Ralph Wren, and George St. Loe.

"A short and modest account of Capt. Gunman's cause" is attached, drawn up by Gunman himself.

1682, June 14. Tichfield.—Edward Lord Noel to Colonel Legge at his house in the great square in St. James's Fields at London. Describes the sad fate and unhappy end of Major Howston at Portsmouth. The Major, Capt. Cornwallis, and St. John Nicholas did dine with Sir Richard Beach on Monday last at the dock, and had drunk too freely there. Capt. Cornwallis returned to the town about three o'clock, but the other two were walking homewards between seven and eight in the evening, when a quarrel arose and Major Howston was killed on the spot by Lieut. Nicholas, who says he was forced to do it in his own defence. The Major received six wounds, some of which were on his back, so there is good reason to doubt it was not so fair on the Lieutenant's part, if a fact of that nature may at any time be called so, which is always a breach of the law. In this case it is found by the coroner's inquest to be wilful murder, and Nicholas is in custody. His Majesty has lost a loyal subject, his garrison at Portsmouth a very good officer, and the writer a friend in whom he did much confide.

1682, June 15 and 17. Bath.—Col. Sir Edw. Villiers to Colonel Legge. About the repairs to be undertaken at Tynemouth Castle.

1682, June 21. Welbeck.—Henry, Duke of Newcastle, to Colonel Legge.

Referring to his previous letter and to matters at Berwick and Tynemouth Castle. "I am very glad you intend to make Berwick a place to be defended, but sure now it doth not deserve the name of a garrison, I think forty men could take it with the assistance of the disaffected persons in the town. I am very ready to make a deputy governor if my cousin Wid[drington] be willing, and would have him had a deputation from me, but he desired to be Lieutenant-governor, and so I desired it of his Majesty for him. I assure you he and my Lord Widdrington has all the profits of governor and of the company, and so I acquainted his royal highness when I had the honour to attend him here."

1682, July 3.—The Earl of Carlisle to Colonel Legge.

I hear you continue to press the king in the affair of Sir G. Fletcher. I did hope what I had writ to you would have satisfied you that it was both the best and kindest thing both for him and me to let the matter rest at least a while, it being the only way now left to bring this humorous, stubborn gentleman to a right temper again . . . ; but if in the temper he is in you support him to bring me to his beck, you lay a foundation of perpetual enmity betwixt us, for as in the general I am a very easy man to live with, yet in what concerns my honour I cannot be removed. I purpose to wait upon you in London the beginning of winter, and am now going into Yorkshire in ten days, my daughter Preston being there in expectation to see me.

1682, July 10. Sir George Fletcher to Colonel Legge.

A long letter about his differences with the Earl of Carlisle and Lord Morpeth. "I was once as much in the favour of these Lords as any in the country, and the first thing that gave any shock to our friendship was the seizing of some Irish cattle which the seizer advising with me

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

in, he then having a warrant from my Lord Carlisle to seize Irish cattle, I told him my opinion of the law, and how I thought he ought to demean himself in the execution of it, I not knowing who was concerned in the cattle, nor if I had should I have given any other advice than I did. But soon after I found the effects of my Lord Morpeth's displeasure, for I was made Sheriff of this county, a place of expense and hazard, turned out of the commission of peace, which troubled me more than the former, though less to my damage, because I thought that must be effected by some ill representation made of me to his Majesty, but by your friendship I had not only the honour to kiss his Majesty's hand, but an opportunity to clear myself from those ill things suggested against me, his Majesty being graciously pleased to give me his pardon, and to say that he remembered my father's suffering and doubted not my loyalty." When Lord Carlisle returned from Jamaica, other disputes arose with him and Lord Morpeth, connected with the Carlisle corporation, the train bands, &c.

1682, July 12. London.—Lord Longford to Colonel Legge.

Has news brought him that Sir Jonas Mooze has broken his neck by a fall from his horse. Reminds Legge of his promises in favour of Mr. Loggan, whose modesty will not allow him to make pretensions for Sir Jonas's employment.

1682, July 17. Portsmouth. Edward Lord Noel to Colonel Legge.

I received yours of the 11th inst., for which I thank you, and have resolved to follow your advice by making my son Lieutenant-Governor of Gosport, which you say will prevent disputes about precedency. . . . You will find loyalty so intailed on him, that all the cunning lawyers of the house of Commons, into which I design to bring him the next sessions, will not be able to alter that settlement and change his honest principles. . . . I am as much troubled as any one for my lieutenant-governor and his son, who must shortly come to his trial; but if he escape, I hope his majesty will give me leave to recommend another to his place, and not suffer him to have any command in this garrison. . . . I desire you to consider whether this be not a fit season for his majesty to offer some recompense to the corporation of Portsmouth, if they will remove their town-house and market into a back street, and so leave the great street at all times open and clear, which will be a grace to the town and a convenience to the garrison.

1682, Aug. 7, Aug. 21, Sept. 2, and Sept. 30. Coventry.—Thomas Wood, Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry. Four letters referring to those received on behalf of Dr. Floyres, and suggesting that Dr. Raynes, the Chancellor of Lichfield, should be written to on his account. In some of them the Bishop refers to Lord Alington, constable of the Tower, having ordered him to provide two foot soldiers, instead of one as formerly, for his estate in Hackney, which is not above 100*l.* per annum; and asks Colonel Legge's help in gaining a remission.

1682, Sept. 14.—Lord Falkland to Colonel Legge.

Recommends a gunner for the vacant place in Upnor Castle, who received several wounds in the Dutch wars.

1682. Sept. 28. Tichfield.—Edward Lord Noel to Colonel Legge.

The continual importunity of my Lady Campden to have that business of the honour effected doth force me to renew my request to you that it may be despatched with all possible speed; for when she hears that Mr. Seymour is made an Earl (whereas it was expected by her that my Lord Campden should have been the first Earl, according to his Majesty's promise) you may easily guess how great her rage will be against me, and what prejudice she may do me by alienating my father's affection from me. . . .

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1682, Oct. 4. Tichfield.—Edward Lord Noel to Colonel Legge.
On the same subject.

1682, Oct. 5. Tangier.—Col. P. Kirke to Colonel Legge.

Still complains of defective ordnance, stores, &c., and of the decayed state of their quarters; also of his treatment in the matter of bills of exchange drawn by him upon Mr. Creed, Secretary, whom he has the ill fortune not to be able to reckon among his friends.

"We are now in great expectation to hear how the Morocco ambassador will have been received by his Master, and what regard will be had to his English negotiation. It is certain that this depends on incredible hazards, the capricious humours of a Prince who understands not or rather does not value the credit of an embassy, and the powerful interest of the Governor of Alcazar and many others who conspire to defeat all that has been transacted in England, may make us very much suspect the event. A little time will discover how matters will dispose themselves, and you shall receive frequent accounts of all passages here from me."

1682, Oct. 5. Tangier.—Fra. Povey to Colonel Legge.

These are humbly to acquaint your Honour that at my arrival at Tanger [on Sept. 26] I gave his Excellency an account of what supplies were sent. . . . (Ordnance matters). . . .

The Moorish ambassador is by this time with the King, but before his going sent the 'Runagade' with the whole account of the Embassy. Two days since came in here an officer of this garrison from the King who acquaints the Governor that the King is exceedingly satisfied with his ambassador, and was so transported with joy that the King [Charles II.] should present the poor slaves that were in this town that he fell on his face and kissed the ground, declaring that he would continue the peace for ever, and admired that he should find so much charity from any Christian. His nephew Mole Hamett is within a day's journey of the King with a considerable army, so that we expect some great news very suddenly.

1682, Oct. 5. Tangier.—Fra. Povey [to the Ordnance Officers in the Tower].

To the same effect as the last.

1682, Oct. 19. Tangier.—Fra. Povey [to Edw. Sherburne, Esq., or any other Principal Officer of the Ordnance] acknowledging guns and stores. . . . Here is a most miserable complaint for want of beds, the soldiers lying merely on the boards; as for the Lord Dunbarton's they have none because the first they had were made of straw, and the rest of the regiments are spoiled by having so many sick men. . . .

P.S.—About 3 days since came in a Turks man-of-war but did not stay, and 4 hours after he engaged with a French merchant ship of good force and after 6 hours hot dispute the French ship surrendered. This afternoon came in here a Tunis man-of-war bringing in 2 prizes taken from the Dutch.

1682, Oct. 19. Tangier.—Colonel P. Kirke to Colonel Legge.

Renews his demand for certain stores. . . . "You will see in an enclosed paper an account of what materials I have bought in Spain for the repair of our quarters, wherein being forced to make use of his Majesty's credit in so indispensable a necessity of his service, I question not but that particular regard will be had in the compliance with the bills I have this day drawn on the Treasury. . . . The Morocco am-

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

bassador has had the misfortune to incur his Master's displeasure to that degree, that himself and his comrades were loaded with chains, and what may be the further effects of the Emperor's indignation we cannot yet conjecture. In the mean time it is a sad change of the scene that the same person who was lately treated with royal honours should now be used beneath the condition of a slave, and affords us a too convincing instance that we are not to set any reliance on our peace with a Prince whose inclinations and humours vary every moment, and that follows the dictates only of an unaccountable caprice."

1682, Nov. 4. Tangier.—Colonel P. Kirke to Colonel Legge.

I gave myself the honour to write to you by Capt. Mathews by sea. This goes by the hands of a gentleman I send express with a letter from this Emperor to the King my Master. I must by this opportunity let you know that (as I always suspected) the Morocco ambassador's English negotiation proves of no effect, this King making use of the pretence that matters between us are so confusedly represented to him, by the opposite factions of the ambassador and the Alcazar, to intimate the necessity of some great persons being sent from England to inform him of the true state of things, and with whom he may treat himself and conclude with his own mouth the conditions of our mutual interest. So that now we have in effect no peace to depend on, and we live at present under a certain cessation of arms and at the discretion of each other. When you consider this state of our affairs, and the natures of the people we are to deal withal, you will not admire if I urge with all earnestness the speedy sending all sort of ammunition supplies, since there is no means to prevent my Master's reputation or interest from suffering by the capriciousness of these people, but the putting ourselves into a posture of being redoubted by them; and of receiving no affronts. It would be very seasonable if upon this emergency and conjuncture the Moors might see that we are not abandoned or neglected at home, and his Majesty would be the better able to take his measures on this unexpected reverse of affairs, did our neighbours observe we are preparing ourselves for the worst of events.

1682, Nov. 4. Tangier.—Fra. Povey to Colonel Legge.
On the demands of his department.

1682, Nov. 16. Tangier.—Colonel P. Kirke to Colonel Legge.

Acknowledges stores received, &c.; and sends copy of his letter dated on the same day to the Lords of the Committee on the damage done to the town wall, &c. by the late rains. The concluding paragraphs of the last letter run—

There is scarce anything of more consequence to the preservation of the garrison than water, which however hath been much neglected, many wells having been filled up and springs lost, that I am now endeavouring to retrieve. I have opened about fifty wells and by the help of some ancient Portuguese have found an excellent water-course which had been unknown for many years. They tell me of a book left with my Lord Peterborough that retains an account of the water-courses and many other necessary secrets, which if it were possible to recover would prove of great use to us.

By the late election of the mayor here there have been some changes and removes of aldermen and those of the common council. Mr. Smith, chosen by the universal votes, I have confirmed and sworn him mayor of the Corporation. The aldermen are William Stanes, Jenkin Thomas, James Gorman, Nicholas Sandford, Nathaniel Lodington, and John Forgeon. Those of the common council are Richard Sinhouse, Daniel Vansusterfleet, Robert Cuthbert, Edward Chestone, James Waringe, Francis Emms, Jacob Henderson, Henry Sparks, Diego Nortus, James Burino, John Samms, and Stephen Vincent.

1682, Nov. 30.—A brief of the Controversy depending between the Officers of the Navy and Sir Philip Howard and Co., touching the late invention and practice of sheathing his Majesty's ships with lead.

1682, Nov. 30 and Dec. 16. Tangier.—Colonel P. Kirke.

1682, Dec. 19. Welbeck.—Henry, Duke of Newcastle, to Lord Dartmouth.

Congratulates him on his peerage.

[1682?].—Two papers headed.

Methods observed in his majesty's garrison of Tanger whilst under the command of his Excellency Col. Peircy Kirke.

Signs to be observed.

1682-3, Jan. 11. Tangier.—Colonel P. Kirke to Lord Dartmouth. Congratulations and garrison matters.

1682-3, Jan. 23. Tangier.—Fra. Povey to Lord Dartmouth.

Mr. Nicolson, the courier from England, arrived here about 10 days since and 2 days ago went on his journey to the King of Morocco. Ordnance matters. In conclusion the writer dwells on his own services, and efforts to improve himself in the sciences of gunnery and fortification.

1682-3, Jan. 25. Tangier.—Colonel P. Kirke to Lord Dartmouth.

I am extremely sorry the Lords of the Committee did not think fit to recruit our horse, for upon my word it is of the greatest consequence. As for a dependence on Spanish succours, it is certain that our misfortunes may be too sudden to give us time to expect them from thence; nor indeed can we well rely on a nation which loses its own places out of neglect to relieve them. However I do not think we are in so ill a condition that we should fear anything of that kind, though I could wish we were better, and as long as we have so good a garrison we question not to be able to defend ourselves till we hear from England. I hope we shall have occasion of neither, for since the Moors perceive his Majesty and the lords of his Council take care of us, they speak no longer in the high strain they were wont, and the Alcade alarmed with the news that stores, officers, men, ammunition, and money are coming from England, expresses now an extraordinary complacency and kindness, to that degree as I almost persuade myself we shall at length see our Whitehall treaties ratified. I am sure I have applied my greatest study and endeavours for that end, though, I hear, malicious people do surmise that I consider a war, as my interest, and that consequently I promote it; wherein, I am sure, you will believe they are unjust to me, nor indeed ought I to be suspected of so great weakness of judgment as to have a war in my aim, wherein I can propose no advantage to myself, but must enter upon it (considering our unprovided state) with a certain prospect of disgrace. . . . As for Mr. Shere's proposals some of them are very necessary, and to that degree, that above two months since I have set men to work on the batteries of Peterborough Tower, and have finished those batteries whereof I gave your Lordship an account. . . . (gives other particulars of repairs, &c. accomplished).

1682-3, Feb. 8, Tangier.—Colonel P. Kirke to Lord Dartmouth.

The Commissioners for inspecting the fortifications have found it of absolute necessity that the outside of York Castle and the walls of Devil Tower (which are falling) be ordered to be repaired with the greatest expedition. A draught of those ruinous parts with an estimate of the charges (621*l.*) of their repair, is enclosed.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1682-3, Feb. 11 and Feb. 14. Greenwich.—Sir Phineas Pett to ——. About the repairs of ships, &c.

1682-3, Feb. 21. Longleat.—Lord Weymouth. Asks for advice as to how he shall conduct himself towards Mr. Seymour after his disgrace, when the latter comes into that neighbourhood. Is of opinion the best way will be to meet as they used to do, without taking any notice of what is past.

1682-3, Feb. 22. Tangier.—Colonel P. Kirke to ——.

Acquaints him with the works that have been lately completed there, &c.

1682-3, March 8. Tangier.—Fra. Povey to ——.

On Thursday last Sir John Berry arrived in the Henrietta, and on Sunday Sir John Wyborne in the Happy Return from Lisbon, with stores and guns. Reports progress in strengthening the batteries, &c.

1682-3, March 8. Tangier.—Colonel P. Kirke to ——.

Also reports the arrival of Berry and Wyborne, as well as of Captain Priestman, in the Reserve, from the Levant, whom he relieved of five brass cannon which he was transporting to England; this he hopes will be approved of, as such cannon are greatly needed for the defence of the place.

1682-3, March 9. Welbeck.—Henry, Duke of Newcastle, to Lord Dartmouth.

Your Lordship is a great judge of men as well as mighty able in business, and truly I think Mr. Wallis very fit to serve his Majesty at Berwick, and I wish him so well I present my humble thanks to your lordship for your favours to him I humbly acknowledge your great favour to me concerning the fortifications of Berwick, and I am mighty glad your Lordship has it in your thoughts to make it a considerable garrison, for I reckon myself more of Northumberland than of any country, because we were there before the Conquest . . .

1682-3, March 18. Virginia.—Thomas Lord Culpeper to Lord Dartmouth.

"I shall first take leave to congratulate your new access of honour, so justly due to your merit and services, and then acquaint you that long before the receipt of your letter I had in effect done what you desired" put another in the place of Mr. Welldon as sheriff. Reports the state of the stores, and the narrow escape of the powder barrels from explosion by a fire in the adjacent woods, thanks to the desperate valour of the sergeant and soldiers.

"I thank God things have succeeded beyond my hopes, and by mine to Mr. Secretary Jenkins you will receive the beginning of a yet more comfortable account I hope to give by the end of our general court, that is the middle of May. The greatest difficulty I have had hath been to rectify Sir Henry Chichelye's weaknesses, or rather nothingnesses; but his death on the 5th of February last hath eased this place from all future mal-administrations. Tobacco now bears a good price, and will be of tolerable value all next year, if not longer. I shall in April make an example of some plant cutters now indicted for treason, for terror to others, if their juries find them guilty. The greatest rogue of all was pardoned by Sir Henry on condition to build an useful bridge near his house, for performance whereof his son in law, being one of his Majesty's Council also, and Mr. Beverley were security. The next great rogue was let out on bail. I have issued out a proclamation under the seal of the colony for him to deliver himself up by a (sic) day for trial, and am now suing the bail; and Sir Henry pardoned the Lord knows who, all that were in the field without taking a list of them, which so embarrasses me that the lot of severity will fall on the least guilty or least malicious." Wishes to return to England for a short time to propose certain things of great consequence in the future, which cannot be well understood by letter.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1683, April 7. Ragley.—Lord Conway to

. . . I shall obey my Lord Rochester's commands and say no more of my cousin Seymour for the present, more than that I see your lordship hath performed the part of a true friend to him . . . I think his majesty might very well have made one in our intrigues at Littlecott, for I am sure we discoursed nothing but what I have heard his majesty approve of a hundred times. I shall much rejoice if we have ease this year from foreign parts; I doubt it will not last much longer. I hope Sir Henry Goodrick's narrative will be a justification for the commission given to Churchill; his usage hath been barbarous and deserves resentment, and if I had ever been advised with on this point, it should have been to more effect than this expedition will ever turn to, for this Sharpe upon whom they rely is the person who lost all by his cowardice and drunkenness. Mr. Blathwayt can give you the whole history of him, I am glad you take care to let the Recorder of Exeter have time to prepare his speech for his majesty's reception there.

1683, May 17. John, Lord Churchill, to

"The bearer has bene beging of me that I would signe a paper for her, which she says will doe her good, itt is aboute the busness of Irland" &c.

1683, May 26. Ragley.—Lord Conway to Chiefly complimentary.

1683, June 10. Hull.—Earl of Plymouth to

Complains of a letter received from the Ordnance Office, professedly by Lord Dartmouth's direction, reflecting on the Commissioners for carrying on the fortifications at Hull, viz. himself, Sir Willoughby Hickman, Sir Robert Hilliard, and Sir John Legard. Thinks neither his lordship nor Sir Christopher Musgrave can have seen the letter.

1683, June 23.—Petition of Edward Conyers, Esq., Keeper of his majesty's stores, with many papers relating to the charges against him of accepting bribes, &c.

[1683], June 24.—Lord Castleton to

I have commanded my son Charles to wait upon you. All he begs till he have an employment at sea is that he may be taken into your company of fusileers, and he has promised me faithfully and punctually to observe all the duty of a common soldier; and I hope his officers will keep him to it.

1683, June 25. Sandbeck. Lord Castleton to

My son gives me an account of your lordship's particular kindness towards him, and that he has met with his Captain, and acknowledges his happiness in serving under the command of so worthy and brave a person . . .

1683, June 29. Hull.—Earl of Plymouth to

I have received the 200*l*. of Mr. Alderman Lambert, which you gave me credit for. He desired me according to their custom to draw a bill upon your lordship.

1683, June 30. Ragley.—Lord Conway to

I should have obeyed your lordship's commands without consulting either my own inclinations, or my own reason, if I had not received a letter on Monday last from Mr. Secretary Jenkins, of which I have here enclosed a copy that you may see there is not one word of desiring my company, and on the other side there is work cut out for me here, which I am pursuing, and which I think myself obliged to attend.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

I doubt not but all the Wihs in England, whether in the Court or out of the Court, and all the French pensioners, if any such there be, were in some measure concerned in this plot, and consequently they will endeavour to bring off one another at as cheap a rate as the thing will bear. Some may suffer but the faction shall be kept up for new mischief, which upon this occasion ought to be entirely broken. What good will it do me, or any of my friends, if I were now amongst you preaching of this doctrine? Your master will not make the less courtship to that hand which foment it all. Therefore, I hold it best for me to do my duty where I am, and that I shall perform with all zeal and fidelity both to the King and the duke, who possibly may come to be sensible of those that serve them only upon the principles of honour and conscience. If not I shall have the satisfaction of living and dying with an upright heart, and shall not one jot the less study to show myself your, &c.

1683, June 30. Sandbeck.—Lord Castleton to

The news of this plot alarms me, especially when I consider the persons that are reported to be in it.

'Tis ingratitude makes all things black.

Your lordship will pardon me if I beg of you to give the duke my humblest duty and assure his Royal Highness from me, that I will not swerve one syllable from what I promised him at Doncaster. Promises once made are past debate I am not ill horsed nor armed, and I hope not ill with my neighbours, neither Yorkshire nor Lincolnshire, for I am no pensioner nor plotter.

Honesty is the wisdom I have gone upon, though it seldom doth a man good. Howe'er there is a something in't that will smell sweet and blossom when we are but dust.

1683, June.—Capt. Cloudesley Shovel's account of his being forced to salute the Spanish fleet in the bay of Cadiz.

"Being ordered by Admirall Herbert to saile to Cadiz, and stay there for the arrivall of Leftennant Necolson who was expected to com post every day from England, we being att an anchore in the bay of Cadiz the 23rd of June 1683 before three a clock in the morning severall of the Spanish armado anchored neare us, three of them about seventy gunns a peace, lay within pistall shott of us, and had so placed themselves that we could not cast our ship without being a bord of one of them: they sent a bord me to demand a salute to their generall: and being danyed twice they fired a great gunn, and a vally of small shott, which cutt severale of our runing riggine: the generall's ship not being fitt to come doune, the generall had putt himsele a bord the Vice-Admirall of the Flanders squadron which ship he had made reedy to assist in our distruction if we offired to fi before we saluted, also the gunns in the town ware made reedy against us. I saw his Majesty's ship and subjects in such unavoydable danger of being destroyed without saluting, thought 'twas better to redeem ship and lives with a salute then to rueing the whole. The man that demanded the salute was Popacheus Leftennant who tould me his orders from his captain was to tell me that if I did not salute by eight a clock he must follow his Generall's orders, which was to destroy both ship and men. We fired seven gunns, but was not answered with any gunn."

Signed CLOU. SHOVELL.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1683, July to September.—Journal of Capt. Cloudesley Shovel, then of the James galley, of his proceedings from the departure of Admiral Herbert on the 1st of July till the 29th of September when he joined Lord Dartmouth in Tangier Road. The entries chiefly relate to the condition of the ships and the capture of a Dutch flyboat previously taken by a Sallee privateer and are unimportant; the following under the date of August 3rd being the only one of interest,

“We returned for Gibraltar where I found Colonell Kirke's brigg-teen, who was sent by him to give us the joyfull news of the escape of the King and Duke of York from the hands of murdering Presbeterians for which we made great rejoycing, and fired both great gunns and small shott.”

1683, July 2. Whitehall.—Charles II.

Original instructions to Lord Dartmouth for an expedition to be forthwith made to Tanger, for the demolition of that city, and for the removal of all English subjects, inhabitants there, and of all officers and soldiers there in garrison; a valuation to be taken of the estates and interests that the proprietors or inhabitants have in their houses and tenements, and reduced to the form of a general certificate to be laid before the king, in order that some reasonable compensation may be made; and particular regard is to be had to the Portuguese and other strangers whose indemnity is provided for by the Treaty between England and Portugal when Tanger passed to the former; the Portuguese and strangers with their families, goods, and effects are to be shipped off in the first place, and to be accommodated according to their several conditions and needs, and transported to their native countries, or to such ports as they shall reasonably desire; such English inhabitants as desire may be transported to any plantations or any place under English dominion, if no great expense is incurred; the great ends of this expedition to be concealed from the Moors, so that it may come as late as may be to their knowledge; all imaginable care therefore to be taken to prevent strangers and English subjects, and above all the Jews, from sending or carrying the news of the intended destruction of the place; Lord Dartmouth to correspond punctually with one of the principal secretaries so that the king may be informed of his proceedings, &c., &c. (11 pages.)

[The following undated papers evidently relate to the same expedition.]

N.D. Paper endorsed “Instructions.”

“The Powers must be to command all his Majesty's forces in or near Tangier both by sea and land during this expedition.

The instructions must be at your first coming to state every house-keeper's property in their houses considering the time they have in them and certefying under your hand a moderate and reasonable vallue to the end his Majesty recompence the loss to such as he shall see it reasonable and necessary so to doe.

That such of the old Portageiz inhabitants or other strangers that were inhabitants at his Majesty's first having the place delivered into his possession be by you payed a valluable consideration for their property before they depart from the city.

That they and all French, Spanyards, Itallians, or other strangers are by you shiped of (with their famelyes and all their effects) carefully and carryed to their own native countryes or such conveyent place as they shall desire.

HARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

That the English and Irish shall be brought carefully home to our respective Kingdomes with their famelyes and goods, or in case any English shall desire to goe to Ireland or any other place in our dominions that you see them gratified according to their request if it be reasonable, and the like to the Irish or any other of our subjects so desiring.

That before you draw off any of our garrison you see all the inhabitants with their wives, families, and effects excepting lumber, that our ships may not be unnecessary pestered therewith safely and carefully shipped and provided for their transportation to their propper places.

That after the inhabitants are safely brought of the old, lame, and sick souldyers and officers belonging to our garrison are by your order carefull shipped aborde our hospitall ships provided and fitted for that purpose.

That in the next place you take speciall care to ship of our servisable stores of all sorts distributing them into our men of warr or our store ships by you to be provided for that purpose, taking still care to preserve so much ammunition as shall be necessary for the defence of our Officers and souldiers which are as carefully and regularly to be brought of as you can contrive it that in case the Moores should set upon our forces the lives of our subjects may be as much preserved as is possible in this our service, making all necessary cuttings of and other means which you shall advise upon the place for the well making of an orderly retreat.

You are not to make your retreat till the walls, workes, and houses are fully demolished, and above all things you are to see the Mold is absolutly destroyed as much as possibly lyes in your power and to use your utmost endeavours to make the harbor unusefull for any that shall endeavour to possess this place for the future.

You are stricktly required not to come off your selfe till you see these our instructions fully executed and perfected."

A pencil memorandum adds—

"There must be a generall clause to empower me to doe what ever may be omitted in these instructions if I finde it necessary for the carrying on this service when I am upon the place.

The instructions must be as a serule fixed to the powers given me by the great seale.

The arreares of the garrison must be paid that the inhabitants may have their debts in from the officers and souldyers which they have trusted or at least so farr as theyr pay will answer it before they are forced to part."

A note written in ink follows.

"'Tis proposed that Sir J^o Mathewes or Sir Benjamin Bathurst or some eminent marchant may be ordered with me to provide credit for so much money as shall be found absolutly necessary for this service to be accounted for and taken up in manner and method as shalbe prescribed by the Lords of the Treasury."

N.D. Paper endorsed "The first proposalls for Tangier.

"An order to be sent by Sir John Berry to Colonel Keirke to banish the Jewes.

Major Beckman and Nelson to goe away as soone as may be or with one of the Turckye convoyes, to mine the walls of the toune and place Furnoes, with some small cuttings off as if the toune were to be so defended if a close seige should be layed to it hereafter.

To repair Midleton's line from the Castle to Yorke fort, to carry with them a convenyent quantity of sulphur and mealed powder &c.

with fifty of the largest unused granadow shells and twenty setts of minors' tooles.

Sir John Berry immediately to return with the battalion of the gaurds.

Sir John Wyborne and the other ships to carry the Scotch Regiment for Ireland, and returne back victualed well from thence to Tangeir by the latter end of May, which is proposed to be the time for the randevouze of all his Majesty's ships that can conveniently be there.

Qy. what ships and of what rates are already designed to be sett out for this summer if this proposall had never beene made, and then to see what addition wilbe needfull, such ships as are added must be large airy ships able to bring away good numbers, but all ships or vessels employed in this service will come but to small charges being best to be sayled theither with no more hands then is just necessary and safe for sayling them.

The inhabitants are not above a hundred famelyes at most exclusive of the garrison and about 500 in number. These consist of Portageises, French, some few Italians and Spaniards, Irish, English.

The inheritance of the houses are the King's and the leases not long (as I am informed, but this may be particularly known in Mr. Creed's office) and many of the people concerned live in England and let them to the inhabitants at second hand as my Lady Peterborow, Sir Hugh Chumbly, Norwoode, &c.

Qy. wheather it will not be necessary for Keirrke to have directions in the meane time to carress the Mores and by all meanes he can to preserve the peace.

The forces drawn of may be thus provided for—

The Scotch Regiment in Ireland and likewise the 4 independent companyes that were drawn from thence.

The batalion of the gaurds in the gaurds heere.

The 4 independent companyes of Mⁿ to be broke into the other forces heere in the roome of such as shalbe found defective or marryed men upon a strickt muster.

The two Tangeire Regiments may be reduced to twenty or twenty-four companyes by which meanes his Majesty's necessary garrisons may be reasonably supplied and the two regiments of gaurds be intire to attend his Majesty's person.

The four troopes of hors may be continued heere as troopes of Dragoones theye wilbe verry usefull and less chargable then now theye are at Tangeire.

All the rest of the charge of Tangeire may be wholly saved and such storekeepers gunners miners and others that belong to the traine (and have proved good men) may be provided for in the Office of the Ordnance heere."

1683, July 3.—Capt. M. Aylmer's narrative of his meeting with the Spanish fleet, and his being obliged to salute the Admiral, under threats of being sunk. Attached is an account of the discourse between the Spanish Admiral and Lieut. E. Stagings, who was detained on the flag-ship until the salute was given. The Spaniards, it was alleged, had orders to salute the English flag in our channel; and it was expected that the English would do the same on the coast of Spain.

1683, July 8. On board the Tiger prize, riding in Tangier road.—Capt. Mathew Aylmer. Describes at greater length the circumstances under which he had to submit to the Spanish fleet. Mr. Killigrew is mentioned as having gone with the lieutenant on board the Admiral's ship. Attached is a Spanish account of the matter, with a translation.

HARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1683, July 9. Ragley.—Lord Conway to Lord Dartmouth. Thought Lord Rochester would have let him know if his company were required in London, but is sorry if he has committed an error in depending upon such advertisement.

"I am very glad I am to congratulate your Lordship's escape from the mischief intended you, what would my Lord Halifax have given to have been in that bead-roll of sacrifices. It would have contributed more to his design than either his marquissship or privy seal, and most loudly would he have magnified himself upon it. I am sure you are not displeased that my cousin Seymour hath shewed his activity at Exeter about those that are concerned in this plot."

1683, July 10. Whitehall.—Charles II. Original instructions to Sir John Berry, Knight, commander of the Henrietta. In the event of the death, sickness, or other disability of Lord Dartmouth, Berry is to execute all things committed to his lordship upon the sea or relating to the command of the fleet, and to assist Piercy Kirke, Esq., to whom in the event of such disability full authority had been given to carry out the instructions to be performed in the city of Tanger and parts adjacent. (4 pp.)

1683, July 12.—Lord Alington to Lord Dartmouth. About the difficulty of finding lodgings in the Tower for the commissioned officers, the warder's houses, &c. they occupied being wanted for the prisoners lately committed there.

1683, July 16. Badminton.—Duke of Beaufort to Lord Dartmouth. The garrison of Chepstow has had no powder but 6 barrels, which is the usual allowance for one year, since 1678, and other stores are wanting. In his own hand the Duke adds "The smallness of this garrison in a county as ill affected as any in England, though in as convenient a place as can be thought of, it being upon a port into Wales, and in the centre of my lieutenancy, I hope will now be considered, there being no other place within the sixteen (?) counties I have the honour to be lieutenant of, to secure arms and ammunition in."

1683, July 19. Tangier.—Colonel P. Kirke to Lord Dartmouth. In commendation of Capt. George Aylmer, who has been recalled from his station there by the Commissioners of the Admiralty.

1683, July 23.—Lord Belasyse to Lord Dartmouth. In explanation of some matter between Sir John Hotham and himself when appointed governor of Hull after the Restoration, regarding some saddles, &c. alleged to have belonged to the garrison, but to have been appropriated by the deputy lieutenants to the use of the Yorkshire militia, which was the first raised in England in pursuance of the Act of Parliament then newly passed.

1683, July 27. Whitehall.—Charles II. Additional instructions to Lord Dartmouth for the expedition to Tangier. The Scotch regiment there, instead of being transported to Ireland as previously directed, is to be landed at any port in the west of England that wind and weather will permit. The horses now at Tangier to be transported to the opposite shore of Spain, and there sold to the best advantage; the proceeds to be given to the true owners in order to remount them in England.

1683, July 28. Derby House.—Lords of the Admiralty (Lord Brouncker, Sir E. Hales, and Hen. Savile) to the Duke of Grafton, Admiral of the Narrow Seas. Desire him to hold a court martial to try some mutineers on board the Bonadventure, and also the boatswain of the Mary Rose, who is said to have killed a man.

1683, July 31. The Saphir.—Captain Antho. Hastings to Lord Dartmouth. Makes various charges against his boatswain, Cornelius Driscoll, whose petition to Lord Dartmouth is attached. A memorandum at foot records that "at the instance of Capts. Hastings, Shovel, and Wheeler, my Lord forgave this man, and restored him to his command."

1683, [July?].—Petition of Daniel Cooke, boatswain of the Mary Rose. Humbly begs Lord Dartmouth to peruse the appended narrative, attested by Lieut. Richard Byron of the Pearl, and others, of his quarrel at Woolwich with Edw. Williams, foremast-man of the Mary Rose, which led to the death of the latter.

1683, August 1.—Earl of Rochester to Lord Dartmouth.

"I could not send to your Lordship by the post last night, because the bills could not be got ready so soon; for upon my faith I could not have them till the money was first paid here to the merchants that gave them. You will judge then whether it was as easy for me to get 20,000*l.* as ten laid down, and you may believe me, if I could you should have had the twenty; and give me leave once more to assure you, that either in your private affairs, that relate only to yourself, or in the public where the King's service is carried on by you, there is nobody that I have more satisfaction in serving than yourself, to whom I wish all manner of success and happiness in all you undertake; and if you knew the many difficulties we are in in relation to money affairs, you would believe me more than you do. I have written to Col. Kirke a letter to encourage and hearten him and the garrison, which I thought was but necessary. If it were from a greater man it might do some good on such an occasion; as it is, I hope it will do no harm. I have sent it open to you that you may judge of it, and likewise be master of it, to deliver it or not, as you think best. And now my Lord, let me once more wish you a good voyage and all good fortune in it and a safe return; and let me assure you that you have not in the world a more faithful and obedient true servant than

ROCHESTER.

I am just going to Tunbridge with my wife and shall not return till Saturday. I am fain therefore to leave this packet with Mr. Shaw to send to you when Mr. Duncomb brings the other bill to him of 8,500*l.* When you receive it, be pleased to put it together with the other into Col. Kirke's letter, because they are both payable to him, God bless you, my dear Lord.

Wednesday morning Aug. the 1st.

Pray let me have the receipt that the bills came to your hand."

1683, Aug. 2.—Sir Leoline Jenkins to Lord Dartmouth.

"We have no manner of news but that lame Charleton is taken and brought in to Oxford. I have letters from Tanger of the 28th June, but no news in them. My Lord of Conway was last night very much on the mending hand. I pray God to bless you.

L. J."

1683, Aug. 3. Windsor.—Earl of Sunderland to Lord Dartmouth.

"The King has commanded me to signify to your Lordship that he would not have you set sail till you hear again what his Majesty's pleasure is, and that you shall certainly do either Sunday or Monday by an express. I will only tell you now that the occasion of these directions can be of no prejudice, and may be of advantage to your journey and the business you go about; and that I heartily wish you all prosperity."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1683, Aug. 3. Windsor.—J. Brisbane to Lord Dartmouth.

Has sent to Sir Richard Beach a commission for Lord Dartmouth to be commander in chief of a squadron of his Majesty's ships, with instructions, &c., but before the commission can be given him, his Lordship must repeat and sign the declaration required by Act of Parliament.

1683, Aug. 4.—Sir Martin Beckmann to Lord Dartmouth. Suggestions for the erection of some blinds of deal boards before some works connected with the pier (at Tangiers?) are begun, because "as soon as the country people should perceive you building on the pier, which they do not care to have altered in a better form for his Majesty's service, they would immediately so disturb the masons and bricklayers that they should not be able to work one stroke." Adds some long remarks on his bad health and desire to serve his Lordship again.

1683, Aug. 4, &c.—A copy of the Test on parchment, with the original signatures attached of all the officers who received commissions or warrants from Lord Dartmouth in his expedition to Tanger. The date of each signature is attached, and ranges between Aug. 4, 1683, and the end of February in the year following. The number of signatures is about 40.

1683, Aug. 5.—Earl of Rochester to Lord Dartmouth.

"The King having thought it necessary for his service to send for your Lordship to speak once more with you before you go your voyage, I shall make no answer to your letter at this time, but expect your arrival here, which I suppose you will hasten all that is possible, and bring none of that company back with you that design to go along with you, nor suffer any of them to come if they should desire to, because that may make the preparations slacken at Portsmouth."

1683, Aug. 5. Windsor.—Sir Leoline Jenkins to Lord Dartmouth.

Lord Dartmouth is immediately on receipt of this to take post and repair to Windsor with all the speed he can, to speak with the king once more; and is to take care that all preparations go forward during his absence.

1683, Aug. 12. Windsor.—Earl of Nottingham to Lord Dartmouth.

"The Tiger will not be ready to sail in less than 14 days, but I have spoken to Lord Rochester to hasten away Major Beckmann by some of the other ships which are all in the Downs. I am as sensible as you can be of some of the indirect practices of some of whom your Lordship has deserved better, . . . I wish your lordship a happy voyage, and am not concerned for not knowing your errand, unless by my knowing it I could have been useful to your Lordship."

1683, Aug. 14. Windsor.—Earl of Sunderland to Lord Dartmouth.

"The king has ordered Major Beckman to follow you as soon as may be. I assure you if my opinion is valued by you, you need not apprehend that any malicious enemy can prejudice you with me. I told you I thought myself obliged to have more care of an absent friend than of any other, and I dealt too freely with you in what I said to you at London to deceive you in this particular."

1683, Aug. 20.—Sir Leoline Jenkins to Lord Dartmouth.

"It is now high time I should acknowledge the honour of yours of the 11th from Portsmouth, for I hope that though the wind be still contrary, yet it will at last chop about and bring you to Cadiz before this do arrive at that place. . . . The king and the duke are in pain (I came from Windsor this morning) that the wind is so contrary to you, and the fanatics do still torment themselves that they cannot penetrate your design. We have news that Captain Aylmer in the Tiger, as well as Captain Shovell, hath been forced by the Admiral of the Spanish fleet in the Mediterranean to salute him with 13 guns, to which he returned but three. I am not able to send you by this post what passed at the rencontre; only that I was commanded this day to tell the Spanish ambassador that his Majesty was in no wise satisfied with the conduct of the Spanish Admiral towards Capt. Aylmer. What accompt or light soever I can get into this business you shall be sure to have, with the regulations (if any be made) touching those salutes."

1683, Aug. 25. Derby house.—Lords of the Admiralty (Earl of Nottingham, Lord Brouncker, Sir E. Hales, and Hen. Savile). We have ordered Captain Shovell, Commander of the James galley, with the rest of the ships named in the margin [Crown, Tiger prize, Sapphire, and Centurion] to observe such orders as your Lordship shall give him or them during your remaining in those parts. But we do hereby direct and require your Lordship not to divert any of the said ships from the service they are employed on in cruising off Sally upon any occasion whatsoever, unless there shall be absolute necessity for it.

1683, Aug. 26.—Copy of Admiralty Lords' report on the dispute with the Spanish Admiral. They are of opinion that his Majesty has received apparent wrong, for no salutes have ever been before required in the open seas by or from his Majesty's ships; and they find no sufficient reason to alter the method of salutes now practised.

1683, Aug. 27. Derby House.—J. Brisbane to Capt. Cloudesley Shovell, Commander of the James gally at Tangier. "What I have to say in answer to yours of the 13th of July is, that upon Admiral Herbert's arrival in England he did acquaint the Lords of the Admiralty with what happened between you and the Spanish ships at Cadiz, and they laid it before his Majesty, who I doubt not will come to some resolutions thereon in few days. In the meantime all I can advise you is his Majesty thinks there is wrong done him, and is not dissatisfied with you.

Lord Dartmouth is put in command in your parts, and is on his way to Tangier.

As to what you desire of an order to hang all "runagadoes," especially English ones, I have not had time as yet to communicate to the Lords of the Admiralty, but will let you know their pleasure therein."

1683, Aug. 28.—A Memorandum by Sir M. Beckmann of what is necessary to go in hand with as soon as my Lord shall arrive at Tangier in order for demolishing of the same, if his Lordship shall so think fit for his Majesty's service—divided under 24 heads. (6 pp.)

1683, Aug. 30. Whitehall.—Sir Ledline Jenkins to Lord Dartmouth.

"I have nothing to write hence but that we unskillful people in wind and weather are now and then (either when it blows hard or the wind is contrary) in pain for your lordship. The King thought you would be driven in to Plymouth, but now all conclude, not hearing from you, that you are gone by. We hope here that their Majesties have arrived safe and well last night at Winchester, and that the Duke and Duchess will be there this night. The Earl of Pembroke and Sir Charles Wheeler are reported here this day to be dead. The fate of Vienna is not yet known here, but it is much doubted by the account that foreign letters give of it. We have a great alarm nearer home, the French troops, to the number of 40,000, are supposed to be ere this entered into the pays

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

d'Alot in Flanders, and the rest of the country pretended to by the French. A brigadier from M. d'Humieres hath denounced (sic) to M. de Grana that they were to enter the very next day; and M. de Croissy having written to the Spanish ambassador now residing at Paris to justify what the French were doing, there is no question but that they are entered by this time. I take leave to send you for your curiosity (not that I have any order to do it) a paper given in to his Majesty by the Admiralty on Sunday last." [See Aug. 26.]

1683, Aug. and Sept.—A Narrative of extraordinary occurrences during the last cruising of the Dartmouth frigate, by Captain St. Loe. It begins—

On the 28th of August we got our guns, water, provisions, and necessaries on board, and afternoon having received Sir John Wyborne's orders for cruising, went to sea, &c.

On the 30th being off Sally, after having spoke with two Frenchmen, we espied and afterwards took the Swan prize (1½ pp.)

1683, Sept. 3 and Sept. 10.—Sir L. Jenkins to Lord Dartmouth.

Two letters containing a little court and foreign news.

1683, Sept. 15.—Minutes of a Council of War held on board the Grafton in Tangier Road, the Lord Dartmouth and several commanders present.

1683, Sept. 16. Tangier.—Colonel Percy Kirke to Lord Dartmouth.

"In order to give your Lordship that state of matters between myself and the Alcaid of Alcazar, relating to his Majestie's garrison, as you are pleased to command me in the letter I had the honour to receive yesterday in the evening, it will be necessary that I briefly relate the passages of severall months, and shew your Lordship by what degrees our good correspondence by land seems to have decayed, and his Majestie's affairs have taken that face wherein they appear at present.

The Alcaid lived in perfect good intelligence with me, from the time of Lieut. Nicholson's last departure for England till about the month of May, when I received some expostulating letters from him about the delay, as he pretended, in my procuring him a quantity of painted glasse from England, and certain lances from Spain: I could give him no account of the first, not having received any from the person to whose care I had recommended it at home, and it was impossible that the latter could arrive here within the time he expected and demanded them. The season then entering wherein I was to prepare my provision of straw for our horses, I resolved to ask the same timely of the Alcaid, for prevention of those difficulties I had experienced in the former two years about this matter, and therefore desired he would give his necessary orders that a certain quantity of straw should be delivered me in its due time, and that he should so dispose that I might depend upon it. He hereupon answered me in very short terms that when I had sent him the glasse and lances I should have the straw I had demanded. I endeavoured to make him comprehend how unreasonable it was, that he should make my delivering to him things, whose procurement was of meer courtesy, a condition of his giving me what he was obliged to by the articles of peace, but he continued inflexible in his denial to do me reason, and while several messages passed between us on this subject, Admirall Herbert gave me account that the Moors had recommenced their hostilities at sea, having carried an English vessell into Argiers and that all the Saly Corsairs were then out; this obliged me to put in execution the commands I had for the delivery of those orders, from the Lords of the Admiralty to Admirall Herbert which had lain deposited in my hands, in pursuance whereof he was to make war upon the Moors by sea. In this juncture I found the Alcaid had stopped all communication with the town, not suffering so much as a letter to come in, or any of our people to go out to the country, nor yet permitting those that were already there to return to us. I must confesse this alarmed me, and reflecting on the late unusuall niceties of the Alcaid, I thought I had but too much reason to suspect his good intentions, and judged it might prove of the highest ill consequence to my Master's service, at a time that the Alcaid used me so ill, and that by reason of his interruption of the commerce, I lived so much in the dark to all passages in the country, should I permit the Moors and Jews (who at that time flocked among us) to converse longer with us, and gather exact notices of the most minute transactions in the place. It was for this reason that I resolved to stand more upon my guard, and, since the Alcaid suffered none of my people to go into the country, to use the same method on my part, and suffer no Moors to come into the town, ordering at the same time those that were then here to depart. The Alcaid expressed much resentment hereupon, excusing, however, his shutting up the commerce on pretence of his having been before Larache, a Spanish garrison (though we found afterwards it was to keep from our knowledge the taking of an English ship by his own fregat), and expostulated with me in high terms both by letters and messages, which produced at length a conference between persons nominated on both sides in order to an accomodation. The Moors demanded a delivery of the whole arrear of powder to be the first step for the renewing our correspondence, and we urged that since the Alcaid had been the infractor of the peace, he ought reasonably to make the first advances towards the reestablishment of it; however, we insisted not on that nicety, but declared that whenever the Alcaid would allow us the full advantage of the articles of peace, particularly of that concerning the buying our cattle at the market prices, I was ready to comply with all he could demand of me by virtue of the articles. The Alcaid alleged a continuall custome of our buying the cattle otherwise, and that he could not alter it, though he owned it to be our right. The truth is, I would not have insisted on this extreamity of justice, in a matter which indeed is somewhat hard upon the Alcaid, in any other conjuncture, but I was forced to make use of it, to evade the delivery of so great a quantity of powder, at a time that I had reason to believe that the Alcaid might employ it to our prejudice, and which in my humble opinion ought not to be rashly put into his hands. No accomodation having followed these debates, the Alcaid departed for Salê, to give orders there for the transporting by sea a relief of coin to his Master's army, and perceiving some danger threatned by our fregats, and apprehending the impossibility of conveying safely those supplies, he imagined he had found out a good expedient by making use of a passeport (which I had given to the master of an English vessell in Salê for a voyage to the Levant) to carry a ship of his own laden with corn for Messa, prevailing likewise with the master to go aboard her, who with severall English seamen that belonged to the other vessell, undertook the voyage, and in their way were taken by the Dartmouth fregat. The first news I heard of this incident was from the Alcaid himself, who writ to me very pressingly that I would order the restitution of the ship and lading, as taken under my seguro. I hereupon acquainted him that the affairs of the sea were not at all within my jurisdiction, that the English captain acted in pursuance of instructions from his proper superiors, which it was not in my power to revoke, and that what he seemed to urge so vehemently concerning my passeport was in effect no argument, since the passe was not made use of for the ship or voyage for which it was designed, but misapplied to an end quite contrary to the intent of it. About this time our fregats made some other successful operations by sea, and now the Alcaid seemed to make earnest overtures towards an accomodation of all our differences, and particularly those of the sea, whereon though I had no especiall commission to treat, yet I judged it might be of ill consequence to let slip the present opportunity, and for this reason I resolved to make use of a latitude granted me in my patent for Governour to transact with the Alcaid whatsoever might appear for my Master's service relating likewise to those matters. The Alcaid after many tricks and artifices, too tedious to trouble your Lordship withall, which he used without much successe to dispose me to his pleasure, came at length once more into these feilds, where there was an enterview between us, and many professions passed of our good intentions on both sides. This was followed by severall conferences in order to a formall treaty, and the Alcaid having declared to me he had full power to transact all matters, as well relating to the land as sea, I proposed that both those interests should be proceeded on at the same time, and that whereas the present defectiveness of our land treaty was the occasion of many disputes, it was necessary it should be modelled into a better frame: but after a long discussion of severall points, I found the Alcaid either had not power or was not willing to alter any thing by land, and that in effect he shewed no great inclinations to a sea-peace, having proposed only a truce for a few months, or, at furthest, a peace during the term of our present land treaty, whereby I was sufficiently convinced he designed meerly to ease himself in this conjuncture of the disturbance of our fregats. These conferences did in conclusion answer the expectations of neither side, during which the Alcaid prepares an army, hoping his arguments would work more effectually upon me if he could render himself formidable, and it is now near a month since he hath been encamped in these feilds. The opinion of his force neverthelesse hath not yet obliged him to forsake the thoughts of a peace, and even since his army has been in the neighbourhood there have been severall conferences about the renewing our entercourse by land, wherein I have endeavoured to improve the opportunity of doing my Master service, hoping that my receding from the point of buying cattle at the market prices might be an expedient of procuring some other advantages in lieu of it, and to this end I have proposed one of three things should be allowed me instead of that privilege, viz^t, either the liberty of digging stone for our mole and houses; or that our people which go over the bounds be not made captives; or lastly (which I offered as a means to prevent the frequent desertion of our souldiers) that the Moorish guards should be removed from their present posts to the utmost extent of our ancient limits; but none of these proposalls have been harkned to by the Alcaid, and matters do still remain in suspense. The Alcaid in the mean time professes he intends nothing as an enemy, and I on my part have sufficiently assured him of my peaceable dispositions, and this being the present state of our affairs between us, I shall only adde one short remark, that the Alcaid having so long used the artifices of threats and promises, without passing to the least attempt, it is evident that he is not in a condition for war, and that consequently this is a fair opportunity of doing his Majestie some considerable service in order to raise a generall peace upon good foundations, which is a work that seems to be reserved for your Lordship's prudence and dexterity, and for which this place I hope will have a perpetuall obligation to you."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSB.

1683, Sept. 16, &c.—Papers relating to Boniface Gifford who was found on board a Moorish ship captured by the Dartmouth frigate.

1683, Sept. 20.—Examination of Capt. St. Loe and his men about the taking of the Swan prize off Sally.

1683, Sept. 22.—The ship Dover in Tangier bay.

Capt. Dan. Dering's narrative of his forcing a Sally man ashore.

1683, Sept. 24. Whitehall.—Sir L. Jenkins to Lord Dartmouth.

"I pursue you still with my letters tho' I have nothing to say by way of order or otherwise. I told the Duke just now that I was going to write to your Lordship; he gave nothing in command but gracious remembrances. The victory of the Christians over the Turks was complete, tho' not so many Turks slain as was at first reported, but it holds still that all their cannon, baggage, and tents were taken. We have no news of the success of the King of Poland in pursuit of the Turkish horse. All good Christians do bless God most heartily for this victory; but we have a race of Tekelites (as they call them) that are altogether in their talks and wishes for the prosperity of the Ottoman arms. 'Tis feared by many that the Christians will now fall out among themselves; but I hope not, at least (sic) wise that we shall not be engaged on either side. Your commission is a great argument for us with all mankind that we should not embark in foreign quarrels."

1683, Sept. 24. London.—Sir Christophet Musgrave to Lord Dartmouth.

"I hope mine from Winchester is come to your hand which gave a large account of his Majesty Duke and Prince viewing of fortifications at Portsmouth, and how well they were satisfied with them. . . . Mr. Savile being in a gay humour opened part of his heart to me, saying your Lordship did maintain the power and authority of the Master of the Ordnance, which was a quality in you very commendable; and therefore you ought not to be offended if others endeavoured to imitate you in their station. That a fleet should be sent to sea, and an admiral made, and the Admiralty understand nothing of it till the admiral's flag was flying, was thing without precedent, but he supposed it was the King's pleasure to have it so, and not to be charged upon you. But meeting you the Tuesday night at the King's supper at Windsor, and asking you if your great seal was in your pocket, you returned this answer "can you credit such idle reports?" which he thinks was not a return suitable to the long friendship betwixt you, when in 24 hours the flags flying would make it public, for it could not be imagined if you had then owned the thing that he would have interest to prevent it, or if he had, that he would have used it to your prejudice. But so soon as the thing was public he thought it was requisite for your service to have their commission, and therefore out of kindness to you took care that that their commission might be sent; and understood you did doubt whether you should accept them (sic) which he wondered, considering the power given them by act of Parliament. As to your part I knew nothing of it, but believed you were under an obligation not to discover that affair, and hoped he would so consider it, and not as want of kindness; and doubted not but at your meeting he would be satisfied. He said my Lord Nottingham had moved the Admiralty upon a letter which he received from your Lordship; they desired to see the letter, which his Lordship did not think fit to shew, which occasioned some debate. He admired you did not regard them as a Board, and they were not to be blamed if that occasioned a resentment. I find he hath a mean opinion of my Lord Nottingham. This I thought fit to acquaint you with; in the close Mr. Savile professed a great service for you. . . . (Ordnance matters)".

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Your family are very well, and all your friends daily remember you. My service to Mr. "Peepes" and Sir Will. Booth, and the rest of my friends abroad.

1683, Sept. 25 [off Cadiz].—On board the ship Montagu. Capt. H. Killigrew to Lord Dartmouth. Gives an account of several affairs at Cadiz. In company with Sir Martin Wescom, the consul there, had waited upon the governor, who received them with much civility. As to Capt. Shovell's prize found her quite unrigged, without any sails, and but 7 hands on board; so was forced to send 20 hands on board to rig and fit her—she being a very large vessel of almost 400 tons.

1683, Sept. 25. Tangier Road.—Sir John Berry to Lord Dartmouth. "The commanders complain much of want of water, and our victualling spends very fast. In the Henrietta I have thrown away 30 butts of stinking beer and ten more defective, with a quantity of stinking cheese. If your lordship thinks fit to send your orders to Sir James Lesley, provisions of all sorts may be had at Cadiz, although at a dearer rate than the King's price—Irish beef, Spanish pork, (and rusk if timely bespoke) may be had at any time, and Newfoundland fish very cheap as soon as the fleet arrives."

1683, Sept. 25. Cadiz.—Sir James Leslie to Lord Dartmouth.

"I have made all diligent enquiry, but can find neither beef, pork, peas, nor fish at present here, but they are daily expected from Ireland and other parts. Have bought a small quantity of bread, rice, butter, and flour, which is all that offers, and am endeavouring to get rusk made here. Shall come on board Capt. Killigrew and give your Excellency an account of what occurs."

1683, Sept. 26. Tangier.—Orders to Sir John Berry, of the Henrietta, signed by Lord Dartmouth, about bringing ashore and disposing of the several battalions of seamen.

Lord Dartmouth's own battalion, commanded by Sir William Booth, consisting of 200 men, clothed with white and blue striped linen, fitted with muskets, pikes, and pole-axes, with 4 Union flags.

Sir John Berry's battalion, commanded by [blank], clothed with the clothes Mr. Hewers shall give, with 4 Irish colours.

Two other battalions, each consisting of 200 men, clothed with such clothes as the Scotch shall furnish. With 8 colours of Col. Trelawny's regiment.

These four battalions to be commanded by Sir John Berry.

All the men to be drawn up on the sands to the best advantage as Colonel Kirke shall direct.

1683, Sept. 30. The ship Happy Return in Tangier Bay.—Sir John Wyborne to Lord Dartmouth. "I have one of Sir John Wetwang's sons to my lieutenant, who is a man that will be often drunk, and when he is so he is very abusive; but for his father's sake, who was an old officer in His Majesty's service, I have forborne complaining of him. But I see, notwithstanding many promises not to drink any more, he still continues his old course of life, getting himself drunk when I am out of the ship. I humbly pray your lordship to order me another man in his room, and to do with him as you shall think fit.

1683, Sept.—Captain Shovell's reasons for his sending home the Crown ship to England. Signed "Clow. Shouell."

1683, Oct. 1. Tangier.—Samuel Pepys, [Dr.] Will. Trumbull, and Fred Basher.

“Such hath been the universal backwardness we have met with from the inhabitants of this place (both civil and military) to bring in, and unpreparedness to make good, any of their pretences to propriety in the lands, houses, and tenements within the same, that, notwithstanding your repeated proclamations, and our own hourly attendances upon, and personal labours taken (without intermission) in the despatch of the commands which by your commission you have been pleased to give us in relation thereto, we have not been able to obtain from them (though for their own only benefit) the informations necessary to enable us to finish any report concerning them, that may be satisfactory to your Excellency, ourselves, or them. Nor, from the general remissness which we find in the whole transactions of this people one with another in the business of propriety, are we able certainly to foresee when we shall.

Nevertheless, forasmuch as we are so far (we think) advanced in this work, as to be now apprized of the whole number of claims, or very near it, which is to be expected from them, so that what remains to be done on their part (and which we continue to press for) is their bringing in answers to such necessary points as they are still defective in, to the enquiries which were so carefully communicated to them by written copies (as your Excellency well knows) from the very first day of your opening to them our commission, we think it seasonable to inform your Excellency that the only practical expedient we can propose is to cause a general view of the lands, houses, and tenements to be taken by some discreet persons, equally chosen by your Excellency, from among the officers and inhabitants of best repute, qualified by length of residence and experience, to make a just and moderate valuation by an annual rent of each parcel of land or buildings (old and new) with respect to the peculiar and different conditions of repair and other circumstances they at this present stand under.”

1683, Oct. 6.—Memorials offered by William Hewer, Treasurer for the affairs of Tangier, for Lord Dartmouth's consideration, relating to the financial state of the Corporation, debts of garrison to the town, &c.

1683, Oct. 7. Dartmouth frigate.—Boniface Gifford to Lord Dartmouth.

Suggestions for an attack on Sallee, and the destruction of Moorish ships.

1683, Oct. 8. Whitehall.—Sir L. Jenkins to Lord Dartmouth.

“The news we had yesterday from Madrid spoke you to be upon the coast of Gibraltar, which rejoices us very much. I hope when you come home you will find his Majesty in so much the more ease and repose that his great city is governed by his own commissions. Sir William Pritchard acts indeed as lord mayor, but it is by the King's commission which he received in the council, and to[ok] his oath of mayor there on Thursday last. The sheriffs elect (Daniel and Dashwood) act as other sheriffs in the counties, by commission. Mr. Genner is recorder by commission, the 18 honest aldermen have commissions to be justices of the peace; and now (as I am writing) they are sitting very gravely at the Quarter Sessions at the Old Bailey, instead of the 8 Whigs that make up the 26 aldermen. There are 8 commoners (such as Buckwith, Newland, Bathurst) chosen by the King to be over the vacant wards, and these 26, besides the commissions of the peace, will have other commissions, as to inspect and administer the city hospitals, the city lands, the court of orphans, &c., so that after all the direful bodings of

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

the Whigs (though it cannot be denied but in not surrendering but suffering judgment to be entered up they played the fools yet) honest men, nay all the world, will find and say with the old poet—

Sol occubuit, nox nulla secula est.

If it please God that with this quiet at home what we hear from Flanders do prove true, that the French troops are withdrawing thence homewards, and there is a stop to the new levies in France, we shall want nothing to complete our happiness but to have your lordship in our embraces here after a successful voyage, which is, I hope, by this time more than half performed."

1683, Oct. 8. Tangier.—Address of the City of Tangier to Charles II.
"May it please your Majesty,

We, the mayor, aldermen, and incorporated inhabitants of your Majesty's city of Tanger, having received from his Excellency George Lord Baron of Dartmouth a declaration of your royal pleasure that this place should be utterly demolished and that we who are the inhabitants should all return to our own homes, do think ourselves bound in duty to express the deep sense we have of your Majesty's most seasonable compassion to us, in rescuing us from our present fears and future calamities, in recalling us from scarcity to plenty, from danger to security, from imprisonment to liberty, and from banishment to our own native country.

We do all most thankfully acknowledge your Majesty's great justice in taking care of our proprieties as well as of our persons, and for the satisfaction of all our equitable claims, of your Majesty's most liberal indulgence to all strangers that are inhabitants as well as to your natural born subjects, in ordering the transportation and accommodation of both at your own royal expense, and your Majesty's most princely charity in making so particular a provision for the sick and the maimed, aged, and infirm persons.

We have all for a long time struggled with the many inconveniences, with the wants and terrors of this place, where our persons, our estates, our families, and our very religion have been for many years exposed to the Infidels, and we have endured all this in hopes that one day the place might answer all your Majesty's royal cares and the vast treasure which merely for your subjects' good your Majesty hath spent on it; but our own sad experience hath taught us the quite contrary, and we all utterly despaired of ever seeing it either a secure harbour, or a defensible garrison, or a place of trade, and are extremely satisfied with your Majesty's resolution of demolishing it, lest falling into the hands of the Moors it might prove fatal to the commerce of Europe.

We do therefore into his Excellency's hands most gladly resign our charter, and have humbly petitioned his Excellency to lay that and all our concerns at your Majesty's feet.

[The following original signatures are attached.]

Ben. Ash.
Ambrose Bonser (?).
Jacq^e Delacarterie.
Dom^{co} Aiar . . (?).
Ja. Tobin.
Charles Hartshorn.
T. Bregete.

W^m Smith, mayor.
J. Fordemell (?), recorder.
Edw. Cheston.
Robert Cuthbert.
Diego Nartos.
Francis Emes.
Henry Sparks.
James Burino Van Trist.
John Sames.

Robert Tarres (?).	Ettienne Vincent.
Fern ^{do} Brisart.	H. Stout (?).
T. Roane, Town clerk.	William Staines.
Gregory Fysh.	Jenkin Thomas.
E. Grubellie (?).	Ja. Gorman.
Dorhis de Vaena (?).	Nath. Lodington.
James Whelan.	Richard Senhouse.
Hierosmé Faisant.	Jean Fargeon.
A. Sauvin.	John Searle.
Pierre Mousset.	W ^m Carpenter.
Robt. English.	Edward Rothe.
Nic. Sanford.	W. Remusal.
Daniel Vanseterflett.	Manoel Martii.
James Waringe.	Robert Jones."

1683, Oct. 10. Town-house in Tangier.—Report of the Commissioners touching the measures proposed by them for valuing the properties in Tangier. The report is addressed to Lord Dartmouth as Governor, and is signed by S. Pepys, Fred. Bacher, and William Trumbull; it gives the reasons for valuing the freeholds at 4 years' purchase and the leaseholds at from 3 to 1 according to their unexpired terms.

1683, Oct. 13.—Letter from the same Commissioners to Lord Dartmouth on the objections raised by the Mayor of Tangier, and the rest of the proprietors to the valuation above mentioned and suggesting a conference before Lord Dartmouth to decide finally on the matter.

1683, Oct. 10.—William Smith, Mayor of Tangier to Lord Dartmouth.

Requests that the underwritten inhabitants, having put themselves in readiness forthwith to embark, may have warrant to depart in the ship Unity, Captain Tucker.

Mrs. Moloy and family, Mrs. Chappell, &c., Mrs. Senhouse, &c., Mrs. Beverley, &c., Mrs. Thistlethwayte, &c., Mrs. Mustow.

1683, Oct. 11. Ship Henrietta in the Bay of Cadiz.—Sir John Berry to Lord Dartmouth.

Recounts his proceedings at Cadiz. The Hambrough man of war which came out of Plymouth when Lord Dartmouth sailed was burnt last night, by what accident is unknown; she was all of a light fire fore and aft in a moment, and the fire flaming to the very topmast head.

1683, Oct. 18. Ship Montagu.—Long Report on the state the Mole at Tangier, by the captains or the ships under Lord Dartmouth's command, with their signatures attached, 26 in number, among them being John Berry, Will. Booth, Clow. Shovell, and G. Rooke.

1683, Oct. 14. Tangier.—"The most humble Adresse of the late Governour, the field officers, commandants, and the rest of the officers and souldiers of your Majestie's royall garrison of 'Tanger."

"May it please your sacred Majestie,

His Excellency the Lord Dartmouth, your Majestie's Governour of Tanger, and Captain Generall of all your forces in these parts, having imparted to us your Majestie's resolution of calling away the inhabitants and garrison, and of intirely demolishing this place, we cannot on so extraordinary an occasion but humbly represent to your Majestie that we do not only (as wee are bound in duty) readily acquiesce in, but that we applaud and admire the wisdom of your Majestie's counsells on this important affair. It is a troublesome reflection to consider that those immense summes of money, that have been expended on the Mole and the other walks of this place, as well as in our maintenance, have

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

in no measure answered your Majestie's royall expectations, and we are sufficiently sensible, by a long and near view of the state of Tanger, that though your Majestie should yearly exhaust more treasure (if it were possible) then hitherto you have done, it would yet be with the same unsuccessfullnesse, and despair of rendring either the harbour secure, or the town safe. We humbly conceive, that, regarding the enemy we have now to deal with, which is a wealthy and powerfull Monarch, and who we may reasonably beleive will, some time or other, have no manner of diversion to hinder him from bringing a royall army into these fields, your Majestie could have no means for the preservation of the place, but the taking in and fortifying all those eminencies that overlook and command it, a work which cannot be attempted with any the least prospects of successe, and without which we must necessarily be exposed, and become, some time or other, the conquest of a mercilesse and barbarous enemy. All which motives, we are humbly of opinion, have justly determined your Majestie's counsellors for the leaving and demolishing a place, so impossible to be maintained, and so uselesse to your service if preserved. We must therefore in the first place beg leave to expresse our humble thankfullnesse that your Majestie hath been pleased to commit the performance of your commands here to his Excellencie the Lord Dartmouth, a person by whose hands we receive the testimonies of your royall favour with the utmost satisfaction, and whose conduct and vigilance in this great service is equall to the importance of it. We do next, with all submission, cast ourselves at your Majestie's feet with our most humble thanks for your tender and gracious care of us, and that you have thought fit to recall us to your more immediate service at home, and the necessary defence of your kingdome, amidst the present just apprehensions occasioned by the late horrid conspiracy, which still threatens your royall person and the disturbance of your government. It is with all the joy that hearts are capable of that we understand your Majestie's regard for us, and that you have thought us worthy the great honour whereunto you have designed us, which as we must acknowledge to be the highest existance of your Majestie's goodnesse and bounty, so it doth exact from us our utmost endeavours to deserve that good opinion your Majestie hath graciously conceived of us; and we humbly take the liberty to assure your Majestie that no subjects have deeper impressions and a truer sense of their duty than we have, and that we shall never use unworthily those swords your Majestie hath been pleased to put into our hands, but employ them for the preservation and honour of your Majestie's sacred person, and your royall service to the last drop our blood."

The signatures follow.

1683, Oct. 14.—Narrative of Capt. Dan. Dering's putting a Sally man-of-war ashore to the southward of that place.

1683, Oct. 15. Whitehall.—Sir L. Jenkins [with an official letter of same date] to Lord Dartmouth.

There is no news at court that I know of, but there you know something or other is always a brewing. My Lord of Rochester hath got a sprain some weeks ago in his ancle. He confines himself at this time to Twitman to give his leg some rest. The new London magistrates (being 26 quasi aldermen) are all in their gear, and the city very quiet. When there is any secret to write I shall give it you under Colonel Kirke's cypher, so you may borrow the key from him.

1683, Oct. 18. Tangier.—Capt. Ra. Wrenn to Lord Dartmouth.

Complains of the bad state of his ship the Centurion, her masts, &c., having been much damaged on the return homeward from convoying the Newfoundland fleet to several of the ports in Spain and Italy.

1683, Oct. 20.—Henrietta (ship) in Pointall. Sir John Berry to Lord Dartmouth.

Sends a survey of his ship, which he has been obliged to careen at Cadiz, owing to her leaky state.

1683, Oct. 21.—“Representation of the Dean and Chapter of the Portuguese church of the royal city of Tanger to the King’s sacred Majesty.” Several signatures attached.

1683, Oct. 25—Dec. 15.—Six original warrants of Lord Dartmouth to Charles Firth and William Wallis, storekeepers for the garrison at Tangier, for the issue of provisions, &c.

1683, Oct. 25. London.—Henry Slingsby to Lord Dartmouth.

“’Tis the fear my letters might not find your Lordship has hindered me from owning all my obligations to you this way. Since you left these parts Sir C. Musgrave, I imagine, gives you an account weekly of what news this country affords. The news is what every one imagines as to your affair, which is still in as great a mist as when you left us, but this is generally believed that those forces at Tanger are to replenish the garrisons in England, the King saying when he was at Portsmouth that we should ere long have men enough there. Lord Feversham advised me to put in for a troop of dragoons, which I was not very forward to, except of hoping to be near your Lordship, if you pretend to any command; and the more because ’tis said (but that’s only a flying report) that Lord Churchill is to command them, and the foot by the same uncertain rumour is by Lord Mulgrave. I shall as soon continue as I am than better myself by them.”

1683, Oct. 26.—Henrietta within Pointall. Sir John Berry to Lord Dartmouth.

After giving particulars of repairs to his ship, adds “I hope I have made the Henrietta now fit to proceed to England. I have not had one hour’s rest since I came here nor ever met with such a cross piece of work in all my days.”

1683, Nov. 12. Malaga.—James Pendarves to Lord Dartmouth.
About the supply of biscuit to the fleet.

1683, Nov. 12. Whitehall.—Sir L. Jenkins to Lord Dartmouth.

“Doctor Trumball arrived here upon Saturday the 10th at eleven at night. I carried him immediately to his Majesty, where he had the honour to deliver your letter, and to give a summary account of the state of affairs, and of your successful progress at Tanger. Your two letters of Oct. 5 and Oct. 17 arrived by the hospital ship Unity. These letters and others were read at the Treasury, and Mr. Pearce the chirurgeon had been ordered to go to Gravesend to wait for the Unity and to take into his care all the passengers on board her, that they might see before they landed there was all the regard possible had to the providing for them. They sent likewise for the three persons you recommended, Sir William Pritchard, Sir Thomas Fitch, and Mr. Alderman Rich to attend them this afternoon, and Lord Rochester was of opinion the King should be moved to send for my Lord Mayor, and I find him resolved to do all that is possible for these poor people, and for those that are coming, with that speed and method as to prevent clamour, it being far better to do that with charity and expedition, and with a good grace, since we must sooner or later be forced to do it.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

The account your letters contained and that Dr. Trumbull gave by word of mouth was perfectly acceptable to the King and the Duke; and the reports that your sea captains gave of the Mole, and those of the surveyors on the fortifications were convincing and demonstrative of the necessity for demolishing the place. Dr. Trumbull was exceedingly well received by the King and well spoken of by all the Lords."

1683, Nov. 12. London.—The Duke of York to Lord Dartmouth. "Two days since I had yours by Dr. Trumbull, who has given a very good account of all you had then done, with which his Ma. is very well satisfyd, and tho when you wrot it I see you had some malencony (sic) thoughts, as to you self, yett I do assure you, you need not feare the malice of your enemys, the King as well as my self being so kind to you, that it will not be in their power to do you any prejudice, therefore have not such kind of thoughts, for I will stand by you, I have not tyme to say more, and besids beleve this letter will not find you at Tanger, at least I hope so." [Addressed.] "For the Lord Dartmouth."

1683, Nov. 13. Ship Happy Return in Tanger Bay.—Sir John Wyborne to Lord Dartmouth. "Since your Lordship was pleased to pass by what I complained to you of my lieutenant, it has hardened him in his idleness. He has lain on shore without leave after his duty was over, and been drunk on duty; and yesterday he and Mr. Mann, one of my volunteers, fought ashore. I humbly pray your Lordship to order them to be examined before a court martial for this and other offences," &c.

1683, Nov. 19. Whitehall.—Sir L. Jenkins to Lord Dartmouth. "To morrow will be a sen'night since Capt. Tucker came with his hospital ship to Gravesend, and Mr. Pearse hath so well executed his orders that there is not one person of the whole hospital come up to complain hither to me, nor no more mention of them than if they were still at Tanger. On Friday I received your letter of the 28th by Mr. Mayor of Tanger. He left the St. David at Portsmouth, and we hear nothing yet of her being come about. But Mr. Mayor had had so full a comfort in kissing the King's hand that nothing could be added to it, especially in that he was pleased to take special notice of his affection and service in the general, and also to assure him that the credit he had given to the hospital at Tanger should be duly answered, and his service not go unrewarded. The King gave orders that none of the Tangerines should be meddled with, much less molested, by the searchers or other officers of the Custom House."

1683, Nov. 24. Ship Happy Return in Tangier bay.—Sir John Wyborne to Samuel Atkins, secretary to Lord Dartmouth. "I do keep my lieutenant in confinement, and last night I got my volunteer off and have confined him also to his cabin. Captain Thomas Langstorn and Ensign Hill parted them when their swords were drawn."

1683, Nov. 24. Ship Centurion in Lisbon river.—Capt. Ra. Wrenn to Lord Dartmouth.

"I am detained here longer than I expected by reason of the scarceness of provisions . . . Two or three days since here arrived an Irish vessel with provisions, so that I shall be supplied from her, though at a dear rate, bread being at 23s. 6d. the "kental." I have sold some of the slaves here, and would gladly dispose of the rest if I could get a reasonable price, but am bid 25 and 30 dollars apiece. I have received a very lusty negro for your lordship, and return your lordship ten thousand thanks for the favour you have been pleased to confer upon me."

1683, Nov. 24. Drake frigate in Gibraltar Bay.—Capt. Th. Leighton to Gives extracts from his journal since he left Tanger, explaining his detention in Gibraltar bay, "where I now ride impatiently expecting an opportunity to come for Tanger. I am in my soul sorry and ashamed to have this happen only to me."

1683, Nov. 26. Whitehall.—Sir L. Jenkins to Lord Dartmouth.

"Upon Friday last I had a complaint of 24 persons, passengers in the ship Unity, that were not taken care of as the others were. I waited immediately upon my Lord of Rochester, and he made it appear to me that these poor people were of the Earl of Dunbarton's regiment, and that an officer appointed by his lordship was gone down to take care of them, and that he was furnished with a sum of money to answer their necessities. I have heard no more of them, nor a syllable from the first day to this of any one person in the hospital ship, nor of any one person in the St. David, Capt. Rooke, Commander, that brought over the mayor and other inhabitants of Tanger; in so much that I have not set eye upon the mayor since I had the honour to present him upon his first arrival to his Majesty, much less have I heard anything from the passengers in Capt. Carverth's ship that brought over Dr. Trumbull. Sir Robert Holmes desired me humbly to acquaint the King that he would be glad to receive 3 or 4 companies of the Tanger forces into the Isle of Wight, but his Majesty did not then determine anything upon it. I hope that when we receive more of your guests we shall give your Excellency no worse account of them. You will see by the Gazette of this day that the Duke of Monmouth is returned to court again, and pardoned. All that passed after Council yesterday in the evening was (the print tells you what passed before) that the Duke of Monmouth came afterwards into my office, and that then the sergeant-at-arms, that had him before in custody, was discharged. Then I waited on him (as I had been ordered) to the Duke. His Royal Highness carried him straight to the King, the King carried him to the Queen, then the Duke brought him back to the Duchess. He was at Court all this morning; which is all the account I have yet to give. The disaster of the Dutch fleet makes me much more sensibly concerned for your Excellency, and you have my hearty poor prayers."

1683, Nov. 29. Cadiz.—Capt. Tho. Fowler to Lord Dartmouth.

The weather proves so bad that there is no getting of either bread or powder. Sends letters received from England, and an account of what provisions are at Cadiz.

1683, Dec. 3. Bay of Cadiz.—Capt. Tho. Fowler to Lord Dartmouth.

"All the time I have known Cadiz I never saw so violent a storm, which has lasted 4 or 5 days, and in that time there has been drove and cast away eight nor nine ships." Account of damage done, and of provisions, &c.

[There are other letters about this date referring to the severe storm.]

1683, Dec. 8. Lisbon.—Charles Fanshaw to Lord Dartmouth.

I hear the Canons came very well satisfied with your lordship's treatment of them in Tangier, and Captain Wren's kindness to them in their passage. I have let the Portuguese ministers know what care and favours his Majesty showed in his commands concerning them, and with what punctuality your lordship has executed them, which was somewhat convenient to divert their ill-humour, for they rail at us horribly for razing the place. I told Capt. Wren also that he might let the Canons know I was ready to do them any service, but the conjunctures of time

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MESS.
--

have been such by reason of the Queen's sickness (who I think cannot live long), that the King has been wholly retired these three weeks from public audiences, which has been an hindrance also to Capt. Wren, for the King sent at first to desire him that they and their goods might remain on board for some days. I have furnished him with money for victualling his ship according to the necessity of his Majesty's service and your lordship's desire; but he complains that things are very dear and hard to be got, for which I know no remedy. He tells me lately that he is like to better his market by buying some provisions out of an Irish vessel lately come in, which will also hasten his departure, the flesh being already cured for his purpose.

1683, Dec. 3 to 1684, April 5.—Papers embodying the resolutions of the Councils of war held on board the Grafton, Lord Dartmouth, President. The Captains taking part in them were—Sir John Berry, Sir William Booth, Killegrew, Ashby, Preistman, Wheler, Geo. Aylmer, Tyrrell, Dering, Leighton, Sir John Wyborne, Macdonnell, Fowler, Shovell, Wrenn, Botham, George, Fowler, Williams, Gifford, M. Aylmer, Frowde, Hastings, &c. The last Council was held at Spithead.

1683, Dec. 6. Tangier.—Henry Shere to Lord Dartmouth.

Being confined by an irksome malady to his chamber has turned his vacant hours to some account by estimating the labour, &c. necessary for the demolishing of the Mole. First, casting the solid quantity of the Mole into cubic feet, he considers it under these dimensions, viz., the length of the Mole is 1,436 feet, the mean breadth about 110 feet, the mean height from the top to low water mark about 18 feet, amounting in all by cubical computation to 2,843,280 solid feet, which being cast into tons are 167,251 tons. Of this mass 25,000 tons at least is tarrass work so bound in chests, with timber and iron, and so well performed, that it is by all people agreed (and indeed is found) more difficult to demolish than so much solid rock.

He then proceeds to consider the utmost strength and means that the fleet and garrison, &c., can afford towards effecting this great undertaking; and so the time can be estimated wherein the work may be done, due regard being had to all that might happen through the treachery of a barbarous, jealous, and watchful neighbour encamped with an army almost under the walls of the city. To the work might be assigned daily about 1,000 men of all sorts, of which number 400 should be constantly employed in carrying away stone and rubbish, the rest in cutting of stone, tending, filling and the like. Which 400 men will carry away about 800 tons daily; so that the whole 167,251 should be removed in about 209 days; but the additional difficulty of demolishing the tarras work (estimated as above at 25,000 tons) by great mines and at least 1,500 small mines, by drills and other more troublesome methods would add at least 25 days to the time above noted. Foul and rainy weather, incident to this season of the year, wherein men cannot work as they ought and for many days together perhaps not at all, is another contingency to be taken into the calculation.

1683, Dec. 10. Tangier.—Memorandum in Lord Dartmouth's handwriting on a French paper given in to Mr. Secretary Jenkins to be answered.

"The French endeavour to set up trade with the Moors both at Sally and Tittuan, having a consul at each place. They encourage them to war against us and assist them with arms and ammunition of all sorts, and apparently endeavour to make themselves masters of the Mediterranean. Suggestions for the defeat of this object."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSB.

1683, Dec. 12. Whitehall.—Warrant of Charles II. for the distribution of his forces coming from Tangier to be observed by Lord Dartmouth at his return to England. The quarters assigned are — to the King's Battalion, the troops of horse, and the company of miners, London; to the Scotch regiment of 16 companies, 8 to Rochester, 6 to Winchester, and 2 to Southampton; to Col. Kirke's regiment, Pendennis and Plymouth; to Col. Trelawny's regiment, Plymouth. The officers of the Scotch regiment appear by a paper attached to have been.—Sir James Hackett, Lieut.-Col. Major Douglas, and Captains Monroe, Rollo, Lundy, Moncriffe, Hodge, Carr, White, Douglas, Melvill, Murray, Orquart, Forbess, Lawder, and Barclay.

1683, Dec. 12. Tangier.—Frederick Bacher (Admiralty judge?) Report of proceedings in the case of the ship St. Anne, commanded by Laurence Bertrand, seized by Capt. Dering and carried into the port of Tanger, where an Admiralty court was held.

1683, Dec. 13. Whitehall.—William Blathwayt to Lord Dartmouth. Refers to his appointment as Secretary of State, and congratulates Lord Dartmouth on the success of his undertakings.

1683, Dec. 13, and Dec. 15. Derby house.—Lords of the Admiralty (Lords Nottingham and Brouncker, Tho. Meres, H. Winche and Hen. Savile). Direct Lord Dartmouth as to the manner in which the troops to be brought from Tanger to Plymouth, Portsmouth, and the Isle of Wight shall be transported to Tilbury and Gravesend, and to Newcastle and Hull.

1683, Dec. 14. Cadiz — William Hewer (to Samuel Atkins.) "Yours of the 13th inst. met Mr. Pepys and myself at this place, the weather having been such as to have as ill effects towards us in our intended journey as I perceive it has had with you in reference to the Mole, we having not been able to make one step from this place I have paid the Montagu, Woolwich, and Lark their short allowance money, and have taken care to supply Capt. Killigrew with what money he shall want for buying stores for the use of the fleet. You will receive herewith a bottle of ink and some quills, the best these parts will afford, which pray distribute amongst you with my humble service to Mr. De Pass.

The post from Madrid brought news of a French man-of-war having destroyed a Spanish man-of-war for not striking. And 3 days since Proclamation was made for discovery of French effects. My service to all my friends, Mr. Pepys returning you his."

1683, Dec. 15. Ship Montague in the Bay of Cadiz. Captain H. Killigrew.—Concerning ships' stores that he has sent by the Lark according to Lord Dartmouth's orders, and the progress made in repairing his own ship.

1683, Dec. 14. Cadiz.—Copies of letters from Mr. Hewer to the Earl of Rochester and the Officers of the Navy Board, relating to a bill drawn upon them for 2,000*l*.

1683, Dec. 18. Ship Happy Return in Tangier Bay. Sir John Wyborne to Lord Dartmouth.—Describes the many accidents befallen his ship before he "cut and went into the Straits" on the 1st inst.

1683, Dec. 22. Happy Return.—Lieutenant Jos. Wetwang to Lord Dartmouth.

Is sorry to have any jarring or difference with his commander, and desires to be removed to another ship. Lord Dartmouth has been misinformed about the business with the volunteer; is very sensible of his

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSB.
—

Lordship's kindness to him on his father's account, and will take care that there shall be no more trouble about him, &c.

1683, Dec. 29. Terrif.—Geo. Mister to Lord Dartmouth.

"On Christmas day I was forced from my anchors out of Tanger road and by the violence of the storm put ashore in Terriff bay above two miles to the westward of the town; and much ado to preserve the men, and as for her lading nothing saved, neither goods nor provisions for the garrison. The ship's name is the Recovery and I had 140 tons of provisions."

[1683?] Three long papers in Lord Dartmouth's handwriting setting forth various considerations touching Tangiers, and the reasons for its demolition.

1683.—Paper headed, "A table of the toune as it stood," followed by a list headed, "Tangier demolished," each with letters and numerals apparently referring to plans not now with the papers.

1683.—"A perticular of all bookes and papers relating to matters of Tanger which respected the care and cognizance of Mr. de Paz, secretary to his Excellency the Lord Dartmouth."

PETITIONS ADDRESSED TO LORD DARTMOUTH AS GOVERNOR OF TANGIERS.

Of the late inhabitants, for payment of debts due to them by the garrison. Ten original signatures attached: Wm. Smith, Rich. Senhouse, — Fargeon, Edw. Cheston, Ja. Waringe, C. Bordier, &c.

John Roderigus, of the kingdom of Portugal, who was captured by the Moors, made his escape to Tanger and served for some time in Col. Trelawny's company.

John Minge, formerly servant to Sir John Finch, ambassador at Constantinople, then with a merchant at Cadiz, but compelled to leave there with his wife at half an hour's warning, owing to the proclamation that all housekeepers there must at once take up arms upon pain of seven years as a galley slave.

Solomon Pariente, of the Hebrew nation, represents that he came to Tanger in 1675 from London as interpreter to Lord Inchiquin, and afterwards to Sir Palmes Fairborne, Col. Sackville, and Col. Kirke; for which services he had received no compensation, and had greatly neglected his own affairs. "I brought here about two thousand pounds besides my wife's jewels and plate and household goods, insomuch that they called me here the Rich Jew; and pawned my house, some jewels, and plate, into the mayor's and Mr. Roth's hands; and besides all this I owe money to several persons," &c.

Certificates of the great value of Pariente's services, signed by Col. Kirke and H. Shere, are attached. The petition is referred, on 28 Oct. 1683, to the Hon. Samuel Pepys, Esq. (as are many other petitions) for his examination and report.

John Eccles, usher and writing master to the school, and gunner. Was appointed seven and a half years ago at a salary of 30*l.* a year, in succession to Mr. Hughes, the first master there, with a convenient lodging; but for upwards of five years had been obliged to find his own lodging at a total cost of 39*l.* 3*s.*, for which he desires compensation.

Other petitions are from Thomas Roberts, apothecary to the garrison; George Mercer, clerk and schoolmaster; Robert Inglish, steward of the hospital; Thomas Paine, a gentleman born, and brought up in the calling of a woollen draper in London, but ruined by the great sickness and fire there, afterwards clerk of the church at Tanger; Thomas Roane, clerk of the peace; John Meagher, apothecary; John Fargeon, merchant; James Gorman, alderman; &c., &c.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

[Early in 1684?—Lord Dartmouth to Charles II. (draft.)

"Having obeyed all your Majesty's commands at Tangeire, I thought it my duty to secure the fears of the merchants from what misfortune they apprehended themselves to be liable to, by the desertion of the place, and have therefore directed some ships which are ordered to stay abroad of the best countenance (?) to go immediately before Algiers, Tunis, and Tripoli, and the lighter frigates with Captain Shovell to ply off the Straits' mouth, Sally, and the South Cape, so that I hope those jealousies of the merchants are well prevented, either from the Levant corsairs breaking immediately into a war, or from the Sally ships; yet I humbly believe it necessary for your Majesty's service to have this cruising squadron recruited and a commander-in-chief at the head of it, as your Majesty shall think best. The Alcade here mightily desires a peace, to which I only lay the consideration of it to your Majesty's own best judgment, for you may do, I believe, with these people according to your own will and pleasure. Finding former directions from your Majesty here for the redeeming of captives, I thought it agreeable to your Majesty's gracious charity and most for your honour to free what could be had at this time, and I have sent them by the Greyhound. The greatest difficulty was to get off Lieut. Wilson, but I thought it not for your Majesty's honour to leave a commissioned officer behind that had behaved himself so very well in your service, and I believe will do again upon a little encouragement, though at present his misfortunes and long captivity seem too much to have dejected him. The forces are brought entire off from the garrison, and are men generally well qualified for any service your Majesty can have for them; but being to come to the liberty of English soldiers, I thought it my duty to give very strict orders for the officers to stay with their men and have provided for them with ready money for a month's subsistence, for which time at least I am confident your Majesty will hear of no disorders, being all upon their good behaviours and expecting your Majesty's favour and commands. At my arrival I do not doubt but to free your Majesty from many of the troublesome burgers, which I hope an inconsiderable sum will do, when their titles are thoroughly looked into, and that was the reason I desired Mr. Creede might not have it in his power to embezzle the records.

1683-4, Jan. $\frac{5}{12}$. St. Lucar.—Samuel Pepys (holograph) to Lord Dartmouth.

"Your lordship hath (I am sure) hath too many other instances of the ill condition of the weather ever since my leaveing you, that I should bee offering at excuses for my being gott noe further yet then this place, the season haveing beene such (notwithstanding the hopes I have in former letters expressed to your lordship of the contrary) as not in all this time to have given me two dry days together to look out of doores in, till Monday last, when I did immediately sett out for Port St. Mary's, and thence hither, from whence I am goeing (though the weather is becomeing wett againe) towards Sivill, where I will endeavour with all dispatch to run through (as I have done here) what the place will afford mee of entertainment, and returne by Xeres and soe to your lordship. This unfortunatenesse of the season and the losse of time occasioned by it rendering my journey of much lesse satisfaction to mee then you were pleased to designe it should; though this consideration of the weather

BART OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

does at the same time minde mee of the little service my attendance could have bene of to your lordship at Tangier had I bene still there.

Extremely afflicted I am for the miscarriage of Mister the victualler, though I trust in God you will finde a sufficiency remayning to answer all your occasions, if the weather would but favour us; which God send, and your lordship a happy issue thereto."

1683-4, Jan. 7.—Depositions, before Fred. Bacher, of David Breholt, master, and John Honyman, a seaman, of the ship Samuel, of London, as to the manner of their being taken by a Sally man-of-war.

1683-4, Jan. 10. Tangier.—Capt. Ra. Wrenn.

"An abstract from my Journal of our proceedings the 27th and 28th of October 1683."

27th.—This day being Saturday, the wind at E., a fresh gale and fair weather, we got on board 18 puncheons of fresh water, and at night sailed out of Cadiz bay, being bound for Lisbon. At 8 at night Cadiz town bore E.S.E. about 3 leagues off, we steering away W. b. N. and W.N.W. all night.

28.—This day the wind at E. a fresh gale with fair weather at 8 in the morning Cape St. Mary's bore N.N.W. 4 leagues off. At 10 we saw a sail to the westward of us upon a wind standing to the N.-ward, when we came within two leagues of her she bore away, steering between the S.W. and W. with French colours abroad. We gave chase after her, carrying a fresh gale with us, so that we fetched upon her very much. At noon the town of Villa Nova bore N.W. of us about 5 leagues off, at one o'clock we came up with her, she putting abroad Sally colours. In clapping her aboard we carried away her bowsprit, foremast, and maintopmast. She proved a Sally man-of-war, having six guns mounted, and two small guns and six pedreras in her hold. There was in all 42 Turks and Moors, Captain and Renegado [an English gunner] included; and two English, one Portuguese, and one Sicilian captives. We took her in a tow and sailed into Logos's (?) bay, where we got up a jury foremast and fitted her for the sea. The Captain's name is Ally Rice Washan, the ship's name the Two Lions of Sally. They had taken two English vessels and one Dutch Galliot Hoy.—
RA. WRENN.

1683, Jan. 11. Tangier.—Original confession (in Spanish) of Ali Washum Rais, of Tunis, Captain of the Two Red Lions, of his capture of an English ship off Cape St. Vincent about the middle of October last—with a translation certified by John Erlisman and John Nevell.

1683-4, Jan. 20.—"From Tetey won" (Tetuan?). Edward Payne to Lord Dartmouth.

"Most Onered Sir,

hose praise dose ret downe to the great comfort of hondredes in this Plase, with there famelyes at home. This to aqwant you of my condisshen, desiring that you wlld tacke it into yowre consederation and reeleefe, me being all together un abell to releefe myseelf in this matr, ho shall allwayes be bownd to pray for yow and yowrs.

On the 8th of October last I was tacken by a seteea that did belong both to Argere and Tetey won being maned with about one hundred men and 4 gones and 26 petereros, I being in a small pinke belonging to London; came from Newfownland bownd for Allecant, hating six men and tow gones. It being callme we fowt him five owres laished bord and bord, untill we had tow of owre company killed, and myselfe and all the rest of owre company wounded. We killed him seventeen men and wounded him 25 men more, but all to no purpos, being so desabeled; hee took us of Allmaree bay in the Strayts, hee brought us to Tetey wone whare wee ware sold, and it was my fortien to be the Kinge's slafe, and was downe in the Masemere about 3 wickes. The Captain that took us hose name is Tige, the same that was a slafe in Tangere and was given out for nothing, he went to the camp and interseeded with the Goferner and got me from him, in expectation that I hafe money to redeme his brother, that dos belong to the Grand deweckes galley at Leghorn, which I can never dow being in trewth a ferey poore man haling a great fameley whitch I know at this time wante bred, and shall never be abell to clear mysellfe, motch more to redeme his brother. He wld hafe me macke him a promas, but I cannot dow it, knoweing my condition to be so lo at home. When thay tocke all the names of the English kristenes heer he wld not let my name be given in, but tollde the govenar that I had promesed to redeme his brother, but it is a great lye, I never did; but hee swares that hee will macke me clere him if chaines and hardship will dow it, which mackes my condishen so meserabell, that except yow dow order my redemshen in this jontuer of time, I must expect never to be redemed owt of this plase. My hopes is still upon yowr onerabell redemshen." [See Jan. 30 post.]

1683-4, Jan. 21. Ship Henrietta.—Report on the state of the Mole and Harbour at Tangier, signed by Sir John Berry, H. Killegrew, Sir John Wyborne, Sir Will. Booth, Clow. Shovell, and 16 other Captains of Lord Dartmouth's fleets. (4 pp.)

1683-4, Jan. 26. Portumna.—Earl of Clanricarde to Lord Dartmouth.

On behalf of John Tully, son of an old servant, who has been educated for a seaman, and now seeks employment in the King's service.

1683-4, Jan. 28. Victualling Office, London.—Sir Richard Haddock, Arthur Sturt, John Parsons, and Nic. Fenn, Commissioners to Lord Dartmouth.

It is not possible (by reason of the severe frost) to send any provision from hence towards you. Wherefore what bills you shall draw on us for victualling shall be punctually complied with. We have freighted a ship of 400 tons to load with 700 men's victuals for 8 months to be at Lisbon; but she is and hath been frozen up these five weeks, the frost continuing very severe, as hath been known in the memory of man.

1683-4 (Jan. ?).—Confession of John Burnet [the Renegado taken in the Sally man-of-war. See ante]. He was captured in the Turkey frigate in company with the Danby about 4 years previously, by six Turkish men-of-war, and was forced to turn Turk; for which he heartily prays forgiveness, and begs for mercy, that he may have time to repent and become a true and faithful Christian.

1683-4, Jan. 30. "From Tetey won in Barbarey."—Edward Payne and Mathew Basto. Tell the same story as is told in Payne's letter of the 20th instant with the addition of the following: "Capt. Smith, master of attendance at Wolledge was one of my caneres, and Mr. Fownes and Mr. Edgell and Mr. Loder of Dedford were the rest of my caneres; all haling employe under his Majesty. Paradfender you maye know som of them."

1683-4, Feb. 8. Seville. — Samuel Pepys (holograph) to Lord Dartmouth.

"I begg your lordship to believe mee in saying that I never suffered so great a disappointment in any one undertaking through my whole life (wherein I had proposed to my selfe soe particular a satisfaction) as I have and doe in this of my journey to Spayne. Not soe much from what I am by the weather prevented in the content I hoped it might have bene of to mee, as from my being soe much longer detain'd (then was design'd) from the service of the King and your lordship at Tangiers. Not that I have the vanity to thinke all I can doe, in any degree soe considerable to either, as your lordship in the excesse of your kindnesse are pleas'd to write concerning it; but that (bee it lesse or more) I would have nothing to blame my selfe for, of neglect in that which I desire to acquitt my selfe with soe entire a duty in towards his Majesty, and personall reguard and affection towards your lordship. But such has bene the weather here, that after haveing in six days finish'd all that my curiosity aym'd at and could performe in this place, I have bene by the heights of the floods kept out of any capacity of quitting it, the ways by land being become wholly unpassable, and the river soe overflowed that (notwithstanding all the endeavors used for preventing it, by calkeing its gates, and damming up all other the inlets into it) one-third part of this citty has bene drowned within the walls, soe as many persons are sayd to have bene famish'd for want of accesse for provisions to them, nor is there believed to be ten days corne left within it for the whole towne. Nor was it before this morning that your letters of the 11th of January could reach mee, the weather (notwithstanding the many public processions for its amendment) continuing still what it has bene ever since my arrival; and it being now above 18 days that I have had a boate wayteing for a slatch to carry mee downe to St. Lucar. Nor shall a minute bee lost that can yet bee saved in it. And upon this I begg your lordship to depend, and that (consonant to the order you are pleas'd to furnish mee with for my conveyance) I will immediately imbarque my selfe from Cadix for Tangier, observing your direction in favour of Captaine Williams.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Mr. Hewer (who is under the same affliction with mee) presents your lordship with his most humble duty, and does by this post send his letters to Mr. Gardener (according to your commands by Mr. Atkins of the same date) about the cables, powder, and pitch, that noe time may bee lost in its dispatch, if the goods can be found.

To my former uneasinesses I have not wanted the consideration of the severall difficultys and distresses your lordship may from the same cause have bene exposed to. But a great deale thereof is (I thanke God) removed by the notice your letter gives mee of the advancement of the worke of the Mole and comeing in of the greatest part of your shippes. Nor will I despayre but a little time will finish the rest, and bring thither for your further commands. My Lord, your" &c.

1683-4, Feb. 3. Seville.—William Hewer to Samuel Atkins. Partly to the same purport as Pepys' letter above given. "We have not had two days fair weather together since we left Tanger, an affliction that I would not undergo again for the best sight that Spain can show at any time."

1683-4, Feb. 7. "The Purser's List of the soldiers brought home in the Montague from Tanger." Five sheets of paper containing the names and ranks of the officers and soldiers forming part of that garrison.

1. Colonel Piercy Kirk's company, consisting of Col. Kirk, Capt. William Berry, James Weyley, Chirurgion, William Pownetney, Marshal, three sergeants, three corporal, two drummers, and 54 men.

2. Captain Tho. St. John's company consisting of Capt. St. John Lieut. Jenken Thomas, Ensign Staff. Fairburn three sergeants, two corporals, two drummers, and 46 men.

3. Sir James Lashley's company consisting of Major Sir James Lashly, Lieut. Hen. Withers, Ensign Rodger Ellitt, three sergeants, three corporals, two drummers, and 35 men (one named Tho. Shakspeare).

4. Captain Barbour's company, consisting of Capt. Tho. Barbour, Lieut. Richard Lawes, Ensign Simon Duff, three sergeants, three corporals, two drummers, and 37 men.

5. Capt. Geo. Wingfield's company, consisting of Capt. G. Wingfield, Lieut. James Addams, Ensign Garri. Fitzjarrald, three sergeants, three corporals, two drummers, and 27 men.

6. Capt. John Burgis' company, consisting of Capt. Burgis, Lieut. Phill. Maher, Ensign Marten Lester, three sergeants, three corporals, two drummers, and 39 men.

7. Capt. Charles Wingfield's company, consisting of Capt. C. Wingfield, Lieut. Will. Storton, Ensign Nath. Barber, three sergeants, three corporals, two drummers, and 27 men.

Thos. Roberts, apothecary, Tho. Pate, victualling agent, and Wm. Scott, chirurgion; Eliz. Gardner, a sergeant's wife, with her daughters Parthenia and Sabra, and Eliz. Scott, wife of Capt. Scott were also passengers.

1683-4, Feb. 13. Tangier bay.—Lieut. George Byng to Lord Dartmouth.

Describes the circumstances under which his ship was driven over to Gibraltar, where he found Mr. Rooke, who was likewise put in there by bad weather, with another "barke longa," and ten English seamen. "The patrone of our boat made a complaint to the Governor of Gibraltar, that the General of Tangier had pressed him and several others in the service of that place, and that he believed Mr. Rooke had killed the Spaniards of his boat, because there came none in her to that place. The Governor immediately sent for Mr. Rooke and after threatening of him, confined him to the Consul's house, and then sent for me. He asked me, with much passion, the reason why the General of Tangier pressed any of the King of Spain's embarcations in his service, and that he did not understand the meaning of such proceedings. I told him they were not pressed, but hired by their own consent, and I did believe to their great advantage. He said they were not satisfied for their service done, nor the damages that happened to their boats, and that he did not know how our General could answer the using of the King of Spain's subjects in that manner. I said I was confident our General would justly answer what he had done; and as to their satisfaction he had agreed with one Peter Lopaz of Teriff, who was chief of them, to pay them for their service, and if any damage should happen unto their boats, to make reparation to their content. As to Mr. Rook's having all English men with him, it was occasioned by bad weather, when the Spaniards were unwilling to go off, there were put English men in their boats. He said until such time as he was satisfied of our General's sincerity in the usage of those men, he would retain us with him; but after some consideration he sent for us, and told us we were at liberty to go where we pleased, but that he would detain the boats with him. Then I desired his pass for me and ten men to go by land to Cadiz, which was granted; and accordingly in three days I arrived there, and from thence took passage in his Majesty's ship Pearl to this place."

1684, Feb. 14. Gibraltar.—Robert Wilson, Consul, to Lord Dartmouth.

Narrates the above dispute with the Governor in briefer terms, but to the same effect.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1683-4, Feb. 17-Feb. 19.—Copies (translated) of Correspondence of a friendly nature between the Alcade Ali Benabdala, writing from the Fields of Tanger, and Lord Dartmouth, writing from the ship Grafton in Tanger Road—six letters in all.

1683-4, Febr. 24. Bay of Bulls.—Sir John Berry, Sir John Wyborne, Tho. Hum. . . . (?), and Tho. Fowler to Lord Dartmouth.

"Having received your Lordships commands for the examining Mr. Geo. Byng as to his qualifications to be a Lieutenant, and having called him before us, we find that 'tis near 6 years since he first went to sea, and he has been entrusted by your Lordship lately at Tangier with the charge and command of the Deptford ketch, in the indisposition of Capt. Michell, and Sir John Berry also acquainting us, that according to his observations he behaved himself very well in that command—we do offer it as our opinion, there is no occasion to examine him further or any scruple to be made of his insufficiency now, to perform the office of a lieutenant."

1683-4, Feb. 24.—Bay of Bulls off Cadiz.

A List of soldiers and other passengers, male and female, to be transported from Tangiers to England by his Majesty's ship Oxford.

Capt. Monro's Company.—Capt. Andrew Monro, Lieuts., Robert Gordon and And. Rotherford, Ensign Rorie Mackenzie, 3 sergeants, 3 corporals, 2 drummers, and 33 men.

Capt. Rollo's Company, himself absent.—Lieut. Math. Smelt, 3 sergeants, 3 corporals, 2 drummers, and 30 men.

Sir James Moray's Company.—Capt. James Moray, Lieut. Andrew Scott, 3 sergeants, 3 corporals, 3 drummers, and 33 men.

Capt. Berkeley's Company, himself absent.—Lieuts., Geo. Stewart, and Wm. White, Ensign And. Berkeley, 3 sergeants, 3 corporals, 2 drummers, and 29 men.

Capt. Home's Company, himself absent.—Lieut. John Monatt, Ensign John Bonnerman, 3 sergeants, 3 corporals, 2 drummers, and 28 men.

Other Passengers late inhabitants of Tanger.

Alex. Mackeny, capt. of horse, his sons John and James, Madam Lewis Mackeny, his wife, Mary, Martha, and Penelope, daughters; Edward Wroth, late alderman; Capt. B. St. Michell, agent-general for the navy, Samuel Barker and Alex. Oldys, "his Instruments;" Robert Tarres, late inhabitant; sergeant's wives and children, &c. &c.

Total soldiers	-	-	-	205
Male inhabitants	-	-	-	11
Females	-	-	-	17

Total	-	-	-	233
-------	---	---	---	-----

1683-4, Feb. 29. Gibraltar.—Robert Wilson, Consul, to Lord Dartmouth.

Mr. Povie yesterday in my presence delivered this governor your Excellency's letter, at which after perusal he was not a little startled, fell into some passion, but presently endeavoured to salve up the same by declaring his innocency as to the prisoner mentioned, and his integrity to the service of his Majesty; to all which we patiently gave the old gentleman hearing, as the bearer hereof, Major Berckman, can inform your Excellency. I was glad with all my heart that he is made sensible of his errors, being the best way to deal with these sort of people.

1684, March 30. Plymouth.—Lord Dartmouth to Mr. Secretary Jenkins (copy).

"My passage home has been very tedious and stormy, as the bearer will inform you; but that I might make all the haste that lay in my power, I left Capt. Killegrew with the hired and heavy ships and came myself with the frigates and the ketch with the chief of the forces, that I might have no clog to hinder my dispatch (fearing his Majesty might think the forces long a coming); but notwithstanding my endeavours we met with so great a storm off the South Cape, that three of the frigates lost my company, though in good condition, and I hope may be arrived or will arrive very suddenly. The Centurion came with me well into the Chops of the Channel, but in another violent storm the night before last she likewise was missing, though I am confident she is safe, and you may hear of her before me; but the absence of this last hinders my following the orders I received just now from the hands of Mr. Blathwayte, to bring some forces from this place to the River, and leave one of Colonel Kirke's battalions here, but it so falls out that one part of his regiment being with himself in the Montague (which will be rightly disposed of) the other part is in the Centurion, so that I cannot obey leaving any of that regiment here as yet; only the company of grenadiers which are with me shall be disposed as directed, and I will bring away one of the Duke's companies, and rectify the rest as soon as the Centurion comes into my company. I will not trouble you with a long narration of the several passages of the voyage, having done it at length to the Lords of the Admiralty, which is enclosed to you as formerly, and I desire what commands are thought fit for me may be sent to Portsmouth."

1684, March 31. Falmouth, on board the Mermaid.—Captain William Gifford to Lord Dartmouth.

Describes the damage done to his ship in a sudden gust; with great difficulty he had brought the ship into Falmouth.

1684, April 2. Whitehall. — O. (endorsed Doctor) Wynne to Lord Dartmouth.

"It is with exceeding joy that I among the rest of your Excellency's servants have received the news of your arrival upon the coast, first by this day's letters, and then by Mr. De Paz, who arrived here this evening about six. Mr. Secretary sends you a letter from my Lord of Rochester and another from himself, with his Majesty's order inclosed in it for your repairing to the King's presence; tho' I find by what Mr. Secretary writes your Excellency is not expected wish ill you have disposed of all the troublesome varieties of your great charge, or, in plain English, till you have put things and persons into that condition as to prevent clamour, which is in a manner unavoidable, and is as eagerly expected and desired, nay will be promoted by those that wish ill not only to his Majesty's affairs, but to your Excellency in the management of them Mr. Sec. Jenkins had his Majesty's leave to lay down and quit his office in favour of Mr. Godolphin, his indisposition not permitting him to go on any further in the execution of his function."

1684, April 2. Whitehall.—Sam. de Paz to Lord Dartmouth.

"I am extreme sorry that the entire disability of a horse, which made me lose one whole night's riding, together with the badness of the road, was the occasion of my not getting hither before the post. I waited on Mr. Secretary with Capt. Legge, who obtained me the honour of kissing the King's hand, who enquired most affectionately after your Excellency's health, and it was easy to perceive his satisfaction of your good services to him. I also waited on the Duke with your letter; the particulars of

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

both Captain Legge is best able to inform you. I put into his Majesty's hand a copy of the journal of the destruction of Tanger, which you sent with the express aforesaid."

1684, April 2. Whitehall.—Charles II.

Sign manual expressing satisfaction at the result of Lord Dartmouth's expedition to Tanger, and giving him leave to return to the King's presence, as soon as the disposing of the fleet, &c. will permit—with a letter of Sir L. Jenkins transmitting the same.

1684, April 2. Whitehall.—Earl of Rochester to Lord Dartmouth.

"I cannot let your brother go away to meet your lordship without sending this little note along with him to congratulate, as I do very heartily, your happy return to England, where no friend you have can be gladder than I am to see you safe It is certainly true, and beyond all possibility of doubt, that the King is extremely well satisfied with your lordship, and with your whole conduct in the business committed to you."

1684, April 3. Pendennis.—Colonel P. Kirke to Lord Dartmouth.

"I had the honour to receive a letter from your lordship at my arrival here from Plymouth the 31st of March I find this castle is as much out of repair as your lordship expected and the house so very much as I am forced to bring my wife to London."

1684, April 5. Friday night, Westminster.—Samuel Pepys (holograph) to Lord Dartmouth.

"Deemeing it most for your service, and (at this time especially) most decent, I applyed my selfe (with Mr. Shere) upon our arrivall here this evening, first to Mr. Secretary Jenkins, who with all the respect and tendernesse possible to bee expressed betweene friend and friend did upon perusing your letter immediately fall upon the same sentiments concerning it, with those of your lordship's friends mett at my leaving you, namely, that it ought not to bee communicated to the King or any of the ministers, in the tearmes you had beene pleased to make it run in; for as much as however reasonable for your lordship it was to choose that stile upon the representations you had received of matters upon your arrivall where you are, hee did assure mee those representations had misledd you, for that hee was not more assured of any thing then of the entirenese of his Majestie's good will towards your lordship, and unshaken satisfaction in every part of your conduct of the service you are come from.

To the perticular of the excesse of charge sayd to bee imputed to the (supposed) unnecessary lengthening of your worke, and valued at 300,000*l.*, hee told mee hee never heard anybody speake of more than 30,000*l.*, even those who would most magnify it. See that in that perticular alloe, report has beene more forward towards your diaquiet, then your enemys themselves have really dared to bee.

Hee acquainted mee with the contents of his letter to you by Mr. Legg and his advice upon the licence it brought you from the King for your coming up. Wherein most certainly hee judged with great prudence of what was fitt for your lordship to doe on this occasion.

Upon my proposing to him what was in your wishes of haveing the non-arrivall of Nicholson and the Greyhound supply'd by his haveing his despatches (by them) communicated to the King out of copys thereof I had brought with me to that purpose. Hee told mee that even that would but speake some distrust of yourselfe more then was either fitt for you to shew, or in it selfe there was any ground for, as I my selfe (hee sayd) would soone finde upon my first appearance to his Majesty and mention of you and your affayres to him.

Which I accordingly found in every article most expressly true. For wayteing (with Mr. Shere) upon the King (which was my next stepp) it is impossible for mee to tell you with what impatience hee heard the least suggestion of any thing that might imply his being ever possessed of ought to the diminution of your faythfullnesse, diligence, or prudence in the execution of any one of his comands in this businesse, or ought that hee could now wish to have beene done therein more to his advantage. See that (to tell you the truth) there is nothing wherein your Lordship is owing to any care or skill of mine in my discharge of the message you sent mee hither upon, the King haveing (I protest to you) prevented mee in almost every point wherein I thought I might have had occasion given mee of serving your Lordship; his last word being, that I might assure you that however some persons might bee impertinent enough to use a greater liberty of talke elsewhere, none to this houre had ever taken upon them to say one word to your prejudice to him, adding that hee would never desire on any occasion to have his service better performed then hee had ever had it by the Lord Dartmouth.

Many particulars hee descended to, relateing to the story of your proceedings at Tangier, takeing great pleasure in the recounting of them, ending in the Grafton, wherein I referr your Lordship to what will bee better told you of it by Mr. Shere, and of other matters too, which possibly may slipp my present memory, as being just now interrupted somewhat by a message sent mee from my Lady Williams, giveing mee an account of the death of my Lord Brouncker (this night) and calling for my immediate advice in some matters wherein (as executrix) shee has occasion of calling for it from mee, as being by him appointed an overseer of his will in conjunction with my Lord of Yarmouth.

I had not sooner done with what I had in charge from you towards the King, but in comes the Duke, and thereby an occasion given mee of doeing the same with him. Who after peruseing your letter did in all respects (both as to matter and degree) fall into the same expression of his good will and height of satisfaction in the proceedings of your Lordship, quite through your whole undertaking, commanding mee (upon my earnest sute that hee would bee would bee (sic) playne with me on this occasion) to bee assured, and to assure you, that noe impression had ever beene made upon him by any man to your prejudice therein, but that on the contrary, though there had not beene wanting some that were foolish enough to question the reason of your soe long stay, hee knew too well your dilligence and judgement even to thinke that either in that or in any other perticular you could fayle of doeing the most and best that the business could beare on behalfe of his Majesty. Hee sayd hee has ever suggested the difficultys you had to contend with in the enterprize, descending of his owne accord to severall perticulers, unnecessary here to recount, and abundantly expressive of the favourable noe lesse then just measures hee governed himselfe by, in his judgeing and discoursing of your affayre, enlarging very expressly (above others) upon what you have had to suffer, upon the score of want of provisions. This being in the King's bedd-chamber it was not proper there to enter into any more perticuler discourse with him relateing to nearer matters, which I shall therefore expect another season for, and that as suddainly as may bee.

From him wee went to my Lord of Rochester who (to my extraordinary surprise as well as pleasure) rather exceded then fall short in any thing I have sayd relateing to the King and Duke's discoverys

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

of good will to you ; adding of his owne accord (when I came to mention some of the hardshippes you have had to passe through and perticularly that of victualls), that there was not one of them but you your selfe had foreseene and did foretell him of before your goeing, and that hee was most thoroughly convinced that noe man in England could have surmounted them but your selfe. Our discourses with him ended with his taking notice of the leave sent you to come up, and askeing my opinion when I thought you would bee there. To which when I answered that I questioned whither your Lordship would upon that alone thinke fitt to leave your charge (which I tooke the occasion of saying, in order to your haveing an expresse command to doe it, as believing it in many respects usefull to your Lordship that you should bee here) hee presently replyed, that hee would forthwith speake to the King, and (with his leave) himselfe send you such an expresse signification of the King's pleasure for your coming.

This being done I attended my Lady Dartmouth whom I found with your whole family in good health, and her selfe under a degree of fortitude in all these doubts (to say noe more of it) equall to your owne.

Thus farr I had wrott with a purpose to have sent it away last night, but being willing to perfect it by the addition of what I could learne this morning, I kept it till now, to enable my selfe to tell you that haveing looked up and downe pretty diligently, I am mightily satisfied that neither Mr. H. nor any body else doe now thinke fitt to talke any thing, whatever they may thinke; the King have all last night made it his publiq talke how well you had acquitted your selfe in this voyage and worke, nor shall any of them want a reply that shall take upon them to say ought to the contrary in my heareing.

The King is gone to Windsor, and Duke follows on Monday or Tuesday.

Soe God guard you, and make much of your selfe. I am," &c.

Saturday morning.

[P.S.] "Your Lordship will doe mighty well (I thinke) to have Mr. Phillips's 3rd draught of the Ruines of Tangier from the Townward finished against your coming ; for I observe that the King does much long to see those draughts, wee haveing mentioned them, and the idle malice of your foolish ill-willers haveing insinuated that the work is left not soe perfectly done as wee tell him, and hee is greatly pleased in the assurance that it is.

Sir Robert Southwell and Sir A. Deane (with a thousand more) kisse your Lordship's hand."

1684, April 5. Whitehall.—Sir Henry Shere to Lord Dartmouth.

The King being gone to Windsor this morning has carried away a great deal of subject matter with him from whence might have been collected further notices touching your Lordship's affairs. I think I omitted in my letter the various interrogatories of my acquaintance at court, some your friends, some trimmers, and others your enemies, but all grievously and scandalously misled by the false and industrious representations of your adversaries; they have been as zealously undeceived by a faithful narrative of your Lordship's proceedings; how far to the satisfaction of some and confusion of others you will soon learn. But so much folly and malice together, such unfair as well as unwise practices have been used that all indifferent men see the cheat. The Duchess has been heard to play the champion for you publicly at her table, whilst they would have entertained her at your expense, telling them such ungentlemanlike proceedings are not practised in her country without severe censure. I was to day to find out Col. Sackville, who has served your Lordship faithfully and like a man of honour, where in a coffee house I had the hap to make a great many converts, and those not of the smallest sort; but you will soon hear more than I can write."

1684, April 7. Pendennis.—Colonel Kirke to Lord Dartmouth.

"Two days since I received the enclosed letter [missing] from Mr. Fish who has run his fly-boat ashore within 14 miles of this place in Mount's Bay. I immediately sent Capt. Killegrew's lieutenant, Mr. Larance, to the place, and wrote to one Justice Bellott. The Justice answers that all the guns and mortar pieces may be saved, but pallsades, muskets, rigging, &c., are mostly embezzled, though the justices and gentlemen of the country are extremely civil and saved what they could; and the country very kind to the poor people. These came hither last night, the mayor of Falmouth gave them all quarters and money, and this morning I have desired Captain Killegrew to order them on board some of his Majesty's ships here for transportation to Portsmouth. Mr. Fish lies abed and cries instead of saving any of the wreck, and if he would have promised the country people to pay them they would have saved the horses, for they stood but up to the belly in water for six hours; in short he is a greater beast than any of them, and as the lieutenant tells me knew not where he was, though he met a Dutch vessel that told him how the land bore, and his course was directly upon it, he believed himself upon the coast of France, and so came ashore before he saw it. The lieutenant asked him why he would undertake to command a ship and understand it no better; he said he was sorry for it and was against it himself, but was over persuaded to take it

The condition of this place is not to be told you till I see you, my men are all landed, 4 companies quartered in the Castle, and 4 at Falmouth; Boyton (?) is at Plymouth."

1684, April 8. Whitehall.—Earl of Rochester to Lord Dartmouth.

"I have just now seen Sir Christ. Musgrave returned from having waited upon you . . . could not but write to assure you of my service and friendship. The King and Duke are as well satisfied with you as you can wish, and then you need not care if there be any that are not. We are preparing money to pay off your fleet."

1684, April 9. Windsor.—Earl of Sunderland to Lord Dartmouth.

Am commanded to let you know that his Majesty is very well satisfied with the care you have taken in obeying his orders; and would have you make what haste you can to receive his approbation of your services from himself. I am extremely glad of the good success of your voyage.

1684, April 21.—Captain Ra. Wrenn to Lord Dartmouth.

"On Friday, the 29th March, I met a French man of war, Scilly bearing then E.S.E. and distance 12 leagues, I being within shot I fired at him to make him strike; he immediately fired five guns not striking. I made another shot and then he presently struck his topsails and bow under my stern. I asked him why he did not strike his topsails when he saw the King of England's colours; he answered he saluted the King's colours. I answered that was not sufficient he must strike his topsails, and having given him 2 guns, shot and all, I fired 3 more in answer to his five."

1684, April 22. Paris.—Earl of Arran [James Douglas, son of Duke of Hamilton] to Lord Dartmouth.

"I don't know if this will find you at London, but the experience I have of your kindness has made me adventure giving you the trouble

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

of this upon all hazards. It is to tell you the King of France has done me the honour of making me his own aide-de-campe; he has named 3, the Dauphin, the Duke of Grammont, and myself. It is an honour that no stranger ever had but myself, and none of this country but those of the very first rank. It would be too long a story to tell you how I have been used since my being here. I thought to be but a "four-night," and now it is above 3 months since I have been in this country; and when I came I was only furnished with such necessaries as so short a journey as I intended required, but finding that all our young sparks were coming I thought it would have looked ill in me to have lost the occasion of making this campaign, though I had neither horses nor money, which are two such impediments as might have furnished an excuse relevant enough; but since I thought my honour was concerned I took the resolution—come on't what would. So I have been endeavouring all I could to get an equipage on foot, and make the best on't, and to tell the truth I have met with all the encouragement imaginable in this court, so that now I am in as honourable a post as any young man be in, I want only to be able to carry it out a little. I have written to the King and the Duke, who I hope will do something for me at this time, since my honour in so much at stake. The King owes me of my pension as gentleman of his bedchamber 1,000, and if he would add but the least to that I might do well enough for this campaign. You must consider I must have a great many horses, for it is the aide-de-camp that carries the orders over the whole army; and now if you could but let me have a horse that is fit for a soldier you would oblige me extremely, and I shall pay what price you please whenever I come into England. For ready money is something scarce at present; but if you have a good one I would rather give what money you please even now than want one, so I shall order Will Hay, the bearer, my servant, to give you what you please for such a horse as you think will be for my purpose. But whatever you'll do you must do it immediately, for my horses are to part the next minute this comes to my servant's hands. It is natural for me to give you this trouble since from the first time that I have been in the world I have always made you a confident(?) of all my concerns. I hope at least you'll let me hear from you which will infinitely oblige your most affectionate cousin and humble servant."

1684, April.—A list of the persons that attended the Lord Dartmouth for the expedition at Tangier, chief among them are:—

Major Beckeman, engineer, from 16 Aug. 1683 to 8 April 1684—237 days at 13s. 4d. per diem.

Ensign Phillips, engineer, from 10 Aug. 1683 to 10 April 1684—245 days at 10s.

Capt. Leake, master gunner, from 9 July 1683 to 10 April 1684—277 days at 13s. 4d.

Capt. Feife, engineer, from 18 July 1683 to 10 April 1684—268 days at 10s.

Capt. de Reus, master fireworker, from 18 July 1683 to 10 April 1684—268 at 10s.

Gunners, watermen, &c.

1684, May 14.—"A schedule of papers presented (by direction of his Majesty) to the Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, from the Lord Dartmouth, upon the principall matters occurring to him in his late expedition to Tanger, relating to the King's revenue with an humble memoriall of his Lordship's annexed thereto.

1. The state and value of the severall houses and lands within the said city and its jurisdictions surrendered to his Majesty by their respective proprietors, amounting to about 11,300*l.*, and contained in a report made of the same by persons especially appointed by his Lordship for the inquiring into, and the impartiall adjusting thereof between his Majesty and them.

2. A particular of the severall dwelling-houses and other buildings, within the said city and jurisdiction, belonging to the King, and not comprehended in the aforementioned report.

3. An accompt of the names, number, quality, and trade of each citizen or other civill inhabitant of Tanger, with their wives, children, and servants resideing there at his Lordship's arrivall the 17th September 83.

4. The like of the officers and workmen (with their families) belonging to the mole and fortifications, and a particular accompt of the severall builings upon the mole belonging to his Majesty.

5. Two draughts, one of the city, the other of the mole of Tanger, distinctly notifying each particular building within and upon the same belonging to his Majesty or any other private proprietor.

6. An abstract of the muster rolls of the garrison given in by the Commissary thereof, and taken the first of October '83, amounting with the non-commission officers to 3,471 men.

7. A state of the arreares of pay due to the said garrison, and the summe wherein each military officer thereof stood indebted to any of the inhabitants upon the 30th of September 1683. Contained in a report from persons especially commissioned by his Lordship for preparing the same; the said arrears of pay amounting to 56,215*l.* 5*s.* 4*d.*, and the debt to the inhabitants to 28,900*l.* 16*s.* 7*d.*

8. A report from Mr. Hewer, Treasurer of the said garrison, containing the particulars following—

1. An accompt of the severall debtors to his Majesty within the said place, upon the duties of excise and porteredge, stated to the determination of the said duties, vizt., the 26th of October '83, and amounting to 1,105*l.* 13*s.* 3*d.*

2. The like of debtors to the King for rents stated to Michaelmas '83, 120*l.* 19*s.*

3. A generall accompt between his Majesty and the said Treasurer for his receipts and payments, upon the accompt of the revenue of the said place, between the first of January 1681 and the 19th of November '83, wherein (after the recovery of the debts aforementioned) the accomptant will remaine debtor to the King 1,060*l.* 4*s.* 6*d.*, and to Captain St. John and Captain Collier, 181*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.*

4. An accompt of arrears of rent due to his Majesty and discounted (by order of the Lords of the Treasury), to severall persons towards payment of his Majesty's debt to them upon the account of quarters adjusted to Michaelmas 1683, 856*l.* 2*s.* 8½*d.*

5. His Majestie's aforementioned debt for quarters adjusted (after such discount) to the same Michaelmas '83, 3,129*l.* 2*s.* 9*d.*

6. An abstract and accompt of the seven months pay from the first of September '81 to the 31st of March '82, issued to the said garrison, according to the respective establishment and muster-rolls; with an accompt of the money stopt therefrom towards satisfying the aforesaid debt to the inhabitants, the totall of the said seven months pay amounting to 21,793*l.* 17*s.* 4*d.*

9. An accompt of his Lordship's proceedings for the secureing to his Majesty what could be recovered of 26,000 ps. ½, provided for the redemp-

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

tion of captives and put (to that effect) into the hands of one Mr. Thistlethwayte, an officer of the Farmers of Ireland then lately deceased at Tanger; with the issue of his Lordship's endeavours therein, containing the severall papers following, viz.,

1. The report of Mr. John Earlsman, Mr. Hewer, and others commissioned to that purpose, shewing the state of accompts between his Majesty and the said Thistlethwayte in reference to the said 26,000 ps. $\frac{1}{2}$, wherein he appeares debtor to his Majesty in 2,592*l.* 6*s.* 3*d.*
2. A copy of his Lordship's warrant to Mr. Hewer authorizing him, to receive from the widdow of the said Thistlethwayte, all such summes of moneys, bookes, accompts and papers belonging to her late husband as were then in her custody.
3. Duplicate of Mr. Hewer's discharge for the moneys, bookes and papers received by him from the said widdow.
4. Mr. Hewer's report (after his perusal of the said bookes and papers) of the state of accompts between the said Thistlethwayte and others.
5. A copy of a letter from the Lord Dartmouth (at Mr. Hewer's instance) to the Recorder of Tanger to examine severall persons upon oath, elateing to Mr. Thistlethwayte's concerns.
6. The said Recorder's answer thereto, with the depositions of the persons so by him examined.
7. A copy of his Lordship's warrant to Mr. Cuthbert for delivering 4 casks of hatts (as the proper goods of Mr. Thistlethwayte) to Major Tiffin, for the use of Collonell Trelawny's regiment.
8. A report from severall persons appointed thereto by his Lordship, relateing to some goods brought to Tanger to the value of about 900*l.* supposed to belong to the said Thistlethwayte, with severall depositions relating thereto.
10. A report from Mr. Hughes, late Minister of Tanger, containing an account.
 1. Of the utensills, vestments, &c., belonging to the church of Charles the Martyr there.
 2. Of all moneys due to the said church and poore.
 3. Of the bookes belonging to the public library there.
 4. Of the debts owing by the said church and poore.
11. A report from the Mayor, Corporation, and others appointed Commissioners for dispensing his Majesty's charity and supervising the hospitall, touching the state of the said poor and hospitall, the same being accompanied with the following reports,
 1. A copy of his Lordship's letter to them demanding such report.
 2. An accompt current of the hospitall's receipts and issues from the 1st of October '81 to the 1st of November '82 whereon the King is debtor to severall persons in the summe of 1,324*l.* 7*s.* 2*d.*
 3. A like accompt of the hospitall's receipts and issues from the 1st November 1682 to the 15th October '83 (made out by three other accompts annexed thereto) on which the King remains debtor to severall persons in the summe of 861*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.*
12. Severall reports made to his Lordship by Samuel Pepys, Esq., and Mr. Frederick Bacher, upon petitions referred to them from the Lord Dartmouth, as the foundation of his Lordship's proceedings in answering the same, vizt.,
 1. Their report of 26th October '83 relateing to 11 severall cases therein mentioned.
 2. The like of the 27th October '83 upon 10 cases more.
 3. The like of the 2nd November containing 10 more.

4. The like of the 10th ditto. upon 5 more.
5. The like of 1st December '83 upon 4 more.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

The following receipt is appended.

"May the 14th 1684. Received of the Right Honourable the Lord Dartmouth by order of the Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of his Majestie's Treasury the severall papers contained in this Schedule.

HEN. GUY."

1684, May 22 and June 3.—Petitions of Henry Slingsby, Esq., Master and Worker of the Mint. Concerning arrears of coinage monies charged upon him.

1684, June 27. Tournay.—Thomas Phillips to Lord Dartmouth.

"I have been since my last in a continual motion from place to place after having seen Luxembourg, and delivered my letter to Mons. Vauban. I took all the observations that were needful for me to do in all respects whatever, the trenches being not filled up, neither was there any thing repaired that might hinder my benefit of seeing the whole thing; but I find the place has been basely defended, and the besieged the most neglectful and the ignorants (sic) people in the world, they having all things done that could be thought on for their defence and gaining of time to their hands, they having nothing to do but execute the duty of soldiers in preventing the enemies lodging so very near at first sight, which might have been done with the greatest ease in the world, they having mines in all places whatever where the enemy could possibly post themselves; but they were so neglectful that the French took the powder out of the very mines that were under the batteries the French had upon them. I have since taken the true proportions of all their artillery, also an exact draught of all the redoubts; I find those of Luxembourg to better all those that were ever yet done in the world. I have also made it my business to court Mons. Vauban for a plan of the siege to send you, he telling me that he had not one done, but he had given one to the Duke of Northumberland, which is with the King by this. I find nothing here that I am any way a stranger to, neither in the attacking or defending of places; and as for their fortifications and all their new proportions the draft I once gave with some small addition to be added that the King hath one proposed to me (sic), the world can never mend it, for I find they are now adding only that to all their fortified towns which should have been done in the beginning, which is in detaching the bastions and being well prepared with counter mines.

From Luxembourg we went to see Crequi's army at Treves, from thence to Metz, and so to all the frontier towns towards Lorraine, &c.; after all which I have taken particular observations of all things that can any way be serviceable to us, especially in the affairs of the artillery. The army and fortifications I have seen in most postures but in service, as you will find by my journal at my coming home which now I being returned from the army before Lorraine, a small village, the same which was before Mons in my last letters to you; and now they talk nothing but of decamping daily, and are going to reinforce the army in Catalonia.

We met with great danger between Avenche and Rockroye going to Luxembourg, our guide being almost killed, and we may thank English horses for our lives. This is all at present, but at my coming home I hope to satisfy your lordship better. Pray present only my service to Sir Christopher [Musgrave], and I would write to him, but having so little a time to stay from you that I will only see Lille, Dunkirk, and Gravelines, and so homeward. If I make any stay it will be at Douai where there is a great foundry of ordnance. The Duke of Grafton came with the convoy this day to Tournay, where I am now going to see the citadel, which is a thing of Vauban's entire finishing, but a different way to what he now uses in the proportion. We have taken up 150*l*. money (?) of my Lord Preston who tells us of letters from you, but we have not the happiness to have them as yet. There can be nothing in them but I have taken care to give you an account of. Mr. Wharton presents his duty."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1684, July 1. Chilton.—Earl of Gainsborough to Lord Dartmouth.

Recommends William Adams, of Tichfield, for a gunner's place at Portsmouth.

1684, July 6. Longleat.—Lord Weymouth to Lord Dartmouth.

"My brother informing me that you were pleased to give me one of your Spanish horses I have sent a servant to bring him hither, that your favour may not be worsted by want of care in the conveyance. I see your lordship resolves to keep nothing to yourself but the glory of your voyage, which all your ill-willers will never be able to ravish from you"

1684, July 8.—Dr. Thomas Ken to Mr. Graham, at Lord Dartmouth's house in St. James's Square. Business matters. "I return you many thanks for your kindness to my poor brother."

1684, July 15.—Countess of Portland to Lord Dartmouth.

"My addresses to your Lordship is on the confidence of your generosity to my deplorable condition. I do not doubt of my Lord Rochester's favour nor has my Lord cause to believe me unkind, that makes so few complaints of my miseries.

My last quarter was seized on by a creditor after nine months' solicitation. I am sued by four several debtors (sic) expecting daily my windows broken with the outcries of them. I bear not only the shame of their importunities but also the prejudice of my health, being so wanting as incapable for a journey to the Bath, which the doctors ordered me this two summers back."

1684, July 22. Amptill.—Earl of Ailesbury to Lord Dartmouth.

Will order such arms as were seized in this county and in Huntingdonshire to be delivered to the persons mentioned to receive them. I was beyond sea last year, when the search for arms was commanded, and what was done was by direction of my deputy lieutenants. There were very few found in either county.

1684, July 25. [Knowsley].—Earl of Derby to Lord Dartmouth.

"I have sent a copy of your Lordship's letter to the deputy lieutenants of Cheshire, to put the contents thereof in execution, the arms taken in that county being most considerable. As for those seized in Lancashire, they are not many, and therefore they shall be kept in safe custody for the use of the militia."

1684, Aug. 6. Euston.—Earl of Arlington to Lord Dartmouth.

"I received your letter, dated June 16, wherein you desire that the arms seized last year in the hands of disaffected person, and not useful or the militia should be delivered to Mr. Pilkington at Ipswich. The number of them is inconsiderable, and little worth the pains of that person who informed his Majesty otherwise."

1684, Aug. 10, Sept. 20, Oct. 5, and Oct. 26. Portsmouth.—Tho. Phillips to Lord Dartmouth.

On the progress of the fortifications there.

1684, Sept. 13. Dublin.—Duke of Ormonde to Lord Dartmouth.

On the state of the army and fortifications in Ireland. "I would bee glad your Danish Ingeneer were come that hee might looke upon the places hee shall be bee directed too, and give us his opinion how they might bee fortified to the degree they are capable of, and shall bee needful with regard to any danger that may reasonably bee apprehended in the age & circumstances wee are in. In order to the disciplining & keeping the army compleate I designe this next sumer to draw it out, if not together yet in as great bodys as I can, and keepe it incamped for some reasonable time; but for this tents must bee had, since in time of peace wee must not destroy houses, hedges, woods, & plantations to hut withal."

1684, Sept. 15.—Lord Castleton to Lord Dartmouth.

Thanks Lord Dartmouth for his kindness to his son Charles, "'twas your respect that redeemed him from the laziness of youth, and I hope experience may throw him into those affairs as he may not only shew his duty and obedience to his Prince but his great gratitude to your Lordship."

1684, Sept. 15 st. no.—Viscount Preston to Lord Dartmouth.

Introduces the bearers, two Irish merchants, who complain of injustice done them in the French court, notwithstanding the writer's attempts to prevent it; and who have now only recourse to the King's and Duke's protection.

1684, Sept. 28.—Lord Craven to Lord Dartmouth.

Desires that his regiment may be furnished with seventy-two long pikes upon this occasion of the review.

1684, Sept. 29. Kildare.—Earl of Arran (son of the Duke of Ormonde) to Lord Dartmouth.

Desires Lord Dartmouth to present the bearer, Major Billingsly, of the Guards, to kiss His Majesty's hand, he having no acquaintance at Court.

[1684?], Oct. 24.—Earl of Castlehaven to Lord Dartmouth.

"This post I have received the unexpected news of my brother Castlehaven's death, which has not a little surprised me, having received from him a letter dated not above 3 days before of his perfect health. My suit to your Lordship is that you will please to acquaint his Highness to-morrow with it, who I hope will be so obliging as to consider the ill-support I have of this title to me, without his Majesty will be so gracious as to continue to me the same pension in Ireland which my brother had. This I am not able to do myself, not being so well as to stand upon my legs with the gout."

1684, Nov. 6.—Earl of Plymouth to Lord Dartmouth.

If not supplied by Lord Dartmouth's order with the money he had spoken about before the 11th, he must borrow the amount. Hopes that Sing will get the vacant gunner's place at Hull, as he has officiated there three years without pay.

1684, November.—Memoranda for Courts to be held at the Trinity House on the 14th of November and the 25th of November.

Among the memoranda for the 25th of November is a letter from the Captain of the Dartmouth Frigate to Mr. Secretary Pepys about the pilots of the Trinity House at Yarmouth refusing to take charge of His Majesty's ships, against which the following marginal note is placed:—

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

"A letter to be writ to the Mayor of Yarmouth to chide the Pilots and to acquaint them whoever refuse hereafter shall lose his branches; and to desire his opinion who are fit to be made Pylots of that place if there be a want of any."

[Note.—In America a pilot's warrant or commission is still called a branch.]

[1684 ?] James Duke of York to Lord Dartmouth.

Windsor, Monday morning.—"This is only to tell you, that I intend to be in towne on Wensday, so that if Mr. Pepyes be not well enough to be here by Wensday in the forenone, I would have him stay there, till I can present him on Friday, at Hampton Court, to his Majesty myself; but if he can be here before I go, it would be better."

[Addressed.] For the Lord Dartmouth.

1684-5, Jan. 10. Longleat.—Lord Weymouth to Lord Dartmouth.

"Being informed that the city of Lichfield have addressed to your Lordship about their new charter, the entire friendship and respect I bear you oblige me to acquaint you how far I think myself concerned in it. The family of Devereux have for eight successive generations been Recorders of Lichfield, which was continued to three Dukes of Somerset, as descended from them and owners of Drayton. The only breach in it was made by your brother Fleetwood, when my Lord Danby was so great, which happened just after the death of the Duchess of Somerset, before I came into the country; and yet the best of the corporation were so civil as to excuse it to me, but when my Lord Danby was impeached, and consequently they expected the place would be void, the whole corporation voluntarily obliged themselves by a writing under their hands at the meeting of the company to choose me Recorder upon the first vacancy, which Mr. Baulyns, I think, has still in his custody. That they have made an infinitely better and discreeter choice of your Lordship I do most readily acknowledge, though their carriage towards me is not very obliging. This particular I guess your Lordship has not been informed of, and now I have told it you I leave myself to be disposed of as you please."

1684-5, Feb. 14. Dublin.—Sir William Domville to Lord Dartmouth. The death of his most incomparable good master his late Royal Majesty has put a stop to most affairs there, suspended all proceedings in law matters, and vacated all commissions of employment. Some applications may be made to stop the renewing of his patent as Attorney General, an office which he has served diligently for nearly 25 years. Begs to be informed what course is being taken to renew his commission and the commissions of the Judges and King's Council in Ireland.

1684-5, Feb. 26. Dublin.—Tho. Phillips to Lord Dartmouth. Has this minute finished his survey of the city of Dublin and a general draught of the old Bay. Finds it high time to go in hand with some place of strength about here for the better security of the King's friends upon any occasion; for here is not that true affection that subjects ought to bear one to another, besides the business of most people here is nothing but getting of money without the least regard to their Prince's service. Gives lengthy suggestions for the strengthening of the city and its surroundings.

1684-5, March 3. Curraghmore.—The Earl of Tyrone to Lord Dartmouth. Has not been wanting in dutiful sentiments and expressions of sorrow for the death of the late good and gracious King, and would not be in early attending on his Majesty if it were thought seasonable and inoffensive, although his late prolix sufferings owing to malicious contrivers against him disable him from appearing before his Majesty suitable to the character he has the honour to bear. Begs for advice how to govern himself so as not to omit any reverence and duty, and yet not to presume any offensive applying himself to the King.

1684-5, March 6. Dublin.—Lord Lanesborough to Lord Dartmouth. On behalf of a near kinsman, Mr. Farrell, son of Sir Connell Farrell, who adhered to the late King during his exile. Hopes it will be no objection to him that he is a right Church of England man.

1684-5, March 14. Portsmouth.—Ri. Ridge, mayor, and others, to Lord Dartmouth. The recordership of Portsmouth is vacant by the voluntary resignation of Sir John Biggs. Humbly request that his Lordship will honour them with the acceptance of the office, or else will appoint such a person as he shall think fit to be the Recorder.

1684-5, March 15.—Thos. Ken, Bishop of Bath and Wells, to Lord Dartmouth. Came last night to his beloved retreat at Winchester, and on enquiring about the election found, by Mr. Lestrangle's own acknowledgment, that Mr. Morley's interest was very strong and more likely to prevail than Sir John Cloberry's. Had represented privately to Mr. Morley, that it was the King's pleasure that Mr. Lestrangle and Mr. Hauses should be chosen, and Mr. Morley had promised to desist, hoping that the King, to whom he had been much misrepresented, would remember it in his favour.

1684-5, March 20. Hull.—Joseyh Blaydes to the Earl of Plymouth, in "Pickeadilly." On the Hull fortifications, Capt. Copley in command there, with an estimate for repairs, &c. on the jetty.

1684-5, March 20.—The Duke of Buckingham to Lord Dartmouth. Recommends the bearer, John Smith, as good a groom as any is in England, and one of the first he put into the late King's service in the mews, to his Lordship's favour.

[Two other similar letters from the Duke, dated March 25 and March 31 in this year, are written on behalf of Mr. Doughty and Richard Smith.]

1684 (?), March 23. Sandbeck. — Lord Castleton to Lord Dartmouth. Has sent his son Charles to lie at his Lordship's feet. Begs Lord Dartmouth to dispose of him either as to captain, ship, or to what part of the world he will please to command him. Has great hopes that he will answer expectation in his duty to the King and country.

[Note.—This letter is dated 1684, but Cf. 1683, June 25, and 1684, Sept. 15.]

1685, March 31. Portsmouth.—Edw. Archer to the hon. Capt. William Legge, at Lord Dartmouth's. The mayor and council humbly desire to know his Lordship's pleasure about the Recordership. The sessions are always kept there the week after Easter, and it will be necessary to have a Recorder to sit with the mayor and the justices.

1685, April 1. Lisbon.—Thos. Maynard, for the Factory of Lisbon, to Lord Dartmouth. The factory, being sensible of their duty to accompany their fellow subjects in the congratulation of the King's happy succession to his Crown, have ventured first to submit their address to his Lordship's approbation.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1685, April 1. Berwick.—Colonel R. Widdrington to Lord Dartmouth.

Had received a request signed by about seventy hands to stand for burgess in Berwick corporation, but the King having obliged Capt. Bickerstaff and Mr. Wallis to join their interest together there, he had declared to several friends that he would not stand. Mr. Wallis had however refused to join with Capt. Bickerstaff, and it was feared Mr. Gray would be chosen for one; and he had affronted the writer very strangely before all the officers and magistrates of the town. For three or four years Mr. Wallis had continually abetted and assisted the interest of the disaffected in Berwick. The writer had made no effort to be chosen, but his friends had declared they would vote for him whether he would or not; and so Bickerstaff and he had been freely elected. Hopes his Lordship will not censure him until he has heard more particulars.

1695, April 1. Kirby.—Lord Hatton to Lord Dartmouth.

Lord Grey of Ruthyn who is now at Kirby is surprised with an account he has received from London of my Lord of Kent's claiming the carrying the King's spurs at the Coronation in right of the Barony of Grey of Ruthyn or of that of Hastings. Were there time enough Lord Grey's right to both those baronies as heir general could be made out, but time being so short all the evidence cannot be produced. Begs the Lords' judgment may be suspended till opportunity has been given to offer full evidence.

1685, April 3. Skipton Castle.—Earl of Thanet to Lord Dartmouth. Has desired Sir Christopher Musgrave, Sir George Fletcher, and Sir Daniel Fleming to give him their opinions about the fittest men to serve as deputy lieutenants in Cumberland. Hopes that those selected may have the King's approbation at once, the distance from London being so great, and it being necessary that the militia should be got into condition by them before the writer goes up to Parliament. Cumberland is in no little disorder, and if a militia is anywhere necessary it is certainly there, where they are "often alarmented by the Borderers whose trade was and ever will be fighting and stealing for their daily bread." The writer's brother and Mr. Musgrave are chosen for Appleby, and most of those parts will send up good men. Has desired his excuses to be made to the King if he cannot attend the Coronation, as he never could stay a month to be well in town without going to Banstead downs; and hopes to do the King better service in Parliament later by enjoying the good air where he is till the sitting.

1685, April 15. Guernsey.—The Bailiff and Jurats of Guernsey (C. Andros, R. Desaumares, W. Le Marchant, Daniel De Beauvoir, J. Careye, &c.) to Lord Dartmouth. Request the supply to them of certain things needful to secure the defences of the isle.

1685, June 10. Exeter.—Duke of Albemarle to Lord Dartmouth. Thinks it necessary that the castle of Exeter should be made fit to receive the arms of the county, which will be considerable when they are all together. Some money was left there by the late King for repairing it; desires that Major Beckmann or some other engineer may be sent to view the castle, so that the money may not be spent in vain.

1685, June 16. Titchfield.—Earl of Gainsborough to Lord Dartmouth. Has raised the militia forces of the county, and hopes that by this time they are all marching to their quarters, and will be ready to assist Dorsetshire if there be occasion. Lest there should be a want of ammunition desires that an order may be speedily sent to Portsmouth for furnishing them with barrels of powder and shot.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

1685, June 15. Holyroodhouse.—The Duke of Queensberry to Lord Dartmouth. Has been kept in great hurry by business occasioned by the rebellion, or would have answered letter of 25 May sooner. Major Beckman is gone to Earl Dumbarton at Glasgow about the fort designed at Stirling. The rebels are by the Marquis of Athol put from the Highlands and their fort, ships, arms and ammunition seized by his Majesty's frigates. They are now fallen down the length of Dumbarton with design to possess themselves of the disaffected counties, but Earl Dumbarton may disappoint that project, for he has account of it. Many of the rebels have deserted, and those who remain are in great terror. All this while nothing is heard of the Duke of Monmouth, though both from Holland and England information had come of his resolution to land in Scotland. If he come he will not find them unprovided.

1685, June 20. Oxford.—The Earl of Abingdon to Lord Dartmouth. Commends his good neighbour Mr. Mildmay to his Lordship's favour. His family has always been loyal, and he is well horsed and well beloved, so that if a commission can be got for him in the new raised troops he will do the King good service.

1685, June 27. Dublin.—The Earl of Longford to Lord Dartmouth. "Honest Tom Phillips being upon his return to England" he writes in the highest terms of his character and conduct while engaged in Ireland, and of the value of the draughts and observations he has made when surveying there. It is pity his stay was not somewhat longer since he spent it so usefully; he should have surveyed the whole sea coast of the kingdom, not the chief ports only. Refers to the importance of Curk harbour, and points out that no fortification has hitherto been made to secure it but a very small inconsiderable one at Halbowling which Lord Mountjoy caused in haste to be erected in Queen Elizabeth's time to prevent Don John de Aquila's landing at Cork with his Spaniards. The whole province of Ulster then in arms under Tyrone and Tyrconnell was thus prevented from joining the Spaniards who had possessed themselves of Kinsale; and had not Mountjoy defeated their numerous army with a handful of men within two miles of Kinsale it is probable that England would have had now but a little share (if any) in Ireland. They had now a much more dangerous and nearer enemy to the Crown than Spain was in those times; and he is the more to be apprehended, as his ambition is not less, and his power by sea and land much greater. His malice to our King is equal also to that of Philip II. to Queen Elizabeth. Urges therefore the necessity for protecting such a noble and secure harbour as Cork in case any sinister accident befall our fleet."

1685, June 27. Welbeck. — Henry, Duke of Newcastle to Lord Dartmouth. On behalf of Mr. Bankes whose father suffered for the Crown, having had a troop of horse in the writer's regiment in '42, and served bravely at the head of it; he was thought to have lost several thousand pounds for his Majesty and was a gentleman of good esteem in Yorkshire. The son too had been an officer eighteen years in the Duke's regiment.

1685, June 27. Dublin.—Earl of Inchiquin to Lord Dartmouth. Fears that the King gives credit to a report that he is disaffected to his service. Does not make his Majesty a faint offer of service, but does passionately court an opportunity of washing his hands in the blood of

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

the King's enemies, at the utmost peril of his life and fortune. Neither desires nor needs an employment to live by, but seeks only the honour of serving the King and shewing his loyalty to him.

1685, June 28. Bradford [Wilts].—Earl of Feversham to Lord Dartmouth. The provisions and artillery sent to him are well and safely arrived in the Devises. Entreats that some tents may be sent to him with all speed. Cannot write more at large at this time.

1685, June 29. Hammersmith.—Sir Leoline Jenkins to Lord Dartmouth. Recommends the bearer Major Stedman for employment.

1685, June 30. Westbury.—Henry Shere or Sheres to Lord Dartmouth. Lord Feversham has found it necessary to leave the heavy cannon and other things at the Devises under a good guard, for the enemies' motions are so very irregular in a very bad and enclosed country that it would be a great impediment to take them. Is toiled to death, and if this lasts 'tis not to be supported; is made a Secretary of war, governor of carriages, of sick and wounded, a commissary of provisions and all besides the peculiar care of his charge in the service. Lord Feversham's very obliging usage of him makes him bear his burden with the least complaint he may.

1685, July 1. Frome.—Henry Shere to Lord Dartmouth. "We thought to have marched this morning at day break and accordingly our cannon and appurtenances were drawn out, but new counsels have begotten new measures, and I believe we shall not move till night. This has often been our lot of the artillery to the unspeakable toil and harassing of both people and horses, and this we only endure of all the army, but we are bound to suffer it. I sent my quarter master last night for orders to the adjutant general, being lame myself of a bruise and so could not easily wait myself on my Lord Feversham (who I must own is very obliging and makes me useful to him in many matters), where Kirke being by whispered to the adjutant, who, thereupon, told my officer that I must come for orders myself whereupon I meeting him to-day told him he was ill counselled to send me such a message, and that I knew my duty and my post too well to observe orders that I could not justify to my superiors, and that I had given my Lord Feversham an account of the mistake, who allows my reasons; and that for the time to come I desired he would please to observe that deference for the artillery as was practised in other armies, and was our due. You see what usage we must meet with if we will be patient enough to endure it. I told your Lordship Povey had joined us, leaving the heavy cannon at the Devises, and truly in this troublesome country I could wish we had fewer than we have. The tents came very seasonably for unless we encamp the country will be ruined, for we have been hitherto much their greater enemies than the rebels. In plain English I have seen too much violence and wickedness practised to be fond of this trade, and trust we may soon put a period to the business, for what we every day practise among this poor people cannot be supported by any man of the least morality. The enemy lay in Wells last night, where they took a waggon of Kirke's with arms ammunition and money, which he pretends now, he left there because he was forced to lend us his horses for the cannon, which is the greatest falsehood in the world, and therefore, if any such thing be intimated let this be an evidence against it. They marched to day by three o'clock and are come to Glastonbury, and we believe are returning from whence they came or towards Bridgewater. We learn by gentlemen that were prisoners that we did extraordinary execution with our cannon the other day. We write only by slotches (sic) not knowing a quarter of an hour beforehand of the occasion, which will be my excuse for that want of order that I would otherwise observe in my performance of this duty to your Lordship."

1685, July 4. Bristol.—Duke of Beaufort to Lord Dartmouth. Has received commissions signed by his Majesty to raise a regiment of ten companies, and he supposes a hundred to be in each. Expects his officers will have raised the men by the time the arms can reach them at Bristol, where the rendezvous is fixed.

1685, July 4. From the camp near Summerton.—H. Shere to Lord Dartmouth. "I writ your Lordship last night but the express was gone before we could finish our business in the field, for we march in the rear of the army and are commonly 3 hours later in our quarters than the rest of our neighbours, if they may be called quarters, being for the most part what Mr. K—— and his 'partiality' orders Culleford (who is his creature) to permit us. Of this I made great complaint to the General, I told him that unless better methods and more regular were used in distributing quarters according to the rank of the respective officers I should be constrained to give up my commission, for that it were better and safer for me to serve him as a volunteer, and take my lot among them than to have a post of so much trust and honour and to consent to be treated against all right and usance of other armies where any rule is observed. He seemed surprised and troubled at my complaint and promises to give strict orders about it. Captain Cog (sic) came just now in having been upon a party within $\frac{1}{2}$ a mile of Bridgewater where he fell among their horse and was forced to charge through them; his horse was shot and but little other damage. They have broken the bridges and are doing all they can to fortify themselves there, which to me seems a drawing to an end of the campaign, which God grant for the King's sake and our own, for unless some things be amended this life is not long to be supported. I believe we shall not march to-day, we are quartered where there is neither bread, water, nor scarce any thing to support man or beast. This is the second night the foot have encamped and we find it much the best way; all our people of the train likewise encamp between the cannon and the carriages which is very commodious and expedites our march very much. My Lord ordered us for expedition to leave our mortar at Bath, but now he wishes it here, and I believe we shall send for it to march with us to Bridgewater, where, if the enemy remains (as by his proceeding 'tis believed he will) it will be of good use to us. I write this upon my saddle in the field, and presume to add no more but that I am," &c.

1685, July 5. Portsmouth.—Major Henry Slingsby to Lord Dartmouth. On the defects of the garrison there, and the expenses incurred in repairs, &c.

1685, July 6.—Sir Stephen Fox to Lord Dartmouth. Acquaints him that he shall have no reason to complain of the disorderly leaving of the lodgings, which her Grace [of Monmouth] wishes she had known who had been to succeed her in, that accommodation might have been made to both parties; and in 3 days the chimnies shall be repaired.

Prays his lordship to come to a resolution about the horses, the set of 7 are the best English large geldings in this place, and fit for the King's own coach. The farrier offers 250*l.* for the 7, but the price is 280*l.*; the six mules are also in good plight at 20*l.* a piece, and 3 saddle horses for a page and servants at 12*l.* a piece.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

1685, July 8. Hull.—Richard Wharton to Lord Dartmouth. In an ill state there at present, and likely to be far worse if not speedily supplied with money for defraying the weekly charges. The first three hundred pounds have long since been drawn off, and they have since been supplied by Alderman Mason who denies advancing any more. The men have hitherto been kept at work with fair words and promises, but he knows not what rhetoric to use to them next pay day, therefore hopes his Honour will speedily consider them. The works in general go on well.

1685, July 8. Wells.—Henry Shere to Lord Dartmouth. Takes for granted that the war is at an end since the Duke of Monmouth is taken, and asks for speedy orders what to do, whether to march with the army to London or go with the train to Portsmouth. So . . . e the provost marshal has unhappily killed Sir John Talbot's son, but they all agree it was in his defence.

1685, July 8 ("or rather the 9, at two in the morning").—Wells. Earl of Feversham to Lord Dartmouth. Has not had the time to write so often as he should have done. The bearer, Mr. Rider, will tell him all their doings, a gentleman who has done great services and to whom the writer hopes all kindness will be shown for his sake. Now that there is nothing to be done, hopes that the King will give him leave to come to London as soon as he can, and that he shall be quiet as long as he lives. [On a separate sheet is added]—

Is very glad that the King has given Lord Dartmouth the Duke of Monmouth's lodgings. Would like those vacated by his Lordship in place of what he has in Somerset house. Should the King think fit to employ him on his return about the troops it would be necessary that he should be lodged in Whitehall.

1685, July 10. Warminster.—Same to Same. Thanks Lord Dartmouth for the letter written on the receipt of the news of his good luck, and refers to the great kindness shown to him by the King in his letters since he left London. Hopes soon to receive his Majesty's commands to return there.

1685, July 10. John Lord Berkeley of Stratton to Lord Dartmouth. As there are some ships fitting out, reminds his Lordship of the King's promise that he should be appointed to one. Has been much longer at sea than his brother was before he had a ship.

1685, July 13. Bridgewater.—Colonel P. Kirke to Lord Dartmouth. Hopes Lord Feversham has let his Lordship know that the arms last received from Whitehall were all lost at Wells, and that he will be pleased to order where he may receive others. Has taken several broken arms and old ones from the rebels; desires orders what to do with them as also the tents of Trelaney's regiment and his own.

1685, July 23. Plymouth. — Earl of Bath to Lord Dartmouth. His regiment being completed, he, having received the King's orders to draw some of the companies immediately upon duty, requests that the needful arms may be supplied to them.

1685, Sept. 12. Newhall. —Duke of Albemarle to Lord Dartmouth. Recommends Sir Thomas Stringer to his Lordship's favour with regard to the present vacancies among the judges, he being the only man of the law for whose preferment the writer's father ever moved the late King.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1685-6, Jan. 27. Sir William Smyth to Lord Dartmouth.

Has fallen under the displeasure of the Lord Chancellor, who left him out of the Commission of the peace; gives his Lordship notice, that the quiet of the people here may be provided for, it being no ordinary post, the numbers being vast and not one in a thousand as loyal as he ought to be. Cannot tell how he has offended the Lord Chancellor, for in all public and private meetings he has magnified the great service he has performed; but some persons have complained that they had been injured by the Commissioners of Sewers, of whom he was but one out of 40. Encloses a long paper headed "The Case of Sir Wm. Smyth," in vindication of the proceedings of the Commissioners, from which the following notes are taken:—

The Commissioners first sat at Hicks Hall to consider Turnmill Brook sewer, stopped by much filth thrown into it. They next kept sessions in Whitechapel, where they considered the sewer coming from Spitalfields which runs almost four miles before it gets into the Thames through Stepney town and close to the churchway which leads to Stepney church, and almost all the way open, and brings down a very noisome water, the Walloons and strangers there living much upon cabbage and roots to the great offence of the inhabitants as to health and otherways. To remedy this great nuisance all parties had concurred with the Commissioners that a sewer should be made to carry the water the shortest way to the Thames and be made close to prevent the stink, and so wide and deep as to serve a great many houses that were then building. Difficulties about this had afterwards been raised about the cost of this new sewer, but Sir William Smyth, his tenants and friends, had no concern any way in it, and could reap no benefit.

Mr. Pauley, who married Sir William's sister, a loyal person from the beginning of the Rebellion, had carried King Charles a hundred pounds to Oxford, and not being able to live in quiet near Salisbury, sold his estate and came to live in London, where he took a lease of the Liberty and Bailiwick of Stepney of Lady Wentworth, at the rent of 140*l.* per annum, where during the late tumultuous time he was very active in the King's service, but his enemies had reported that he advanced the fines for the advantage of that bailiwick, which was quite untrue. Like reports recited at considerable length regarding the misuse Sir William Smyth had made of his own property and position, are also refuted.

The paper concludes with an account of Smyth's life not given from vanity, but for vindication from slander. Was a member of Parliament in 1640, left it, raised a regiment of horse at his own charge, was taken in fight by Cromwell, suffered severe, close, and chargeable imprisonment for a year, was then exchanged, had been wounded almost to death, went into France with the late King from Cornwall and had, at the risk of being hanged for a spy, returned with a letter and message to Charles I., when prisoner at Hampton Court. Sat in Parliament during the reign of Charles II., and suffered much obloquy there for his opposition to the Exclusion Bill, &c. When the Dutch went to Chatham they destroyed a saltwork of his in the Island of Graine and county of Kent, and took away irons, lead, and other materials, to his damage of upwards of 2,000*l.* His father, a justice of the peace, was driven from his house for his zealous service to Charles I., and plundered of all he had; he made his escape to Oxford and died there. His brother was Colonel of horse and killed in a fight at Donington Castle; and no horse were raised in the county of Bucks but by himself and his brother.

1685-6, Feb. 8. Dublin Castle.—Henry Earl of Clarendon, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, to Lord Dartmouth. Thanks for kind offers of friendship, which he cordially returns, being old enough to remember the long attachment between their fathers. Will give constantly an account of all ordnance matters in Ireland. Lord Mountjoy goes for England this week, is a man of great worth and honour, and makes it his business to serve the King as he ought do in his station. Muskets, &c. can be made for less money here than is paid in England; but will write more at large on that subject, as he is sure the Lord Treasurer will be for saving the King's money, especially if the service can be as well performed.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1686, Feb. 9. Versailles.—Marshal Schomberg to Lord Dartmouth.

Thanks him for the favours shewn to the Sieur de Sybourg, a German gentleman of good family. Mr. Savile has informed the writer of the attentions paid to him, and of the hopes held out of employment of the troops under Lord Dartmouth's command.

1686, May 13. Dublin.—Lord Chancellor Porter to Lord Dartmouth.

Is sent hither to a place of great honour and splendour, but of itself not worth 350*l.* a year in all the perquisites, nor has he a place in his gift. In Sir Maurice Eustace's time the pension was 2,300*l.*, and he had all the advantage of the Seal in settling the kingdom, by which he gained at least 80,000*l.* After his death the same pension continued to the Lord Primate for seven or eight years, and afterwards by degrees through the King's necessities, and the piques of Lords Essex and Radnor against him, was reduced to 1,000*l.* In the writer's case the King has been pleased to add 500*l.* to the salary of 1,000*l.*, but the pension does not nearly maintain his necessary expense. Begs Lord Dartmouth to assist him in obtaining some addition.

1686, May 18. Dublin Castle.—Earl of Clarendon to Lord Dartmouth.

Will serve Lord Dartmouth's brother William to the utmost of his power. The latter is not yet come from Kinsale, but is expected that night, and will then make haste into England, where he will be useful to them in Ireland, by giving a truthful account of things there. Complains of the great misrepresentation of Irish affairs by prejudiced people, and that the opinion of those in employment there is not asked, though there is no reason to mistrust them. Ordinance matters.

1686, May 26. Dublin.—Lord Chancellor Porter to Lord Dartmouth.

Again refers to the hard circumstances he is in under the great character his Majesty has placed upon him.

1686, May 26. Dublin Castle.—Earl of Clarendon to Lord Dartmouth.

On the supply of arms and stores to Ireland. Could write much on affairs there, but Lord Dartmouth's brother is fully instructed in everything relating to the country and people, and he hopes an opportunity will be given him to tell all. "This country may and will be, with the people in it, as useful to the King as he pleaseth; and the trade will flourish and increase, and his Majesty will be as rich as he has a mind to, if men are but secure of what they have, and meet with the encouragement due to their industry. Pray think of us and support us (me in my own particular at least), according as you find us to do our duties; and have a care you do not make us useful for other people. Your Lordship sees how freely I write to you, as you like this you shall have more. When the camp is over, I hope you will send my friend William back again to me, it will do him good to live a little amongst us."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1686, July 28. Dublin.—Lord Chancellor Porter to Lord Dartmouth. In favour of the bearer Lieut. Worsopp, who had been turned out of his command after ten years' service. His father, Sir Thomas Worsopp, had served in the King's armies from the beginning of the Rebellion in 1641. Lord Tyrconnell had promised to assist in getting him some other post, but nothing had been done, so the gentleman was resolved to represent his case to the King himself. He was a near kinsman of the writer, but it was his own merit that had gained him the esteem of all honest men there.

1686, Aug. 18. Newhall.—Duke of Albemarle to Lord Dartmouth. Is concerned with several others in setting out a ship to the West Indies "in hopes of finding a Spanish wrack" but whether found or not they will be no losers, as they are sending out a small cargo to defray the expense in case of a disappointment. If his Lordship pleases to come in there is an eighth part to be disposed of for about 350*l*.

1686, Aug. 19. Chapel Izod.—Earl of Clarendon to Lord Dartmouth. A long letter describing the miserable condition of the fortifications of the chief ports, &c., neglected by former chief governors from the want of money. If 30,000*l*. or 40,000*l*. a year could be devoted to the purpose, he might be able in a few years to put them into better order. The lack of arms too is great, though there is room for ten thousand in Dublin Castle, as bad a place as it is, and for fifty thousand in the new Hospital, and they should be as safe in both places as in the Tower of London.

1686, Sept. 4. Dublin Castle.—Earl of Clarendon to Lord Dartmouth. Lord Tyrconnell left for England on Sept. 26, and would stop a day or two at Chester to view the stores there designed for Ireland. Has had a letter from the Earl of Clanricarde when he went to take possession of his government of Galway; the mayor, &c. had petitioned him for the opening a passage through the East citadel into the town. This passage had formerly been the usual way from the country into the citadel, but when the English took the town in the late Rebellion, Cromwell had ordered the gate to be walled up, in order to make the place the more safe against the natives, as the only way to the citadel would then be through the town. Asks his Lordship's opinion on the matter.

1686-7, Feb. 16. Twickenham.—Earl of Rochester to Lord Dartmouth. Excuses himself, on account of his wife's weak condition, from waiting upon his Lordship and upon Sir Eliab Hervey. Encloses something from his brother (Lord Clarendon) to the King.

1686-7, Feb. 26. Chester Castle.—Peter Shakerley to Lord Dartmouth. Hopes Major Gen. Werden acquainted him with his reception of Lord Tyrconnell, and also how he received Lord Clarendon on Monday last, with 21 guns at his entrance into the town, &c. Tuesday his Lordship dined with him, Thursday he went for London, the Marquis of Worcester's regiment of foot in the garrison being under arms, forming one rank entire from the Deanery (where his Lordship lodged) to the east gate, and the officers saluting; all the persons in the town of any rank or quality attending with their coaches, and the High Sheriff and many gentlemen of the county on horseback. His Lordship would go by way of Whitchurch, Newport, Lichfield, Coventry,

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Northampton, Dunstable; on Thursday by eleven to St. Albans, dine there, and after dinner to London. Humbly begs that certain money disbursed by him long since may be paid to his agent; the workmen press hard upon him for money long due to them.

1687, April 12. Dublin Castle.—Earl of Tyrconnell to Lord Dartmouth. Lord Clarendon carried or sent into England the books of the stores, with design, he supposes, to leave him in the dark. Had sent his secretary to Lord Clarendon, who answered that he took it for granted that the books were for himself and not for public use; but that he would deliver them to Lord Dartmouth, if desired. Asks that the books may be sent to him, as they would be of great use in the King's affairs.

1687, April 25. Whitehall. Lord Dartmouth to the Earl of Tyrconnell. On ordnance matters in Ireland. Has moved his Majesty again on the matter of Athlone; Lord Ranelagh seems more tractable than formerly, and will probably soon deliver up the place to his Excellency.

1687, April 28. Tower.—The order of firing on Blackheath on that day. Sir Martin Beckman's instructions to Mr. Wollferman and Mr. Nellson as to the discharging of mortar pieces, storm balls, &c.

1687, April 30. Dublin.—Lord Montjoy to Lord Dartmouth. Asks for certain arms to be suddenly sent, as the Lord Deputy has resolved that a great part of the army of that kingdom shall encamp this summer.

1687, May 6. Certificate of Captain G. St. Lo that the bearer Nathaniel Bostock, gent, served under his command in the Dartmouth as a volunteer for five years, and constantly applied himself to the study and practice of the art of navigation; was very diligent, ready and obedient to command: and is fitly qualified and doth well deserve encouragement.

1687, May 13 and 22. Dublin Castle.—Earl of Tyrconnell to Lord Dartmouth. Two letters chiefly concerning the supply of arms, &c., for the service of Ireland.

1687, June 1. Portumna.—Earl of Clanricarde to Lord Dartmouth. On behalf of the bearer, Jack Gully, a young man well versed in mathematics, gunnery, &c.

1687, June 14.—“Order of the March of the Train of Artillery from the Tower to Hounslow Heath the 15th June 1687.”

1687, July 4. Windsor.—Lord Dartmouth to Sir Roger Strickland. “As ill a scribe as I am and as little as you know I love writing, yet I cannot on this occasion omit congratulating with you at this time the honour and extraordinary mark of his Majesty's favour, shewed so particularly to you in sending your so long expected and desired commission for your flag. Not that I think Sir Roger Strickland either needed or can be more esteemed in the world by it. . . . And now, Roger, in confidence of our old and long continued friendship, I cannot but call to mind the strict alliance and consultations we have had together for the service of our Royal master, when we had more than ordinary reason, to fear at least, how few would stand by his interest, when we thought it might reasonably have needed it most . . . and as a true friend and a faithful servant I venture to be thus free with you, that since his Majesty hath been graciously pleased not only to perform his word with you in sending you this flag at a time which may be prejudicial to his service, it is the least duty we owe him to consider his service and his honour before our own humour; and since you have both the flag and certainty of the pay, after having showed the fleet that you are Vice-Admiral and that the Commanders know it to be your own act, why may you not make better use of the King's favour (since it can be no diminution to you) and, rather than expose the King's honour to foreign nations as well as our own, put your flag sometime in your pocket, that is I mean wear your flagstaff, and either strike or furl your flag, rather than let the Dutch (who know this matter so well) and other nations see two of the King of England's royal flags fly together with six or seven ships. Dear Roger, consider how ridiculous this will be in the eye of the world, and since the King has been pleased to keep (I will not say) a hasty promise for your sake, can you do less for his than of your own accord to endeavour the preserving of those rules you know he desires to be preserved; and as a true friend I advise you to preserve, till a convenient number of ships are met together, for your making a true use of the favour and honour is given you . . . The Duke of Grafton goes from Lisbon to command in the Straits, and you come home to command in the narrow seas, where you cannot fear of a squadron fit to wear your flag. . . ."

Enclosed are copies of Orders relating to Salutes at Sea and the wearing of Flags.

1687, July 18. At His Majesty's Camp.—J. Moodie to Lord Dartmouth.

Defends himself against Mr. Wolferman's charges, and complains of harsh treatment.

1687, July 23. Park of Artillery.—Colonel Robert St. Clair to Lord Dartmouth.

Reminds his Lordship that he was promised the immediate command of his (Lord D.'s) regiment, and complains that Major Sooper ignores his authority in many instances which he specifies.

1687, July 29. Hounslow heath. Tho. Phillips to Lord Dartmouth at Windsor.

Has taken all the care he can to perform his Majesty's wishes against to-morrow, but such excessive rains have fallen that the trenches are very watery and troublesome to be in for the men's shoes and stockings. It would be better both for the work and the men if matters could be put off till Monday.

1687, August 2. Pirgo.—Colonel Thomas Cheeke to Lord Dartmouth.

Refers to his removal from the office he held under his Lordship, and after asserting his loyalty adds that he came to the Tower in very stormy weather, having many prisoners of moment under his care, some of them his own relations. All his satisfaction is that the King was pleased to tell him he had served the crown honestly and faithfully, and that he is turned out for no base or unworthy action. He has too good manners to ask why he is dismissed; he submits and is satisfied.

1687, Aug. 13. Salisbury.—Lord Fitzhardinge to Lord Dartmouth at Windsor.

Has arranged that the five coaches the King expected to attend him from Tunbridge to Bath shall be at Tunbridge on Thursday the 18th. Lord

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Pembroke's, Lord Weymouth's, Col. Wyndham's, Sir Richard Howe's, and the Dean of Salisbury's. His own cannot have that honour, because half his set are at London with his wife, and the rest out at grass.

1687, Aug. —. Hewell.—Earl of Plymouth to Lord Dartmouth.

Desires to know at what time of the day the King will be at Worcester that he may pay his duty; and by which road from Gloucester he will come, through Tewkesbury or across the Severn. 1 1687, Aug. 15. Longleat.—Lord Weymouth to Lord Dartmouth.

That he might not be wanting in duty or respect to his Majesty, has sent his coach to Salisbury to attend his Lordship's orders.

1687, Aug. 16 to Sept. 6.—Papers relating to the King's equipage, and the route to be taken during the Royal Progress.

1687, Aug. 20. Kirby.—Lord Hatton to Lord Dartmouth.

On behalf of a young divine named Tramelier, whose father is King's attorney in Guernsey, who had been under Sir Leoline Jenkins for some time, and after his death entered into orders. He is at present a fellow of Jesus College, Oxford, and the writer desires to get him the presentation of Methley living, in Yorkshire, void by the death of one who was chaplain in the Phoenix frigate, in which service he is said to have died; the living being in the King's immediate disposal.

1687, Aug. 31. Boston.—Sir Edmund Andros, Governor of New England, to Lord Dartmouth.

(On the fortifications, &c. at Boston; with extracts from a letter dated 30 March 1687, on the same subject.

1687, Sept. 6.—Thomas Ken, Bishop of Bath and Wells, to Lord Dartmouth.

On passing through Bristol had heard a report that the King was going for the West, and would probably pass through Wells. Knows not what measures to take, as he cannot give his Majesty suitable entertainment at so short a warning. Beseeches his Lordship to lay his most humble duty at the King's feet, and to assure him that he shall esteem it a very great honour if his Majesty condescends to grace his house, and to endure such an extemporary reception as he can contrive for him.

1687, Sept. 28. Hull.—Sir Martin Beckmann to Lord Dartmouth.

Col. Cornwall's regiment came last night to this town. Finds it impossible to make the soldiers work for 6*d.* per diem, without here comes his Majesty's warrant for the same, for they are very unwilling to take 10*d.* per diem.

Here hath not been 7 days fair weather in 6 weeks time, which never was known (sic); the corn is still in the fields about Barton and "y^e vowells."

1687, Sept. 30. York.—Sir John Reresby to Lord Dartmouth.

Has appointed Mr. Boldock to give an account of the remaining arms, &c. at Clifford's Tower. Wishes that the five small guns which he has mounted at his own charge, and planted on the Tower hill, may be continued.

1687, Oct. 15. Holy Island, near Berwick upon Tweed.—William Selby and Gilbert Orde to Lord Dartmouth. As bailiffs of the Corporation desire to make his Lordship sensible of the inconveniences sustained by the company of soldiers there quartered, by reason of the poverty and disability of the inhabitants. Ask that twelve beds may be placed in the Castle, so that the poorer sort of inhabitants may be eased, and the soldiers not forced to lie in that cold place upon straw, very slenderly covered. The Governor there, Capt. Throckmorton, of Col. Oglethorpe's regiment, would have given an account of the business, but the writers supposed themselves more nearly concerned, and took it upon themselves to write to his Lordship.

1687, Oct. 18. Petworth.—Duke of Somerset to Lord Dartmouth. Had promised to give the King twenty brace of deer, but the scene of affairs being so extraordinarily changed, and his being turned out in such a manner, and having had so very severe expressions at their parting, he believes it would look like too great a presumption in him now to fulfil the promise; but shall always submit to his Lordship, who is a far better judge in all matters than he durst pretend to be.

1687, Oct. 28, Nov. 1, and Nov. 8. Petworth (3 letters).—Same to same. With reference to Lord Dartmouth's reply to the preceding letter, desires that the King may be informed that he has given him some deer for the Holt, &c.

Many letters about this time from Thos. Phillips and others about the fortifications, &c., of Portsmouth.

1687, Nov. 27. Barbadoes.—Duke of Albemarle to Lord Dartmouth. Arrived at the Island on Friday last, reports well of the militia and the magazine. The Governor and gentlemen there have behaved very civilly to him. Found in this Road Sir John Narborough with his ships, whom he desired to haste away towards the wreck, whither also many are gone from Jamaica, this island, and Bermudas. Will stay two days at Nevis, and then go to Jamaica.

1687, Dec.—Notes taken by Mr. Secretary Pepys upon Capt. Ridley's proceedings in his voyage from Gibraltar to cruise off the Burlings and the Rock of Lisbon for the meeting and protecting the ships expected from the Newfoundland Fishery; and Capt. Ridley's answer to Mr. Secretary Pepys. Notes drawn from his letters sent him in the time of his cruising, from 21st Sept. 1687 to 13 Nov. following.

1687-8, Jan. 4. Jamaica.—Duke of Albemarle to Lord Dartmouth. His last letter was from Barbadoes, and this is to acquaint his Lordship that on Dec. 19 they arrived safely in Port Royal harbour, one of the best he ever saw, having taken a view of the fortifications, &c., at Nevis and St. Christopher's on the way. His wife and himself have hitherto met with very little indisposition as to their healths, and are now come to the Spanish town situated in a good healthy air, where they intend chiefly to reside. Has ordered an assembly to be called, and shall use his utmost endeavours for the true service of his Majesty, and the good of the subjects committed to his care.

1687-8, Jan. 7. Chancery Lane, over against Lincoln's Inn.—Will. Croft to Lord Dartmouth, at Yarmouth. Encloses a letter to his lordship from the Duke of Albemarle, and refers to the Duke's splendid and gracious reception at the Barbadoes. Several ships have been at work upon the wreck, and have taken up great quantities; many skirmishes

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

amongst them, some killed and some drowned. There is great satisfaction in the University of Cambridge that the commission of the Chancellorship has been lodged by the Duke in Lord Dartmouth. Some of the heads of colleges intend to wait upon his Lordship.

1687-8, Feb. 11. Jamaica.—Duke of Albemarle to Lord Dartmouth. Some sloopmen have reported that they met with three pirates or privateers at sea, who told them they would gladly come in and settle in Jamaica, if the present Governor had power to pardon them, and that about three months hence they would try what could be done. Some who guess at the humour of those sort of men think they will probably surrender themselves to the writer, if by any means they can come to the knowledge that he is able to secure them. Desires his Lordship's help in obtaining power from the King to pardon them. The bearer, Col. Beckford, will fully satisfy his lordship that good service may be done by such pardons.

1687-8, Feb. 16. Gibraltar.—Capt. Hugh Ridley to Lord Dartmouth. Fears he has misapprehended Secretary Pepys' instruction to keep a proper journal of his proceedings, and gives an account of his recent cruises off the coast of Portugal.

1687-8, March 8. Jamaica.—Duke of Albemarle to Lord Dartmouth. Has sent herewith the first-fruits of his labour in saltpetre, which is the best he ever saw, he desires it to be tried before the King. Has also found out a good lead mine, and hopes soon to find one of greater value. Yesterday had news that the pirates Yanky and Jacobs had with 84 men fallen upon the storehouses in the bottom of the Bay of Honduras, and that three Spanish men of war came and blocked them up, and landed what men they could to join with the country, who made up the number of 700 men, and raised three breast works, which works were attacked by the pirates and by them taken, killing a great number on the spot and routing the rest, they losing only nine men, and Yanky wounded. The pirates are now in the Bay of Honduras recruiting, intending to fall upon the Spanish ships, one Jones, another pirate, having a ship of force, being joined with them. Expects daily to hear from Sir John Narbrough whether Lord Mordaunt with the ships under him has ventured to disturb his fishing or not; Sir John is in a very good condition to receive them. There are some "Biscaneers" that very much disturb these seas, taking all they meet with, including an English pink, Capt. Quiffin, that sailed from Jamaica for New England, worth with her cargo 15,000*l.*, which they carried to St. Domingo; and another vessel was carried into St. Jago upon Cuba, but released by the governor there, who used the crew kindly, and paid 400 pieces of eight out of his own pocket which had been embezzled. The Duke and his wife enjoy their healths as well there as in England.

1688, June 4. Hull.—Lord Langdale to Lord Dartmouth. On his arrival found Sir Martin Beckman and Mr. Pitts had made much greater progress than he expected. The frame of the foundation of the water bastion will be finished in three or four days, then it will rise fast, for there are many hands and good workmen. It has proved very troublesome to preserve the work from the violence of the tides, which made a breach in the dam, &c.

1688, June 18. Dublin.—Lord Mountjoy to Lord Dartmouth. Sir Matthew Bridges brought us the happy news of our having a brave Prince of Wales; it was the best that these nations ever had, and the writer hopes will be most effectual towards making the King great and his kingdoms prosperous. The birth of a young prince had been too much joy had it not been somewhat abated by the news of the Bishops being sent to the Tower. He prays God the counsels that are now pursued may be really for the King's interests, but they look oddly to such as are remote; but if those men be not to blame their sufferings may be the more easily borne, and the writer hopes the King's subjects will always look upon him as their master and their father. Are preparing for a camp on the 1st of next month; that is not needed to make them poor, however the fear of wanting will never make them do what would be shameful. Has a young son in London who is to live by the sea. Prays his Lordship to help him to some honest captain that will take some care of him.

1688, June 20. Jamaica.—Duke of Albemarle to Lord Dartmouth. Sends papers showing the difficulties he has had in preserving amity between his Majesty and allies, according to the treaty with the most Christian King, dated 6 Nov. 1686; the King's grant to Sir Robert Holmes, brought by his deputy Mr. Lynch, and the instrument signed by the Commissioners appointed to adjust the American limits of French and English territory, being at variance. Mr. Lynch had sent to the French prisoners and offered to release them all, if they would pay him six pounds a piece (he having before seized upon all he met with of theirs, which came to about 2,000*l.*); there were about 25 of them.

1688, July 4th, Jamaica.—Duke of Albemarle to Lord Dartmouth. There are some fortifications wanting, which shall be done as soon as the moneys for that use come in. Colonel Molesworth left the Treasury not only very bare, but in debt, insomuch that he (the writer) is 500*l.* behind hand in his salary; former governors did not use to be so. When he came there he found a house (such a one as it was) called a King's House, upon which he had laid out since about 200*l.*, and it appears that Sir Thomas Lynch had sold it to my Lord Vaughan; but he has luckily met with some papers which shew it to be the King's.

1688, July 30th, York.—Lord Langdale to Lord Dartmouth.

Being obliged to attend at the Assizes, he came from Hull on the 27th inst., leaving the garrison under Major Fountaine, of Lord Montgomery's regiment. The major has been very active in exercising the soldiers, and desires a greater allowance of powder, new pikes, &c.

1688, Aug. 6th, Jamaica.—Duke of Albemarle to Lord Dartmouth. Has at last overcome the many difficulties met with since his arrival, and during his stay there at least, has no doubt that the King's commands will not encounter such opposition as before. The Assembly have not sat many days, but have demonstrated their wish to serve their King and country by passing certain Bills now sent for the Royal confirmation. Since he has the good fortune to have to do with such good men, he shall not easily part with them, though several who factiously and tumultuously opposed the Government in some of the elections were put into prison until they gave security to appear at the next Grand Court. Expects that some persons (out of their own private interest and no regard to the public good) will be dissatisfied with his proceedings and make a misrepresentation of them.

1688, Aug. 27th, Kirby.—Lord Hatton to Lord Dartmouth.

Is informed by several hands that the King has ordered all governors and other officers to repair forthwith to their respective commands; though he has not yet received such an order thinks himself obliged to notice the matter owing to his great indisposition, and hopes that his services will be dispensed with till he can recover better health.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSB.

1688, Aug. 29th, Ednall (Eden hall?) Sir Christopher Musgrave to Lord Dartmouth. Prays for and drinks his health daily. Meets with such things in the public news letters as turn his head; probably it is the effect of his weak country brain, that cannot comprehend the mysteries of state in making Peters [Petre] privy councillor and some instances of that nature. But it may be said these things are above his reach, and considerations not fit for a rustic head. God bless and direct him (Lord Dartmouth) in this uncertain age. They in the country say a good conscience is the greatest blessing, but possibly they are mistaken.

1688, Sept. 23rd.—Thos. Bishop of Bath and Wells to Lord Dartmouth. In obedience to the King's pleasure will make what haste he can to the town. Did always think His Majesty would never believe our Church would be disloyal, having given so many undeniable instances to the contrary. The declaration mentioned has not yet been sent down, which he should have been glad to have seen before he left this place, which will be to-morrow, so that he may reach London on Wednesday night.

1688, Sept. 25th, Whitehall. — Six press warrants, printed, with original signatures of James II., and countersigned by Pepys, authorising Captain James Montgomery, of the Nonsuch; Captain Thomas Smith, of the Falcon; John Lord Berkeley, of the Montagu; Captain George Rooke, of the Deptford; Captain Matthew Tennant, of the Tiger; Captain Wolfran Cornwall, of the Dartmouth; and Captain John Graydon, of the Sandadoc, to impress as many able mariners as they may require to complete their crews.

1688, Sept. 27th, Whitehall.—Long news letter chiefly on foreign affairs.

1688, Sept. 28th and Sept. 29th.—Orders to Admiral Lord Dartmouth, signed by James and countersigned by S. Pepys, for ships under Sir Roger Strickland, Vice-Admiral, to join the fleet under Lord Dartmouth, and to forbear searching foreign ships.

1688, Sept. 29th, Ribston.—Charles Bertie to Lord Dartmouth, at the Cockpit.—Lord Danby, Lord Dumblane, and he are all at Ribston, one of the most charming seats he has yet seen in the north, both in respect of its noble structure and the lovely country about it. What would yet more particularly please his Lordship is that Sir Henry Goodrick is environing his gardens with a kind of fortification, and has already finished 2 bastions, and hopes that when Lord Dartmouth visits the northern forts he will please to reckon this among the number. Thus while Lord Danby drinks the sulphur waters, they remember his Lordship's health and the prosperity of his family in most serene Florence (sic), and in a sort of liquor called Walshford ale, which transcends all that was ever named, and is the smoothest and best natured drink in the world, and cannot fail withal to carry an election; though Sir Harry and his lady are so generally beloved and esteemed that they need no southern artifice to secure the affection and interest of their neighbours to them. Hopes to be in London to receive his commands before the Dolphin takes Philipsburg. Congratulates Sir Christopher Musgrave on the discovery of a rich vein of lead ore, wishes it as rich as the Mountain of Potozi.

An addition in a different hand (Lady Goodrick's?) states that word has reached them from their Catholic neighbour, Mr. Middleton, that the Dutch are in Burlington Bay.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

1688, Sept. 30th.—Ship Resolution riding at the Blackstakes. Captain William Davies to Lord Dartmouth. Want four guns and eight carriages, and all their powder. Have got on board about 90 tuns of beer. The men, in all, soldiers and seamen, nearly 170, very hard at work to get the ship in readiness.

1688, Sept. 30th.—Duke of Berwick to Lord Dartmouth. Desires that the armour for the officers and troopers of his regiment may be delivered to Mr. Millington.

1688, Oct. 1st, Whitehall.—Instructions of James II. to Lord Dartmouth, countersigned by S. Pepys.

1688, Oct. 1st, Woodlands Court.—Edward Seymour to Lord Dartmouth. Recommends the bearer, his eldest son, "who has been on board the Dragon with his coz Harry Killegrew this two years past, and lately returned from the Straits with Lord Berkeley." Though he designed other ways for his son, the latter's genius leads him wholly to the sea, and he has courage enough to attempt anything but what is ill.

1688, Oct. 1st, Vale Royal.—Colonel Thomas Cholmondeley to Lord Dartmouth, Lord High Admiral. In recommendation of a person unnamed, his neighbour, who had spent some years at sea, and whose family had paid dear for their loyalty, and so brought him to seek his fortune. Prays for a right understanding betwixt his Majesty and the Prince of Orange to prevent effusion of blood.

1688, Oct. 3rd.—Earl of Bath to Lord Dartmouth. After congratulations upon the great honour and trust conferred upon his Lordship at this juncture, remarks upon the other new measures now taken in public affairs, so acceptable to all loyal and honest men, and so conducive to the King's service, for whose sake he cannot but wish it had been sooner done. This country he found at his coming down in all the disorder and confusion imaginable by the late regulations of honest and loyal corporations, and turning out of commission all the chief gentlemen. His Majesty's gracious declaration and letters came therefore very seasonable, and the writer is endeavouring all he can to pacify men's minds, which were so much disturbed with fears and jealousies. Begs to recommend his second son to Lord Dartmouth's favour; he has been bred at sea and to the study of navigation. His first voyage was to Guinea with Captain Killegrew, as soon as he returned with his brother Lansdowne out of Hungary from that great campaign; he has never since that for these 5 years quitted the seas, but has served under several other captains and gone regularly through the method prescribed by his Majesty's rules, and was duly examined before he was honoured with a commission, as Mr. Pepys states. If Parliament meet, his son has credit enough in his country to serve the King in it, as he did in the former.

1688, Oct. 3rd, London.—Thomas Keightley to Lord Dartmouth. Recommends the bearer, Mr. Haldanby, who has served in France and been acquainted with land service only, "but chooses rather to see some of your pranks at sea upon this occasion than to ride a volunteering it along with us poor mortals."

1688, Oct. 3rd, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"After congratulating you [sic] your safe arrival at the Fleet, and praying God Almighty to grant success to your undertaking there; I am in the first place to acknowledge my receipt of your Lordship's dated at 10 last night from the Buoy of the Nore. For answer wherto,

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

and for your satisfaction in some other points that may occur to me fit for your notice, give me leave to observe to you; first, that the King does approve of the enlargement you have proposed to the complement of the Fire Drake, and this evening signed a warrant to the officers of the navy for the raising it to 75 men, and for her being victualled by you accordingly.

Next, you may please to know, that in order to your service, I have this day had a solemn conference here with a large number of the principall of our Trinity House Brethren, upon the subject wee last discoursed on, of staveing or takeing up and removing the most considerable buoys in the mouth of the river; as also the furnishing you (if it were possible) with some knowing pilots about the borrough Deepes, and lastly upon a proposiçon come to my hand but this morning from Captain Langley of Harwich, concerning the demolishing or removeing of the light at that place. Upon all which soe many and weighty considerations arose that I though[t] it very much better for you to receive them from their own mouths then my pen, and therefore have adjusted it with them, that three of their number, namely, Captains Atkinson, Greenhill, and Ayles, will sett out towards you tomorrow morning, with power to putt in execution whatever shall be resolved in any of these particulars, upon a re-debate thereof before your Lordshipp.

I have at the same time observed to Sir Richard Haddock the notice you have taken in this letter of the backwardness of one or two of the shippes in the business of their proviçons. Who for answer assures me, that all the hast is made, that any cost or dilligence, by night or day, can procure. But that the new undertakeing he and his partners have lately been putt upon, of providing victualls for the garrisons, (which it seemes they are extreamly pressed in) does occasion noe small interruption in what relates to the sea. But our discourse ended in his joyning in what you propose of haveing the ships now fitting forth victualled but for 3 months instead of four, as a thing that will give them a great deal of ease in their action. Accordingly, upon my moveing it this evening to the King, he with the Lords, are most forward in their agreeing with it, as seeming to wish the fleet out, though it were but with 2 monthes proviçon, rather then have it stay but two hours for two months more.

I persuade myself I need not trouble the officers of the ordnance from hence, with any intimations of what you observe relateing to the wants some shippes are still under in their gunners' stores, as being well assured, that it will be abundantly done by a better hand; I mean your own. Nor indeed after what has been already done, have them unnecessarily receive any more items of that kind from mine.

Captain Shovell (who has indeed been a great while prevented, by one impediment or other in his like desires) has by this post taken opportunity of the squadron's being called in to the Nore, to press me for his Majesty's leave for his comeing up to town for a few dayes. But knowing how little the present state of the King's service will bear with the absence of such an officer, and how unfitt (though it were otherwise) it would be for such leave to be granted him in your presence by any hand your own, I have referred him to your Lordshipp for answer.

Pray think of sending up Captain Coffin, for in truth nothing but such an officer as I believe will be able I fear to prevent the delays that will be made, under one pretence or other in Commanders getting their shippes down.

The like I have done to Captain Nevell which I did in the case of Captain Shovell, in relation to a desire of his of haveing twenty of his old acquaintance seamen, along with him into the Elizabeth ; wherein I am sure your Lordshipp will order what is fitt.

The King has this night signed a generall order to your Lordshipp to supply the wants of the flect as to ammunition and gunners' stores, without any new orders from him."

1688, Oct. 4th, Thursday 5 afternoone.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth. (Holograph.)

"Not doubting but your Lordshipp has received mine by last night's post in returne to yours of the 2^d instant ; I take this occasion only for the accompanying Captain Cotton, and acknowledging my receiving your expresse of yesterday, which I hope to bee in a condition to give you an answer to, the same way, as soon as I have waited on the King, to whom I am just now goeing, and have beene all this day forwarding at the Navy Office what ever is depending there relating to your Lordshipp. I have desired Captain Cotton to call (as much as the tide will give him leave) upon the shipp in his way doune the river, in order to his enabling himselfe to give your Lordshipp some account of them, wishing that he had time for a day or 2 to scoure the river before his coming to you. But without your leave I would not stopp him."

1688, Oct. 4th, Buoy of the Nore.—"An Account of his Majesty's fleet now rideing there under the command of the Right Honorable George Lord Dartmouth, Admirall, with respect to theyr number of men, quantity of provisions and condition of their hulls, rigging &c."

1688, Oct. 4th, Past midnight. Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"I have had the honor of yours of yesterday by express, and communicated the same to his Majesty, who is not less satisfied in every part of what your Lordshipp is doing, then he is sollicitous for the success of it. he in a particular manner approveing of the order you have taken in sending down Sir Roger Strickland with his shipp to between the Red Sand and Oaze Edge, to followed by the rest as they shall be dispatched ; and in the provision you have made for secureing a ready intelligence of the proceedings of the Holland's flect upon the winds becoming favourable to their getting out.

Your Lordship I hope has received mine of last night. Since which some of our Brethren of the Trinity house are (as I then said) sett out towards you, soe as I hope they will be waiting on you before the arrivall of this, which the long sitting of the Cabinet has kept me soe late in the dispatch of, that whereas I had well hoped to have wrote you by express, its soonest conveyance will be by the post.

What the reason is, that you have heard nothing from the fishermen I cannot tell, but their Governors pretend to me, upon my summoning them this day, (for haveing satisfaccōn in it) that they have noe less than six of their fishing smacks at this very time at work in getting of men for you, and on that consideration obtained proteccōns for a small vessell or or two to supply the want of those smacks, for furnishing of the markett here with oysters. I have not failed to press upon them the importance of the service, and have been made to beleive by them, that you may speedily expect to hear of the effects of some of their vessells employed on this errand for you. But how farr they can be relyed upon the Bishop of Chester and Mr. Fanshaw (I doubt) can only tell.

As to the watermen, I have had the rulers of them also with me to-day, who doe most peremptorily affirme to me, that the whole number of 200 have been by them actually appointed, and received ticketts from them, obligeing them to the serving of the King on this occasion ; and not only soe, but have given me a list of every man's name, with the names of the ships to which (according to your Lordship's designation) the same were severally appointed, which very list I herewith inclose to your Lordship, in order as much as may be, to your proving the truth of it; these rulers being most confident in their asserting that the fellows are really gone and on board the fleet below, or the ships that remaine here aloft; but whether any of those that should be below, may not have been intercepted, or how farr the young men have been tempted to take pay in other ships then those which they had been directed to by the rulers, I find they are not ready to answer for, though I have threatened them with the same treatment that Crispin and Gwinn heretofore had in like case, if I shall understand from your Lordship that the men doe not appear in the fleet.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Captain Cotton is gone away this evening with a line or two of mine to accompany him. I directed him in his way down the river to call upon the ships he finds remaineing there, and to hasten them away, to the end he may give your Lordship a fresh account what you are to expect from them. And truly I doe think it would have been for your service, that he had passed a day or two here to have tumbled them down after you, it grieving me to the heart every day to hear how officers, great and small santer away their time when there is noebody at their backs. As for Cotton's encouragement in the service, I have charged my self with the looking up what was allowed in the like imployment to Captain Perri-man, and the moving his Majesty that he may have the same.

I take great notice of what your Lordship snid to me in your former, touching the want of provitions in some ships, and that you apprehended the fleet's dispatch may happen to to be hindred on that score, and therefore have had a solemn meeting this morning with the Commissioners for the Victualling, at the Navy Board, where (by the way) I did, to my great trouble, find Sir Anthony Deane extremely indisposed, soe as not to be able to stirr out of doors, and poor Mr. Hewer little better, through the un-intermitted succession of business to be dispatched from morning to night, and noebody at present to look after any part of it, but them two.

I made it my business with the victuallers to observe to them see much of your late letters as concerned their charge, praying them in the first place to enable me at one view to give your Lordship a true and generall state of the fleet, by the state of the victualling at this day of every particular ship, which they promised me I should have, and accordingly is just now come to me, as I send it your Lordship inclosed, without being able for want of time to night to look it over soe as to fitt my self for the giving you any observations of mine upon it.

And for the other point, which related to their appointing you some able person to doe the part of an Agent in the fleet for them, I have procured them a warrant for [from] the king for their soe doing, and they accordingly have undertaken to send one very speedily to you, and an able man too, if it be he they talked to me of, namely, Mr. Stevenson, the purser of the Sovereigne at Chatham.

Next, I am to acquaint you, that out of the King's inclination to doe all he conveniently can towards the helping of your manning, he has determined upon supplying you with soe many detachments of soldiers as will amount to 318. Of which 108 or thereabouts was sent down from the Tower wharf towards you in barges this day; as many will be sent after them from the same place to morrow, 30 more will be shipp'd off for you at Gravesend of my Lord Litchfeild's regiment on Saturday; and the same day 72 out of the Queen Dowager's, and the Holland Regiments from Rochester. Concerning the conveying to you of which latter parcell from Rochester, I have this night by the King's comand wrote to Sir Phineas Pett at Chatham, and concerning another like matter wherein the King is pleased much to be concerned, namely, the sending away another detachment of 100 men, besides officers, but of Collonel Hales's regiment (at Sittinbourne) to Landguard Fort by the Kitchin yacht, which his Majesty expects shall without faile be ready to take them in at Quinborow on Saturday next. Now, my Lord, that which makes me trouble you with the mention of this last matter is, that if by any accident Sir Phineas Pett should not be able to compass this thing by the Kitchin yacht's being out of the way, or otherwise unable to perform this voyage, your Lordshipp will be pleased to find some effectual way by some of your small vessells to doe it, and bring the like number from Landguard fort into the River of Thames. For your Lordshipp's readyer direction in which I have taken the liberty to inclose to you a copie of my letter by this night's post upon this subject to Sir Phineas Pett praying your [Lordshipp] you will cast your eye over it, in case you shall understand from him, that he is not able to answer the King's comands herein, without your help.

I have this night provided a press warrant from the King for one Mr Benge, recommended to me to that purpose, as from your Lordshipp, by Sir Henry Shere, in hopes of his being able to gather some little supply of men for you out of Sussex.

All I shall now add, is the acquainting you, that as I hope the Diamond is ere this come from Portsmouth to you, and that the advice will very shortly be soe too; soe the King, out of his extraordinary desire of your haveing the benefitt of his whole force, has this evening with the advice of my Lords then attending, concluded upon posting away the Plymouth and Dreadnought towards you without delay, though they have but their lowest complement of men aboard; as thinking it much better, that you should have them soe, then stay for their full manning till the wind change, and they thereby [be] prevented in comeing to you, though they were full manned, which the same wind must necessarily doe, that will serve to bring out the Dutch. In contemplation therefore of this, his Majesty does by this post send his orders not only to the Governor of Portsmouth to supply each of those ships with thirty men apiece (which by their last musters will raise their number above their lowest complement) but to the Comanders thereof themselves to take the first opportunity of comeing away to you after they shall have received those soldiers aboard. Soe that as the wind (thanks be to God) sits, you may I hope reasonably expect their being in a very like time with you, though not quite in soe good a condition as to men, as for the King's sake and yours I could heartily wish them."

1688, Oct. 4th, London.—Philip Frowde to Lord Dartmouth. No more news of the Prince of Orange, the wind being contrary. The King having on Tuesday last at the Council or Cabinet Council told the old aldermen that he would restore the Charter of London, for which the bells rang that night and bonfires were made here, and having this day sent my Lord Chancellor to the Guildhall with an instrument under the broad seal by virtue of which he dissolved the present government of the City, and turned out the Lord Mayor Sir John Eyles and all the new aldermen, when my Lord called in Sir William Pritchard (our friend) to be Lord Mayor, and all the old aldermen to take their places, Sir William Pritchard after six hours disputing the matter (and having urged that he had got a great cold, which was an admirable excuse) absolutely refused to be Lord Mayor: notwithstanding for the credit of the matter my Lord Chancellor offered to be bound to him himself in a judgment of 40,000*l.* to relieve him to-morrow by getting another to succeed him before he should do any one act. As my Lord Chancellor

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

came into the City he was huzza'd in the streets as his coaches came along, and in the Guildhall, all which I saw; and it is not hard for your Lordship to guess what a strange alteration this has made, there being now no Lord Mayor nor aldermen. This sure must alter the King's measures extremely, and be mischievous to my Lord Chancellor. "Tis hoped this will be patched up by to-morrow night by making another Lord Mayor, but who knows how many may follow their example, for Sir William Turner, Sir Robert Clayton, Sir James Smith, and I think one more but am not sure, went away as approving what Sir William Pritchard did. I shall make no reflections upon this, but leave it to your Lordship, who can do it much better. I pray God bless you and send you safe back again to us with better news than this is."

1688, Oct. 4th.—Sir Christopher Musgrave, (unsigned) to Philip Musgrave, St. James Street, London. The Proclamation did not come to his hand for recalling the writs, is heartily sorry for the occasion, but it has eased him of a winter journey, and no small thing will engage him to undertake one, being in a settled and agreeable way, and having sufficiently found how little good words signify, and that a consideration of services takes its date only from the last act; it is come to a proverb "tell me not what he was, but what he is now"

1688, Oct. 5th, London.—Sir Polycarpus Wharton to Lord Dartmouth. His necessities compel him to pray his Lordship to impress him 5 or 600*l*. in order that he may carry on his contracts.

1688, Oct. 5th, Chatham Dock.—Sir William Booth and Sir Phineas Pett to Lord Dartmouth.

Have this day received his Majesty's commands that a detachment out of Colonel Hales's regiment now quartered at Sittingbourne (being designed for Landguard Fort) should embark for that place at Queenborough to morrow without fail. Some of the Prince of Denmark's regiment must also be taken from Landguard Fort into the Thames as high as conveniently may be, in order to be joined to the rest of the regiment at Stepney. Another detachment of 72 men belonging to the Queen Dowager's and Holland's regiments has to be brought from Rochester to join the fleet. Ask his Lordship to spare one of his small frigates to assist in these transports.

1688, Oct. 5th, Whitehall.—King James II. to Lord Dartmouth. "This evening I had an expresse from M. d'Albeville, he came by the way of Calais, and tho' it was but of one day's freasher then the last letters which came by the post it brought more particulars, which Mr. Pepys has copyd out to send you. What is sayd of their intention to come and engage you is very probable, and 'tis as likly that they will send their land forces at the same tyme with some few men of war with them to make their descent. I need not mind you to lose no tyme to gett out from amonge the sands, as fast as you can, and hope that if the wind continue in this corner but two or three days you will have most of your ships with you. They talk now as if they intended to land in the ile of Thanet; if that be [so] their designe must be for Chatham. We must expect they will come out with all their force with the first snatch of wind. Land men come in a pace, and the new leves will be sone completed; both officers and souldiers are very harty. Lett me know how sone you think to saile, lett Shovel and Skelton know if this war continues they will sone be better mounted after the first brush shall be ouer.

J. R."

[Addressed.] For the Lord Dartmouth,

October 5th 1688.

[Endorsed.] Received the 7th and answered the same day.

1688, October 5th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

"Since mine by last night's post, which I hope is well arrived with you as containeing many particulars importing the service you have before you; as well Captain Clements, with regard to the watermen, as some others relateing to the fishermen have been with me, the former telling me that in his coming up the river he found severall parcells of the watermen actually come on board the ships to which they were designed, besides others upon ships to which they were not designed; and the latter not only averring, but offering to show me receipts for fishermen delivered on board the King's shippes, and as an instance I read one from Jennings, Sir William Booth's lieutenant, under his hand, for fourteene. Soe that though you had good reason to suspect your being imposed upon by those two companies, yet it is most apparent that a good part at least of the men they have pressed are indeed on board the fleet, though their names nor numbers have been reported to you.

My Lord, I shall not repeat anything of what I said last night more than that I doe relye upon it, that you may speedily expect to hear of the shippes from Portsmouth.

Captain Gifford in the Mermaide is arrived from the streights at Plymouth, and by this time I hope advanced in her way to the Downes, where she will be advertised to attend your Lordshipp at the Nore. Not that I can promise myself that you will find her in any great condition of service, after having been soe long abroad, nevertheless it is some satisfaction, that whatever the shipp is you will have a little addition of men to what you have, and the King a good officer at hand more then he had before.

It remaines with your Lordshipp to let me know who you will have the contingent money paid to that is to be advanced for the use of the fleet. I did as you desired me propose it to my Lord Faulkland, that he would appoint one, who might receive and pay it, as an instrument of his; according as has heretofore been determined to be most regular, but I find that my Lord Faulkland is inclined that this person should be of your Lordshipp's nameing; and for that reason I am hindred in getting the contingent money ordered, for want of knowing the hand it is to be paid to. Be pleased therefore in your next to let me know your mind concerning it.

I have omitted saying anything to your Lordshipp concerning a Chirurgeon-Generall, in regard of M^r Pearse's having informed me of his having in some degree discoursed that matter with your Lordshipp, and that that charge would be executed in his absence by the gentleman that is chirurgeon to your own person; his name I do not remember.

From what Captain Clements told me, it is to be hoped that most of the shippes in this river, are ere this come down to you, saving the Rupert and Henrietta in the Hope, and the Swallow and S^t Albans at Deptford, the despatch of which last would, I should think, be more in the way of forwarding, had her Comander taken his leave of the Court.

What I have now to add, is the giving your Lordshipp some account of our freshest advice from Holland, by letter of the 7th instant their stile (which was yesterday was se'nnight), though they arrived here but to-day, which is, that as they grow nearer to the time of execution, soe doe they grow more eager and triumphant in their intended undertakeing, and their confidence of its success. But because this advice descends to much more particulars then any wee have yet had, and some of them such as may not be convenient to be exposed in a publick letter, I asked the King's leave to transcribe them, as I now give them you, in a particular

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

paper inclosed,* in the 'very termes of Mons^r D'Albeville's own letter to him. Whereto referring you, I doe with all my heart remaine, your Lordshipp's most faithfull and obedient servant.

In a postscript Mr. Pepys adds, "I herewith trouble your Lordshipp with a comission for one M^r Thomas Day recomended by Sir William Jennens for his 2^d lieutenant, and appointed thereto by his Majesty upon condition declared to Sir William Jennens that he shall pass his examination, which I am to pray your Lordshipp to see him doe before you suffer the comission to be delivered to him."

[1688], Oct. 6th.—Barbara, Lady Dartmouth to Lord Dartmouth.

"I did feare, my dearest, as it proves, you never intended coming up, only thought kindly, the expectation of it would make me part easayer then, but my truble is not less, or doe think that all the preparations will end in nothing, tho' they say the war is declared against France, and lett whoe pleasith fight it out, so we doe not ; all I can doe is to pray for you which I faile not insessently, and I have the comfort of the too (sic) Bishops who are very kind to you and me I had a gratiouse messege sent me from Lord Chanceler [Jeffreys] of his desires to serve you, or me in your absence, and that if anythinge could be found by your frinds that might be an advantage to you this would be a proper time for it, he finding you in so good a condition with his Majesty

B. D."

1688, Oct. 6th, Bishopsness.—Holcraft Blood to Lord Dartmouth.

Made enquiry on Thursday last upon the works for such men as were proper to serve his majesty at sea, at which they were so alarmed that, by Mr. Richard's advice and Captain Howell's assistance, we drew off 33 who were judged to be either able seamen or very proper to serve at sea, and kept them all night on board Captain Howell's ship. All these except 9 were sent the next morning on board his Lordship's ship the Resolution. None fit to serve have been left upon the work, but if any come in they will be sent on board the Cambridge, according to command.

1688, Oct. 6th, Whitehall.—Earl of Rochester to Lord Dartmouth.

Thanks him for a letter at such a time when in the despatch of so much business. No one can wish him better success, &c. Cannot but tell his Lordship that since he went away he has not had the happiness of being once spoken to by the King in any kind, which, after the letter Lord Dartmouth took the pains to send him by an express to Newmarket, he cannot but think something odd. However he has the same concern and zeal and duty that ever he had for the King's service, which makes him think his heart is very good, wishes his head were so too, but vows this treatment looks as if his Majesty doubted both.

1688, October 7th, Sunday night. Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to same.

"This comes at once in returne to yours of the 4th and 5th, and will be brought you by Captain Wilshaw, our Master Attendant at Deptford, as the most proper person for supplying the want of a commissioner of the navy, the two only ones of whose number (saveing Sir Anthony Deane, who continues still unable to stirr abroad), being now with you as members of the fleet, who are in any degree qualified to render your Lordshipp any service, in the point for which you now have occasion to call for them, namely, that of overhalling the demands of stores, brought you from the officers of shipp, which your Lordshipp has too much reason to receive with that jealousie you have expressed con-

* Not now with the letters.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

cerning them, and would have more, were it fitt to trouble you with an instance, among others, that was brought me very lately. Nor at this time are there soe many Commissioners left, as are necessary and certaine to be had to make a Board, were it not for their calling up the Commissioner at Deptford to assist thereat. Nor is Sir Richard Haddock at this time in any better condition for helping of you, in regard of the work he has upon his hand to procure and dispatch away provitions to you, in which the Commissioners for that affaie doe alleadge their being at work, night and day about it, and without Sir Richard Haddock I have a great deal of reason to suspect your disappointments would be yet greater than they be. But the King will immediately have the help of other hands at the Navy Board in addition to them that are now there, according to what you know was some time agoe in proposition ; soe that in a very little time the few of the present numbers that are remaining here will be relieved, and consequently some to spare to assist you, in your affaires. In the mean time Sir John Berry and Sir William Booth, notwithstanding their sea comands, are noe less Commissioners of the Navy then they were before, and may together with the Commissioner at Chatham be, I hope, as usefull to you, in that capacity. Nevertheless because of their new charges, and the regard which they have necessarily to pay thereto, the King is pleased to comand Captain Wilshaw to attend you, then whom by his place noe man can be thought better qualified for judgeing of boatswains demands, and particularly for that which respects the fireshipps, as haveing had a the fitting of most of them out himself. And concerning which it occurs to me, as upon my mentioning it I beleive it will to your Lordshipp, that the fireships last fitted, were originally proposed by yourself, and designed by the King for the guard of the river only, and not to goe to sea, and were therefore restrained to vessels of very small burthen, and had I beleive upon that consideration a different manner of fitting out, from what they would have had for sea service.

That nothing might be wanting that might contribute ought to the quickening the victuallers, I moved his Majesty to require their attendance on him this night at the Cabinet, where accordingly they were, and were urged with all the fervour that the King could express to the looseing noe time that can possibly be saved in the dispatching away provisions to you ; which they assured the King they laboured in by keeping all hands at work that they can employ, either at their own office or elsewhere, both night and day : and to the King's demanding a plaine account of the condition they were in for furnishing the fleet with what they want of their provisions, they made this reply, that those at Portsmouth have their full proportion, so that they will not loose one moment in their repaire hitherward for any want thereof ; next, that the ships of Sir Roger Strickland's squadron, were all supplied in the Downes. And in the third place, that for the ships now fitting forth, they presented the King with an account of their state in writeing, as it stands at this day, a copie of which I here inclose you,* and to which pray be referred, as containeing all the light in this matter that I can gett, or that I beleive they can give. This only I have to add, that Mr Stevenson tooke his leave of me in his way to your Lordshipp this morning ; and that I doe (from the accounts that have been shown me of it) find that the victualls they have parted with for the land service amount to as much as would have compleatly victualled three of your 3^d rates for two months apiece, and therefore cannot but wish, that some other hands had had the providing for the land-work elsewhere then out of the Magazines of the Navy.

* Not now with the letters.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

I have this evening beseeched the King to lay his commands upon his sea-captains, that are still walking in Whitehall, to repaire to their charges, as some of them, to my astonishment, as well as greife to this day doe, and have received his commands to write to them in his name to be gone, which I will not faile to doe.

I hope your Lordshipp will continue to hold your hand in the giving way to the desires of others to come up from their ships at such a juncture as this, though I doe verily believe that neither of the gentlemen wee have heretofore named on this occasion, doe desire it, but upon considerations of importance to them.

Nor doe I question your haveing very good fruit of your writing to the office of the ordnance, which makes me spare to say anything more to you on that head.

Captain Cotton has been with me, and shall have all the furtherance I can give him, in whatever he stands in need of for the rendreing his service usefull to you.

I shall be glad to hear that all the parcells of soldiers mentioned in my last are arrived with you, as well as the first 72 and 36, and that those designed for Landguard Fort may meet with the conveyance I proposed, his Majesty being very intent upon their being at their post.

The King very well approves of your choice of the shippes you have appointed to relieve the Deptford and Dartmouth, namely, the Portsmouth and Lark; for the former of which, I am by his direction to recomend to your Lordshipp, the proposing some person for a lieutenant, in the roome of Mr Killebrew, whom Captain Constable has desired the King to spare him; soe soon as your Lordshipp shall returne me the name of the person you approve of for it, I'll take care without any trouble to him to send you down his commission.

I have heard nothing from Portsmouth since my last, wherein I gave you an account of the King's haveing called away those shippes, and assisted them with soldiers to bring them away; but I am in great hopes I shall by the next post hear of their being dispatched.

The gentlemen of the Trinity-house have been with me, and to-night I have provided and dispatched to them a warrant from the King, enableing and requiring them, with all diligence to apply themselves to the execution of every article of the result of your late conference with them, as being entirely approved of by the King, and the charge of the whole action will be re-imbursed them by him.

I have also by a speciall letter from myself pressed them to the answering your demand of pilots for the ships mentioned in your list, which Mr Hunter has promised me to take great care in.

Not only myself, but the King has personally spoken with Mr Pearse, who as to the number of chirurgeons, and the sufficiency of their chests and medicaments, adjudged upon solemn examinations of them by the Hall, has given his Majesty such an account, as leads the King to hope, that by this time (by the arrivall of some chirurgeons that he believes could not be with you at the time of your information) the ground of your demands on that head are removed. But as to the necessaries, the allowance thereof haveing, during peace, been retrenched saveing in forreigne voyages, the King has been pleased to determine of haveing the same now revived, and Mr Pearse is hard at work in makeing provision for the present flect accordingly. And when that is done, will be most ready to attend your Lordshipp, if the King will be pleased to spare him.

I have not failed in observing to the King what you have observed in justice to Lieutenant Ballen and Lieutenant Shenton, and what you note of another kind, but with noe less justice concerning Bucknall.

What remaines, my Lord, is the letting you know that the King does dayly find occasions of expressing the entire satisfaction he has in the industry and thoughtfulness he observes through all your proceedings for the good of his service, wherein I doe most heartily endeavour to render your province as easy to you as I am able, and shall always doe soe."

Postscript.

"Two little particulars I have forgot, namely the observing to your Lordshipp (which you will not be angry with me for) that I find in your late list of your fleet, and their numbers of men, that 50 is sett down for your flag, whereas the number appointed by the establishment to an Admirall with a union flag at the maine-topp, is but 30, fifty being the number allowed only to the Lord High Admirall of England.

The other is, that the King had ordered the Foresight's complement to be raised to the highest number by his warrant to the officers of the Navy, before your Lordshipp's mention of it came to me."

1688, October 7th.—"A particular of the ships and vessells ordered to joyne the Fleet under the command of the Lord Dartmouth, as allso where they now are." [In duplicate.]

1688, October 8th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth. "I have yours of the 6th and of yesterday before me, and as well in answer thereto, as in relation to other particulars needful to be mentioned to you, give me leave in the first place to observe that the Mermaide was arrived as far as the Dounes yesterday, and ready with the first wind to come away to the Nore, as he had then done, but for the wind's being then at the N. West, and by the account I have of her, her condition I doubt is such as will hardly yeild you any better service then by the use you will make of her men. Which though I know it will be a little grievous to Captain Gifford, I mean by his companie's being taken away, and himself laid up, at such a time as this too; yet I have good reason to beleive his Majesty's opinion of him is such, and his kindness too, as not to let him lye long without another comand, and a better."

I am extreemly sorry that you have yet no better account of the watermen and fishermen's undertakeing, they haveing by the King's comand been twice or thrice called upon by me, and admonished not to trifle with the King in a service of soe much moment, and still had for answer from the former, that they were sure the whole number of 200 were somewhere or other in the fleet, and indeed Captain Clement's report from his own observation in his coming up from the Nore, went a great way towards confirmeing the same. But, my Lord, the use you tell me you designe to make of the list I sent you of their names at the next muster, will certainly enlighten you in the truth of this matter, and you may be sure the rulers of their company will be called to a strict account for it, in case they shall appear to have mis-informed the King therein: nor was it for want of the method you now propose, that you have yet soe uncertaine an account of these watermen, the Katharina yacht haveing been appointed for that very purpose, to convey to you the whole 200 in a lump, (as she did part of them), but through the idleness of the rulers, in sending them away with ticketts, leaving each man to take his own way of getting down.

And as to the fishermen, they doe with noe less positiveness assert, that they have 8 or more smacks at work, wholly in pressing of men, and that, though they dare not undertake, for any time certaine, you may depend upon haveing the whole number effectually made good to you. This, my Lord, does not I confess amount to the satisfaction that were to be wished, but I shall not let their Governors rest, nor in particular Mr. Fanshaw (who seems to be their patron) till I have some account from your Lordshipp of the effects of what they say.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

I have this day taken care for Captain Cotton's being furnished with a boat, the Navy Board haveing upon my letter authorized him to take up one to his own likeing, thereby to render him inexcusable for any neglects or slacknesses that he may be found guilty of in the execution of the trust you have comitted to him.

The King is soe affected with your complaints of the backwardness of the provisions, that though he had the Commissioners for the Victualling before him but yesterday, upon that very occasion, when he received from them that account of their proceedings, which I sent your Lordshipp a copie of last night, by Captain Willshaw, yet would not his Majesty be satisfied without summoning them againe to him this evening, when they presented him with a fresh state differing from the other by soe much as they have performed to day of what was then undone. A copie of this I also send to your Lordshipp,* with this only note upon it, (for better explication of their paper) that where against the two first and five last shippes of the list you find the word done, they explained their meaning therein to the King to be that their whole three months provisions are either actually by the shippes sides, or at least shipp'd off into vessels, with orders imediately to be carried down to them. As for the Pendennis, Elizabeth, Swallow, and S^t Albans, they have undertaken, that the shippes being ready to receive it, the whole of their dry provisions, and as much of their wett as can possibly be gott ready, shall be on board them by or before Saturday next at the furthest; and that the remainder of their liquor shall be sent after them; the only two of the list then remaineing are the Newcastle and Woolwich, who have been soe little a time ordered to be fitted, that though noe degree of dispatch shall be omitted in the setting them out, that they will require a longer day to render them capable of receiving their victualls.

Which being that stato of the victuallers condition, which they have presented to the King, as the truth thereof at this day, and what (to answer your desire) they declare may be certainly relyd on by you, and haveing thereto added, that by my letter this day from Portsmouth, it appears that the Pearle sailed from thence towards you on that day, the Richmond on Friday, the Advice yesterday, and that the Dreadnought (whether the men they expect from the westward come to her or noe), should be comeing towards you, to morrow, or Wednesday at the furthest, and the Plymouth sooner, I am to propose to you by the King's direction, by way of enquiry only, and noe otherwise, the considering how farr it may or may not be adviseable for you to goe to sea, (whether the Dutch come out or noe) with the fleet which you shall be able to make upon the comeing to you of the shippes from Portsmouth, and the taking in of the victualls before-mentioned said to be shipped off for the seven shippes named in the victualler's list under the title of 'done,' of which when you shall have considered, it may be of some satisfaction I find to his Majesty, that your present thoughts therein were communicated to him; though I am againe to observe to you, that his relyance upon your conduct in this whole matter, is soe entire, that he would not be thought by this enquiry to putt the least constraint upon you, in the measures you shall judge fitt to take taken for his service.

Where your Lordshipp observes, that you haue stopp'd your warrant for Captain Tyrrell's easeing the Foresight of some of the surplussage of

* Not now with the papers.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

her provisions, upon the score of their being unfit for home victualling, as haveing been provided for the West Indies, I presume your Lordshipp meanes only her brandy, which is taken in instead of beer, for the enabling her the better to take a full cargoe of dry provisions, foras much as her bread, flesh, and beer (soe much as she has thereof) are in noe wise different that I know of from our home victualling in those species, then as they are better in each kind, and necessarily made soe for their better keeping.

Though I doubt not but your last quickning of the officers of the Ordnance will have very good effects, yet I cannot omit to give you Sir Richard Beach's words relateing to the backwardness of the shipp at Portsmouth, and particularly the Dreadnought and Plymouth: vizt, there has (says he) been a great hindrance to the shipp in their despatch by the carridges of the guns not being fitt, but either too narrow, or too wide, nor has the Dreadnought tacles enough for her guns yet, haveing but one tacle to severall guns; and indeed the same is wrote from other places.

As soon as ever your letter came to my hand, I wrote to the Navy Board about flaggs for signalls, as also about slopps and bedding for the soldiers.

I have also provided a warrant signed under the King's own hand for their imediate pressing six vessels of about 70 tons each for the serving you with water.

You have certainly done advisedly in the use you have made of the hint I gave you touching making yourself accomptable for the con-tingent money of the fleet. His Majesty has approved of it too, and signed his warrant for its being paid to such person as shall be appointed to receive and dispense the same in the fleet by my Lord Faulkland, this method being in all respects the most naturall, as well as otherwise best for the King, and most easy to you.

I have had the Chirurgion Generall with me againe this day, who shewed me a letter he was then sending away by express to your Lordshipp relating to the whole of your Lordshipp's notes upon the head of medicaments &c., and is very busie in provideing of necessaries for sick men according to the establishment and practice in the last warr. And when that is done, and the thinges put up, he is ready to come down with them to you himself, if the King will spare his service here.

I shall take care, as you now desire, to dispatch away some blank instructions for captains and lieutenants, half a dozen of each, this very night, in company with this, which I believe my freind Collonel Legg your brother will have the trouble of bringing to you.

Which being all that at present occurs to me, saveing the inclosing to you an extract of a letter communicated this night to the King by my Lord Godolphin, and suitable to what is now wrote by other hands, and particularly by Mons^r D'Abbeville, touching the method of the Dutch fleet's proceeding, as it is now designed, with reference to the designe of first speaking with your fleets, the same being not thought unusefull to be communicated to you, as agreeing with what you your self have in your letter pre-supposed they would doe. I do with all respect kiss your Lordshipp's hands, and with most hearty prayers for good success to your Lordshipp's endeavours I remaine

My Lord, your Lordshipp's most humble servant."

An abstract of the above letter.

The extract above referred to is dated Amsterdam, Oct. 8, 1688, and is as follows: "'Tis said Vice Admirall Herbert is gone with about 40 Dutch ships to speake the English fleet in the Downs or where they may be and if they will not agree with them in the designe to fight them. The rest of the fleet and forces will not goe forward until next weeke."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1688, October 8th, Whitehall.—King James II. to Lord Dartmouth. "You will have an account from Mr Pepys of what is done about the victuals, and what Sir Richard Haddock and the rest of them sayd to me this evening, which if so you may be sone ready to saile, with most of your ships, and tho' all that are in the Hope should not be quit ready, consider well whether you should loze the opportunity of this westerly wind, to gett out from amongst the sands, or ventur to have the Dutch come and find you posted some where neare the boye of the Oze edg, amongst the sands, for you must expect they will come out and be looking for you, with the first easterly wind; and by letters which came this day of their 9th I am informed they will send most of their [men] of war to look you out to engage you, whilst they send their forces to land some were els and 'tis beleved, that it may be northward. I only mention this to you, leaving it to you to do what you shall judge best for my service. I am very glad to find by yours that all the fleet are in so good hart; I assure you the troupes here are so to. I have not tyme to say more being called to supper.

J. R."

[Addressed.] For the Lord Dartmouth, October 8th 1688.

[Endorsed.] Received the 11th, returne made the 12th.

1688, October 8th, Port Royal in Jamaica. Captain Thomas Spragg to Lord Dartmouth. Has sent the bearer Captain William Penny to give his Lordship to understand that the Duke of Albemarle departed this world the 6th of this instant about five in the morning. His Lordship's brother, Colonel William Legge, was once inclinable to put in for the government of the island, who the writer is confident would be very acceptable there.

1688, October 8th, Navy Office.—Navy Commissioners (Lord Falkland, Sir Anthony Deane, and William Hewer) to Lord Dartmouth. Sir John Berry, and Sir William Booth being ordered to sea there are now only so many commissioners left as will form a board; they hope therefore his lordship will hold them from attending him in the fleet as he desires. Report on the supply of stores, &c. to the ships. Mr. Beckford, the slopseller, has been written to to furnish the fleet with slops, and Mr. Pearse the chirurgeon-general with necessaries for the sick and wounded. Cannot find that beds for the soldiers were ever supplied by the navy, and therefore presume they either made use of "hamaccoes" like the sailors, or had beds from the Tower.

1688, October 8th, Sheerness.—Sir Charles Lyttleton to Lord Dartmouth. Has had neither health nor boat to permit him to wait on his Lordship at the Nore, but has as much will and as much heart as anybody to congratulate him. The King could not have done better for his service and more for the public satisfaction than he has in putting the fleet under his Lordship's command. It is necessary that two smacks and a four-oared boat should be allowed to attend on the garrison at Sheerness, and more men are wanted to sail the yachts.

1688, October 8th, Pall Mall.—J. Pearse, Surgeon-General, to Lord Dartmouth. Secretary Pepys acquainted him with some complaints made by some of the Commanders for want of their surgeons, medicines, and necessaries; sends a list of the surgeons and mates that the Governors of the Company and himself have appointed to each ship, all of whom have been despatched with their chests. Upon any complaint of want of medicines, &c. asks his Lordship to direct Mr. Herriot to take a survey and report to the writer.

1688, October 8th, 9th, and 10th.—Same to same. On the supply of surgeons, &c. to the fleet (three letters).

1688, Oct. 8th, London.—William Vandeveldt de Oude (the old) to Lord Dartmouth.

"This serves only to give your Lordship notice that according (sic) my Lord's order I brought laste Friday at my Lord's house the five pieces of pictures, as are known to my Lord, and these (sic) day being Moonday I have put them in theire golden frames, which are extraordinary curious and precieuse, which I did in the presence of my Lord's brother, to whome it is knowne, and my Lord's brother ordred me to write these few lines to give my Lord notice hereof, which he promised me to take along withim (sic), by reason he went in person to my Lord. Concerninge the frames I have agreed to pay for each one of them 3*l.* 10*s.*, which, my Lord, otherwise should cost 5*l.* and more, so that the frames come to 17*l.* 10*s.* Concerning my art of drawing the pictures, my Lord Berckley payd mee for a piece of foure foote and a halfe twenty pound, and my Lady Barkley, my Lord Barkley's mother, payd mee for a piece five foote long the summe of twentye three pound; so that in regard of those as I have made for my Lord, I leave that totally in the generosity and high juste consideration of my Lord himselfe, not doubting of [or, if] me Lord shall take such more favourable consideration in the rate of my art, according my Lord's pictures really are more excellent as they whereof I mention in this present, I haveing in those pictures bestowed my utmost endeavours and my art."

1688, Oct. 8th, London.—Earl of Feversham to Lord Dartmouth. Is desired to beg of his Lordship that the government of Upnor Castle, the governor being dead, may be given to Captain George Aymer.

1688, Oct. 9th, On board the Elizabeth.—Sir John Berry to Lord Dartmouth.

The Kitchen yacht came this morning with a parcel of very sorry men which he must keep till he can get better. Desires Captain Cotton may be ordered to attend on him till he returns from the hope to press men. Got under sail last tide, but the wind blowing hard and the channel narrow the pilot would not venture to stir out the side (?).

1688, Oct. 10th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"My last was of the 8th inst by Collonel Legg. Since which, my Lord, these only particulars have occurred.

The Advice went from Portsmouth upon Sunday last, and by this time I doubt not is with your Lordshipp, together with the Pearle and Mermaid.

Captain Carter by his of yesterday tells me that he was ready to saile on Sunday night last, but could not, the wind being at W.S.W. and blowing very hard but it coming yesterday when he wrote to the W.N.W. he doubted not to gett out presently to the Spitthead, and from thence goe on with all expedition to joine you at the Nore.

The Dreadnought allsoe by a letter of the same day from Sir Richard Beach intended to saile to the Spitthead at the same time or today, if he can by any meanes make shift to secure his guns under the want he then was of threescore tacles for them. Which may prove very inconvenient as the season and weather is; but Sir Richard Beach writes me word that he supposes Captain Akarman will make some shifts or other to lash his gunns with ropes rather than waite for tacles. He tells mee also at the same time that the Charles and Henry fireshipp would be ready to saile in a day or two but had not her fireworks yet.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS
—

One thing more I am to mention to you out of the same letter but shall chose to doe it in his own words in a paper inclosed whereto for expedition I must referr you.

To the latter part of which I am instructed by the King to answer him that he has already sent some horse thither to obviate the very evill for which this letter calls for them. And for the former part wherein he proposes that some small saileing friggat may be sent out to ply between Dover and France for the carrying the earliest notice to Portsmouth of the approach of the Dutch if they should indeed tend that way, I am comanded (my Lord) to recomend that particular to your Lordshipp, the reason of it seeming to his Majesty very cogent that soe if a friggat may be thought too much to be spared on this errand some small saileing vessell at least may bee appointed to doe the work.

This night the King has been pleased to determine upon haveing some more 3^d and 4th rate shipp to have their rigging brought over head at Chatham and Portsmouth and in this river, to be in a greater readiness as a reserve, that may be ready to bee carryed out by the companies of any of these shipp that shall be abroad with you, whose chance it may be to be lamed in case of action.

How it has come to pass I know not or whether indeed it be soe or not I am as little certaine, but soe it is, that the King has understood from Captain Constable that the S^t Albans has four ports on the quarter deck which the establishment has provided noe guns for. Upon which the officers of the ordnance having upon a land occasion been called to attend the King this evening at the cabinett he has directed their being supplied, and they expect an order in writeing from him for it. But it is a little uneasy with me to beleive that there can have been any such mistake in the establishment. But that (if the fact bee indeed soe) it was done upon some consideration or other that may not now occur. And therefore I thought it fitt for me to make this mention of it to you as thinking it possible that you may recollect, or at least suggest what may have been the true occasion of it.

I wish with all my heart the fireshipps you are takeing with you to sea of them that your Lordshipp proposed only for the guard of the river and Portsmouth (and therefore were stinted to between 4 score and a hundred tons or there abouts) were on this occasion a little bigger as fearing they will prove too small to be of much service to you.

Pray, my Lord, let me know the success of your next muster in reference to the watermen, who at this hour remaine very peremptory in undertakeing for your having their full number somewhere or other in the fleet. Nor are the fishermen less possitive in the fleet's having at least three hundred already of their 5 hundred, and not knowing how to disprove them, I am forced to sitt downe by it, till I have some further light given me from the fleet.

The victuallers seem to be extreemly solicitous in the dispatching of their victualls towards you and not to make any doubt of performing their undertakeing, of which I gave you an account in my last.

As to slopps and signall colours the Navy officers tell me they have given your lordshipp an account thereof imediately from themselves, such as I hope wilbee to your satisfaction, savinge only as to bedds, which I doe not in all my time remember any such provision made by the navy if the thing was at all ever done. But souldiers having the same provision made for them as to their lodging which the best seamen have, were (as farr as I have ever heard) well contented with it.

My Lord, Mr. Pearce the Chyrurgeon Generall having told the King that the necessaries for sick men will be all ready to morrow, I have provided a yacht for the receiving them and sending them downe to your lordshipp; Mr. Pearce himselfe being very willing to attend you along with them if the King shall have noe comands to prevent it. Lastly (my Lord) having great hopes that you will now in very few daies have your fleet about you in some tolerable measure ready to attend you, I pray God with all my heart to give you the fruited of the paines which I am sure you are taking for it."

HARE OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

The paper above referred to is an extract from a letter from Sir Richard Beach to Mr. Pepys dated the 6th October 1688 and is as follows:—

"It is to be feared the Dutch may make their discent here, it being a place where all their shippes and vessells may ride in security all the winter between the Island and the Maine. And I doe think it adviseable that some small saileing frigatt, might ply between Dover and the coast of France, or Dungeness and the French coast, that if in case it should be the Dutche's designe to look this way upon their discovery of them, he might make all the heast possible hither to give us timely notice of their approaching, that we might have some time to putt ourselves into a posture of defence. For if they designe to land here, they may land what number of men they please at Eastny-point with their small vessells and botes, which will come into the channell between the hawse and the Island and at the same time land more in Stokes Bay under comand of their own shipp-gunn, and if they should land at Eastny point, they possess themselves of the dock in an houre or an houre and half's time, and be in safety from the shott of the toun, the long storehouse being between the toun and the dock, and I know no way to prevent it, but with good bodies of horse and dragoons. I hope your honour will pardon my presumption for the old saying is, a foole's bolt is soone shott."

An abstract of the above letter.

1688, Oct. 10th, A paper containing "The present number of the Fleet of the Channel-Guard, with the names of their Commanders and numbers of men."

1688, Oct. 11th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"I have this morning received, by the hand of Captain Hoskins your Lordshipp's of the 8th, with its postscript of the 9th inst., besides which I have none of yours before me.

My Lord, the assurances Sir Richard Haddock and the rest of those gentlemen of the victualling of makeing good the last paper I sent you, and explanation thereof contained in my letter that accompanied it have been asserted and repeated by them to the King with soe much earnestness, and the same inculcated back upon them also, with noe less fervour on his Majesty's side, that however that affaire might appear to your Lordshipp at the writeing of this letter, the King does not entertaine any doubt of its being made effectually good to him and you, though I just now come from reading to him very deliberately every article of your said letter, expressing in severall particulars your observations and apprehensions of the contrary. Nor will I faile, notwithstanding all that is soe promised, to putt them nevertheless in mind of it, by communicateing to them this very day soe much of the contents of this letter of your Lordshipp's as respects that affaire.

My Lord, Sir Anthony Deane continues ill, and soe ill as to be driven to keep his bed all day yesterday, and very much worse I can assure you he is, from his finding himself soe at this time, when he might be in particular serviceable to you. And I am confident he will not loose a minute after he is able to doe it, (which I have hopes will not be long), in his hastning down to you; and indeed considering what

HARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

has laine upon his hand, and his alone for a great while, it is (sic) been my wonder he has held up soe long. But I have by the King's command dispatched the Bill this noone to the Privy-Seale for the Commission revoking the present, and recalling the old officers, in addition to the present Commissioners, that is those of them that are continued at the Board. Soe that I doe hope you will very suddenly have with you, with soe much reason, desire; I mean the assistance of some of that body.

I am exceeding joyfull at the provition your Lordshipp has made by store shippes and carriage-makers from the Office of the Ordnance to answer entirely the wants of the fleet in relation thereto; the mentions I have made thereof to you, being purely intended for your service, thinking it a better way of expressing my regard thereto, by handing to you complaints that might be false, then by suggesting, or preventing your knowledge of them, least they should be true.

I thank you for your information touching the Landguard-Fort men, it being greatly to the King's content.

The King is alsoe greatly sensible of your circumspection in the disposall of the Leiutenancy of the Portsmouth.

I observe your advice about gunners that shall in future be appointed to flireships, in relation to their being examined, as to their capacity for it, and will see it executed; the long disuse of that engine, haveing I doubt, worne out the memory of the methods of using it.

The last night's post brought you from me an account of what you might expect touching the ships from Portsmouth, the last of which (I mean the Dreadnought) I have great reason to hope may be with you, or at least in ye Doune, towards you, as soon as this.

The King does entirely approve of your proposition of turning the Headzenburgh into an hospitall shipp, and [I] shall have orders prepared for his signing this very day for the putting it in execution.

Since it does soe fall it, that you find a necessity of sending in the Tyger (of whose defect, which proves so unlucky, and unreasonable, I doe not remember any word to have been heretofore mentioned, though it seems the effects of it, has in divers instances appeared) his Majesty does fully concur with you, in the expediency on all sides (with respect noe less to Captain Tyrwhit himself, then to his own service, and your and Captain Tennant's satisfaction), of their two changing ships, and therefore if it likes them, as well as it does the King, your Lordshipp has nothing before you, to hinder the imediate execution of it.

I doe assure you the King is very intent upon the Captaines resorting all to their charges, and extreamly laudable it was in Captain Shovell in makeing soe tender a use of your Lordshipp's favour to him, for to you only he owes it, and to noe desire that I remember of mine, more than a cautious handing to you of his.

Care will be taken (I doubt not) by the Trinity-house that the fleet have timely notice of what they shall doon in altering or removeing of the buoys and lights.

What may have been done before the date of the last solemn establishment in 1677, about the supernumerary allowance to flags I know not, or what has been done since, either abroad without order, or by order from home, in the time of my absence from the navy; and I doe firmly beleive it will never appear that 50 men were ever allowed to any flag but the standard, since the date of that establishment, by any order that passed my hand.

The King is greatly pleased, that the Quaker K^d [Ketch] is likely to be soe soon made serviceable to you, and very fortunate it proves to her Captaine, by giveing him an opportunity of attoneing for his errors abroad, (said to be great both in number and weight) by meriteing on this occasion some favourable character from your Lordshipp here.

All I have to add is the continuance of my most fervent wishes of all good events to your Lordshipp, and observing to you, that Mr. Pearse being the bearer hereof, I industriously forbear the troubling you here with any thing on the subject he comes about, and I hope to your satisfaction."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MESS.

In a postscript Mr. Pepys adds,

"I have just now received an answer to a message I lately sent to the company of fishermen, which I thought might not be amiss to communicate to your Lordshipp by the copie thereof inclosed,* and moreover I have to acquaint you, with my haveing this morning delivered to the Rulers of Watermen's Hall a press-warrant for 200 men more, with very strict caution given them at the same time against sending any of them away as they did before by tickets to particular ships, but to see that they be all putt aboard one vessell that shall be appointed to take them in, and bring them to you, or after you in a lump. I say after you, because I am in good hopes, you may be in a condition of going out to sea, before they may be with you; in regard that they seem to make great difficulty of being able to find soe many, without sending into the west country for them, and soe doe not pretend to have them in readiness to putt aboard before Tuesday next at the soonest."

1688, Oct. 11th, Tower.—Sir Edward Hales to Lord Dartmouth.

Writes by Mr. Hawkes to wish his Lordship prosperity and success in the great work he has on hand. Sir John Friend parted from him just now, and will be ready when there is occasion. Fears they will want gunners unless Lord Dartmouth's guns make theirs useless.

[P.S.] Captain Minors is dead or dying. Pray remember to recommend George Aymer to the King for Upnor Castle.

1688, Oct. 11th, London.—Sir Anthony Deane to Lord Dartmouth.

Recommends the bearer, the son of Sir John Dawes, who has passed the necessary examination, and desires the honour of being Captain Shovell's lieutenant, which place he hears is now void, or any other place that may be fit.

1688, Oct. 12th, Tower.—Sir Henry Shere to Lord Dartmouth.

His Lordship will conclude that his condition is very unable when he is under the necessity of writing by another hand than his own. God knows it is an affliction by manifold degrees superior to his disease to be disabled in this important occasion from rendering the duty and service required from him. He made another attempt to attend the Board [of Ordnance] yesterday, but had to retire after some stay, so very ill that the doctor ordered him to be bled anew and to take another dose of the Jesuit's powder. Details the steps taken to get the train of artillery, &c. in order, and assures his Lordship that everything is ready to march upon the King's first summons. The Board sits morning and afternoon. Sir Edward (Sherburne) very temperate and very diligent, so that it is hoped he will acquit himself of his promise to Lord Dartmouth.

1688, Oct. 13th, On board the Pendennis.—Sir William Booth to Lord Dartmouth. Is just come on board. Prays his Lordship to consider his bad condition, wanting 240 men of his complement, and earnestly begs for help.

* Not now with the letter.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

1688, Oct. 14th, The Cambridge at Blackstakes.—Captain John Tyrwhitt. Could not carry out his Lordship's orders to sail forthwith to the bay of the Nore, the pilot having told him that the wind was so far easterly that he durst not meddle with the ship, but will watch all opportunities to gain a slatch (?) to get out. Has got with much ado half the Tiger's men, and would have brought more yesterday, but they would not part with them till they had got clear of their stores and guns.

1688, Oct. 14th, Whitehall.—King James II. to Lord Dartmouth.

"I had last night yours of the 12th by your brother, by which I was glad to find you would be so sone ready to go to sea. I suppose the Portsmouth ships will by this be with you, so that except bad weather should oblige you (I meane to ride quiat if the W. winds should continue blowing), there would be no need of your going to the Downs. As for your going over for to shew your self to their ships on the coast off Holland, I thinke you aught to consider well of it before you do it, considering the season of the yeare, and the blowing weather which is to be expected, and may be you might do them a curtisy to oblige them to go into Gore or other their ports, they being exposed I thinke very much as they be now in the sea, and till they have a settled E. wind I should thinke they would hardly ventur out with their land forces. By the last letters from Holland which were of the 1st; tis sayd that Herbert who commands their fleett in cheef, is to look you out and observe your motions, whilst the Prince of Orange having Trump with him with eight men of war is to go with his army to land where he designs doing it; tho' this is not certain 'tis likly enough. I had ordred before I had yours, six thirds and all the remaining fourth to be fitted, without entring of men. I had the victualers with me this euening, and one of them goes downe along with this bearer, Captain Rooth, to lett you know what they have done. If the winds have been on the coast of Holland as here this day or two, their men of warr which were at the Texel may have gott out, as also the foot which were embarked in the Zuder Sea and joynd their ships before Gore, and the great impacience the Prince of Orang has to come out will make him not lose one moment's tyme to put to sea, and may be with more hast then good speed. The Scots and Irish troupes are marching as fast as they can to joyne me. Dorrington with one battalion of the Irish gards was to be as this night at Warwick. Lord Forbus with his regiment was landed some days since and some of the dragoons also. I make no doubt but that good will protect me and prosper my arms both by land and sea. I need say no more to you, being sure you will do what is best for my servis, which you that are on the place are the only judges of, and must governe yourselfs according to the enemys motions and as winde and weather will permitt.

J. R."

[Endorsed] October 14th 1688.

Received the 16th, answered the 17th.

[1688,] Oct. 14th, Barbara Lady Dartmouth to Lord Dartmouth.—
"I am very glad to heare my dearest deare hart that you are so well and chearfull; it is all I have in this world to sattisfie my most dejected spiritts, in this mallancoly state I am in, expecting the Duch every moment to take us away, but all that I could freely submitt to, ware you not to beare the brunt of them first. Indeed when I think of that, it is insuportable to me, God Almighty in his infinit mercey deliver me out of it by bringing us together againe. I have sent Willy to pay his duty to you and if I had anythingdearer I would send it to you, as I doe my hart and prayers and best wishis for your safety."

1688, Oct. 14th, at 8 in the morning. On board the Elizabeth in the Hope.—Sir John Berry to Lord Dartmouth.

Can make no more haste if his life were at stake, for yesterday they were all day in mounting eleven guns on the lower tier; the carriages are all in an ill condition, not one that will fit, besides many of them doted and rotten and will fall to pieces upon any action. Mr. Musgrave called and had some account of it. Is of opinion that a better set of carriages should be ordered, but that shall not hinder from joining his lordship as soon as he has received the guns and shot.

1688, Oct. 14th, Dublin.—Herbert Aubrey to Lord Dartmouth.

Desires his Lordship's help in putting a younger son into service at sea, as a volunteer under some captain who will take care of him. He should be ashamed that the kingdom should be invaded and no part of his family have a share in the hazard and glory of its defence.

1688, Oct. 14th, Sunday night. Admiralty Office.—Samuel Pepys to same.

"Your Lordship's of the 11th haveing referred mee to a fuller account speedily to follow it, I have both that and another of the 12 now before mee, with a 3^d of the 13th the two last comeing both to mee this morning, within a very few houres one of another. To all which bee pleased to receive for answer the particulars following.

And that which I choose to begin with is, that alone or at least the cheife of what remaines to bee done for the putting an end to the care you principally lye under in reference to the dispatching forth of the fleete, namely the business of its victualling, concerning which soe many papers have been given already and more are like to bee for ought I see, both on one side and tother, without the satisfaction that should arise from them, till some expedient bee found to render them more effectuell. In order to which his Majestie was pleased upon my motion to have the Commissioners for the victualling before him this evening at the Cabinett, where I read to his Majestie (they present) the memoriall of Mr. Stevenson's which your Lordship now sent mee, with your oune notes upon it. To which the said Commissioners by way of reply presented his Majestie with some papers that carried with them such an account of the provisions said to bee now actually shipped off, for supply of your fleete, as could have no other present exception made to it, then that their former papers were in noe degree less cleare, and yet in noe wise (as your Lordship observes) made good by the state of provisions, as finde them in fact below. For the removall of which, observing a suggestion made by them, that their vessels might possibly not bee come downe, but may lye lingering on the way, tho' never soe timely despatched by them; I did for the cleareing all doubts, removeing all excuses, and putting both the King and your Lorship at once under a certainty in this matter, humbly move the King that Sir Richard Haddock or some one other of the Commissioners for the victualling might immediately depart from hence towards your Lordship takeing care in this way to scoure the river of all their victualling vessels that shall bee found any way truanting aloft, while they should bee below, and thereby enable himselfe at his arrivall with you, to present you not only with his accounts in paper, but with the only visible evidence of the truth of them, namely, the victuall itselfe spoaken of in those accounts. And this, my Lord, being most readily agreed to, as well by the King as them, Mr Fenn was appointed by his Majestie to bee the person that should doe it, the business of their office preventing Sir John Parsons his comeing, and the opening of the new Commission restoreing the old principall officers at the Navy Board to morrow morning, preventing Sir Richard Haddock. On which considerations (I say) his Majesty was led to direct this to be done by Mr Fenn. Not but that as soon as ever these gentlemen by the opening of their Commission shall be entered upon their business, I do not doubt but Sir Richard Haddock or some other of the present Board will be spared for it. Sir Anthony Deane continuing so ill, that I do not hear he has been able to go out of his chamber yet, my business not having permitted me to visit him this 5 daies. He is very much bound to your Lordship for your kinde wishes on his behalfe, and I'll see he shall know it; nor is it a matter of small griefe to him I am sure, that he cannot come and see you.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

As for the water boates, I did last night demand and received a written answer from Sir Richard Haddock and Sir John Parsons telling mee that they had hyred six vessels which will carry about 250 tons of water, and has already put caskes on board four of them, hoping that two of them might be dispatched full of water as this night, and two more a Monday night, and the remaining two to saile from hence on Tuesday night.

The King does not wonder to hear the poore smack men complaine of their voyage, considering what the weather has been, but is therefore glad of your findeing some other expedient for supplying their worke in intelligence.

Nor is your Lordship's motion at this time unwelcome to him, for the retrenching all unnecessary charge in entertayning of hyred vessels beyond what the use now requires for which they were 1st designed. In order to which, if you would thinke fitt to consider and give your advice how many and which of them would be convenient to be kept to waite on the flete as tenders, I would presently apply myselfe to the King for his ordering the residue to be called in and discharged.

His Majestie upon a very deliberate perusal of your two papers one of the divisions of your flete, and the other touching your line of battail, does extreamly approve of the same, commanding mee to tell you soe; and that as to what you communicated to him touching your present intentions of proceeding, hee will give you answer thereto himselfe, as having wrott it this afternoon to goe by Sir William Villers, and (as farr as I dare judge of it) you will readily concurr with him in the reasons of it.

If the winde has favoured, I doubt not but the Plymouth is now with you, and I hope the Pearle too, notwithstanding her mischance in strikeing upon the Spell. The Dreadnought also cannot certainly be farr from you, as I hope to morrow's list from the Downes will show.

I am very glad the Quaker Ketch is likely to be of service to you, nor is it the 1st time by a great many that I have observed a good officer while under command, made but an indifferent commander.

It may be convenient, that the yacht that brings this with Mr Grimes, Sir William Villers &c., might come up againe as soon as could be, in order to the bringing doune the new sett of watermen, that will begin to be imbarqued on Tuesday of the 2^d two hundred, the residue to be shipped on Thursday.

I will call upon the Navy Board for the hastening away of the slopps and signall-flags, together with the contingent money by the next conveyance, I having adjousted the business of the Deputy Treasurer, (at which alone it has stopped for some time) with my Lord Falkland, that is to say, by his being willing to give his deputation to your Secretary Mr Bowles, in case Mr Bowles accepts of it, as I presume (from your Lordship's late letter) hee will; soe as your Lordship will be wholly freed from any accomptableness in that matter.

The truth is, it is great pitty poore Captain Terwhitt should want his satisfaction his owne way, since it is soe honourable a one, and therefore noe less honorable in you to aide him therein as you propose.

Your Lordshipp notes very well, that the laying up of the 2 or 3 shippes you mention will unhouse some officers that should not at this time (could it be avoided) bee left on shoare. But (in Grace of God) they will not bee suffered to lye long there.

I am extreemly glad to finde you at soe much ease as you seem to bee (since Doctor Pearse's comeing doune to you) in the business of medicaments, and necessarys for sick men.

His Majestie approves of your sending Captain Shovell to the Gun-fleet, and the cautions you have given him.

I should bee much more concern'd for the Diamond's misfortune in her anchor, were it not to bee hoped, that the same weather has wrought the same effects in a greater proportion elsewhere.

His Majestie does at your desire dispence with the Boatswain and Carpenter of the Kingfisher's executeing their duties on shoare by deputy, to bee approved on by the Commissioners of the yard, for soe long time as they shall bee serveing your Lordshipp at sea. The like hee has done with the Boatswain and Carpenter of the Sovereigne, upon your desire on that behalfe also signified to mee by Sir Phineas Pett.

Hee is well satisfied also with the account you give of the proceedings of the Trinity-House in relation to the buoys.

The seniority of some Commanders not appeareing soe readily as I could wish, by reason of their haveing their 1st Comissions given them at sea, it will be a work of a daie's time to supply what is wanting therein. But against the very next I doubt not of being able to send it you.

You have certainly done exceeding well in garbling as you have done the boatswains' demands of boatswains' stores, as being a point of the last importance to the King, to have that well done.

Some other matter I intended to have added but am suddainely called away to the King, and soe must leave them to the next, which I doubt not will follow this to morrow."

An abstract of the above letter.

A list of the ships in the divisions commanded by Sir Roger Strickland, Vice-Admiral, Lord Dartmouth, Admiral, and Sir John Berry, Rear-Admiral, respectively, accompanies the preceding.

1688, Oct. 15th, On board the Pendennis in the Hope.—Sir William Booth to Lord Dartmouth. Was prevented from weighing anchor as he intended by the running away of the pilot sent him by his Lordship; but shall not fail to morrow to come down to the Nore if another pilot can be got. Never slaved himself so much in all his life, but yet wants several things which he has ordered to follow him. Two of his Lordship's fusileers ran away last with the long boat, and several seamen with them, which still heaps more and more sorrow upon him; has sent out warrants for their apprehension, with assurance of a good reward. Longs to be with his Lordship.

1688, Oct. 15th, Sir Theo. Oglethorpe to Lord Dartmouth.—Recommends the bearer, Mr. Corriton, whom he met on the road to Dover, and who appeared likely to be useful at this conjuncture to his Majesty as a bombardier, he having served at the bombardment of Algiers and at "Jenaway."

1688, Oct. 15th, On board the Tiger at Chatham.—Captain Matthew Tennant to Lord Dartmouth. Has got his ship ready to fall down to Tillingham to take in guns and powder, but is in great want of men. Begs the help of a tender to get his men together.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MEM.

1688, Oct. 15th, New York.—Colonel Thomas Dongan to Lord Dartmouth. Has done the King good service in annexing the six nations of Indians to the Crown that have before been a terror to all our parts in America, and has brought Canada to that pass, notwithstanding the forces which have been sent over, that they will be careful how they disturb the King's subjects here, unless highly pressed to it. One who came from the Governor of Canada to treat with the writer told him that it had cost their master 50,000*l*. He had incurred charges to the amount of 6,400*l*. only, which he was bound by word and honour to see paid; being removed from the government without any provision being made for the payment, he was kept in the nature of a prisoner there. During all the trouble had not lost a Christian or had a house burnt; but in Boston many were killed and taken prisoners, and the trouble not yet suppressed.

1688, Oct. 15th, Captain Edward Poulson to Lord Dartmouth.—His fireship the Speedwell is very badly manned, thirteen out of the twenty forming his crew being mere striplings and unfit for service. Gives name and description of each person, and desires an exchange.

A memorandum at foot of the letter in Lord Dartmouth's handwriting directs Sir Roger Strickland to examine this matter.

1688, Oct. 16th, Twickenham.—Lord Newport to Lord Dartmouth. Begs that his waterman Jeremy Holmes may be excused from service this time. Holmes, whose old father has been in many sea engagements, is his constant carrier to and from London, wears his coat, and without him he cannot well live there.

1688, Oct. 16th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"My last was of the 14th, which this comes to supply in one or two particulars which I was cutt short in by my being suddenly called for to the King before I could quite finish it, the first of which, and of what other particulars I have here to mention that have arisen since the departure of Collonel Legg with that letter from me yesterday, is, the giving you here inclosed a list of all the Comanders now serving the King at sea, whether in your fleet, or anywhere else, according to the seniority, in the truest order I can presently collect the same from the books remaining in this office. But at the same time I am from my own experience, upon searches heretofore made on like occasion, to observe to you, that though this may guide you very much, yet it is liable to as many defects as there may be gentlemen in the fleet, whose first commissions have happened to be granted them by Admiralls or Comanders in Chief at sea. Forasmuch as not thinking the registering of their said commissions could turne to any other use to them, then to the enableing them to receive their pay from the officers of the Navy, they have overlooked the bringing of them to be entred at the office of the High Admirall's Secretary, and thereby bereaft themselves of that meanes of proving their seniority, when, (as now) the same becomes necessary for them to have. But, my Lord, I doe suppose that none of them have been soe forgetfull of themselves as not to carry along with them their said Commissions, or authentick copies of them, for enableing them at any time to claime their posts; and therefore doe believe that upon calling for the commission of every man that shall except against the place given him in this list, your Lordshipp will be very well enabled to rectifye the same. If not, I know noe other way of doing it. Another difficulty indeed there is, but a difficulty that will (I think) not amount to much, in this matter. However, I will mention it to you, namely, that in this list seniority is given by the date of their commissions where

MASS OF DARTMOUTH'S
MSA.

I could come at it, but where that could not be, there I have been forced to doe it by the shipp's booke, giving only the time of their being entered thereon, after their commissions were given them. By which meanes a man with a commission of a later date, may be found standing there before another of elder date, but of later entry. However, my Lord, this value may be justly putt upon it, and soe farr be of use to you, that this ought to be thought good, in every particular where by better evidence it is not proved bad. And as such, and such only, I leave it to your Lordshipp.

However you seem by your last letters to think that Captain Constable's demand of more guns had been allowed, I did forbear the offering to his Majesty any warrant for the doing it, till I had had a returne from you, as verily foreseeing you would returne me the very same answer you doe; soe that it neither is, nor is likely to be done without some better reason shewn for it, then yet appears; the Navy Board (both late and present) being of the same mind too.

The King is not I doe assure your Lordshipp without the same thoughts and cares concerning Portsmouth, which he alwayes had, and such as suit with yours, and Sir Richard Beach's. Nor has he wholly forborne the posting some of his forces accordingly. But other places appearing to him more likely for assault then that, and considering it as impossible for him to afford soe much of his force to that place, as would be entirely sufficient to oppose such a strength as is now comeing against us, and at the same time retaine enough to answer his occasions elsewhere that he cannot leave unprovided for, he has been ledd by that necessity to doe as he does, in leaving Portsmouth and the Isle of Wight in the posture they are.

His Majesty is pleased to give away for the allowing of some seamen to the vessell which the Governor of Sheerness already has, but seems wholly unsatisfied with the other part of his demand as to two smacks, and a six-car'd boat, as believing that that garrison has as much provision made afloat for it, as the real service of it can require, in which I can assure you I am entirely passive, as not being informed enough either one way or t'other to interpose any advice of mine, either for or against it.

My last brought you an account of the state of the water-boates, though I hope you will receive a more particular one from Mr Fenn, who went away toward you yesterday.

My Lord, I observe what you say concerning the wants, or at least demands for supplies of stores, from your shipp's of the fleet. But it can be thought noe new thing to any one that has known the fitting forth of Fleets, soe long as your Lordshipp and my self have done. For I hardly ever remember a shipp that could not find something or other to ask within tenn days after they went out. Nor doe I ever expect to see it otherwise, till Comanders will think fitt to observe their instructions more then they seem to doe, in what respects the fitting of their shipp's forth; the consulting of their officers indents, and well examineing of their expences, being the only possible meanes of knowing what they should want. But in the absence of that your Lordshipp has done all that the matter can possibly bear in remedy to it, that is to say, in cutting of all superfluities in their demands, and reducing the same as near as may be to nothing but what you conceive necessary. In which his Majesty is most sensible of the good service your Lordshipp in an especiall manner does him.

The Navy Board will themselves (if they have not already) satisfye your Lordshipp about the slopps and signal flaggs by this very conveyance, I mean the Navy Yacht, which will bring you the first haul of the second 200 watermen, the remainder being to follow them on Thursday in the Kitchen.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

You will also with this receive from my Lord Faulkland the sume, (namely 1,500*l*.) appointed for answering your contingencies; my Lord sending down a servant of his along with it, in order to it's being putt into the hands of M^r Bowles as his deputy.

M^r Legg your kinsman was lately with me, acquainting me, as from your Lordshipp, that if it might be with my concurrence, you would propose him to discharge the office of Muster-Master of your fleet; to which without occasioning him any stay, I immediately gave him for answer, that he should be very welcome to me, soe farr as it becomes me to take to my self the interposing any assent of mine herein, as beleiving that he could not in duty to you, as well as wisdom to himself, faile in the exercise of his utmost dilligence in the discharge of his dutie therein. Soe that upon the first word I shall receive from your Lordshipp in favour of him for this employment, I will propose it to his Majestie, and not doubt of haveing a warrant to dispatch very soon to you; for the putting him in execution of the work: the present state of the fleet's manning, rendring it of use to the King that the same should be now done, they that come up from the ships saying, (and I hope truly), that you are now at pretty good ease in that particular, though I have heard of a very untoward accident lately befallen Sir William Booth, in three score of his men's being run away with his longboat, which I am extreemly sorry for, least the suddenness of your being called to sea (as the wind now sits) may prevent your haveing him with you; though I hope the turning over of Captain Gifford's company to him will give him a very good lift.

As to the great matter of the victualling; I cannot offer anything more then what I said in my last, and what will be better understood from M^r Fenn, whom the King has sent down to that very purpose, upon his and his fellow Commissioners declareing to the King at the cabinet on Sunday last, once for all, that the whole was now gone off, that the supplying of your whole flect required, some beer only excepted that they said should follow you.

The King had given the Kingfisher K^{ch} [Ketch] to a Captain Swaine, many yeares agoe a Lieutenant in the King's service, and many yeares before that (as the King was pleased to tell me) his acquaintance at sea, while in exile, wishing that he had a better command now to bestow on him. This prevented my being able to doe what your Lordshipp designed in favour of Captain Wild, whom I would with all my heart doe any good office to; and will endeavour it, as soon as ever I shall have opportunity. And now my lord, not knowing whether your stay may give me opportunity of writeing to you, before your leaving the river, I doe most fervently begg of God Almighty to protect and guide you, in your present undertaking, soe as that you may returne with the success and safety which all good men wish you, both on the King's behalfe, and your own."

An abstract of the above letter.

Enclosed is "a list of all his Majestie's Commanders in sea pay, with the date of their first commission as Captains or first entry on the pay booke." The list is dated the 15th of October 1688.

1688, October 17th. Admiralty.—Same to same.

"Since mine of yesterday by the Navy Yacht dispatched hence towards your Lordshipp with some waterman (about 60 as they tell me) and

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

contingent mony for the fleet, and herewith leaving nothing of your Lordship's before me unanswered, I have had the honor of yours of the 15th, advising of your being gone with the fleet from the Nore to the Oaze-edge, with a purpose of makeing the best of your way and wind for repaireing to the Gunfleet, and towards which Captain Wilford, by one of the same date (but in time probably later then yours) tells me expressly that you were then weighed with the fleet.

Relying upon which this is directed to you by the way of Harwich, as beliving that to be the much readier conveyance for it to you, the purpose of it being to advertise you, that I am just now come from attending the King, and receiuing from him this information brought him by a person of good understanding and full credit with him, who was at Helver-sluce on Sunday last. The purport of which is this; that the Dutch fleet according to the intelligence you had from your scout boat, confirmed to me last night by advice from Harwich, bought by a person that came over in a packet boat, and I beleive the same that you mention of Sir Roger Strickland's sending, went into Goree the same Sunday, and arrived at Helverslucce that evening, very much disordered with the late fowle weather, and particularly M^r Herbert's Shipp (the Utrecht, if the King remembers her name right) soe belaboured with the sea, that she had 7 foot water in hold, and with some difficulty preserved from foundering. That he saw M^r Herbert and Benting together upon the key at Helver-slucce on Sunday right; that M^r Herbert was then busie in getting another shipp the Maiden of Dort bought to the side of the Utrecht for the transferring into her the guns, stores, provisions and everything else out of the Utrecht. That the informant does beleive by all that he could hear or judge, that the shipp thus come in could not be putt into a condition of coming forth againe till tomorrow or Friday at soonest. That Herbert carried the flagg at the maine topp, namely the Holland's flagg. That they work night and day, Sunday and all, Munday last only excepted, as being a day of solemn fasting and prayer all over the provinces for good success to their undertakeing. Lastly, that (to say nothing of their other known preparations) they doe certainly bring with them an incredible number of coates and other clothing for the men they expect to raise here, and small armes without stint, even to the makeing it a difficulty to buy a hand gun, pistoll or sword in all the country, and are forced to impress even English shipping for want of imbarcations enough to be had of other nations; and after all this, a vast quantity of lime, to what uses your Lordship is much a better judge then my self.

This, my Lord, I thought fitt for me to give you the earliest advice of I possibly could, that you may want nothing (whether of more or less moment) that might conduce to the enlightning you in any degree in the posture of the enemy you have to expect. And this haveing said, as to the maine occasion of this express, I cannot omit to mention a particular or two in answer to your forementioned letter.

And first, that though I had noe comands at all from the King to mention any such thing to you, as declareing himself resolved to putt noe restraints upon you, by any advice of his in a matter where he judges himself soe safe, in his comitteing it entirely to your prudence, yet I cannot (as to my own particular) but think it fitt for me to observe to you, that upon my reading to him that paragraph of your letter that speaks of your purpose of proceeding directly from the Oaze-edge to the Gunfleet, he immediately said to me, I wish that may be soe well as his remaineing where he is at the Oaze-edge, for fear he should be surprized while there by the sudden coming of the Dutch fleet, as being a place he cannot well gett out to sea from, while the wind remaines easterly. But I know my

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSB.

Lord Dartmouth will consider all that. My lord, I dare not undertake that I have exactly repeated the King's words, but being as near as I can remember, and sufficient (I suppose) to lead you to judge of the King's thoughtfulness and thoughts herein, I did beleive it could be of noe injury, if it proved of noe use to you to know them.

I am very glad the Portsmouth ships are all with you, and should be much more soe could I have said the same of the rest of the ships that are behind, towards the dispatch whereof noe manner of sollicitude, night or day, shall be wanting in my part, though I must at the same time tell you that, unless there be another's guess spirit putt into some of their Comanders (I mean as to dilligence and concernment for the service, and not making of it as a by-business, annexed only as a convenience to their employments elsewhere), I shall bid good-night to the expectations of any good to the service from them, let you or myself make as much on't as wee please. This I have not failed to observe to the King himself, nor shall faile to repeat it, and repeat it (as I have done) where I have seconds much greater then myself to promote it. But for ought I see gentlemen are got above being jealous of any censure, or else they would not appear to the King every day at Court, complaineing that their shippes are not ready, while nothing is wanting towards making them ready but their own attendance on board, for but for that, I doe not know why your Lordshipp might not have had, or now expect every one of the shippes you have left behind you to be ready to joyne with you in three days, the victuallers being as well provided on their partes, as they declare themselves to be.

The officers of the Navy tell me that your Lordshipp haveing yours and Sir Roger Strickland had his before, the flaggs for signalls wanting for the Rear-Admirall are shipt away to him.

I am very glad of the satisfaction you have and further expect from the Quaker Kth [Ketch] and her Commander he being certainly a most proper man for the use you have found for him (it is the King's own note upon it) though he has made a very extra-ordinary Admirall in his last station.

Whatever remaines of provisions or ought also to be sent after you, I shall make it my daily work to forward the going of it after you.

I have said nothing to you (as I remember) since your departure hence, touching a Judge-Advocate, partly from M^r Crone's haveing long since to me taken upon him the care and charge of accomodateing that matter with your secretary M^r Bowles, to M^r Bowles's satisfaction, if it may be with your Lordshipp's, and partly from your being wholly silent to me in that matter, inferring from thence that M^r Croone had done accordingly.

I cannot think of anything more (needfull for me to mention), but that I take it for granted from my not hearing nor seeing of Captain Cotton for divers dayes he is busie upon some services that your Lordshipp has required from him, and which is what I have in especiall manner recomended to him, rather then in spending any of his time unnecessarily in his comeings to me, while he has any orders depending from you. Only I thought it fitt for me to say this that you may know the true reason of my haveing for some time said nothing to you of him.

One thing only more I have to close with (besides my repeated good wishes on your behalfe) which is that the new commission of the Navy (as I mentioned in mine of the 14th) was opened at that office upon Monday last, and the members thereof that day entred upon the execution of it, which being done I moved his Majesty yesterday for his immediate sending down the present comptroller or surveyor thereof (namely, Sir Richard Haddock or Sir John Tippetts) to you, for the rendring you what service you might stand in need of from them, and had his Majesty's present assent thereto, when immediately came the advice of your being removed from the Nore to the Oaze-Edge, and from thence weighed for the Gunfleet, which putt a stopp to the present executeing that proposition of their being sent to you. It being respited only till you come next in the way of its being usefull to you.

Nor will Sir Anthony Deane (notwithstanding his and Mr Hewer's not being of the present Board) be at all less forward or jealous then he ever was of serving you, whenever his health shall give him leave, which (thanks be to God) is very much bettered from what it was."

An abstract of the above letter.

1688, Oct. 17th, Defiance.—Sir John Berry to Lord Dartmouth.

"I have received your Lordshipp's order and the signalls which I am writeing over, and will give them to my division to-night. You shall have the draught of water of each shipp sent to you as fast as I can get it done. There is not any round shott come to the Elizabeth (nor sheet lead), she wants seventy-nine tons of beere and some bread. I have no flaggs to answer signalls, nor pendants; they have sent me only two blew flaggs, what they meane by that I know not. Wee want one new demy cannon carriage and severall axeltrees, all the spare ones being spent upon those that were broake."

"Postscript.—Since my writeing the above I have received an account of the draught of water, which I herewith send you, as also what provisions and stores they have on board in each shipp of my division and what smacks attend them, and what number of men on board, and how many allowed."

Enclosed is "an accompt of the condition of the shippes undermentioned (being in my division) as to their provision stores and draughts of water given by their respective captains." Also "an accompt of what small vessells attend upon the Reare-Admirall's division."

1688, Oct. 17th, Post Office, London.—Philip Frowde to Lord Dartmouth. This day the King in council ordered all the Charters of England to be restored as they were in the late King's time; made Lord Derby Lord Lieutenant of Cheshire and Lancashire, so Lord Powis and Lord Mullinax are out.

1688, Oct. 18th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"Haveing wrote to you pretty largely yesterday by an express to Harwich, to be sent from thence to you by a vessell to the Gunfleet, and therein answered your last of the 15th, and gave you the trouble of such other particulars as were then before mee to say anything to your Lordshipp upon, this trouble will be very short; though I would not suffer the Kitchen yacht, which brings you the remaineing part of the second two hundred watermen, to come away without a word or two for mee: The chiefe business of which is to convey to you a *letter of the 16th from Mr Sandford at Harwich, to Mr Frowd here, containeing some further particulars relateing to the Dutch fleet, which I thought fitt to convey to your knowledge, as also to bring you *two letters from Mr Withers, Clerk of the Fishermen's Company, giving me an account of the fishermen sent downe to the fleet, by which he would have it be thought that five hundred fifty two men have been supplied the fleet by the Company, besides those who have entred themselves as volunteers: the truth whereof your Lordshipp wilbe best able to find out (in this case, as well as in the watermen's) when the musters which you have ordered to be made of each shipp's company shall be returned you, with an account

* Not now with this letter.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

thereon of the fishermen and watermen sent to and found on board each shipp by the said respective Companys.

In which whatever objections your Lordshipp shall make (and I am affraide you'l have reason to make too many) to these papers, or the accounts from the Watermen's Hall, I shall take care to acquaint them with, and see what they have to say for themselves."

1688, Oct. 19th, Inner Temple, London.—Sir Richard Heath to Lord Dartmouth. Hears that the Lord Chancellor is to propose to the King four judges to be turned out, but no names are mentioned. Requests his Lordship to write a line or two to the Lord Chancellor or to whom he shall think fit that he (Heath) may be none of them.

1688, Oct. 20th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"By the Catherine yacht, which arrived at Greenwich very early yesterday morning, I have received the honour of your Lordshipp's of the 17th. tho' it was not sent me hither (through mistake I suppose, or forgetfulness) till to day morning; but I had the satisfaction last night to see yours to the King, and with great pleasure to observe your Lordshipp's content in the present generall state of your fleet, wherewith his Majesty himself also was pleased to express his no less ease and satisfaction. By the same conveyance, I meane Captain Clements, (who has the King's instructions to continue with you in the fleet, and follow your orders) I come now to acquaint your Lordshipp that I have troubled you with two letters since that of the 16th, which you acknowledge the receipt of. One dated the 17th, which was sent by express to Harwich to be from thence sent to you by a vessell to the Gunnfleet, and the other of the day following by the Kitchin yacht, both which are I hope ere this in your hands.

I am very glad to observe your Lordshipp's satisfaction in the business of the victualling and water-boats for the fleet, by Mr. Fenn's arrivall with the vessells from hence, with whose assistance I doubt not the same will be presently disposed of to the severall shippes in want thereof.

I have here inclosed you a copie of a letter which I just now received from the Navy Board, in answer to one I wrote them yesterday by Captain Wilshaw, upon his showing mee your Lordshipp's comands to him to repaire to you to the fleet, where I believe you may expect him, if not by this, by the very next occasion, and I doubt not but you will receive satisfaction from him in the business of the stores for the fleet yet behind, nor that your Lordshipp will please to have such regard to the advice of the Board for his being sent back to his station (where he has so much work upon his hands) as you shall think best for the King's service.

His Majesty was pleased to show mee your propositions touching your proceeding with the fleet, and to say, that he would himself give you what he thought fitt to observe thereupon, and in the meane time greatly to approve of your purposes to retrench his charge by the taking of some of the present tenders, and to command mee to signifie the same to the officers of the Navy, for their takeing care to see them paid off.

I am sorry to understand that the Navy yacht brought you no more than 55 watermen after the assurances they gave mee of a much greater number having been sent, by her, hoping the Kitchin is come to you, who the rulers tell mee bring you above one hundred more, and I shall take care to call upon them to make good yet this second sett of two hundred.

I have taken care with the officers of the Navy about slopps for your fleet, by the putting them upon serching all the towne, and takeing them up without depending only upon what can be had from their owne skoppseller, and I hope you will very speedily have a good account of that matter, as well as of the colours for your signalls which I am informed are on their way to you.

I am very glad your Lordshipp receives any satisfaction in the list I sent you of the Commanders, and desire you to doe me the favour to lett me receive the amendments you shall make therein, (by seeing the Commissions) in order to my rectifying the same in my books.

I thank your Lordshipp for the informations which your officer received from the masters of the two vessells the same agreeing very much with what his Majesty had received before from Harwich, and which I sent your Lordshipp a particular account of in mine of the 17th.

I am very glad to find the Pendennis and Elizabeth come to the fleet, and hope if the present winds continue, they may be followed in a few days by some of the shipp (at least) out of the river, whose dispatch I doe daily sollicite from all places, and I hope the 100 watermen which the King has ordered to be immediately putt on board the Swallow and Woolwich, will render them in condition to saile as soone as ever they gett them on board.

My Lord, I must pray your Lordshipp, as Master of the Ordnance to forgive me the discharging myself of what I cannot but hold my selfe accomptable for to the King in you as Admirall of his fleet, by observing to you, that however matters may be represented to you from the Office, there is not one shipp now behind you, from whose Comander I doe not daily hear of want of gunns, carriages, shot, or something else relating thereto, notwithstanding (as the captains averr) their gunners' dayly attendances for them. And yet I am doubtfull whether, after what I have heretofore noted hereon, and your answers thereto, I should have troubled you with any more mention of it, but that upon my attendance this morning at the Cabinet, severall of the Lords there, did of their own accords (without any particular introduction to it) enquire of mee before the King, whether the shipp that should now be with you, had all their gunns and carriages abroad or noe, recommending it to mee to inform myself thoroughly in it, for that their Comanders had declared to them their wants thereof at this day.

My Lord, the wind now is become such as I presume will carry you to the Gunfleete. Soe that till I hear further, my next letters will come to you by the way of Harwich, where (by the way) the King has, in consideration of the condition he takes his forces (both with you and at land) to bee at this day, thought fitt to stopp the male and to lay an imbargo, to prevent any intimation being given thereof to the Dutch.

I shall not loose one moment that I can (by any care of mine) save, in the sending after you the 6 shipp that are behinde; hoping that you would not want them long, would captaines bee prevayl'd with to make the King's worke their owne, which few of them will doe."

1688, Oct. 20th, Whitehall. King James II. to Lord Dartmouth.—"I was very glad to find by yours which I receued by your brother William that the fleett was in so good hart and so well mand. I see God Almighty continus his protection to me, by bringing the wind Westerly againe, which will giue you an oportunity to gett out, and hinder the enemy from coming ouer, and giue you an oportunity of wayting on them when they shall come out. I grow stronger euery day at land, by the Scots and Irish coming neare the towne, and the forwardnesse of seuerall the new raised regiments of horse and foott, so that in a very few days I shall be much stronger then I now am. I shall dispatch those ships which are in the

EARL OF DARTMOUTH,
MSS.

riuer as fast after you as I can. I haue not tyme to say more to you now, be assured I shall always be kind to you and yours.

J. R."

[Addressed.] For the Lord Dartmouth.

[Endorsed.] October 20th 1688. Received 21th, answered 22th.

1688, Oct. 23rd, William Penn to Lord Dartmouth.

"Noble Friend,

The bearer has given me a fine occasion to salute thee, which I do with all the friendship and affection imaginable, desiring God to direct and preserve thee with honour and success, if it must come to blood, which I heartily pray it may not be. This person was Colonel Streeter's son; he serv'd and was wounded at Tanger, a sober and brave young man. I need say no more to thee. Lett William Penn lieutenant of the Bristoll have thy favour, he is an honest true fellow as lives; he can obey, and is diligent.

Yesterday was a great presence at Whithall, the King, Queen Dowager, the Council, the judges, Lord Mayor, and aldermen, the Bishops and Lords about the town, of which the Archbishop of Canterbury and Bishops of London, Winchester, and Oxford, the Marquess of Hallifax and Lord Nottingham were some, appeared in the council chamber, where the birth of the Prince was clear'd by the ladies of the bedchamber, the women, midwife, nurses, phisitians, and lords present at his birth, to the great content of the company. The Marquess of Hallifax kist the King's hand, this fills all places at present, and so this letter (sic). Last night came an express from Rotterdam, with some difficulty, confirms their coming, and speaks of additionall forces to the former. One Greenwood is apprehended for dealing with the King's officers of his army to revolt; also Wicksteed for such practices, and words against the Lord President, for having a correspondence with the Prince of Orange; he is fled with his messenger. Excuse paper and character. Thy brother is just come, and I am leaveing the town, but everywhere am,

Thy affectionate true friend,

WILLIAM PENN."

1688, Oct. 26th, Whitehall.—King James II. to Lord Dartmouth.

"I had this day yours of the 24th from the Gunfleett, by which I was very glad to find you were gott thether, and in so good a condition. You will find by Mr. Pepys letter to you the intellegence I haue had of the Prince of Orange hauing sailed out with all his fleett and land souldiers on Friday last; what damage they receued by the storme of Saturday night last I do not yett know. The expresse who brought the letters tells me he saw some of them on Sunday morning at an ankor of of (sic) Scheuling, and that he heard as he past by Ostend they were on Monday seen still on the coast of Holland. You can best judg by the winds which haue been since, what they can do, and by that, how to gouerne yourself, in such a blowing season as this is, with regard to all things, if what is sayd of their coming out with so smal a quantity of victuals and water be true 'tis next to a madnesse. 'Tis likly before this getts to you, by your scouts or some other way you may haue had some fressher news of them; 'tis so late I can say no more.

J. R."

[Addressed.] For the Lord Dartmouth.

[Endorsed.] October 26th 1688.

Received the 28th. Answered 29th.

1688, Oct. 26th, Ship Rupert.—Sir William Jennens to Lord Dartmouth. With many expressions of loyalty &c., advises his Lordship not to wait the Dutch coming to him, but to take the opportunity of a fair wind and this light moon and go over to them; but if his hands are tied a securer place than the Gunfleet should be found for the fleet.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1688, Oct. 26th, Abstract of the numbers of all his Majesty's forces in England. The English forces are estimated at 84,820, the Scots at 2,981, the Irish at 2,816.

1688, Oct. 26th, A list of the Commanders of the several divisions according to their seniority as they stand in Mr. Pepys's list. Upwards of 50 ships are given with their commanders, arranged under Sir Roger Strickland, Vice-Admiral, Lord Dartmouth, Admiral, and Sir John Berry, Rear-Admiral.

1688, Oct. 26th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"I have two of your Lordship's before me, viz^t., of the 19th and 22nd, which the incertainty wee have for some time been wholly under, whether to direct our letters to you, (because of your dayly endeavours to be getting to the Gunfleet), has delayed your receiving answers to till now, that wee have good grounds to beleive your being got thither, from advice newly come from Sir John Lanier, of his haveing discovered you, and your fleet's being under saile hitherward on Wednesday last, from some part of the coast of Essex about St. Osyth's, where he was then viewing the country.

And in the first place, let me note to you that my last was of the 20th, by the Katharine yacht, which is now cleaning and fitting her self for her attending you, and will I presume be going toward you to morrow.

Very glad I am to find the Tyger and Swallow to be come to you, with the St Paul fireshipp. To which by this time I doubt not are added the Charles and Henry and Unity fireships from Portsmouth, they being both passed the Downes.

I doe assure your Lordship I doe with the same zeal continue to press the dispatch of the rest that are behind that I would doe for my victualls if I were hungry; and did it last night to the King at the Cabinet, by observing to him in these very words, that these delays are noe more then must be expected, while gentlemen are allowed to hold ships at sea, in commendam with troops and companies ashore, at a time when there is an equal necessity for their attendance upon both; whereto the King was pleased to answer me, by owning the same in reference to the York, as haveing forbid Collonel Delavall to depart hence till he gave him order; whereas had he been with his shipp all this while, I see noe reason at all why she might not be now with you, plenty of men having for some time been to be had in the west country; but for Collonel Hastings, he was pleased to tell me he had not for a long time seen him, but depended upon his haveing been for a great while past with his shipp; but by the King's command for my requireing them peremptorily to resort without delay to their charges, they will be gone both of them to day or to morrow.

Nor have I been less urgent with relation to the Newcastle, whose Comander did more then once tell me while ashore that he had some matters relateing to his land-charge, to look after there, nevertheless he has now for some days been (and for ought I have heard) continued on board. And this day sent me from the Hope his excuse for his not being gone further towards you, in a letter, whereof I inclose you a copie. Which I think I should not have troubled you with (haveing said soe much, and received soe much from you on that subject) were it not for the satisfying you, that I doe not omit to keep a checque upon the performances of the gunners, and that (as farr as wee may relye upon the Comanders) the complaint soe often made of want of dispatch from the Tower is not chargeable upon any want of dilligence or attendance on their parts.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

I have wrote to the officers of the navy about the colours for signalls yet unsupplied, and doubt not but you will receive very speedy satisfaction therein.

I shall expect the effect of the muster your Lordshipp tells me you have ordered to be taken of the watermen and fishermen, and shall take care soe soon as I receive the same, to have the Governors of both those companies called to an account for the execution of the King's warrants to them, with respect as well to quality as number.

Very glad I am that my report to you about Sir William Booth's mischance in the running away of soe many men in his longboate, exceeds the truth of his loss. But the number I mentioned was the number told me by the King himself, upon informations he had received from Comanders of severall of his shippes that came up from the Hope, where Sir William Booth lay.

I omit not to call frequently upon the officers of the navy for greatning your supply of slopps and bedding, pressing them not to tye themselves to what one slopseller can provide, but to make use of as many more as they can, his Majesty giving his ready assent, at this sudden juncture, to the late resolution of the councill of warr, for the present dispenccing with the 5th Article of the slopp establishment; though the same was originally provided upon considerations of very great weight for the benefit both of the King's service, and the seamen themselves, and necessary therefore to be revived as soon as the present exigence is past.

His Majesty does the like in reference to the other vote of the same councill about adding five men to the present complements of the fireships.

Upon my continueing to press the Navy Board to send one of their number down to your Lordshipp, I have lately received the inclosed answer thereto.

The like I doe in reference to another letter I have lately had from them, upon the subject of an irregularity comitted by Captain Tennant, at his bringing away the Tyger againe from Chatham, taking along with him some of the riggers of the yard, and doing it in such a manner as has occasioned some inconveniencies to the service, of much greater moment then the value of soe many men. The truth is, Captain Tennant's zeal in getting his shipp into condition to joyne your Lordshipp againe, was soe laudable, and indeed exemplary for others, (if they would please to take notice of it) and at a juncture wherein his soe doing was of soe much importance to the King, that it would almost have excused the carrying away a preist from the altar, and upon my soe representing it to the King, when I comunicated to him this letter of the Board's, and Sir Phineas Pett's, he was pleased to concurr with me in it; but at the same time to command my transmitting both the said letters to your Lordshipp for the satisfying you (as he is sure it will) in the necessity of having those yardmen returned to the yard, by the very first opportunity that you can find for it; it being his expresse pleasure that it should be done, and his command that I should report it soe to you, grounded upon the consequences this action has already drawn, to the prejudice of his service, and must in all likelyhood, both continue and greaten upon it, if these men should not be timelily restored.

I am to desire your Lordshipp to let me have the names of the Lieutenants you have appointed to the Portsmouth in the roome of Mr Killegrew and the Dover in that of Mr Hayes.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

It is time I doe acknowledge to your Lordshipp that a Muster-Master were appointed to the fleet, and that it's not being done lyes at my door, your Lordshipp having been pleased to decline the bestowing of that office upon M^r Legg, and recommending the choice of it to me. The truth is, my Lord, as there is hardly any one Ministeriall officer appertaineing to a fleet, the well performance of whose work may be improved to better use either to the Admirall or Prince then that of the Muster-Master, soe I must declare to you that in all my (near) thirty yeares service I never saw it, (or not above twice) soe executed, as that either one or the other had the fruit required from it, but has alwayes been made, either a by-work, given for the profit sake to somebody that had other business to doe, and could not, or to some other that for want either of experience, dilligence or interest, either could not, would not, or durst not adventure upon the executing it with the strictness necessary to render it effectuall. In consideration of which it is that I have been soe slow, and am not yet fully prepared to propose anybody for this employment. Not that if ability and authority alone were sufficient I should need to make any hesitation in it, after M^r Bowles (by his letter of the 17th ins^t) had offered himself to it. But knowing, by my own experience, what the work of an Admirall's Secretary is, with a fleet at sea, and confirmed in it by M^r Bowles' own proposition of haveing of it conferred on him, with an expresse condition of being at liberty to performe it by a deputy, I could not with any faithfulness to the King concurr with him in his desire, but am driven (much against my will) to signifie to him my dissent thereto by this conveyance, hoping that neither he nor your Lordshipp will take it in any ill part from me.

As for my acquiescing in the recomendation which M^r Legg gave me ground of expecting on his behalfe for it from your Lordshipp; though I shall alwayes own more then an indifferance for any that come to me soe recommended, yet I wanted not this consideration to incline me to goe further in his case then I could have in most others, namely, that as his dependance upon your Lordshipp's future as well as present favour, would necessarily oblige him to the being found faithfull and diligent in the execution of the first charge you had conferred on him, soe the credit of his relation to your Lordshipp would in an especiall manner support him in the execution of an imployment which in itself is gratefull to noe body, and least of all to them, in whose power it most lyes to render his work, (and consequently his life,) easy or uneasie to him. And to be plaine, where a Muster-Master has not that support, his service in his imployment, can never availle much; and where it does not availle one way, it must of course availle the other, in confirmeing the fraudes which he is not at liberty to prevent.

Which haveing said, and therein opened my whole thoughts to your Lordshipp on this subject, let me pray your Lordshipp to consider once more whether you may not furnish yourself out of the fleet with some body that may be unengaged in other work, and qualified in the other respects to doe this work as it ought to be done. For I doe declare to you that I doe not know any ashore that I can with satisfaction recomend to you for it. True it is, there is M^r Brown at Chatham, now purser of the Prince, bred under old M^r Gregory Clerk of the Checque there, a most ingenious active, and experienced man in this affaire. But whether he will accept of it or noe, if offered him, I know not, nor am I willing to propose it to him, till I know whether your Lordshipp may not please yourself where you are: which I should much rather desire. But if you cannot, and that you would incline to have mee propose it to M^r Brown, I will, upon heareing from you, immediately doe it, and give you his answer. This is not that I have not had very many applications made to me, and by people that think themselves extreamly fitt for it too, for my recomendations of them, to the King and to your Lordshipp for this employment; but I have seen soe much of the evill that has generally attended the slight performance heretofore of it, that I had rather the King should pay nothing for it's not being done at all, then pay a great deal for it's being ill done.

MAN ON DARTMOUTH'S
MSG.

That which remains, my Lord, is the letting your Lordshipp know that I find I have given noe small offence to some of the gentlemen in the fleet, and particularly Sir William Booth and Captain Skelton in my late list of senioritys, as thinking themselves not only to have great wrong done them, but as done with an intention of doing them wrong. As to the latter suspicion, I take the whole course of my conduct in the place I have the honor of serving the King in, to be proof enough, without any other protestations, to justify my unblameableness as to the point of doing any man wrong knowingly. But as to the former I must appeal to my letter which accompanied it to your Lordshipp, whether I did not there expressly provide against your takeing it as a thing given you for infallible, by telling you, that it neither was nor could be, for the reasons (one or more) therein given you; adding, that as you were to expect errors in it, soe those errors could turne to noe body's prejudice, since there needed noe more then the producing of the commissions for the doing themselves right against any such mistakes; and as a further proove of the simplicity of my intention herein, did since (in a later letter) begg you to lett me have the benefit of knowing the corrections you should make in it, that I might rectifye the same in my bookes. This, my Lord, I thought pardonable in me to give you the trouble of, that as either of those gentlemen or others shall think fitt to discover any dissatisfactions of this kind to you, you may be pleased to doe me the right you shall think needfull in it."

Enclosed in the above letter are a copy of a letter from the Navy Board dated the 22nd October 1688, signed by Richard Haddock, J. Tippetts, and James Sotherne, forwarding the letter of Sir Phineas Pett, dated the 19th of October; a copy of a letter from the same board dated the 24th of October; and a copy of a letter from Captain Churchill of the Newcastle, also dated the 24th of October, complaining of his want of gunners' stores and suitable carriages for his guns. The contents of these are sufficiently referred to in the above letter of M^r Pepys.

1688, Oct. 26th, "A list of the Commanders of the severall divisions according to their seniority, as they stand in M^r Pepys's list," being a copy of the second list of the date of October 15th above-mentioned, with a few unimportant additions.

1688, Oct. 26th, London.—O. Wynne to Lord Dartmouth. After recounting various reports about the Dutch and their intentions refers to the vain brags and assurances they had at the Hague, that Herbert should have undertaken to find ways to prevail with most of his Lordship's fleet to revolt to the Prince of Orange, that scout-ships should be sent among the fleet to disperse the declaration, and that the Prince was not to embark till Herbert had given an account of his success in this enterprise.

1688, Oct. 27th, Papers in Dutch and English giving an account of the Dutch fleet and forces.

1688, Oct. 27th, Sir William Jennens to Lord Dartmouth.—Cannot forbear giving his advice, although not sought for and he may be not believed capable of giving any. He divides his suggestions under seven heads, and in conclusion remarks that he hopes to hear that said of his Lordship that Cæsar said of himself, I came, I saw, I overcame.

1688, October 27th, Saturday morning about 2 of the clock. Admiralty.—(Duplicate, enclosed in the following letter of the same day, at 11 morning.)

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

"The letters whereto the preceding extracts relate came late this night by a messenger express from the Marques De Albeville by the way of Newport, from whence he sett out on Wednesday last. And though the Marquess appears in that of his to the King to have taken care for your haveing a duplicate of the same account forward directly to you wherever the fleet was by the postmaster at Dover as soone as ever his messenger landed there; yet his Majesty out of his abundant care would not wholly depend upon that certainty of its coming to you, but has comanded mee to provide the foregoing extracts of the said letters to be forwarded to you, one copie thereof by express to Harwich, and another by the Katherine yacht the next tide by sea.

And that your Lordshipp may want no degree of information that could be further had touching the condition of the Dutch fleet after the storme which these letters conclude with telling you of that fleet's haveing mett with on the Saturday night, the King has comanded me to communicate to you what he has by conference been able to gaine therein from the messenger that brought the packett, viz^t:

That part of the Dutch fleet (but how great a part he cannot say) was seen after the storme off of Scheviling the next morning, viz^t, on Sunday morning about 10 of the clock, multitudes of people resorting to the sea side to view it, they being then at anchor, and so he left them there on Sunday when he came away.

That all that afternoon and Monday and Tuesday there was very little wind stirring. That upon Wednesday, when he was at Antwerp, the wind freshened againe at N.W., and has soe for the most part continued ever since.

That a vessell that came from the Hollands coast to Newport on Tuesday last says that he left the Hollands fleet in the same place 24 heures before, being Monday.

Which being the case, namely, that such a part of their fleet was in Skeviling Bay upon Monday last, that they went away but with fifteen days' victualls for men and tenn for horse, and that we have not yett heard one word of them from any part of the English coast, the King seems from the best judgement he can make thereof, to think that they must be still upon their owne coast as haveing no notice where their rendezvous was to be, nor where else it could be as the winds have satt since. And in consequence of that he has sometime this evening seemed to think that it might not be unusefull (should the wind favour it) that the fleet went out to sea towards that coast to try whether any advantage might be taken of them while they lye there. But I find in this as well as in the last case I lately mentioned to you, he is jealous of any counsell that should be sent you from hence in regard that you at sea keep better account of the courses of the wind, and more true, then we either doe or can do here, so that he does rather chuse (after having thus acquainted you with all that has come to his knowledge of the present state and proceeding of the Dutch fleet) to leave it intirely to your selfe, to judge and doe what in your prudence shall appear to you most safe and most conducing to his service.

Thus farr I was gone when being towards 3 in the morning the King sent me the inclosed letter to your Lordshipp from himselfe with another from the Marquis De Albeville to him which came to his hands since I left him this night at midnight bearing date three days after the storme;

HARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

vizt the 2^d of October [mistaken, I believe, for November], in order to my sending you an extract of that also. Which I doe as follows vizt:

Extract of a letter from the Marquis De Albeville at the Hague bearing date the 2^d October [I conceive, I say, November], about 4 in the afternoon.

I sent an express yesterday to your Majesty with the news of the returne of the fleet in some disorder upon these coasts againe occasioned by a crewell storme which happened on Saturday night.

They will not acknowledge the loss of any of their shippes. 400 horse have been cast overboard, and some dead men.

The Prince will not stirr from the fleet, yet 'tis generally believed he was here privately yesterday.

At this instant being about 4 a clock in the afternoone one that I sent to Helversluce is returned and assures mee the Prince is resolved to sett to sea againe this day or to morrow at the furthest, because the wind is turned somewhat favourable. Another that I sent assures mee he cannot goe these six or seven days. That he does not find that they lost any of their shippes, but that the little vessells have been much disordered.

The Prince's continuieing there is a signe he intends to sea againe out of hand.

They all acknowledge to have lost many horses, and that there is great murmuring among the seamen and soldiers.

That some pilotts in their drink speak much of Sole Bay as the place they must land in.

Those on Herbert's shipp speak of Essex as being sure of that country.

That fifteen days more or less, nor 2 or 3 months could prejudice their designe.

This, my Lord, being the whole of what I have either by collection from the letters or his Majesty discourse to communicate to you by way of information, I leave the same with you, with my most earnest prayers to God Almighty for your happy application of the same.

My Lord, I have nothing to add as having long before the arrivall of this wrote you largely of this day by the way of Harwich by this night's post which this will probably overtake there. I received likewise one this night from your Lordshipp since my last mentioned letter was sent away, and indeed the time of night and the hast of this will not admitt of my answering of that now, but shall therefore be driven to respite it till the next conveyance, which I hope will very soone be by the Katherine yacht, as I have already said."

A duplicate of the preceding letter.

1688, Oct. 27th, Saturday, 11 morning, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"The inclosed is a duplicate of what I dispatched to you this morning between 4 and 5 a clock, by the way of Harwich, and comes by the Katherine yacht, with this only difference that that brought with it a letter from under the King's own hand, which this has not, the contents of it being, (as he was just now pleased to tell me) only some of his generall and usual caution to your Lordshipp with regard to the present season.

Nothing has arisen since the aforegoing to administer any further news or advice to you, more than that I just now find by the King's discourse with me, and directions for the imediate supplying of the Duke of Grafton with a shallop, that the Duke has his leave to goe on board Captain Hastings (sic) as a volunteire, to be present at what action shall arise at sea, with a promise (if he escapes it alive) to get on shore as soon as the Dutch can, and be in timely readiness to discharge his duty to the King there also.

I should now give your Lordship answer to yours of the 24th, which came to me late yesterday by Mr Fenn; but Captain Clements is in soe much hast for the saveing of his tide that I shall not have now time for more than to tell your Lordship that the King is perfectly satisfied with what you have done in relation to the cruisers, as also to Captain Frowd's lying in the Slad way, and the Trinity House ketch.

I have nothing to add neither in relation to the ships that are behind, but that I have pressed the King againe afresh this very morning to press away their Comanders, some of whom are still hankering here, (as I told you in mine yesterday), but the King says they are finally to be gone to day. All that is possible shall be done to hasten away the remainder of the slopps.

It is matter of very great content to the King, and not at all less to me, to observe your Lordship to be soe well satisfied in relation to the victuallers' affaire, who I assure you shall want noe callings upon from me for the dispatching away the residue of the beer, and going on with further preparations for future supplies of provisions suitable to your expence thereof.

I shall by the very first dispatch away muster-books to your Lordship, as being very glad of your haveing satisfied yourself in the choice of one out of the fleet, begging you to take in good [part the,]*] I gave you soe much of [yester]day on that subject.

His Majesty does approve of your Lordship's appointment of Mr Dawes upon Captain Shovell's recomendation to the Lieutenantcy of his ship."

The inclosure referred to in the preceding letter contains the following extracts with the preceding letter of Mr Pepys, of 27th October, about 2 of the clock, Saturday morning.

"Extract of the Marques De Albeville's letter to the King from the Hague of the 30th† October 1688 at 10 at night.

The Prince of Orange sett saile yesterday between 3 and 4 a clock in the afternoone with the whole fleet fifty-two men of war, and about five hundred other vessels great and small.

His army consists of 18 or 20,000 fighting men besides voluntiers and servants; he carrys armes for 12,000 horse and 40,000 foot.

The fleet lost many anchors and cables and rigging by the late stormes. Herbert's ship who is his owne Vice Admirall, has been opened in the middle and rendered unserviceable for the present by the stormes. Another shipp of 80 gunns was given him.

The most part of the fleet was seen this morning off of Sciviling and at 9 of the clock in the morning the wind turned contrary for them and continues so now I write to your Majesty at 9 of the clock at night.

The provisions have been much endamaged by the stormes and the Prince was so impatient to be gone that he would not stay for some regiments that had been sent for.

The fleet has now provisions but for 15 days; the horse have water but for 10;

Shippes will be sent with more fresh water after the fleet.

* Piece torn out.

† Note, i.e., the 20th English date.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

The Prince went on board a frigate of 28 or 30 guns at most, and with him Count de Nassow, &c.

Tromp refused to goe.

I have writt by this express to my Lord Dartmouth giving him this account and desired the postmaster at Dover to send an express with it to the fleet wherever it is.

A great storme begins which will certainly disorder the fleet.

This evening they have been but 3 or 4 leagues off the coast. They saile northwards.

This night's storme has certainly dispersed and indamaged the fleet.

Extract of another letter from the Marquis De Albeville bearing date the 31st to my Lord Sunderland.

The Dutch fleet (consisting of 52 men-of-war and makeing up a fleet of above 400 saile great and small) sailed yesterday [mistaken I believe, for Friday] about 2 or 3 in the afternoone, from the Flatts near the Brill with the wind at S.W. by south, and by that time they had been 2 or 3 houres at sea the wind came more westerly and has blowne all this night and morning hard at west, which may probably have done them some damage.

They pretend to land in Scotland as they most vulgarly give out, but Burlington Bay is the most probable place of landing in their reall intentions. If the wind comes southerly againe they are for the north; if northerly or north easterly they will be for the west of England and say they are equally provided for both.

They have above 20 pilotts with them, all English, amongst whome is a master pilott of Hull to whome they give a reward of 60*l.* sterling for his conduct of the fleet when they come upon the English coast.

There is one of their men-of-war stranded, and another disabled upon this coast in their going out."

1688, Oct. 27th, London.—Philip Frowde to Captain Frederick Frowde, Commander of the Ruby in the Gunfleet. Returning from Cheshunt he went to Whitehall this night where he heard that a courier landed yesterday, with two Flanders mails, who brought news from the Marquis d'Albeville that the Prince of Orange was on board and put to sea on Friday last was seven nights, but was again turned back by a contrary wind as well as by distress of weather, having sustained a very considerable damage in this fleet, with the loss of four hundred horses, which they were forced to throw overboard; yet notwithstanding he intends for England the next fair wind. Lord Sunderland is dismissed from all his employments, and Lord Preston is made Secretary of State.

1688, Oct. 28th, Sheerness.—R. Crauford to Lord Dartmouth.

Asks his Lordship to grant protections to two poor oyster drudgers of Queenborough, whom no one would press unless out of design or prejudice. Robert Sturcion, of the same town, at work under Mr. Richards on the two new lodgments, was pressed on Monday last soon after he left in the evening; begs he may be sent ashore again.

1688, Oct. 29th, Past 9 at night. Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"I am just now come from attending his Majestie at the Cabinet, where a letter to his Majesty from Mons^r D'Albeville of the same date, but a later hour then the latter of those two, whose extracts were brought you in my last of the 27th inst^s was read, giving him the last of the Marquis's intelligence for that day, an extract of which I have inclosed to your Lordship in his own words, his Majesty (upon my demand) telling me that he found noe occasion of saying anything himself to your Lordshipp upon it as being well assured of your haveing all the considerations before you that can be, upon the subject of this, as well as the last preceding advices, of your circumspection in useing of the same.

With which his Majesty ending I tooke the liberty to say that, though his Majesty had nothing, I had something to add that I was very sorry for. Upon which the King asking me what, I told him that after the satisfaction which I had raised to myself from the advice which I hoped to have given your Lordshipp by this post of the good effect of his Majesty's late earnestness in his hastuing away to their duties all the Comanders of the ships now behind, in the nearness I conceived every one of them were in to a condition of repaireing speedily to the fleet, especially the three that are to come from this river, I had found one of them, namely, the Comander of the S^t Albans passing his time within this half hour in his Majesty's bedchamber. Upon which the King with some surprize asked me what had brought him up from his shipp. I answered I knew not, nor did he think fitt upon his seeing me there to say anything of it to me, or soe much as take notice of his being where I might not well have expected him. But I added that I tooke it, and still shall take it (to make it at all supportable), that he had his Majesty's leave for it; though I observed to his Majesty that if leaves of that kind be signified to Comanders by any other hand then mine, while I have the honor of serving him in my post, it would be to noe purpose for me to pretend longer to give him the account I ought, and he expected from me of his fleet. To this his Majesty replied that he had noe leave of his, nor had he seen him, nor knew that he was come up, nor could imagine what has brought him up. I adventured upon this to say that since it was soe that a Comander of such a shipp could at such a juncture as this quitt his shipp in the condition she ought now to be in without the command, or at least the leave of his Admirall or superiour officer, I doe beleive it was more then was ever presumed to be done by my Lord Sandwich, Penn, Lawson, Harman, or my Lord Dartmouth himself, or even by his own self, without the leave of the King, his brother, dureing the whole time of his being High Admirall of England. Whereto the King returning that it was very true as to himself, and beleived it to be noe less soe, as to all the rest I had then named, he was pleased to add that the gentleman indeed was very stout, but that he alwayes feared he would never mind this business as it ought to be, but that my Lord Dartmouth was sollicitous with him that he might have a commission. I answered that it ill agreed with his being now in the bedchamber and my Lord Dartmouth at the Gunfleet expecting an action, wherein such a shipp as that might be of more service and importance to the Crown, then she might expect an opportunity of being againe in 20 yeares to come.

My Lord, I doe not think my self at liberty to mention anything said in that place on this occasion by any of my Lords. But I think I may be bold to say here what passed between the King and my self only, especially to your Lordshipp, both as a member of the same Board, and the person next the King the nearest concerned in the matter of it, and that matter it self so publicly scandalous (severall applying themselves to me in the bed-chamber at the same time, to know how such a Comander came to be there) that I had fully determined with my self to accost the King upon it in the bed-chamber itself at his coming out of his closett, had not his late stay there, with the generall officers, urged him to pass the chamber in great hast down to the Cabinet. For (in one word) I will have all the world to know that as considerable as it takes the profit of my employment to be, and indeed by the King's favour it is, it should not, were it ten times greater, purchase my staying in it one day longer then I can see his service thrive as well as I. And that I am sure it never can, from the moment that such a violation as this in the discipline and honor of it, passes uncensured.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

And soe I telling the King the discourse fell, with expressions on his Majesty's side of very great dissatisfaction at the thing, and resolution to take notice of it to the gentleman concerned accordingly.

My Lord, I have a great deal of reason to ask both yours and my own pardon at such a time as this, for my troubling your Lordshipp and myself, in a matter not soe immediately usefull to you ; but I must acknowledge the unnaturalness of finding a sea-comander soe farr to the westward ashore, whose charge required his being soe much further off upon a different element eastwards, and the King's service bleeding for ought he knew without him, shocked me to a degree that I will not disown, nor was his Majesty pleased to disallow, nor will I hope your Lordshipp, whose prosperitv I heartily wish, and whose success I shall, by all the ways I can, (and this among the rest) endeavour to contribute towards."

The enclosed extract of the Marquis D'Albeville's letter to the King is dated the 2nd November 1688 at midnight, and is as follows,

"A Roman Catholick pilot come this night from the fleet, assures me, that he was all day yesterday upon the vessell which carryes my Lord Macclesfield and severall gentlemen of quality and Ferguson, and that after that Macclesfield came from the Prince, he heard him whisper to others, for he understands English very well, that they must steer their course now towards the River Humber, if the wind will permitt it, that river being deep and navigable, and that current very rapid, and a sudden ebb, leaving the shippes adry, and will give a good opportunity to land, besides it's now concluded sayd he, that the farther the Prince landeth from your Majestie's army, he will have greater opportunity of strengthening his own interest, increasing his own army and lessening the King's in his march, for he findeth the King's army and interest do increase at present, and will obtain time to refresh his army, to disperse his manifesto to discuade the people to joine with your Majestie and looketh upon that countrey as disaffected to your Majestie and will come to his assistance, as he is assured of.

I have employed three of these kind of men, being pilots and fishermen, but Catholicks, to visit the fleet, which came into Helvete sluce and Goree; none of them have seen Herbert, and they heard some say he was upon the coast of England, with the squadron of shippes which had the van-guard, and which he commanded; and that makes the Prince to be in paine, and resolved to set sayle immediately, having seized upon all the hey that could be lighted upon anywhere round about.

The Prince gave orders this morning that none should absent themselves from their shippes: the reason he lost a week's time of fair weather, and of a favourable wind, is because the shippes of the Texell had not joyned the fleet, and that he did not find the fleet in that readinesse he expected; for which Bastiaens is to be disgrac'd if he be not so already.

The Boores are commanded to bring 1,000 horse to the fleet, for so many dyed and are found unserviceable; if the wind serves, the Prince will stay for nothing.

23rd October 1688, Old Stile.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

A ship full of souldiers is certainly lost, and to repaire that loss Baron de Frise's regiment in garrison at Maestrick is sent for to be embarked; the report of d'Humieres's marching towards Liège will hinder the parting with such regiments as have been at first before setting sayle desired.

They would have all perished, if they had not come back, and the Prince himself was in great danger, above 1,000 horse have certainly perished, or are unserviceable."

1688, Oct. 30th,—A list of the quarters of his Majesty's forces.

1688, Oct. 30th, (i.e. Oct. 20th, according to English reckoning). The Hague.—Marquis d'Albeville to Lord Dartmouth. Yesterday between three and four in the afternoon the Prince of Orange with his fleet consisting of 52 men-of-war and about 400 other vessels which carry over 20,000 fighting men, besides volunteers and servants, has set sail from the Brill and Helvetalsuys. . . . The Prince embarked in a small frigate of 20 or 30 guns, Count de Stynim (?), Monsieur Benting, Count de Solmée, and Monsieur Overkerck do accompany him on board the same vessel; Marshal de Schomberg is embarked upon such another frigate. Burnett is on board the vessel which carries the Prince his steward; and Farguson is on board the vessel in [which] my Lord Maccenfield and other English are embarked. Your Lordship's very good friend Mr. Herbert is Vice-Admiral, his ship carries 70 or 80 guns. They have provisions but for 15 days, fresh water for the horse but for 10 days; in all appearance they sail towards Burlington Bay. One Captain Bontiers undertakes to burn your Lordship's ship, that shall be his sole study and enterprise.

1688, Nov. 1st, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"I would not omit to take the opportunity of the Cleaveland yacht's returne to acknowledge my receipt of your Lordship's of the 28th, with a postscript of the 29th inst^t, as well as that brought by the said yacht of the 30th, giving me an account of your being then gone out to sea from the Gunfleet to look out the Dutch fleet, which I pray God to render propitious to his Majesty and the Government, and noe less safe and honorable to your self. And this I may say as a good omen of it, that however the affaires of his Majesty's land forces may have advanced (which I am wholly a stranger to), it is imposible for anything to have proceeded with more satisfaction to his Majesty than the whole business of his fleet has to this hour done under your conduct.

But it graives me to the heart to see you bereaft of the aid of those 3 ships still in the river, which nothing that I know of can possibly excuse your want of, and now that I think two of them, namely, the Woolwich and Newcastle are at length gott into a condition of being gone, the wind is lost that should have carryed them to you, for the third, my last told you too largely my observations concerning her, to the rendring it very hard for me to judge when it is that his Majesty is to expect the benefit of his care and charge in the encourageing of gentlemen to the applying themselves to the service of the sea, upon account of the qualifications to be hoped for from them superiour to those of the plaine tarpawling; if not at such a pinch as this, wherein the very being, as well as honor of his Crown and Government is at stake.

The King does entirely approve of your appointment and choice of the frigats you nave sent to cruise, as well as of the determination of the council of warr, in reference to the generall proceedings of the fleet;

HARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

not without takeing notice of the short note you gave concerning Sir William Jennens's singularity therein.

Nor is it of small satisfaction to his Majesty, in the midle of his manifold cares, to find your Lordshipp in your severall letters to himself, as well as those to me, speaking with soe much satisfaction of the condition of the fleet, and resolutions of it's comanders.

The King does impute (as you desire) Captain Tennant's late irregularity in the pressing away of the riggers to his zeal to get himself out to sea, and soe farr excuses it. But is very earnest, as in a thing of mighty moment to his service, that the riggers be discharged. Which since he is out of your Lordshipp's reach to see effected, by his being gone from you, I am comanded by his Majesty to supply it by a letter to him from hence.

Mr Beaumont (whom your Lordshipp has appointed Lieutenant of the Portsmouth) will be hastned to his charge.

The King has comanded me to conferr (which I shall speedily doe) with the Navy Board, about what you propose touching the re-erecting the yards at Harwich and Sheerness and provideing of a store shipp for the fleet. Of which I hope to give you some good account in my next.

The King has been all along soe much of your Lordshipp's mind, and though[t] full of it, touching the keeping of trade on foot, at the same time with the filling forth of his own shipp, that from the beginning (as your Lordshipp knows) he tooke care that ships outward bound should not be interrupted in their manning. Nor does the present embargoe extend further than to Holland and Flanders, and that to continue noe longer then he and his ministers shall judge the reason to continue for which they laid it, namely, the preventing of intelligence, and the going of vessells over for supplying the present great want of imbarcations, which the Dutch are said at this day to lye under. And for passes and protections, they will cease of course, especially if the ships that shall hereafter be sett out find noe other expedient of manning themselves then those that are now behind in the river are dayly complained of to doe, namely, out of merchant ships outward-bound upon trade, with his Majesty's own hand to protect them against pressing. But how that will consist with what your Lordshipp moves for, in favour of the King's revenue, is easy to foresee.

Lastly, your care in sending in the Sampson fireshipp to the Gunfleet for preventing any mistakes by the removall of that buoy, and for advertiseing Sheerness of the approach of the Dutch, in case of your Lordshipp's missing them, (which your cruiseing frigats must in all probability prevent) is observed by his Majesty, and very well approved of, as is every other stepp your Lordshipp has hitherto made in this his service."

In a postscript Mr. Pepys adds,

"I had omitted to observe to your Lordshipp that according to your last advice touching a Muster Master, and your desire therein about his instructions and muster-booke, I doe herein inclose you a* draught of the instructions for that officer, and by the same conveyance a supply of muster-books for him, sent me from the officers of the Navy, to be recruited with more, as these shall be spent.

You may please also further to know, that the King has a few days since ordered the Portland to be fitted forth, and given his commission for her to Captain George Aylmer, and I have some reason to beleive

* Not now with the letter.

the like will be this day done for the Phœnix, to be comanded by Captain Gifford."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1688, Nov. 1st, Whitehall.—William Bridges to Lord Dartmouth.

Gives details of his discourse with the King about the state of the fleet, &c. The Lord Chancellor, whom he was to wait on with his Lordship's letter, has been for two or three days, and still is, so ill as not to be spoken with. Had dined with Lady Dartmouth and his Lordship's fireside that day; his son will earnestly expect his return, being made to believe that a diligent regard to his book till then will prevail with his Lordship to take new resolutions somewhat in favour of his inclinations.

1688, Nov. 1st, Tower.—Sir Henry Shere to Lord Dartmouth.

Expresses his shame and grief at being rendered so incapable of serving his Lordship and the office in so important an occasion; though he has lost his fever, he cannot say he has yet found his strength. Was received very graciously by the King last night, and asked if he were in a condition to march with the army; he assured his Majesty that he was, and accordingly his commission was ordered to be drawn. Mr. Musgrave is very punctual in office affairs.

1688, Nov. 2nd, Whitehall.—O. Wynne to Lord Dartmouth.

Various advices from abroad of the shattered condition of the Dutch fleet. The Marquis D' Albeville says, in his letters of the 26th ult., that their fleet was in such a necessitous and even mutinous condition that the Prince durst not stir ashore, and that it could not be got ready to sail away in 10 or 12 days time; yet a vessel came into the river yesterday and reported to have sailed several leagues along with the Dutch fleet, which seemed to steer its course northward, though the men-of-war seemed to make more towards the Channel, with a design, perhaps, to find out the King's fleet. Hence an early action between the fleets is expected; indeed, some people coming from Edmonton and neighbouring places say that the noise of guns was heard all yesterday and again to-day. The writer has been appointed, owing to recent changes, to be in Mr. Mountstevens's room, concerned in the management of the office with Mr. Bridgeman.

1688, Nov. 3rd, Past midnight. Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"Just now, beeing about 11 at night, I have at the same time received an express from the Dounes, and a message from the King, from whom I have been shewn another from Dover, the former bearing date at 11 this morning, and the latter at one this afternoone, both notifying the appearance of the Dutch fleet and its being gone westward. Of which, though it be well to be hoped that by some or other of your scouts or otherwise your Lordshipp has had soe early advice as that this might have been spared. Yet such is his Majesty's care in the matter, considering the weather wee have had, which may have prevented the intelligence expected from them, that he is pleased to require my imediate sending to you copies of the forementioned papers which I have here done, leaveing it to your Lordshipp to make the best use you now can thereof, in case it should have been his and your misfortune not to have had earlier notice of their passing by. I left his Majesty just now at my coming from him in council with his Generall Officers, disposing of matters for the hastning away his troopes as fast as may be towards Portsmouth. To which place he seemes to be at this present fully persuaded of the Dutch fleet's being directed, the same being not a little surprizeing, after haveing, by a succession of intelligence

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

for severall days together been wrought to a strong beleife of their being designed for Scotland, or at least northward, if in England.

Now that which I have to say more to your Lordshipp is, that the King seemes to be under a great deal of care and apprehension of the consequence of his fleet, or any of his shippes being obliged to come into this river while the buoy of the Gunfleet is up, and the vessell droven away by the late fowle weather that was appointed to remaine there to advise shippes of it, as I this day understood it to be by a letter of yesterday's date from Captain Wilford at Sheerness, an extract of which I also inclose you. Your Lordshipp will be pleased to doe what is in this case to be done for preventing any mischeife therefrom."

Enclosed in the above letter is the following extract of a letter to Mr. Pepys from Captain Tennant, Commander of the Tiger frigate in the Downs:—

"Just now I was forced to open my letters againe, by reason wee espie a great fleet on the backside of the Goodwin, not knowing what they are, standing to the westward, but believe they are too many for our fleet."

Also the following copy of a letter to Mr. Frowd from Mr. Bastick at Dover:—

"Wee now discerne the Holland's fleet very plaine just off of this place, saileing to the westward. They are about halfe seas over, and are soe thick there is noe telling of them, but 'tis judged above three hundred saile, others say 400 saile; they reach from the westward part of the toun to the South Foreland. We cannot discerne their colours."

Also the extract of a letter from Captain Wilford, the contents of which are sufficiently stated in Mr. Pepys' letter.

There is another copy of the above letter with its inclosures.

1688, Nov. 6th, Admiralty. Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"Though all that know your Lordshipp, and above all the King, is abundantly assured, that noe part of your disappointment in relation to the Dutch fleet can be charged upon any thing with in your power to have prevented; yet the consequences of it in the said fleet's passing without the least interruption to the port they were bound for with their whole fleet, are too visible, and of too great moment to escape being lamented by all, and very certaine I am, by none more then your selfe. For whose particular information it is, that by the King's especiall command I send this, in order to the giving your Lordshipp the latest account wee have of the proceedings of the Dutch, which is by a letter from the Custome house officer at Dartmouth, reporting to us their appearing before that place yesterday morning, with an additional information come hither just now from Lyme, to both of which (for savinge time) I choose to referr you, as you find them inclosed. Upon which I have nothing in command to say to your Lordshipp by way of comment, saveing that since it has soe unhappily fallen out, that the Dutch are in all probability at this hour peaceably putting on shore their whole land force, and baggage, soe that there is nothing left within the power of your Lordshipp to obtaine upon them, in reference to the landing-part, and that consequently their men of warr will now be at an entire liberty to receive or attack you, as they shall see fitt, the King doubts not but you will carry in your mind the importance of manageing his fleete under your command in such manner, as may be most effectuall upon the enemy, with the least exposure that may be of his said fleet."

Enclosed is the following copy of a letter from Mr. Thomas Bowyer, Collector of Customs at Dartmouth, dated November 5th, at 9 in the morning.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

"This morning being very hazey, foggie, and full of raine, cleared up about 9 of the clock, at which time appeared the Dutch fleet consisting of about four hundred or 500 saile as neare as we can guess, all standing to the eastward with the wind at W.S.W., a moderate gale. The capital shippes are off of Torbay about four leagues from the shore, the small shippes and flyboats between the Start and Dartmouth, about a league and halfe off. Which is the fullest account to be yet given of them."

Also the following report of a person from Lyme.

"He saies that about five of the clock yesterday being the 5th of November in the afternoone he did himselfe see about one hundred and forty of their shippes and vessells goe to Exmouth, in order (as is believed) to the putting on shore some of their land men and baggage there."

Accompanying this letter is the following paper headed "Our last Intelligence from the West."

"Sir Edward Seymour, November 5th, from Berry saies, That this after noon there is come into Torbay a great fleet of Dutch and are come to anchor there.

From the officer of the Customes at Brixham November 5th 1688. About three hundred saile of Dutch came just now into Torbay, severall of them landing souldiers there, and the Prince himselfe going on shore. The rest of the souldiers and horse will if they can be landed this night, there being about 5 or 600 a shore already and are still landing.

From Sir Robert Holms November 5th at 7 in the evening, confirmed by another at 10 the same night.

Three Dutch shippes are come to St Hellens of about 40 guns apeice, some of whose men whent a shore but staid not long. They told the country people that their fleet was gon to land their men in Lyme bay and after intended to harbour their shippes here, where they designed to have their provisions on faire termes or that they must have them by fowl."

With this letter is also the following :—

"From Sir Robert Holms from South Yarmouth November 6th at two in the morning to my Lord Preston.

I shall not be able to secure this island, more then the two little forts, and them but for a little time. Part of the Melitia is growne mutinous already, refusing to follow their comandars orders, as I am afraid they will doe everywhere, where his Majesty has occasion to call for them. Yarmouth and Hurst I putt my stress upon, and will defend both to the last. I hope his Majesty will give me some speedie releife. For want of one troop to keep this Militia in awe, this island will be lost without strikeing one stroke for it. God knows how I shall be dealt withall by this Melitia which I have drawne into Yarmouth and Hurst, for want of 100 men to keep them in aw."

To this Mr. Pepys has added.

"This I give your Lordshipp for your owne use only, it being what I thought not amisse for your Lordshipp to have for your private knowledge, thought [sic] unfitt for more."

Two other copies of the above letter and its enclosures, and another copy of the paper of intelligence from the west.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MS.

1688, Nov. 7th, near 4 a clock after noone. Admiralty. Same to same.

"I have received by the hand of Captain Croft this morning your Lordship's of the 5th of November from off of Beachy, with another to his Majesty, which he has been pleased to communicate to me of like import. In answer to both of which I might almost refer you to what I sent you by last night's post by way of Portsmouth, in expectation of your Lordship's being possibly soe farr advanced as to give you opportunity of sending into St. Helens for intelligence; and by Captain Croft's report (who tells me he saw you with the fleet (as near as he could guess) about the length of the Isle of Wight about 5 in the afternoon yesterday) my letter by last night's post may come very timely to your hand. And if it doe soe, your Lordship will find that even before this of yours got hither, the King had been pleased by me to signifye his full satisfaction in beleiving that you had done all that a prudent and careful Admirall could doe for prevention of the disappointment which has hapned to him and his affaires, in your missing of the opportunity of putting a stopp to that speed wherewith the Dutch fleet have succeeded, in getting without interruption to the port they desired. Nor will you want the further content of seeing that your and the councill of warr's determination touching the future proceedings of the fleet, and their cautions against exposinge the same, had his Majesty's concurrence before his knowledge thereof, by my communicateing to you from him the very same cautions and advice, as that which was the very first thought that occurred to him after the notice given him of the Dutch fleet's being now discharged of its care in attending the great traine of small craft they brought from home along with them.

But notwithstanding what was thus wrote you last night, I am againe comanded by the King to re-assure your Lordship of the former part, with yet greater satisfaction from what he now has received from your selfe of your incapacity of doing more in that exigence for his service then you did, considering the place in which you were then hooked, and the wind that then blew to the benefit of the Holland's fleet, and disadvantage of yours.

Nor is it otherwise with his Majesty in the other matter relateing to your not exposinge of the fleet, under the present difficulties his affaires are reduced to in other respects; but on the contrary commands me to recommend it to your Lordship to putt in execution what himself had soe advised, and you with your councill of warr had of your own accord soe concurred with him in, with these only two further notes which I am comanded to lay before you, (with the same tenderness I have heretofore done others), not by way of injunction to rule your thoughts, but to enlighten them only by laying before you his. And they are these, first, whether you may not think it of use that 2 or three, or what other number you please of your 4th rates be sent into and left in Portsmouth Harbour, not soe much for any particular and certaine benefit that he can foresee they will be of to him in case of the Dutch fleet's cominge either to St. Hellens, or makeing any nearer attempt upon Portsmouth, but from the possibility he judges there is of some occasion or other hapning for the sending forth, or otherwise makeing use of a shipp or more of that rank, which he conceives by the advantage of the night, or otherwise they might be able to answer such an occasion in, notwithstanding the Dutch should have a squadron lying at St. Hellens. The other is, that there seeming nothing (as matters now stand) to remaine soe much the subject of his Majesty's care and yours, as the forementioned safety of his fleet, and that of this river and the Medway, and that as the wind may be, the safety both of one and t'other may be exposed, should you come to lye in the Downes, he offers it to you to consider, whether there be any place now to be chosen as proper, to answer in all probability both these ends, as the Buoy of the Nore.

This my Lord is what, and the whole of what I have in commission to say to your Lordshipp in reply to your forementioned letters on this unfortunate occasion; saving that I shall take the liberty of adding, as well by way of news, as for confirmeing you in what you have said touching the designe of the Dutch of comeing at first into the river, had they not understood your lying at the Gunfleet, that one of their small pinks, and a fishing boat haveing lost company of their fleet, knew not where better to goe to look it, them by comeing into this river, where they were yesterday in the evening seized with 24 horse aboard a litle below Holehaven by Captain Hastings; which by the way lets you see, that your three lagg shippes were yesterday still, where they have soe long been; but I make noe question but this day's wind will carry them towards you;

What remaines, my Lord, is the giving you the substance of our freshest intelligence from the West; which I doe, in the paper enclosed,* whereto with all possible respect and good wishes referring your Lordshipp I remaine, your Lordshipp's most faythfull and most humble servant."

Another copy of the above letter.

1688, Nov. 7th, On board the Cambridge.—Sir Roger Strickland to Lord Dartmouth. Removed yesterday into this ship, but finds it not only intolerably ill manned but very foul and ill-fitted. Cannot hope to do any service in her, and therefore begs leave to transfer himself, officers, and Mary's crew, to the Kent, now fitting at Chatham. To add to his misfortunes, the Rupert and the Dreadnought are also weakly manned, leaky, &c., none of his division is indeed fit for him to engage in. Till he can remove into the Kent, thinks it advisable to continue in the Mary, she being so very well manned (though crank) (sic).

1688, Nov. 8th, Deal.—Lientenant Wm. Wright to Lord Dartmouth. Details his proceedings at Sandwich and Ramsgate in obtaining brimstone and rosin, and in pressing ships for service. Has found only one pink of about 160 tons, which has been appraised by Mr. Long the carpenter of the Kingfisher and by another carpenter of Ramsgate, but they could not agree as to its value. Is going next day to Dover to take up what ships can be procured there, in obedience to his Lordship's warrant.

1688, Nov. 8th, $\frac{1}{2}$ past 11 at night. Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"Your Lordshipp's of yesterday from the Downes came most welcome to my hand by Captain Rooth with another to his Majestie about five this afternoone, and this with the more satisfaction in hopes that you by or before the same hour had met with a duplicate (which in prospect of your comeing I directed thither last night) of what I then dispatched to your Lordshipp by the hand of Captain Croft, with another duplicate of it (for sureness sake) to Portsmouth. After which I verily persuade myself I need not to repeat anything towards the

* Note.—Probably the paper now with the previous letter.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

confirming you in what I then and before had assured you of touching the King's most entire satisfaction in the whole of your Lordship's conduct, both before, in, and since the passing-by of the Dutch fleet, and the impossibility you were then under of preventing it.

I shall therefore need noe more to mention that doubt, but proceed to tell your Lordship, that this being a very busie night with the King, he has commanded Captain Rooth, to stay and attend him to morrow, leaving it in the meantime to me by this post to lett you know, that he does in particular approve of what you have done towards the providing of six fireships to be added to what you have from the severall places in the neighbourhood to the Downes. But forasmuch as I am very fearfull of Lieutenant Wright's not being able to find vessells of burthen enough to answer the end of fireships at sea, and| considering of how much less able fireships may be of more than ordinary at this time, I have (without any stop to be made to those your Lordship is about) moved the King this night at the cabinet and provided his warrant to the officers of the navy for their imediate takeing up in this river six more, and fitting them in all respects for the sea, which and the others, joyned with those you have, and the Mermaide, (which is under dispatch, but has a great deal of work to be done to her) will I trust put your Lordship into a very good condition, both of offending and defending, as under the present juncture you may easily suppose occasions of employing them.

How farr my hopes prove true in my last night's letter to you in relation to the other two of your absent ships I know not, but to my great surprize I find I was out as to the S^t Albans, which notwithstanding the westerly winds that wee have had for two or three days past, and more particularly very fresh all yesterday, I find she sailed from Longreach but this morning. But not to trouble your Lordship or my self any more in relation to them after what I have already said I shall only add that it shall be noe fault of mine if a very strict account be not (whenever a proper season shall happen for it) required of the reason of those shippes soe long absence from you.

My Lord.—It's late, and I have much to doe to night, and therefore I shall begg your excuse for my respiting the remainder of what I should say further to you in reply to your Lordship's till to morrow, only by way of news, the freshest tideings wee have out of the west is of yesterday noone from Exeter which came this night while the King was at the Cabinet, with a letter of great loyalty and duty to the King from the magistrates thereof, and willingness of expressing it as farr as they are able, but with noe hopes of any success from any force of their own (and I think they have none of the King's) against an army, part of which they depended upon haveing (I find) with them last night. The Prince is said to have been on shore ever since Tuesday, and to have lodged that night at Sir William Courtney's house at Powbrocke or some such like name. But the messenger said he heard that Sir William Courtney himself did not see him. The messenger adds that the only man of quality he saw and knew was Sir William Waller; that the high ways as he went were full of their soldiers, that he did not at his comeing away hear of any persons of condition comeing to them whatever they may doe, but says that their great guns were, as he understood, to be carried to Topsham for their more comodious landing there. God grant a good end to all."

1688, Nov. 8th, Thursday night.—Same to same. (Holograph.)

"Notwithstanding all that I have endeavoured by my letters to doe to prevent it I am yet under some feares of your takeing too much to heart your late misfortune (for soe I must call it) in misseing of the Dutch fleet, and the opportunity you and all the King's friends had promised themselves, of your rendering his Majesty some considerable service upon them. And this, (my Lord), I am greatly concern'd to remove your doubts in, as thinkeing your present Province too full of occasions for just cases and anxietys to need to bee aggravated by mistaken ones. I did therefore this evening after Councell take an opportunity of telling the King what I now say to you, praying him to enable mee from his owne mouth to lett you know the truth of his resentments of his late dis-appointment with respect to your Lordshipp. To which hee was for answer pleased to say that hee would have mee assure you that he is to the last degree satisfy'd that nothing in [the] world could have been done more then you did in that exigence for his service, and that however foolish land-men or ill-will'd seamen may take the liberty of censuring, nothing is more plaine to him then the impossibility of your serveing him better in this occasion (as circumstances of weather and wind then stood with you) then you did, and therefore would by noe meanes have you give way to any mistrusts of the contrary on his part, or regard to the ignorant or unjust censures of others that cannot hurt or lessen you.

To this effect it was that his Majesty was pleased amply to expresse himselfe to mee in your favour and right, and in a manner that I am sure he was in earnest in, and do beleive will (if hee can gett time) bee confirm'd to you to morrow under his owne hand.

Therefore pray be fully at ease in this matter, depending upon't that if I knew the least cause for the contrary I would tell you of it. For soe upon my fayth I would.

Remember, too, how much worse you were once used even where you were successfull, I mean in the businesse of Tangier; and (withall) how little you were the worse for it within ten days after.

Once more therefore, pray bee but at peace with your selfe, and I dare answer for everybody's satisfaction else that you need care for."

1688, Nov. 9th, Admiralty.—Same to same.

"You have I hope ere this mine of last night, brought by him that you employed at the same time with Captain Crofts towards Portsmouth. Since which Mr Hodder is arrived with his bagg of letters, very welcome to the King, in reference to many of them, but most of all to the papers which you inclosed in mine with your letter to the King for the light it gives him touching the number and order of both their land and sea-forces. The latter of which he has been pleased to comit to me to examine and report to him what I shall find usefull or otherwise observable therein. That which respects the land-army he keepes in his own hand.

As to the rest which were numerous, they are lodged with my Lord Middleton to be more strictly looked into, after having had some of them, whose addresses were most known, opened and read this evening at the Cabinet.

What (if anything) I shall collect of the maritime part worthy notice I shall communicate to your Lordshipp.

In the meantime, my Lord, it being reasonable to give Mr Hodder your messenger this night's respite, to repose himself, I reserve my generall answers to the points I have now before me from you relateing to the King's service, till to-morrow; this being principally designed to give cover to the letter I last night promised you, and the King did just now tell me he would make good to you this night from himself, and I believe I shall by and by have, I shall trouble you noe further now, then in telling you, as the latest intelligence wee have this day had from the west, that the people of Exeter did expect the Prince of Orange's

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

arrivall with them last night: that in prospect of it, Bishop Lamplugh left the place in the morning, there being noe force there to make any resistance, sending up a letter before him hither full of dutifull and loyall expressions towards the King, and acquainting him with his being on his way to lay himself at his Majesty's feet here: that notwithstanding the near view the Mayor and Magistrates of Exeter had of coming within the command of the Prince and his army, they had yesterday morning or the evening before seized a man that was listing persons for the Prince's service, and committed him to the goale for high treason."

In a postscript Mr. Pepys adds—

"Captain Rooth's journey was soe uneasy to him that I find by the King, he has desired him not to expect his returning to you on horseback, and therefore the King has directed me to find some conveyance for him by water."

1688, Nov. 9th, The ship Advice. Captain H. Williams to Lord Dartmouth.—Is informed that the Dreadnought is not fit for sea, and so desires to stay where he is.

1688, Nov. 9th, Whitehall.—King James II. to Lord Dartmouth.

"I had last night yours by Captain Rooth, but had not then leasur to answer it, and am fully satisfyd you did all that you could and that no body could worke otherwise than you did. I am sure all knowing seamen must be of the same mind, and therefore be at ease as to yourself, and consider of the best means of securing the squadron you have with you, and of being in a condition of taking such advantages upon the enemy, which may offer themselves to you. Whilst the winds continue betwene the S. and the W. you must be very carfull of your self if you remaine in the Downs, but where you can be els to be secured from the blowing weather, and to be able to take an advantage of an E. wind I do not well know, nor will I at this distance advise, you on the place being best judg, how to secure your self from bad weather and an enemy. By the newse I had this morning the Prince of Orange could not be soner then last night at Exeter, where the Major and townspeople have hitherto behaved themselves very loyaly, as indeed all the country thereabouts. The traine marches to morrow, the horse and foott guards the begining of next weeke, as well as the Scots and Irish foott. I intend to send my owne horses and bagage on tuesday next, and to follow myself by the end of the weeke and to leave London well guarded. I have not tyme to say more.—J. R.

I send this by the post and not by Captain Rooth, he desiring to go downe to you by long sea not caring to ride."

[Addressed.] For the Lord Dartmouth.

[Endorsed]. November 9th, 1688.

Received 10th; answered 11th.

1688, Nov. 10th, Sheerness.—Sir Charles Lyttleton to Lord Dartmouth.

This morning Captain Clement had shewn him the order for the delivery of the prisoners,* which, though he had no orders to receive nor how to dispose of, he will take into safe custody as soon as the Tower is cleared of some arms and stores; he will take the "maior" into his own little house, and the lieutenant-governor one or more of them into his. Wishes his Lordship safety and victory, but to consider that since the enemy is already at shore if it be worth while to put the fleet to

* Officers belonging to the Prince of Orange's regiment (according to endorsement of letter.)

HARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

the hazard of a battle under so much disadvantage of number and force ; by delay he cannot fail to be equal if not superior to them in both. Hears that the King has thought fit to make a great remove or addition to the general officers, is unhappy that the King has forgotten him (Lyttelton) the oldest Colonel in commission in his dominions, and almost in age, and only thinks him useful to continue in a place which is not to be in danger.

1688, Nov. 10th, Saturday midnight. Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

" Mine of last night (wherein was inclosed one from his Majestie) haveing acknowledged my receipt of your Lordshipp's of the 8th current, brought me by Mr Hodder, with the bag of letters taken in the Dutch packet-boat : this comes express (by the same hand) to lett your Lordshipp know, that partly from an apprehension that the said papers, and more especially the list of their fleet (which, with the plan of their campe you sent under your own cover) were not long enough in your hand to make any leisurely reflections thereon, and partly that neither his Majesty nor you might want the benefitt of what, by any observation, I could collect from the same, I have beene endeavouring to make the most exact comparison I can of his Majesty's force now at sea, under your Lordshipp, with that of the Prince, under Admirall Herbert.

" The result of which, (as containeing somewhat noe less welcome, then surprizing) I thought it my duty to represent to his Majesty (as I did this evening at the cabinet), showing, that contrary to the impressions that seem to have been universally received touching an inequality between the two fleetes, greatly to the advantage of the Dutch, as superiour both in number and force to yours ; the odds in number is very inconsiderable, and in quality (as much as there is any) appears to incline to his Majesty's side. And for the credit of the list upon which this comparison is founded, his Majesty and my Lords doe not find any reason for questioning it, as observing the same (together with the plan of the army) to have been sent under cover of the letter which came together with them from your Lordshipp to me, designed for the use of the Elector of Brandenburg.

" Which being soe ; his Majesty has (with the advice of my Lords) comanded me, to give your Lordshipp by express (as I now doe by the hand of Mr Hodder) the same account I have now mentioned, they deeming it of very great importance to his Majestie, that your Lordshipp should, without delay have it before you, in order first to your satisfying your self in the validity and justness of my calculations herein ; and then that your Lordshipp (upon considering all circumstances) may (according to the fulness of the power lodged in you from his Majesty on that behalfe) proceed to make such use thereof, as you shall conceive most conducing to his honor and service.

" What I have to add, my Lord, is, with relation to the vessell wherein these papers were found, and the flyboat taken with the soldiers, touching which, (and what other like vessells may happen to be brought in) you desire to be directed as to their disposall, wherein I am to lett your Lordshipp know, that you may very soon expect his Majesty's resolution more amply under his own hand ; he haveing been pleased at present to command my signifying to your Lordshipp in the meane time that he would not in any wise have anything done on his part, upon soe small an occasion as that of making prize of a poor merchant vessell or two, taken up by pressing or hire (as transporters only) (and which in their true value can be to him hardly worth their keeping) that may untimelly give countenance to acts of violence on their side, of much greater prejudice to the trade of his Majesty's subjects, and his own revenue depending thereon, and draw on other consequences, which his Majestie seems most desirous of avoideing.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

"Postscript: neare one in the morning.

"My Lord, I am just now come from his Majesty, who after peruseing and approveing what I have here wrott, was pleased to bidd mee add for your information, (in case you should thinke of anything that way) that hee has not heard anything of the Dutch fleete's being removed from Torbay, where they were at theyr army's descent, more then that some of theyr vessells (with stores and guns) which were at Exmouth, are gone to Topsum.

"You will finde enclosed a copy of the Dutch list of theyr fleete, with a translation thereof in English, together with another translation of the letter accompanying it and the land-camp; and my comparison of the 2 fleets."

1688, Nov. 11th, Sunday noone. Admiralty.—Same to same. (Holograph.)

"I wrote your Lordshipp between one and 2 this morning, of which thinkeing it not necessary to make any repetition, this comes only to convey to you the enclosed brought to mee this moment by M^r Frowd from the King to S^t Martin's Church from whence I came to my office to give it passage by expresse, M^r Frowd telling mee from the King, that hee would have me immediately (without attending him for any direction thereon) send it to your Lordshipp for your information, in order to your doing thereon what you shall see most expedient for his service. And this I doe as he commands, with a prospect of my haveing occasion againe of writeing to you before the day be over. What land-newes wee have you will have from a better hand (I mean M^r Frowd's) in the enclosed."

The enclosed letter of Mr. Frowde's to Lord Dartmouth is dated the same day at 12 o'clock from the Admiralty, and is as follows:

"I am come hither to bring a letter to M^r Pepys by the King's command which I just now received from M^r Sandford, master of our pacquet boates at Harwich, which letter the King has ordered M^r Pepys to send your Lordship, and while he is writing to you I can not but doe so too, and send your Lordship a copy of another letter which I just now received by expresse from the postmaster of Exeter, who is gone from that toune for feare of being forced to doe something that may endanger him or his estate, he being a rich man. I had an other expresse from him from Exeter yesterday in which he told me that that toune was just then in the possession of the Prince of Orange, and that the Earl of Shrewsbury, the Earl of Macclesfeild, the Lord Wiltshire, M^r Herbert and D^r Burnet were then in that toune with two troupes of horse consisting of 120."

The letter of Mr. Sandford above referred to is dated the 10th of November at past 7 at night, from Harwich, and is as follows:

"These serves only to acquainte you that the pacquett boate John Pascoll, Master, is just come in from Holland with a small male, and noe passengers at all. Hee reports to mee that there are 5,000 land souldiers ready from Rotterdam to saile after their fleet for England under convoe of two menn of warr, [in 25 vessells, added in the margin] and only waites for an oportunity of wind: they generally conclude a conquest of England. This small pacquett is all that I can finde comes over, which I here inclose you."

The other letter referred to by Mr. Frowde is from Mr. Parsons, dated the 9th of November at two o'clock in the afternoon from Kerton near Exeter, and is as follows:

"I am now come to Kerton, seven miles from Exon, not daring to stay any longer there. They seize all the King's money, and have taken from the Collector of the Excise 300*l.*, and keeps him [in] custody; I am also to acquaint you that [they] have seized our males, and have taken out some letters of my Lord of Bathe's and others in Plymouth, and soe deliver'd it againe. I believe they will not let it pass to London. The Prince of Orange comes in this morning, and expects many of the gentry to come into his assistance, but as yet doe not find one man of quality that stirrs, a multitude of the rabble which signifie but little, I cannot learne exactly their number, but by all that I can gather, nothing nigh what they boast of, and by the best account not 25,000 in all, but report that they have armes for 60,000 more than what are with them, their artillery are all come to Topsham, and landing as fast as possible, they talke of staying eight or ten dayes at Exon, and truly beleive they cannot move sooner, for men and horses looke but indifferent and want rest. At the opening some letters which signified his Majestie's preparations gave some damp that appeared in their countenances, and had a private councill. In my soule they are afraid. I must begg pardon for ill writeing, 'tis hast and trouble, soe I hope it will excuse him that is your most humble servant. Postscript.—I sent this morning from Exon Mr Builth to give you a verball account, not daring to write. Mr Ferguson and Doctor Burnett are very busy, and of the principall Councill."

To this Mr. Frowde has added,

"The King told me just now that they are but 14,000, or 15,000 men that are landed. I mean the troupes are no more."

1688, Nov. 11th, Admiralty.—Same to same.

"I have once already this day about noone wrote to you by express to give cover to a letter from the Master of the Packett at Harwich, and brought me by Mr Frowd with express command from the King to send it immediately to your Lordshipp without attending his Majesty for any directions about it, which I accordingly did with an intimation to your Lordshipp of my expecting to write to you againe before the day was over, as foreseeing it would be fitt for me not to lett that paper lye in your hand as a dead letter, without giving you some light touching the King's mind concerning it. Accordingly as soon as my express was gone, I attended the King, and againe this evening at the Cabinet, to know what comands (if any) he would give me for your Lordshipp upon it, as well as what force or credit he put upon the same, in order to the use he expected you should make of it. Whereto he was pleased to answer that he had nothing before him, either from Mr Frowd or otherwise to guide himself by in the makeing any judgement of the paper, but that a paper of those contents being brought to him by Mr Frowd, he thought it proper it should be sent to you, the very originall just as you had it as not knowing but by comparing it with some other intelligence, or by some meanes or other you might be able to judge of the weight of it, better then wee are here, and consequently what use to make of it. And this, my Lord, is the whole of what the King purposed in the command he sent me soe positively by Mr Frowd for my immediate dispatching it away to your Lordshipp.

Soon after my doing of which came your express of yesterday's date, bringing with it severall more papers found in the Brandenburgh-boat, and particularly those of greater moment which you directed under a cover to his Majestie, and particularly that to the Duke of Brandenburgh from the Prince.

The King is not a little troubled for the ill accident befallen the Centurion, and the more in that he takes it to have arisen from such a degree of failure, one way or other, as deserves to be most strictly and

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

impartially accounted for to your Lordship on his behalfe, at a court-martiall; and that speedily; comanding me to recomend it to your Lordship for its being accordingly done, and the sooner that she may be with the less loss of time brought into the river, to the Buoy of the Nore, where orders shall meet her, for her proceeding either up the Thames or to Chatham.

The officers of the Navy are looking out for the six fireships' here which I lately mentioned to you, and I hope they will be provided by them with as little expense of time as may be.

I hope also that Captains Gifford and George Aylmer will be in a little time with you the former in the Phoenix, and the latter in the Portland; and that they will not be long unfollowed by Captain Preistman in the Hampton-Court, and Captain Smith in the Tiger-Prize.

To morrow alsoe the officers of the Navy shall have his Majestys orders for the fitting forth the Kent and Warspight in order to Sir Roger Strickland's haveing one of yours in exchange for the Mary, whose crankness does soe disable her for present service.

I should have before observed to you (when I mentioned this latter part of the Dutch letters) that the King observes the Master of the packett-boat that had them in, to have done his endeavour to cover as many of the papers as he could in bringing them forth by parcells as he has done, and that it might possibly not be unusefull to make further search and to examine him more strictly, and this the rather for that in one of the French letters of this day's parcell, which I have had the perusal of, I find it expressly said, that (calling him by the terme of the Brandenburgh Caryer) he came along with the Dutch fleet, particularly to see what was to be seen, and to make report of the whole thereof at his returne; and possibly, my Lord, you may gather yet more light from him then yet you have, touthing the number and force of the Dutch Fleet, either in confirmation or explanation of the list thereof which he was carrying to the Duke of Brandenburgh, and with the plan of the land-army was sent up by your Lordship to the King.

"What I have to add is what indeed slipt out of my memory, or had been said to your Lordship two dayes since, namely, that the King does mightily desire to have all the officers of the soldiers that were taken in the flyboat, and which I think are now divided between the Swallow, Tyger, and Bonadventure, sent up into the river, by one of the yachts or some other small vessell, to be brought up as high as the Tower, there to be putt into the custody of Sir Edward Hales, or such as he shall appoint to receive them; I haveing signified his Majesty's pleasure to Sir Edward Hales herein, at the time it was first determined by the King, though in the multitude of matters I had to despatch, I omitted to doe, what I here doe about it to your Lordship; and therefore am the more earnestly to desire your giveing imediate directions for its execution now, the King being very intent upon haveing them discoursed with here."

1688, Nov. 12th, Whitehall.—King James II. to Lord Dartmouth.

"I have received yours of the 11th, and sent to you a Scots seaman, who is just come from the Dutch fleet, and can give you an exact account of their numbers and qualitys, which agree with the list you intercepted, so that you know what their force is, except any more have gone to them with these E. winds. Mr. Pepys will give you a fuller account of all, and of the advices I have had out of Holland, by which you will find the Prince of Orange expected a recrut both of ships and land forces, as to what will be best for you to do. I thinke that the boy of the Nore ought not to be so much as thought on, without you were very much overpowered by the enemy; you best know your owne strength and whether you are in a condition to make use of this easterly wind to attempt any thing-upon them, at least I thinke there can be no danger of going to the Spit head, and I should thinke you in more safety there when the winds shall come westerly then in the Downs. T'would be of some reputation even your going but thether, but of much more if you thought yourself strong enough to look out for them. Another convenience you would have, by going to the Spit head, if you are not in a condition to seek them out, which is the conveniency of soner changing any of your ships that may be defective then in any other place, and as to their coming in upon you there by the Needles, I thinke there can be no danger in that, for the same wind which must bring them in there would carry you out by St Hellens, and you could work to windward of them as De Ruyter did at Bullen bay, and the same fate, or worse, might happen to them as did to our fleet in that tyme, and should the wind chop about to the S. or S.E. they would be in a very ill condition; and now that I have sayd this to you I must leave all to your judgment who are on the place, who can judg best what is to be done, and I am sure will do what you thinke best for my service; 'tis late and I have not tyme to say more, t'will be the end of this weeke before I thinke to leave this town.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

J. R."

[Endorsed.]. November 12th 1688.

Received 13th, answered the same day.

1688, Nov. 12th, past 12 at night. Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"My last were two of yesterday's date, dispatched hence towards you, the former about noone, the other about midnight. Since which I have received your Lordshipp's of the same date, with one enclosed to his Majestie, whose contents doe shew that mine of the 10th was not then arrived with you, though this of your Lordshipp's to me does observe something upon that very head which made up the greatest part of mine, namely, the shortness of the Dutch fleet (as it is described in the account you sent his Majestie with the rest of the Dutch papers) both in number and quality of ships from what wee had all of us, both at sea and on shore been led to reckon it. Concerning which your Lordshipp had on that score sufficient occasion of questioning, whether it might not be the state of that fleet before the last storme, since which more and greater ships may possibly have been added thereto. Whereas his Majesty and my Lords his ministers did (from the manner of its being sent, together with its date, and the place and person from whom it was sent, and above all the person to whom and for whose satisfaction it was wrote), conclude, upon full consideration of it, it ought to be looked upon as an authentick account to be relyed on, of the number and force of the Prince's fleet, as it stood with the Prince at the time of his descent, when it was dated from Torbay, and accordingly it was that by the King's and their command I did in my said letter take care to express to you, for your surer government therein, the credit the King and his ministers did give to this account at the same time that they directed my sending you the comparison you had from me in the letter of the force and number of the two fleets. And soe sensible I both then was, and have since been of the importance of my doing all I can to prevent any possibility of being misled from that list to the undervaluing of the Holland's fleet, that I made it my care in my letter to you last night to prompt you to the seeking what additional light you could in the matter from the master of the packett boat, from whom the late papers and that (among the rest) was taken.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

But two evidences have since hapened greatly to the coroborating the King's beleive of the present validity of the paper; one is, a letter I have this day received from Watts the postmaster at Deale (a copie of which* I inclose) makeing (by the testimony of some vessells come into the Downes from the westward, and passed through the Dutch fleet) the number thereof, I mean the men of warr, the very same in number, within 2 or 3, with that mentioned in this account, the difference also (such as it is) being also on the lower side. The other is, that which the King is above all soe satisfied with, as by this very conveyance to send you the originall thereof, namely, a Scotch man, who has served as a mate in the Dutch fleet for 8 months past, and has now deserted it, and is come from Torbay on purpose to serve his Majesty, both in his person and by his intelligence, which in the maine, as to the point in question, is, that there [their] fleet did not at his leaveing it, exceed in men of warr great and small the number of 44, and those but of moderate force, in very indifferent case as to the bodies of the shipp, meanly manned both as to number and quality of their men, and victualled but for 6 months at the time of their last coming out. The man seems to be a bred seaman, pretends to have been master of good ships, to have sprung from the same town of trade in Scotland with Captain Michell (whose acquaintance he is, though he has not mett with him in the fleet) and represented to the King by my Lord Melfort as one that deserves beleife. On which score, and for that also of the man himself, is both willing and desirous to serve the King in his fleet, as he has heretofore done, his Majesty has been pleased to putt him into cloaths, and 5*l*. in his purse, and to send him to your Lordshipp, to make the best use you can, both of his service and information, for the sake of which latter (whatever he may have been in the former) his Majesty conceives his coming may be of use to you. And soe you may expect him in the company of your last messenger, by whom I send this.

Next, to the other great point, wherein with much reason you desire satisfaction, I mean in the construction of the orders given you by his Majestie in view of a descent then to be made, and not actually made as it now is; his Majesty with the advice of all my Lords this night at the Cabinet, have determined upon your being authorised to proceed against this fleet, in the same hostile manner in all respects, now the descent is made, as you were before obliged to doe, had it been your fortune to have mett it at sea, in it's way to the making the said descent. And this I every moment expect to receive his Majesty's warrant in pursuance of, under his own hand, countersigned by my Lord Middleton, as an act of State.

For what concerns your disposal of the flyboat and what other little vessells attending this Holland's fleet as transporters, which are already or may hereafter, fall into your hands, I did in mine of the 10th inst^t give you an account of his Majesty's present resolution therein, and the grounds of it relateing to the preservation of our own commerce, and least that should not be clear enough, I am this night required to express the same more clearly to your Lordshipp that the King would have the said vessels and their own companies forthwith discharged. Which for saveing time your Lordshipp may be pleased to give your present orders in, and I will be accomptable to your Lordshipp, to supply you by the very next conveyance with his Majesty's own orders to you for it; he haveing been pleased, to doe the same this very night

* Not now with the letter.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

here, for the dischargeing a Flemish Pink that for want of orders, or not knowing his way, came stumbling up the river as high as Hole Haven, and was there seized by Captain Hastings with 30 (says the skipper) with but 24 horses says Captain Hastings.

And now, my Lord, as to the last particular wherein both in your more particular letter to me (which I very thankfully acknowledge the receipt of) and that to his Majestie, you doe with a great deal of cause desire to receive effectual directions from his Majesty in, or at least a plaine signification of his Majesty's opinion what may, as matters now stand, with respect to both fleetes, and the season of the yeare, be most advisable to be done for his service, in the very next stepps you are now to make, I did humbly move his Majesty to doe what it appeared he was actually doing at my moveing it, namely, give you his mind therein himself under his own hand. And this I expect every moment to receive from him, to goe to you in this packett; and doubt not but it will sett you fully at ease in that matter also.

Orders are also issued out for the speedy fitting of the Kent and Warspite; as also for refitting the Centurion at Chatham, when you shall send her in, and the Assurance at Sheerness.

All the furtherance that can, shall be given to your haveing of Captain George Aylmer, and Captain Gifford with you, and the like for the Hampton Court and Tyger-Prize. But how it comes to pass that you have not the logg-shippes yet with you, nor that wee know soe much as where they be, is a thing very extraordinary, and a great fault it will be either in your Lordshipp or me, or both, if as extraordinary an account be not taken of it when it shall be seasonable.

Just in this place a paper is brought me from Lord Middleton which I here inclose,* containing (as your Lordshipp will easily judge by the whole scope of it) the King's order to you pursuant to the resolution within mentioned, though by the hast that has been made in the dispatch of it I find it wants being directed in forme to your Lordshipp. Nor will the time of night (it being now past midnight) admit of my looking after it's being supplied. However, for your present satisfaction, I think it fit for me to send it you as it is, and will charge myself with getting another from the Secretary's Office that shall be perfect.

Divers particulars there are now that I have to say to your Lordshipp, but I have soe many other matters to dispatch, elsewhere this very night that I shall rather borrow time till anon, then straine to doe them now, to the omitting the present dispatch of some other things more pressing. This only I must not delay the acquainting your Lordshipp with, namely, that as I have not long since elsewhere mentioned, and your Lordshipp too, has not on your part neither been unmindfull of it, the King is greatly concerned for the doing all that may be towards the present supporting of commerce by preventing any interruptions that may at this juncture happen thereto. In consequence whereof his Majestie by the advice also of my Lord of the Treasury has in his eye, that divers rich shippes may in all probability be within a litle time expected home; and that on the consideration it might be of benefit to him, as well as to his subjects that some care were taken for their being advised, as they come into the Channel, of the state of matters between the Dutch and us, soe as that they may be cautioned against coming in the way of the Dutch more than is necessary in their passing through. To which end the King proposes and has comanded me to signifye the same to your Lordshipp (as I now doe) that your Lordshipp

* Not now with the letter.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

would appoint someone or more of your small tenders, (which you shall think most proper for it) either themselves to proceed to the westward, and continue soe long as you shall judge convenient for them to stay upon that station, plying between Scilly and Ushant, dilligently looking out for all such his Majesty's subjects ships, and advertising them (as before) in such manner as you shall be pleased by an instruction in writeing to direct them; or in case your Lordshipp shall have reason to think that the same may be better done by vessells to be sett out for this purpose from Plymouth or Falmouth; that then your Lordshipp will be pleased to send some one vessell directly to Falmouth, (Plymouth not being thought safe at this time by reason of the Dutch to be gone into, though it may at any time by night be gone out of) with a discreet person on board directed by your Lordshipp to repair by land to Plymouth, (or where else he shall be) to my Lord of Bath, notifying the King's desire herein, that his Lordshipp may cause the same to be executed by vessells to be to that purpose fitted forth from either of those ports, or any other on that coast, to the purpose aforesaid. The reasonable charge whereof his Majesty is pleased himself to promise the defraying of."

1688, Nov. 12th, Whitehall.—Original Order of James II. (counter-signed by Lord Middleton) commanding Lord Dartmouth to attack the Dutch fleet or any part of it when and wherever he shall meet it.

1688, Nov. 13th, Sheerness. — Sir Charles Lyttleton to Lord Dartmouth. Captain Clement has this morning brought orders from Mr. Pepys that the prisoners are to be delivered to him (Clement) again. Comments on a proposed transfer of officers and workmen from Chatham dockyard.

1688, Nov. 13th, Sheerness.—Captain John Clements to Lord Dartmouth. On the 10th he landed and placed his prisoners with Sir Charles Lyttleton, but had that morning received orders to take them on board again and carry them to Greenwich.

1688, Nov. 13th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth. "Though now for severall dayes together no one has passed without my giving your Lordshipp the trouble of one or more of my letters, and those none of them short ones; yet there are severall particulars, which in the multitude of other matters I (upon a review just now made of the whole of what has lately passed between your Lordshipp and me) find to have escaped my mention to you, though not my care of answering in the effects; as farr at least as lies in my power; of which be pleased to take these that follow.

First, I have taken care by Mr Hunter to advise the gentlemen of the Trinity House to provide for the imediate relaying of the buoys lately taken up in the mouth of the river. Who tell me that the same will be without delay done.

Your Lordshipp shall not want as early account as I can give you (and which I hourly expect from the officers of the navy) of their proceedings towards the taking up of the six fireships last ordered. Nor will your Lordshipp let me want an account of what you find your self able to doe, on the like account where you are; for this reason among the rest, that by knowing what monie you are like to be called upon for out of your contingencies for the charge thereof, I may be enabled to move his Majestie for it's being supplied you by further summes from hence; as in one of yours you desire.

As for those of your old stock of fireships which you desire to have hastned to you, you may please to know, that the Roebuck sailed on Munday, and the Half-Moone and the Charles on Saturday last from Sheerness, as I have understood from Captain Wilford, soe that I doe not know of any remaineing behind but the Sampson, whose condition, (as well for sayling as otherwise) being judged unfit, and unlikely to be made otherwise for the serving you at sea, some of her men were made use of, for the manning out of the Roebuck, and she her self will (unless you desire otherwise) be kept where she now is for the service of the Medway. And for the Mermaide, you know she is come home from haveing been long abroad, and brought home for the sake of her defects, soe that she has had a great deal of work done to her, for putting her into a condition of sea-service againe, besides that of turning her into a fireshipp; but all the dispatch has been made that could be, in the doing of it, soe as I am told, she will be out of the carpenter's hands this week; and then I trust you will not long be without her.

As to what your Lordshipp mentions with very just trouble touching the effects of the late stormy weather, upon some of your ships; as they come in (such I meane of them as you shall think to require it; for what can be remedied abroad, I am sure you will have it to be done there) all dispatch will be used for the refitting forth such, whose defects will bear it. As by her survey the King is in hopes the Assurance will; and possibly also the Centurion. If not; some ships I hope will be found capable of being made ready in a very little time for their companies to be turned over into. For your more perfect information in which, I think it not bee amiss to give you this short and plaine view of what may be expected on this occasion; which is, that of the 4th rates, besides what are abroad at sea, (or now going out to you, namely, the Portland, Tyger-prize and Phoenix) there are but 3 remaining in the whole navy in harbour, that have received their repaires, namely, the Sweepstakes, Mary gally and James galley, and those 3 all at Deptford; the whole number remaineing of that rate in the navy (besides those here undernamed which have been lately sent in) being but 3, and those all of them in dock under repaire, namely, the Happy-Returne and Oxford at Woolwich, and the Kingsfisher at Deptford. And for the 5th rates, you know wee have none now subsisting, but what are turned into fireships, the Saphire only and the Rose excepted, the former of which is abroad in the Sally squadron and the latter at New England. What therefore your Lordshipp has to expect to be supplied with, besides those three 4th rates, viz^t, the Sweepstakes and the 2 gallies, it must be had out of the 3^{ds}, for the King will not think of those of higher rank for this season, nor would your Lordshipp I believe be very forward in calling for the new great third rates, soe long as there are any of the lesser remaineing to be had, of which what I have already acquainted you with touching the Hampton-Court's being appointed for Captain Preistman, and the Kent and the Warspight's (at your late instance) for Sir Roger Strickland, the former at Chatham, and the latter at Portsmouth, there are these further three, that may be next soonest made ready, as haveing been ordered for some time to have their rigging put up, namely, the Dunkirk and Edgar at Portsmouth, and the Suffolk at Chatham; and if the service shall yet require more, you have the whole remainder of that rate to make your choice out of, saveing the Royall Oake and Monk, which I think are the only two, of that rank now in harbour resting to be repaired.

Of which the latter has been for some time, and is at this day in hand at Portsmouth. And thus, my Lord, you have a full view before you, of the present posture of the whole navy, for answering of the service his Majesty shall have for the same; it seeming to me very expedient that your Lordshipp should not want the perfect knowledge

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

thereof, in order to your being the better able to governe your self in your desires and advice on all future occasions relateing to the same

I take especiall notice, and both am and shall be very mindfull of your demands touching stores, particularly anchors, cables, sayles, and long-boates, by my frequent minding of the officers of the navy therein : your Lordshipp rightly observing, that how considerable soever an enemy the fleet of Holland may be thought to be, the season of the year is a more certaine one, and must therefore be provided against as such ; And I hope I shall not be long without being able to give your Lordshipp some account of the proceedings of the Navy officers relateing thereto. In the mean time let me beseech you to think of the necessity the King is already, and will every day more and more be under, of expecting all wayes of good husbandry in the expense of his stores, by comandrs being prevailed with (as much as is possible) to take to heart the lavishness and practises of under officers, in their expending thereof. For should a formal warr break out (as I think it not possible for it to be long prevented) were the King's purse much fuller then for many reasons I dare take it to be, navall stores will by the scarceness of the market be very soon brought beyond the power of monie presently to procure.

And on this head, pray be pleased to enquire whether the anchors and cables that were lately left behind by the Ronadventure, Swallow, and Foresight had not buoys left with them, in order to their recovery, to the end the same may be done.

And for what your Lordshipp found to be the case of the storekeeper at Deale, it is noe more then it has alwayes been in time of peace, not only there, but also at Harwich and Sheerness, with one person only left at some small salary under the name of storekeeper for the answering any litle accidentall occasion which the officers of the Navy may happen to have of employing one, in the intervall of warr.

I find that I might have saved the late trouble I gave your Lordshipp about sending up the Dutch officers, Captain Clements haveing given me an account since of his being come with them to Sheerness. From whence I have by command of the King (who is very earnest to have them here) been ledd to direct Captain Clements to bring them up hither, but without any intention of keeping him one hour from attending your Lordshipp againe.

I should be very glad to hear of the effects of your Lordshipp's enquiries touching the performances of the fishermen's and watermen's companies, I haveing very great reason to doubt that they will be found to have served the King very slightly, but more especially the former. For whereas the watermen doe press for the greatest part very raw young men, unfit yet for your use, yet still they are of their own company ; whereas the fishermen, after all the noise that they have made to the King, and favours they have received from him, upon the score of their capacity and readiness to supply him out of their own fraternity with thousands able to serve him at the seas, they appear to make use of their press warrants in rakeing up from all ends of the town, and the most scandalously, persons of all sortes, but that only which they should be of; namely, fishermen, or at least seamen. And here mentioning of seamen, it gives me occasion of observing Sir Francis Wheeler's double misfortune ; first in the almost looseing of his shipp, and then in the totall desertion of soe many of his men.

Your Lordshipp observing to me that you kept noe copies of the papers you sent me out of the Dutch packett boat, gives me occasion of telling you that every paper of each parcell has been safely delivered to the King himself, and by his command afterwards into my Lord Middleton's office to Mr Bridgeman, in order more especially to the translateing for the King's use those that are in Dutch. The others in French and English I had the reading of to his Majesty, and then delivered them with the rest to Mr Bridgeman, saveing some few of more moment which the King thought fitt to keep in his own hand.

I question not but the King's last night's letter to your Lordshipp will be of great satisfaction, not only to your self, but to those flagg-officers and comandars about you, to whom you shall think fitt to communicate the same. Upon which not knowing what will be the result of your next debates, whether as to your going westward, or staying where the fleet now is, I thought it fitt for me to send your Lordshipp a copie of a letter from Sir Richard Beach to me, praying the presence of a friggat or two at Portsmouth.

Captain George Aylmer and Captain Gifford are useing all their dilligence to get to your Lordshipp, and I trust in God (the wind favouring them) it will not be long before you hear of them in the Downes.

Reguard is had to the length to your provitions, and the victuallers quickned in their provideing of recruits accordingly."

In a postscript Mr Pepys adds, "My last was of yesterday at midnight, with one to your Lordshipp from the King."

A list of five ships lately sent in from the fleet follows.

The copy of the letter from Sir Richard Beach, referred to in the above letter, is dated the 10th of November 1688, and is as follows:—

"I recommended to your Honour's consideration whether you judge it not fitt that his Majestie would order a man of warr or two for this place with a fireship upon any suddaine occasion to ride at Spitthead, for an enimie may be forced by bad weather to putt into St Hellens (as there were 3 the other day (which if wee had had a frigot or two ready, with a fireship we had certainly gain'd or destroy'd them (besides) for gaining intelligence, for sending a convoy, or severall other occasions there may be for a man of warr or two to be there; and whither or noe (if there should be any sudden occasion offer) the Spragg fireship may be made use off, or whether the Unity fireship or any other may not be sent be sent back hither againe."

With the above letter is the following copy of a letter from Mr. Watts, the Postmaster of Deal, dated the 11th of November, apparently the one referred to in Mr. Pepys's previous letter.

"I thought good to give your honour an account that there is two shippes come into the Downes that came from France and Malaga, which mett with the Dutch fleet and comanded the masters of these two shippes on board and kept them three days on board one of the Dutch men of war, and they say that the Dutch men of warr are a cruizeing off a [of] Tar Bay and the small shippes are in and they say there may be 45 saile of capitall shippes, and 19 saile of fire shippes. The Lieutenant of the Dutch man of warr told them they was designed for Plymouth. And is what I can advise your honour."

In a postscript he adds, "They met these Dutch fleet on Thursday last."

On the same sheet of paper with the above is the following "Extract of a letter of the 16th of November from the Hague to the King from the Marquess De Albeville."

"On the 10th the Prince sett sayle, and stayed beyond the banks of Sands till the return of Eullenstyn from some creek or place upon the coasts of England, where he was to meet somebody; at his returne which was upon Friday towards night, he brought confirmation of what was sent by a French refugee of your Majesty's Guards, that your Majesty had 30,000 men well disciplined, and that were resolved to stick to you; that your Majesty had given such good orders in all places towards the north, that the Prince could not do better, than land somewhere in the west where your Majesty does not expect him; that men, nor horses, nor provisions can be wanting in them parts, where men and townes would not faile to declare for him; that he could land even at Rey [Rye] very well and comodiously free, and open; that he might make an attempt upon the Isle of Wight, in passing by to Poole haven, where the whole fleet could lay conveniently; that there was nothing to be feared, since the French King had no shippes at Dunkirk, nor Calais, and that taking his course he could eschew an engagement with your Majesty's fleet; a councill of warr being presently called, where Dickfelt, and Baron de Heebrenen first Comissioner for forreigne affaires were present, being yet with the Prince, it was resolved immediately to sett sayle [to sett sayle] towards the west: all the fisherboats at Scheveling were commanded to sayle the next day towards Dover; they are come back since.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MESS.

Four regiments more of foott are comanded to be embarked, and sayle afte, to be conducted by some men of warr; the regiments of Cowerdon, of Count Jean de Home, and two others.

All the men of warr remaineing yett in the sea ports, are a makeing ready, and all the new shippes are ordered to be immediatly finished; those of Amsterdam, as well as such as are in the other provinces."

1688, Nov. 13th, Whitehall.—Order of James II., countersigned by Pepys, addressed to Admiral Lord Dartmouth, for setting at liberty a certain flyboat, with her master and company, taken by the Foresight with soldiers on board belonging to the Dutch forces; and to do the like with any other small vessels attending the Hollands fleet as transporters which might fall into his hands.

1688, Nov. 13th.—Certificate of Captain George Churchill and other officers of the ship Newcastle regarding her leaky state.

1688, Nov. 13th, Ostend. — James Hamilton and Lynch (wine merchants?) to Francis Rooth. Reports about the Dutch fleet, &c. From Amsterdam they hear that the fleet sailed on the 11th with intention to land about Newcastle (copy sent to Lord Dartmouth).

1688, Nov. 14th, Whitehall.—Francis Gwyn to Lord Dartmouth. His Majesty having restored all Charters again since the year 1679, notwithstanding their surrenders, this morning a gentleman from Portsmouth was with him to enquire where their Charter was, which was surrendered in Lord Conway's time. He had since looked and found it amongst his old papers, and had informed the gentleman that the town must first address their request to his Lordship for the return of the Charter.

1688, Nov. 14th, Ship Resolution.—Directions by Lord Dartmouth, in case of separation of the fleet. If the wind be easterly to rendezvous at St. Helen's; if westerly, Spithead or Plymouth Sound, according to circumstances.

1688, Nov. 14th, Basingstoke.—Sir Henry Shere to Lord Dartmouth. —His long sickness and sudden departure upon the King's commands to march will excuse him for having written so seldom. They are marched to this place in good order, where they halt a day, and pursue their rout to Salisbury to-morrow. Never did any train of this extent march with less disorder; they stretch at least 4 miles, are 1,500 horses and 250 carriages, whereof they have not left one behind since they left London. Will give his Lordship a faithful and punctual account of all occurrences.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1688, Nov. 15th, Ship Resolution.—Instructions of Lord Dartmouth to John Lord Berkeley of the ship Montague as to the manner of his attacking the Dutch fleet; and similar instructions to Captain Frederick Frowd of the ship Ruby.

1688, Nov. 16th, On board the ship Leyden under sail towards Torbay. — H. Cron to ——. After describing the sailing of the Prince's fleet on the 11th inst., and the progress made on the 12th and 13th, the writer goes on, "The 14th about 9 o'clock we got sight of the Isle of Wight, the same bearing N.W. and by N. about 4 miles off, and after consultation with the Sieur Benting, the Lord Russell, and Admiral Evertsen, and having advised with some English pilots, it was resolved, seeing the easterly wind continued according to wish, to pass by the said island, and continued our course towards the river Exmouth between Portland and the Start, the Lieutenant Admiral General [Herbert] ordering in the mean time the Captain Vander Saan to cruise near the island, and to give notice to such ships as might lay behind to follow to Exmouth his Highness was resolved to land at the same time at Dartmouth and in Torbay. Towards evening we saw the point of Portland, and drove most of the night following. The 15th in the morning the wind came southerly, being thick weather, about 9 it cleared up; the Start bore W. and by S. and Torbay N.W. 4 miles from us, his Highness being near the shore stood with the vessels for transportation directly towards Dartmouth, but the wind coming westerly and contrary for our sailing into that bay, his Highness was obliged to pass by it, and to stand with the whole fleet into Torbay, where about noon he came to an anchor, and immediately made the sign to land, which was a red flag under his ordinary flag; upon which the landing was begun with great diligence and order, the foot landing first, and afterward the artillery and cavalry, the Lieutenant Admiral Herbert being in the mean time under sail without the bay with the men of war and fireships to cover the vessels for transportation against any attack of the enemy, and to secure the troops in their landing. I knew how greatly his Elect Serenity (sic) is concerned in the success of this glorious landing, and yourself who have the ministry under him, and therefore thought it would not be unacceptable to you that I acquainted you with these few particulars in acknowledgment of the many favours, &c.

H. CRON."

"I send you herewith the divisions of the fleet, and the plan how the troops are now on shore."

[The Leyden, on which this letter was written, was Admiral Herbert's ship.]

1688, Nov. 16th, Portsmouth.—Thomas Phillips to Lord Dartmouth. Is not a little troubled to be thus long without hearing. Has spoken with several men that have passed the Dutch fleet which are at Torbay, Dartmouth, &c.; the number of men is uncertain, but their fleet consists of 70 men of war and fire ships, the tenders and flyboats 400 sail more. "The Prince landed the train in the river Ex at Toppsom; when they were drawn up to march abreast of each carriage they reached near $\frac{3}{4}$ of a mile upon the strand. They were up at the great house by the wood and had like to have burnt it were it not forbidden—two or three persons killed.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

"Near Portsmouth of Dutch ships there have been—first two great flyboats and a man of war with them which had on board 1,800. They met with the Fanfan, who drew them into 4 fathom water upon the Horse; they were very positive their fleet were at Cowes but taking a pilot of the Island of Wight where they were ashore they were informed where their fleet was. They inquired what Papists were in the island and where the King was, and they thought to have landed two boat loads of men; but seeing there was like to be some opposition by the moving of two companies commanded by Major Knight, they retired on board that boat which was first on shore, paid for what they eat and drank and made many protestations of friendship.

On Sunday last came in a Vice-Admiral chasing the Mary yacht, about 12 of the clock, and stood for Stokes Bay to discover where their fleet was at Cowes. We shot from the upper stone platform out of one of the two angle guns which reached him and fell very near his stern; he struck his flag and topsails, saluted and came to an anchor to view the ships and the harbour. He weighed in the evening and went to sea. . . . Preparations at Portsmouth. . . . Dick Wharton gone to Plymouth, having orders to put himself in there, but now it is too late. The writer told him to burn his papers and instructions and go towards Bristol, but it is now said that they are in parties as far as Bridgewater, so there is no passage for him that way, and by sea they spread over to the Casquetts that no vessel can pass without examination. Here is a man that dined with Admiral Herbert last week in Torbay who lives very splendidly. Mitchell and Votier (?) are with him, so that if there be no better we need not trouble ourselves, they being not persons of any great design.

Yesterday in the evening came a letter from the Duke of Berwick's officers from Salisbury giving an account that the Duke's regiment, Lord Cornbury's and Lord St. Albans', were betrayed into the enemy's hands; very few officers escaped, only Clifford and Littleton who fought their way through. Most of the men proved more loyal than the officers, and come dropping in daily to Salisbury, as they make their escape. The King has ordered all the foot to march towards London again. Sir John Southcott lately come in confirms the report that the Holland troops are near Salisbury—if so we shall be sensible in a short time who will be uppermost in Portsmouth unless more forces be sent; those here are not so welcome as could be wished for the King's sake."

Wishes Lord Dartmouth near the King, who is now perhaps in want of those capable of serving him. Has daily orders to do things, but no money or assistance. The Queen and Prince are expected, but God grant them a better residence than this will be.

1688, Nov. 17th, London.—Viscount Preston to Lord Dartmouth.

"My dear Lord,

I have received your Lordship's very kind letter of the 15th instant, and was very glad to find by it that you were in good health which I hope God will continue to you. I wish you all the success that may be in whatsoever you undertake, and I must assure you that notwithstanding the malice of a party at court which already almost wrought our destruction, your Lordship is extremely safe and happy in the King's justice to you, who knoweth and hath declared publicly and privately that it was impossible for you to take other measures than you did, when the Dutch passed by you. Hee is this afternoone gone for Windsor, and hath taken the Prince with him in order to leave him at Portsmouth. The Queen stayeth here for some time. God give him good successe, and grant him a safe returne. God of heaven send us a good meeting, and preserve you. You may bee assured that I shall bee watchfull over whatever concernes you, and shall ever remaine, my dear Lord, your Lordship's most affectionate freind and most humble servant."

1688, Nov. 17th, Aboard the Resolution under sail off the east end of the Isle of Wight.—Lord Dartmouth to Lord Berkeley. Notwithstanding his orders to Lord Berkeley yesterday to go to Portsmouth to refit or change his ship (which ever could be soonest done) he could not part from him without a friendly notice that he was fully purposed to proceed towards Torbay to find out the Dutch fleet, and make such attack upon them as he could judge would be most for his Majesty's honour and service. As he cannot expect Lord Berkeley's company in this action, if the latter goes into Portsmouth, recommends his Lordship's staying with the fleet, if he finds his ship in any tolerable condition for it.

1688, Nov. 17th, 6 in the evening, from Spithead.—John Lord Berkeley to Lord Dartmouth. Thanks for his friendly advice, which he would have followed had he not got too far within the island. Has now considered that if the Dutch are in Torbay, what action can happen will be to-morrow, and if he can sail to-morrow he will not be able to get thither by night; and though his masts and bowsprit might stand to carry him there, yet he is not in a condition to lie by or go upon a wind in weather that is likely to happen at this time of year, as the several surveys upon his ship have testified. Thanks his Lordship for his tender consideration of his honour which he believes few that know him would question; and if they did does not doubt but his Lordship would justify him, knowing that before this unlucky accident no man in the fleet was more ready in all respects than himself. His comfort is, though there are many backbiters in the world, none will say they question his courage to his face, and what otherwise they talk all mankind are liable to. (See Nov. 21, post.)

1688, Nov. 20th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"Supposing the present alteration of weather, and the change of winds may happily bring you to Portsmouth, since the advices from thence of your being gone to the westward, I send this thither in hopes of meeting you, as well to acknowledge my receipt of the honour of your two last of the 13th and 15th instant, as to bring you answers thereto in such particulars as require the same, or may be otherwise necessary for mee, upon other occasions, to say anything to your lordship upon.

And first, as to what you are pleased to mention touching the magnifying of our fleet in the list of comparison between that and the Dutch, which I sent you by the King's comand, I pray leave to tell you, that the same was done from the two lists as they appeared then to me, and with an entire submission to any correction which should be thought fitt to be made by your Lordship therein, tho' I must needs say, in defence of the paper I sent you, drawne up from the materialls I had putt in my hand to that purpose, that I cannot see wherein the flagg-officers had any reason to complaine of any mistake in that comparison; for, besides that the shippes which they say were not with the fleet at the time of the comparison was made, did come to it (every shipp, except the Roebuck fireship) before your Lordship's closeing your letter, I had all the reason in the world from the accounts received of their saileing, to conclude and depend upon it, that they would be with your fleet before your receiving my letter, as they were, (all but the Roebuck) in very little

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

time after. And for the defective ships which you sett off in the margine in your Lordshipp's letter, as I could not foresee that, soe your Lordshipp finds the comparison to reach only to the number and force of the ships of each side, without regarding their condition of serviceableness, or un-serviceableness of either, whereof (on our part) your Lordshipp is the only judge, and therefore (as I said before) the whole was submitted to your consideration and judgment.

His Majesty very well approves of your caution in the discharge of the Brandenburgher, and has comanded mee (according to your desire signified by Mr Bowles) to deliver up the papers which were taken in him, relating to his private affaires, which I shall be ready to doe, to whom-ever shall demand the same. And I think there is noe others in the latter parcell your Lordshipp sent me in the bagg.

His Majesty was pleased to approve of the reasons you give for your resolving to forbear sending any friggets to the northward to look after the other ships, said to be comeing from Holland, by the advices sent you from Mr Sandford. Of which I don't know of any late advices that have come to his Majesty.

The Centurion came up to Chatham last Saturday, and will be brought into the dock the next spring, in order to her being refitted, with all diligence. Her comander and company are turned over into the Kent, and I doubt not will be ready (with the Hampton-Court) to saile to day or to morrow into the Hope, and from thence as soone as they can be manned and fitted (in which I doubt not of the utmost endeavours of the officers of the Navy, as well as their comandars) to your Lordshipp to the Spitthead, or where else you shall bee.

The officers of the Navy are very busy in looking out for the six fireships to be taken up for your fleet here, and I doubt not but to heare of their haveing done the same in a very little time. In the meane while, upon my application to his Majesty for his appointing Comanders for them, I am to lett you know, that he was pleased to comand me to apply myselfe to you for the proposing such persons in your Fleet, as you think best qualified for those offices, and in your soe doing to distinguish to which your Lordshipp esteems the preference first due, that if the number appointed shall not be all taken up, those may fare best, who shall be first recomended by you.

And here I am by his Majestie's comand to mention one Captaine Marshall to your Lordshipp, (who was Lieutenant of the Woolwich in 1679, and before that Comander of a small ketch and dogger) and saies he is knowne to your Lordshipp, to whom I have nothing further to say about him, then that I find his Majesty is disposed to bestow some command of this sort upon him, if your Lordshipp shall be satisfied with his qualifications in all respects for it, and recomend him to his Majestie's favour for such an employment.

Nor must I pass over this perticular about these fireships, without adding, that the officers of the Navy tell me, that the greatest reason of their backwardness in takeing them up, arises from their resolution that they shall all be ships of larger and better quality then have been usually, (and indeed at any time) bought for fireships in the Navy, which they find at this time not very easy to be come at, tho' I hope noe diligence or endeavours have been wanting on their part.

And this I mention to your Lordshipp with some regard to your being governed by it in your recomending of Comanders to the King for them. I bear in remembrance your Lordshipp's caution given me some time since touching the appointing of gunners for fireships, and your desires that such as should he hereafter recomended to those offices

HARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

might be examined by Captaine Leake the Master Gunner of England; to whom I lately applyed myselfe in the case of one desired by the Captaine of the Mermaid for his shipp, but finding the Captaine gone to the west with the traine of artillery, I find my selfe obliged to resort to you for your Lordshipp's recommending, and sending up such persons out of the fleet, as you shall think fitt to be putt into those employments in these six shippes, not doubting but his Majesty will be pleased to approve of, and appoint them thereto.

I observe your Lordshipp's mention only of two freshippes which you expected from Dover, but I find by a letter from M^r Yeams the builder at Dover to the Navy Board, that he had taken up and was fitting four, and accordingly the King's orders have been sent to those gentlemen to furnish him with money to answer the charges of that number, soe as I doubt not but your Lordshipp will receive the addition thereof to your Fleet. Praying you, as you shall think fitt to appoint Comanders or other officers to them, to give me some account thereof, in order to my acquainting his Majesty therewith, and takeing such notice of the same in the Registry of this Office, as may be convenient, both with respect to the King's service, and the rights of the persons. And this (since I have mentioned it) I shall desire your Lordshipp to direct being done in all like cases of your appointing officers of any kind to the shippes of your Fleet.

The Katherine yacht is arriv'd with the Dutch officers, who are committed in custody by his Majesty here in towne, and the yacht is under repaire at Deptford with all the dilligence that may bee.

The Assurance is also in hand at Sheerness, and will be dispatched with the greatest expedition that can be expected from the Officers of the Yard, without the assistance of her Comander, who has been pleased to absent himselfe from the shipp for severall daies, both without the King's leave, and without anybody's knowing where he was, which I neither did nor could forbear to acquaint His Majesty with.

According to what I promised and charged myselfe with in mine of the 12th I here inclose you his *Majestie's Order, countersigned by my Lord Middleton, directed to your Lordshipp, in the proper termes the former should have been.

I also herewith send you the King's owne *Orders for your releasing the flyboat which was taken by the Foresight, and for your doeing the like to such other small vessels as may fall into your hands of the like sort.

I moved his Majesty, upon what you mentioned to me about laying downe the buoys at the river's mouth, who (upon consulting with the Trinity House) finding that noe other inconvenience is likely to attend the keeping them up then the charge of the vessells to lye at their births, was pleased to direct, that they should not be replaced till further order, but that the vessells should continue there to give warning to our friends to avoid any danger therefrom.

The Roebuck sayled severall daies since from Sheerness, and is I doubt not ere this with you, and the Mermaid will follow as soon as she has received her provisions, gunners' stores, and gott her complement of men. The Portland has laine in Longreach, manned, victualled, and in all respects ready to saile, excepting the want of her guns, ever since yesterday was sevenight. But I hope that hinderance is or will be removed very speedily soe as your Lordshipp may very soon expect her with you, her Comander George Aylmer (whom I leave to make his own

* Not now with the letter.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

moane to your Lordshipp, as he has not spared to doe to me, about his want of his guns) haveing been extreemly dilligent in the getting her out, and deserves to have the same allwaies remember'd by your Lordshipp to his advantage, as I know the same will be by the King. I hope this will meet your Lordshipp with your fleet well at the Spithead, soe as I need not trouble you with any account concerning the condition of the Yorke or the other shippes fitting there, all necessary orders haveing been dispatch'd from hence, and the officers excited to use the utmost diligence for their dispatch.

His Majesty approves very well of your regard to the husbandry of his treasure in your overlooking of the demands made for stores, which is not only of great concernment to him in that respect, but to another yet greater, namely, that it is to be feared, if the present action continues or grows upon him, navall comodities will (as I have heretofore observed) be out of the power of money to purchase, at least for some species of them, and for many within any reasonable time, soe as to be of service to him. I observe the account you are pleased to give me of the watermen and fishermen in the fleet, at least in such of the shippes thereof, as you have received any account from about them, and when you shall please to add thereto the like from the other shippes I shall make the best use thereof I can to his Majestie's advantage, both in the chequeing the accounts which shall be brought in by the officers of those Companies, and the calling them to an account for their failures in the compliance with his Majestie's expectations, and their own promises to him in this matter.

Tho' I don't remember my having said to your Lordshipp (upon my mention to you the receipt of the papers taken in the Brandenburgher) that the list of the Dutch fleet was all that concerned your Lordshipp among those papers, yet in truth it was soe, for there was not one among them besides that, which in any manner related to the business of the sea, or to their or our fleet, the letters being all filled either with the account of their voyage from Holland hither, or relating to the private matters of the persons who wrote them; that only excepted which carryed the list of the fleet and plan of the army, which I received at first from your Lordshipp.

In the advices from Portsmouth of the arrivall of the Mountague, Constant-Warwick, Nonsuch and Unity fireshipps, I am very sorry to find nothing yet said [of] the Anthelope, especially considering her circumstances by the springing of the head of her mainmast, and the ill weather she has had to encounter. But I hope our next will bring us a good account of her.

I thank your Lordshipp for the sentences of the Court Martiall held about the tryall of the Master of the Centurion, and pylott of the S^t Albans, and have sent the same to the Navy-Board, and the Trinity House, in order to their takeing care that the King receives the benefit thereof, according to the intention of the said Court.

I herewith send your Lordshipp a supply* of instructions for Commanders and Lieutenants as you desire.

Your Lordshipp has done very well in takeing care for the recovering of the anchors and cables lost by the S^t Albans upon the Goodwin, and those by the other shippes upon the Longsand's Head, and 'tis hoped the same will thereby bee recovered.

As to what your Lordshipp proposes touching the manning of all the third rates in order to the securing of men for the fleet if there should be occasion for them in the spring, I did not faile to lay the same before his Majesty, who did not seem disposed at present to imbarque himself into soe great a charge as the same must unavoidably bring upon him, at least, till from the event of your voyage to the westward, he should be brought to a nearer prospect (then he at present is) of what strength his affaires may probably call for to be maintained at sea, both now, and in the ensuing spring.

* Not now with the letter.

His Majesty upon the advice of the officers of the Navy touching the providing a storeshipp to attend your fleet, and the difficulty, charge and length of time which will attend the takeing up and fitting a Merchant-Man proper for it, has been pleased upon the advice of the officers of the Navy on that behalfe to appoint one of his owne shippes, the Sweepstakes, to be fitted for that service, which is now in hand, and a magazine of stores preparing to be putt on board her, soe as I hope your Lordshipp may very soon expect her with you.

I think it fitt for me to acquaint you that upon a prospect of our action at sea being likely to be seated westward, (considering the Dutche's having made their descent in those parts), I have by the King's direction taking notice thereof to the officers of the Navy, in order to their makeing such provision of victualls, stores, and other necessaries for the fleet, as may best answer the occasions thereof there; not doubting but your Lordshipp, upon the same considerations, will be pleased to doe the like for what respects your Office of the Ordnance. Pray let me also observe to you that the Navy Board complaine of the want of masters for the shippes here fitting out to a degree, as to affirme that they are not able to provide them (for the great shippes especially) without assistance from your fleet, and therefore desire it may be recommended to your Lordshipp, to send up such persons as you shall judge qualified to take those charges upon them.

The like I am to observe to you in relation to pilotts, the Trinity-house declareing that the fleet is so stocked with those sort of people, that there is not one, within their comand here, to take charge of any of the King's shippes, and therefore they, as well as the Navy Board, make it their desire to your Lordshipp, to send some up from the fleet to answer the services here, which it is hoped your Lordshipp may very well doe, considering where you now are, and are likely to bee, not only out of pilott-water, but where they are neither obliged, nor allowed to take any accountableness for or charge of the King's shippes.

I here inclose your Lordshipp a letter* to Captain Elliott from my Lord Godolphin, at whose motion concerning him, his Majesty was pleased to say, that he had him in his eye and care for advancement in the Navy, and that he had recommended him accordingly to your Lordshipp, and at the same time to comand me, not only to be his remembrancer here, as any opportunity should happen, but to mention him to your Lordshipp, as one whom he is very well disposed to have preferr'd by your Lordshipp in the fleet, as occasion shall happen for it.

What remains for me to add, is the acquainting you that the King is very well satisfied with your determinations touching your future proceedings, as they are expressed in your letter to him of the 15th inst, and as an instance of it, has thought it unnecessary to signe a warrant, which by his comand and the advice of his ministers had been prepared for his signature in explanation of his last Order to your Lordshipp by my Lord Middleton of the 12th; a copie of which, as it was soe prepared *I enclose your Lordshipp. With which and the advertizeing your Lordshipp that his Majesty left this towne on Saturday last for Windsor, and from

* Not now with the letter.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

thence the next day towards Salisbury where he is before this I trust in God very well arrived, with purpose of remaineing there or thereabouts in the ordering the affairs of his army untill the service thereof shall remove him thence. I doe with great longings to hear of your Lordshipp and the fleet after the tempestious weather wee have for some daies past had. I kiss your hands and with continued wishes of prosperity to both remaine unfeignedly, my Lord, your most faythfull and obedient servant."

1688, Nov. 20th.—An account of the defects of his Majesty's ship Rupert—signed by Charles Staggin and Thomas Day, lieutenants and five others—with a certificate at back dated November 27th by Isaac Betts and William Stigant that they do not think her a fit ship for "busking" in the sea.

1688, Nov. 20th, Plymouth.—Captain George Churchill to Lord Dartmouth.

The leakiness of his ship (the Newcastle) forced him on Sunday morning to bear away for this place. The pumps were not able to vent the water as fast as it came in; about 80 barrells of powder have been "damnified." Has got her into Catt water, and is at work getting the provisions out, in hopes to stop some of her leaks and bring her to Portsmouth. As she is now will not venture his own or his men's lives in her, and it is impossible that she can stay out this winter. Should be glad to receive his Lordship's commands.

1688, Nov. 21st.—Lord Dartmouth to Lord Berkeley.

When they parted was not fully resolved to proceed immediately to Torbay, but rather to come to Spithead and pick up the wants the fleet lay under; but on Saturday morning finding he had 44 or 45 sail of men of war and fireships with him, and the wind at E.S.E., good weather and a settled hard sky, thought after he had been so much urged, it was not fit to neglect the opportunity (which had proved great if the wind had held with moderate weather) but it has pleased God to prevent him. Hopes his Lordship does not take amiss his zealous concern for him; knows more ships are fitting out, and that there must be more flags, and has all along resolved to bring him among the flags, which the opportunity the writer then hoped for would certainly have put into his power. The bad weather has disordered the Resolution, and he is forced to go into the Edgar.

1688, Nov. 24th, Spithead.—Lord Berkeley to Lord Dartmouth.

The weather has been so bad since his coming in hither that the pilot would not venture to carry him into the harbour, so that nothing has yet been done to his ship or the Edgar, it will be a month before his now ship can be refitted; fears that some one else is appointed for her from aloft, but that his Lordship best knows. The Prince of Wales came to Portsmouth last night guarded by the Irish dragoons. It is certain that Lord Cornbury is gone over to the Prince of Orange with his regiment, and the Duke of Berwick's regiment of horse, and the Duke of St. Alban's, the Lord Colchester and the company that went with him are also with the Prince. The first captain of Sir Edward Hale's regiment is missing and several others, and there is a jealousy of many more of the army. The Lord Lovelace was taken going over but defended himself very well, in which conflict near 20 were killed, among the rest, one Whitlock, formerly a sea lieutenant. My lord had 70 horse with him, most of which got clear. Frank Russell is gone among the rest. The Duke of Berwick's regiment of foot, Sir Edward Hales's and the Irish are here, and the Irish regiment of dragoons which is all the news except that the King is now with the army.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1688, Nov. 22nd, The Mary at Spithead.—Sir Roger Strickland to Lord Dartmouth. It is no little satisfaction to him to find that, in spite of many applications, no steps have been taken for removing himself and men into the Warspite. Thinks the Mary may be as soon got ready as the other.

1688, Nov. 22nd, London.—Philip Musgrave to Lord Dartmouth.

Hearing that his Lordship was forced into Portsmouth by the late storms, and supposing that the damage sustained by the fleet will keep him there some time, has ventured to send this short and melancholy account of our affairs in the Ordnance Office. State of cash need not be sent, for they have not one penny upon any head, and what is worse nothing has been this week allotted them by the Treasury. The state of small arms is very near as low, there being no "snaphance musquets" left but 600 made for Lord Dartmouth's own regiment, notwithstanding that they received all from Bristol. Changing of the matchlocks in the army hath mightily drained them, which could not be prevented; the gunmakers are not able to fit up the reparable arms or perform their contracts for new, for want of money. The stores for sea service are so exhausted ("as is our credit also") that the ships already ordered cannot be fitted out without a considerable supply of money. Great complaints are come from Ireland of the arms sent thither from Chester, and not without cause; those sent from hence are not much better. The Lord Deputy writes to know what station the Italian engineer should be in, and with what allowances. He has been informed that but one engineer is borne upon the Irish establishment, to whom an allowance of 200*l.* per annum was to be made, and that the Italian was designed for that employment; but nothing will satisfy the Lord Deputy but a letter from Lord Dartmouth himself.

Relates the disputes between Sir Edward Hales and the Ordnance officers about the mounting of batteries at the Tower.

1688, Nov. 22nd, Portsmouth dockyard.—Sir Richard Beach to Lord Dartmouth. Concerning the fitting out and repairs of the ships Montagu, Edgar, Warspite, Dunkirk, Lion, &c., and the supply of stores. Delays have arisen not from want of care and vigilance, but of strength only, the men being much discouraged for want of money.

1688, Nov. 23rd, Portsmouth dockyard.—Same to same. Relates the measures taken to repair the damage done to the fleet by the late foul weather.

1688, Nov. 23rd, Kent (ship).—Sir Francis Wheler to Lord Dartmouth.

Has received his Majesty's commission to command the Kent. Returns thanks for his Lordship's kind recommendation. Is now at Black Stakes and will sail to the Hope the first good weather.

1688, Nov. 24th, Saturday, 12 at noone. Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"It is with an extraordinary degree of content, that I have just now received your Lordship's of yesterday from the Spithead, both on the score of your personal safety, and that in generall soe great a portion of his Majesty's fleet are returned with you into port, as by their number (tho' their particulars you could not tell me) joyned with those which I have otherwise advice of, give me ground of hoping that the loss his

HARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSB.

Majesty has sustained from the late tempests will prove much more tolerable then wee here have for many dayes laine under an apprehension it would have done. The particulars of which ships that are come in elsewhere within my notice are these,

The Henrietta	}	In the Downes.
Antelope
Bonadventure
Crown
Lark
Guernsey	}	In Portland Road.
Sally Rose
Speedwell
Cignet
Portsmouth
Rugby		At South Yarmouth. Cowes.

The loss of the Heldrenbergh and poor Mr. Howell in her I doe very heartily bemoan.

If the Newcastle be not with you, it is possible the talk yesterday upon the Exchange may be true, where I am told it was said that Captain Churchill was come into Plymouth with a friggat of the King's, but under a mistaken name of the Hampshire for the Newcastle.

Your Lordshipp has certainly put the dispatch of the refitting of the fleet into the true method by committing the same to Sir Richard Beach, Sir John Berry and Sir William Booth, who are a full Navy Board, noe less empowered, then I am sure they are disposed to give it all the furtherance that the state of the stores there, and with their bretheren here tell me they are sending from hence will admit. To which whatever can be added by any thoughtfulness or industry of mine (you may depend upon it) shall not be wanting.

What I may have more to say to your Lordshipp upon my communicating this your letter to my Lords with whom his Majesty has, in his absence, left the direction of his affaires, must be respited till the evening, when you shall be sure to have it, and whatever more may occur to me worth your Lordshipp's notice, I hastning this away to you by express, out of a desire of giveing you the speediest satisfaction I could touching the remainder of your fleet; doing the like at the same time to the King by express to Salisbury, as well knowing the ease it will be of to him, under his other great cares. To which God give a quick and auspicious end."

In a postscript Mr. Pepys adds,

"I have taken this conveyance for sending you the *printed book of Dutch instructions, it easing me of a care I was under how to find a person here, qualified for the right translation of it, in hopes, your Lordshipp will furnish me with a copie when it shall be done."

1688, Nov. 24th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"According to my promise to your Lordshipp in mine by express to you this afternoone, I have communicated to my Lords of the committee for foreigne affaires, your Lordshipp's to me of yesterday's date, to whom it was matter of great content to find you safely come in, with soe considerable a part of the fleet, as with what I also informed them of from other places, gives them ground of hoping (as I have said in my former) that tho' the damages sustained by the fleet must be great, the totall miscarriages of ships therein cannot be soe;

* Not now with the letter.

As to any advice to be offered you from my Lords on this subject, partly from the grounds they have of expecting the King back from Salisbury here within a few dayes, and partly from their considering that till the ships are putt againe into a condition of service (which will require some time) noe advice can be of any present use in reference to their future disposall, they have thought it best to respite any debates thereon to his Majesty's own comeing hither, when all those matters will have opportunity of being putt together, upon which his Majesty's resolutions will be best taken in relation to the whole of his affaires.

The only thing therefore I have now to add, is the givinge your Lordshipp the following state of the severall shippes now in fitting forth, viz^t.

3 ^d Hampton Court	-	-	At Blackstake, going to the Hope
3 ^d Kent	-	-	to take in their gunns &c.
4 th Portland	-	-	In the Hope, manned and ready to sayle ever since the 10 th instant, waits only for her gunns.
4 th Phenix	-	-	Longreach, takeing in her provisions and stores.
4 th Tyger-Prize	-	-	At Deptford, ready to saile to Longreach.
4 th Assurance	-	-	At Sheerness, will be ready to saile this night.
Fireships {	Mermaide	-	At Deptford, ready to saile to Longreach.
	Thomas and Elizabeth	-	At Deptford, fitting for a fireship.

Concerning which what I may have further to say to your Lordshipp, as to any particulars of them, you shall have in my next. In the mean time you may please to know, that since my other to you of this day, I find the report therein mentioned touching the Newcastle is true, I haveing received this evening from the King a letter from Captain Churchill to me from Plymouth which his Majesty had opened upon the way at Salisbury."

1688, Nov. 24th, The Downs.—Captain Edmund Elyott to Lord Dartmouth. Describes how he was driven from the fleet by bad weather. All his stern was staved in by another ship, so that he was very near bidding adieu to this world, but by God's providence has escaped, and is now by Mr. Pepys's order going to Sheerness to be repaired.

1688, Nov. 24th.—The information of Stephen Matthews, master of the Dove, of London.

That being homeward bound from Lisbon he met the 6th inst. with a Dutch man-of-war about 5 leagues off the Start, was taken out of his ship and carried before Admiral Herbert, who was at anchor in Torbay. Being asked what letters he had from England he refused to answer, and a lieutenant was sent on board his ship who took away all his papers. Among them was a letter for the Queen Dowager, and two to the King, which he broke open and read, and would not return either those or any other papers but his Amsterdam letters. Admiral Herbert sent also on board his vessel to entice his men into the Prince of Orange's service, and prevailed with three of them to do it. Twenty of their greatest ships had this motto in their ensigns, For the Protestant Religion and Liberty of England. The deponent was detained till the 9th, and forced to sign a paper (copy attached) undertaking to sail straight to Amsterdam.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1688, Nov. 26th, 11 at night. Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"Haveing nothing new since the two I troubled your Lordship with of the 24th current, this comes by express direction of the King given me this night at the Cabinet-Councill, to apprize you of one particular aggravation to his many other present difficulties, which he neither had nor could have mett with any intimation of, till his very entrance almost into the town this afternoone, namely, the withdrawing of the Princess of Denmark in the night (last night), without any judgement to be made, otherwise then by a very uncertaine guess at the designe of her soe doing. Now, his Majesty's end in my telling you this being to prevent any wrong impressions that may be made in the fleet concerning this matter (through mis-representations) by your being informed in all that wee yet know of the truth thereof, I am in short to lett you know, that without the least previous occasion for, or appearance of any discontent in her Highness, she went in her usual manner and time to bed, M^r Danvers (who was in present waiting) lying in the anti-chamber. This morning Sir Benjamin Bathurst at about $\frac{1}{2}$ an hour past 7 went up in his usual manner to enquire after the Princess's health, and finding noe body in the fore-rooms, went on to the anti-chamber, where he found M^r Danvers dressing her self in order to attend the Princess, as not haveing yet done it; upon which (he just now told the King) he went down to his office, and after haveing been there about $\frac{1}{2}$ an hour, he heard a sudden out cry of women, which upon his running-out to satisfye himself in the occasion of, found it to be a universal cry among the ladies, that some or other had carried away the Princess. The history of which, as much thereof as is yet known, is this, that upon M^r Danvers's going in to her Highness's chamber to call her, and receiving noe answer to her call, she opened the bed, and found the Princess gone, and the bed cold, with all her yesterday's cloaths, even to her stockings and shoes left behind; taking her passage, as is concluded (by the doores being found but single-locked that way, leading to a stoole-roome) down a pair of small back staires, by which the necessary woman uses to goe in and out for the cleaning of that roome. Now as another branch of this story I must tell you, that orders comeing last night from the King, that both my Lord Churchill's houses in town and at St. Albans should be immediately seized, and all that was in them, and (as I take it) my Lady Churchill her self, that which relates to his house here at court, was of course to be executed by my Lord Chamberlaine only, who instead of proceeding instantly to the work by way of surprize, for preventing escapes or removalls of any thinges or persons which might have been of benefit to the King to have seized, suffered himself in complacence to be delayed by the Princess for half an hour by her express desiring of it from him, and had this effect, that my Lady Churchill and Mrs. Berkeley, and the Princess her self are all three gone, but whether together or noe is not certainly known. This only is said, by the centry that was at that time at the guard at the Cockpit-doore next the street, that in the dead of the night, about 2 or 3 a clock, a coach with six horses and one lady in it, came thither, and after very little stay tooke up two ladies more from that door, and soe went away. But whither, noe body undertakes to guess, this that I have told you being the whole of what has yet been discovered of any degree of certainty touching her going, without the least appearance in the world for that which evill disposed people have already made it their business to insinuate into the town, and is got into vulgar talk, of her being forced away by the papists, whereas hardly anything can be thought more natural then that the ladies should think it time for them to withdraw as soon as they had received tidings of their husbands having done the same. But his Majesty has nevertheless thought it not becoming him to part with a daughter without some yet more solemn enquiry made into the ground of it, has this night required all the Prince and Princess's servants that had any relation of service upon the person of the Princess, both men and women of every degree, to be immediately found out and confined to their chambers till they have passed a very strict examination by a committee of the Council touching their knowledge in any part of the premises, and this in order to his Majesty's acquainting both the Privy Council and my Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London to morrow with the results of the said examinations. Of which whatever shall arise materiall therein, more than I have been able hear to tell you, you shall not faile to have from me in my next.

In the mean time I am further by the King's command to observe to you, that he did commit a command of his to be communicated to your Lordship by my Lord of Dover, who went yesterday from the King to the Government of Portsmouth in the absence of the Duke of Berwick. For the effectual and speedy execution of which command, his Majesty is pleased to be soe much concerned, as to require my imediate preparing for his signature (which I accordingly in great hast did, as you will find by the manner of its writeing) a warrant for supplying to your Lordship my Lord of Dover's supposed comission of delivering the message to you which the King sent by him. This warrant I here inclose you, in my own hand, as containeing a matter which will not bear it's being known to more here then was at the debate of it, till wee may be morally sure that noe advice of it from hence by land, could prevent its execution."

The original warrant (above referred to) is dated Whitehall the 28th of November 1688, and is as follows,

"James R

Our Will and Pleasure is, that you take the first opportunity of winde and weather to send such one of our shippes as you shall thinke the fittest, (with regard to the prudence and faythfullnesse of her commander) to Plimouth, there to seize the person of Captain George Churchill Comandant of our shipp the Newcastle, and him to bring back to you in safe custody; you makeing provision for the command of our sayd shipp in the absence of the said Captaine Churchill, and for the safe keepinge of Captain Churchill himselfe when brought to you, until further Order from us for his being otherwise disposed of or discharged."

1688, Nov. 25th, Andover.—King James II. to Lord Dartmouth.

"I send this you by the Lord Dover, whom I send to Portsmouth to command in chief there, I am a going back to London my self intending to be there to-morrow and haue ordred all my army to quarter along the riuer, beginning at Marlo. He will tell you how Lord Churchill and Duke of Grafton are gone ouer to the enemy with some others. I haue charged Lord Dover also to speake with you of my intentions concerning my sonne, and you must follow Lord Dover's directions as to what concerns our sayd sonne, by being assisting to him in what directions I haue giuen him by word of mouth. I haue not tyme to say more.

JAMES R."

[Endorsed by Lord Dartmouth.] November 25th, 1688.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

"These three letters received not till the 2^d of December two by the hands of Lord Dover the other as indorsed in M^r Peppy's packet.

The other two being dated the 1st of December were brought to me soone one after the other on the 3^d in the morning, all these 5 letters were answered on the 3^d of December and delivered to my Lord Dover and by him sent with a messenger on purpose. Resolved between us both not to doe any thing in carrying away the Prince of Wales till we haue his Majesty's farther order and an answer to my letter."

1688, Nov. 28th, Unity fireship, Spithead.—Captain Francis Wivell to Lord Dartmouth. His ship's "rurther" is almost off, and the ship so short that he cannot stow a boat, though but of 7 oars; he will be forced to bear away for any harbour the first hard gale of wind. Humbly prays his Lordship to order him into Portsmouth harbour, and remove him into a ship fit for service.

1688, Nov. 28th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"That I may appear noe less forward to administer any thing to your satisfaction and content, then I have now for a great while been forced to be in handing to you occasions of trouble, I would not omit the advtizing you by express, that I am just now come from attending the King at his Cabinet, where he has been graciously pleased to declare his royall purpose of calling a Parliament to meet at Westminster as soon as ever the time requisite for issueing of the writts, and the 40 dayes required by law for their returnes will admit, and accordingly has comanded my Lord Chantellour to cause the writs to be forthwith prepared and issued for the Parliament's meeting the 15th of January next.

But what pitie it is that I could not bring this home, without meeting something to abate some of the pleasure which the foregoing tideings must give all good subjects, M^r Frowd stopping me in my way to tell me, that my Lord of Bath had seized Plymouth for the Prince, seizing many officers and soldiers as prisoners, and confineing even my Lord Huntington himself to his chamber;

My Lord, I have this day received your express of the 26th, and have communicated it to the King; but he not being able all this day (soe many matters of the greatest moment pressing at once upon him) to find time to consider and direct anything relateing to the Navy, and particularly to your Lordshipp, and soe finding my self unfurnished with any thing to say to you, upon the principall point therein, I shall respite the whole till to morrow's post; and indeed I have been these two dayes greatly indisposed with a cough and head-ach, and am soe at this minute, that I am not able to hold up my head longer."

1688, Nov. 28th, London.—Philip Musgrave to Lord Dartmouth.

Since the King's return Colonel Skelton is made Lieutenant of the Tower in the room of Sir Edward Hales. Sorry he must continue the same melancholy account of affairs in the office, everything being now at a stand for want of money His Lordship will have heard of Prince George and the Duke of Ormonde having quitted the King at Andover, and of the Princess of Denmark's flight from Whitehall. Last night all the Lords Spiritual and Temporal that were in town (Roman Catholics only excepted, who it is thought had private intimation not to appear) attended his Majesty according to summons. The King gave a short account of the state of his affairs, and required their opinion of what was necessary to be done for his own safety and the securing the succession to his son. Several speeches were made hereupon, and all centred in the speedy calling a Parliament. His Majesty did not determine anything, but thought fit to take night's time to consider thereon; and this morning directions were given for the issuing writs for the speedy assembling a Parliament, which God grant may end in the security of his Majesty's sacred person, and the general quiet and satisfaction of all his subjects. It is said that a general pardon is to be granted to qualify the nobility and gentry, that are gone over to the Prince of Orange or have taken up arms in the several counties, to sit in Parliament. The Duke of Albemarle is dead, and James Grahme has promised to move the King this night in his Lordship's affair. His wife presents her duty, and all his Lordship's family at the Cockpit are well.

1688, Nov. 28th, Portamouth Dockyard.—Sir Richard Beach to Lord Dartmouth. Reports his proceedings in fitting out or repairing the ships Dreadnought, Dunkirk, Warspite, Mary, &c.

1688, Nov. 29th, Fireship Speedwell in the port of Poole.—Captain Edward Poulson to Lord Dartmouth. Gives an account of his being driven by bad weather into Poole harbour. In his worst extremity the ship was deserted by the men, whose names and qualities he annexes (16 in all), who took away the only boat and left him with the chirurgion, carpenter, gunner, and five boys to the mercy of the storm; they were so unchristianlike that they would not stay to furl the sails, and so he was forced to cut the mainmast by the board to save the ship and their lives; the mainmast carried away the mizen mast with all the rigging. After riding two days and nights, several times firing guns to no purpose, fair weather set in, and with much assistance was able to reach a place of safety. Encloses a list of vessels and men that helped his ship from St. Alban's [Head] to Studland Bay.

1688, Nov. 29th, Surgeon-General J. Pearse to Lord Dartmouth. After vain efforts to obtain payment from the late Navy Commissioners and from the Treasury of money advanced by himself for quarters and cure of the sick and wounded, had made bold yesterday morning to tell His Majesty himself that unless he had some speedy supply he should not be able to quarter any more sick men. Notwithstanding all this solicitation is got no farther than to have it ordered at the Treasury that he is to have next week some part of the 700*l.* due at Michaelmas last. Has made Mr. Secretary Pepys acquainted with his condition, and hopes his Lordship will also recommend the matter to him and to the Treasury, for he cannot make brick without straw, and he is ashamed to show his face to the surgeons of the several ports, to whom he has given his hand and long since promised to pay 700*l.*

1688, Nov. 29th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"Mine of yesterday by express haveing respited to this day (for the reason therein mentioned) my answer to your Lordship's of the 26th; I now come in the first place to thank you for your list of officers, which I shall cause to be registred according to their respective qualities.

"I have communicated to his Majesty your other list of Comanders designed by you for fireships, and have his direction to observe the same, and in the order you have sett them down; which I shall doe, at least as farr as the persons therein-named will accept thereof, which I am told they will not all doe.

"I shall alsoe remember your advice about haveing the gunners examined by M^r Rothwell (during the absence of Captain Leake) for such fireships as shall have their gunners provided here, which I fear will be very few, It being with much difficulty that I have got one for the last. Soe that I doubt the fleet must from hence-forward help us therewith.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

"Yeames of Dover did in a letter which I saw of his to the Navy Board, speak of 4 fireships that he was engaged in the fitting for you from thence. But I have since heard but of two, and even those two, now they are compleatly fitted for the sea, not able to gett out by reason of the quantity of beach lately thrown in there from the sea.

"C[aptain] George Aylmer has indeed taken a very great deal of paines in the dispatching out of his shipp, and is now upon his way to the Downes, if a messenger whom I sent away this day by express to that purpose, by the King's command, has not stopt him. When his impediments for sayling were removed, your Lordshipp will find in the inclosed copie of his letter to me, giving me an account thereof.

"The Suadadoes [Sandados] is safe in the Downes. But if the Mordant be not overlooked in your list, and that indeed she be not with you at Portsmouth, I question what is become of her, for I have had noe notice of her from elsewhere.

"Your Lordshipp shall not want supplies of instructions for Comanders and lieutenants.

"You are doing a very good work in getting a strict account of the state of your victualls. Pray be pleased to hasten it. For notwithstanding all my pressing for the provideing of more, the service may meet with disappointment therein if the Commissioners of the Victualling here goe by one reckoning and the men eat by another.

"Your instructions of the 1st of October were indeed miscalled by whoever called them an Order of Councill; but I don't remember where it should be that I called 'um soe, as they went from me to your Lordshipp, though they were handed to me by an Order of Councill.

"I doe greatly foresee the inconveniencys the service will be subject to from want of pilots and masters, in case the fleet be not in condition to spare any.

"It would be an extraordinary peice of skill, and it might very well have had it's success, if indeed the Brandenburgher's papers were shams and the Scotchman a cheat; for it tooke place with everybody here, whatever it did elsewhere.

"And now, my Lord, as to the maine point in relation to your next proceeding with the fleet, the safety of which (without expectation of any more action from it for this season) seemes to be the most of his Majesty's present care about it: he has been pleased to give you his advice therein, under his own hand in the enclosed. Whereto referring your Lordshipp as to that particular, I am by his speciall direction given me this evening at the Cabinet to observe to you that forasmuch as (according to what I have just now said) he does not look for any opportunity of enterprizeing anything new with the fleet this winter, and for that also he lies at this time under many incitements to the preventing of expence, whether in mony or stores, he has not only comanded a stopp to be putt to the Navy Board's proceeding in the buying of any more of the six fireships last ordered to be bought, then they have already contracted for, which is three, but to recomend it to your Lordshipp to be as spareing as may be in the present fitting out to sea any fresh shipp, but instead thereof to incourage as much as may be the refitting of these that have been abroad; the effects of the weare and teare of a winter (witnes this before us) seeming litle less to be apprehended than those arising from a sumer's warr. Besides the increase of charge attending the same to the King on many accounts, and the complaints which the officers of the Navy must daily expect (as they now find) from Comanders in relation to their old shipp, while importunity will procure them new.

"I am endeavouring all that is possible to hasten out the storeshipp, and am told this day by Sir Richard Haddock that she will now be very

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

soon dispatched, though I do not find from the Commissioners of the Navy at Portsmouth, (to whom you refer me) but that they shall be able in the maine to make good the present wants of the fleet from the stores they have there ; especially if what shall be wanting may be left to be supplied here to such part of the fleet as your Lordshipp may possibly, upon this letter of the King's, conclude upon haveing brought into the river of Thames, or elsewhere eastward.

"My Lord, for your part for which his Majestie refers you to me relating to the state of his publick affaires, nothing has arose of new since mine last night more than that he has been pleased to determine upon a Proclamation to be presently published concerning the Parliament, with some provision for clearing to the world his intentions and endeavors for securing the freedome of it, both in its election and sitting.

"Colonel Kirk is also brought to town this day prisoner, and is confined as such with a guard to his own house.

"Wee have had no fresher news touching the motion of the Prince of Orange, then that sending his cookes before to prepare it, he dined on Monday or Tuesday last at my Lord of Bristoll's house at Sherborne."

The copy of Captain George Aylmer's letter above referred to is dated the 26th of November 1688 from Portland ; it mentions that, after a delay of sixteen days, his guns had been put on board, and that he intended sailing that afternoon, concluding with a wish to be informed of the position of the fleet.

1688, Nov. 29th.—The Prince of Orange to Lord Dartmouth.

"My Lord, the Protestant religion and the liberties of England being now at stake, I cannot beleive you will contribute towards the destruction of either. I therefore send you this letter to invite you earnestly to joyne the fleete vnder your command with mine and to declare as I haue donne in my Declaration for the Religion and Liberties. It wille an act so commendable that it will not only oblige me for ever to be your friend but even to study which way I may shew my kindnesse to you in the most particular manner. I expect and desire you to consider well of this my proposition and advice and that I may speedely receaue the news of your compliance, which will make me your affectionate friend."

[Endorsed by Lord Dartmouth]

November 29th, 1668. The Prince of Orange.

December 12th, Received at Spithead,

Do. 12th, Answered by Captain Aylmer.

1688, Nov. 29th, Whitehall.—King James II. to Lord Dartmouth.

"You will have an account from Mr. Peypps (sic) of what passes here, and the ill condition my affairs are in on shore, so that I shall say nothing concerning them. I am sorry you have been so woughly (sic) used by the winds at sea ; this is a bad tyme of yeare for any action upon that inconstant element. The preservation of the squadron under your command is of the last consequence, therefore pray consider well which is the best way to do it, and where you thinke 'tis fitt the greatest part of your fleet shall be, it being fitt to leaue some ships at Portsmouth, either at the Spithead or in the harbore as you shall thinke best, and lett me haue you (sic) opinion speedily upon it, that I may see if I aproue of it.

J. R."

[Addressed.] For the Lord Dartmouth.

[Endorsed by Lord Dartmouth]

November 29th, 1688.

Received December 2^d in a pacquet from Mr. Peppys.

[Seal—Crown supported by cupids and monograms beneath.]

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

1688, Nov. 29th, Whitehall.

"This is the second letter I write to you upon the subject of my sonne, tho' the other was from Andeuer, as I remember, it will not haue been deliured to you soner then this. That was not giuen to you soner, hoping still things would not haue been so very bad as they are. 'Tis my sonne they aime at and 'tis my sonne I must endeauer to preserue, what so euer becoms of me, therefore I conjure you to assist Lord Dover in getting him sent away in the yachts, as sone as wind and weather will permitt for the first port they can gett to in France, and that with as much secresy as may be, and see that trusty men may but (sic) put in the yachts that he may be exposed to no other danger but that of the sea, and know I shall look on this as one of the greatest piece of seruice you can do me,

James R."

Nov. 30th, "Since the writing of what is before I haue altred my mind as to the delaying of it a little, as you will see more at large by myne to Lord Dover, to which I refer you, and do againe conjure you to use your utmost endeauors to haue my sonne secured as in the first part of this letter and to haue all things ready when 'tis proper for him to embark as I haue already sayd in myne to Lord Dover.

J. R."

[Addressed.] For the Lord Dartmouth.

[Endorsed by Lord Dartmouth]

November 29th and 30th, 1688.

Received December 2^d by Lord Dover.

1688, Dec. 1st, Whitehall; "nine at night. Mr. Peyps writs the newse to you, so that 'tis is only to tell you I had this morning yours of the 28: and 30: and tho' as you say in it, I haue reason to mistrust mankind, yett I assure you tho' all the rest of those about me should betray me, I could neuer suspect you, as you may haue seen by some letters of myne, which I hope will haue been giuen you, before this getts to you. Lett me know by this messenger, when he returns, when you receued them, I shall be very impatient till I know you haue had them, and put those orders in execution.

J. R."

[Addressed.] For the Lord Dartmouth.

[Endorsed by Lord Dartmouth]

December 1st, 1688,

Received the 3^d by Lord Dover.

"Vpon the receuing of this you are immediatly to put in execution the orders I haue already giuen you and Lord Dover for the sending away of my sonne, the Prince of Wales. Whitehall, December the first 1688.

James R."

[Addressed.] For the Lord Dartmouth.

[Endorsed by Lord Dartmouth]

December 1st, 1688,

Received 3^d by Lord Dover.

[See Lord Dartmouth's memorandum on these letters under date of Nov. 25 ante.]

1688, Dec. 1st, 11 at night. Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"My last was of the 29th, since which I have received both yours of the 28th with a postscript to one of them of the 30th of November, and have communicated the same to his Majesty, who is pleased to approve of your making the most of the service of the Dreadnought and Mary, and your having yet appointed only the Edgar and Dunkirk to the sea, of the three that his Majesty had order'd to be made fitt for the same; the King being (as I by his comand advised you in my last) very unwilling upon the considerations therein mention'd, to enter upon any increase of his present charge at sea at this season of the yeare, that may with any convenience be spared.

His Majesty himselfe is wittness, and soe are his Ministers here, that I spare no importunity with the Victuallers of the Navy, for good supplies of provisions for you.

Nor will I faile at the next setting of the Board to move for a further supply of contingent mony.

I thank you for your additional list of officers made by you since your last, and have directed their being registered accordingly.

The King does fully concurr with you touching the inexpediency of endeavouring anything now in the Plymouth matter.

Nor was the first notice I received yesterday by express from Sir Richard Beach, less surprizing or grievous to mee and the Navy Board, of the stopp put by my Lord of Dover and seizure made by him of the money and provisions belonging to the Navy, then it was to your Lordshipp in behalfe of the fleet, or Sir Richard Beach in that of the yard. But thanks be to God it is over. For had not the same post brought the news of the discharge thereof that brought that of the seisure, I feare it would have raised a clamour that would not easily have been laide againe.

His Majesty takes notice of the provision you have made of cruizers, thinking it very requisite that they be kept to a strict compliance with their orders from your Lordshipp; and that you will also take into your thoughts whatever else you shall judge adviseable and in your power to doe against any attempts that may be made by the enemy. And this he has comanded me to observe to you the more expressly at this time, in regard of some advice he has this very afternoone received from a hand whose intelligence he has at all times good regard to, that Admirall Herbert has orders to goe to sea, and look out for your fleet. And this the rather, for the sake of some advice I also received this day from Sir Robert Holmes, importing the Holland's fleet being actually at sea, but with some doubt of the way they are bound. An extract of which letter of Sir Robert Holmes relateing to this matter I here inclose you in his own words; it being the King's desire, you should have the whole of what we can gather touching the motion of the Hollands shipp, for you to make such use thereof as you in your own judgement shall conceive most reasonable. But there is one word more I have from the King by way of intelligence for you; namely, that he has understood from Plymouth (since the seizure of that place) that they doe expect the coming in of the Hollands fleet thither to refitt."

The extract of the letter from Sir Robert Holmes above referred to is dated the 28th of November from Yarmouth, and is as follows,

"Now I am to tell you that there is a hoy come into this road this morning, that has been at Topsome ever since the first arrivall of the Dutch Fleet; the master of her saw their landing and all their transactions ever since. He is an intelligible fellow and one that I can give credit to, bred and borne in this towne. Yesterday in the afternoone he sayled out of Topsome, at the same time were all the shippes there preparing to come out, great many under sayle, and that tyde and the tyde on Munday came out about 100 sayle. They had layd small craft upon the back of the banks all along the river, to keep our lights to sayle by night, by reason the tydes falling out ill to come out by day light. I believe they may be all out before this time, and without doubt will not be long before they sayle, and I doe beleive may stopp here; otherwise to convey their shippes of carriage as farr as the Downes, and

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

so into the mouth of the river, they were getting some pylotts for the River Severn, and talkt as if they would send some shipp thither, which I am apt to believe.

By all that I can gather from this man and others, they were never above 42 sayle of men of warr, and not soe many now. The Fansfa which was sent to the westward to press men was seized by them."

1688, Dec. 1st, Portsmouth Dockyard.—Sir Richard Beach to Lord Dartmouth. Understood by his Lordship's of the 28th past that Sir William Jennens should proceed in the Dunkirk, but the Warspite being a handsomer and bigger ship he had no mind to the Dunkirk, but complained of the rottenness of her masts and the weakness of her decks, which he had no reason to do, but that he's always too forward in making complaints. If his lordship will send any body aboard to take a survey, she will be found a fitting ship for the sea. This morning has come his Lordship's order to Sir William Jennens to go in the Warspite. If the Dunkirk be intended to join the fleet, some men must be appointed to finish her rigging, &c. The rainy dirty weather ever since the fleet appeared there has stopped the caulking and shipwright's work.

1688, Dec. 1st, Office of Ordnance.—Henry Tichborne, Edward Sherburne, T. Gardiner, and J. Rothwell to Lord Dartmouth. Though not insensible of the great weight of naval affairs resting upon his Lordship, cannot forbear addressing him on behalf of those of the Ordnance, which lately flourished under his particular care and providence, but now is fallen under as many hard distractions as the public. Have received demands for many stores, &c. from the Governor of Tilbury; and importunate letters from Mr. Phillips, making demands for carrying on various works at Portsmouth, with which they are altogether unable to comply. A great charge has also been cast upon the office by the necessary defence of Hull garrison, proposed by Sir Martin Beckman, for which the contract amounted to upwards of 5,000*l.*, and of which only 2,150*l.* has been paid; so that Mr. Fitch, who has finished the most part of his work, is likely to fall under an inevitable ruin unless his Lordship intercede with the Treasury. The great weight of debt upon them, the impoverishment of their best and ablest creditors, merchants and artificers belonging to the office, and the exhaustion of their stores, render them incapable of furnishing the least part of the land forces or the smallest squadron (nay, ship) of the fleet; yet they are now called upon to supply a number of ships, and convert six ships bought of merchants into fireships, &c. Request his Lordship to represent the great exigencies of the office to the Treasury.

1688, Dec. 3rd, London.—Lord Berkeley to Lord Dartmouth.

"The ways and horses upon the road are so very bad, and myself so unused to ride that I could not reach this place till this day noon, when the King was at dinner; after he had dined I kissed his hand and he carried me into the Queen's bedchamber where I read the address, which his Majesty seemed well pleased withal. I also gave him your Lordship's letter, he asked me several questions about the fleet which I satisfied him in; and being very much tired asked leave to stay here for 2 or 3 days which was granted me. . . . Abundance of people rail at you as I am told, but the King continually justifies you. I have not yet seen my Lord of Salisbury. The whole Dutch fleet are at Plymouth, where they were saluted by the citadel at their coming in with above 40 guns. Bristol is in the Prince of Orange's hands. The Marquis of Worcester, Earl of Clarendon, Lord Blessington, Captain Heveningham, and several others are lately gone over to the Prince. The Lords of Halifax, Nottingham, and Godolphin are gone to negotiate; but the trumpeter that was sent before for leave they found drunk asleep at Reading, so that they are forced to stay there till they have an answer by another. Pray God send a good end to all these troublesome affairs, and health and happiness to the King."

HARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1688, Dec. 3rd, Spithead.—Captain W. Cornwall to Lord Dartmouth.

Going ashore to get provisions he saw goods going on board the Mary yacht. On enquiry was told they were Lord Dover's and that the Prince of Wales was going; and he saw several women go on board who were said to belong to him. Thought it his duty to acquaint his Lordship. Sent his coxswain on board to enquire, and they told him they were bound with the Prince to St. Malo as soon as the moon was up; but the milk and pap were sent for ashore and he believed they would not go that night. It was kept a secret.

[Another letter of that date from Captain Cornwall gives the same information in slightly different words.]

1688, Dec. 3rd, Ship Portsmouth.—Certificate of Captain G. St. Lo in favour of Nathaniel Bostock, gentleman, for a lieutenancy, he having served in the quality of a midshipman on the Portsmouth for three months and upwards.

1688, Dec. 3rd, Ship Cambridge.—Captain John Tyrwhitt to Lord Dartmouth. His Lordship's generous charity, shewn in the interest he made on the writer's behalf with the late King, has kept him from wanting bread, and encourages him to make a further trial of his honour's kindness. Having lost by this late sickness most of his good head of hair, would beg of his Lordship to bestow on him one of his worst short periwigs to keep his head from the cold, and to enable him to come on board and kiss his Lordship's hands and give him humble thanks; for if periwigs were to be bought here for thirteen pence a piece he were not able to purchase one, having but two sixpences in the whole world.

1688, Dec. 4th, London.—Francis Gwyn to Lord Dartmouth.

Has had no answer to his letter about Portsmouth charter. About ten days ago received a letter from the Corporation upon a supposition that he had heard from his Lordship to whom the matter was referred. Finds they are extremely concerned to have it, for besides other inconveniences an exemplification under the great seal will cost them a great deal of money, which is the only remedy they have. If Lord Dartmouth's brother Will does not intend to stand for Portsmouth, and his Lordship thinks the writer fit, shall be glad of his recommendation as a Burgess this next parliament. Begs that the project may be forgiven if not approved of, as it arose from a discourse with Harry Slingsby, who thought it very feasible, and is very willing to join with him.

1688, Dec. 4th, at noon. Ship Deptford E.S.E. 2 L. [?] leagues] off the Culver Cliff.—Captain George Rooke to Lord Dartmouth.

Being led away in chase of some Dutchmen yesterday afternoon, his Lordship's orders of last night's date came to his hands but just now. Is very sorry for the accident which led him out of the way, but to-night will dispose his own and the other two ships as his Lordship would have him for the service of intercepting the Prince, in which that no vessel may pass undiscovered the boats shall be close under the weather shore. Presumes his Lordship has knowledge of two yachts that came out of the harbour yesterday morning very early.

1688, Dec. 4th.—Surgeon-General J. Pearse to Lord Dartmouth.

Got hither (Portsmouth?) last night; intends to spend this day in discharging the old debt at Gosport (with money borrowed on his own

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

credit), in enlarging the quarters for sick men, and in settling Mr. Matson's credit with the butchers, bakers, and brewers, and consequently with the landladies. To-morrow will wait on Lord Dartmouth for his commands to Windsor, where he judges he shall find "our Master."

1688, Dec. 5th, Portsmouth Dockyard.—Sir Richard Beach to Lord Dartmouth. Has been informed privately that it is intended to put the Prince on board the yacht this night, and to be gone with him, which he thought it his duty to advise his Lordship of, knowing very well what trouble and misery this kingdom may sustain for the future if his escape be not prevented, for he'll prove a second "Perkin Warbeck." Sends the proclamation.

1688, Dec. 5th, Staines.—Major Thomas Soper to Lord Dartmouth.

Heartily sorry to acquaint his Lordship that he has some share in the desertion of officers as well as other regiments, as Seymour, Deaunish, and Lewsy (?). Had spoken to Lord Preston that his Lordship intended the first company that fell in for Kempthorne. Mold had applied and been told of this intention, but nevertheless had made interest with Lord Feversham and Sackfild and had got Seymour's company. Had told Mold of his clandestine base way of proceeding, and hoped his Lordship would interfere; begged to know his commands.

1688, Dec. 5th, Whitehall, 9 morning.—King James II. to Lord Dartmouth.

"I had not till last night about nine, yours of the 2, which you say was not sent till the 3. I have considered it well, but at present can only say, I am not yett come to any positive resolution with myself in that affaire, and so will have nothing done in it till further order, and that I have thought more on't, heard from my commissioners, and see which way the enemy advances.

James R.

You shall heare againe from me tomorrow.

J. R."

[Addressed.] For the Lord Dartmouth.

[Endorsed]

December 5th, 1688.

Received by Lord Dover the 6th.

1688, Dec. 5th, Whitehall, 9 at night.

"I thinke my sonne is not safe, (as things are now,) where he is, and therefore think it necessary to have him removed from thence as sone as may be. I haue writen to Lady Powis to that purpose; if the way be open by land, he shall come that way, and I haue sent troups to meett him, and ordred Lord Dover to command them and come up with him. If the Prince of Orange's troups gett bettwene this and Portsmouth then he must come by sea, and in a yacht, and you must send what number of ships you judg sufficient to see him as far as Margate, after which he may come over the flatts, and so up the river without danger. You must be sure to lett him take the first faire wind, for then there can be no danger of Herbert nor his Dutch ships. I must leave the care of ordring this to you. Be sure no oportunity of wind be lost for the reason I have bearer given; if he coms not up by land, which I had rather he did, this already will tell you all the newse.

James R."

[Addressed.] For the Lord Dartmouth.

[Endorsed by Lord Dartmouth]

December 5th, 1688.

Received by Mr Leybourne the 6th, in the evening.

Both these letter (sic) were answered the 6th (and 7th a post script) sent a way by Captain Neagle on the 7th after Lord Dover was gone from Portsmouth with the Prince.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1688, Dec. 6th, London.—T. Gardiner to Lord Dartmouth.

As to supply of bedding, guns, &c. Mr. Bertie in this convenient leisure is made an ambassador to the Northern Lords, where my Lord Danby is Regent, and dispatching to-morrow upon his Majesty's errand.

1688, Dec. 7th, Portsmouth Dockyard.—Sir Richard Beach to Lord Dartmouth. "Last night the gates were kept open till four in the morning, and during the time coaches, wagons, and horses went from the town into the country, as is judged towards Chichester, and a great deal of goods carried to the waterside and shipped on board some vessel. They judge it can be nothing but their carrying away the Prince eastward into some creek where some vessels are provided to transport him; for if they had intended to have carried him to London they need neither be ashamed nor afraid of daylight, but all their works are works of darkness, though God in his great mercy does bring them to light.

The gates are now shut, and they are resolved to keep them so to keep us from the knowledge of what they have been doing." Suggests that some vessels should be sent to the eastward and to the westward, as it is not known certainly which way the Prince is gone.

1688, Dec. 7th, Portsmouth.—Sir Edward Scott to Lord Dartmouth.

Lord Dover desires his Lordship to know that he had the King's commands to bring the Prince of Wales to London by sea or land, but he thought the most convenient way was by land, so the Prince went home this morning after 5 o'clock. Lord Dover, Lord Powis, my lady governess, and their servants went with him.

1688, Dec. 9th, Yarmouth in the Isle of Wight.—Sir Robert Holmes to Lord Dartmouth. On Friday he was forced to send his eldest lieutenant to look after some subsistence for his company. The other lieutenant took the opportunity of the foulness of last night to get boats and carry away the most part of his company with a design to surprise Hurst Castle. The officer commanding there, however, would not give them entrance at such an unseasonable time, having by accident espied several men under the wall.

Is left in this desolate condition having no men to stand by him. The townspeople are ready to declare. Begs his Lordship to send forthwith three or four frigates to ride before this place and Hurst Castle to preserve them from falling into the enemies' hands. If he think fit to send any ships let Jack Tirrell's be one.

500 of the Prince's dragoons it seems were advanced as far as Ringwood to countenance this villainous business.

1688, Dec. 10th, Whitehall.—King James II to Lord Dartmouth. "Things hauing so very bad a prospect I could no longer defer securing the Queene and my sonne, which I hope I haue done, and that by tomorrow by none they will be out of the reach of my enemys. I am at ease now I have sent them away, I haue not heard this day as I expected from my Com. [Commissioner] with the Prince of Orange, who I beleue will hardly be preuailed with to stop his march, so that I am in no good condition, nay in as bad a one as is possible. I am sending the Duke

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

of Berwick downe to Portsmouth by whom you shall know my resolution concerning the fleett under your command, and what resolutions I haue taken, till when I would not haue you stur from the place where you are for seuerall reasons.

James R."

[Addressed.] For the Lord Dartmouth.

[Endorsed by Lord Dartmouth]

December 10th 1688.

" Received the 12th.

But no orders brought me by the Duke of Barwick as within mentioned and tho' he be come to towne he tells me the King neither sent my orders by him nor so much as told him at his coming away what he would haue me do."

1688, Dec. 10th, Whitehall.—King James II. to Lord Dartmouth.

" My affairs are, as you know, in so desperat a condition that I haue been obliged to send away the Queene and the Prince, to secure them at least, what so euer becoms of me, that am resolved to ventur all rather than consent to anything in the least prejudicial to the crowne or my concience, and hauing been basely deserted by many officers and souldiers of my troupes, and finding such an infection gott amongst very many of those who still continu with me on shore, and that the same poysons is gott amongst the fleett, as you yourself owne to me in some of your letters, I could no longer resolue to expose myself to no purpose to what I might expect from the ambitious Prince of Orange and the assosiated rebellious Lords, and therefore haue resolved to withdraw till this violent storme is ouer, which will be in God's good tyme, and hope that there will still remaine in this land seuen thousand men which will not bow downe the knee to Baal, and keep themselus free from assosiations and such rebellious practices. I know not whether any of the fleett vnder your command are free to continu seruing me; if they are, their best course will be to go to Irland, where there are still some that will stick to me. If any are free to go order them thither to follow such ordẽrs as they shall receue from Lord Tyrconnel. If they will not there is no remedy, and this I may say, neuer any Prince took more care of his sea and land men as I haue done, and been so very ill repayed by them. I haue not tyme to say more being just a going to take horse. James R."

[Endorsed by Lord Dartmouth]

December 10th, 1688.

" Received the 14th by the common post. Mr. Peppys or whom this was committed to should be answerable for the delay, for this letter came not till after the Councell of warr that sent to the Prince upon the letter from the Lords at Geald-Hall and the quitting of the Roman Catholick Officers."

1688, Dec. 10th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

" Your Lordship's of the 4th ins^t giving his Majesty grounds still to expect your opinion in the matter wherein the same was demanded in his of the 29th of November, has occasioned a longer silence then ordinary till your last of the 6th which arrived here the 8th, gave his Majesty to understand your desires rather of haveing his Majesty's opinion and advice relateing thereto, namely, concerning the disposall of the fleet when the same shall be refitted, which you encourage him to expect by the end of this week, which advice comes inclosed to your Lordship under his own hand. Whereto referring you, I shall goe on to such particulars of your Lordship's said letters to myself as require answer.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

"His Majestie very well approves of your Lordships holding your hand in the ordering only the Warspight and Edgar out to sea of the three that the [King] had ordered to be got in readiness for it, had his service and the season required the same, he haveing upon the same principle put a stopp as much as may be to all fruitless encreaseings of charge here also, by directing noe more of the 6 f'reships ordered to be presently gone in hand with, to be for the present medled with, then with the officers of the navy have ahead[y] actually contracted for. He has likewise determined upon a generall stopp to all further pressings of men for the service of any of the ships in manning here, or for the use of the fleet, as you will find by his order inclosed to your Lordship to that purpose. And to say the truth, by all the dispatch that I can observe made in the manning of the ships here, even with the help of pressing, it looks to me as if they would not be manned till March; while at the same time the town and Exchange are full of very just clamours of the disorders comitted in pressing, and the broiles and squables that now begin to be made upon that occasion, to the disturbance of the peace and dishonor of the King's service; some of his officers haveing lately smarted and been disarmed in their extravagant execution of their press-warrants; besides what the King at the same time suffers in the interruption it gives to commerce, and his revenue depending thereon. Upon my laying before him all which, and what other considerations arose upon a late debate thereon with his Ministers, his Majesty was pleased to resolve upon what I have now mentioned, putting an end to pressing.

The case of poor Captain Powson is very grievous. But I doubt not, upon his enquiry some of his men that were guilty of great inhumanity towards him will be met withall, and receive their reward for it from a court martiall.

I have not yet heard anything of the death of Captain Sanderson, and very sorry I should be to hear it. But should that come to pass, I have moved the King in behalfe of Captain Collins, and doubt not his haveing the effect he desires of his Majesty favour therein.

Very glad I am that the two Dover fireships are come to you; it being from a joynt letter from both their captains that I wrote what I did to your Lordship about their being shutt in with the beach there.

His Majesty upon hearing your last letter read seemed to incline to the haveing the stores taken in the Dutch galliot seized, and taken into his magazines for his own use, ledd thereto by the consideration of the Prince of Orange's being said to have seized upon his revenue in divers of the places into which he is come; but this being a matter of State his pleasure will be notified therein from one of the Secretaries thereof, as I suppose; after the invoice of the said stores shall be translated; to which end the packett of papers you sent me were by his command putt into the hand of my Lord Middleton, un-opened, in the very order they came to me from your Lordship.

I cannot without resorting to the Navy office presently recollect what the sallarys have heretofore been to muster-masters. But as I suppose Mr Bowles does not expect beyond what the practise of the Navy has in like cases allowed, soe answering the duty of the office, according to the instructions, he need not apprehend his being denied the utmost encouragement that has been given to any in like case.

The sooner wee have the account of the fleet's victualling, the sooner both the King and you will have the satisfaction and benefitt expected from it.

What I have to add is the letting your Lordship know (if you have not already been otherwise advertised of it) that the King, having determined upon sending Colonel Molesworth back to the Government of Jamaica, (now my Lord of Albemarle is gone) he is pleased in the mean while till Colonel Molesworth can be ready to dispatch away some immediate orders for the rectifying of some matters greatly amiss there, and this he intends to doe by the same sloop (Captain Penny Master) which brought the news of the Duke's death; soe that his Majesty desires she may (if any restraint be now upon her) be left at liberty to be presently refitted for her going away with the said papers from the King accordingly.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Lastly, for our latest occurrences of publick moment here, which the King at his delivering me his letter, directed me to give you some account of, the principall I have mett with are these, besides those two great ones, which the King has been pleased to tell you himself.

Dover Castle was seized two days since by some of the rabble of that town; not headed by any officer that I can hear of, civil or military, but on the contrary as the Mayor of the place writes to my Lord Preston, they were applied to by the Mayor with endeavours of dissuading them from the attempt. But they persisted, and (in number not above 30) executed it, with success, and they are now masters of it.

A skirmish happned yesterday somewhere near Redding, between a party of the Prince of Orange's and some Irish Dragoons of the Kings; with very ill success on the Dragoons' side, with this addition to it, that upon their retreating for shelter to the town of Redding, the people of the new town are said to have shott at them out of their windows.

Of the two battalions of the King's Scotch Guards (quartered as I take it at Maidenhead) one of them, (Lieutenant Generall Douglas being himself at their head) could not be prevailed with by him to the contrary, but to a man, officers and all, before his very face, abandoned him, and went away, towards the Prince's forces.

The Roman Catholicks of quality daily betake themselves to flight, my Lord Peterborow being said to have withdrawn yesterday, and my Lord Salisbury last night, late in the night, haveing with difficulty escaped, after having been stopped in the citie, by getting himself out of his coach, and rideing away upon one of his servant's horses;

Others, for other reasons, are said to flock away too, men of the Long Gown I meane, whose names till I am more certaine of them I shall not adventure to mention. And of both the Gownes I mean, gospel as well as law, the Bishopp of Chester, as well as Mr Attorney Generall for instance.

God (who only knows what is best) grant a quick and happy issue to that just indignation of his under which we are at this day fallen."

In a postscript Mr Pepys adds,

"His Majesty, at your Lordshipp's instance, has been pleased to remove the boatswain you recomended, from the Edgar to the Ossory, and to appoint another to succeed him in the Edgar."

1688, Dec. 11th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"I wrote your Lordshipp last night by express with one inclosed from the King; little suspecting from the contents of it (which he was pleased to make me privy to) that I should soe soon have another to follow it, as that which was brought me this morning by one to whom at his departure from Whitehall in the night he gave it, with direction for his putting it into my hand for your Lordshipp, and which I accordingly forwarded immediately to you by another express. Since which I have (with the Secretaries of State and other his Ministers and Officers here) attended (by summons) a councill of Peers Spirituall and Temporall, that upon advice of his Majesty withdrawing, did meet and have continued sitting

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

all this day at Guild Hall; where among other their comands, one was to take the care of forwarding this inclosed order of their Lordshipp's to you. Which I accordingly doe and with it have this only by way of news to give you, that I understand the like orders to have been issued by them to my Lord Feversham with regard to the Army. The Lieutenantcy of the Tower they have likewise thought fitt to take out of Mr Skelton's hand and put it into my Lord Lucas's. They have determin'd too upon a written message from them to the Prince of Orange, and comitted it to four of their number to attend his Highness for the delivery of it, namely, My Lord of Rochester, My Lord of Weymouth, My Lord Culpeper, and my Lord Bishop of Ely, if I remember their names rightly. It was expected too at my being at Guild Hall, that an address would at the same time be prepared and sent from the city; the Common Councill being then sitting (as it was said) on that occasion."

[The following is the order referred to in the above:]

1688, Dec. 11th, Guildhall, London.—The Lords Spiritual and Temporal, to Lord Dartmouth.

"Whereas His Majesty hath privately this morning withdrawn himself, we the Lords Spiritual and Temporal whose names are subscribed being desirous to prevent the effusion of blood in this juncture, and considering the Prince of Orange his fleet is (sic) now on the English coast, may possibly meet with that under your Lordship's command, we do therefore require you to give such necessary orders as you shall think fit for the prevention of all acts of hostility; and that no inconvenience may happen in the Fleet. We do likewise require you forthwith to remove all the Popish officers out of their respective commands. Dated the 11th of December 1688 at Guild Hall London.

To the right honorable	Crewe.	W. Cant.
the Lord Dartmouth	T. Jermyn.	Tho. Ebor.
Admiral of the Fleet.	Dorsett.	Pembroke.
	Sussex.	Thanet.
Ailesbury.	Berkeley	Tho. Culpeper.
Burlington.	Carlisle.	North & Grey.
Weymouth.	Rochester.	Chandos.
Vaughan Carbery.	Mulgrave.	P. Winchester.
Tho. Petriburg.	Ossulstone.	Tho. Roffen."

1688, Dec. 11th.—Anon. (or signature torn off) to S——.

"His highness pleases to dispose of the soldeirs, all things devolving into his hands. The Council have ordered also a general search for arms in papist houses, and now they are on search for arms in Lord Salisbury's house where are a rabble of above 5,000 gathered together; and now they are at the mass house in Lincoln's Inn Fields, and have pulled out a great deal of the inside, burning it in the fields, and are gone to Brent's house where they do the same. The mob have gotten the chapel bell and now are marching to St. James's. Lord Chancellor, Sir Ed. Hales, Lord C. Justice, Baron Gener (?), Mr. Brent, Burton, and Graham, &c., are all scamper'd; the papists are in a very bad condition."

1688, Dec. 11th, at noon. Uxbridge.—Lord Feversham (?) to the Prince of Orange. (Copy unsigned.) "Sir,—Having received this morning a letter from his Majesty with the unfortunate news of his resolution to go out of England, and that he is actually gone, I thought myself obliged being at the head of his army, having received his Majesty's order to make no opposition against anybody, to let your

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

Highness know it, with the advice of the officers here as soon as it was possible, to hinder the misfortune of the effusion of blood. I have sent order already to that purpose to all the troops that are under my command, which shall be the last order they shall receive from (sic)."

1688, Dec. 11th, London.—Philip Frowde to Lord Dartmouth.

"I have but just time to tell that the Queen and the young Prince went away down the river on Sunday night, and this morning his Majesty followed them at two or three of the clock. 'Tis thought they are all gone for France. Mr. Peeters, the Duke of Berwick, Lord Dunbarton, and my Lord Chancellor are all gone with him, and divers others. All the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in town met at Guildhall to-day, and do so again to-morrow at Whitehall; they have ordered the King's army to remove out of the Prince of Orange's way to London, that they may not fall out. The Lieutenants General here have ordered the Irish and Papist soldiers in this town to be disbanded, which was done this afternoon. The rabble are now pulling down the mass houses everywhere, and burning the appurtenances, which at this instant make the sky so very red that I can see it out of the rooms here at the Post Office. The Commissioners are this day come back to Whitehall from the Prince of Orange, I was told with fair proposals, but all that is at an end now, the armies will quickly be one, and the Prince of Orange here in a very few days. The Lord Mayor and aldermen have appointed four aldermen and as many commoners to wait on the Prince of Orange, &c. I will now trouble you no further."

1688, Dec. 11th, London.—[Signature torn off] to ("Sir."

"The King went away this morning after the Queen and Prince of Wales for France, supposed, and this day all the considerable Lords in town, Spiritual and Temporal, met at Guild Hall, where was a great council how to manage the affairs of this great city in the King's absence. First they gave out warrants for stopping all Cinque (?) port towns and sent for the keys of the Tower which were immediately delivered up to the Lord Mayor. Skelton is gone and Lord Lucas is appointed by the Council Lieutenant of the Tower. Lord Ranelagh has sent to the Prince of Orange for his commands about paying the army, and several of the chiefest officers have likewise sent to the Prince to know what and how his condition. The Prince is expected here on Thursday next. The papists were ordered by his Majesty before he went to lay down their arms. There happened a skirmish at Reading, and about 50 of the Irish dragoons cut off by a party of the Prince's. I hope all things will ere long settle in their right channel and rest" &c.

[In another handwriting is added.]

"My respects makes me send this from a good hand. I have more of the same. Some think the King is at Rochester. Let us pity him but not lose our fleet. Verbum sapienti sat. and send some body as all others did."

1688, Dec. 11th, Portsmouth—"Deposition of Thomas Hancock, Esq., mayor of Portsmouth, before Mr. Hedger, justice of the peace.

On the 10th inst. about eight at night he, being sent for by Sir Edward Scott the Lieutenant Governor, went with Mr. John Tailleir to know his pleasure; Scott required him to grant warrants to press the town teams for work on the fortifications at Portsmouth. The mayor answered that he was advised he could not do it of his own authority, but if he were commanded so to do by his Majesty or the Master of the Ordnance, he would readily obey. Whereupon the Lieutenant Governor fell into an extravagant passion, and called this deponent rogue, villain, and many other opprobrious names, and struck and puncht the deponent in the breast

HARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

with his fist 10 or 12 times and swore that the Corporation were rebels and that he, Scott, would cut the deponent's throat, which he many times repeated and confirmed with many oaths, and further swore that if the Prince of Orange's army ever appeared before the garrison he would cut the throats of all the Corporation and the deponent's first, &c."

1688, Dec. 11th, Portsmouth.—Deposition of John Tayleur, to the same effect as the above.

1688, Dec. 11th, Guildhall, London.--Copy (attested by Francis Gwyn) of the Lords' Order to Lord Dartmouth to prevent all acts of hostility, and to remove all Popish officers from their commands.

1688, Dec. 12th, [Portsmouth.]—Ellis, Lady Scott to Lord Dartmouth. Sir Edward does not think this place proper for her to be in at this time, so desires some yacht or other vessel to convey her and hers to her father's family.

"Your lordship's affectionate kinswoman."

1688, Dec. 12th, Portsmouth.—Sir Edward Scott to Lord Dartmouth. Has received both letters of this day's date from his Lordship, who will admit that one story is good till another is told. Defends himself from the charge of hindering the storekeeper, &c.; and from the complaint of Mr. Mayor, whom he suspected of caballing with the officers of the garrison, and "'tis usual in several countries upon occasion in time of war to threaten inhabitants to keep them to their duty and allegiance, tho' at the same time no hurt is intended."

1688, Dec. 12th, Philip Musgrave (not signed) to Lord Dartmouth.

"Since I writ this morning an express came from Faversham giving an account that in a little vessel that came out of Embden (Sir Edward Hales, his island) taken by some boats manned out by the Faversham seamen, his Majesty was also taken, and brought to the Queen's Arms in Faversham, where he still remains, the train bands not permitting to go away till they receive orders from this city, but do not offer any other indignity to him. The Lords have sent a troop of his Guards under the command of my Lord Feversham, as also the Lords Ailebury, Middleton, and Yarmouth to attend his Majesty, and to give him entire liberty to go where he pleases, or to come to London. James Grahme is also gone and several of his servants. My Lord Peterborough is taken near Ramsgate, Father Peters is taken in Kent Street in Southwark, and sent to the Tower, Obadia Walker is likewise secured. The Lords have writ to the Prince of Orange to acquaint herewith, and pitched upon me to carry it, but I declined it."

"Your Lordship's mother is in so weak a condition that we scarce believe she can live till to-morrow."

1688, Dec. 12th, Yarmouth, in the Isle of Wight.—Sir Robert Holmes to Lord Dartmouth. Sent on Sunday an account of his disaster on Saturday night, &c. Is not sorry he has lost those 28 or 30 rogues out of his company, being rid of villains that upon all occasions would have taken an opportunity to do him mischief. Desires instructions about making prizes of Dutch ships; has written to Court about it, but got no answer.

1688, Dec. 12th, Resolution at Spithead.—Lord Dartmouth to Samuel Pepys, Esq. (copy). Understanding to his great grief and astonishment that his Majesty (whom God preserve) has withdrawn himself, is at a loss how to steer with the fleet, and has sent so trusty a messenger

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

as Captain Mathew Aylmer to be entrusted with his Majesty's direction thereupon. Begs also that Pepys will take effectual care that the ships are speedily supplied with victuals.

[On the same sheet is a copy of a like letter to the Earl of Middleton.]

1688, Dec. 12th, Portsmouth Dock.—Sir Richard Beach to Lord Dartmouth. Expresses the state of alarm in which the town's people are from the threats of Sir Edward Scott and the Irish officers and soldiers in the garrison. Begs his lordship to leave some of his "disablest" ships in the harbour for their assistance, as he not only fears plunder and murder, but also destruction of the storehouses by fire upon the appearance of any of the Prince's forces.

[1688], Dec. 12th, Barbara, Lady Dartmouth to Lord Dartmouth.—
"I knowe my deare hart this juncture of time is very amaseing to every body throughout this nation and must be so pertickelery to you upon all accounts, and more in the discharge of so great a trust as you have in your hands which is now thought to be the nation's since the King is withdrawn ; therefore I desired my Lord Rochester, who I believe is really your frind, to advise you in this matter, and we send you the paper of the Lords to show you what is don heare, and I hope deare you will be so wise to your selfe and family as to doe what becomes a reasonable man who I am sure is left in the most deploreable condition of any subiect or servant whatsoever. Therfor pray consider it well in your one thoughts, and then no one is better able to judg then yourselfe what is fitt to be don to aquit you, for as hetherto, I doe not find the prodistant interist disatisfied with you, and the other I look upon as quit exterperted (sic). Lord Chandseler is prisener in the Tower, and the rable ready to pull him to peces before he be brought to public justice. Indeed this town as bin mighty unquiat since the King's departure, by pulling the chapells down and houses of papists and imbassadors, so that every body is in great frights and wish for the Prince of Oringe's coming to quiat things"

[1688], Dec. 13th. Same to same. "Sence Ben went from hence thare is come a sertin account of the King's be taken in makeing his escape at Feversham, accompaned only with Sir Edward Hailes, whare he remaines till the Lords that act here whare aquainted, who have ordered his guards to be sent to him, and 4 Lords to wait of him to protect him, and give him his liberty to goe or stay, but I refer you to Mr. Musgrave and will only ad I am yours B. D."

1688, Dec. 12th and Dec. 20th. Spithead.—Lord Dartmouth to the Prince of Orange.

Copies of two letters promising co-operation of his fleet with the Prince in preservation of order, &c. (See book.) 1688, Dec. 13th.—Earl of Rochester to Lord Dartmouth.

Advises him not to leave the fleet, which will certainly mutiny if he does, and to write to the Peers for further orders. His Lordship will thus avoid all blame, which is a good thing now.

1688, Dec. 13th.—Earl of Feversham to Lord Dartmouth.

Narrates his proceedings on receipt of the King's letter at Uxbridge. Ordered his officers to cause the letter to be read to each regiment, and afterwards thought they were all at liberty to do what they would. He came away for London, where he intends to live quietly as long as he can and take no other employment.

1688, Dec. 13th, London.—T. Gardiner to Lord Dartmouth. Begs his Lordship's interest for himself or his son in the event of changes in the Ordnance Office. The King when seized with Hales and De Labaddy proffered 300 guineas to be carried on board some vessel, but the seamen refused thinking them Jesuits. My Lord Chancellor being taken among the Wappingers was the last night brought into the Tower, with such a din of the rabble as the writer never heard before.

1688, Dec. 13th, Resolution at Spithead.—Information of Captain Edward Poulson, late Commander of the Speedwell freship.

On the morning of the 11th instant, was inveigled into the Antelope Tavern in Poole, and there seized as a prisoner, and at the same time his ship was seized for the Prince of Orange, one Robinson taking command of her. His cabin had been rifled, and all his money taken. Robinson had offered the command back to him, if he would carry the ship to the Prince's fleet at Plymouth; but he had rejected the offer, saying he would rather beg his bread than accept of any command against the King by whom he was employed and trusted. He privately procured two horses and a guide in the night, and came away to Hurst Castle, thence to Yarmouth to Sir Robert Holmes, thence to Cowes, and so to the fleet, humbly to offer his further service to the Lord Admiral in any station his Lordship shall be pleased to place him.

1688, Dec. 13th, Whitehall.—Francis Gwyn to Lord Dartmouth. Remarks on matters pertaining to the King's departure. Infinite blame is laid on Lord Feversham for disbanding his soldiers, who joined and encouraged the rabble in their mischief.

1688, Dec. 13th, Whitehall.—Sir Henry Shere to Lord Dartmouth. "I am now in the lobby of the Council Chamber, attending the Council of Lords, who are exceedingly pleased with our deportment, both abroad and here in the town; for your regiment and the train have continued entire when the whole army disbanded, and we marched through the City to the Tower, where there was so great a tumult that nobody believed we should have escaped a man of us, in fine (?) we are now safe and have the approbation of our betters, and your regiment sent for me this morning to secure the Lords from the rage of the rabble. God bless you and send you safe hither."

1688, Dec. 13th.—Sir John Berry to Lord Dartmouth. Recommends Captain Clements for the command of the St. Albans.

1688, Dec. 13th.—Sir Christopher Musgrave to Philip Musgrave, St. James Street, London.

On Sunday in the afternoon, Sir John Lowther with some gentlemen, attended with several of his tenants, went towards Workington, and on Monday seized the arms and some stores which were designed for Ireland, and where they are to be lodged is not known. The gunpowder was gone sometime before to Ireland. I think none laments the removal of Sir Nicholas [Le Fleming ?]

1688, Dec. 13th, Ship Mary at Spithead.—Sir R. Strickland to Lord Dartmouth. Having some time since made application to his Lordship to quit his commission and having now given it up, begs a speedy discharge with the convenience of a yacht to transport him to London.

1688, Dec. 14th, Ship Warspite.—Sir William Jennens to Lord Dartmouth. Is desired by the Marquis [de Querian ?] to recommend him for a passport for France, as he hears the King is gone there, and he hopes to get his affair done with the French King by his Majesty's mediation.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

The Gosport people (having been very much abused by the Irish soldiers) have seized on the Castle, and it is understood the Duke of Berwick will fire them out. They are Protestants, and the writer judges himself obliged if they are ill treated to defend and assist them to his power; they are in very great trouble and will be more, if the Irish part not before he sails out of the harbour. Saw great companies march on the hill, and they went towards Fareham, but does not think them the Prince's forces.

1688, Dec. 14th, Portsmouth.—Thomas Hancock to Lord Dartmouth. Is forced to leave his house and is threatened to be 'briled.' If the soldiers offer any abuses to the town, has ordered torches to be fired on the Tower. Is going to Sir William Jennens to secure himself.

"P.S.—The town is in a great fear, and all the shops are shut up, the Irish threatening to do strange things."

1688, Dec. 15th, House of Lords.—Copy of the Peers' Address to the Prince of Orange, concerning the summoning of a convention or parliament to sit at Westminster on January 22 following.

1688, Dec. 15th, Dublin.—Dennis Scott to Sir Edward Scott, Deputy-Governor of Portsmouth. Business matters. "There are 20,000 Irishmen in arms here now, which will rendezvous in several places of the kingdom on first of January next. The Lord Deputy is daily signing commissions for the chief of all the tribes in the kingdom to raise more men, so that we shall have 30,000 men by the last of January, and pretty well disciplined by the first of March. Notwithstanding that the Lord Deputy and Council have issued a proclamation to dissuade the English from the apprehension of cutting their throats; yet they are not quite appeased though somewhat calmed. . . . The transactions of England strike unparalleled astonishment into the hearts of all the Irish." Sir Patrick Frant, Sir Richard Nagle, Sir Henry Linch, and Colonel Moore send their humble service. Colonel Butler, of Kilcash, is raising a regiment, Walter his son being Lieutenant-Colonel. Lady Butler, of Kilcash, is dead.

[1688,] Dec. 15th. Barbara, Lady Dartmouth to Lord Dartmouth.—"I am in great distraction you may imagin in all this change of things, and the more that I canot heare from you any way sence all hapened, which makes me conclude that the countrey being in such disorder stopt bothe the Lords' letter to you and all mine, which makes us repeat them, and send the copy of all theares. I am in great consern for feare you should be ignorant of proceedings heare to direct you how to steer. I much hope you will bring in the fleet. I beleive you may not heare of the miserable condition the King ly(es in) at Feversham in the hands of the rable, who will not part with him or suffer any creature to goe neare him; they say he resolves not to return; the rable riffled his pockets and took away all from him, Sir Edward Haile's, and Mr. Sheldon, who ware only with him. I never knew so sad a time; God look upon us in mercy; it hath pleased God to take away your mother yesterday after a lingering illness, who is hapy to be out of the world. . . . She desired to be carid privatly to the Minorits. . . .

intirely yours

B."

. . . . "Your brother Will went with his regiment to the Prince of Orange upon the first news of the King's absenting, and Sir William Villiers is sent for the Prince.

[Inside the cover is written]

"Pray burn my letters.

Lord Churchill sent me a complement if he could serve you to the prince, I might comand him in your absence. Poor Lord Feversham is still under close confinement; thay say he will be charged with the murder of the Lord Essex, and God knows what."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1688, Dec. 15th, London.—Philip Musgrave to Lord Dartmouth.

Contrary to expectation the King has been prevailed upon to come to London; his coaches and guards are ordered to Dartford, and his lodgings are preparing.

1688, Dec. 15th, Portsmouth dockyard.—Sir Richard Beach to Lord Dartmouth. Understanding that the "Phubbs" yacht is bound for Guernsey with Lady Scott, asks that Sir Philip Carterett, his lady and family may be carried to Jersey at the same time, Mr. Secretary Pepys having given orders for their accommodation. The Lord Chancellor was taken in an alley in Wapping and carried to the Lord Mayor, who (Jeffreys?) cowardly knelt down to kias his hand, which struck such amazement into the Lord Mayor that he fell into a swoon, and continues very ill. Lord Salisbury was taken by a Captain of the Trainbands, but made his escape.

All things are in peace and quietness at Gosport, but no people will come to work here until the Irish quit the town, the sayings and orders of the Duke of Berwick being little valued.

1688, Dec. 16th, Portsmouth.—Duke of Berwick to Lord Dartmouth.

"My Lord,

Since I saw you yesterday I have considered that Southsea Castle, being in the island of Portsmouth, and the dragoones being quartered all upon downe (sic) those parts, it may putt them in fear and apprehensions to have any others, but soldiers of the guarrison of Portsmouth, be putt into that castle, besides that it will render the people of the island more insolent (as also those of abroad) and it being more immediate under theye of Portsmouth. I have (sic) my letters to my Lord Middleton by Mr. Beckett.

I am, &c.

BERWICK."

1688, Dec. 16th, Windsor.—Prince of Orange to Lord Dartmouth.

"My Lord, I receaved your letter of the 12th of this instant December, and am glad to finde you continue firme to the Protestant Religion and Liberties of England, and that you resolve to dispose the fleet under your command to those ends; to which not only the fleet, but the army and the nation in generall have so frankly concurr'd. Neither shall my care of the honour and dignity of this nation be wanting in matters of disputes between the two fleets as you seeme to apprehend; I therefore send you such orders as are necessary to prevent that, and usefull to this Kingdome. As to the methods you have taken to purge the fleet from papist officers, I aprove very much of it, and, as to all other matters in general, I shall reffer them to the ensuing parliament. I expect your speedy compliance with the orders I send you here inclosed, and when you have brought the fleet to the Boy in the North (sic) I desire to see you that I may have your advice, not onely relating to the fleet, but to the publique in generall.

I am

Your affectionate Friend

PRINCE D'ORANGE.

Windsor the 16th

Decemb. 1688.

Endorsed by Lord Dartmouth as received at Spithead on the 19th and answered on the 20th under cover to Lord Rochester.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1688, Dec. 17th.—Certificate of the Duke of Berwick that Sir Edward Scott, Lieutenant-Governor of Portsmouth, has laid down his commission upon an order of the Prince of Orange and the Lords; and it is required that he may in no ways be molested by any body.

1688, Dec. 17th, Whitehall.—Sir Henry Shere to Lord Dartmouth.

..... "The King came through the town last night, and was attended through the streets to Whitehall with great shoals of the people and bells ringing. I waited on his Majesty this morning to have directions how we are to proceed at our Board, who told me that he could not tell how to direct me. But just now we are assured the King has declared the Prince of Orange generalissimo by sea and land; the King desired a guard from his highness telling him he had more assurance of those than his own—sad state of a Prince but yesterday so great. In a word the Prince issues his orders to all the troops already. I am in pain what to say to you at this distance, so many new changes happen in a day. God direct you for the best—I cannot say but that I now wish the King had not come back. We have made no application to the Prince as yet, though all other officers have, and what we shall do God knows, or what is best in prudence and honesty. I think if your Lordship signified your pleasure in this as well as in other matters relating to the office it may be of some use to you. I perceive your Lordship has sent Captain Aylmer to negotiate for you with the Prince; how he may succeed in your service, or what motive your Lordship could have to make choice of him (who is a creature to those whom I should not trust in your interest) I cannot tell, but am most sure I should not have concurred in the choice. I presume, my Lord, your safest method is not to hesitate now, and every step that looks like doubt will be fatal to you—God direct you. Upon Sir Edward Sherburne's removal I presume Mr. Bridges will incline to hope for your Lordship's concurrence in his favour to succeed him, whose character I need not give your Lordship, or how welcome he would be to the board. I am pressed to a period and remain with unalterable duty," &c.

P.S. — Your Lordship has won Sir M[artin] Beckman's 10 guineas, who is as good a Protestant as any in the parish, and has received the sacrament."

1688, Dec. 18th, T. Gardiner to Lord Dartmouth.

"Though the Tower where I am in a manner confined cannot yield such an account of affairs, yet we soon partake of what occurs at the other end of the town. The King went from thence to Rochester about 12 this day, under a strong guard of the Prince's, refusing Ham house which it seems was offered to him. The Prince came to St. James's about 4, having sent many of his foot through the city beforehand, quartering in the suburbs, 500 whereof come into the Tower to-morrow; and your Lordship's regiment quartered about Hackney and Mile End. My neighbour left his house yesterday, but Beckman is established (as he thinks) and frequents our church, which is a new religion to him. Poor Jus^t Sherburne is willing to return to the devotion he understands, protesting that he knew nothing of the other; and in this anxiety I have persuaded Dr. Hawkins and another minister to learn of the Archbishop what are the best methods for his reformation. We have had no office this 8 days, there being no money nor no settlement of the Treasury. The rabble has seized upon many of our waggons and stores of the train about Hounslow heath, which wanted horses to bring them home; and since that they have carried away good part of the King's tent from the chapel, and the Prince's forces deny the remainder to be brought hither by our messengers"

1688, Dec. 19th, Portsmouth.—The Duke of Berwick to Lord Dartmouth.

Has this moment received a letter from the King ordering him to deliver up the town as soon as any of the Prince's troops come, which he believes will be to-morrow. Expects a passport from the Prince, the King having been pleased to send unto him for the writer.

1688, Dec. 19th, Windsor.—The Prince of Orange to Colonel Berkeley. (Copy.)

Ordering him to repair to Portsmouth to acquaint the commander, officers, and soldiers there that a body of men has been ordered to march there and take possession of the garrison. Quarters are to be appointed for the several regiments now there, and no danger or ill-usage need be apprehended. The governor and lieutenant-governor will then have leave to go where they desire and to carry with them all things whatsoever belonging to them without any let or molestation. [At foot is a direction, signed by Lord Churchill, to all constables, postmasters, &c. to assist Colonel Berkeley in getting horses to carry him to Portsmouth.]

1688, Dec. 19th, Deptford.—Captain (afterwards Sir) George Rooke to Lord Dartmouth. His indisposition prevents him from waiting on his Lordship, but he is informed Captain Laton is to be removed from the Mary, and that the candidates for her are Captain Botham, Captain Matthew Aylmore, and Captain Thomas Leighton, amongst whom he humbly begs leave to offer his pretensions to his Lordship's consideration, as being many years an elder captain than either of them. Of his actions in the service his Lordship (sic) is in a great measure a judge, he (Rooke) having served part of his time under his Lordship's command, so he cannot expect so great a hardship from his Lordship's justice, as the preferring of a younger captain over him will appear to the world. He hopes therefore his Lordship will continue his favours to him, rather than detract from them by casting so great a disgrace on that little reputation he has with so much care and pains acquired.

1688, Dec. 20th, Portsmouth.—The Duke of Berwick to Lord Dartmouth.

Is just now going away to London, the guards being ready to march into this town. Wonders the Prince has not sent any orders for the regiments that are here, fearing disorders. Desires a pass for his servant Lockyer to go with Captain Hutchens.

1688, Dec. 20th, [Thursday].—Ellis, Lady Scott to Lord Dartmouth.

Hears his Lordship sails to-morrow, and begs for orders that her party may sail away before the fleet does.

"Friday night." A second letter complaining of being recalled from her intended voyage.

"Saturday night, eight o'clock." Hopes that his Lordship is satisfied she has no goods but her own, a strict search having been made, and again begs to be allowed to sail.

1688, Dec. 20th, Whitehall.—Francis Gwyn to Lord Dartmouth.

Is informed Colonel Norton will stand for Petersfield; his good aunt Lady Wharton has written to Norton to ask him, if he do stand, to join with Lord Dartmouth in recommending the writer for Portsmouth. The Prince of Orange has ordered the summoning of the peers to meet him to-morrow morning at St. James's at ten o'clock; there are about seventy of them in town.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1688, Dec. 20th.—Sir Roger Strickland to Lord Dartmouth.

His heart and eyes are so full of grief and tears that he is unable to make the least return for Lord Dartmouth's extraordinary kindness at parting. Is at present but in an ill condition to requite otherwise than with his hearty thanks.

1688, [Dec. 20th ?] Thursday evening.—Daniel Sullivan to Lord Dartmouth. The Duke of Grafton's quartermaster brought news that 21 companies of the guards under the Duke were to be here [Portsmouth ?] this night to relieve the garrison, upon which all the regiments were drawn up in the Green, expecting orders every hour, where, when, or with what security to march according to the Prince of Orange's letter, but none came. At last it was agreed to deliver them the possession, and the Irish to withdraw to the barracks and without the gates to quarter for this night, and to march to-morrow, but where they know not "The Prince was much concerned that the King was stopped at Feversham, and that the City [received ?] him with so much joy and more than him; in short I have this day seen by good letters that the people begins to grow full of him, and the gentry to come in more and more to the King. The Prince keeps in great grandeur at St. James's, and so high that some Bishops and other gentry are waiting a whole day before he will admit them. They begin to create whispers and mutinies, which I pray God to increase."

1688, December 21st, Rochester.—King James II. to Lord Dartmouth. "At eight at night I send this bearer Mun Elliott to the Downs to see if you be there, and to know if you designe to stay there, or are obliged for want of victuals to come up to the Nore; 'tis of concerne to me to be informed of it as you will find by what this bearer has to say to you from me, to whom you may giue intire credit, which is all I shall say, till I haue an answer to this.

(Signed) JAMES, R."

[Addressed.] For the Lord Dartmouth.

[Endorsed, by Lord Dartmouth.] December 21.

"Brought to me by Captain Floyd at Spitthead, but Captain Elliot came not with it nor was it answered but by worde of mouth, by Captain Floyd; and I sayled immediatly, but the King went away the same night he write this letter so both my hast and Captain Floyde's were in wayne."

1688, Dec. 21st, The Warspite (ship).—Sir William Jennens to Lord Dartmouth. Expresses sorrow for his very unmannerly conduct, and believes that nothing but his being proclaimed a cheat before so many persons could have forced such an expression as he used from him. Defends himself from the charge of cheating a French Marquis (his prisoner), having treated him with a respect suitable to his quality, not his misfortunes, and asserts that he has always entertained all persons who came on board his ship for shelter with wine and victuals plenty, and it is the first time that ever his table was complained of, for that has been always plentiful when he has made hard shift for money. Is no flatterer or time server, and seeing he is wholly incapacitated from serving his King further he is willing to lay down his commission, if his Lordship thinks the Warspite can be in better hands.

Attached are (1) certificate of Charles Staggs that the Marquis de Querian had often repeated to him of the great civility of Sir William Jennens to him, and that he kept a very good and plentiful table; and (2) certificate signed by Charles Staggs, Thomas Day, Richard Norwood, James Bankes, Charles Williams, and Thomas Jagger, that they con-

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

stantly eat at Sir William Jennens' table, and that there has been plenty of fresh provisions every day, insomuch that no person was obliged to eat salt, and that only twice in the week any of the King's victuals were brought to the table, which they desired for change, not that they were compelled for want of fresh; and for the most part there was strong beer for the whole mess, and when Sir William has had a mind to drink the ship beer the Marquis had strong. And they further certify that Sir William, who was not accustomed to eat of suppers, did provide one for the Marquis, which was either cold meat, cold fowl, apple pie, bread, cheese, and butter, and sometimes sweetmeats, always with strong beer,—to all which they are ready to make oath if thereunto called.

1688, Dec. 21st, The Warspite.—Sir William Jennens to Lord Dartmouth. Has received his Lordship's letter, wherein he is pleased to mention that he (Jennens) had made a seeming submission. Is sorry he is mistaken in everything, for the submission he made was very hearty and true, and he is truly sensible for the rashness he then committed but seeing his Lordship thinks fit to send another captain before he can get a convenience to remove, desires he may have leave to part at this place, and although it will be very incommodious to him, chooses rather to undergo that than to have another captain whilst he shall remain on board.

1688, Dec. 22nd.—Captain George Rooke to Lord Dartmouth. Thanks for the kind offer of the Warspite, but declines on the ground that she is ill-manned, and likely to be paid off. Mr. Bowles tells him his Lordship had promised the Mary, so humbly begs pardon for troubling him in that matter.

1688, Dec. 24th, London.—William Peny to Lord Dartmouth.

The enclosed * was this day given him by Colonel Beckford of Jamaica, who is now in London. Colonel Moulsworth was ordered governor for that island, and all officers and people of trust there turned out by the Duke of Albemarle were to be restored to their several employments.

1688, Dec. 25th, St. James's.—The Prince of Orange to Lord Dartmouth.

Directs Lord Dartmouth to appoint some of the lesser ships of the Fleet to cruise off the banks of Guernsey, to prevent any French ships from landing there, or on the neighbouring islands, also to appoint some small frigates (not fewer than four) to cruise between Dover and Calais, and between Harwich and the coasts of Holland and Flanders for the better security of the packet boats passing between those places against any insults by the French privateers.

1688, Dec. 25th, Dublin.—Francis Povey to Lord Dartmouth.

Refers to his long service in the Ordnance Office, and the good services he had the opportunity to do in Tangiers. Though his youthful education and persuasion were nurtured by Sir Edward Sherburne, poor unfortunate gentleman, to believe the Romish faith, yet he never so rashly believed it; but by the due examination of himself and pious advice of some divines of the Church of England he has embraced the Protestant religion in which he was baptised, and he hopes his future life will embrace the precepts of the Church of England by law established. Begs Lord Dartmouth's help and favour.

1688, December 25th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"His Highness the Prince of Orange's orders to your Lordship of * Missing.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

the 16th inst. from Windsor (which he was pleased to communicate to me upon his first arrivall here) did (as well by the generall scope thereof, as more particularly by the direction in the close of it) give me ground of expecting all the last week (the wind there allsoe favouring it), to have heard of your Lordshipp's arrivall with the Fleet at the Buoy of the Nore; confirmed therein the more, by Captain Fayeby and Captain Crow, and by Coltonell Legg also upon his calling on me for some assistance towards the obtaining a passport and a vessell for the enableing him to meet you there. Which putt together, and the Prince's dayly enquiries whether I had heard from you out of the Dounes or not, discouraged me from thinking it of any use to direct any more letters for you to Portsmouth. I had otherwise sooner acquainted you with my having received and comunicated to the King your letter to mee of the 14th and 15th together with that enclosed to the Lords Spirituall and Temporall; his Majesty being then (to the great, but short, content of all his servants), newly returned, and by consequence that Assembly of Peers dissolved.

Since that, the Prince has received your Lordshipp's of the 20th from the Spitthead, with it the wind is since come about easterly, to the occasioning great care and solicitude here touching the condition of the fleet, with reference to its shortness of provisions, and incapacity either of coming hither to it's supplyes, or having the supplies sent hence to that; of which Sir Richard Haddock (upon a solemne conference had thereon with him and the rest of the victuallers at the Navy Board yesterday) told me, that there were great quantities of all sortes now actually on board vessells in the river, but unable to be forwarded towards you by reason of the wind. Soe that wee are under the last degree of thoughtfulness what possible way to take to remedie this. His Highness having been fully acquainted therewith both by them and mee, and the Lords of the Treasury also (as Sir Richard Haddock tells mee) by him with great complaints at the same time made of his brethren's having not received any of their weekly proportions of money for three weeks past. By the help of which (he tells mee) he should hope to be in a condition of providing from day to day such a quantity of fresh meate out of the country about Portsmouth, as (with the advice he saies he has privately given your Lordshipp about going to short allowance) might make shift to lengthen out the remainder of your sea-provisions till the wind might change, or some other expedient be found out for relieving you. About which the Victuallers of the Navy are to attend the Lords of the Treasury to morrow morning; the effect thereof your Lordshipp shall be very soon informed of, and of whatever can be done under this difficulty.

His Highness is very sensible of the hint you give him in your letter touching Guernsey, and has given me his comands to prepare an Order signifying his direction thereon to your Lordshipp (agreeable to your own advice), about sending some smaller shipp to cruize off of the bancks of that island. Which I have accordingly done, and presume I may be able to get it signed soe as to send it away to you with this.

And in the same Order you will have another direction relating to our packett boats, upon complaints from Mr. Frowd of their being now much disturbed by the French Privateers, before which the Prince has determined upon having four small shippes or vessells appointed to that service; vessells not too bigg, because of their draught of water, for fear of the shoales; nor yet too small to cope with any of the Privateers, the size his Highness seems to propose being of the force of between 26 and 30 guns, leaving it to your Lordshipp to governe your selfe, as you may have understood the quality of the Privateers to be."

1688, Dec. 26th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"Mine by last night's post mentioned an Order I had then prepared and was in hopes to have gott it signed by the Prince soe as it might have accompanied my said letter. But I was prevented in it, his Highness not signing it till to-day, soe that I am driven to send it* by express; with this direction from him to add to your Lordshipp by way of explanation thereof, that he does not meane that the shippes thereby directed to be sent a cruizing off of Guernsey should be other than part (namely, the smallest) of the fourth rates mentioned in the list he sent you from Windsor, he intending with all the speed he conveniently can to retrench the present extraordinary charge of the Navy as farr as the state whereto the affairs of this Kingdom are now brought will admitt.

His Highness is also very intent upon having the other article in this order of his about the packet boats speedily putt in execution, and to that end expects as soon as may be to heare what provision you foresee you may make out of your smaller shippes for answering that occasion.

What I have to add is, the acquainting your Lordshipp that his Highness was pleased to send for me this day to advertize me of your Secretary's being come to towne and communicated to me your letter to him by his hand, with direction for my sending for him and receiving the account he brings with him of the state of the fleet, in order to my reporting the result thereof to him. Accordingly I did send to look him out and have this evening received the same from him, and shall report it to his Highness to morrow morning to receive his pleasure upon it. In the meane time I am to observe to your Lordshipp upon occasion of your Secretary's mentioning to me your purpose of sending the Phubb's yacht over to Guernsey, that the Prince was pleased this day to hold his hand from signing a warrant I had by his order prepared for the Mary yacht's transporting the Lady Sussex to France saying that he was likely very suddenly to have an occasion of his own to make use of all his yachts and therefore should not let any of them goe abroad on other occasions. Of which I thought it was fitt for me to give you this advice, as believing that I shall speedily have his comand for the Phubb's being brought about, especially too for that by the King's last order neither she nor the Mary were on any score to depart from Portsmouth but by his hand only."

[1688,] Dec. 26th.—Barbara, Lady Dartmouth to Lord Dartmouth.

..... "I do beleive you are uneasy to be ignorant of the affaires heare, but I find few heare but what are so, for the Prince is mighty reserved and hard of acces, which doth not take, and no body knows who to aply too or cane find out his favourits. Lord Robert Spersaire [Spencer?] by all is none and ones himselfe a great stranger to the designes, though he did desert the King after his first goeing and saw him no more. Lord Preston hath stuck close to that interist and makes no sort of aplication to the new, nor hath signed to anything but resolves, if he may have leave to retire into the countrey and will medle no more in publick affaires. I beleive he is your frind though not an active one, you know that family..... This day thare was called a convention of those comons that sat at Oxford, who concured (you may imagin) with the lords yesterday, of putting the government into the Prince of Orange's hand till the 22th, and all the revenu, and the poore King not considered or mentioned, the dore shutt upon him as if he had never bin. We heare not what is become of him, none went

HARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

* Not now with the letters.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

with him but the Duke of Bar: [Berwick?], Labody and one more, and Mr. Sheldon followed. Lord Middleton and Lord Alsbury and Lichfield attended him to the last with great tenderness."

1688, Dec. 26th, Portsmouth.—Thomas Hancock, mayor, John Suffield, Nicholas Hedger, Thomas Brouncker, Edward Battine, and 3 others, to Lord Dartmouth.

Were in hopes that the removal of the Irish garrison would not only have secured them against cruelty, &c. but also have freed them from the intolerable burthen and oppression of quartering soldiers upon them, contrary to all law, &c. and to their utter impoverishment. As this oppression still continues they have petitioned his Highness, and now desire his Lordship's influence, that the garrison there may use the barracks which are sufficiently furnished for their accommodation—the soldiers being willing but the officers not suffering them.

1688, Dec. 26th, Portsmouth.—Colonel Edmond Reresby to Lord Dartmouth.

Gives a summary of the condition of the barracks, and of the quarters of the soldiers, &c. at Gosport, Landport, Southsea, &c. concluding "The ill usage of this town is not to be expressed in this paper."

1688, Dec. 28th, London.—Phineas Bowles to Lord Dartmouth.

Reports his proceedings with the delivery of Lord Dartmouth's letters in town, his interviews with Lord Rochester, Mathew Aylmer, Captain Russell, &c. regarding his Lordship's prospects in the fleet and at the Ordnance office; fears he will meet with disappointment about the former, though Aylmer says that Lord Churchill has already acquainted the Prince how useful a minister in the management of affairs he (Lord Dartmouth) is. Sir William Jennens has complained of his being put out, but he has satisfied Mr. Pepys in that matter. Mr. Seymour is in town. The Prince gives his answer this day to the address of the Lords and Commons (that are in town of any of the Parliament in the late King Charles's time) for taking the government on him till the 22nd of next month.

1688, Dec. 29th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth. (Copy.)

"My last was of the 27th inst, bringing you his Highness's warrant about the shippes to be sent to cruize off of Guernsey, and some small vessells to guard the packett-boates. Since which upon my reporting to him the papers put by his comand into my hands by your secretary one conteyning the names of the severall shippes of your fleete and the places where they now are, as far as the same then appeared to your Lordshipp, the other the state of the fleet's victualling under the hand of the Victuallers' agent only, he has been pleased to require my pressing of the Victuallers of the Navy to use all possible diligence as to the latter in preparing such sufficient and timely supplies as may preserve the fleete from these distresses which it must otherwise in a very little time fall under, though this account of their agents seems to carry its victualling a few daies further then it was before reckon'd.

As to the other part relateing to the shippes, which I perfected as to those which you wanted an account of, his Highness has deliberately considered the number, state, and growing charge of the whole, comparing the same with what the present service of the kingdome and season of the yeare render expedient to be kept longer abroad, and what, for preventing an unnecessary growth of expence, wast of stores, and wear of the shippes, may be fitt to be laid up, and where. And upon the whole he has in generall concluded upon laying up and paying off all the 3^d rates, and all the larger fourths, and of the lesser fourths and shippes and vessells below them all, but what he has determined to keep out the remainder of the winter, a list of which I shall send your lordship by my next, my time (it being now late) sufficeing only to give your lordship this generall account of the whole, and to convey to you these particular orders following—All of this day's date viz^t,

1st. That which directs your Lordship which of the shippes now with you at the Spitthead his Highness expects your leaveing behind you; or appointing to such particuler services as will be directed by other orders; which are moreover to be left behind you in order to their being paid off and laid up in Portsmouth Harbour, and which consequently your Lordship is with the first opportunity of wind and weather to bring thence along with you to the Buoy of the Nore.

The next is, for your Lordship's making some provision for the transporting of eight foot companies for Guernsey and Jersey, and bringing away others thence. In which your Lordship is referr'd to me for some particular advice relateing to the place where they are to be shipp'd, but will not receive it from me I doubt by this night's post, as not having yet received the information I every moment expect about it from Mr. Blathwayt. Your Lordship may never the less be considering what vessells you will employ therein and appointing of them that soe if the wind should come faire for your comeing away before the souldiers are embarqued you may please to leave them to doe this work and then follow you to the Nore, such being his Highnesse's intention in this case, unless you shall finde it may as well be done by some of the shippes and vessells directed in the foregoing order to be left by you at the Spitthead, or to be laid up. In which case it is his pleasure that that rather bee done soe as you may bring away all with you that are to come to the Buoy of the Nore. But if you conceive that it may be more conveniently performed by some of the small vessells or tenders that are now with the fleet, he is contented that it be soe done, with orders (as before) to follow you to the Nore when that is over. But here, (my Lord), occurs one difficulty that cannot be avoided being putt upon you, if the Victuallers' agent at Portsmouth does not find some meanes to ease you of it, which is, the raising a contribution out of the fleet of provisions for victualling of the souldiers. But a few daies' provisions will serve the turne, and soe I hope that with the Victuallers help you will without any great inconvenience be able to answer it, especially for that I conceive the number of souldiers to be brought thence are not above halfe of what goe thither. But in this I shall be more perfect in my next upon my hearing from Mr. Blathwayte.

The 3^d is directed to Captain Sanderson or in his absence to the cheife officer on board the Phubbs yacht for the bringing her about hither which pray be pleased to forward.

The last contains his Highnesse's pleasure for two of your smallest frigats to be sent into St George's Channell as high as Chester, there to attend what service he has for them in that sea, but as I said in my last, with relation to Guernsey, soe am I now with respect to this to let you know it to be his Highness' purpose, that both this and that occasion is to be answered out of the eighteen shippes and vessells directed in the first of these Orders to be left at Spitthead. In the choice of which your Lordship is at your full liberty in reference to the two that are to cruize about Guernsey. And in the other two also for the Irish Sea, saveing that the Prince inclines to have them as small as conveniently may bee, and to that end seems to think that two of the King's old 5th rates which are now freshippes may (as it was at first intended they should when the occasion of the service as fireships was over) be turned into 5th rates againe. A worke which a very few daies will dispatch, and therefore I have by the Prince's direction wrote this night to Sir Richard Beach, that upon your Lordshipp's sending the Dartmouth, Guardland and Pearle into port they be all three immediately reduced to their old state, it being his intention to employ them all upon another worke as 5th rates (namely, towards the worke lately recomended to you of protecting the packett boats against the privateers,) in case your Lordshipp should think the business of the Irish Sea might (with regard to that sea and the season) be as well answer'd by two of the smallest fourth.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

But here I am to observe to your Lordshipp that the reducing of these 3 Fireships to their old condicon of 5th rates will require their being furnished againe with their old numbers of gunns and men, wherein your orders for the first as Master of Ordnance, and for the latter as Admirall, will be necessary; which pray will you be pleased for the present to issue for saveing of time, depending upon my sending your Lordshipp his Highnesse's Warrant for both by the very next; the complements of each of the said ships (least you should not otherwise have them before you) being as follows, viz^t:

Rate.	Men.	Guns.
5 Dartmouth	- 135	- 32.
Guardland	- 130	- 30.
Pearle	- 130	- 30.

As for their men, where there are soe many ships to be paid off, the turning over of such a number cannot be difficult.

What I have to add upon this head, the ships for Chester and Ireland is, that time is a circumstance of great moment therein. Wherefore I am by the Prince's comand to recomend it to you, that you will immediately upon receipt hereof take the whole into your consideration and the time which upon enquiry you shall find the sending in of these three fireships into harbour, and the conversion of them there will take up. The result whereof and your determinations upon the same I am to desire your communicateing hither immediately by express, giving at the same time orders for their being without delay brought into harbour, in order to their being presently gone in hand with, and their works with all possible diligence dispatched, whether you shall designe them westward towards Ireland, or eastward towards the Privateers.

It remains only that by the Prince's comand I observe to your Lordshipp, what I thought it my duty to observe first to him, that I see severall and hear of more of the Comanders and other officers of the fleet in towne, without any leave that I know of from your Lordshipp there, or his Highness here; and this at a time when nobody can foresee what occasions may on a suddaine arise for the service of their ships. His Highness was pleased to direct my takeing notice hereof to you, in order to the knowing who indeed have and who have not your leave for their absence from their charges; and the providing some speedy meanes for remyding it."

1688, Dec. 29th, Portsmouth.—Thomas Hancock, mayor and 4 others to Lord Dartmouth.

There being 150 beds ready in the barracks to entertain the soldiers (and 25 more will be ready by night) they have sent to Colonel Reresby to desire him to send 300 men to quarter in the said beds; to which the Colonel replied it was not convenient to put any soldiers into the barracks till they are all finished. The writers believe that he is determined to continue them on the inhabitants.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1688, Dec. 30th, London.—Philip Musgrave to Lord Dartmouth.

Mr. Bowles showed him some memorandums relating to the settlement of the office of the ordnance and the filling up of the vacancies caused by removal of Roman Catholics. Not knowing upon what terms his Lordship will be with the Prince at his arrival, it will be fruitless if not prejudicial to go about to make an interest for him. Will wait upon Mr. Seymour to-day or to-morrow morning. When he last wrote had reason to believe his father was secure of the government of Carlisle; but since the arrival of the northern lords his hopes are dashed, they seeming to be of opinion that no person that hath not been active in this revolution can deserve to be continued in the employment he is in, much less to be invested in a new one, and they will therefore espouse Sir John Lowther's pretensions against Sir Christopher Musgrave, Sir John having written to Lord Danby that the surrender was made in malice to him just when he was at the point to have taken it. Lord Danby therefore said it would be great injustice to Sir John to put the government into any other hands. Has sent Charles Bertie to know Lord Dartmouth's sentiments herein. Believes he (Philip Musgrave) ought to have taken the test upon being made Lord Dartmouth's secretary, and has therefore sent down a new signification to be signed, which, upon taking the test, will indemnify him. Asks his lordship to sign and return it by the first safe hand.

1688, Dec. 31st, Cockpit.—Phineas Bowles to Lord Dartmouth.

"Your Lordship judges very rightly of Mr. Pepys not being pleased with my coming up to the Prince without application to him, and this day he has given me a taste of his displeasure on my desiring to know what orders were gone to your Lordship, telling me that they were sent, and that I bringing nothing to him, he did not think it material to communicate to me, so that he will have me in the dark in that matter. . . . I find him much altered since my being with him the first night, but possibly it's more out of personal dislike to me than to your Lordship's proceedings. . . . He is pleased to call your commissionating Captain Collins for the Phubs yacht a double irregularity, first on the score of Captain Sanders being (as he says) still living, and then next of her not being under your Lordship's command. I observed in your Lordship's to him of which you sent me a copy that in place of the paragraph about Captain Collins that your Lordship believed yours the only legal commission could be given at present, which expression I fear would have sounded ill with the Prince. I therefore took upon me to caution Mr. Pepy's to omit that mention to the Prince; and sourly he told me it was not necessary, since the vacancy was not, and pray, my Lord, be tender of giving any commissions, but recommend as you think fit, which I believe is expected you should do. For the more certain meeting of your Lordship with Mr. Legge, I desired of Mr. Pepys a yacht, but he says it is to no purpose to ask it, the yachts being all kept together, with intention 'tis thought of bringing over the Princess of Orange as soon as can be. . . ."

1688, (Dec. ?).—The information of the Marquis of Querian against Sir William Jennings. (French, with translation.)

The Lieutenant Stogins (or Staquins) knows that when Sir William commanded the Jersey and the Rupert he took the pay and money for victuals for several persons that were not on board—the other Lieutenant Mr. Day being "his man," &c.

The Lieutenant Stogins knows that Lieutenant Day's sister was Sir William's mistress, and that she was brought to bed in Sir William's cabin, and that he left his legitimate son to run up and down among the seamen, and that the said gentlewoman has been always on board all the while that the fleet was before Chatham, &c., &c.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1689-90, Jan. 1st, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"I send this with an expectation that the easterly wind that blew resh (with us at least) all yesterday will have brought you back, soe as that this may find you returned to Portsmouth. And in this confidence I also send back thither a packett* of mine directed to your Lordshipp, which upon your being gone Sir Richard Beach has returned me thence, it containing divers particulars, and severall orders relateing thereto from his Highness, which (as your will find in the reading them) would very much require their meeting you there; and particularly, that which relates to the sending in severall of the great shippes, which (among the rest that are to be laid up) are with the advice of the officers of the Navy directed to be laid up there. For his Highness has, upon great deliberation and time taken in it, determined upon putting in practise what I lately made some mention of to your Lordshipp, in relation to the retrenching the greater part of the present charge of the fleet; and this not without having had laid before him all the considerations that have occurred on one side or other concerning it, and particularly what your Lordshipp offers in your letter to me of the 29th of the last, which came to my hand yesterday, and has been since communicated to me by his Highness. Who was pleased thereupon to give me this for answer, that the charge of soe great a fleet is too great, and otherwise inconvenient to be unnecessarily borne at this season of the year for soe many months, as the remainder of this winter containes, and therefore thought not fitt to make any alteration in the disposall he had made thereof;

I shall not therefore need to mention here any more of the particulars brought you in that packett, but referr you to the packett itself, and the originall papers of his Highness which you will find therein; praying that you will, upon perusing them, proceed as expeditiously as you can, to the forwarding those partes thereof which you will find new therein, among which his Highness is very intent upon that particular which respects the sending two small frigatts to Chester; and for which I doubt your Lordshipp will now find it necessary to send two of the small 4th rates, in regard of the time which I fear will otherwise be taken up before the service can be answered, in the re-converting some of the ffreshippes to 5th rates. In which I must entreat your Lordshipp to issue your orders (such as you see fitt) as soon as you can, enableing me by express to communicate the contents thereof to his Highness.

The like I must desire you to do in reference to the provision to be made for carrying over the eight companies to Guernsey and Jersey, by appointing some of your tenders, or other imbarcations for that work, tho' I find by Mr Blathwayt that he is not yet prepared to tell me which of the two ports of Portsmouth, or Hampton, they are to embark at.

But now, my Lord, there is a fresh matter of like kind, whereof I have received a signification from the Prince of his pleasure but this morning, namely the transporting of 1500 Irish soldiers forthwith, that is to say within three or four days, from Portsmouth to the Isle of Wight, to come under the comand and custody of Sir Robert Holmes. For which service any of the smallest vessels will be sufficient, and soe I hope the execution thereof will give noe interruption to any other of the works your Lordshipp has before you. And for the doing hereof, I shall take care by the next to hand you his Highness's own warrant.

* Not now with the letter.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

His Highness does well approve of the shippes your Lordshipp has pitched on for the service of Guernsey and the other islands ; and the like for those you have appointed to guard the packett-boates, tho' the Portland be one of them, which is not in the number of the Prince's list of shippes to kept abroad. Forasmuch as she being the next smallest 4th rate to them, and newly fitted out, she may may be of present use without much addition of charge ; and the Prince would not willingly alter the provition you have made for the service, he being soe much concerned for the speedy security of the packett-boates, as to have ordered out for a present shift Sandadoes, and the Guernsey fireshipp to answer that occasion till your ships come up.

My Lord, it being not certaine where this will meet with you, I respite the saying anything more at this present in reply to your Lordshipp of the 29th, then what relates to matters calling for present dispatch ; leaveing the rest to the next, and praying your Lordshipp that whereever this, or the copie thereof, and of the packett and papers inclosed, shall find you will please to give me as early advice thereof as you can. For I have sent duplicates of the whole to meet your Lordshipp in the Downes, and doe also now send a letter to Sir John Berry herewith, praying him (in your Lordshipp's absence) to open this packett, in order to his doing all that he is able with the remainder of the shippes and vessells left with him, to putt in execution what is thereby required from your Lordshipp."

1689-90, Jan. 2nd, Admiralty. Same to same.—(Holograph).

"I thank you with all my heart for your last, under your owne hand, of the 28th December, for I must owne it, I thought your usage of mee in the particular you mention somewhat unnaturall, especially at a juncture soe little needeing it from one's friends. But (my Lord) you have done both your selfe and mee right in the trouble you have given yourselfe for my satisfaction about it ; and I assure you, nothing on't shall longer stick with mee, but on the contrary, a desire of rendering your Lordshipp all the faythful services, that (dureing the little remaynder of my abode here) I shall be able to pay you.

I send you herewith the Prince's pleasure, in supply of what I wrott you last night both to Portsmouth and the Downes ; in the latter of which I presume this will now finde you, and that in a few days more I shall kisse your hands here, where it will bee matter of great content to mee, if I may bee able by any meanes to bee of use to your Lordshipp, though I have given over even the thinkeing on't for my selfe."

1689-90, Jan. 2nd, 3rd, 4th, & 5th. St. James's.—Prince of Orange. Orders (3 original and 1 copy) for the disposal of the fleet.

1689-90, Jan. 3rd, London.—Phineas Bowles to Lord Dartmouth.

"Mr. Pepys has since my first being with him conceived such a prejudice to my not being dispatched on purpose to him that he will not by any means communicate to me any orders concerning your Lordship so that I am as much in the dark as he can keep me I am sorry I am not so far enlightened here as to render you acceptable service, but to-morrow morning early Sir Henry Shere, Mr. Musgrave, Colonel Legge, Mr. Bridges and myself intend for Gravesend in order to meet your Lordship at the Nore." . . .

1689-90, Jan. 3rd, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"By the last night's post I sent your Lordshipp an order from his Highness which I hope has ere this come to your hand in the Downes, signifying his pleasure to you in reference to your supplying all that may be, by your orders there, your missing of severall of his Highness's which had the misfortune of coming some few houres too late to find you at Portsmouth. The purport of which orders I endeavoured as soon as ever I heard of your being finally gone from thence to communicate to you by sending copies thereof to meet you in the Downes, where I hope they have found you.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

In which when his Highness has said his pleasure relating thereto, he does (in his orders of last night) direct your Lordshipp with the then remainder of your fleet to repaire to the Buoy of the Nore, there to expect his further instructions in relation to your distributeing of them to the severall places where, by the advice of the Navy Board, they are to be laid up. Wherein haveing issued your necessary orders, he is pleased to invite your Lordshipp to his presence, where I now hope very soon to kiss your hands.

Which last directions of his to be expected by you at the Buoy of the Nore I have this day dispatched the originall of towards your Lordshipp by the hand of your brother Collonel Legg, who undertakes for the safe and most timely delivery of them to you.

And forasmuch as notwithstanding your Lordshipp's very reasonable desires on your part, as those of your freinds here, of your looseing noe time in your repaire hither, it may very well fall out, that one letter more from hence may yet find your Lordshipp in the Downes, I thought it not unusefull to send you the inclosed copie as well of the Prince's orders of last night, as those last mentioned of this day's date: in regard that upon compareing the ships left by your Lordshipp at the Spithead, with the generall designation last made by the Prince, of the places, at wick the ships (which are not to stay abroad) are severally to be laid up, it appears that three of the fire-shippes designed for the river are left behind, and the same number happen to be brought away that should have been left there. Which being noted, and the unnecessary charge and trouble considered which would attend the carrying the three last back againe thither, and the bringing the three others from hence [thence] hither, his Highness has been pleased to accomodate all by letting them remaine at Portsmouth which are there, and bringing those to be laid up in the river which your Lordshipp has now with you. See that your Lordshipp has now nothing to regard in your whole work of distributeing the fleet, but the list sent your Lordshipp this day by your brother, and in this inclosed copie thereof, different in nothing from what was before ordered saveing in these fireships.

What remaines is my owning with many thankes my receiving this morning your Lordshipp's of the 1st instant from the Downes, which I communicated forthwith to his Highness to his full satisfaction, both as to the safety of your arrivall there, and your expectations of receiveing some timely supplies of provisions from Dover.

As to Sir John Berry's coming about from Portsmouth with the shippes designed to have accompanied you from thence by his Highness's last orders had they come thither time enough, they will be supplied with others from the Prince himself here;

I troubled your Lordshipp last night with a few lines under my own hand in acknowledgment of the late favour of yours to me."

A copy of the Prince's order, dated the 3rd of January 1689 at St. James's, and signed "Prince d'Orange," with a list of the ships to be laid up, and a memorandum concerning them, is enclosed in the above letter.

1689-90, Jan. 3rd, London.—Philip Frowde to Lord Dartmouth.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

"The King and Queen are at Paris, all things here are very quiet, the Prince of Orange has out his letters for a convention. Lord Tyrconnell has made Lord Granard and Mr. Macarty lieutenant-generals of the army of Ireland, and Lord Mountjoy major-general; he is also as much as the thing will bear it fortifying the castle of Dublin, and has sent most of the ammunition out of the stores in thither, and delivered all the arms into Roman Catholic's hands, and has given out commissions for sixteen regiments, some say more. And yet after all this we think (and have reason) all things will end in an amicable way; 'tis said 7,000 men are to be sent thither, 8,000 men to Holland under Major-General Kirke, as England is obliged to do by treaty. I told the Prince of Orange to-day that your Lordship was in the Downs, and that you were making all the haste you could to the Buoy in the Nore; he answered you would be quickly there then, the wind being now fair.

[P.S.]—Lord Churchill is the greatest man next to Marshall Schomberg in the army affairs. Lord Feversham is at liberty." u 1689-90, Jan. 4th.—A declaration of the Protestants of Sligo. Signed by James Barrett.

1689-90, Jan. 4th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth.

"Since the trouble I gave your Lordship yesterday by your brother and by the post last night to the Downes with duplicates of his Highness's orders to you, I am just now come from attending his Highness, who was pleased to acquaint me that he was come to some fresh resolutions touching your fleet, and therefore comanded me to prepare the enclosed and to send it to you, after he had signed it by express, which I hereby doe to the Nore by the way of Chatham, and pray your Lordship to be referr'd thereto."

The enclosed order, dated the 4th of January 1689, directs Lord Dartmouth to remain with his whole fleet at the Nore until further order. [In duplicate.]

1689-90, Jan. 4th, Admiralty.—Same to same.

"Tho' I verily beleive and hope that before this arrives in the Downes you will be well advanced towards, if not fully arrived at the buoy of the Nore, to which place I have just now by express despatched an order newly signed by his Highness; directing your respiteing the execution of soe much of his late orders to you as relates to your sending in from you any shippes of your fleet that were designed to be presently paid off and laid up. Yet forasmuch as it is not impossible but by the weather or other accident you may still be detained in the Downes, even to the arrivall of this, I thought it fitt for me to send you a *copie of the Prince's said order, as not knowing but it may be of some use to you to be apprized of it before your departure thence.

What I have to add is, that it is a very great misfortune and what his Highness is much concern'd for and will expect a very strict account to be taken of the occasion of it, I meane that of the Sedgemore's being run aground, and it is feared utterly lost upon the South Foreland."

1689-90, Jan. 5th, York.—Sir Harry Goodricke to Lord Dartmouth.

Expresses the great affliction of his wife and himself at the irreparable loss of their dearest mother [Mrs. Legge, the mother of Lord Dartmouth?]. 'Tis a great comfort, however, to them both to hear of his Lordship's safe return to London.

* Not now with the letter.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1689-90, Jan. 5th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to same.

"I have nothing to trouble you with since what I wrote you yesterday with the Prince's order for your abideing at the Nore when you come thither, without your sending in any shippes to be paid off, before you have more of his pleasure therein; saveing that he has been pleased this day to let me know and to require my signifying the same to you that the service for which he lately directed two small friggaits to be sent to Chester will admitt noe delay and consequently cannot stay for any of the old 5th rates being made soe againe from fireshipps; but that therefore he does recomend it earnestly to your Lordshipp to pitch upon two of the smallest friggaits that you have under your comand for that service and to cruize between the coasts of England and Ireland within that sea. I am therefore to press your Lordshipp to think as soon as you can and give your advice upon that head; (containing in one of his Highness' late orders of the 29th of December) that soe the shippes you shall pitch upon may be upon their way for Chester as soon as may be. Had there been any of the small friggaits left with Sir John Berry fitt for this service, that had not other pressing worke assigned them, the Prince would rather have chosen for dispatche sake to have answered this service from thence but there being not any, I am comanded to write thus pressingly to you about it; and for preventing the loss of any time in it, I have sent* two of these, one to the Nore the other to the Downes this post (as I have of late severall times done) for the surer and earlier advertizeing your Lordshipp hereof."

1689-90, Jan. 6th, Captain William Tollemache to Lord Dartmouth.

Reports on the condition of the Sedgmoor ship (Lieutenant Bulkeley's) run aground on the South Foreland in St. Margaret's Bay.

1689-90, Jan. 7th, The Edgar in the Downs.—Lord Berkeley [to Lord Dartmouth]. On the same subject.

1689-90, Jan. 8th, Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth. (Holograph.)

"I repay your Lordshipp my most hearty thanks for your particular letter of yesterday, and am extremely sorry my generall one (which this accompanys to you) answers not the contents of yours to mee, and the other it enclosed to the Prince. But the truth is, the suddaine and extraordinary change of weather wee have had here all this day, did naturally administer to his Highnesse matter for the answer hee was pleased to give to them, and which he gave mee with soe much earnestnesse, and yet with noe sort of disreguard towards your Lordshipp, that I thought it of more moment to you to forbear presseing it further then I did, then to use more arguments, where I had noe inducements to thinke they would speede; contenting myselfe with giveing you the very words wherein his answer was couched, which I have done (as neare as ever I can) in my present generall letter aforesayd. To which with most true respect I refer your Lordshipp."

1689-90, Jan. 8th, Admiralty.—Same to same.

"I have now before me both your Lordshipp's of the 6th & 7th instant the latter coming to my hand by express this morning, to which (because I know your Lordshipp expects it) I shall first apply my answer though I could wish it more satisfactory to you then I fear it may [be], for soe soon as the Prince (whom I immediately upon the receipt of it, attended with it) had read your Lordshipp's to him, and heard your other to me, he was pleased presently to observe, that your Lordshipp's advice touching the shippes, and desires concerning your self being founded all along upon a supposed continuance of the frost, and N.E. wind then blew, he did believe that the whole of those measures were now at an end, the wind

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

being come about to S.E., and the frost broke, with a great, and continued raine, then just before his eyes as wee stood at one of the garden windows; adding that he therefore thought it would be much better that your Lordshipp should come about (as was before determined) to see the fleet safe brought in, and the rather (to give it you in his own words) because when you are gone there will be noebody left to head it, Sir John Berry being at Portsmouth which haveing said, and concluding with a direction that your comeing should be left as it was by your last orders, I did not think it would be of any effect in it's self, or usefull to you, to appear more pressing then in laying as I had done your severall considerations open to him, but thought it best in all respects, and the difference in time (as the weather and wind now are) being likely to be very little, to lett it fall.

My Lord, I concur with you greatly in the defect of our present sea-laws for punishing masters' and pilots' neglects and other officers by which his Majesty's shippes doe soe often miscarry. And if ever it comes in my way to doe ought towards the remedying of it, I am sure I shall. But it must be done in Parliament and how many thinges now before us must have preference given them there to the consideration of any matters soe remote as that at this day is, is hard to judge.

The Prince receives great satisfaction in the provition you have made for the answering his occasions at Chester, and desires that noe time may be lost in the despatching them away.

The like he does also very much press in reference to any of the ships that you have designed to cruise in the Narrow, and between Harwich and the Dutch coasts, he haveing at my audience with him this very morning upon occasion of your letter, told me of one of the packett boates very lately seized by a French Privateer with noe less then 4 severall mailes in her (there haveing been soe many at once in arreare) and carried into Dunkirk: wherefore if any of them be not yet gone, pray let noe opportunity be lost for their getting out; and I thank you for your hint about the Nonsuch."

1689-90, Jan. 9th, The Pendennis.—Sir William Booth to Lord Dartmouth.

About the Sedgmoor, giving the opinions of the ship's officers about getting her off and saving the stores. All the seamen but two or three had left her, but he had entreated the chief lieutenant to go to Deal and send the bellman about to let the seamen know they would be well rewarded if they returned and helped to save her.

1689-90, Jan. 10th, St. James's.—Prince of Orange to Lord Dartmouth.

Requiring Lord Dartmouth, as soon as the fleet should be safely brought to the buoy of the Nore, to leave the charge thereof to the next superior officer, and repair to the Prince's presence.

1689-90, Jan. 10th, Admiralty.—Samuel Pepys to same.

"Presumeing that this may find your Lordshipp arrived (as this day) at the Nore; and not knowing but the words of his Highnesse's last orders, directing you to remaine with the whole fleet at the Nore till further order, may upon second thoughts leade your Lordshipp to alter your last intentions and expect some clearer directions from him for your repaireing hither I have for easeing you therein as soon as may be provided a fresh warrant on that behalfe from the Prince, and committed it by this post to Sir Phineas Pett at Chatham to hasten downe to you with the least loss of time that may bee."

HARLOW
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1689-90, Jan. 16th, Admiralty.—Same to same.

"Foreseeing that your service of the Katherine yacht will be very suddenly called for, and not knowing whether she be fully discharged of her attendance upon you, I thought it fitt for me to give your Lordship the earliest notice I could of it (the occasion appearing to mee but just now) that you may be pleased to let her be at liberty as soon as you can; for I am not sure (by what I know of the matter) but her service may be required by the Prince to morrow before next day: it seemeing at present very likely that it will be soe."

1689, Jan. 18th, Sir Edward Sherburne to Lord Dartmouth.

Implores Lord Dartmouth to exert his influence in alleviating his present distressed condition. Is advised by learned counsel that it is the indubitable right of his patent to appoint a deputy to execute his office of Clerk of the Ordnance. Incloses a statement of his case to the effect that the office was granted to him 5th February, 13 Charles I. (1637-8), in reversion after the deaths of Edward Sherburne, Esquire, his father, and John Morrice; on the deaths of these he entered upon the office, but was sequestered for his loyalty in 1642, and restored to the office by Charles II. About 1673 he took the oaths of allegiance and supremacy according to the Church of England; and being now of great years of another judgment and persuasion (although not convicted thereof) hath made Mr. Townesend, a person bred up and knowing in the said office, and a good Protestant, his deputy. The opinion of Henry Pollexfen that he might legally do this is annexed.

1689-90, Jan. 19th, St. Germain's.—King James II. to Lord Dartmouth.

"Howsoever the Prince of Orange uses me in other things, sure he will not refuse me the common civility of letting all my coaches and horses come over to me, 'tis but what I did to Prince George when he went from me. I send this bearer Ralf Sheldon to you to bring them away, so sone as a passe can be gott for them from the Prince of Orange, speake for the passe your selfe or to Lord Middleton to haue it solicited, and giue directions to Delatre, to bring over him self, or if he be not yett ready to come, to send the best of my guns and pistols over with Sheldon, this bearer, to whom I reffer what els I haue to say.

JAMES R."

[Addressed.] For the Lord Dartmouth.

[Endorsed.] The King.

1689-90, Jan. 28th, Chester Castle.—Peter Shakerley, Governor, to the Principal Officers of the Ordnance. Received their order of the 1st inst. for the collecting into store all the arms taken by the rabble in the city from Colonel Gage's regiment, and from Colonel Butler's dragoons; and all the arms lent to the citizens upon the alarm of the Irish coming this way. Has done his best to perform their commands, but in vain; of the arms lent he cannot get back more than half, and of those seized he cannot get one. Has requested the mayor to issue a warrant to search the houses for arms, but he absolutely refuses to do so, or to give any sort of obedience to their honours' order.

1689, July 9th, Paper headed "Mr Pepy's report to the Honorable the Committee appointed to prepare an address about Ireland, and enquire concerning the fleet; upon the severall heads of their enquiries the 6th instant, touching the force, state, and disposall of the fleet late under the command of the Lord Dartmouth, and the reason of Admirall Herbert's having but 19 ships with him in the fight at Bantry."

"As to the former of these relating to the Lord Dartmouth's fleet, I conceive the clearest method of satisfying the Committee therein, will be the giving them an account of the said fleet, not only at one, but at the three severall periods following viz^t

1st. As it lay with my Lord Dartmouth off of the Longsand Head upon the 1st of November, the day of his highness the Prince of Orange's sailing out of Goree.

2^{dly}. As it was left by King James (my late Royall Master) upon the 18th of December; the day of his finall withdrawing.

3^{dly}. As it stood upon the 20th of February, the last day of my acting as a Secretary of the Admiralty under his present Majesty, and consequently of having any knowledge of the further disposall of that fleet.

And this I have endeavoured to do by the annexed paper, wherein the Committee will at one view be informed, of the name, rate, and force (both as to men and guns) of every ship and vessell (great and small) belonging to the said fleet at every of those periods, with what thereof were in service in the Bay of Bantry, upon the 1st of May, and what not.

And in order to the information the Committee further desires, touching those of the said fleet which were not at Bantry; I herewith also present them, with another paper containing an account of the particular place where every ship and vessell, not only of that fleet, but every other (whether abroad or at home in sea-pay) remain'd upon the said last day of my having any knowledge thereof, namely the 20th of February, humbly referring the Committee from thenceforwards to those whom (in their respective offices) his present Majesty has been pleased to entrust with the care and direction of the same.

And to them also I am (for the same reason) compell'd to pray the Committee's being referred, for their satisfaction in the remaining part of their enquiries relating to the Earle of Torrington's having no greater share of those ships (or what others lay at the same time out of sea-pay in ordinary, fitted and stored for sea-service) at the Bantry engagement in May; the determination of my worke in February rendring me (as before) wholly unknowing therein."

Annexed to the above report are the two papers therein mentioned.

1689, September 28th, Whitehall.—Earl of Nottingham to Lord Dartmouth. Asks for some information about a shipwright in Denmark, named Sheldon, of great reputation in building bomb vessels, and ships for transporting horses, &c.

.1690-91, February 10th, Lord Dartmouth to the Honorable William Legge, Esquire, at King's College, in Cambridge. On the coming elections for Parliament at the University. So many competitors that Mr. Benett will hardly be chosen. Dr. Brady is an honest man and hopes to find friends. Lord Nottingham is the writer's friend, and if his brother continue to stand, Lord Dartmouth hopes the college will show him their respect. Wishes to hear how the college and the university are in general inclined, and "upon what and whose bottoms they go upon." Will send him some proper books for the study of the globes and instruments, but hopes he will not put by his Latin for them, knowing how much he desires his son to be master of that language.

1690, December.—A thin paper book containing "Copies of some Papers taken with the Lord Preston," a few of them being Jacobite letters of very vague purport; among the others the most noticeable is a "Paper marked M," which apparently gives expression to the views of James's Protestant adherents in England. It runs thus:—

"1st. France must either oblige or conquer us. If the last he will find few helps here, but a bloodier resistance than ever the Romans, Saxons, or Normans found, it being incredible how unanimous and obstinate

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

that very thought renders the people, so that it may make us a heap of ruin, but no nation that can ever help or import any thing to France.

2^{dly}. If King Lewis desires to oblige us, and make the work easy that he may be at leisure to ply the Emperor or Italy, or to have an advantageous peace, he must take off the frightful character we have of him and shew us he has no such design as returning our offended King a conqueror upon us ; but that he can and will be our friend and mediator, upon which terms he will find that many lords and gentlemen will speedily shew themselves to his satisfaction, especially if he make haste and lose no approaching opportunity.

3^{dly}. If he incline to this sort of sense he must overrule the bigotry of St. Germain's, and dispose their minds to think of those things that are more likely to gain the nation, for there is one silly thing or other daily done there, that comes to our notice here, which prolongs what they so passionately desire."

The methods thought upon are these :—

1st. To prevent dangerous and foolish intelligence by forbidding in that Court to write any news hither, and that King James only have his correspondents by whom to hear, and speak to people here, since letters so often miscarry, and are filled with nothing but what we should not hear, and what we have are arguments for the most part against the King's restoration.

2^{dly}. Since there is a great body of Protestants that never defected, and that many (others?) are returning, and that they are the natural weight and power of these kingdoms, by having the heads, hands, and wealth of their sides, to the odds of at least 200 Protestants to one Catholic, the King may think of nothing short of a Protestant administration, nor of nothing more for the Catholics than a legal liberty of conscience, for much (emulation?) is against all other nations, to which all private passions and artificial frauds in government must yield or break. He may reign Catholic in devotion, but he must reign Protestant in government. Cromwell could not yet on a broader bottom with a victorious army subsist, or keep what he had got.

3^{dly}. He must give us a model of this at St. Germain's by preferring the Protestants that are with him above the Catholics, one being loyal upon less ties of interest ; and to tell the nation here what they are to hope for when he comes.

4^{thly}. He must give encouragement to lords and gentlemen here to come to him at least 3 or 4 for a standing council, which will make us here think he is in some degree ours again, and that we have a relation to him, and some interest and share in him, by the men of quality of our own religion that are with him. This will incomparably facilitate the matter here, nor will they, when they come, come empty and in their own names, which is still better and will be more satisfactory here.

5^{thly}. To induce this, English Protestants should be encouraged by an Edict of Liberty from the King of France to have chapels at their own costs, in which to worship God after their respective way, by which that King will make us reflect upon his conduct towards the Huguenots, rather to flow from the hazard he thought himself in by their anti-monarchical and resisting principles, than a desire of persecution.

6^{thly} and lastly. All other requisite measures depending upon the acceptance this finds, an answer hereunto is impatiently desired by those that discoursed the King's business to this maturity.

So ended with an unanimous consent of both Tories and Whigs upon this occasion, that are in a way of closing with his interest.

The following extract from a letter superscribed "For Mr. Jackson," intended no doubt for King James, shows the guarded nature of the correspondence copied into this book.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Dec. 31, 1690.

"Your adversary has been so hard to his neighbours, that he has disobliged all the old tenants, and a little matter would redeem the whole estate, if you would appear in Westminster Hall yourself. The best counsel have a good opinion of your title, and will readily pursue your instruction; I only beg you will hasten them to us, and that you will appear as soon as is possible. No time should be lost, and the cause may be brought to a final hearing before the end of Easter term, if it be well solicited. I heartily wish you a happy New Year."

BOOK containing a COPY of DOCUMENTS relating to GEORGE LORD
DARTMOUTH.

1688, September 24th. [Folio 1.]—Copy of His Majesty's commission to Lord Dartmouth to be Admiral and Chief Commander of His Majesty's ships in the narrow seas for the present expedition.

1688, September 24th. [Folio 2.]—Instructions for Lord Dartmouth to call and assemble court-martials. No sentence of death in the narrow seas to be executed without further orders from His Majesty.

1688, September 28th. [Folio 3.]—Orders to Lord Dartmouth to send the ships to the buoy of the Nore.

1688, September 29th.—Orders to Lord Dartmouth to forbear the search of foreign ships, etc.

1688, October 1st. [Folio 4.]—Instructions for Lord Dartmouth with a list of His Majesty's men of war and fire ships, and of the Channel guard.

To lead the fleet and have power to direct and dispose thereof on all emergencies as he judges shall conduce most to the King's honour and the security of his dominions. Upon the approach of the Hollands fleet on our coast or making any descent thereon to endeavour the prevention thereof by all hostile means. To advise the Secretary of the Admiralty of all proceedings for the King's notice.

1688, October 1st. [Folio 5.]—The present disposal of all His Majesty's ships in sea pay in the Channel guard containing the stations, the rates, names of ships, commanders, lieutenants, the time in sea pay, the men, and where the ships were at present.

1688, October 7. [Folio 7.]—Aboard the Resolution at the buoy of the Nore. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's private letter to Mr. Secretary Pepys sent away in a public letter of this date in the following terms.

"I received the abstract of Marquis D'Albeville's letter*, but indeed do not give much credit to his intelligence as not thinkeing their designes can be soe loose as to come to his knowledge or that Margett or Ramsgate is a fit place for their purpose, besides His Majestie may

* See Dartmouth Papers.—Pepys' letters to Lord Dartmouth of October 5th and October 8th.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

quickly know whither they have any magazines or people intending to receive them in Tenett as is surmised. But I rather believe their fleet will endeavour to attacke mee while their army goes to some farther distance, but Margett road lies both open to the sea and for the passage over the flats, and the tides will now be soon lifting, and I have people enough that understand all these sands to [be] well able to take all advantages upon them. As for hallinge the great shippes over to the other side of the river I know it hardly practicable of a sudden nor would it signify much, but you must be sure to be masters of all the small vessells and boates in the river, to have what small shott and men you can gett in them and have the batterys well manned with gunners the ordinary and what watermen you can gett. When I have a little leisure I will ron into the Swaile and see how the fire shippes lie and how they are fitted, but it is impossible they can land that way, but we shall be able to give them some disturbance, nor can they doe it soe quicke but that the King's forces will have time to gett together. Indeed I could wish that the Lord-Lieutenant and Governor of the Cinque Ports had a little more interest to serve the King with, for I fear if anything distastes the country it is them, but the King can judge best what is for his service and wee ought to make the best of a bad markt.

1688, October 7th. [Folio 7.].—Aboard the Resolution at the buoy of the Nore. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the King sent away by Colonel Legge.

"Before I had the honour to receive your Majestie's commands this morning I tooke the confidence to write to your Majestie of the great difficulty I mett with in the despatch of this fleet tho' I feare I shall be forced at last to putt to sea with few shippes and those not in the condition they ought to be, which at this time of the yeare should be regarded as much as possibly the time will permitt. I am very sensible of the great honour and trust your Majestie hath reposed in mee and I doe not doubt but by the blessing of God to answer what can be reasonably expected from mee.

"Tis to bee believed they will make a very considerable force against this Squadron apart from the vessells of their army and a great part of their stress will be upon it, and I heartily wish your Majestie's intelligence were answerable to your need of it at this time for I hardly believe Ramsgate or Margett the likely place for them to land at now,* but rather that they will send their fleet to attacke mee and in the meantime transport their army farther off which if I once gett sea room I hope to be able to prevent, but if they should come together this way your Majestie's land forces lie pretty nere one another to be able to make a good head, and though your shippes are among the sands they are among our owne sands and I am not without some knoweing men among them for that service soe that we shall be able to take the best advantages, and both by land and sea I hope their vigorous attempt will meet with a like opposition, and I must nedes doe the fleet this justice, that I see nothing among either officers or men but a hearty readiness to serve your Majestie and it will be great pitty if they are not fitted out as they ought to be for soe great a worke. I well knowe our being beaten may prove a fatall consequence but I will endeavour and resolve to order it otherwise if possible and to render you the best service of my life. 'Tis true people ashore may thinke amis of prest men but your Majestie knows they were alwayes our best men and are so at this time.

* See Dartmouth Papers.—King James' letter to Lord Dartmouth of October 5th.

Sir, I humbly propose to your Majestie that if the victuallers want provisions as I heare they doe perticularly bread that we may not stay the provideing or bakeing it in your owne store houses but that all can possibly be brought up of the merchants may be speedily done, and though it may cost a little more, it will sooner be tumbled downe to us then otherwise. Waterman's Hall can certainly furnish us with a greater number of men then 200 which I cannot yett learne or nere that number are yett come to the fleet or at least to the shippes they were ordered. But pray, Sir, what your Majestie shall please to order them now to send to us I believe they may not be sent by tickets but rather they be putt on board vessells on purpose appointed to receive them and sent away as many together as may be convenient.

There hath been very bad weather abroad and they must needs have suffered upon the coast of Holland so that as long as the winde continues westerly time is on our side, but I once more beg noe more time may be delayed but all offices and officers pushed on now to more then their ordinary duty, for if the winde change and come faire weather it will be too late to expect farther time."

1688, October 12th. [Folio 9.]—Aboard the Resolution at the buoy of the Nore. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the King sent by Colonel Legge on the Katharine yacht.

"I am infinitely sensible of the great trust your Majestie is pleased to putt in my conduct of this fleet which to the best of my understanding shall be faithfully performed for your service.

Your Majestie cannot be more desirous to have me from among the sands* then I am impatiently endeavouring to get out, but hitherto more time hath been gained by being here than anywhere I could else have been. There hath been very great storms abroad and 'tis more than probable they have been put in great disorder upon the coast of Holland. One of the smacks now come in gives an account that on Monday last there were but sixteen men of warre seen at the Maes, and that the Admirall shipp had lost her main mast, but I cannot hardly persuade the masters of these smacks to venture any more upon that coast soe that I must now take some other course to have an account from thence, for indeed these small vessels (and some of them are not very well found) are not very proper or very able to endure the bad weather, which [at] this season of the year is to be expected upon that coast, and he farther informes that he thinkes one of our smacks is lost and there is another that he is afraid of.

Sir, I am pretty well prepared for them if they should come upon me here, tho' I shall not venture that as soon as ever I am fitt to put to sea, which I hope to be now very speedily if the victuals come down this tide as I am promised.

Those shippes that were in the Hope are now here and are fitting themselves with all the expedition they can. All the officers and agents from the severall offices are at worke making the best of what we have and I have strictly examined and cut off all trifling and extravagant demands which any of the commanders have and are apt to make which indeed had been the business of the Commissioners of the Navie, and might much have eased me in this expedition, but since that could not be helped I hope your Majestie hath dispatch'd that most necessary part of your service in adding to their number and regulateing them as

* See Dartmouth Papers.—King James' letter to Lord Dartmouth of October 8th

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

you intended. I expect the Rere-Admirall downe with his shipp too-morrow or on Sunday at farthest and the Pendennis will soon follow tho' my chiefe care is to gett ready those I have with me.

Sir, I hope I am not blameable to gett what I can together for soe great a worke as I have to doe, with an enemy likely to be so much superior to me, and I judge it much more for your service to unite while we have time, then to drop out in parcells with the hazard of being sepperated, especially knowing myselfe here in the best place to doe my business while these windes continue, and be assured, Sir, I will be on sea upon the first alteration, and, Sir, tho' it is your Majestie's great goodness to trust soe great a concerne to me yett I humbly beg leave to lay my thoughts before you that your Majestie may please to judge better and to give me your commands if you please to approve or disprove of my present intentions, which cannot be finall till I am at sea, and with the humblest submission may alter with the opportunities I may meet, being hard to take any result but as the place and occasion may offer.* None of the Portsmouth shippes are yett come to me, therefore, at my first goeing out I will look towards the Downes and see what shippes I can gett from thence, and leave directions with those shippes that are to follow to come thither first, where farther orders shall lie ready for them, with what I have with me I intend to keep to sea as much as possibly I can thinking that much safer for this Squadron then to venture being any way imbayed or trusting myself to be set upon in any road, and if it shall be necessary for me to ride at any time in the Downes I will allwayes put to sea upon any easterly winds as soon as I get a reasonable Squadron together. I believe it for your Majestie's honour and service if the weather be anything reasonable, to show myselfe upon their coast as nere as conveniently I can in the daytime, still standing off to get good sea room every night while I shall see it reasonable to stay thereabout. I have discoursed with the ablest men and pylots I have with me particularly, and they are all of opinion that there is no attempting anything in their ports at this time of yeare, but I humbly desire that Captain Rooth may be sent downe to goe with me believing it may be of service to you, and if your Majestie please he may have any shipp when it falls in the fleet or be otherwise disposed of after our returne as your Majestie shall see best for your service.

I do not doubt but they will endeavour to attacke me with a considerable force,* but I am very sensible of the great concerne the preservation of this Squadron is to all your affaires, and that they will not venture out with their land forces while I can keep to sea and may be hovering over them.

Sir, I will not peeke myselfe or be provoked to do any rash thing as I will take care do no dishonourable one or omit any opportunity that shall justifiably offer for your service. I hope your Majestie will remember your resolution of having more shippes made ready to turne over our men into if there should be occasion at our returne, especially a good one for Sir Roger Strickland, the Mary being so very crancke."

(Postscript.) "Since I writ this Captain Williams has come in with the Advice and putts me in hopes the rest of the Portsmouth shippes will soon follow. If they come to me in time there will be need of calling at the Downes before I go upon the coast of Holland."

* See Dartmouth Papers.—King James' letter to Lord Dartmouth of October 8th.

1688, October 17th. [Folio 11.]—Aboard the Resolution at the Oaz Edge. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the King sent by Colonel Legge on the Katherine yacht.

"All the Portsmouth shippes that I can yett expect are now come to me, and the Reer-Admirall is this day gone aboard the Elizabeth at the buoy of the Nore. The Pendennis I expect downe to-morrow, and Mr. Fen is with me and every tide the victuallers begin to come more and more. Captain Willshaw promises that cables and sayles shall speedily be with me that he found wanting in the fleet upon his owne survey. Some men came from Waterman's Hall this last tide, and Captain Cotton tells me more are following, so that now we begin to looke in earnest and the fleet are all in as good heart as can be desired and I do not doubt but God will bless your arms and we shall now be in order and fitt for any service your Majestie can command such a Squadron to undertake, and tho' our men are not so good as they will bee, yett they are generally for their number as good as any I ever saw at the first fitting out shippes. Sir, upon the first comeing of the winde easterly I advised with the Flaggs, some old commanders, masters, and pylotts, and placed the shippes here in the best posture of defence and safety we could contrive in this place, which was all we could do, not being fitt for the sea before the winde changed, not that I thinke they (the Dutch) can be much readier for the sea at present then we were after so much ruffling weather upon their coast, and by all the intelligences which I hear they are gone up againe. I shall take all the care imaginable now your fleet is likely to be in soe good a posture to keep it so till I see it absolutely necessary to undertake something for the preservation of all that seems to lie at stake, but upon the best advice I can take here we are all now of opinion that upon the first slatch of winde and faire weather we should fall downe to the Gunfleet where, tho' it be hard roadeing, yett the ground is good and we shall be well found.

There we shall be ready to cover Harwich as well as the River Thames, be able to go to sea if occasion be, or we can but come up againe at worst. We shall be ready to looke towards the Channell, have very good anchoring between the Kentish Knocke and the North Sands Head, and the Downes allwayes to friend upon bad weather. This, Sir, with the humblest submission to your Majestie's better judgement is the present measures I thinke of till anything offers better for your service. I am even now grieved to be hooked here, though I thinke myselfe safe for I would be glad to have more sea room and keep my commanders now they are in good order as much as may be aboard their own shippes and not liable to be caballing one with another, which, lying idle together they may be apt as Englishmen naturally do to fall into, especially being in the way of dayley pamphlets and newes letters.

Upon the caution your Majestie hath given me I will not venture over on the coast of Holland without I see settled faire weather,* which is not impossible after so much bad, but I thinke our appearance after this great hectoring would make a populous government change their vaunting. The light moones are comeing on and it may be fit at least to see what use they will make of it, but this I shall leave to your Majestie's thoughts, and my brother William tells me Captain Clements in the Katharine yacht is to come againe to me, and indeed both the yachts and captains are of greatest use to guide us both here and on

* See Dartmouth Papers.—King James' letter to Lord Dartmouth of October 14th.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

the coast of Holland this season. Sir, I have writ to Sir Henry Tichbourne and to the office all the significations and directions I was capable of thinkeing of, with soe much business as I have here upon my hands, and I humbly desire your Majestie to looke a little into that office when they waite on you, for much of your service both by sea and land depends upon their well ordering and management of their business, and I would not have your Majestie's business faultor or suffer where I am anywayes trusted or concerned, and if I may have leave to offer my thoughts it would be much for your service to go to your Admiralty, Navie, Victualling, and Tower Offices at this time when you have any leisure. I believe it may be of service to your Majestie a little to inspect them, and it would satisfie the world of your generall care of all your great concerns, tho' it were but by your appearing. Pardon this presumption for it is only out of my endeavours to study your service which, by the help of God, shall be faithfully continued to my live's end.

Sir, I humbly take leave to reminde your Majestie of Mr. Bowles, who hath soe long belonged to the Navie. I hope his readiness to serve your Majestie with me at this time will be noe hindrance to his preferment in the Victualling Office, and if your Majestie please to speak with Sir Richard Haddock or any of the victuallers you will, I hope, find him properer and safer for your service then those I heare pretend to it, but this with humblest submission."

1688, October 22nd. [Folio 13.]—Aboard the Resolution at the Oaze Edge. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the King sent by Colonel Legge on the Katharine Yacht, Captain Clements.

"My brother William brought me your Majestie's last night hither tho' I believe your Majestie expected he should finde me at the Gun-fleet where I did not doubt to have been before this for on Saturday the winde about seven a clocke in the morning came about to the westward and kept between the W. and S.W. all day. The Victuallers and Store shippes were that morning aboard both my owne shipp and most of the shippes of the fleet. Between nine and ten I called the Flaggs and Captaines aboard and gave them strict orders to make all the despatch they could possibly. About eleven of the clocke I made the signall for unmoareing, but it was between three and four a clocke before we were ready to put all under sayle when it began to looke a very dirty angry skie, and night comeing on soe fast upon us the pylott and Master thought it much better to secure the fleet againe for that night as we were which we did and truly as it happened much for the best for about ten a clocke at night we had a very storme of winde and tho' we were moar'd and struck all our yards and topmasts yet the Reer Admirall and several shippes drove.

Yesterday it blew so hard and in such gusts that we did not judge it fit to meddle. About one a clocke this morning the winde came out at N. and all this morning hath been from N. to N.N.W. and we are again unmoar'd that if the winde favour us one point or two more westerly we are ready to sayle if it be reasonable.

Sir, I very well know the concerne it is to get out, but the Dutch can make nothing of it as the winde stands and tho' people will be apt to blame me and censure that the fleet is not so ready as really it is yett I hope your Majestie will not believe I give you wrong information especially when it must be soe much to my owne wrong but I do not doubt but by the blessing of God to give you as good an account at least as can be expected tho' I must acquaint your Majestie that on Friday last I had some hints of dissatisfaction in some young men in the fleet, and hearing Mr. Russell is gone for Holland (if it be so) makes me much more jealous then of any interest Herbert can have here. I am glad Priestman is not among us and I thinke he ought to be a little watched for he sets up for a leading politician. The Duke of Grafton was down here among them a little after my coming tho' he would not let me know it. My Lord Berkeley I am told is very pert but I have taken him in next shipp to me and shall know more of their tempers in a little time.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

My old friend Sir Roger hath been very indiscreet and his behaviour hath been very disobligeing all this summer which I could not at first believe, but he is sensible himselfe of the generall dislike there is to him. I have given him the best advice I could and will endeavour all I can to support him for there is no time now for doing anything but make all as much of apiece as possibly I can. I look upon most of the Commanders to be men of honour and will peek them that we are to be steady to your service, tho' I feare they have other advices and still thinke all our mischiefes spring directly or indirectly from the old conduit of Whitehall. This I believe your Majestie findes more of and 'tis fitt I should endure my share; but nothing shall discourage me from doing my utmost wherever I am and by God's help all will be well. We are generally in good heart."

1688, October 24th. [Folio 14.]—Aboard the Resolution at the Gun-fleet. "Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the King sent by Mr. Fen, who on the 25th instant in the morning went from the fleet in the Cleveland Yacht for Harwich whence he was to goe post.

"I thanke God I am at last got hither with your Majestie's fleet safe and in as good condition for the time as could be expected whatever may be suggested to the contrary and our coming out not sooner hath been hitherto for the best as I hope all things will do for your advantage. I could wish I had more force if the enemy be so strong, as I am told tho' I believe we are as good a winter Squadron as ever England put to sea at this time of the year and as nothing shall be wanting on my part for your Majestie's service so upon the best enquiry I can make I apprehend nothing but a readiness in all the Commanders to do their duty to your Majestie. Sir we are now at sea before the Dutch after all their boasting, and I must confess I cannot see much sense in their attempt with the hazard of such a fleet and army at the latter end of October and if they can make use of this moon it is as good for us as them. I will observe all the cautions your Majestie hath hinted to me and preserve your fleet entire to the best of my power till it shall be reasonable and necessary to venture it but I am upon an element subject to accidents which you are so good a judge of that I need not implore your favor in if I should be soe unfortunate (which I hope not) as that any should happen to me. I wonder to hear by so many letters etc. of the frights that are ashoare though I thanke God they take noe effects upon us here. We take ourselves to be a tolerably good guard upon the coast and if I may have leave to say so (between your Majestie and I only) your statesmen may take a nap and recover, the women sleep in their beds, and the catle I think need not be drove from the shoare. I doubt not but God will protect his anointed and the King's servant shall not be afraid to serve your Majestie faithfully to the utmost of my power. Mr. Fenn hath taken a great deal of paines to helpe us out on his part and will give your Majestie a perticular account of our victual besides a good supply he assured is making at Dover if we go into the Downes which may be likely to be one part of our winter quarters; he hath been with us sometime and is able to give your Majestie an account of the condition he leaves the fleet in."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1688, October 29th. [Folio 15.]—Aboard the Resolution at the Gun-fleet. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the King sent to Harwich to go thence by express under cover of Mr. Secretary Pepys.

"I have received from all hands the account of the Prince of Orange's proceedings which makes me remember your royal brother's story of the Scotch pylott and the wake Councell, for the whole proceeding at this season looks more like the advice of land men or at least men of desperate fortunes than men that knew how to accomplish what they have undertaken, if I may have leave to say soe, as your Majestie was almost too late before you would believe the designe soe as to prepare what was necessary for your owne defence, soe they by their owne delatariness lost their time for this yeare and whatever distracts their measures must gaine time to settle your Majestie's owne affairs.

I have sent over three good saileing frigggattes and briske men to attend their motion for now both fleets are knowne to be out there is noe longer making use of small vessells or dallying with one another. I thanke God your Majestie's fleet is in very good condition and (considering the whole matter your Majestie hath been so graciously pleased to leave to me) I will endeavour to keep it soe till it is fit to venture for all; there is noe struggling too much against winde and weather, and if they suffer so much at home there is no sense in meddling with their coast without settled weather for the winde teares and veeres and halls about soe much all this month that your Majestie sees wherever it hath flattered them to venture out it hath returned them backe to their owne loss.

Tho' this be an open road yett there is many conveniences in it. I thinke we are well posted for security each way but as the moon grows older I believe they will grow sicker of their designe and the growing mad shall not provoke me to follow their example.

Sir, when the light nights go off unless by some intelligence I see something better to be done I am advised to secure the fleet better in the Downes for it will not be so safe here after the moon is over and there is noe other place unless we goe backe to the Buoy of the Nore which cannot be fitt till we are sure they are laid up first. I hear they wear English colours and talke of treateing with us, but pray, Sir, be assured I will suffer no language to be spoke to them but out of your guns, and by the blessing of God I do not doubt but to render you a good account of the trust your Majestie hath reposed in me."

1688, October 30th. [Folio 16.]—Aboard the Resolution at the Gun-fleet. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the King, sent by Mr. Bridges on the Cleave!and Yacht for the river of Thames.

"Since mine to your Majestie yesterday the winde came up last night about nine a clocke to the N., and continued most of the night between the N. and the N.N.E. About four a clocke I gave the signal for unmoreing, and we are just now under saile with the tide at ebb and the winde at S.S.E., and hope to get clear of the Galleper before night. On Fryday last, the Prince of Orange and Herbert were both seen at Helversluce* soe that they could not be stirring, as the windes have been till last night and this morning; no doubt they will gett all to sea this day, and I hope by tomorrow to give your Majestie a better account of them. I have my scoutes abroad, and I believe it impossible for us to miss such a fleet. God prosper your Majestie, and send you victory over your enemys. I am sure I will endeavour heartily my part towards it.

* See Dartmouth Papers.—Pepys' letters to Lord Dartmouth of October 17th and 27th.

Mr. Bridges is the bearer of this, and if your Majestie will give him leave is able to give you a full account of all things relating to this Squadron and your service here. I am afraid in this hurry there is want of him in the Ordnance Office, for tho' he was so very unfortunate, yett I am sure next to Sir Christopher Musgrave there is none better able to serve your Majestie or give you account of that office. I heartily wish for your Majestie's service I could prevail to have him restored to your favour, for my owne experience of him I am sure he is able to serve you in severall capacities."

1688, November 5th. [Folio 17.]—Aboard the Resolution off Beachy. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the King sent by Captain Crofts, who was despatched express for London, and went by the Kitchen yacht to be sett ashore.

"Since mine to your Majestie on Tuesday last by Mr. Bridges I came that night to an anchor about 6 a clocke, the Naz bearing to W., and Babzy church N W. and by N. with a very fresh gale of winde at due E.

Besides the three cruisers I had out before I sent out the Sandados to ply to the northward upon the receipt of the abstract from Marquis D'Albeville's,* the Katharine Yacht I ordered to ply off to the eastward and the Kitchen to the southward. The Kingfisher Ketch was likewise sent to Ostend with letters from Captain Rooth, but all this as the winde stood and as it blew so hard availed me nothing, for on Thursday our frigattes that were sent a cruiseing were drove backe and came to an anchor in our offing about a league and a half to windward of us, one of them came in without a foretop-mast, and another wanted his maintopmast. It blew so very hard that we were forced to strike all our yards and topmasts, and ridd with two cables and a halfe out, the winde fretting and never varying above one point either way.

Just at breake of day on Saturday morning we saw thirteen saile about three leagues to windward of us. The three frigattes that lay without us cutt, but could fetch but one fly boate that had lost her rudder; she was taken by the Foresight and sent into the Downes with the Swallow, who it seems sprung a leake soe that I feare I shall have little good from her. Major Colondsby of Colonel Babbington's regiment with 200 men were in the fly boate, and as I am told the common men rejoiced when they were taken, but I doe not finde the officers soe, tho' the Major pretends a great deal. I got already to saile with the fleet on Saturday, but the sea came in so heavy, and the tide fell soe cross that we could not till yesterday morning. We got under saile at 8 a clocke with the wind at E.S.E. a topsaile gale; about ten Captain Clements came into us with the Katharine yacht which was the first newes we received of the Prince of Orange for the Foresight returned not to us till twelve this afternoon to give an account of the fly boate. We made all the saile possibly we could to the westward, the weather came very faire and the winde continued at E.S.E. a steady gale. By eight at night we got about the South Sands Head, about twelve we got the length of the Ness, and I halled in with the shoare lest they should be in Rye Bay, but it proved so little winde from twelve a clocke, that when the floud came in we could scarcely stem it, and got noe farther then Beachy by nine this morning, but this ebb I hope we shall make better of it

* See Dartmouth Papers.—Pepys' letter to Lord Dartmouth of October 29th.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

Thus I have given your Majestie a true account of all my proceedings which are soe farre from the vaine hopes I had that I take myselfe for the most unfortunate man liveing, tho' I know your Majestie is too just to expect more than winde and weather will permitt.

Sir, findeing that the Dutch sailed by Dover on Saturday in the afternoon, and that they had a fresh gale all that night, and a faire winde all day yesterday, and such weather for their purpose and soe little for mine to day I am in great apprehensions they will be landed before we fetch them, and if their fleet lie at St. Hellens whilst the rest land in Stokes Bay and Hampton Water their fleet being soe very much superiour as I finde they are both in number and quality, I am at a stand what to doe, for on calling the Flagg Officers and Commanders they unanimously advise me against attackeing the Dutch fleet if all possibility of hindering their landing be over, tho' everybody I assure you, Sir, I thinke are so exasperated at the Prince of Orange's proceedings that I am once more confident they will venture their lives very heartily in your Majestie's service. I consider the success of their landing and beating your only fleet together with the destruction as I may say of the flower of the English fleet or so many of them at least as are here at present. I confess, Sir, the thoughts of this with the consequence it may have in London and all over England checks my inclination of setting upon them without your Majestie's farther orders, but I resolve to endeavour to fall in with the Isle of Wight at breake of day to-morrow morning, and see what advantage it will please God to offer me takeing the caution not to shute too far to the westward in the night, nor to engage your fleet unreasonably, or at least after I see some hopes of doing so.*

Sir, I send this bearer Captain Crofts at Sir Roger Strickland's desire who answers for his sobriety and diligence; his understanding and seamanship they say are sufficient, but I extreemly want one with me that your Majestie may have confidence in for me to send you upon all occasions. If your Majestie please to think of such a one. I desire what orders your Majestie shall please to send to me may be despatched to Rye with duplicates to Emsworth or Chichester and the Downes. Sir, just as I was finishing this, Sir Roger Strickland, Sir John Berry, and Captain Davis, came altogether to me and earnestly pressed that I would not proceed to make the Dutch with the whole fleet in consideration that the Squadron is at present so weake showing what are now wanting and what I should have with me, which are the Swallow and Tyger in the Downes, the Dover, Foresight, Bonadventure, and Sandados not yet come to us from cruising, since we came into the channell, the Speedwell and Sally Rose fire ships missing, as in all the small craft except one Ketch of the two Yachts besides the Yorke, Woolwich, St. Albans, and Newcastle, so that at present we want twelve. They farther urged that they are doubtfull that upon our appearance their whole fleet would come out to us, and either force us to a disadvantageous battle or a disgracefull going from them, so that I have now resolved with them to ply off and on, and jogg easily till the scouters, I have now upon their advice sent to the westward bring me an account of the enemy, and that the shipps asterne (or rather left behinde for the present) come up to me, and that I know your Majestie's pleasure what you would have me to do which I humbly desire may be as soon as is convenient for the case is much different now and from what it would have been if we had been soe happy to have met them before they were discharged of their great convoy.

* See Dartmouth Papers.—Letter from Pepys to Lord Dartmouth of November 7th.

The places I am likely to come to anchor at are the Naze or the Downes, where I believe some of our shippes may be that are missing.

I understand the Prince of Orange changed his measures upon his last coming aboard when he heard your Majestie's fleet was at the Gunfleet, for before that he intended for the river. Pray God Almighty direct and protect your Majestie, and notwithstanding all this I hope by His blessing yett to be able to render your Majestie good service from this Squadron as time and opportunity offers for I am faithfully and heartily devoted to your Majestie to my live's end."

1688, November 5th. [Folio 20.]—Aboard the Resolution off Beachy.

"Tho' I sent at the same time Mr. Crofts to your Majestie at Sir Roger Strickland's desire, yett I am not so satisfied for the ready despatch of your Majestie's service by him and the way of London but that I thinke it for your service to send this bearer, Dick Carter's groom, who knowes how to cross the countrey and finde out your Majestie's army where I presume this duplicate of what I sent by Mr. Crofts may probably sooner meet your Majesty."

This in addition to a duplicate of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the King sent away this day by Captain Crofts who is despatched "to finde his Majestie wherever he may be if not at London, and went by the Kitchen yacht to be set ashore."

1688, November 7th. [Folio 21.]—Aboard the Resolution anchored in the Downes. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the King sent express by Captain Rooth from the Fleet.

"From my last to your Majestie by Mr. Crofts till yesterday at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, I had not one breath of winde but lay driving with the tide in hazy weather; then sprung up a small gale at S.E. and by E. and from thence varying to the S.S.W. we steered away to the westward till eleven at night, Beachy then bearing N.E. and by E. about eight or nine leagues off. We tacked and stood to the S.E. to get a better offing from the oares, and my endeavours being to backe my scouters and raise the Isle of Wight by morning if possible. Wherefore about 3 a clocke I tacked againe and stood to the W.N.W. and N.W. till 8 a clocke but there came up a storm at S.W. The Assurance making her signalls of distress, the Mary bearing up not being able to hold it longer, the paunch of my owne foremast sprung and the head of the mast rung. I thought it not [right] for your Majestie's service to strain the fleet farther but bore up for the Downes, and had so great a rune that I arrived here about 5 a clocke this afternoon where I hope quickly to gather the fleet, being the generall randevouz designed upon for seperation.

Considering your Majestie's service and the state of the fleet as I last represented it to you with regard to the enemy, I immediately despatched Lieutenant Wright to take up six good vessells at Dover etc. to make fire shippes, thinking it the quickest way of despatch to do them here with my owne carpenters and gunners rather then expect the tedious delays from the rivers, and that I may endeavour every way to render my selfe most serviceable I have sent to Welford to send me out whatever fire shippes are with him any wayes capable of keeping the sea. I hope the three shippes in the river will now have noe longer excuse for coming to me, and although I cannot yett hope for more men of warre, this will be a good reinforcement of this Squadron soe that I hope yett upon the first easterly winde to be able to do some service, tho' at this time of the yeare I dare promise nothing more, but expect your Majestie's commands and that what strength can will be sent me by degrees, for I understand the Dutch are fitting out more ships to a good number to backe these they have already soe that I perceive they intend to winter with us, but I hope your Majestie will fit out more ships, that they may not ride Lords of your seas.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Sir, let my misfortunes at present looke as ill as they are, I hope God will bless me at last to serve you, for I am not conscious to mysele of any wrong step I have made unless it be too much assurance of my owne success which I hope your Majestie will rather thinke an error of the right hand in a man of my profession that means soe truly well to endeavour your service. I send this by Captain Rooth who hath constantly been on board me, and I am confident will satisfy your Majestie of my endeavours to serve you tho' I have been hitherto the unhappiest man alive.* I will take all the care I can to hinder their setting on me to any disadvantage here tho' that cannot be yett their business as I believe.

I am told they have abundance of small field pieces, and I know your Majestie ordered a very small traine, but if I mistake not there are thirty of the best small field pieces ready to march at Portsmouth which may now be necessary to be drawne out, but I hope in God they will be disappointed in their measures, and that your subjects will prove loyaller than they expect. Pray God preserve your Majestie."

1688, November 8th. [Folio 22.]—Aboard the Resolution at the Downes. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the King sent express by Mr. Hodder from the fleet.

"Captain Cole in the Pearl met with a Brandenburg vessell and brought him to me who with some threatens (suspecting him coming from the westward) I found to be an advice boate going backe to Holland from the Prince. The whole packett he was carrying I have sent up by this express to Mr. Pepys for your Majestie, and I believe there are letters will give your Majestie some serviceable intelligence.† I understood very few of the superscriptions and therefore opened only the English letters, among which I found Burnett's letter to his wife making some reflections on the behaviour of your Majestie's fleet tho' in the same letter he is pleased to take notice we could not come to them. By the list of their fleet I finde tho' they have nine Flaggs yett they are not soe great a force as they were reported soe that we may yett give them a parting blow if your Majestie pleases and thinke it for your service. I am doing all that I can to putt the fleet in a good posture, and after all my misfortunes am still in hopes to render your Majestie good service.

By all I can observe in these letters they intend to march directly towards London and depend mightily upon the people's coming into them, but I hope in God your Majestie's armes will have good success and one good blow may end all for the best, for I believe there are many will be cautious enough, let their wishes be what they will, that will scarcely venture to show it till they see success in the Prince of Orange's side, which God forbid.

Sir, I hope your Majestie judges of the great torment I am in for not being able to serve you better and to be absent from you at so great a time of need, but by the blessing of God I will render you all the service a poor faithfull servant is capable of wherever you thinke me most capable.

My task hath been hard and tho' not successfull hitherto yett I hope your Majestie will finde the benefit of my labours at last. Not understanding either Dutch or French myselfe I have sent your Majestie the whole packet, but if there be anything in them of use to your Majestie's service here I beg you will order them or abstracts to be put in English and sent backe to me for I am too much in the darke at present, but I hope still all will prove for the best at last."

* See Dartmouth Papers.—King James' letter to Lord Dartmouth of November 9th.

† Ibid.—Pepys' letter to Lord Dartmouth of November 10th.

1682, November 10th. [Folio 23.]—Aboard the Resolution at the Downes. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the King sent express from Deale at about seven of the clocke at night.

"Captain Cole examining the cooke of the Brandenburg vessell found that the Captain had throwne some letters into the cableteer, and upon searching found these which I have enclosed to your Majestie believing some of them to be the Prince of Orange's owne hande.*

I am doing the best I can to put things in the best posture I am able to render this fleet serviceable, but after such stormes as we have had your Majestie is sensible that many wants will be pretended which I am searching into the reallity of and will do the best I can, for it grieves my very heart to thinke of my misfortune and to finde such dayly complaints tho' there is great distinction to be made of men at this time, some being willing rather to hide their defects then thinke of being from your service or out of the way of it at this time, but more are willing to be refitting. Sir, upon a through information I will judge the best I can what I shall be able to do. I know the great trust and care your Majestie is pleased to putt in me, and tho' I am an unfortunate man yett your Majestie shall finde in me a very faithfull servant doing everything without regard to anything to your Majestie's preservation and good. Yett, Sir, being sensible of my owne defects and your Majestie's owne better judgement (which is now my only comfort) I humbly desire your Majestie's owne orders and directions at so criticall a time for as I will not be peeked to do any rash thing, soe I am more unwilling to be anywayes backward.

I have shown Mr. Pepys' letters to the Flagg Officers and we are taking it into consideration of securing the fleet and offending the enemy's the most we can, but being of so great importance they were desirous to consider better of it and I have given them time to thinke till next letters arrive which I hope will not be long before I receive them."

1688, November 11th. [Folio. 24.]—Aboard the Resolution in the Downes.

Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the King sent express by Mr. Cross despatched from aboard 12 of the clocke at night.

"I received the honour and comfort of your Majestie's this day. It is the greatest happiness of my life that your Majestie is satisfied with my endeavours tho' they have proved soe unlucky hitherto. It is strang that such mad proceedings should have such success at this time of the yeare but I hope God will bless your Majestie's forces at last. A difficult part I have to deale withall is the weather, but I am likewise to watch what effect it will have upon them before I can well be able to do anything to the purpose. I this day advised with the Flagg Officers etc., and found it debated by some with great reasons for going to the Buoy of the Nore as the best place of safety and for fitting out a good fleet such as might be able to do your Majestie more effectual service than we can hope for otherwayes; but some were with this winde at N.N.E. (if it holds as it seems very likely to do) for going to

* See Dartmouth Papers.—November 11th.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSB.
—

Spithead, and since your Majestie is pleased to say you have soe well secured London and are getting westward yourselfe I hope it will not be unreasonable for us (let their force be what it will) to look towards them. It may have a good influence upon the people and yett I may be able to secure this Squadron there I believe better at least then here which are the only places beside the Nore which at best will argue some feare, besides I am unwilling to hooke myselfe soe much within the sands againe.

When I am at Spithead I shall endeavour to secure myselfe from their coming in at the Needles with the winde westerly, and they cannot terne in from St. Hellen's but with great disadvantage. If I finde they come up the Channell it will be my business to follow them and watch their coming into the river if they venture at it. All my apprehension is of the fresh Squadron they are saying to fit out in Holland, which I hope your Majestie hath better intelligence of and will provide for. 'Tis very hard the shippes from the river have not yett joined me but I will still hope for them; it cannot but be expected that at this time of the yeare accidents will happen and some shippes will be shattered, but from Portsmouth I hope we may finde fresh and better shippes to turne into and a supply of our wants may be had, so that I hope care will be taken of our victuals and all things that may be necessary to be expected from thence.

Sir, I am very sensible of the ill censures and misconstructions are apt to be made of my proceedings but nothing shall weigh soe with me as to hinder my doing whatever is most reasonable and best for your service according to the best of my understanding.

I most humbly beg your Majestie's own directions (who are best able to judge) how you would have me proceed from time to time as oft as conveniently you can, and more especially that I might have your Majestie's thoughts (if possible) before I stirre from hence, this step being of soe very great importance."

1688, November 11th. [Folio 25.]—Aboard the Resolution in the Downes.

Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to Mr. Pepys sent by Mr. Cross, express.

"I am extremely sensible of your care and kindness to me in yours of the 8th instant in your owne hand, and this day I received the effect of yours by a letter from His Majestie which hath extremely eased my very sorrowful heart. You know I have long been hardened to illusage and tho' my Lord Sandwich is often in my thoughts yett I can scarcely forbear thinking of pushing more then my owne reason would otherwayes prompt me to, for I have good reason to believe the list of their shippes before you was made before the storm that drove them first backe and that their flaggs changed into bigger or that they had their last supply of shippes, yett I call God to witness noe concerne of myselfe makes mee soe uneasie as the thoughts of the unnaturall usage His Majestie meets with, and all his affairs are anxiously before mee. Pray endeavour to let mine this night to the King be answered effectually as soon as possible, for this step I am going to make is of the greatest consequence. Sir John Berry and Davis seem mightie averse to it, and what has become of the shippes from the river I cannot imagine. I thought to have bettered myselfe by coming hither, but to my great disappointment I finde my loss in the Montague, Centurion and Assurance greater than any recruit I am likely to have, so that nine and twenty men of warre is all I am likely to depend on and severall of them in noe very good condition. I have great confidence that George Aylmer and

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

Gifford will make good haste to mee; pray encourage them and whatever shippes are fitting to make the best despatch they can. You knowe how farr I am victualled and that must be thought on timely; cables anchors, sayles and long boates must be sent, for this time of the yeare we shall allways be upon the losing hand and the weather is one of my greatest and constantest enemye I am to expect.

I have no answer to mine yett from you of the 8th and I would be glad to know what I am to do with any vessels fallen [falling] into my hands and how to proceed with all Dutch shippes, for as yett you know I am in the darke my instructions being only if I had met them upon their invading.* Sir, I can never enough acknowledge your share in my sufferings even from Tanger to the Long Sands Head, etc."

1688, November 12th. [Folio 28.] Court at Whitehall.—Copy of His Majestie's warrant sent by Lord Middleton for attacking the Hollands fleet in a hostile manner when and wheresoever the fleet under Lord Dartmouth's command should meet or finde them.

1688, November 13th [Folio 26.] Aboard the Resolution in the Downes.

Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the King sent from Deal by express.

"I am very happy to finde by your Majestie's of the 12th, which I just now received, that it is your owne opinion that we should go westward which I was endeavouring this morning, tho' I had not your Majestie's resolution, but it blew by gusts so hard that I was not able to get out before the tide was spent and I have advised with the Flaggs who desired me to have patience till tomorrow when I hope we may have good success. Indeed, Sir, I have been in great paine to be gone up since the winde came easterly but we have had so great a storm from Saturday night till this afternoon that it was impossible to weigh without great danger to the fleete, and the winde coming since noon and blowing so fresh at N.W. is now noe small affliction to the rest I have already endured. As for the enemye's number of shippes and our owne strength being compared we shall consider it noe longer, but I will doe the best of my endeavours to finde them out and give you the best account God will please to bless me with, but the winde is very variable at this time of the yeare and by the coldness of the weather I hope we shall have an easterly winde, at last I hope for moderate weather. As for the shippes Mr. Froud gave the account of I thinke it not reasonable to part any of the fleet to look after them at this time, and if they come westward I hope to meet them myselfe and indeed it is impossible to look all wayes at once with this squadron. I have scouts out and I hope all will not fail me tho' I have had noe better success hitherto. The Scotch seaman your Majestie mentions is not yet come, being an ill horseman as most of us sailors are, but I will take all the care imagineable of him when he comes to me. I hope Captain Rooth gave your Majestie an account that I was resolved against going to the Buoy of the Nore from the beginning unless I were absolutely forced to it; tho' I have been much prest to it by some of good judgment yett would never heare of it for the reasons I acquainted your Majestie in my last. Spitthead is much more convenient in all respects but I hope not to be forced to either till I have rendered you better service. Your Majestie sees the misfortune

* See Dartmouth Papers.—Order dated November 18th.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

it is to me neither to understand French nor Dutch, but I have now got aboard me an ingenious man, one Dr. Morelby, that I hope will be usefull to me for the future. Sir, I finde your Majestie has resolved to go in person at the end of the weeke. God Almighty preserve and keep you and bless all your undertakings.

Sir, my afflictions are unconceaveable not to be with you at this time and more to thinke of the great trust that you have put in me and I am able to serve you noe better hitherto, but it is noe easy taske I am sure your Majesty knowes to deale with a winter Squadron which is much a greater taske then the enemy. I know the impertinency my misfortunes are lyable to by ignorant and malicious people about a Court, but my trust is only in God and your Majestie.

Pray, Sir, be assured I will do all that I am able to serve you heartily, and tho' it is another misfortune that I cannot now hope to hear or receive your Majestie's commands and advice so often as your service may require it, yett I will do all to the best of my understanding, and as I will noe more presume so will not despair of God's blessing in my honest and laborious endeavours."

1688, November 15th. [Folio 29.].—Aboard the Resolution in the Downes. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the King sent away from Deal by express.

"The Scotchman your Majestie was pleased to send me,* I have made very good use of, and give him good credit with the whole fleet, and I doubt not with God's blessing, better weather and a faire opportunity yett to give you a good account of all. I have seen this Scotchman myselfe before, and Captain Martin who is my chiefe mate knowes him and gives him a good carecter. I wish he had been able to have got from thence before for he pretends to know they designed either for the river or westward and never intended norward as was pretended. Upon receiving your Majestie's of the 12th yesterday with the warrant from my Lord Middleton, I acquainted the Flagg officers therewith, and we resolved together as we had done before upon your Majestie's first instructions to seek out the enemy and take any faire advantage we could of them, and now we shall set upon the Dutch fleet wherever we shall happen to meet them, and I had thought the weather being moderate tho' the winde was at N.W. and by N. to have got out from hence and to have anchored while the weather continued faire under Dungeness, but it was thought more adviseable and resolved by all (that in regard we had good scouters out and the winde so variable in respect to the season of the yeare and the darke nights) for the better safety of the fleet to remaine here till the scouters give notice of the approach of the enemy (if they should come towards us) and upon the first notice to sayle out upon the North Sands Head to gain sea room for the better encountering them and with the first faire winde to proceed to the westward and look them out.

Sir, it is the grieve of my heart that I have not been able to serve you better and that this letter comes still from this place, but it is now starke calme, and I heartily pray for a faire winde, so I hope in God my next will be able to give you a better account. Mr. Pepys writt to me for the officers that were prisoners, but I gave him an account sometime since that I had sent them to Sir Charles Littleton and I believe if the Major be examined and you can make him honest he is capable of giving as good an account as any man of that post among them. For God's sake,

* See Dartmouth Papers.—King James' letter to Lord Dartmouth of November 12th, and Pepys' letter of same date.

Sir, let them fitt what shippes they can especially at Portsmouth, and let the guns be gott aboard as soon as they can by the ordinary, for what can be must be done at this time.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

God Almightye prosper and preserve your Majestie."

1688, November 22nd. [Folio 31.]—Aboard the Resolution at the Spitthead. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to his Majestie sent by Mr. Cross to go express to Salisbury.

"I sayled with your Majestie's fleet from the Downes on the 16th with the winde at N.E. and faire weather. Ry eight the next morning the Isle of Wight bore W.N.W. about seven leagues off, at ten a clocke I lay by and sent in the Cleaveland Yacht with orders to the Commissioner to prepare what he could for my returne and to send me out what shippes were at Spitthead with directions to follow me to Torbay, for the windes being at E.S.E., a hard sky and faire weather, I could not judge of a better oppertunity, and if it had pleased God to have continued the winde and weather in all probability I could not have failed for I was about 45 men of warre and fire shippes, and if I had gone into Spitthead I knew many wants would be pretended and considerable time delayed, besides for other reasons I thought it best for your Majestie's service to bring the fleet to fight as soon as conveniently I could. About noon the body of the Isle of Wight bore W. & B.N. four or five leagues off. I set sayle with a fresh gale of winde at S.E., at four in the evening the winde came out at S.S.E. and S. and B.E. then we stood to the eastward to underlay the ebb and gett a better offing, but the winde comeing backe to the S.E. and B.S. we tacked againe about seven at night and stood off S.W. with the tide of flood under our lee. It blew very hard all night, and in the morning the Reer Admiral and severall of the fleet were wanting. I lay atry for sometime and then bore up to get the fleet as much together as possibly I could, but the wind continuing to blow harder and harder to a violent storme, and there being noe ventureing to tack in the night with the fleet we were forced away to the westward and the weather so very thicke in the morning that if the storme had continued but two watches longer we must have been probably put past any port in England, but it pleased God at about 9 of the clocke we had less winde veering about to the S. and so to the westward, and at 10 it cleared up, the Start being N.N.E. about six leagues off. I lay by for the fleet, but could not get above twenty-two sayle together. Captain Arthur told me severall shippes had received much damage on Saturday night and the Reer Admirall among the rest, but I found him got to St. Hellen's in good condition himselfe, but severall of the fleet much damaged for a violenter storme could not be for the time. I heare of none yett lost but the Helderburch Hospital* which is foundered and but thirteen men saved. At noon the Start bore N.W. five leagues off, faire weather and a fresh gale at W.N.W.; about two we luffed up towards the Bury and I sent the Jersey (who sailes very well) to haul close in who says he was within two miles of Herbert. Upon his appearance they made signall and got up their yards and topmasts and were endeavouring to weigh but did not which I wonder at, my force being so small and faire in sight of them and they to windward. They lay very close together, close under the shoare, he told as he sayth fifty-seven good stout shippes, but their smaller shippes lay farther in that he could not tell them. By this they should have had some recruites but your Majestie may see how reasonable my coming upon them

* See Dartmouth Papers.—Pepys' letter to Lord Dartmouth of November 24th.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

had been if it had pleased God to bless me so that the winde had stood and the weather continued faire, but there is noe resisting a storm in the Channell at this time of the yeare, and if I should not have ventured when the winde was faire and the weather promised well I might have been justly blaimed, for if nobody should go to sea when the winde is faire for fear of the winde shifting and a storm comeing down things would hardly ever succeed.

About 12 that night for feare of overshooting the Isle of Wight I shortened saile and lay by for sometime, but about 2 a clocke it blew very violently againe till morning at S.W. I got in and joined the Reer Admirall with most of the fleet about 11 a clocke at St. Helin's, but I believe several shippes that are missing are blowne to the Downes, whither I have writ to Mr. Pepys to send orders for those that are in condition with the first oppertunity to rejoyne me here, the rest to refitt in the river as soon as possible, for to my great disappointment Sir Richard Beach tells me there are very few stores for fourth rates which is the greatest part of this fleet. I will be sure to take all the care and pains I can to refitt and change such shippes as are necessary (if your Majestie will give me leave) for I am very apprehensive of their passing by me in the night (which is not to be avoided especially when it blows hard) and their going up the river while your Majestie is absent, but of this I will take the best care I can. Their fortune hath been extravagant for their hath been but three faire days since I came to sea and they had two of them to land in while I was becalmed off Beachy, but sure I shall have some luck at last for I will struggle all I can and endure with patience till I can compass that service you expect from me.

My business now shall be to gett readdie as soon as possible tho' the season of the year is intollerable, sixteen hours night to eight hours day with lea shoares in the Channell is harder workeing then any battle.

I am sorry to heare any have proved false to your Majestie in the army; I not only wish, but will be watchful that it may have noe influence here. The Prince of Wales I am told is at Portsmouth, and tomorrow I will venture your Majestie's leave to pay my duty to him tho' it is the first time I have set my foot ashore since I tooke this charge. It is some comfort to be near a part of you since I cannot be so happy to be at your owne side at this time. God protect you both, and enable me to serve as effectually as I earnestly desire it"

1688, November 26th. Court at Whitehall. [Folio 33.]—Order signed by Samuel Pepys to Lord Dartmouth for sending a frigigate to Plymouth for seizing Captain George Churchill, Commander of the Newcastle, and for keeping him as a prisoner till further order.*

1688, November 28th. [Folio 34.]—Aboard the Resolution at Spitt-head. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the King, sent by Mr. George Browne express from Portsmouth, who did not go away till the 30th of October at 12 noon.

"Your Majestie will easily believe with what grief of heart I write this to finde what usage your Majestie hath received, and indeed I finde a great alteration in most people's faces since my comeing in hither not for want of loyaltie in most of your Commanders, but the dayly impressions they receive make them stand amased. For God's sake, Sir, call your great councell and see which way a Parliament may be best called for I feare nothing will give a stopp but that, and if others are the cause it cannot be done it will no longer lie at your door, and if it may be acceptable to you or a reall service you will soon have the

* See Dartmouth Papers for Original Warrant of same date.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

thankes and approbation of your whole fleet with assurance of standing by your Majestie in it, but this your Majestie can best judge of, and I hope you will excuse the thoughts of a faithfull servant for such I have ever been, and by the blessing of God will persist in it till my live's end.

I have been endeavouring ever since my arrivall here to refitt your fleet, and tho' not to be effected according to my desires, yet I hope it will prove serviceable to you and I earnestly beg what orders you have farther for me may be sent when you thinke convenient. Your Majestie knowes my victualling will not last long, but I hope for a month's recruite from hence which we are dayly getting aboard with all the diligence imagineable.

Sir, I am dayly sensible you have reason to mistrust mankinde but if you should have hard thoughts of me it will breake my heart for I am and will be just to my live's end. I am in so great perplexity for you that I am able to say no more."

1688, November 30th. [Folio 34.]—"Sir, since I wrote the former, which was intended to be sent yesterday morning but my Lord Dover haveing the thoughts of stopping the money for payment of the docke and provisions for the fleet put me in such a consternation that I was not able to know what to say, but being prevailed with to let us have both hath now put an end to that matter and I am againe going on with my business and just now I have received an account from Mr. Pepys that your Majestie hath declared for a Parliament which pray God Almighty send you a good end of."*

1688, November 28th. [Folio 35.]—Aboard the Resolution at the Spitthead. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's private letter to Mr. Pepys sent by Mr. George Browne express from Portsmouth who did not go away till the 30th of November after 12 at noon.

"The intelligence and orders accompanying yours of the 26th instant received at 10 of the clocke on Tuesday night by express being such as required some privacie and my very perticular regrett is the reason I give your answer thereto apart from my generall letter concerning the fleet. I am much surpris'd at the Princess of Denmark's withdrawing herself,† with the manner of it, and the malicious insinuations (you inform me) of ill disposed people as if she had been forced away by Papists, all which I feare are heavey burthens and great occasions of trouble and disquiect to our master, whom God preserve and direct to such counsellis and resolutions as may remove or at least alleviate those dismall and most dreadful anguishes of spirit which I know he must labour under in the present unfortunate conjuncture of his affaires which I pray God grant so happy an issue as may put His Majestie in saftie, his great minde at ease and the whole nation and people out of that ferment and chrysis of dissatisfaction to his Góvernement which (from the too many nobles and great men ungratefully deserting him) appears to be so universall.

I have deliberated very thoughtfully on His Majestie's order for seizeing and secureing Captain Churchill at Plymouth, the sending a frigatte on that errand being to run the danger of her being intercepted by the Dutch who (by the last information I gott of them) were cruising off the Start.

* See Dartmouth Papers.—Pepys' letter to Lord Dartmouth of November 26th. The above letter in the text refers to the letter of November 28th, on folio 34 (see previous page), and is here printed as placed in original.

† Ibid.—Pepys' letter to Lord Dartmouth of November 20th.

HARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

If he be fallen into their company it is impossible to retrieve him, and if he be revolted it may be reasonably concluded he has prepared his shipp's company to make a desperate and resolute resistance, so that it will be a hard taske for a single frigigate to master him when probably now some of the men may not be so well disposed to it as I could wish. I have therefore resolved to send only the Quaker ketch with orders to Captain Churchill to use his utmost diligence to joine me, and if he be found at Plymouth out of command and be honest (which is to be doubted) he will on receipt of this order take the first opportunity of comeing to me, but if he be under command the Commander of the said ketch shall carry my request to my Lord of Bath with copy of His Majestie's order for seiseing him and send away the shipp if he apprehends she may be trusted with the company and officers she has, if not to continue there till farther measures and resolutions shall be taken about her. In the meanetime it may not be amis if His Majestie thinketh fitt (and if it be safe to venture it by land) that my Lord Bath have the same directions sent him that way.

I shall order such vessell as I send if he meet the Dutch fleet and cannot avoid their examination to make away with his despatches (unless he can secure them) and proceed to Plymouth, giving my Lord Bath a verbal account of the arrand he comes to him on and returne with what despatch he can to me that I may be throwly informed of this matter, a good success and issue whereto and all other His Majestie's affaires are and shall be not only the prayers but most earnest endeavours of etc.

1688, November 30th. "The letter preceding was intended to be sent you yesterday morning by express, at which time my Lord Dover came aboard me, and having understood from the Commissioners of the navie and officers of the victualling that his Lordship had not only detained the money newly come for paying the yard but countermanded the sending of any provisions to the fleet, which you may be sure must be occasion of great disorder in the docke especially all the worke men and labourers giving over their worke. From which occasion I was led to withhold my express till I could give His Majestie by you a good account of an issue being put thereto by my intercessions and reasoning with my Lord Dover, who I persuaded to let all things go on for His Majestie's service as was before directed as well in relation to the money as our provisions comeing off. Last night I received gladly the newes (by your express) of his Majestie's greatest declaration of calling a free Parliament to be held at Westminster the 15th of January next, from which great meeting God grant such event as may establish his Majestie with honour and safetie in the sway of his dominions and people with lasting glory and peace. This news I shall communicate to the fleet which I am well assured will receive it cheerfully, the faces of the Commanders being much changed since our comeing in here from the dayly alterations in his Majestie's affaires, but I doubt not to keep them all in good disposition to serve His Majestie like loyall subjects and men of honour which as has been shall be my continuall endeavours. The surprizeing newes you give me of my Lord Bath's seiseing Plymouth for the Prince of Orange* makes me judge it now unnecessary to send the Quaker ketch as I designed, and I do not think it safe to send a single frigigate, therefore shall leave this matter as it is unless His Majestie signifie his farther pleasure to the contrary."

* See Dartmouth Papers.—Pepys' letter to Lord Dartmouth of November 28th.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

1688, December 1st. [Folio 37.] Copy of the humble address of George Lord Dartmouth, Admirall of the Fleet and the Commander of the shippes of warr now at the Spitthead, to the King, with the names of the signatures attached, which was carried by my Lord Berkeley, Captain Hastings, and Captain Thomas Leighton the 2nd. Thanking the King for calling a Parliament.

1688, December 1st. [Folio 39.] Aboard the Resolution at the Spitthead. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the King sent by Lord Berkeley.

"Your Majestie may wonder your men of warre concern themselves so much for peace, but it was unanimously received that there was no delaying the address I have sent away my Lord Berkeley with, and I hope it will be no offence nor disservice to your Majestie, for now if the Prince of Orange doth not desist it will show the world he hath other meanings then are pretended. I am still endeavouring to put the fleet in the best posture I can, and it is no small endeavour I am putt to to make them in good humour, for matters are mightily changed and must be again before it will be fitt to sett upon the Dutch, and it is plane they thinke it not time yett to set upon us, but the best treaties are made with sword in hand so that we must still be upon our guard. My greatest trouble is for your person; for the rest, time will mend, which pray God may be soon, and that he will give your Majestie His great protection and direction in this most difficult and miserable time."

1688, December 3rd. [Folio 39.] Aboard the Resolution at Spitt-head. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the King sent by a messenger of Lord Dover's from Portsmouth.

"Yesterday in the afternoon Lord Dover came aboard me and brought me the letters from your Majestie, one dated at Andover the 25th of November, the other at Whitehall of the 29th, with a postscript of the 30th, on the subject of sending away the Prince of Wales,* wherein you were pleased to show thoughts of delaying your intentions therein, and I must confess I was in hopes if your Majestie tooke the least time to consider you would finde soe many undeniable reasons to the contrary as would soon oblige your Majestie to alter your resolutions, and therefore I forbore showing my Lord Dover the surprise I was at first in, but by his letters dated yesterday from Whitehall (which I received this day soon after another) with the greatest dread and griefe of heart imaginable I understand your Majestie persists in your former intentions and consultations held with my Lord Dover in sending away the Prince and conjure me to be assisting therein.

I need not tell your Majestie how strict the lawes are, in this matter, nor after so many experiences of my duty and loyaltie to your person lay before you fresh assurances of giveing ready obedience to any commands within my power, but to be guilty of treason to your Majestie and the known lawes of the Kingdome of so high a nature as this, when your Majestie shall farther deliberate on't I most humbly hope you will not exact it from me nor long entertain so much as a thought of doing that which will give your enimys an advantage tho' never so falsely grounded to distrust your son's just right, which you have asserted and manifested to the world (in the matter of his being your real sonne borne of the Queen) by the testimonys of so many apparent witnesses. Pardon me, therefore, Sir, if on my bended knees

* See Dartmouth Papers for these letters under the dates and the subsequent letters of December 5th and 10th.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

I beg of you to apply yourself to other counsellors, for the doing this lookes like nothing less then despaire to the degree of not only giving your enymys encouragement, but distrust of your friends and people, who I do not despaire but will yett stand by you in the defence and right of your lawful successor.

Your Majestie knowes I have alwayes professed myselfe of the Church of England and I humbly appeal to you if ever I gave you promises of being of any other, and therefore as such and a faithfull servant, subject and cancellor, I beg leave to advise you and give you my humble opinion that sending away the Prince of Wales without the consent of the nation is at no time advisable, and therefore the doing it at this time especially, and that to France, being what I dread will be of fatal consequence to your person, crowne, and dignity, and all your people will (too probably) grow so much concerned at this your great mistrust as to throw off their bounden allegiance to you which God forbid, wherefore pray, Sir, consider farther on this weightie point, for can the Prince's being sent to France have other prospect then the entailing a perpetuall warre upon your nation and posterity, and giving France alwayes a temptation to molest, invade, nay hazard the conquest of England, which I hope in God never to see, but that we may have this Prince of your own loines to rule over us. The most I can apprehend your Majestie may be jealous of is his being brought up in the religion of the Church of England and that ought (for His Royal Highnesse's sake especially) to be the prayers of every honest loyall subject. Pardon me, therefore, Sir, that I most earnestly implore you not to make me the unhappy instrument of so apparent ruine to your Majestie, and my countrey as an act of this kinde will be, and I hope your Majestie will not suffer it to be done by any other, for I can forsee nothing else from it then the putting in hazard your owne sacred person and the Queene's and making England the most miserable nation in the world.

Remember I pray, Sir, how prophetically I have foretold you your misfortunes and the courses you might have taken to have avoided them, which I do not mention to reproach you but to putt you in minde of doing it now at last, and for heaven's sake, Sir, as you have made a great step towards reconcilliation by publishing your royall intentions of calling a Parliament treat (if your condition be no better) and that fairly. God in His infinite mercy will perserve you and your royall issue, and the Church of England will defend you in all your just rights and remove the disturbers of your peace, and settle you as great and firme on your throne as any of your predecessors.

Pardon me, Sir, for being thus free with you, for it proceeds from a sincere heart and concerne for you and yours, and what has past between us on this unfortunate subject shall never be an injury to you by being made knowne from me, and I knowe your goodness is too great to thinke ill of your constant and faithfull servant or to impute to me any disobedience for what I have thus most humbly laid before your Majestie is really and honestly from the utmost and extreame care and concerne I have for yours, the Queene's and Prince his real preservation, for as I will not be instrumental in nor suffer him to be carried into France if by any meanes I can prevent it, so on the other hand I will frankly venture my life in your Majestie's and his defense, and as the last expedient I can at present propose nothing more essentiall to your Majestie's great service then in delivering him safe into your owne royall custody, and the sooner your Majestie gives me order for it it will be the better.

HARLOW
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Sir, I am afraid if I go from hence the Dutch fleet will soon be here, and I likewise feare the Prince of Orange's forces may cut between you and Portsmouth, therefore, I desire your Majestie will give me order for bringing the Prince to you speedily, and that you will please to recollect yourselfe and apply reasonable meanes to prevent what you seem to be under such dreadful apprehensions of. Your Majestie may see in what confusion I am, so that I can say noe more but my dayly prayers to God Almightye to direct and prosper you."

1688, December 4th. [Folio 42.]—Aboard the Resolution at the Spitthead. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to Lord Dover, Governor of Portsmouth, in absence of the Duke of Berwick.

"Notwithstanding what I said to your Lordship yesterday whether by the folly or meanes of Captain Fazly, or by a gentleman of my Lord Powys, or one of the pages of the back staires, or all I knowe not certainly, but I have received intelligence and the fleet was alarumed last night with the endeavours to carry away the Prince of Wales; for God's sake, my Lord, make noe such rash attempt but accept the King's resolutions upon my faithfull advise sent to him by mine delivered into your Lordship's owne hands to be sent by the messenger his Majestie himselfe appointed, which I hope he will hearken to for it proceeded from a heart that never wavered from him nor his true interest in my owne life nor never will, tho' my misfortunes should continue to grow greater if it be possible then they are now."

1688, December 6th. [Folio 42.]—Aboard the Resolution at Spitt-head.

Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the King sent the 7th instant by Captain Neagle who went express.

"I received your Majestie's, dated at nine in the morning on the 5th instant from my Lord Dover, and just now one by Mr Leybourne of the same daye's date at 9 at night, by both which I am rejoiced to see your Majestie is pleased to receive my poor endeavours to serve you, and I doubt not but you will judge charitably of the sincere sentiments of so faithful a heart to you, and may I never hope to see the face of God if I study any other thoughts then your Majestie's true interest.

This is a time to try and search the hearts of all that pretend to be your servants and those who have or doe prevaricate with you are the worst of men.

I am heartily glad your Majestie is sensible that this is noe place of safety for the Prince of Wales at this juncture, and as things stand now here and I am ashamed to thinke (tho' I am sure your Majestie can justify it to be none of my fault) that there is not indeed one place of greater strength or this finished nere what it ought to be. I do not hear of any of the Prince of Orange's forces this way, nor do I thinke he can have any pretence for it now you are in treaty with him, and tho' noe caution can be too great in this so very great concerne yett since you have ordered troops to meet the Prince under command of Lord Dover (who I need not say is soe faithful to you), and that some may be spared part of the way from Portsmouth, I cannot but thinke it much the safest way for there cannot be an unsafer season then this for the sea. However, if your Majestie judges otherwayes I will convey the Prince myselfe safe into Margett Road as you have commanded me, and send the yacht up the river,* for noe place can be soe safe for his Royall

* See Dartmouth Papers.—King James' letter to Lord Dartmouth of December 5th.

HARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Highness as by your owne Royal person and the Queene's nor so satisfactory to you both.

By your Majestie's of the 29th of last month you are pleased to caution me to thinke of the preservation of this Squadron as of the last consequence to your service, and as my charge increases in it, so shall my care and paines to the last degree, and I believe your Majestie is sensible as the times so my difficulties and troubles multiply upon me. Men are hardly to-day and to-morrow in the same mindes and it is with noe little struggling that I keep things so well for your service as now they are. I did not think seamen would have troubled themselves about Parliaments, but since the Proclamation and that they have addressed them they seem much more satisfied, and the Prince of Orange will finde things soon alter upon him if he be the hinderance of faire dealing.

The fleet here can hardly be ready till the latter end of next weeke, nor do I thinke it adviseable to part this Squadron more then may be absolutely necessary for defence of this harbour, which, if your Majestie approves of it, can scarcely be more usefull then to men of warre that can least endure the sea and the small fire shippes with a good advice boate. Too many seamen will not agree with this garrison, and the late barbarous murther of the boatswaine of the Ossory who was boatswaine of the Gloster when your Majestie was so unfortunately cast away, with the killing and wounding of some others hath so enraged the seamen that I am in paine to send boates ashore even upon the necessary occasions, but I have writt to my Lord Dover and I do not doubt but he will endeavour to bring them to speedy punishment which is absolutely necessary for your present service.

I am still apprehensive that soon after my departure Herbert will come hither, and therefore I thinke it necessary that what garrison can be spared in this place should be in it, and whither [whether] your Majestie will have the body of the fleet in the Downes or the Buoy of the Nore, for the present I humbly leave to your Majestie's better judgment. Towards the Parliament sitting the latter doubtless will be best to have your fleet neere you and where it can be best strengthened and of most influence, but of this I am sure your Majestie is best judge and of what service you have most for us which shall be readily obeyed by me. I once more beg your Majestie that in these very mistrustful times it may be in the power of none to make you have the least jealousy of me, for I heartily am and do peeke myselfe to live and die with the character of your faithfullest servant.

The winde hath been easterly these three dayes which hath brought hither some shippes and victualls as Mr. Pepys will inform your Majestie the winde is now at N.E. and settled in likely to continue, so which I believe will make your Majestie conclude of haveing the Prince by land."

1688, December 7th. Aboard the Resolution at Spitthead at 8 in the morning.

"This was writt last night, but as I was sending it off to my Lord Dover Captain Neagle came off to me from Sir Edward Scott to let me know my Lord was gone with the Prince of Wales this morning,* in which I thinke his Lordship hath done much for the best. I pray God send His Royal Highness safe into your owne armes. I pray God Almighty protect you both, I am sure I will endeavour my part heartily towards it. Pray now consider where your Majestie will have the fleet be and what further commands you please to send me. This bearer Captain Neagle is a very good seaman and served formerly with Spragg and hath been aboard me all this voyage."

* See Dartmouth Papers.—Letter from Sir Edward Scott to Lord Dartmouth of December 7th.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Pages 45 and 46 are cut out, and the following is a note at the end of page 44 in the handwriting of William the second Baron and first Earl of Dartmouth.

"The following leaves were cut out by my mother Barbara Baroness of Dartmouth before the book came into my hands.

(Signed) DARTMOUTH."

1688, December 10th. [Folio 47.] Court at Whitehall.—Warrant to forbear from the impressing of seamen and others for the service of the Fleet.

1688, December 11th. [Folio 47.] At the Guildhall.—Order from the House of Lords assembled at the Guildhall to Lord Dartmouth Admiral of the Fleet. [See Dartmouth Papers under date.]

1688, December 14th. [Folio 48.]—Aboard the Resolution at Spitthead. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the Lords Spiritual and Temporal that were assembled at the Guildhall the 11th December 1688.

"Upon your Lordships convening at Guildhall the 11th on his Majestie's private withdrawing himselfe I have received from Mr. Secretary Pepys the subscribed signification of your Lordships' pleasure at that great meeting, where you had resolved (for the preventing the effusion of blood among us at this juncture in consideration of the Prince of Orange's fleet being now on the English coast) that all acts of hostility should cease and all Popish Officers in the fleet be removed out of their respective commands, on which weighty matters as the only meanes under God to preserve the King my master and establish the lawes, properties, and Protestant religion I had deliberated with myselfe (upon the surprisall and unfortunate newes of His Majestie's withdrawing himselfe) before the receipt of your Lordships' and was putting it in execution and it is now actually done, and have likewise (with the unanimous concurrence of the fleet) addressed myselfe (as I see your Lordships have done) to the Prince of Orange for the better effecting and settling of all things that conduce to the King and kingdome's general safety and good, wherein I promise to contribute as farre as is in my power, and therefore humbly referring your Lordships for all further occurrences of the fleet to the particular account thereof, I have with this sent to Mr. Pepys Secretary of the Admiralty. I subscribe myselfe" etc.

1688, December 14th. [Folio 48.]—Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to Lord Faversham.

"I received your Lordship's and cannot wonder at the consternation your Lordship is in, for my owne heart has been allmost breaking. Oh God what could make our master desert his kingdoms and his friends, certainly nobody could be so villainous as to hurt his person; it cannot be the effect of his owne thoughts but of womanish or timorous counsellors. God Almighty protect him and direct him to happier measures I am sure his owne heart cannot meane him better then I do. God in His infinite mercy restore him to his throne with comfort again. For God's sake, my Lord, take some pity of this poor garrison of Portsmouth, tho' they did not at first use me well yet I am grieved at heart for them and

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

I hope they will finde mercy. They are I think willing to do anything or goe anywhere, poor wretches. For God's sake help them in their deliverance. The Duke of Berwicke I hope will be safe. I have taken the same measures with the Prince of Orange that you have done but I doe not thinke of leaving the fleet yett for we are entire yett all but Churchill and it cannot be well for me to do it now.

God send us a happy meeting and preserve our master to us. I am not able to write more. I and my family are the miserablest creatures His Majestie hath left behind. I am worthy nobody's thoughts, but tho' I am unfortunate yett I am, &c.

Pray if my regiment stands take care of my officers. Soper will tell you what is justice and the desert of everybody. Just as I was makeing up this I am told his Majestie is in England and you gone to him, pray let me know the truth as soon as possible. Pray God bless and preserve him wherever he is."

1688, December 15th. [Folio 49.]—Aboard the Resolution at Spitt-head. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to Lord Rochester.

"Tho' nothing could binde me more to your Lordship then the friendship I have alwayes profest to you and will persist in to the utmost as becomes a man of honour, yett the favour of your opinion and judgement especially at this distracted time I must owne does not a little highten the obligation, and I pray your Lordship (who is at the seat of affaires that now call for the most judicious and nice management) will continue me your friendly advices for they are not only grateful to me but the chiefest I have to rely on.

Oh God who could have expected that our great master would have withdrawn himself thus in which misfortunes we must put all our hands (as becomes honest loyal Church of England men) to the re-establishing him in the Government and resettlement of our holy religion, lawes, and properties, for which glorious ends I doubt not but the Peeres will unanimously apply themselves, and I will concurre therein as becomes my present command of this fleet, which I neither have had any intention of leaving as you kindly cautioned me, and before the receipt of the direction of the Peeres at their meeting at Guildhall on the notice I had received of the King's having withdrawn himselfe I was putting out all Papists from any employments in the fleet and have actually done it as believing it (at this juncture especially) the most essential service I could do my King and countrey, then whose preservation with that of our lawes and religion nothing can be more sacred to me, and for those just ends I have (with the joint concurrence of the fleet) applied myselfe to the Prince of Orange as I finde your Lordship and the Peeres have done* whose dispositions in the settlement of all affairs as well ecclesiastical as civil I am heartily glad do suit so well with those of etc."

(Postscript). —

"For your Lordship's perfect knowledge of my proceedings, I here enclose you a copy of a letter from the Prince of Orange to me, and my answer by which your Lordship will be more enlightened in advising me what is fittest to be done for the King and my countrey's service, and just as I am sending this I hear His Majestie is come backe to you which will still make me more and more beg your advices which I rely upon. God Almighty preserve His Majestie and send it in the hearts of all that are able to advise him to his owne and the relief of his Kingdoms."

* See Dartmouth Papers.—Pepys' letter to Lord Dartmouth of December, 11th.

1688, December 16. [Folio 50.]—Aboard the Resolution at Spithead.

Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the Duke of Berwick Governor of Portsmouth.

"If your Grace pleases to give me leave to advise you it will conduce much to your safety that Southsea Castle be delivered into the hands of Captain Carter, and that as soon as your Grace considers convenient; and he shall put noe soldiers on but what belongs to the King and but few of them.

The Dragoons in the Island need have no apprehensions for his coming which will be rather of safety to them then otherways, for he is so well-known (by haveing long the command of that Castle) and beloved in the countrey that his very being in it will extreamely satisfy the people whom as I have allready writt about to be kindly dealt with. I will continue doing that becomes me therein as well in respect to his Majestie's service as the security of his subjects and your Grace particularly.

And pray, Sir, do not delay giving the orders immediately, I haveing as a favour to you and all under your care and command given account of its being in fact done. I believe this will be a means to alleviate and make all those in the town be well treated whereto I shall contribute as far as is in the power" etc.

(Postscript).—"Pray, my Lord, be not advised by hot-headed people, for I am sure this advice I give according to my judgment is the best thing you can doe for yourselfe at present."

1688, December 17th. [Folio 51.]—Aboard the Resolution at the Spithead.

Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the Duke of Berwick Governor of Portsmouth.

"The great care and concerne I am under for your Grace moves me to write you once more about giving speedy directions that Southsea Castle be immediately put in possession of Captain Carter, which at this juncture is the most effectual course that can be taken for your preservation and of those under your command in the garrison at Portsmouth.

Your Grace I hope and those about you do not think I would advise you to anything inconsistent with His Majestie's service or your owne safety, and this as I acquainted you yesterday is the only meanes to put the people of the countrey and neighbourhood out of such apprehensions as may be very prejudicial to you if not removed; therefore for God's sake, Sir, do not longer give me to believe one thing and be misled to do others when you are from me. You cannot think your delays in this matter is anything correspondent to your applications for good treatment or that that Castle would be of much use to you if you should resolve (which God forbid you should be put to) to stand it out obstinately, and believe me, Sir, when the countrey shall withhold provisions from you (which the doeing this will be a great motive to hinder their doeing) your case will be very desperate in few days without so much as firing a gun to any purpose. Being informed that the inhabitants are under great apprehensions of the dayley threats of unadvised people, I do as a friend admonish your Grace heartily not only to discountenance any such proceedings* but to take effectual care that not the least violence be offered to any even in your worst apprehensions, for anything of that nature being aggravated will embarass you so farre as to put it totally

HARLOW
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

* See Dartmouth Papers.—Letter from the Duke of Berwick to Lord Dartmouth of December 16th.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

out of my power to serve you, which pray consider well of, and what I also advise may be speedily done about Southsea Castle, else I have just reason to conclude that my advices intended only for your owne good are so farre rejected that it will not be proper for me to interest myselfe so farre on your behalf as is the inclination of" etc.

1688, December 17th. [Folio 52.]—Aboard the Resolution at Spitt-head. Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter to the King sent by a servant of his Lordship that went express, and was under cover to Mr. Philip Musgrave at the Cockpitt, Whitehall.

"It is impossible for me to express the griefe and anxious cares I am in for your Majestie, and the newes of your withdrawing was the greatest surprise of my life, for I did humbly hope my dutyfull supplications to your Majestie would with your owne considerate thoughtes have wholly altered your intentions of sending away the Prince of Wales, and did thinke it impossible ever to enter into anybody's thoughts that had the least inclination of duty to your Majestie to give you so pernicious and destructive council as to go away yourselfe, and if your Majestie had been drove to such a desperate course (which was morally impossible at least in my thoughts) as to absent yourselfe, Sir, could you have been with more honour and safety then your owne fleet who would always unanimously (I dare say) have protected and defended your sacred person from any violence or unhallowed hands. But this looks like so great mistrust of me that many could witness it hath almost broke my heart.

Your Majestie knows what condition you left the fleet in, and me in the most unsupportable calamity of my life what could I do but send to the Prince of Orange when I found the whole nation did,* and receive orders from the Lords which were communicated to the fleet and removed all Roman Catholic Officers. I have had yett noe returne from the Prince of Orange, but I hope all will end in your Majestie's happy re-establishment. Mr. Pepys will acquaint your Majestie with the state of the fleet, and Mr. Vaudry I hope will do me justice of my care of the Duke of Berwicke, garrison and harbour of Portsmouth, with all the great shippes; but withall my confusion is so great that I am only able to beg God Almighty's protection of your Majestie and to deliver you out of all these troubles which shall not only be the prayers but hearty endeavours of a heart that never studied anything but your real service and will ever do to my unfortunate live's end."

1688, December 18th. [Folio 53.]—Copy of Lord Dartmouth's letter directed to Colonel Richard Norton at his house at Southwark.

The insolent and indiscreet behaviour of the Irish forces in the garrison of Portsmouth to the degree of not only illtreating the inhabitants of the towne but menacing them with plunder and massacre, in case of the approach of any of the Prince of Orange's forces, in which proceedings Sir Edward Scott hath been very violent not only to the giving apprehensions to the townes people, but to His Majestie's Officers of the docke, Sir Richard Beach the Commissioner there haveing signified to me their great feares of running the same fate with the townes men, and that on my going hence with the fleet all His Majestie's store-houses and stores would be destroyed by fire, I have therefore sent shippes into the harbour and have secured Gosport and the Burrough Forts, and directed Sir Richard Beach his keeping a good guard in the docks and to have the ordering of all the shippes in the

* See Dartmouth Papers.—Pepys' letter to Lord Dartmouth of December 11th.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

Port, whose commands I have ordered the Captains to obey for the security of the harbour and the navie. Blockhouse Point is likewise quitted, and I have soe brought it to pass that Southsea Castle is again in Dick Carter's hands. I have also persuaded the rash unthinkeing Sir Edward Scott to lay down his commission and he is withdrawn from the town aboard the fleet. The Duke of Berwicke I have kindly advised to what will very decently become him, and I judge will be acceptable to the King and Kingdom, and the whole garrison now being made sensible of their danger, promised to live well with the town, all which I have endeavoured to bring about with noe little care and thoughtfulness for preventing evell of all kind and the shedding of any blood. I confess it was a great vexation to me to see this place in such hands, and I hope for the future it will only be entrusted with people of our owne nation and union, and now since those poor wretches seem to desire nothing but their lives, and I think are willing to go wherever they shall be appointed, I hope they will finde mercy, and bloodshed will be spared, for you noe in six dayes time they may allwayes be reduced to starving if they should forego their promise, and I must confess I do not thinke they will. Provisions growing short in the fleet, I am thinkeing of going hence but would not stire without putting all things in this good posture, and I give you this account of it that you may knowe what to doe in the country if these hot headed people should happen to return to us their former insolences and indiscretions, which I must confess I have not the least apprehension of since I have by faire means reduced them into this compass, and that the docke, harbour, navie, and castles are secured and out of their power.

What farther moves me to go hence is that since His Majestie is returned* I may render him and my countrey the best service in being as nere him, the Lords, and the capital city as conveniently I can, and I hope God will make me an instrument of doing general good to our nation.

I am sure it was never in my thoughts to do otherwise, and I hope all will end well and that if we must have warre it will be against the French, who are very manifestly the common enemy of our master (who I hope will be now sensible thereof), religion, and countrey, all which God Almighty defend from them. I am sure I will allwayes doe my best towards it."

(Postscript.) "Pray excuse me not writing in mine owne hand, being not well and just let blood."

1689, December 16th. [Folio 58.]—Copy of an order from His Highness the Prince of Orange which Lord Dartmouth received at Spitthead 19th December 1688, by Lieutenant Bing who went with Captain Matthew Aylmer that his Lordship sent to the Prince.

"It being for the service of the nation we had required you to leave under the command of Sir John Bury Knight the shippes of warre and fire shippes mentioned in the margent at Spitthead in the order to meet you which did direct and require that he be very careful to send from time to time to me more frigattes to cruise on this coast as he shall judge most fitting to prevent any affront that may be comitted by the French or others. You are also to direct him to be very strict not to suffer any vessell to sayle out of Portsmouth Harbour with suspected

* See Dartmouth Papers.—Letter from Sir Henry Shere to Lord Dartmouth.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSB.
—

persons aboard. You are to supply the Squadron you leave there out of the fleet what provisions you can with safety to yourselves spare, and soe soon as you have given your necessary orders in these matters you are forthwith winde and weather permitting to sayle with the rest of the shippes of warre fire shippes and tenders not named in this order to the Buoy of the Nore, unless such of the fleet as you shall judge not fitt for the sea, and in that case you are to order them into Portsmouth harbour where they are to stay for farther order from us. 'Tis our pleasure that you immediately send an order to the Commissioners of that place that there be a stop putt and nothing farther done towards the fitting out any shippes or vessells of warre in that harbour of Portsmouth till our farther pleasure be knowne, and also you are to give a general order to the proper officers of the fleet in those parts that noe more men be listed or entertained on board any of the men of warre fire shippes or tenders, and soe soon as you arrive at the Buoy of the Nore you are to signifie the same to the Secretary of the navie, and for so doing this shall be your warrant.

Given under my hand and seal the 16th December 1688.

Prince D'Orange.

By his Highnesse's command."

The ships mentioned in the margin are the Elizabeth, St. Albans, Dover, St. David, Tiger, Mary, Deptford, Swallow, Portsmouth, Bristol, Richmond fire ship, Defyance, Constant Warwicke, Woolwich, Pearl.

The next pages are torn out, and at the foot of page 56 is the following note in the handwriting of William the first Earl of Dartmouth.

"The following leaves were torn out long before this book came into my hands by my mother. When I asked her why she had done it she said she thought that they were better out. I told her I was very sorry she had because I had often heard my father say his journal would allwayes be his justification.

(Signed) DARTMOUTH."

The remaining pages of the book are unnumbered.

1688, December 29th. St. James'.—Order signed by the Prince D'Orange, and given at St. James' to Lord Dartmouth, Admiral of the Fleet, to make provision for the transport of soldiers from Portsmouth or Southampton to Guernsey and Jersey,* and to receive troops there for transport to ports in England.

1688, December 29th. St. James'.—Order signed by the Prince D'Orange, to Lord Dartmouth, Admiral of the Fleet, to appoint two frigates to be employed in the St. George's Channel, and be in readiness to proceed to Chester.*

1688, December 29th. St. James'.—Order signed by the Prince D'Orange to Lord Dartmouth, Admiral of the Fleet, to leave certain ships at Spithead (a list of which ships is appended to the order), and to repair with the remainder to the Buoy of the Nore.*

1688-9, January 2nd. St. James'.—Copy order signed by the Prince D'Orange, to Lord Dartmouth, Admiral of the Fleet, to carry into execution the orders of the 29th December last, which had not reached him relative to the disposal of the Fleet, and to repair to the Court as soon as possible.*

* See Dartmouth Papers.—Pepys' letter to Lord Dartmouth of December 29th.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1688-9, January 3rd. St. James'.—Copy order signed by the Prince D'Orange, to Lord Dartmouth, Admiral of the Fleet, relative to the disposal of the fleet and of the 49 ships and other vessels to be laid up and discharged according to previous directions, and enclosing a list of such ships and vessels.*

1688-9, January 4th. St. James'.—Copy order signed by the Prince D'Orange to Lord Dartmouth, Admiral of the Fleet, or in his absence the Commander-in-Chief, to remain with the fleet at the Buoy at the Nore until further orders.*

1688-9, January 5th. St. James'.—Copy order signed by the Prince D'Orange to Lord Dartmouth, Admiral of the Fleet, to give orders for the Dartmouth and Guareand fire-ships to repair to Chatham to be re-converted into frigates.*

1688-9, January 10th. St. James'.—Copy order signed by the Prince D'Orange, to Lord Dartmouth, Admiral of the Fleet, that so soon as the fleet shall be safely brought to the Buoy of the Nore, he do commit the charge and command thereof to the next superior officer, and himself repair to the Prince's presence.†

1691. PAPERS RELATING TO THE IMPRISONMENT AND EXAMINATION OF GEORGE LORD DARTMOUTH.

July 11.—Court at Whitehall. Copy of Warrant for the apprehension of Lord Dartmouth for high treason, directed to Philip Ryley Esq., one of the serjeants at arms, and signed by the Earl of Nottingham.

"Memorandums" (in Lord Dartmouth's own hand).

"Mr. Serjeant Ryley brought this ensuing Warrant to me at the Holt Soday July the 12th instant about a leven a clocke in the fore-noone 1691. [Here follows a copy of the above warrant.]

"Mr. Ryley immediatly after he lighted (bringing only one servant with him) in a verry civele manner being alone with me begun to tell me that he came upon a verry unwelcome messaige, which having beene my former acquaintance he was verry sorry to be the deliver (sic) of, but he was obleided to obeye the commands were lay'd upon him. I told him he had alwayes beene wellcome to me, and whatever his messaige was, I was ready to receive it, as became me. Then he shewed me the forgoing warrant, which I read and told him I could not imagine why this warrant was graunted, for my Lord Nottingham knew of my being at my owne house that I had acquainted him with my coming downe, and in the Lords' house upon the last Prorogation, at the taking my leave of him, desired to know if he had any commands for me before I went out of town, and that if he had any for me at any time, when ever he sent the least notice to me I would wayt on him in a daye's time; but since the matter stood thus I was redy to make all the dispatch up I could, and did not doubt but to give full satisfaction when I came to his lordship, for I was well assured I was no way guilty of the crime mentioned in the warrant. . . . He replied that he did beleeeve himself there needed no warrant to have brought me to towne. . . .

* See Dartmouth Papers.—His letters of January 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 5th.

† Ibid.—Letter from Prince D'Orange to Lord Dartmouth.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

I thanked him for his civility and further added that I was not at all concerned but for the disturbance it might give my wife and family, and the noyce it would make if knowne in the country.

I told him that it fell out unluckely to be of a Sondag, and that if I should immediatly post up, that being no day for usuall travelling it would unavoydably be taken notice of in the country, and therefore desired him that he would take no farther notiee at present, but dine with me, and talke of the Forrest and Woodes as he used to doe when he came downe annually upon the surveyes (For Mr. Ryly is Surveyor-General of all theire Majesties' woodes on this side Trent, as well as one of the Serjant at Armes) this he gentleman-like very franckly did, and after dinner we walked in the gaurden by our selves, and agreed :—

That he should goe away that afternoone towards London, and that I should meete him the next morning at the King's head in Eggame and from thence we should goe to London together as friends in my charr[i]ot; and after having engaged my paroll of worde and honor to him he went away accordingly.

When he was gone I tooke no notice of my journey till the post letters came in from Farnham, but after I had received them I pretended earnest buisness at London the next morning (as indeed it was) and gave directions for my charr[i]ot to goe in the evening before to Bagshot and resolved early to ride my pads theither, thus every thing being ordered no apprehension was either in my wife, famely or country of my errant, only I trusted my freind T. S. with the knowled[ge] of it, that he might prepare my wife as he found it necessary to prevent any surprize, if she heard any thing in my absence.

On Monday morning early July 13th, I left the Holt and called Mr. Ryley at Eghame as had agreed, and came to my house in Arlington Buildings about a levin a clock at noone. After we had cleaned ourselves a litle from the dust in the parler and were againe by our selves, Mr. Ryley desired to goe into my closset to secure my papers, (for I had told him, which should have beene menconed before, that I had no papers or closset at the Holt but a screwtore [escritoir] in the litle parlor which I shewed him all that was in it there, and were only papers relating to the forrest and my estate about it, some fishhookes, lines and such other litle convenyencies); I immediatly opened the closset doore shewed him every thing and gave him the keye, he double locked the doore, left a servant in the house, and went to my Lord Nottingham to acquaint him of my arrivall and to desire the favor of his Lordship that I might come privately to him, for that I did beleeeve I should give that satisfaction in what could be objected against me, that I might have leave to returne home againe quietly, without making a noyse or being publicly reproached which was the only thing I was concerned at, or as I beleeeved could happen to me in the whole matter.

About 2 houres after Mr. Ryley returned to me againe, who told me the Queen had ordered a Cabinet Councill to be called, and that I should be sent for in the evening, and that I might come privately the back way that the least notice that could be should be taken of it. Mr. Ryley and I continued at my house by our selves till eight a clock at night, and then hearing nothing from my Lord Nottingham I desired him to send to the Secretaries Office, to know wheather I should be sent for that night or no, it begining to grow late, and that I had come a quick journey almost fasted all day and was not a litle tyred. The messenger returned a litle before 9 a clock, with an account that the Queene came late from Summerset house, but that the Cabinet was met, but both my Lord Nottingham and Mr. Warr had forgot to send to my house, but sent to Mr. Ryley's whose famely he had kep'd it so secret from, that they knew not where he was. We went forthwith in a hackney coach to Whitehall, but just as we lighted we met my Lord Nottingham, who told Mr. Ryley that the Lords were just gone, that it was a mistake in sending to the wrong place, but that I must come again next morning at nine a clock. I was troubled at this disappointment since the Lords had met, and being desirous to have it over as soone and as privately as I could, and farther in regard it was the Flanders post night, since I supposed an account must be returned thither before any thing would be concluded to be farther done with me (as it afterwards proved); but there was now no remedy and so I returned home to bed this night.

On Tuesday July the 14th Mr. Serjeant Ryley called upon me in the morning and we went together privately the back way to my Lord Nottingham's office, where I was let in to the Cabinet Councill room, and in some time came in my Lord Nottingham with Sr J^o Bancks, my Lord saluted me as usuall before him and we only talked of indifferent things and newes, Sr J^o staying with us till the rest of the Lords came, those which were present were

The Lord President,
Lord Penbrooke,
Lord Nottingham,
Lord Dorset,
Sir John Lowder.

They did not take their places at the borde, but stood about it with their hats off.

My Lord President told me they were ordered to send for me, and that they had some questions to aske me, which would require my answer.

I told the Lords I should be very ready to give a cleare answer and I hoped a satisfactory one to any thing should be reasonably proposed to me, that I had very redaly obeyed their commands in coming up so soone as possibly I could, that I had beene in towne ever since a leven a clock the day before, that I understood their Lordships met the night before, and that I was extreemly troubled that they should stay for me, that I hoped they understood it was no backwardnes or negligence of mine, but the mistake of the messenger, but that I thought my selfe very unfortunate in the manner I was sent for, that I hoped none of their Lordships doubted, but that the least note or summons from any of them, should have brought me up as soone and certaine as any warrant what soever.

Lord President said they all beleevd and knew me so well that they did not question that, but that they did nothing of this kinde but by order, and that such directions must be followed in the usuall formes, which were alwayes observed.

Then his Lordship was pleased to make a very generous preamble, That no advantage was to be taken by this examination against me, that he hoped nothing would be found, but what they should now require of me, might as well be for my benefit hereafter as otherwise, if it should come to a farther examination, for by it I should have some light what was likely to be brought against me, and something farther to the like effect.

Lord President question :

Whether I had at any time to any body found faults with the conduct of the French fleet, or of ours or either of them.

Answer :

My Lords I beleve I have severall times, and to severall persons, 'tis difficult my Lords for a man to be bred to any profession and heare it

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

talked of, and not be apt to give his opinion. I doe acknowledg I have often talked, that I thought none of the Admiralls Torrington, Evertson, or Tourville did last yeare doe theire duty and I thincke if either side had thoroughly done as theye ought, it had beene much worse for the other.

Lord President :

Ay, but have you never say'd it was indiscretion in the French to come so high up the English Channell, and that theye ought not to doe so.

Answer :

My Lords I am sure there is never an old seaman in England thinckes it, nor did I ever thincke to live to see a French fleets dare come so high up the Channell as Beachy, and this we have talked many times since when we have beene together among ourselves, and in other company, but if your Lordships have beene informed that I ever say'd it for theire good or by way that theye should be the better, 'tis falls to the last degree and I hope the whole cource of my life will justesye the contrary. Your Lordships have all knowne me long, and I hope will remember that when I might have made my court as well that way, as others did, I never had a freind man or woman of the French faction in my whole life.

Lord President :

My Lord I must aske your Lordship an other question, have you had no comission from the King, King James.

Answer :

My Lords I have many Commissions by me both from King Charles and King James, theye were no crime when I received them, and as theye are of no use now, I do not conceive theye can be any crime now.

Lord President :

Ay, but have you received no commission from King James lately.

Answer :

My Lords I have neither received one worde, either in writing or by message from him, or sent any to him, since his Majesty sent over Mr. Shelden for his horses and coaches, and he went from hence. My Lords I am a plaine man, and desire to answer plainly, I possitivly protest I have received nothing from him directly or indirectly.

Lord President :

My Lord recollect your selfe, I told you my Lord before no advantaige should be taken against you upon what you say now, but are you sure you have received none, this will either be an advantaige or dissadvantige to you to be sure of.

Answer :

My Lords I am verrey sure I never received any from him since I had my last from him to command at sea heere in this roomme.

Lord Nottingham :

My Lord doe you say you have never seene any under his hand.

Answer :

No my Lord upon my worde and honour I have not.

Lord Nottingham :

Was there never any commission or paper offered you to be seene, there is no hurt in having any thing offered to you if you did not receive it, recollect your selfe well wheather ever you refused any such thing that might be offered you ; there is no fault in that.

Answer :

My Lord I am not lawier enough to know wheather there be or not, but I have answered planly and I assure your Lordships I have neither seen nor received any.

Lord Nottingham :

But my Lord you may have had none from the late King but have you never had one or one offered you from the Queen.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Answer :

No my Lords never in my life, nor know I what commitions she can graunt, or what theye signify, but if shee did doe any such thing, I beleeeve she would thincke the least of doing it to me, of any man in England, but I protest I know not what your Lordships means by all this.

Lord President :

Has your Lordship had no discourse with any body about Portsmouth concerning the weake places about it, how or where it was most lyable to be surprized.

Answer :

My Lords I am sorry Portsmouth is no stronger then it is, I am sure I have endeavored to doe what I could to make it better, and if it were carried on as it was intended, 'tis capable enough of being made strong and I thincke it now past being surprized if there be any care taken of it. My Lords I am an Englishman and what hath beene done to Portsmouth by my means, was truely intended for the defence of England, and I would loose the last drop of blood in my body rather than live to see it in any other hands, if I can help it.

Lord Nottingham :

My Lord did you never heare of any designe how it myit (sic) be landed neere or any thing of the weake places about it.

Answer :

My Lord I never heard of any such designe till I heard of it at my Lord Preston's tryall, which your Lordships heard as well as I, and I have since read it in the publike printed tryalls.

Lord Nottingham :

Have you never discovred about that tryall or any thing of it since that time.

Answer :

Yes my Lords I beleeeve twenty times, and alwayes declared I thought, it such stuff as my Lord Preston might have picked up in coffye houses, whatt use he thought to make of it to vallue himselfe in France I cannot imagine; it lookes to me as if it were picked up from several hands, by common discourse, and put it all togeather 'tis but stuff. And I hope all your Lordships know me better then to beleeeve I would ever consent to the landing of the French in England upon any pretence what some ever. No my Lords I am the last man in England will ever suffer it if I can help it, and will endeavor to defend my country as much as any man in England shall, whenever that shalbe attempted; but I perceive your Lordships may thincke me a weake man, and it is true I am so, but not so weake as to fancy the King of France will conquer England only for King James. No my Lords, if we should be ever so unfortunate he will doe it for himselfe, or at least make us but trybutary, which I hope in God never to live to see, and will endeavor to prevent as much as any of you whomsoever.

Lord President :

Ney, any man that can thincke at all can't surely imagine the King of France will doe it for King James, or any body but himselfe.

Then my Lord President turned to all the Lords and asked them if theye had any more questions to aske me, theye all answered No; then he told

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSB.
—

them it was late and theye must goe to the Queen before theye could say any thing more to me. Then I desired theire Lordships that theye would please to represent me to her Majesty as favorably as I hoped upon theire owne long knowledge of me, theye might thincke I deserved, and to remember that I had both preserved Portsmouth and the whole fleete of England to England, and that theye had neither lost a ship nor a man by my conduct, at a time when it was difficult enough to doe so, and at a time that I was impowred by a leagall commisson to justifie, and might have had temptations enough to do otherways, but that after the King was withdrawne, I could not thincke the fleete under my command belonged to any but my country, to whom I brought it by God's blessing safe home, without making any cappitulations with the then Prince of Orange, of whom I only desired his protection from my enemys, many of them were then well knowne to be about him, that I had then his prommis to protect me, and I did not doubt but now he was king he would do it, espetially at this time. That what ever I might be falcely accused of, no man was free from falce informations, but that I was in no plott, nor I would be in none, that I was retyred into the country, and what I was doing there, even when theye sent for me, was making my owne observations and what I thought was for the good of my country.

Lord President :

Asked me what I meant by that ?

Answer :

Your Lordships may remember a time when there was to have beene a warr with France formerly, and then Van-Runing brought this Admiral Ebertson and severall Duch commanders to Derby house where Mr. Peppys by his then Majesty's command summoned Sir Thomas Allyn, Norborow, myselfe and others, to meete and consult with them about carrying on a warr against France. That I was recollecting what I could of that matter or what elce I could thincke of to be fitt to be done now, for I did doubt the present manaignement was not only very expencfull, but in my opinion other methods must be taken to make a good and effectuell end of this warr. That I did not say this now to palliat any thing that was now brought against me, for I had no apprehension of any thing could befall me, but that I had thoughts of this kinde before I went out of towne and had communicated them to some that could justifie what I intended against the meeting of the Parliment next winter, tho' I did not doubt but there were those that would endeavor to render me useless, as theye had expressed, when it was reported last winter that I was to be employed, and now I saw the cource was taking to do it effectually. And what ever is say'd against me I am certaine cannot be justly say'd, nor anything pretended against me, except some foolish discourse over a bottle of wine.

Lord President :

And that is foolish.

Answer :

And that hath beene no more, then such generall discourse as your Lordships some of you may have heard yourselves, and hath beene sometimes argued privately by me on almost every branch in the house of Lords. But I will take up no more of your Lordships' time, hoping you are better sattisfied with me, I only desire you will make it my humble request to her Majesty that I may have leave to returne home to my owne house in the country, and I wilbe very ready to come up at any time when Her Majesty or any of your Lordships shall please to command me.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

Lord President directed me to stay till theye had spoke with her Majesty and all the Lords being very civell to me went away together.

I was told that her Majesty went late to chappell, so that I beleieve the Lords could not have oppertunity of speaking till after dinner, for my Lord Nottingham did not returne to me till neere two a clock, and then he came all alone.

His Lordship told me,

That the Lords had all verrey fairly represented me to her Majesty, that shee herselfe was inclined to shew me what favor shee could, but what was done to me was by his Majesty's possetive directions from abroad. And tho' I might think it hard, yet it could not be helped, and the most favor that could be shewne me was done by her Majesty which was to let me remaine only committed to the custody of the Serjeant at Armes, in the same manner that I was, but there should be no new commitment upon me, nor could I be dischargd till the reporte had been sent over to his Majesty and his pleasure farther knowne upon it.

I desired to know of his Lordship wheather I should remaine in towne, or wheather I might have leave to goe into the country, where my whole famely was, so that I had neither servants nor any conveniencys at my house in the towne.

Lord Nottingham :

That is as you and the Serjeant can agree, for you may go any where with him or his Deputy, for he must be answerable for you, that you doe not goe away.

Answer :

Wheather the divell should I goe ? thincke what you will of me, I assure you, I had rather stay, tho' I were sure to dye, in England then to goe live in France.

Lord Nottingham :

I thincke so of you to mysele, but there are some formalle tyes we cannot help."

[Endorsed.] "The first proceedings against me and my examinacion."

Memorandums :

"After all the exammination was over and my Lord Nottingham had brought me her Majesty's pleasure, as is mencioned in the former memorandums, my Lord fell a talking with me of severall things, not as Secretary of State, but as old friends and acquaintance long bread together, but at last he say'd to me, sure my Lord there must be something in this of the commition, pray had you never any one or any paper from the Queen.

Answer :

My Lord, I possitively told you the contrary, and what I say is true, and if you observed I stared at you when you asked me that question before, and could not but wonder what you meant, I thought it a strainge question, and then reflected wheather you did only to goe out of the way, or whether you meant it kindly, but now I see you are in earnest, it is a lye who ever has told it.

Lord Nottingham :

"Tis possetively sworne against you, and he must be a strainge fellow then.

Lord Dartmouth :

What commition could shee give, or what could one from her signiffye ? there could be none from her.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Lord Nottingham :

Neye, tis say'd to be in paper, and indeed it could be no com[mission] from here, but is sworne to be so, with a prommis to have it confirmed from King James.

Lord Dartmouth :

'Tis well layed together then, for it seemes to be pretended when King James was in Ireland, and so could not come from him from France, but must be from the Queene. I vow I could not imagine what you meant at first. But I see this is villany, neye I have heard that my Lord Preston had messaiges and a letter sent him into Newgate, that I should suspect his going into France, (which by the way shewis I was not intrusted with the secret) and that I had given the King, King William, notice of it, which is as great a lye as can be framed, and all this is like it. I finde I have a fine time of it from all hands ; some would render me usles (as they call it) and others would destroy me. For my owne parte I doe not desire to be thought so considerable, nor am I worth all the trouble theye give themselves.

Lord Nottingham :

But sure you saw my Lord Preston when he came to towne.

Answer :

I never knew of his being in towne, till his brother James came and told me my Lord desired to see me at his house. Tho' it seemes since that he had then beene most of his time in towne ; but my Lord I knew nothing of his buisness, nor what brought him up, so that I could not then imagine it a fault, nor could I well refuse to see him, espesially James comming a purpose to me, and it being so neere my owne.

Lord Nottingham :

Did you goe along with James pressantly.

Answer :

No, I had some vissitants with me, and as soone as theye were gone, I went to James's house, where I found them at supper. I saw my Lord Preston had beene drincking before, and there passed nothing but generall discourse among us, and I stayed but a little time, for to tell you truly I was not very fond of the company ; besides in that litle time he fell a drinking 3 or 4 great beere glasses of wine. I am confident I did not stay much above a quarter of an hour, and neither knew before that night of his comming to towne, nor then of his going out, when, where or how, and that appeares pritty planely by the manner of his going ; for if I had had a hand in it, I hope you thincke better of me then that it should be mannaiged no better.

Lord Nottingham :

Who was there besides my Lord and James ? I don't aske you to pump you, or to make any use of it, but freindly.

Answer :

There was nobody but my Lady Dorchester, and to tell you truly, 'twas shée whose company I did not much like, and that made me goe away so soone.

[Endorsed.] My Lord Nottingham's and my discourse after my examination."

1696, August and September.—Letters of William, second Marquis of Halifax from Acton and London to Lord Dartmouth on private matters.

1700, June 28.—Heneage Finch to Lord Dartmouth, at his house in Leicester Fields, London, referring to Lady Halifax.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1700, July 16 and July 26. Acton.—Lord Halifax congratulates Lord Dartmouth on his marriage, which happened between these dates.

1701, Sept. 2. Squirres (or Squerries near Westerham).—Earl of Jersey to Lord Dartmouth. Offers to meet him at Croydon with his coach.

Another note from the same dated "Sunday at night" runs—"The Duke of Leeds has been this morning an hour with the King in private, I know not if he will own it to his friends. I shall be in town tomorrow and will endeavour to see you in the evening at your house to tell you what more I know of this interview."

[1702?], March 21.—Viscount Townshend to Lord Dartmouth, Great Russell Street. Was not under any apprehension of being conveyed to town by a serjeant, yet had the House of Lords taken any notice of so inconsiderable a member being absent from their service, he had fully resolved to have put Lord Dartmouth to the expense of a speech in his defence. Has at this time but a very little inclination to the politics, the pleasures of a country life gaining every day so much upon him. Lord Anglesey and his wife have found the town some amusement, it is as melancholy a story as was ever heard, and by what the writer knows of it his Honour seems to be a very barbarous fellow.

1702, April 1. Burley.—Earl of Nottingham to his daughter, the Marchioness of Halifax, at Halifax House, St. James's Square. Hears that Mr. Atkinson who married the writer's cousin, Kate Bulkeley, is dying and can't live a week. He has a good living at Kingsthorpe near Northampton, which is in the gift of Lord Feversham; wishes it may be given to Dr. Burton. Lady Halifax might get Lord Dartmouth to speak for it.

1702, May 23. Perry Hall.—Sir H. Gough to Lord Dartmouth, Great Russell Street, London. Hopes to have his Lordship's company at his house, when Sandwell is put into better order.

1702, June 18. St. James's.—Minute of Privy Council meeting, at which William Lord Dartmouth was sworn a member; with a copy of the oath taken by him.

1702, Aug. 14.—Heneage Finch to Lord Dartmouth, at his house in Russell Street, Bloomsbury. Recommends young Mr. Tilson, whose father had held Ditton living, to him as a chaplain.

1702, Nov. 16. Hinton.—Earl Poulet to [Lord Dartmouth]. Asks his interest in getting Mr. Trafford excused from serving as Sheriff in Norfolk. The writer is nearly interested in the matter, as Trafford married a childless daughter of his sick old grandam, whose blessing he is concerned for.

1703, June 1. Dublin.—Francis North to Lord Dartmouth. Business matters. The Duke of Ormonde expected there with the first wind; his coming wished for, as there was nothing but poverty in the whole kingdom.

1703, July 3, Sept. 22, and Nov. 6. Coleshall.—Lord Digby to Lord Dartmouth at his house in Great Russell Street. Recommends him to purchase the estate of their neighbour, Mr. Wyrley, in the manor of Handsworth.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1703, Sept. 5.—Dr. Mossom Wye to Lord Dartmouth. Desires permission to exchange his living of Kilsoran, presented to him by Lord Dartmouth's father, for another.

1704, Aug. 8. Whitehall.—Earl of Nottingham to Lord Dartmouth at Lord Guernsey's house at Aylesford. About the guardianship of Lord Dartmouth's nephew. Four mails waiting from Holland.

1704-5, March 4. Dublin.—Edward Southwell to [Lord Dartmouth].

1705, July 25. Hinton.—Earl Poulet congratulates Lord Dartmouth on the birth of his son. It will be a most sensible pleasure for him to stand godfather with Lady Halifax and Lord Townshend. Complaint that the coasting trade is shamefully neglected. It seems the A——ll's Council is changed without any alteration, as they in the country are the first that feel.

1705, July 25. Rainham.—Lord Townshend to Lord Dartmouth at Queen's Square, Westminster. I heartily wish your lordship joy of your third son, and am extremely obliged to you for the honour you do me in accepting of my assistance towards the making him a Christian. I am glad to hear you design to dedicate him to the service of the Church, and the more so because there is no danger of its not being triumphant.

1706, June 29. Burley.—Earl of Nottingham to Lord Dartmouth. In the midst of our triumphs perhaps it will be counted a fault to lament one misfortune in the West Indies. Would much rejoice to hear that some care had been taken to stop the progress of the French there, without which all our islands will be lost.

1707, April 28. Burley.—Earl of Nottingham to Lord Dartmouth. 'Tis said in these parts that Dr. Freeman is to be Bishop of Chester ; a worse could not be thought of.

1707, July 28. Burley.—Same to same. On his daughter's proposed marriage [to the Duke of Roxburgh].

1707, August 5 and 7. London.—Duke of Roxburgh to Lord Dartmouth. Asks what answer has been received from Lord Nottingham, and desires his assistance.

1707, August 9. Burley.—Earl of Nottingham to Lord Dartmouth. Expresses at some length his hesitation to consent to his daughter's marriage.

1707, August 29, Sept. 6, and Sept. 10. Burley.—Same to same at Sandwell. In the last latter Lord Nottingham writes that his wife for his one and twentieth child brought him a girl, and he hopes that his niece [Lady Dartmouth] will not be jealous, notwithstanding one of her own sex has made an example first of christening and then marrying the imp of her love and of the state (sic).

1707, Oct. 5. Stratton.—Duke of Devonshire to Lord Dartmouth. Complimentary.

1707, Oct. 22. Squerries.—Earl of Jersey to Lord Dartmouth. His enquiries into the Duke of Roxburgh's character more favourable perhaps than Lord Nottingham would desire. Wishes the latter could be brought to reason about his daughter's marriage.

1707, Dec. 16. Admiralty. — Hill to Lord Dartmouth. "My Lord, we have got a 4th rate for Capt. Legg, viz., the Weymouth, a good ship. I am with great passion," &c.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1707-8, March 2.—Sir Michael Warton to Lord Dartmouth. Will be glad if the house throws out Mr. Moyser's Register bill. "It cannot be advantageous for this Isle, which, though a place of land rents, is so mixed with trade of the greatest value, that the best computers say we trade yearly for four times as much as the income of the land comes to; and men being brought by a register to be trusted only for their real value must sink this mighty bulk of trade. This was the opinion of old wise William Pier (sic)."

1707-8, March 8. Burley.—Earl of Nottingham to Lord Dartmouth. Prays his support to a bill to mend the way between Stratford and Dunchurch.

1708, Oct. 14. Weymouth [ship], Carlisle Bay, Barbados.—Capt. Thomas Legge to Lord Dartmouth and to the Clerk of the Council. Forwards a representation of the unusual hard treatment he meets with at the hands of Metford Crowe, Governor of Barbadoes.

1708, Nov. 26. The same.—The same to Lord Dartmouth. Further complaints of the barbarity and tyranny of the Governor.

1708-9, Jan. 31.—Earl of Sunderland to Lord Dartmouth. Is informed the enemy intend playing them some trick on the following day at the Committee of the Scrutiny, and that in the house they will endeavour to bring again the question of the Duke of Queensberry's vote. Begs him to summon Lord Guernsey and their friends early to the Committee.

1709. Feb. 15.—Sir Cleobury Holte to Lord Digby at Mr. Nicholas's house in old Spring Garden. Asks him to use his influence with Lord Dartmouth to obtain for Mr. Ranshe, the son of a neighbour, a curacy at West Bromwich, Mr. Adenbroke, the minister there being on the point of death.

1709. May 6.—Antigua. Governor Daniel Parke to Lord Dartmouth. Sends him a dozen and a half bottles of citron water procured from Barbadoes. Defends himself from certain charges. Captain Legge and he have often drank his lordship's health together.

1709. May 18. Barbadoes, Secretary's Office.—A. Heene to Lord Dartmouth. During Captain Legge's absence on a cruise at sea, Governor Crowe has ordered that depositions shall be taken against him without giving any notice to his friends. Lets his Lordship know that he may take his injured innocence under his protection.

1710. [June ?]—Saturday, 10 o'clock. Duke of Shrewsbury to Lord Dartmouth. The Duke of Somerset and he are very desirous to meet his Lordship that morning at Mr. Harley's house in York Buildings. He is to come in a chair or hackney coach to avoid observations.

Two other undated letters from the Duke of Shrewsbury evidently refer to the coming appointment of Lord Dartmouth as Secretary of State.

1710. [June 13 ?]—Tuesday at night. Earl Poulett to Lord Dartmouth. "Your brother Boyle went to Sunderland for the Seals and is to bring them to the Queen to-morrow morning." His Lordship must await the Queen's commands at home.

1710. [June 15 ?]—Thursday morning. The Earl of Jersey congratulates all mankind and wishes Lord Dartmouth much joy in the choice made of a secretary of state.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1710, June 15.—Court at Kensington. Minute of Council that William Lord Dartmouth was that day sworn one of the Principal Secretaries of State, with copy of oath taken, and note of fees paid (26*l*.)

1710, June 15 to 28.—Congratulatory letters from Lord Radnor, the Bishop of London (Compton), Lord Nottingham, Sir Roger Mostyn, the Archbishop of York (Sharp), the Marquis of Tweeddale, the Earl of Denbigh, Lord Digby and others. The Archbishop sends a petition from Mary Lamplugh (widow of his predecessor's son), who desires to get her third son, lately from Westminster School, into the Secretary's office.

1710, June 22.—The Duke of Shrewsbury to Lord Dartmouth. The Lord Mayor thinks he can make a useful discovery of the combination about coals. He is gone to take some depositions and desires to see the Secretary of State at his own house instead of his office, so that the secret may be kept. What the Lord Mayor proposes seems a thing of some nicety.

1710, June 24.—The same to the same. Is in pain to know whether the Lord Mayor has brought any depositions, or witnesses to be examined.

1710, June 26.—Newnham Padox. Earl of Denbigh to the same. Solicits for the protection of Abel Roper, and that he may be concerned in writing the Gazette. He is an honest fellow and his relations, who are the writer's neighbours, are so too. If the "place of Trade" be not disposed of, would apply for it himself, if encouraged by Lord Dartmouth. Had a promise of the Queen's favour, she knowing Lord Marlborough had used him ill in point of the army.

1710, June 28.—Robert Monckton to the same. Congratulates his lordship, but fears he will be plagued by his own party to spring a mine and blow them [The Commissioners of Trade, of whom Monckton was one] all up.

1710, July (sic) the 3rd.—The Duke of Marlborough to the same. "My Lord,

I have receiv'd the favour of your Lordship's letter of the 16 past by which you are pleas'd to acquaint me with the honour the Queen has done you in appointing you Secretary of State in the room of Lord Sunderland you will naturally believe from the relation he beares to me, I can not be without concern for the change, but since Her Majesty has thought it for her service to remove him, I congratulate your Lordship upon the honour she has done you, and pray you will believe I shall be glad of all occasions to assure you of the truth and esteem wherewith I am, &c."

1710, August 9. Squerries.—Earl of Jersey to the same. Postboys, Examiners, &c., are the usual entertainments of the country gentry, but news from a Secretary of State's office is unusual, and he gives thanks for that received this morning.

1710, August 10. Sir Michael Warton to the same.—"Give me leave to congratulate her Majesty's great grace and bounty to her subjects, in the late expulsion of the Sieur Volpone [Godolphin], it will certainly prove an universal remedy for the spleen and vapours." If her Majesty will dispense this great elixir plentifully to her subjects, the golden age will revive again, and the skies as well as the looks of all her subjects will assume their former brightness.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

1710, Aug. 14. Gloucestershire.—William Blathwayt to Lord Dartmouth. The Duke of Beaufort, believing the writer from a false print to be one of those who voted against Dr. Sacheverell, is pleased to oppose his election at the Bath. The report is altogether untrue, as by reason of his illness he never once attended any of the debates, much less was in any division on the subject. Has referred his Grace to Lord Dartmouth. Prays to be remembered in any alterations that may be made in the Commission of Trade and Plantations.

1710, Aug. 21. St. James's Square.—Duke of Beaufort to the same. Sends copy of paper publicly sold at a print shop, next door to Old Man's Coffee-house by Charing Cross, in order that measures may be taken to find out the author.

1710, Aug. 30.—Earl of Jersey to the same. Thinks himself obliged to state that unless Lord Dorset is put out what the latter has already done will have a very ill effect on the elections in the county [Kent?] by encouraging the choice of those who are entirely against the Queen's measures.

The Electress Sophia to Lord Dartmouth.

“Monsieur,

A Herenhausen le 2 de 7 bre, 1710.

Comme i'ay appris que la Reyne vous avoit choisis my Lord pour estre un de ses principaux Secretaires d'estat, i'en ay eu beaucoup de ioye, vous aiant touiour regardé comme amis, depuis que ie vous ay veu icy, cela m'a fait recevoir avec tant plus de plaisir l'obligante lettre que vous m'avez escrite et me fait souhaiter la continuation de votre bonheur, si i'y pouvois inamais contribuer par quelque service vous me trouveriez' jamais my Lord.

Vostre très affectionné à vous servir

SOPHIE, ELECTRICE.”

1710, Sept. 6.—Earl of Jersey to the same. Has delayed his departure to the country as he wishes for a moment's discourse on account of something that fell yesterday in a conversation he had with the two great men of the Treasury relating to himself.

1710, Sept. 8. Squerries.—The same to the same. As to the argument used in their last discourse for delaying the dissolution of parliament there seems so little force in it that he suspects there wants an inclination to dissolve, for the pretended invasion set about by the Whigs can be no reason against it. If it were likely that Mr. Boyle and others would quit the Queen's service on a dissolution, with a view to gain popularity, it would be advisable to disappoint them by dismissing them beforehand. Some impertinent paper has done him the honour with their news to set the parish bells ringing on his account. Prays Lord Dartmouth to issue a warrant that his humble servant, for want of other news, may not be stuffed into a public paper.

1710, Sept. 11.—Robert Harley to the same. The Queen has directed that the Bishop of Exeter's and his clergy's address shall be inserted in the next Gazette.

1710, Sept. 15. Bellem.—Lord Galway to the same. Refers to the Consul's memorial about having divine service performed in his house. The Factory had hitherto assembled at the writer's house instead of the Consul's. Has received an account from Gibraltar of the Moors insulting our trade, which would not be if we had any ships in those parts to protect it. The treaty with the Moors ends on Oct. 1, and should be renewed, which he has no power to do.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1710, Sept. 21.—E. Spragge to Lord Dartmouth. Begs his Lordship's support of his petition to the Treasury, in consideration of his own long service from his infancy, his father's and brother's blood laid out in the service, and now six small children interceding but for a bare subsistence.

1710, Sept. 21. Winchester.—Duke of Beaufort to the same. Recommends George Duke, Esq., of Sarson, who has a good estate, to be a deputy lieutenant.

1710, Sept. 26. Squerries.—Earl of Jersey to the same. Our new managers seemed so much disposed to provide for one who had been so barbarously used by the two late great men that had he been more solicitous it would have shewn a mistrust of their kind intentions; but the uneasiness of his friends and well wishers who see places disposed of every day and himself only talked of for a place is the true occasion of his troubling Lord Dartmouth. Thinks it morally impossible but that he shall find a suitable provision before these removes are at an end, wishes however that his Lordship would bring the Queen to some declaration in this affair.

1710, Sept. 28 and Oct. 6.—The same to the same. On the like subject.

1710, Sept. 28.—The Duke of Leeds to the same. Recommends Abel Roper for the Gazette. He is the writer of the Postboy which informs the world with truths on the side of the Church party, which the Postman, &c., does always conceal or put in false colours.

1710, Oct. 3.—Lord Dartmouth to the Queen.

“Madam,

There are two mails come from Holland this morning and one from Lisbon last night. My Lord Galway writes word that my Lord Forbes and Capt. Haddock had taken two Genoese ships coming out of Cadiz that had about four millions of Patacks on board. Mr. Lefevre says in his two millions of pieces of 8, and that the Portuguese army consisting of 8,000 foot and 2,300 horse had passed the Guadiana in order to enter Spain. Sir John Norris writes from Barcelona that by the King of Spain's order he was going to embark some troops at Tarragona in order to make an attempt on Valentia. Mr. Cole from Venice says he hears the project of a Treaty between the Princes of Italy is laid aside. Mr. Chetwynd of Genoa says there are great preparations making in Provence for sending forces to Catalonia, which he says he has given Sir John Norris an account of. His brother at Turin says the enemy intend to detach 20 battalions and some squadrons of horse for Spain as soon as the snow falls, which the Germans might prevent if they would take winter quarters in Savoy, which he cannot believe they will be prevailed upon to do. Mr. Evelyn of the Post Office brought me a letter he received from Ostend which gives an account that five ships were sailed from Dunkirk for Cadiz last week, and thirteen more were fitting out with all expedition. The letters from Rotterdam are full of the great preparations at Dunkirk, and that 6,000 men are marching that way to be embarked for Scotland, &c.

I am with the greatest submission, &c.”

1710, Oct. 5.—H. Compton, Bishop of London, to Lord Dartmouth. On the great disorderliness of several parishes in the Leeward Islands, which discourage and hinder ministers from residing amongst them by pretending to a separate ecclesiastical jurisdiction.

1710, Oct. 10. Whitehall.—Lord Dartmouth to the Queen.
“Madam,

This morning arrived a mail from Holland with the enclosed letters for your Majesty. That from the Duke of Modena is only to acquaint your Majesty with the death of the Duchess.

I received one from the Duke of Marlborough, in which he says by the accounts he has from Dunkirk, there are no preparations worth taking notice of, and that the ill weather has retarded the siege of Aire, but that he hopes in a few days to be master of the town. Dr. Newton writes word the great Prince of Tuscany is very dangerously ill. The rest of the letters have nothing material in them. I have a letter from the Admiralty which gives the same account the Duke of Marlborough does of Dunkirk. My Lord President desired me this morning to acquaint your Majesty that the parties in the case of Mr. Crowe are not ready to be heard to-morrow. I am, with the greatest submission, &c.”

1710, Oct. 11. Coleshall.—Lord Digby to Lord Dartmouth. The Warden of All Souls complains that Mr. Blencowe of that College, being obliged by the Statutes to take orders or quit his fellowship, has found means to prevail with the Queen to interpose in his favour on account of his being employed in her service. Cannot doubt but that the Queen, when she is rightly informed, will leave the Colleges to their own Statutes, especially when she reflects upon what was done at Magdalen College in her father's time, which has made them all more jealous ever since and apt to be alarmed at the least encroachment of royal power. Lord Dartmouth's father was a generous advocate for that College, which makes the writer the more bold in applying to him in something of a like nature, though in no degree to be compared with that. The whole University is concerned in a precedent of this kind.

1710, Oct. $\frac{1}{2}$. Lisbon.—Tho. Leffever to the same. Lord Galway embarked on board the Bedford for home, being much afflicted with the gout, and sailed on the $\frac{1}{4}$ th. Gives a long account of the bad state into which King Charles's affairs are getting. The King has but 13,000 foot and 6,000 horse, having been forced to leave several detachments to keep the communication with Arragon and Catalonia open, he is in a country where there is no money, the Duke of Anjou, and those who followed him having carried it all away, &c.

1710, Oct. 13. Whitehall.—Lord Dartmouth to the Queen.
“Madam,

As many of the Lords as are in town met this morning at the committee, and in obedience to your Majesty's commands I laid the Papers from my Lord Marlborough before them; and Sir John Leake and Sir George Bings attended to give their opinions, which they did in writing at the desire of the Lords, of which I have enclosed a copy. . . I am ordered to send the enclosed letter to Duke of Marlborough by an express to Ostend that no more time may be lost if the expedition be found practicable.

I gave the Lords an account that everything is ready for transporting the recruits for Spain, upon which they ordered me to write to the Admiralty for a convoy, and to the transports to go with all expedition to Cork. . . . I was ordered last Tuesday to write to my Lord Shannon to put the men on board at the Isle of Wight with all expedition, which I accordingly did, and am with the most profound submission, Madam, &c.”

1710, Oct. 13.—Sir Simon Harcourt, Attorney General, to Lord Dartmouth. Has prepared a new bill for the Lieutenantcy of London, in obedience to the Queen's warrant.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1710, Oct. 15. The Duke of Buckingham to Lord Dartmouth. Is in great confusion at his child's excessive illness. The Emperor's envoy states that his master has agreed to send the forces desired, but thinks our consulting the States about it will retard a matter that requires so much haste by their sending to the Prince of Savoy, and treating farther concerning it.

1710, Oct. 19. Versailles.—Marquis de Torcy to the same. Begs Lord Dartmouth to use his credit in obtaining the release on parole for six or twelve months of the Marquis de Tallard, who has been a prisoner for more than six years, and whose private affairs urgently need his attention, in consequence of the death of his eldest son.

1710, Oct. 19. Squerries.—Earl of Jersey to the same. Sends a bit of paper which will inform Lord Dartmouth of the success they have had in their county election, notwithstanding the power and zeal of a Lord Warden, and Lord Lieutenant.

1710, Oct. 23.—Lord Dartmouth to the Queen. "Madam, about 12 o'clock I received the mail from Lisbon. I have enclosed an extract of what is most material in the letters which is but a bad account of the posture of affairs in Spain and Portugal, except the Brazil fleets being arrived safe at Lisbon, which has brought a vast quantity of gold and other riches.

[Sir Charles Hedges desired me to acquaint your Majesty that Mr. Thomas Smith the Queen's Proctor is dead, and that it is necessary there should be another before the next court day, which will be on Friday in the next week. He recommends Mr. George Smith, son to the last to succeed, and tells me he spoke to your Majesty formerly about him. I am," &c.

1710, Oct. 23.—Lord Dartmouth to the Queen. ". A post came in this morning from Holland. The Paris news is that 32 battalions and 22 squadrons are sent from Dauphiné to Spain, that the Duke of Noailles is to besiege Gironne, and that King Charles has sent a detachment to besiege Seville, and that the report in France is that Valentia is reduced to King Charles and that he has joined the Portuguese army. Mr. Chetwynd from Turin says that Marshall Dawns has promised he will keep the field as long as possible. Dr. Newton says the Herbert from Newfoundland is come and brings an account that the English ships in those parts have taken and destroyed above 60 sail of the French, and that the Concordia Privateer had brought into Leghorn a French Privateer of 24 guns. I am," &c.

1710, Oct. 31.—Lord Dartmouth to the Queen. "Madam, after Mr. St. John left the Committee, I read Mr. Lefevre's letter to them. and upon consideration of the whole state of affairs in Portugal, as he represented them, the Lords were unanimously of opinion to advise your Majesty, that what supplies and recruits your Majesty shall think fit to send for carrying on the Spanish war, should be sent for the future to Spain itself, there appearing no disposition in the Court of Portugal to encourage your Majesty to apply your assistance that way. And they are of opinion, I should receive your Majesty's commands to acquaint Mr. Stanhope that you have thoughts of sending a reinforcement to Spain, and that he should send your Majesty his opinion, which is the properest place to send them to, in order to the reduction of Spain"

1710, Oct. 31. Dartmouth.—Arthur and Robt. Holdsworth, Tho. Floud, Tho. Newman, Caleb Rockett, and other magistrates, to Lord

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Dartmouth. Thanking him for his acceptance of the High Stewardship of the Corporation of Dartmouth, which had been vacant since the death of his worthy and good father.

1710, Nov. 1.—Elizabeth, Queen of Charles III. of Spain, to Queen Anne.

“Madame Ma Soeur, les bontés inexprimables et sans nombre que vous nous avez toujours temoigné ne me laisse point douter que V. M. les ora pour nous dans la presante conjuncture don devant tout. Le Roy est en Castille avec son armée et tout se montre avantageux pour lui, notre armé fort affoiblie celle de l'enemie auxmenté journellement, quinsi tout devant dun pront secours, car les troupe que nous avons seront obligé d'aitre sur p'ieds tout l'hiver pour se maintenir dans se qui est acqui. Le Roi m'a fort chargé de solliciter V. M. en son noms ne pouvant même ecire a cause du risque qu'il y a un corps d'enemie nous ayant coupé le passage, je suis entièrement persuadé que V. M. nous facilitera un pront secours et qu'elle pousera aux bout ce qu'elle a commencé avec tantele bonté, car il seroit facheux que faute de troupe l'on se veroit obligé de l'acher prise, vous assurant que si lon tems que je viverris comme aussi le Roi nous ne cesseront de temoigner nos reconnoissances a V. M. particulièrement j'embrasserois les occasions avec plaiissirs de luy pouvoir montrer combien je suis, &c.

ELISABET.”

“Barcelone, le 1 de Novembre 1710.

A La Reyne de La Grand Bretagne Madame Ma Soeur.”

1710, Nov. 7.—The Duke of Marlborough to Lord Dartmouth. “The messenger your Lordship dispatcht to me, having been detain'd at Dover by the contrary winds, did not arrive here til yesterday in the evening with your letter of the 13th of the last month giving an account of the preparations for our intend'd expedition on the sea coast, with the Queen's pleasure on that subject. Your Lordship may beleive it was with the utmost concern I found myself oblig'd, some days ago, to acquaint Mr. Secritary St. John, for Her Majesty's information, with the impossibility of going on with this design, in order to put a stop to any further expense at present, the weather having been so very unseasonable, and rendred the roads so excessive bad, as to make it impracticable. I had this expedition the more at heart, as being fully persuad'd nothing could have conduced more to the publick good, nor to Her Majesty's intirest in particular at this juncture, then the successe of it, but since Providence has thought fit to prevent it, we must submit til a more favourable oppertunity offers. In the mean time a particular care shou'd be taken that these stores may be ready when requier'd. Your Lordship will have seen by our dispatches yesterday, by the ordinary post, the state of our siege; we have continu'd our sapps and advanced our bridges to-night with good success, so that I am hopes three or four days may put an end to this tiresome siege, that the troops may return to winter quarters, which they have very great need of, after so long a campagne and so ill a latter season.”

1710, Nov. 9. Edinburgh.—Earl of Mar to Lord Dartmouth. About Colonel Stewart's negotiations with the French Commissioners for the exchange of prisoners concerning the exchange of the Middletons. Had written more fully to Mr. Harley of the prospect they had of a good election. He and some more countrymen will set off for the meeting of Parliament on Saturday, for whose assistance his lordship will not be the worse; can adventure to say that all the number will be tight. Regrets that a friend of theirs has joined himself too close with other folks, and wishes he may now give it over, though afraid he will not.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1710, Nov. 10. Duke of Marlborough to Lord Dartmouth. Acknowledges letter of 17th past. Was sorry to see that the troops were embarked from the Isle of Wight, and hopes his letter to Mr. Secretary St. John came in time to prevent their proceeding any further. Despatched an officer yesterday express to give Her Majesty an account of the surrender of Aire. Now preparing to march to winter quarters.

1710, Nov. 10. Madrid.—General James Stanhope to the same. Has resolved to send Major-General Wade into England, he being fully informed of all that relates to this war, and his lordship will not be sorry to have such a person upon the spot to answer any questions concerning the affairs of Spain, or to explain any doubts that may arise upon the accounts, estimates, &c. transmitted home. Speaks in high terms of Wade's services, especially at Saragossa, and warmly recommends him to the Queen's favour.

1710, Nov. 19. Lord Galway to the same. Is very proud that the Queen is pleased to lay her commands upon him to inform her of the present posture of affairs in Portugal; and will lay himself at the Queen's feet to-morrow in the evening about six o'clock, or at any other time when she shall be pleased to admit him to her presence.

1710 (or 1711), Nov. 21. Countess of Dorchester to the same. "I received your Lordship's letter at Weybridge which made me so long before I returned you my hearty thanks for having given those orders that will free me of the trouble of my lord's horses, and a rascally groom hectors the whole house and I dare not find fault with him for fear he should take occasion to go away and leave me unprovided, but as your lordship has this year been so very instrumental in bringing greater folkes out of the vexation given by saucy servants, you'll not I fancy much value yourself upon what you have don for me, how great soever I take the obligation to be."

1710, Dec. 11. Marquis of Carmarthen to the same. The bearer Francis Povey, a gentleman long honoured with the favour and friendship of Lord Dartmouth's father, and of great skill in fortifications and gunnery has been recommended to Lords Craven and Berkeley, two of the proprietors of the Bahama Islands as in every way qualified to serve them in re-fortifying Providence, and in taking the command there. Earnestly requests Lord Dartmouth also to give his recommendation to this deserving but unfortunate gentleman.

1710, Dec. 13 (received). Palace of Mequines.—The Emperor of Morocco to Queen Anne. One of his cruisers has captured an English ship, wherein were eight Christians and a lading of butter, and salt flesh and fish; and as there is no English Consul within his dominions to serve as a mediator during the present truce, he has laid an embargo on the ship until he sees what the Queen and her Parliament will direct.

1710, Dec. 14. Charles Street, St. James's. Lord Galway to Lord Dartmouth. Is now able to go abroad again, and will be proud to give her Majesty that account of her affairs in Spain and Portugal which he was prevented from doing sooner by this fit of the gout.

1710, Dec. 21. Barcelona.—Charles III. of Spain to Queen Anne.

"Madame ma Soeur, Vous aurois appris par le Marquis de Campo et mon ministre le Comte de Sallasch le etat dans le quel ce trouvoit l'armée alliée icy alors que je resolus de partir vers icy avec le conseil de tous les allies; apres cela ayant trouvé nos generaux impossible de nous maintenir plus long tems en Castiglie ont resoleu de retirer l'armée

HARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

dans lequel tems le Comte de Staremborg s'at (sic) trovée obligé par les raisons que vous expliquera plus mon ministre d'engager un affaire general dans le quel le bon Dieu a bien voulu donner a nos armes une nouvelle et complete victoire le 10^{me} de ce mois, l'ennemi ayant laissé sur le camp 6,000 morts et abandonant par une fuite precipiteuse toute sa artiglierie. Cette hereuse journee me donne nouvelle occasion de feliciter V. M. de tout mon coeur mais de l'autre costez m'est tres sensible la perte du S^r Stanhope et du corps de troupes de V. M. lesquelles une heure devant que nostre armee pouvoit arriver à son secours furent obligées a se rendre prisonnieres de guerre apres avoir fait une tres vigoureuse defense, cette perte m'est autant plus sensible que je me confies tout a fait du zèle et bravure de ces troupes et en particulier je regret la prison de S^r Stanhope qui a tousjours montrée tant de zèle pour le service de la cause commune et je m'estimerai heureux si je pouvais contribuer a leur prompt echange sans scrupuler en carактер ni sujet qui fus prisonier dans mes mains.

Nonobstant dons de cette victoire les affaires d'icy ne sont pas si remises qu'eux n'ay besoins d'un grand et prompt secours tant d'argent que des troupes laquelle j'espère de la bonté maternelle de V. M. Le Comte de Tallasch aussi bien que S^r de los Rios porteur de cette lettre vous informeront plus de l'estat des affaires d'icy auxquelles je me rapport esperant que V. M. voudra bien achever cet oeuvre si glorieusement commencé et me metre en etat de pouvoir concluire cette longue guerre et je suis &c.

Votre tres affectionnée frere

"Barcelone ce 21^{me} Xbre 1710.

CHARLES."

A la reyne de la grand bretagne Madame ma Soeur."

1710-11, Jan. 2. Robert Walpole to the same.

"I have received your Lordship's letter signifying the Queen's pleasure to dismissee me from my employment of Treasurer of the Navy.

"As I have allways with the greatest zeal and duty endeavoured to serve Her Majesty whilst I had the honour to be in Her service, I beg your Lordship to assure Her Majesty that nothing shall ever lessen my duty to Her, but that I shall be allways ready to doe all that is in my power for Her Majestie's service, and retain for ever a most gratefull and dutifull sense of the favours Her Majesty was pleased to confer upon me, whilst I had the honour to receive her commands."

1710-11, Jan. 8. Lichfield.—John Floyer to the same. Applies on behalf of his son, now 30 years old, who has served as a cornet three campaigns in Flanders under Duke Schomberg, for a captain's commission in one of the new regiments now being raised. His son has been bred up in the church interest and will remain faithful to it. In his low sphere the writer will endeavour to serve the public by publishing his interpretation of the visions in the Revelation by the history of the Roman Empire and by the past Annals of the Church, and there will be some observations to prove that the German Empire with its confederates must destroy the Popedom, and after that the Turkish Empire. Begs Lord Dartmouth's leave to mention his name in the dedication 1710-11, Jan. 23, 25, 26, and 28. St. James's. — Letters of Robert Harley and the Earl of Rochester about the arrangements for the Queen's receiving an Address from Convocation on Saturday the 30th.

1710-11, Jan. 29. Reigate.—Earl of Shaftesbury to Lord Dartmouth. Has not been able since the winter to stir out of his chamber. Sends a petition that, with the Queen's leave and under her protection, he may obtain his passage through France early this spring to recover his health by the only means remaining.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1711, Jan. 31. Barcelona.—Charles III. of Spain to Queen Anne.

"Madame ma Soeur, Ayant icy les affaires changées de quelque tems de face en nostre domage je ne peu m'excuser d'informer V. M. de nostre mauvais etat voyant asteur (sic) avec les peu de forces des alliez qui sont resté sur le point d'estre accablée par les forces des ennemis. La foible guarnison de ma ville de Girone ayant été contrainte apres une longue et vigoureuse resistance de capituler je me trouve presentement au milieu de deux armées ennemies sans les moyens necessaires d'argent et des troupes de pouvoir arreter les ulterieurs operations que les ducs de Vandome et Noyalles voudront entreprendre dans ce pais, lesquelles ne manqueront pas defaire leur possible afin de me reduire dans la derniere extremite avant que par les secours des troupes et d'argent que j'espere et implore de la bonté maternelle de V. M. je puis garantir cette province de la derniere extremite si prejudiciele aux interets de la cause commune. Mon ministre le Comte de Sallasch aura l'honneur de vous faire un detail plus exacte des affaires d'icy et de vous représenter la necessité indispensable qu'il y a de m'assister vigiereusement et les plus tost qu'il sera possible tant des troupes comme en particulier des subsides de l'argent, qui nous manquent tout a fait et sont la plus grande cause de nos misères et de la perte des troupes, pour conserver un pied ferme dans ce continent. Je me rapporte dont sur le dit Comte en assurant Votre Majesté que non obstant le tres mauvaise etat où je me trouve je me sacrifiere (sic) jusque au dernier point pour le bien de la cause commune et je n'oublieray rien de mon cotez que puisse contribuer a la conservacion de ce peu de troupes et pais jusque a ce que les renforces de V. M. et des alliez me tirent hors du present embarras, esperant que la bonte maternelle avec laquelle vous avez tousjours regardée ma personne et les affaires d'Espagne voudra bien aussi a proportion de la necessité augmenter ces renforts et assistances sans lesquelles je ne scaurois me maintenir long tems dans un pais ou les ennemis sont déjà maitres de tous les places a la reserve de Barcelone et Tarragone. En attendant que j'espere les efets de votre bonté je suis, &c.

CHARLES."

"Barcelonne ce dernier de Janvier de 1711."

1710-11, Feb. 11. Westminster.—William Paterson to Lord Dartmouth. Encloses a petition of Robert Cassills, fifteen years a prisoner in Newgate, charged with conspiracy against the late king. Cassills alleges that he has found out during his confinement that long sought for problem the Quadrature of the Circle, and begs that his demonstrations may be referred to Sir Isaac Newton and others. Attached is a certificate dated Sept. 24, 1709, signed by J. Lowthrop and Jos. Raphson (Professors of the Royal Society), H. Ditton, of Christ Church, London, and James Gregory, at the College in Edinburgh, that they had seen Cassills' demonstrations and could not discover any fallacy therein.

1710-11, Feb. 17. Lisbon.—Earl of Portmore to the same. Had been under some apprehension concerning the disposition of the Court at Lisbon, but they are now convinced that the late battle was rather to our advantage than otherwise, and are in no way discouraged by the change of our affairs in Spain, though perhaps it may serve them for a handle to demand more subsidies. Their whole management of the war is wrong in the most essential points, &c.

1710-11, Feb. 20, 11 at night. Cockpit.—Lord Dartmouth to the Queen.

“Madam, I left a letter of revocation with your Majesty to Mr. Molesworth as envoy to Genoa; if it should not go by this night’s post it may fall out that your Majesty may have two envoys at Genoa both delivering their credentials at once, which would be thought something extraordinary there. The Duke of Argyll has explained his demands into a great many more. I shall lay them before your Majesty to-morrow morning, it being too late to trouble your Majesty with them to-night.”

To this the Queen replies in her own hand :—

“Wensday.

I am very sorry I did not send you Mr. Molesworth’s revocation last night, but I hope if you send a messenger with it presently, it may come time enough to overtake the packet.

I am,
Your very affectionate friend,
ANNE R.”

1710-11, Mar. 10.—Note in the handwriting of Erasmus Lewis, enclosing some French papers about the Marquis de Guiscard—one a statement made at the Hague on 21 March 1709 by Etienne de la Foux.

1710-11, Mar. 15.—Baron Bothmer to Lord Dartmouth. Will not fail to send the Queen’s letter to the Duke of Modena to the Count de Bergomi at the Hague. Attached to this is a copy, in Lord Dartmouth’s hand, of the letter, which requests an exchange of the prisoners taken at Saragossa and Brihuega.

1711, Mar. 27. Rotterdam.—Duke of Argyll to the same. Has received the Queen’s letter to the King of Spain. Is to begin his journey to-morrow, and will make all haste.

1711, May 1, ten at night.—Earl of Rochester to the same. Has just received a letter from the Lord Keeper that the Judges will not be ready by to-morrow with their opinions concerning the Address from the Bishops, so there will be no occasion for a Cabinet on that day. [The writer died suddenly on May 2.]

1711, May 8.—Robert Harley to the same. Regarding the despatch of Mr. Murray, the Duke of Argyll’s aide-de-camp, to Spain with new directions to the Duke. “If he does not make haste he will scarce find King Charles at Barcelona.”

A letter from Harley, dated April 27, also refers to the same subject.

1711, May 8. Lambeth.—The Archbishop of Canterbury (signed “Canterbury”) to the same. Though very far from being able to go abroad will take care to communicate to-morrow to the Convocation the Queen’s letter and the Judges’ opinions, which he has just received.

1711, June 3. Cane wood.—William Lord Berkeley, of Stratton, to the same. On behalf of Robert Squibb, indicted for an action whereof he is said to be innocent. The writer has known the gentleman’s father for many years as a very honest, well principled man.

1711, June 6. Somerset House.—Earl of Clarendon to the same. Making an appointment.

1711, June 16. Whitehall.—Lord Dartmouth to Paul Jodrell. Asks his opinion on the state of the case between some people of Lewisham parish and himself. Refers to the Dean of Canterbury [Dr. Geo. Stanhope] as parson there.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1711, June 16. Chancery Lane over against Lincoln's Inn Gate.—Paul Jodrell, replying to the last, makes an appointment to meet Lord and Lady Dartmouth.

1711, June 19. Earl of Jersey to Lord Dartmouth.—The sons of Lord Middleton are to be bailed out of the Tower to-morrow by advice of the Attorney-General. Has been asked to be one of their bail, but as they are prisoners of State, thinks he ought not to consent without first acquainting Her Majesty.

1711, July 6. Cockpit. Lord Dartmouth to the Queen.
“Madam,

There has no foreign Post arrived since I was at Windsor. But this is to acquaint your Majesty that the Duke of Queensberry died this morning at five o'clock. The Lords of the Committee sent for Mr. Montgomery and Mr. Rowe, his under secretaries, and ordered them to deliver your Majesty's seals to me, it not being thought proper that they should be left in the Office, and to seal up all his papers till your Majesty's further pleasure be known. I shall bring the seals with me to-morrow, and am,” &c.

1711, July 25. Whitehall.—Earl of Mar to Lord Dartmouth. Introduces his friend Jacob [Tonson ?] for a favour his lordship will know of. Could not refuse the recommendation, as the writer was the innocent occasion of his almost being sent a little too quick down stairs a twelvemonth ago.

[Swift notes in his journal under July 26 that the two Jacobs Tonson have lost the printing of the Gazette.]

1711, Aug. 31. Glasgow.—The Duke of Montrose to the same. Sends an account of his suit to the Queen on behalf of the Scots Peers, whose case at present, he writes, is not the happiest in the world.

1711, Sept. 2. Richmond.—Hill to the same. Has not been able to go so far as London or Windsor since he received the Queen's commands. Prays therefore Lord Dartmouth to consider how impossible it is for him to undertake a journey of 2,000 miles. Upon full examination with himself and his chirurgeons is morally certain he cannot perform the journey [to Spain ?] imposed upon him. He should be proud to die in her Majesty's service, but it would not be for her service to die like a post-horse upon the road, before he had performed his stage.

1711, Sept. 7.—Dr. Geo. Stanhope to the same. On behalf of Mr. Hugh Totterdale, a lawyer of great eminence in Jamaica, and master of a very considerable fortune in the island, that he may be appointed one of the Council there.

1711, Sept. 14.—Countess of Dorchester [wife of Lord Portmore] to the same.

“My lord, as you promist me to give orders to the Admiralty to direct a ship for my Lord's return, I depended upon its being done, so quietly stayd in the country without asking any questunes tell this moment, and now I am told no ship has been order'd; how can you forget your friends in so matterial a point; pardon this litle reproach to the impatiance of a kind wife, and one that is,” &c.

1711, Sept. 26. Cockpit.—The Earl of Dartmouth to the Queen.
“Madam,

I am commanded by the Lords of the Committee to acquaint your Majesty that they have had the Attorney and Solicitor Generals before them this morning upon the disputes between the City of Dublin and the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, which increase every day, as appears by

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

some remarks the Duke of Ormonde has sent me upon the City's Petition. It seems to require immediate directions that a stop may be put to it; therefore the Lords agreed that I should send their opinion of what was proper to be done, that such directions may be despatched to my Lord Lieutenant as soon as possible, if your Majesty thinks fit to approve of them, of which I have enclosed a copy.

Upon inquiry to-day whether Hallier has naturalised himself according to the Act of Parliament we found he had not, upon which all the Lords were of opinion it was most advisable to send him away, and give him 50*l.* here and 150*l.* more when he was on the other side of the water. This my Lord Treasurer desired me to receive your Majesty's pleasure upon, for if it be not done speedily he will put it out of your Majesty's power to remove him. I am," &c.

[Enclosed are a copy of the minutes taken, for the Queen's approbation.]

That a private letter be written to the Duke of Ormonde directing him to persuade Alderman Constantine to make his application to the Court of Aldermen and desire them to excuse his serving this time as Mayor, notwithstanding he is the eldest Alderman, which if they will grant he shall be very willing to take that office upon him at another time.

That my Lord Keeper be desired to write to the Lord Chancellor of Ireland to the same effect.

That by the same post a public letter be written to the Duke of Ormonde acquainting him that the Queen does approve of His Grace's and the Council's asserting Her Majesty's right in disapproving mayors elected by the Court of Aldermen of the City of Dublin when they think.

To the above the Queen replies with her own hand,

"Sep. the 26.

I received your letter an hour ago, but it is now soe late I have only time to tell you that I approve of the Lords' advice concerning the dispute in Ireland, and of Hallier's being sent away as soon as it is possible.

I am, your very affectionate freind,

ANNE R."

1711, Oct. 9. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to the Queen.

"Madam,

I received the enclosed letters from Count Gallas, who sends me word he has not been in a condition to attend at Windsor this last fortnight, therefore desires me to deliver them to your Majesty. I hear by other hands he has been able to go to a great many places in that time.

I received a letter last night from Sir John Norris off the Isle of Wight, where he is at present with the men of war, Turkey ships and others to the number of a hundred and thirty sail, and intends to proceed immediately to the Downs.

The Duke of Ormonde writes word that the City of Dublin have made choice of Alderman Gore (a very honest gentleman) for Mayor, and that Alderman Constantine has declined standing, as your Majesty directed, which has put an end to that dispute for this time. I am," &c.

1711, Nov. 16.—Earl of Oxford (Harley) to the Earl of Dartmouth. Is but just able to make a lame and weary hand thank Lord Dartmouth for his favour yesterday. Hopes the Queen has given him the names for the Commission of Chamberlain of Scotland that he may send it thither express in order to bring up the Peers from thence. The town is full of a disturbance to be to-morrow by a hired mob; 200*l.* is collected for it. Duke of Montagu gave 50 guineas towards it. The chariot or machine is in Castle Yard in Drury Lane; there are several parts in the city where the same is to be acted in miniature. Should not a letter be sent to the Lord Mayor to take care of the public peace, and also to the Lord Lieutenant of Middlesex.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1711, Nov. 27. Dublin.—Edward Southwell to the Earl of Dartmouth. The letter relating to the printing of the two addresses of the Lords arrived too late, and the directions in that affair could not be obeyed. This matter was intended to have come into the House of Commons but by his Grace's direction it was put off there. The House of Lords immediately upon that entered into it. The dissenting ministers here did apply to his Grace, being under concern lest this address might draw on them some orders from her Majesty about their pension; but his Grace spoke favourably to them. Lieut-Gen. Ingoldsby arrived here on Saturday and his Grace had sailed before now but that the weather has been very tempestuous.

1711, Dec. 2. Chester.—The Duke of Ormonde to the same. Announces his arrival in England. Two days before he left Dublin the Hind frigate sank just as she came into the harbour, but all her men, guns, and rigging were saved.

1711, Dec. 8. The Hague.—The Earl of Strafford to the same. "My relations to your brother St. John, my master, are so ample that I have nothing to ad but to beg you to see he dose not throw them asside like your Coles (sic). 'Twas a mighty misfortune that five packets were kept on this side for he had such a vollum in folio of my letters that I doubt it has quite distasted him from them, and yet my lord I scribble on, tho' a misfortune happen'd last night to my long relation, it was fain to be copyd over and for the future I shall follow that way for his ease in reading a better hand and my liberty of scratching out what in any former relations I was fain to leave in, tho' I don't like them. I don't know what you think of me at home, but I think I have done great matters here to bring the States to consent, tho' but in an awkward maner. 'Tis thought here I pleaded with mony to back me, but God knows 'twas very empty handed, and the conversions Paul made was not more by the dint of holding forth then mine were, for Paul cou'd not be poorer then I am, and have ben since I came over. My marriage sunck all my ready mony and ty'd up all my estate My expence at Utrecht will ruin me if I have not good friends to promote my pretentions, that is in case I am design'd to be one of these famous Plenipotentiarys, for one told me for certain Lord Marlborough was to be one, and I to stay here like Pilgarlick or to return home, which I pleased."

"[P.S.] Put not your trust in Buys for he will deceive you."

1711, Dec. 22.—The Duke of Shrewsbury to the same. Asks if notice had been sent to the Archbishop to prepare the Prayers for the fast.

Also two undated letters from the Duke referring to the intended calling to the upper House of Lords Compton and Bruce. Other letters of this time refer to the wholesale creation of peers at the beginning of 1712.

1711, Dec. 27. Whitehall.—Henry St. John to the same.

1711, Dec. 28.—Sir Michael Warton to the same. I am surpriz'd at your Lordship's letter and am sensible of the great intended honour the Queen wou'd bestow upon me; but my Lord I am old and infirm and doe intreat the favour of you to excuse me; I insist on this from your freindshipp, for I am positively resolved to take my ease and be quiett. Pray my Lord putt this affaire by, for I cannot bear the thoughts of itt."

1711, Dec. 29.—The same to the same. "I sincerely own your kindness tho' really mistaken as to me: I am positively and seriously resolv'd against this thing, and am resolv'd not to be concern'd in itt; therefore pray my Lord stop it totally."

1711, Dec. 29.—G. Granville [Lord Lansdowne the poet], to the same. Desires that his brother Bernard may be included in his patent of peerage, as he suffers himself so very heavily from a former omission of that kind that he is sufficiently warn'd not to repeat the like neglect.

1711, Dec. 29. Henby Park.—Lord Bruce (son of the Earl of Ailesbury) to the same. Is very sensible of the great honour the Queen does him by calling him to the House of Lords and will be in London on the Tuesday following.

1711, Dec. 30. Ashby.—J. Lord Compton (son of the Earl of Northampton), writes to the same effect.

1711, Jan. 5.—Sir Christopher Musgrave to the same. There is so much talk of alterations in the Ordinance and other places that he hopes he may be excused desiring any preferment Lord Dartmouth shall think him most capable of serving in. Such a countenance would enable him to recover the interest of his country, and bring him into parliament at Carlisle, where he is informed the election will be made void between Sir James Mountague and Col. Gledhill.

1711, Jan. 10. Windsor.—The Duke of St. Albans to the same. Has always endeavoured to perform his duty to her Majesty, and shall always acquiesce in her pleasure. Has therefore, after eighteen years service in the Band of Pensioners, given directions to Lord Dartmouth's messenger to take his staff which lies in town and deliver it up. For his part he must be contented to stay in the country, and take care of his numerous family.

1711-12, Feb. 23. Naples.—Earl of Shaftesbury to the same. Complimentary.

1711-12, March 9.—Earl of Oxford to the same. Hopes to attend the House to-morrow, for he cannot think all these meetings of the enemy are designed for no end. Cannot Lord Dartmouth discover if anything be designed by the Whigs?

1712, May 14. Epsom.—Lord Guilford to [?]. Intends to be in town to-morrow, time enough to show the respect he always had for the memory of the late King, which can be no otherwise expressed at present than by preferring the interest of his favourites before that of the public.

1712, [May 29-31.]—Five undated letters from Bridget, Lady Poulett to Lord Dartmouth, refer to the challenge sent by the Duke of Marlborough to Earl Poulett after the latter's insulting speech in the House of Lords. In the first her ladyship begs Lord Dartmouth to order the Guards to be ready upon two noblemen's falling out; she will listen when Lord Mohun comes, and will send a more speedy and exact account. Her next note runs, "I listend and itt is my Lord Mallbouro that has challings my Lord by Lord Mohun. Pray lett him be secured immedatly. B. Poulett."

In a third note headed "Saturday morning," Lady Poulett again urges Lord Dartmouth to send guards and adds "the Treasurer must make itt up with Halifax and Godfrie (sic) that noe more quarills happen: one this occasion which I hope you and the Queen will prevent for the present. Pray burn my letters and send the very next gard att hand to secure my Lord and Lord Mohun."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

In a letter dated "Tuesday at night" Earl Poulett himself writes to Lord Dartmouth. "I think it would look affected in me if the Examiner should offer to touch upon the least allusion of the late challenge and therefore as a friend I earnestly beg you would give a caution to Swift," &c.

1712, June 12. Bromley.—Thos. Sprat, Bishop of Rochester to Lord Dartmouth. Friday June 13, is the day that the writer has kept solemnly for many years in his family as a day of thanksgiving for his deliverance from the villainous plot of Robert Young. If, however, the matter at the House be of such importance that it is necessary for him to attend, he will most certainly be present.

1712, July 22. Wimbledon.—The Rev. Edward Collins, parson of Wimbledon to the Earl of Dartmouth. Writes on behalf of his brother that he may be confirmed in the Government of St. John's, Newfound-land, his competitor for the post, Captain Gully, being dead and buried.

1712, Aug. 6. Cockpit.—Earl of Dartmouth to the Queen.
"The town is extreem sickly. My Lord Winchelsea died last Monday, and the Duchess of Leeds with her son and daughter are at the Cockpit to secure themselves from his new Grace, who by their accounts does not much deserve that title."

1712, Aug. 20. Cockpit.—Earl of Dartmouth to the Queen.
"Madam,

I have enclosed an extract of a letter from Mr. Wich to Lord Bolingbroke, in which is an account of a new Alliance that he thinks there is reason to believe; and one from Mr. Pulteney, with the Czar's threats, which seems as unlikely. I received a letter from my Lord Bolingbroke dated at Paris the 27th N. S., in which he tells me he was to depart next morning, and hoped to pay his duty to your Majesty at Windsor in eight days. There was a committee this morning, and there is to be another to-morrow. I have enclosed a copy of Baron Tracy's report upon the petition of Robert Husher, who is to be executed next Saturday at Kingston, unless your Majesty order otherwise. . . ."

To which the Queen replies:—

Aug. 21.

"I have read Baron Tracy's report on the petition of Robert Husher, and do not think him a proper object of mercy.

I am,

Your very affectionate freind,

ANNE R."

1712, Sept. 25. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to the Queen.
"Madam,

The commission for building the 50 churches obliges me to give your Majesty this trouble, the time allowed by Act of Parliament being so near out, that there is a necessity for its passing by immediate Warrant. The Duke of Argyll pretends he stays for a pass, therefore have enclosed one, if your Majesty shall think fit to sign it. I am," &c.

1712, Oct. 10 and Oct. 13. Earl of Oxford to the Earl of Dartmouth. —In the latter he writes, "I intend to kiss your hands on Wednesday at Windsor. I shall bring with me an humble servant of yours (as all of my name ought to be) my cousin Harley, who will give you no disagreeable account of Hanover. I hope to have your company that night at supper."

1712, Nov. 4. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to the Queen. "I received last night a letter from Lord Lexington of the 28th Oct. N.S.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSB.

with the renunciation as agreed to by Spain (in as strong terms as your Majesty can desire) which I laid before the Committee this morning, and was directed to draw the enclosed answer, if your Majesty shall approve of it. My Lord has not sent a copy of his Memorial, but your Majesty will see by the answer what the chief points in dispute are, that of Sicily's going to the heirs male of the House of Savoy is a precaution seems necessary to prevent that Island's falling into the hands of France, the Duchess of Bourgogne being the eldest sister. My Lord Steward told me your Majesty ordered the Cabinet should not attend at Windsor till Sunday. I am," &c.

1712, Nov. 12. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to the Queen.
"Madam,

I received a letter from Lord Lexington last night dated the 6th Nov. N.S., to acquaint me the King of Spain had made the Renunciation the day before with great solemnity, but says he could not give the particulars till next post. The French envoy sent the enclosed account to his Court, which Mr. Torcy transmitted to Lord Treasurer. I am," &c.

1712, Nov. 17. Earl of Cardigan to the same.—On behalf of his chaplain Mr. Hackett, that he may have the prebend of Canterbury vacant by the death of Dr. Nickson.

EXTRACTS FROM MINUTES OF PRIVY COUNCIL TAKEN BY LORD
DARTMOUTH ON THE DUEL BETWEEN THE DUKE OF HAMILTON AND LORD MOHUN.

1712, Nov. 18. Cockpit.—Lord Keeper; Lord Chamberlain; Lord Steward; Lord Strafford; Lord Bolingbroke; Lord Treasurer; Lord President; Lord Lieutenant; Lord Dartmouth.

Mr. Lo, the coroner upon the Inquest taken upon the death of Duke Hamilton and Lord Mohun, called in, and his depositions taken upon that occasion read, the Attorney and Solicitor Generals present.

Reynolds and Nicholson both say Macartney called to them to bear witness he had done all he could to part them, but saw nothing done by him towards doing of it.

Sir Robert Rich and Joseph Churchill dined with Lord Mohun and Macartney at the Globe Tavern, and Macartney's man in a green livery waited upon them, which servant came to the "Baniough" (Bagnio), in Long Acre for Macartney's portmantle, and said Lord Mohun was killed and his master would be hanged if he were taken. Rice Williams, a servant of Lord Mohun's, called in, said he waited upon his Lord to a Master in Chancery where his Lord met Duke Hamilton, and heard his Lord say to the Duke upon his saying an old servant of Lord Mohun had neither truth nor honesty in him, his Lord said he had as much of both in him as his Grace; and they said more, but he did not hear what. He could not remember who dined with his Lord on Friday at the Globe tavern except Sir Robert Rich, and supped with him at the Queen's Arms except Col. Churchill, the Duke of Richmond, and Gen. Macartney.

The master of the Queen's Arms says he remembers Lord Mohun, the Duke of Richmond, and no more supped there on Friday, but he went away presently, and does not know anything more of them.

Mr. Thornhill, lawyer, called in, who was present on Thursday at the Master in Chancery when they fell out, says upon offering to read one Whitworth's evidence, who had been excused two years before for his age, upon which Duke Hamilton said he did not believe he would speak true, upon which Lord Mohun said as true as his Grace; that the Duke

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

came to his chambers on Thursday, and desired him to continue his care of his cause.

Remington, the coachman that carried Lord Mohun to Hyde Park, called in, says he took up Lord M. and Macartney, as he understands since he did not know Macartney then, says the seconds never fought as he saw, and the 2d Lords tell the thinks (sic) the Duke first and several ways (sic).

Morrice, a groom to Col. Gorge, that was present—he never saw the seconds fight tho' they all four drew at once, and were very nigh the two Lords. He thinks Duke Hamilton was first hurt, Lord Mohun making the first thrust, but Lord Mohun fell first, and Duke Hamilton upon him, and the second took him off; he saw the swords and the Lords were bloody, the others not. The coachman says the same.

Reynolds, keeper of the lodge, called in—says the seconds stood close by them, but he never saw them fight. Lord Mohun fell into the dell, and the Duke was upon one of his knees upon him, as he thinks, and the seconds stood over them. He says he took Duke Hamilton's sword and the 2 seconds', and one of the seconds' swords was bloody, but he cannot tell which, that one of the swords was a black one.

Nicholson called in—says all four drew their swords, Lord M. fell first and the Duke upon him, he never saw the seconds fight, he saw them move as the others did, and they were very near the Lords; that three of the swords were bloody, he took my Lord M.'s from him which he held very fast.

Harris, drawer at the Queen's Arms, called in—says the company on Friday night were the Duke of Richmond, Sir R. Rich, General Macartney, and Col. Joseph Churchill. My Lord Mohun and Sir R. Rich came first, and Sir R. Rich went away before supper.

Mr. Ferguson, gentleman of the horse to Duke Hamilton, called in—says the Duke told him just before he went out that he was going to vindicate his honour, but charged him not to speak of it, but fetch a surgeon to the Park. He went for Bushire (?) but could not find him, but carried his man, but as soon as he came Lord Mohun was dead, and the Duke dying chid him for crying, and bid him carry him to the lodge, but he told him no circumstances of the quarrel, or who it was with, but ordered him to ask no questions.

Hipsley, the Duke's porter, called in—says Mr. Macartney called very early on Friday morning; he said the Duke was gone out, and when he told the Duke he said if he had known it he would have seen him, but must go to Lord Bolingbroke, and if he came again to desire he would stay till he came; but he refused to stay, but said he would come again, but did not come till 4 in the afternoon, and then he spoke with the Duke; that Macartney called four times that day; that George Hill, the Duke's valet de chambre, waited upon him the morning he fought.

Brown, my Lord Mohun's valet de chambre, called in, said he was in the country with my Lady, and knew nothing of the matter.

Mr. Ame had nothing to say of his own knowledge, but that Lord Mohun lay at his house and Macartney on Friday night, and that Macartney's man came to his house and said the (white?) gentleman was killed and his master would be hanged, and owed him some wages, and therefore he would take his portmanteau.

Mr. Woodward, the surgeon that dressed Mr. Hamilton, called in—he was sent for by a gentleman to the Half Moon in Cheapside. He was cut through the shoe and stocking across the instep on the left foot, but he would not tell his name, that ordered him to meet him at the Rose somewhere, but he never heard of him since.

Ordered, that a warrant should be sent for Mrs. Beard, landlady to Mr. Macartney, that refuses to come without, and that Mr. Lewis should examine her.

HARLOT
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Nov. 21. Cockpit.—Lord Keeper; Lord Treasurer; Lord Lieutenant; Lord Steward; Lord President; Lord Bolingbroke; Lord Dartmouth.

Colonel Hamilton called in, and the Lord Keeper desired him to give an account of what passed in the duel, and that he might say nothing that could hurt himself desired him to confine himself to the transactions of Saturday and gave him the reasons why. Then Colonel Hamilton was sworn. He said the Duke sent a servant to him called Lessly at seven o'clock in the morning to get up and dress himself, and after the Duke came himself and sent word he stayed for him in his own coach below; but came up soon after and desired him to get ready, which he did immediately. And the Duke put on his shirt for him and hurried him down that he had not his sword with him, which the Duke took notice of, and bid his coachman stop and sent his servant with his keys, and look in such a closet he would find a black sword, which he brought and the Duke laid it upon the fore part of the coach and bid him drive towards Kensington. When he came to Hyde Park he saw a hackney coach upon the right hand, and said those were the gentlemen he must speak with, got out and crossed the ditch and ordered the coach to drive on to Kensington Gate. They went up to the lodge, went through the house and asked the hackney coachman where the gentlemen were whom he brought. He answered they were walking a little further; and they went on till they met Lord Mohun, whom he never saw before, and Mr. Macartney; and the Duke cried "My Lord, have I come time enough?" and Macartney answered "Time enough." Then Lord Mohun jumped the ditch, Macartney after him. The Duke pulled off his cloak, and he and the Duke followed them. The Duke said to Mr. Macartney "Let the event of this be what it will, you are the occasion of it." My Lord Mohun said "My Lord Duke, these two gentlemen shall have nothing to do"; and Macartney answered the Duke "I had a commission for it". Then Macartney said "we will take our shares," to which the Duke answered "Here's my friend, he will take his share in my dance." Then they drew and Macartney's sword was out as soon as the Lords and pushed immediately at Mr. Hamilton, who beat down his sword which hurt his leg and then closed with him and secured his sword, and looked back and saw the two Lords upon the ground; upon which he wrested the sword out of his hand and took both swords with him and went . . . to help Duke Hamilton whom he found upon Lord Mohun. He laid the two swords by and laid hold of the Duke with both hands. He heard Lord Mohun say "I am killed"; and when he had the Duke in his arms he asked him how he was, seeing him all blood. The Duke made no answer, and he saw Macartney with a sword, he can not tell what sword made a push at the Duke. He opened his breast and saw no blood, asked him again how he did; he answered "I am wounded," upon which he took up his own sword in case Macartney should have made another attempt upon them. He led the Duke to a tree where he sunk down and called for his coach. Then one Mr. Ferguson, a servant of his, whom Mr. Hamilton never saw before, he asked him for his coat, and Ferguson said "I have a surgeon here," and went to fetch him from the house. As soon as he came he opened his coat and found a wound upon his left breast which never bled, tho' it was a large orifice which he took to be the wound given him by Macartney. He thought when he saw Macartney push at the Duke it had been at him, and asked him what he meant, but he made no answer but got away, and then he helped the Duke into the coach. He says he saw a man in a red coat lined with blue whom he sent for the Duke's coach, and gave him some money. There were several people by who all assisted Lord Mohun and helped him into the coach but took no notice of the Duke but left him alone with him, and nobody came to them till Mr. Ferguson and the surgeon. He says the Duke and Lord Mohun had both their swords in their right hands when he came up to them, and held them very fast.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Nov. 21. Cockpit.

Ordered that if Mr. Hamilton surrenders himself to me [Lord Dartmouth] I should take him in custody of a messenger and keep him till the Lords determine what shall be done with him.

Nov. 23. Windsor.

Ordered that Col. Hamilton should be committed to Newgate, and that there should be a Proclamation for apprehending Mr. Macartney.

Nov. 26. Cockpit.

Roberts, the chairman that saw Mr. Macartney at the Duke of Richmond's house yesterday, called in—says he carried Mr. Rowley from Brownlow Street to the Duke's house, and saw Macartney between 12 and 1 upon the staircase. A man in the Duke's livery was talking to him, and Macartney's face was towards him. That he told one Mr. Clark, that he met at an ale-house, he had seen him, which man brought him hither to day to give an account of it.

Mr. Tristran Butler called in—said he heard the chairman say he had seen Mr. Macartney, but he never spoke of it to anybody else; that his name is not Clarke but Butler.

Ordered, that a warrant should be drawn for searching the Duke of Richmond's house.

Ordered, that a letter should be sent to the Duke of Richmond to attend the Lords at the Cockpit immediately upon matters of great consequence; that the Duke of Ormonde should send a party of the foot guards to assist the messengers.

The Duke of Richmond called in—said he had received a letter from me, but did not know what the meaning of it was. He was told there had been an information upon oath that Mr. Macartney was seen at his house yesterday. He said that he believed was not the only false oath which had been taken on this occasion. He desired to know whether he was to be examined. Lord Keeper told him no, because, he said, if he had he should have refused, tho' he would tell their Lordships Mr. Macartney was not at his house yesterday, but had been the day of the duel, and that he brought him to it, and he had staid till Sunday 2 o'clock; but he hoped he was safe now. The Lords told him they thought themselves obliged to have his house searched, but in civility to him they would not have it done till he was acquainted with it, though they had set a guard upon it before he said all the doors should be open.

Mr. Lewis ordered to wait upon Lady Newburgh and acquaint her there was no design to give her any disturbance; and order the house to be searched (sic.)

1712, Nov. 20. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to the Queen.
“Madam,

The postboy from Dunkirk had his horse and mail taken from him last night near Deptford, some of the letters were found this morning in a field with the covers of others. Mr. Drift writes from Paris that the mail had been robbed between Amiens and Abbeville, but most of the letters recovered which came from Spain, and were the same taken here. Lord Bolingbroke will acquaint your Majesty with a letter M. Torcy has sent him, and the Duke of Ormonde has given me three examinations taken before the Lord Chief Justice Cox in Ireland, that mention some ill designs against your Majesty's person they expected should have taken effect upon the 10th of this month, which is the more to be regarded for agreeing with the account from Switzerland.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

I am," &c.

1712-13. Jan. 29.—The Duchess of Marlborough to the Earl of Dartmouth. Asks for a pass abroad, that she may go to the Duke.

1712-13, Mar. 12.—Earl of Radnor to the same. On behalf of Col. Charles Dowglass, who desires to be Governor of one of the Plantations in the West Indies.

1713, Mar. 25.—R. W. to the Earl of Oxford, York Buildings. Sends printed copy of "scandalous and treasonable paper" called the British Ambassadors's Speech to the French King which is being dispersed by one Robins a shoemaker in Bell Yard near Temple Bar.

1713, April 4. The Earl of Oxford to the Earl of Dartmouth. Has ordered the Attorney and Solicitor (sic) to come to the Treasury, and the Commissioners of the Customs, on Tuesday next concerning the commerce now upon the Peace. Should be glad if Mr. Moore were allowed to see the treaty which came from Spain, in order to prepare matters relating to the Assiento and Spanish commerce.

1713, April 22 and May 2.—The Earl of Cardigan again writes on behalf of his chaplain.

1713, May 4.—The Earl of Oxford to the Earl of Dartmouth. Sends enclosed the Proclamation for the Peace. Desires him to write to the Duke of Ormonde, High Steward of Westminster, to send to his officers to attend the Proclamation at eleven to-morrow at St. James's Gate. Heartily congratulates his Lordship that a war which was proclaimed May 4, 1689, is ended May 4, 1713.

1713, May 15, Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to the Queen.
"Madam,

Since I came to the office I have looked in the New Testament and find the verse your Majesty objects to is the 10th, and the Archbishop proposes to end with the 9th. The words are "Blessed are the Peacemakers for they shall be called the children of God," which seems a very proper conclusion upon that occasion. I am," &c.

1713, [June 17?]-Wednesday night past eleven. The Earl of Oxford to the Earl of Dartmouth. Is just come home where he meets with certain notice of very rough words passed this day at the trial between Duke of Bucks and Lord Conway; and is satisfied a challenge is sent to meet to-morrow. It is too late to receive the Queen's particular orders, so prays him to secure both.

1713, July 8.—The Earl of Dartmouth to the Queen.
"Madam,

My Lord Portland has sent me word that he received his money yesterday of Lord Ashburnham, therefore shall wait upon your Majesty with the commission to-morrow. I hear the Bishop of Rochester looks upon it as a great misfortune to him that the Bishop of London did not depart a little sooner. I am," &c.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

1718. July 10.—Jamaica. A. Hamilton to the Earl of Dartmouth. Has received his Lordship's in favour of Mr. Peter Beckford, but complains of the opposition and obstruction he has been giving to the government there.

1718, July 15.—The Earl of Dartmouth to the Queen.

"Madam,

I humbly beg leave to propose to your Majesty whether it were not better these words were left out.

"For which I have ventured so much and with so great success, as obliges me to return thanks first to Heaven and next to the affection of my people."

There seems to me to be no occasion for them. Thanking Heaven is a poetical expression, and I believe never used from the throne before. "Thanks to the affection of my people" is not good English. Besides it will make the speech shorter, which would not be worse; but if this is not your Majesty's own opinion, I beg it may go no further, and that you will pardon the presumption of him who is with the greatest respect and submission," &c.

1713, July 20.—Jamaica. John Peeke to the Earl of Dartmouth. Reminds his Lordship of his kindness, when a Commissioner for Trade, in procuring the writer's promotion to the Council there; and of their acquaintance at King's College, Cambridge. Congratulates him on his new dignities, and hopes he may be privileged to write to him with some freedom touching the affairs of the Island.

1713, July 20. Somerset house.—The Earl of Clarendon to the same. Asks what directions have been giving concerning one Corbett who was condemned last sessions.

1713, July 29.—Lord Berkeley of Stratton to the same. Asks concerning the medals given by the Queen, being informed that Lord Dartmouth had his.

1713, July 30.—Richmond. Same to same. Thanks Lord Dartmouth for the care he had taken of the medal, being afraid of a trick from the under officers of the cofferer. One is inclined to be more suspicious and ill natured as one grows older, but he finds it makes no alteration in the esteem he has long had for his lordship.

1713, Aug. 1.—The Earl of Cardigan to the same. The living of Southam in Warwickshire now reported vacant by Lord Willoughby's promotion to the Bishopric of Bristol, the writer requests may be given to his chaplain Mr. Hackett, a bachelor of divinity and fellow of Trinity College in that University his Lordship does so much honour to.

1713, Aug. 5.—Chief Justice Sir Thomas Parker to the same. Gives a state of the case of William Partridge, and is of opinion that he is not a proper object of mercy. Partridge had formerly committed a felony and had been burnt in the hand. Since then he and another had made it their business to steal cows in Essex and sell them in Hertfordshire, for which they were now convicted.

1713, Aug. 8.—The Country. Jonathan Swift to the Earl of Dartmouth.

"My Lord,

The way I take of shewing my duty and gratitude to those I owe most of both, is by troubling them as seldom as I can. This made me hitherto contradict the violent inclinations I had to write to your Lordship, which now I can resist no longer, especially since I begin to hold up my head after a long disorder it has suffered by the ill life I led and the ill company I kept among you. And I am not altogether in jest, for God knows I kept some very ill company every Saturday, worse than any of my neighbouring Justices here; but I hope that will be mended at my return. And now my Lord you are to know that I will not obey your commands of waiting on you in Staffordshire in my way to London; neither do I think it seasonable or safe for me to be on that side of the Channel while you are on this side the Thames. Your Lordship who has the honor to be one of my Brother Cowards (as you know who calls four of us) will pardon me if my heart begins to ache when I look about at Court and cannot find you. Therefore pray give timely warning to Mr. Lewis and me, that he may trot down to Wales, and I gallop to Holyhead. But my Lord, we the common People, who have the care of your preferment, are resolved not to take away the Seals from you, till we have given you another, much more easy and honourable, though perhaps not altogether so rich. And I who am much older than your Lordship, can assure you, that whenever you change your station your enemies will be able to produce very few examples in the memory of man, of a Minister who has served with so much honor and integrity. My Lord I am preparing my self to come over and demand the dinner you owe me, and hope to find your Lordship in your Turret at Windsor. In the mean time I desire you to believe that I am with the greatest respect and truth, &c.

J. SWIFT."

Another letter, undated, but probably written in January 1713 from the same, runs thus :

"My Lord,

I am writing almost in the dark in my Lady Dutchess of Hamilton's Bedchamber. Her Grace is on one side, and my Lady Oglethorp on the other. The latter commands me to write to your Lordship, and to entreat that you would hasten her daughter's pass, the maid being to go away at two a clock to-day, and her daughter to-morrow with the Dutchess of Shrewsbury. Therefore I desire to use my little credit with your Lordship to do what my Lady Oglethorp desires, that the pass may be signed as soon as possible, by which I find she means by two a clock to-day.

I am with the greatest respect, &c.,

J. SWIFT."

Saturday noon.

1713, Aug. 13. Court at Windsor.—Order of Council for the Earl of Dartmouth to be Lord Privy Seal.

1713, Sept. 5. Paris.—Matthew Prior to the Earl of Dartmouth. Will afford Mrs. Anne Jevon (?) all the assistance he can in her claim. Congratulates his Lordship on the great employment her Majesty has been pleased to give him.

Newsletters from Whitehall to Lord Dartmouth at Sandwell, unsigned, but written by his secretary, Erasmus Lewis.

1713, Sept. 8.—"I was told at Windsor that Lord Ilay made all possible advances, I was going to say submissions but recollected myself in good time. Nothing, however, could prevail with Lord Treasurer to promise him he would give a helping hand to bring him into Parliament. Lord Harley is to be at court this day se'nnight when the compliment is made he will be declared something or other of Newcastle. The Bishop of London is angry that he lost C. P. S., and puts a long dash after his name, instead of the three capitals. Dr. Smallridge and Lord Willoughby not pleased.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Sept. 10.—I was told that Lord Finlater was this morning declared Chancellor of Scotland, and Lord Mar, third Secretary of State. The last I am pretty sure is true, but I am not certain of the first. These things make Lord Bol—— stare.

Sept. 12.—Lord Mar expects to be Secretary of State in as full a manner as the Duke of Queensberry was, excepting only that he is not to divide with us, for which the Signet in Scotland will now be a good equivalent, but Lord Bolingbroke and the Secretary understand he is to have the same Commission that he had once before himself when he continued Secretary for some time after the Union. The Duke of Ormonde has received notice that he is to lose his Government of Ireland, and has already acquainted the Lords Justices with it. The Bishop of Rochester's son Mr. Sprat, is to have the Prebend of Westminster. The Dean of St. Patrick's is your humble servant.

Sept. 15.—The Duke of Shrewsbury declared Lord Lieutenant last Sunday by the Queen, who expressed herself thus—the Duke of Ormonde having served me in the Government of Ireland the usual time I have thought fit to appoint the Duke of Shrewsbury to succeed him. It is not impossible but the Secretary and Chancellor of Scotland may be unmade again, if so 'twill cost dear, for they must be paid double, part for the place, and part for the dishonour. Sir John Stanley succeeds Mr. Southwell. I was chosen at Lostwithiel without opposition last Wednesday. Lord Harley was to be at Windsor to-day in Lord Steward's apartment, but sure he won't leave Lady Harriot at Datchet.

Sept. 17.—Lord Portmore is to be brought in instead of Lord Ilay. Some think the Duke of Marlborough will be made Governor of the Netherlands.

Sept. 19.—The Scots are very angry that Lord Portmore is to be of the number of the elect. They say he is not of their ancient race, and that he was born in Holland and never naturalised. The Bishop of London's letters of revocation will be sent him next post, for it is impossible he and Lord Stafford can be in the same town, much less in the same councils together.

Sept. 24.—The Scotch paper was printed in view of throwing Mr. Lockhart out of the Parliament. Your Lordship will see the honour done to Lord Bingley's skill in architecture, for the Dutch Gazettes say he is to have the care of seeing Whitehall rebuilt. Lord Dartmouth's kinswoman Lady Lansdowne is come to live at Whitehall with six and thirty servants.

Sept. 26.—Harry Worseley succeeds Mr. Delaval at Lisbon, but not with the same appointments. The new Lord Lieutenant seems to have formed a scheme for making both parties easy under his Government; the conclusion of such projects generally is that neither party is pleased. His Grace it is hoped will have better success, the Whigs have already offered to capitulate with him if Lord Chancellor Phipps be recalled, but the Tories say they will sooner part with their new Governor.

Oct. 1.—I can't tell whom Lord Mar can mean [see his letter of Sept. 21] unless it be Lord B——, but be it who it will his Lordship has not much reason to complain since he is now in the enjoyment of ten thousand pounds a year. There is a Privy Council to day at Windsor about the Irish affairs, but Lord Treasurer is not well eno' to be there. In a post or two I hope to send the Earl of Strafford's letter, but I can't ask Lord Treasurer for it till he is quite well; in the mean time Lord Strafford will not expect an answer, for he is in retreat and will by no means submit to act by virtue of the old commission wherein the Bishop is named first, though the Bishop is actually recalled, for he insists upon a new commission wherein he alone is named. The last instructions about the Treaty of Commerce with Spain will be sent away to-morrow. I find by all the pamphlets they give up the distinction of Whig and Tory, and bend all their thoughts to make new distinction between the Tories themselves, as Hanover Tory and Pretender's Tory, English Tory and French Tory, for trade or against it," &c.

1713, Sept. 21.* Stamford.—The Earl of Mar to the Earl of Dartmouth. On his way to Scotland for the election. Some of his friends have not shown themselves altogether such, and have not acted so ingenuously by him as he might have expected, but he will have a story to tell Lord Dartmouth about that when he sees him. Lord Bingley is in the country, pulling down the other half of his new house, he supposes, &c.

1713, Oct. 2.—The Earl of Oxford to the Earl of Dartmouth. Give me leave to tell your Lordship how obliging you are. The Church designed that a wife should be for better for worse, in sickness and in health. I have had experience of your friendship to me in all estates Our friend Lewis asked for Lord Strafford's letter, which I have put into his hands. I thought a good while that the best reproof was silence, but since his Excellency will not be contented with that, I have by this post told him I concur with everybody else to think he had better let the dispute alone, if he had been in the right, as he is not, for he must not pretend to oblige the Queen to alter her credentials. We are at last in earnest demolishing Dunkirk, and our young politicians will find by this day's letters from France, that they do not know quite so much as they fancy to themselves. My wife and Lady Henrietta found themselves extremely obliged to Lady Dartmouth at Windsor," &c.

1713, Oct. 4. Lisbon.—Delavale to the Earl of Dartmouth. . . Has never observed any good consequences from her Majesty's great bounty and goodness to the Morocco Ministers, nor any bad from the neglect of them. Cardinash who was the first that came to the Queen had the appointments given to English Envoys, his travelling charges by land and sea, and considerable presents at his departure. The Emperor demanded all this back from him and in the end tormented him very cruelly, took from him his patrimonial estate and left him a beggar. The next that came was Joseph Dias, a slave taken in a Spanish boat, who had a similar allowance and nothing given him when he went away. He pretended to complain of his being imprisoned by the Queen's order on account of the writer's being at Tetuan; but no account was made of him and he is at his work again. Her Majesty will have a minister from Morocco so long as anything is given, tho' never so small, and no longer. Death has removed two persons of late, which the writer hopes will produce considerable advantage to her Majesty's affairs, Benaisha the Admiral of Salley and the Alcaid of Alcaassar. The former was a mortal enemy to the Slaves, especially the English, and was a most particular instance of Moorish ingratitude, being sent home by King Charles II. without ransom, and with very considerable presents. The latter was not naturally our enemy, but the uncertainty of his temper rendered him incapable of doing us service. His son who succeeds him is a more practicable man.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1713, Feb. 17. Boston, New England.—Fr. Nicholson to the Earl of Dartmouth. Is now examining Colonel Vetch, late Governor of Annapolis Royal, charged with arbitrary and illegal proceeding. Sends a copy of his letter of Dec. 14 last, in which he complained that there were sent over to Boston and other places all the traitorous, factious, and ill-natured pamphlets of all sorts, and industriously spread abroad among the people; and suggested that a good number of loyal prints should be sent over for distribution to undeceive the people.

1714, April 4.—The Earl of Oxford to the Earl of Dartmouth. "I am heartily concern'd your Lordship could imagine me capable of altering towards your Lordship. You have had your share of the impertinent humor of some people, though I believe at that time I was chiefly aim'd at. I hope before long to have an opportunity to make them know themselves."

1714, April 6.—George Vernon to the same.—Requests a recommendation to the Lord Treasurer. They are assured in the House of Commons that there will suddenly be many removes made of persons now in employment. Desires a commissionership of Excise.

1714, April 17.—Lord Digby to the same. The town of Birmingham, being unable to finish their new church, have thoughts of petitioning for the Queen's Bounty; but cannot think of doing so with applying first to their near neighbour, Lord Dartmouth, for his advice and assistance, which the writer has undertaken on their behalf.

1714, April 23. Boston.—Fr. Nicholson to the same. Recommends Sir Charles Hobby, the bearer, to Lord Dartmouth's protection; he commanded one of the New England regiments at the taking of Annapolis Royal. Repeats his charges against Colonel Samuel Vetch, who had scandalously run away from Boston when he should have stayed to make up his accounts, &c.

1714, Aug. 4.—The Earl of Dartmouth to King George I.
"Sir,

I should not presume to trouble your Majesty with my humble congratulations upon your happy accession to the Crown, if the station I am in by the favour of the late Queen did not make it my duty in particular to assure your Majesty that no subject in your dominions does more sincerely rejoice at the zeal and unanimity that has been expressed by all sorts of people for securing your Majesty's succession. The little I could contribute upon that occasion has not been wanting, nor shall I ever omit any opportunity to demonstrate that I am with the most profound submission and respect," &c.

1714, Aug. 5. Arlington Street.—Baron Bothmer to the Earl of Dartmouth. Acknowledges the above letter.

1714, Aug. 12.—The Earl of Oxford to the Earl of Dartmouth. "You are so taken up with administering affairs, and attending your Royalty, that I cannot get a moment to converse with my dearest Lord, and thank him for his last favours. I have seriously thought upon our Saturday night's conversation. This day was the first that I could have free discourse with Lord Treasurer. I will not take a step, but in conjunction with your Lordship, Duke of Ormonde, and Lord Treasurer. I have something to propose to your Lordship upon that head, and shall be glad either at the House of Lords or elsewhere to have one quarter of an hour with you.

1714, Aug. 18.—The Earl of Oxford to the Earl of Dartmouth. "It is in Lincoln's Inn Fields where your children will have the honor of your company, and your humble servant meets you."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Attached to this are the following rhymes in Lord Oxford's hand—

And for those who did conspire
For to bring in James Esquire
Now hope to be sav'd by their own Bonfire
Doctors agree they are never the higher.

Teste Jonathan.

1714, [End of August.]—Same to the Same.

Friday night.

"My Dearest Lord,

Your conversation the other evening had that impression which your good sense and kindness ought to make; the more I turn it in my thoughts the clearer it appears to me, and every reflection I make brings new light to your plan, as accidents and circumstances which hourly come to one's knowledge serve for demonstration.

It is plain that the following particulars cannot be denied, are, as one may say, self evident.

1. The King's unacquaintedness, and partial information, (were he a Solomon) cannot make a plan of an established consistent Government or Administration.

2. Neither party of the two denominations (Whig and Tory) separately can form any such as is practicable.

3. Neither have any amongst them credit enough or perhaps sufficient spirit to form such a settlement.

4. It is therefore plain there must be an understanding formed between those who wish a settlement in England capable of bringing the aforesaid desired end to pass.

Every body seems to be prepared for it, both sides despair separately, now is the opportunity to strike in and my dear Lord's healing hand must apply the remedy: I can assure you there is a great preparation and disposition everywhere. You see how free I am upon the encouragement you gave me, and I have not lost time in cultivating the thoughts your Lordship inspired me with, without any remark or suspicion. But time is precious.

I asked Mr. Secretary Bromley by chance to dine with me en famille to morrow being Saturday; if nothing hinders your Lordship you will oblige by coming, who am entirely yours."

1714, Sept. 28.—Viscount Townshend to the same. Replies to an application for 645*l.* arrears due to Lord Dartmouth as Lord Privy Seal, that he has not had an opportunity of mentioning the matter to his brother Walpole. There is not at present any money in the Exchequer applicable to the payment of the Queen's debts, but the amount shall be paid out of the first that comes in.

1714, Sept. 28. The Hague.—The Earl of Strafford to the same. The King has given him an obliging and favourable reception, and several patient audiences. His Majesty will be torn to pieces for places when he arrives in England, so the writer fears he may be forgotten in the crowd and hurry, unless some one mentions him.

1714-5, March 1. Brampton Castle.—The Earl of Oxford to the same. "I owe to the perfect friendship which your Lordship has honoured me with an account of myself since I saw you in London. The next day I went into Cambridgeshire where I stayed until the day before the

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Coronation, and was preparing to retire to this place, when I was seized within four days by a most violent stranguary, which was followed with rheumatic pains in my limbs, and the necessity of removing my Library obliging me to go out too soon, I relapsed, which kept me in London until the latter end of January. I trouble your Lordship with this impertinent account of myself, as the reason I have not sooner troubled you with my letters. Our elections in these parts are over, and all the threats and arts could make no impression in all Herefordshire. But for Radnorshire and other places as all over it would need a volume as (Fox's) Martyrs to express what has passed. In the county of Radnor two are already dead of their wounds, being set upon coming from the election without the least provocation. I suppose this is pursuant to the worthy advice of Burnet whose book desires that all whom he calls the passive party may be ordered to sell their estates and depart the land; and I hope this will be esteemed very moderate."

1715, October 3. Charterhouse.—Dr. John King to the same. Asks his lordship's support in his candidature for the mastership of the Charterhouse, vacant by Dr. Burnett's death. Has served (in the office next under him) as Preacher for about 20 years. The master was buried this night.

There are five or six other letters from Dr. King on the same subject, the last being dated Nov. 10.

1715, Oct. 15.—Dr. Geo. Stanhope to the same. On behalf of Mr. Harris, Chaplain to the Duke of Argyll, a candidate for the Mastership of the Charterhouse. Mentions Sir Richard Steele as another competitor, who might get Crown influence in his favour.

1715, Nov. 5 and 6.—Letters from John, Bishop of London, the Earl of Clarendon, and Lord Guilford, recommending Dr. King.

1716. April 27. Tower.—The Earl of Oxford to the Earl of Dartmouth.

"When I wrote my best your Lordship justly complained of its badness, but now it will need much apology to trouble you with my own writing when I can scarce force my hand to hold a pen longer than the writing of four lines at a time.

But the subject I am going to write on being not fit for any one's hand but my own, I presume upon your Lordship's known friendship to receive my thoughts in so bad a scrawl. I know you would do me any act of friendship and kindness. What I shall mention is not only personal to myself, but it carries with it the concern of common justice due to mankind by the law of humanity, and to Englishmen by the constitution. The credit of the present House of Commons as accusers and prosecutors, the justice of the House of Lords as judges, and the honor of his Majesty, for whose succession I have done so much (as the King knows), and suffered what the world sees. These motives encourage me to write to your Lordship on this subject, and because I would be glad (if your Lordship have no objection) that my Lord Townshend may be acquainted with what follows, and the rather from your Lordship because you know upon how many particular occasions I exerted myself to hinder severities, and that I occasioned reflections upon myself by interposing to moderate the heat of others.

All this a preface to let me in to acquaint your Lordship that common fame brings me the report of an Act of Indemnity to be brought in, and that some warm persons design an express exception of me out of it. If this rumour be without any foundation, then I have only your Lordship's pardon to ask for this needless trouble. But should there be any such project I cannot be too quick in using my best endeavours against that which will have so sudden a passage and must in its nature be an act of condemnation of me to (perhaps) perpetual imprisonment, and leave me without remedy either for my liberty, or what is the dearest thing to me, my reputation.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Can it be taken amiss that I do my utmost to ward against such a fatal stroke ?

After having waited above nine months under an imprisonment attended with severe sickness and exorbitant charges, without giving the least interruption to the affairs of the House of Commons, or hearkening to the insinuation of some who would fain embroil the ministers by my trial— And when the House of Commons have thought fit to begin so ample an Act for Indemnity for real crimes, must I be condemned unheard by an Act of the Crown (who formerly were the fountain and authors of acts of grace) must this I say be done to me for crimes of the first impression, & unproved ?

Can the House of Peers, who are my judges, refuse my petition, or refuse to hear me ? Is it agreeable to common justice to punish me by an exception, which is really an Act of Attainder as to my liberty, because my judges and my accusers did not in a year's time think fit to try me.

Had I put off my trial, had I absconded, had I tampered with witnesses, were the facts I am accused of such as did relate to any hazard of the State, I ought immediately be brought to answer ; but to be destroyed by a side wind has something wants a parallel. I have a very great stock of patience, but when there appears to be no end of my sufferings, and neither measure nor modesty observed in the undeserved reproaches I am loaded with, I owe it to my self, to my family, and to the liberties of my country as an Englishman, to attempt a vindication.

I was forced out of my country retirement, for which I had prepared my self from the time of the Queen's death, and I have lain quiet here thus long in the assurances of my innocency, in hopes of a proper opportunity to make it clear to the world ; and it will be strange that I should now be forced to defend myself against an unexampled method of confinement. Yet this exception carries something further, for it prejudices my cause (on which issue is joined) unheard ; for such an exception in an act of Parliament must not only blacken me to the world in general, but will tend at least to warp the inclinations of my judges hereafter. Having mentioned thus hastily these few considerations amongst many others relating to the two Houses, I cannot but take notice that his Majesty, from whom such an act and exception must originally rise is concerned in honor and justice to have this affair truly and fully stated to him, before he consents to have such hardship attempted. If the King should not think fit to let me have any share in his mercy, I submit, but an exception in my case is a condemnation, a leading the way to a further sentence.

I will not mention my services to his Majesty and his family. The proofs of them are strong and uncontestable, the King knows them, the world knows them ; a recital of them may be called an exprobation ; and I never aimed at more than under that family to enjoy the common liberties of my country. But on the other hand it will be hard if my zeal for the Protestant succession is to mark me out for a sacrifice ; and though I have never used it as a plea of merit I must be excused if I produce everything I can in my own defence."

Attached to the above is a short note from the same, dated " Friday night, April 27, 1716," which runs :—

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

"I have sent your Lordship a letter which I entirely commit to your Lordship's disposal when you have perused it. I wrote it in one run of thought, but I was forced to let my weak hand often take breath, to recover strength to go on.

I have endeavoured to couch it so as to avoid any expression which might give offence.

I am ever yours, and your whole family's, most devotedly and entirely."

1716, June 19. London.—Edward Southwell to the same, at Sandwell. "We are like to have a busy week by the closing of the long Sessions, the settling our future government, and his Majesty's great impatience not to lose the present season of the waters. His Royal Highness proposes to be very active and obliging to all mankind, to make some progresses, and to efface those evil impressions which disaffected people have spread to his disadvantage in the country."

1716, July 5. [Tower.]—The Earl of Oxford to the same. Congratulates him on an increase of his family, and thank him for the mark of his friendship in being admitted godfather to his son.

1716, July 17. "In the 2^d year of our taking this Castle" [the Tower]. Same to the same. Thinks the Lord of the Nunnery at Cheshunt (Lord Bingley) has forgotten to deliver the above letter, and repeats its contents adding "My father was a hearty and sincere servant of your father's, and sent to offer his service to be his bail. I pray God this new comer may inherit all the virtues, good fortune, and the longevity of any of his ancestors."

1716, Nov. 29. [Tower.] — Same to the Same. "Being afraid that your Lordship should forget there is such a place in the world as London, and fancy that Birmingham in your neighbourhood is the biggest city, (at least) in England, and this is not unlikely, for there are those who determine that Bremen, &c. are better sea ports than any in Britain. To prevent therefore your Lordship being entirely pervaded (to use your own university word) by such a forgetfulness, this is to tell you there is such a place as London, and that even the owner of Cheshunt Nunnery [Lord Bingley] is retired to London. If your Lordship is inclined to see whether I tell you true, you will prevent a summons after the eight of January. What the weather will then prove, the Almanacks for next year not being yet published, I cannot tell. It is certain Partridge's predictions for this month prove true, for there is a book publicly sold containing the most spiteful and abominable characters of some very great men who were in this Government at first, and this declare that an undoubted zeal for the Protestant succession in some men would not render them otherwise than incompatible in the Administration and a dead weight against the common interest.

And now having given your Lordship a quotation of my this day's reading, I beseech you to believe me," &c.

"[P.S.] I find amongst my MSS., Robert Legg, Esq., Treasurer of our Gallies, temp. Henry 8. Have you anything about him at Sandwell? What I quote is from the original."

1717, May 9. [Tower.]—The same to same. "If it will be agreeable for your Lordship's affairs Sunday a quarter after twelve the Gates are open, and we may have two hours to go over my petition and the precedents before any one comes."

1717, June 10. [Tower.]—The same to same. "Last night I was surprised with an attempt at a negotiation. Your humble servant was categorical in his answers, and to their grief not to be altered. It is convenient your Lordship should have an account of this at large, either to yourself or to our common friend, by discourse. Wednesday will determine (according to the present system) the liberty of more than one."

1717, June 11. Tuesday night. [Tower.]—The same to the same. "I found the paper as soon as your Lordship was gone, the words are as follow:—

"D. thinks it very dangerous for him to meddle or interpose any way whatsoever in this present point; for the event will be most certainly to make one party his bitter enemies, without making one single friend amongst the others, and so he shall inevitably be crushed between both."

Pray destroy this.

My Lord,

I cannot tell what to say more than what we talked this morning. A few days more or less is but a small matter to one who has continued so long a prisoner; but displeasing my friends is a great matter. Therefore I do entirely refer myself to their judgment, and I believe it is impossible for them to determine until they talk with one another and feel the temper of the House.

I desire no better judgment than yours, nor a truer friend than your self."

1717, Aug. 26 and Nov. 17.—The same to the same. Two friendly and cheerful letters written after his release from the Tower.

1718, Oct. 27. Westminster.—John, Bishop of London to the same. Recommends one Mr. King, half brother to the worthy Master of the Charterhouse, for a living in the gift of the Governors.

1718, Nov. 4. Stainborough.—The Earl of Strafford to the same. Also recommends one Doctor King to the Charterhouse living of Norton in Essex. Is plagued, like Lord Dartmouth, to be in town at the opening of the Sessions, but shall continue his resolution of staying at home pour planter des choux.

1719. June 24, June 26, July 22, July 24, and July 31.—Lord Guernsey writes from Albury describing the illness of his father, the Earl of Aylesford, and his death in the night of July 23.

[1720. Aug. ?]. Lord Bingley [unsigned] to the Earl of Dartmouth. "The fall of the South Sea stock seems to give an opportunity of coming in to advantage, even now when the price is so high, because the stock is still much higher in people's opinions, and opinion is the thing will raise it. Therefore if your Lordship continues in the desire of being an adventurer I believe this is the time of making preparation for it. I told Lady Cardigan yesterday, when I was consulted, that Company had got the philosopher's stone, and any lady that touched her dressing plate silver there it was immediately changed to gold; besides, that diamonds that are lodged there grow."

1720, Aug. 23, and Sept. 6.—Henry Weston to the same. About the purchase of South Sea stock.

1720, Sept. 8, and three undated letters.—Lord Bingley to the same. On the same subject.

1720, Oct. 1.—Henry Weston to the same. Could he have given any satisfactory account of the South Sea stock he should not have lost the pleasure of communicating it. The stock fell down on Thursday night to 170, on Friday morning at the Books was 180, but rose before night to 320. Many of the most eminent Bankers had stopped payment, and there was a still continued run on the Bank. Lord Bingley thought the danger was over, that the Bank would be able to support herself, and that the ship would be able to go to sea again; but for the writer's part he might as well have been drowned, as most of his goods had been thrown overboard. Lady Aylesford had once made very considerable profit, but was now under the same circumstances. Colonel Lumley, who bought part of Lord Dartmouth's third subscription, had absconded. There are very few gainers besides the Directors, who are treated like betrayers of their country and insulted wherever they go; Sir John Blunt had narrowly escaped being shot on Tuesday night. The loss would fall chiefly on the persons of quality and estates, and on officers of the army.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1720, Dec. 10. Cotesmore.—W. Leveson Gower desires Lord Dartmouth's support of himself as a candidate for Staffordshire.

1720-1, Jan. 9. London.—Lord Bathurst to the Earl of Dartmouth. About Mr. Secretary Craggs' purchase of the lease to a Mr. Allen by Lord and Lady Jersey of the house and grounds at Squerries.

1720-1, Jan. 9. Cockpit.—J. Craggs writes on the same subject.

1720-1, Feb. 18.—Henry Weston to the same. On South Sea stock. Lord Stanhope was buried yesterday in Kent as a General officer, the horse and foot guards attending the procession through the City, with the King's and Prince's and most of the nobility's coaches. It is said Mr. Methuen will succeed Mr. Craggs. The Commons were this day in a Committee on the South Sea Bill. Mr. Walpole moved that a clause might be added that the estates and effects of all the South Sea directors might be confiscated and applied to the repairing the losses of that Company, which was agreed to.

1721-2, Jan. 23.—Earl of Aylesford to the same. Is desired by Lord Dartmouth's friend and fellow traveller Sir Thomas Twysden to beg his lordship to order his steward at Blackheath to speak to the freeholders at Lewisham to be for him (Twysden) and Sir Edward Knatchbull in the Kent election. The Whigs are fallen out, which gives them greater hopes. As for Parliament affairs, the Tories go on to state questions, and lose them, their number seldom amounting to more than 22.

1721-2, Jan. 30. Lewisham.—Dr. George Stanhope to the same. On election matters in Kent. Had sent messages to his friends in Deptford on behalf of Sir Thomas Twysden.

1721-2, Mar. 2. Orchard Wyndham.—Sir William Wyndham to the same. Is sorry to have been prevented by the perfidiousness of a little fellow in that country from helping Mr. Lewis.

1722, Mar. 27.—The Earl of Strafford to the same. I wish you joy of disposing so well of Lord Lewisham, who will become a sort of countryman of mine, tho' I doubt the fine place you are making for him will not let him think of inhabiting our northern hills. I have a design on you which is an honour I have had in view at the birth of every child, but as they proved daughters I reserved that honour for my first son, that he may value such a godfather and strive to imitate his great and good qualities. I design the christening to be Thursday sennight. In a day or day I shall be going out of town to assist Charles Leigh in Bedfordshire.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1722, Sept. 15. One Black Ball in Lincoln's Inn Fields.—The Earl of Oxford to the same. Has with much trouble brought up his "crazy carkasse" to town. His long and severe sickness prevented his earlier congratulations on Lord Lewisham's happy marriage. Hopes to have the happiness to embrace Lord Dartmouth in town before the Parliament meets, where they say will be affairs brought on which will make every one's presence necessary.

1731, Nov. 3. Bath.—The Earl of Orrery to [Lady Kaye]. "At my return from Marston I received the great favour your Ladyship to bestow upon me. Such a kind enquiry after an humble servant does me as much good as the Bath waters and raises my spirits more than all the cordials my physicians have prescribed.

This place begins to thin (tho' I shall not diminish the number till the beginning of January). It has never been very full of the first rank, and tho' our rooms are sometimes so crowded as even to make 'em uneasy to breathe in, the group consists of people that neither know nor are known. Lord Peterborough has been here for a few days, but in his journey hither lost all his shirts, so that his Lordship was oblig'd to some of his acquaintance for clean linen during his residence at the Bath. Poor Lord Sussex ended his days here, and what is more extraordinary died a martyr to love, even the unfashionable love of his wife. Such a man, in such an age, would be sainted in any other Church but ours. A duel that has been fought lately, between one Jones a gamester, and one Mr. Price (a gentleman's son but of the same profession too), has put us in great confusion. Price is kill'd, and Jones has made his escape. In the General there has been no high play, and your Ladyship knows that raffles, toyshops, and puppet shows flourish of course. Nash seems dejected and oppressed at heart; I suppose he has not yet recovered his losses of last year, and the malicious part of us say that his taxes and contributions are much lessened, and that upon his application to his Parliament for a vote of credit the majority was against it. What, Madam, can be more abject than a despised King? But in my mind, he seems to labour under the unconquerable distemper of old age, and tho' he attends the balls as usual, his dancing days are over. Among our beauties Lady Bab Mansell (at least according to my poor taste) bears the belle. There are indeed many others who make conspicuous figures at our public breakfasts. Pretty Miss Nanny Stonehouse is a great toast; she is followed by a knight who seems mightily in love with her, but is afraid to tell her so. He always puts me in mind of the old song, "Once I lov'd a Lady," your Ladyship knows the rest. Miss Pennyfeather has her followers, and Miss Rodd captivates many powder'd beaux. Mrs. Fazakerly is really beautiful, and Mrs. Gardiner is as pretty an idiot as I ever saw. Pardon me, Madam, for calling any of your sex so, but I speak the language of this censorious place, and am like an actor who struts his hour upon the stage, and then is heard no more. I have been thinking of beauties so long, that I had like to have forgot that my wife hopes her compliments will be acceptable to your Ladyship."

1731, Dec. 22. Bath.—The same to Lady Kaye, New Bond Street, Hanover Buildings. Encloses some verses and adds, "We have likewise a Houghton Tale by Sir W... Y...g, and satires and lampoons without number, but that is a ware I don't deal in." Had just had a visit from Lord William Beauclerk, who looked so ill that he did not know him.

1731, Dec. 27. Bath.—The same to the same. "... The censures on Mr. P... (Pope?), are universal and severe; none to take his part, and all

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

out of envy or, you may suppose, judgment, running him down. He has wrote too many things that have afforded me much pleasure, for me to join in this clamorous throng, nor dare I speak my opinion of so powerful a man, but under your Ladyship's roof in Bond Street. I see he has vindicated himself (or endeavoured at it) in the Daily Journal, I think of last Friday. I hope he'll not be so intimidated as never to write again, for tho' his enemies are powerful in their tongues, they are not so in their pens."

[Another of Lady Kaye's correspondents, whose letters are in this collection, was Dr. John Hough, Bishop of Worcester; but the most important of them were printed in Wilmot's Life of the Bishop, published in 1810.]

1735, Feb. 23.—Heneage Legge to the Earl of Dartmouth. Is extremely glad to hear the books and pamphlets sent to his father have given satisfaction. The continuation of Rapin's history is by one Falaizeau who lives at the Hague, tho' the fairness with which he represents the facts would give one little reason to have supposed him a Frenchman, or living at the place he does.

The Suffolk Street Riot has made much noise, but is now pretty well blown over. The persons present were Lord Middlesex, Lord John Murray, Lord Boyne, Lord Harcourt, Sewallis Shirley, Sir James Grey, Mr. Strode, and Mr. Denny; and there is now a copper plate of the Company in that style, which Lord Dartmouth may like to have among his collection at Blackheath. Remarks on the number of housebreakers about, who began in Essex, and are now making attempts in London; about two hundred lately come out of Ireland who are associated with them, many of whom are dispersed in and about Birmingham.

1735, Feb. 27. Birmingham.—S. Swynfen to the Earl of Dartmouth. Thanks him for his goodness to him and his neighbourhood in giving warning of the danger they are in from this new sort of Irish invasion [the housebreakers?]. Is that moment setting out to consult how the storm may be best guarded against.

? 1735, Aug. 20. Pynest Green, near Waltham Abbey.—Arthur Collins to the Earl of Dartmouth. Sends an extract from a manuscript of Nicholas Jekyl, of Castle Hedingham, Esq., temp. Jac. I., about Thomas Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick. Jekyl, he writes, intended to have written the antiquities of his county, and was of the Club of Antiquaries with Camden, Selden, Sir Robert Cotton, and others. The writer had intended to publish a new Baronage, but after having been at great expense and no little labour had not found a suitable encouragement.

1739, Oct. 13. London.—Erasmus Lewis to the Earl of Dartmouth. Sends his hearty congratulations to the family on the marriage of Lady Anne Legge to Sir Lister Holte.

1739, Oct. 14. Dublin.—Henry Legge to [his father] the Earl of Dartmouth. The Duke of Devonshire has pressed his acceptance of the Secretaryship of Ireland, the holding of which will not interfere with his attendance on Sir Robert [Walpole?]. If Sir Robert should die he would still have a most kind and generous patron in the Duke. His not residing in Ireland as there is no vacancy in the Irish Parliament will not be at all improper or resented by the country.

1739, Nov. 5. Portsmouth.—Edward Legge to the same. Has received order to fit out his ship for the West Indies, with the utmost expedition. Four of them are appointed and perhaps more. The conjectures are various upon what service they are determined, but from the people that are to go he believes the voyage is intended for their advantage.

1789, Nov. 6. Lincoln's Inn.—Heneage Legge to same. On behalf of Mr. Lowth, parson of St. Margaret's, Rochester, a candidate for Lewisham vicarage, Mr. Inglis being dead. He found the book mentioned by his Lordship to be as he suspected only a trick of a bookseller's, a specious title to make trash sell. What little pretends to be new is not authentic, and not worth 12*d.* instead of 12*s.* It is true Adrian Drift was executor to Mr. Prior, but has himself been dead many years, and all Prior's papers are in the hands of Lord Oxford, who is extremely angry at such an imposition upon the world, tho' the publishers have had the impudence to dedicate the book to him. Shall not think of buying them unless his lordship gives further orders.

1789-40, Feb. 26. Lincoln's Inn.—The same to the same. Was yesterday at St. James's to kiss the King's hand, having had the honour to be appointed one of His Majesty's counsel, a distinction of some consequence in the profession to which he belongs, and a step towards greater preferments.

1740, May 27. Lincoln's Inn.—The same to the same. Has sent the book desired, but can give no character at all of it, more than that the Lives of the Black Prince and John of Gaunt, if tolerably written, must afford some curiosity, and they come out under a name of good authority in that way, Arthur Collins, who published the late edition of the Peerage. Has likewise sent a book of his own, the papers of Lord Burghley, published from the manuscripts at Hatfield. It was originally designed to come out by subscription, but the person who undertook the work, having since got the living of Hatfield, has laid aside all thoughts of proceeding in that way. Of what value they are cannot pretend to say, but believes they are full as good as any other things of that kind which are published every day, and the world is very fond of.

1745, Sept. 14.—The Earl of Dartmouth to the Duke of Newcastle. Sends a packet of Jacobite papers addressed to him in error he thinks, as he never in his whole life held any sort of correspondence with the Pretender or his followers.

1745, Sept. 21. Newcastle House.—The Duke of Newcastle returns the papers to Lord Dartmouth, with the King's thanks. They are the same as have been sent to many persons of distinction for two or three years past.

1745, [December.] Friday night.—Lord North and Guilford to the Earl of Dartmouth. As there came an account this morning that the rebels were at Derby on Wednesday night, and there seems a possibility that the Duke may not be able to intercept them in their way to London, and when the town is left bare of troops by the marching out those who are order'd to canton about Finchley Common, there may be insurrections, asks for directions whether Lord Lewisham and his sisters should remain in town. Is undetermined about his own children, but rather inclined to venture their staying in London.

1745, [December.] Sunday morning.—The same to the same. As upon the Duke's quick approach to Northampton the march of the Guards to the camp near Finchley has been suspended, and people who had thoughts of moving from hence seem generally to intend to delay it, the sending of the children to Lord Dartmouth may be delayed for a little time. Cannot yet learn that the Court owns having had any account what is become of the rebels since they were at Derby last Wednesday night.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1746, June 30. House of Lords.—Lord Chancellor Hardwicke to the same. Summons to attend the trials of William Earl of Kilmarnock and George Earl of Cromartie for High Treason on Monday, July 28.

1746, Dec. 24. House of Lords.—The same to the same. Summons to attend the trial of Simon Lord Lovat on Wednesday, January 21 next.

1746-7, Jan. 29. "From my House on the Pavement beyond the King's Road, Grays Inn Lane."—Arthur Collins to the same. Sends an extract from a Register in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury relating to the will of Robert Legge of Great Cotton. Has written an account of all who have been Barons of this Kingdom, more fully than Sir William Dugdale but the work, though much to the honour of the nation is so large and expensive that in these times no bookseller will venture on the printing of it, and the writer's circumstances are so narrow that he cannot be at the charge of it. He may justly say he has found no public spirit remaining, so that he almost despairs of ever having justice done him.

1746-7, Feb. 6. House of Lords.—Lord Chancellor Hardwicke to the same. Summons to attend the trial of Simon Lord Lovat, on Monday, Feb. 23.

1746-7, Feb. 17. Powis House.—Same to same. Regrets he cannot accept Lord Dartmouth's proxy, having two proxies already. Rejoices to hear he is better in health. "The other malady comes upon us all faster than we wish, and I only desire to go through it with the same good temper and tranquillity your Lordship does."

1747, June ? Lincoln's Inn Fields.—Heneage Legge to his father. Acquaints him that the King has been pleased to appoint him a Baron of the Exchequer. "The principal news we have here is a speedy dissolution of the Parliament."

1751, July 28. Leipzig. William, 2^d Earl of Dartmouth to the Rev. Dr. Huddesford, Trinity College, Oxford. Describes his travels after leaving Oxford with Mr. (afterwards Lord) North. Spent some days with Lord Carnarvon at Gottingen university, where there were nearly 700 students, 12 only being English gentlemen. Their greatest distress was for want of good butter even in Holland. At Hesse Cassel saw our Princess Mary, and were honoured with a seat at the Landgrave's table, —a mighty agreeable court where they used very little ceremony. At the Hague they saw our Princess Royal, and the young lady the Gazettes had already disposed of to the Prince of Wales, only 8 years old, but one of the largest children he ever saw.

1752, March 3. N.S. Leipzig.—The same to the same. Leipzig as dull a place as possible, and to supply the want of amusement they had taken a trip to Dresden during the last fortnight of the Carnival. Had just heard an account of Sir John Shaw's wedding and of the festivities in Sir Gregory Page's house on Blackheath upon the occasion.

1752, Aug. 26.—Vienna. The same to the same. Had been present at the christening of an Arch-duchess, and seen the Emperor and all his children, nine in number besides the new-born, all pleasing, many beautiful countenances. Glad to hear the old Town Hall was at last destroyed, and that a new one would soon be in its place, nothing else was wanting to make Oxford perfect, which was already the handsomest town in England.

1753, Feb. 6. London.—George, Lord Lyttleton to the Earl of Dartmouth. Sends notes of such places in Italy as young travellers sometimes overlook, and yet are well worthy their attention. Lady Lyttleton adds a postscript.

HARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1754, Dec. 9. Lyons.—Henry Lyte to the same, New Bond Street, London. Has arrived at Lyons with Lord Brudenell after having completed the tour of France. Gives an account of the places worth notice, especially the sea ports, Mont St. Michel, St. Malo, Rennes, Brest, &c. Near Bordeaux they saw a great number of shepherds walking on stilts 4 or 5 feet high with great ease and swiftness; they could outgo a fast trotting horse. The reason they make use of them is to spy the wolves at a distance. At Toulon they saw nine Calvinists brought in from Nîmes to be confined to the galleys for having assembled contrary to law. The Calvinists were numerous all over Languedoc, but harassed, especially in the Cevennes by soldiers that are quartered on them.

1765, July 8. Grosvenor Square.—The Marquis of Rockingham to the same. He now hopes an administration is formed and desires Lord Dartmouth's presence in London to make choice between two offices. Urges his acceptance of the presidency of the Board of Trade.

In his reply dated 9 July, a copy of which is preserved, Lord Dartmouth asks time for consideration.

1765, July 12. Claremont.—The Duke of Newcastle to the same. "I should have given your Lordship a constant account of all the proceedings which had come to my knowledge since His Majesty first declared his firm resolution to part with his ministers, a resolution which I firmly believe was never intimated or suggested to His Majesty either by the Duke of Cumberland, or by any of those, whom His Royal Highness has since been pleased to consult upon the plan to be formed of a new administration. I must do justice to us all that it was essential in forming an administration that would satisfy the nation, and be able to carry on the business with credit and reputation, to have your Lordship in such rank and station as should be most agreeable to you. The Marquis of Rockingham very wisely would have got your Lordship to himself if he could, in the Treasury." Urges at great length and in very flattering terms, Lord Dartmouth's re-consideration of his refusal to take office. "The Duke of Grafton and my Lord Rockingham are both about your Lordship's age, and if they had not got the better of their own inclination for the sake of the King, and the public, I don't know where the King would have got a Secretary of State, or a Treasury." . . . "As to myself, my age and other circumstances have made me long declare both publicly and privately that I could never accept any ministerial office, or office of business; but at the same time whenever His Majesty had an administration composed of those whose attachment to the Protestant Succession in His Majesty's Royal Family, and whose zeal for the religion and liberties of this country never had been and never could be doubted, that administration should have all the assistance in my power, and as the greatest proof of it, I most earnestly hope that your Lordship will be one of them, and accept this very honourable and very important station."

1765, Dec. 6. New York. — William Smith to the Rev. George Whitfield. As to the prevalent distress in North America and the commotions that have taken place with the causes of these, among them being; the Acts of Trade which have given a monopoly in sugar, molasses, &c. to the West Indian islands, and by putting high duties on foreign produce have prevented America trading with France, Holland, Denmark, &c.: another cause is an Instruction from the Crown relating to appeals which has been taken by Lieut. Governor Colden to mean appeals from the verdicts of juries to the Governor and Council of New York and thence to the King in Council; a third cause is the Stamp Act which has been the occasion of many tumults and insurrections.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

"This Government cannot carry that Act into execution, none dare vend nor buy any stamps, many insurrections have been occasioned and houses destroyed throughout the Colonies, the stamp offices have either absolutely resigned or suspended the execution of their offices, and we hear that at St. Christopher's and Nevis they have seized and burnt the stamps and the populace will doubtless do the like in North America if they could lay hold of them. In some places they are confined in castles, in New York they were delivered from the fort (to prevent a desperate attempt of the populace) to the Magistracy of the City, who gave security to the Government for the safe custody of them, and are continually under a City Guard in the City Hall, and what will finally become of them we cannot tell. . . . The populace threaten another insurrection, are to meet this afternoon (as is said) upon the common to consult of compulsory methods, which puts the officers of Civil Justice almost to their wits end."

The Stamp Act, Mr. Smith says, is resented everywhere. The right of the Colonies to tax themselves on the requisition of the Crown, is universally insisted on.

"There is another matter which has given some concern, but it respects only this colony, and relates to the granting of lands. What Sir Henry Moore, who arrived the thirteenth of the last month, will take for passing patents is yet unknown.

Mr. Colden our late Lieutenant Governor took 12*l.* 10*s.* upon every thousand acres, the Surveyor General 5*l.* upon every thousand, besides full pay for actual services in the survey and laying out of the lands, the Secretary 4*l.* per thousand, and the Attorney General 3*l.* per thousand."

Congratulates Mr. Whitfield on the acceptance by "so great and good a man as Lord Dartmouth" of the chief seat at the Plantation Board.

1767, March 6th. Halifax.—Paper headed "Observations on the report made by Lieutenant Marr of the Corps of Engineers to Lieutenant Colonel Dalrymple commanding his Majesty's troops in Nova Scotia relating to lands reserved at Halifax for fortifications." Addressed to the Governor and signed by Richard Bulkeley, Secretary, and Charles Morris.

1767, Mar. 21st. Channell Row, Dorset Court, Westminster.—Copy letter from Richard Stockton to Samuel Smith on American affairs. A very long letter containing Mr. Stockton's scheme for the pacification of Great Britain and her colonies.

1767, July 10th. Wimbledon.—Mr. Baron Smythe to the Earl of Dartmouth. A chatty letter of no importance.

1767, Aug. 27th. Bounds.—Mr. Baron Smythe to the Earl of Dartmouth. "I am just returned from the circuit and at Maidstone saw your cousin Winchelsea in high spirits, exerting his abilities, which are excellent, on the occasion in favour of Mr. Sackville to be our member next election with Sir Brook Bridges instead of Mr. Fairfax.

"He had been at Canterbury Races the week before where he had introduced and recommended him to everybody.

"When we came to Lewes we found your friend and my cousin the Duke of Newcastle, who is no bad electioneer, doing the same for him in Sussex, and he told me he had engaged all the Kentish freeholders who live in Sussex for Mr. Sackville, from the sea shore to Kent and Surrey, and Mr. Sackville was at Lewes and at a fine entertainment at Mr. Pelham's; and the Duke of Dorset and he were at the Sussex meeting for naming candidates for Sussex, and all the noblemen and gentlemen we saw in Sussex seemed heartily in his interest. The Duke of Newcastle asked me how your Lordship was inclined to him, I told him I could not tell, but I should take the liberty of writing to your Lordship and recommending him to your Lordship's patronage and assistance in the strongest manner I was able, and indeed I can do it with sincerity for I think him a very deserving young man; and therefore hope your Lordship will give him your interest and support on this occasion. Your Lordship will scarce be in this part of the world the first Monday in October, the day advertised for the nomination, but if you could order some of your freeholders to attend on that day to support his nomination it would be of great service to him, as your countenance of him will have great weight. Lord Romney is applying in behalf of his son, but many who wish well to my Lord think it more advisable for him to join with Lord Aylesford and bring in his son at Maidstone without opposition, than to divide the Whig interest in the county and leave Maidstone a prey to any adventurer who will come and corrupt them."

1768. Feb. 26th. Whitehall.—The Earl of Hillsborough to Deputy Governor Francklin. Forbidding coals to be taken from the island of Breton, and as to the settlement of the island of St. John, instructions for which are stated to have been enclosed.

The House of Commons has granted to the King 3,895*l.* 1*s.* 11*d.* for supporting the Civil Establishment of Nova Scotia for the year 1768.

1768, Sept. 12th. Whitehall.—The Earl of Hillsborough to Governor Lord William Campbell, as to a licence granted by Lord William to certain persons of an exclusive right to dig coals upon Cape Breton to the amount of three thousand chaldrons. It is the King's pleasure that no further licences shall be granted on the expiration of the present one except for the use of the King's troops and garrisons, without his Majesty's special order for that purpose.

As to the settlement of St. John's Island, the steps taken by Deputy Governor Francklin have the King's highest disapproval, as he has incurred upon the Government a very great expence by forming an Establishment upon that Island, appointing officers, servants, &c. none of which he was authorized to do by the instructions sent him. The contingent fund in the agent's hands which would have been used for the advantage of Nova Scotia has been entirely exhausted by Mr. Francklin's bills on account of the St. John's Island Establishment, and, Lord Hillsborough says, if any more bills come in from him, they will be protested and the loss and damage must fall upon Mr. Francklin himself.

1768. Nov. 15th. Hanover Square. The Earl of Hillsborough to Lord William Campbell (Private). Requesting his interest to prevail with the Assembly of Nova Scotia to appoint either Mr. George Canning of the Temple or Captain Anthony Wheelock to the office of Provincial Agent for the Province

1769. Sep. 19th. Penzance. — G. Borlase to the Right Honourable Humphry Morice, Lord Warden of the Stannaries of Cornwall and Devon. Enclosing (the enclosure is not now with the letter) an account of the Revenues of the Duchy of Cornwall.

1770. February 6th.—Paper endorsed "Extract of a letter to Lord Egmont." It gives an account of what, in the writer's opinion, ought to be done to improve the Province of Nova Scotia so as to render it a protection to the Newfoundland fishery against any sudden surprise, and

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

a barrier to Canada with its French Roman Catholic inhabitants; stating what roads ought to be made, &c., &c.

1771, June 20. Lincolnshire.—Case with the opinion of Mr. John Maddocks relating to an Escheat in the Manor of Lewisham, Kent, of which Lord Dartmouth was Lord.

1771, Oct. 4.—“Remarks on some parts of Nova Scotia, New England, and Rhode Island respecting navigation, &c.” by Commodore Gambier.

1771, Dec. 4. Whitehall.—The Earl of Hillsborough to Lord William Campbell (Copy). Stating that the King has laid down a rule that no Governor of a Province can return to England while he continues in Commission. “The advices which have been received of the Duke of Gloucester’s recovery from the disorder that put his life in so much danger at Leghorn have given the greatest pleasure to all his Majesty’s subjects here, and I beg leave to congratulate you upon so happy an event.”

1772, June 6. Whitehall. The Earl of Hillsborough to Lord William Campbell in answer to an application from Lord William for leave to return to England owing to the state of his health; regretting that permission cannot be given unless Lord William resigns his commission as Governor of Nova Scotia.

1772, Oct. 10. Boston, N.E.—Phillis Wheatley to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing a congratulatory poem from her pen, upon his Lordship’s appointment as Secretary of State for North America.

Begins:

“Hail! Happy day! when smiling like the morn Fair Freedom rose, New England to adorn.”

Ends:

“Thou like the Prophet, find the bright abode
Where dwells thy Sire, the Everlasting God!”

There is also an account signed Nathaniel Wheatley dated Oct. 12th, 1772, of Phillis Wheatley, who was a slave brought from Africa at the age of eight years.

1772, Oct. 31. London.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Major Legge (afterwards Governor of Nova Scotia). Lord Dartmouth has received private information that Mr. Stuart, the Superintendent of Indian Affairs in the southern districts of America, is dying, and enquires whether the appointment would suit Major Legge. The salary is 800*l*.

1772, Nov. 4. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Lord William Campbell. Enclosing the King’s permission to return to England, which is not to be used unless on his arrival Lord William resigns his commission.

1772, Dec. 5. Halifax.—Lord William Campbell to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to the disposition of the naval force in America so as to prevent an illicit trade being carried on in Nova Scotia.

1772, Dec. 9. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Lord William Campbell, Governor of Nova Scotia. Unimportant.

1773, Jan. 22. Whitehall. Report by the Lords of Trade signed by the Earl of Dartmouth, Lords Greville and Garlies, and Messrs. Soame Jenyns and Bamber Gascoyne, to the Lords of the Committee for Plantation Affairs, upon a proposed formation of a colony on the banks of the River Mississippi.

1773, Jan. 29. James St., Westminster.—The Honourable Mr. Hay to the Earl of Dartmouth. Unimportant. As to his going to his Government in the West Indies by one of His Majesty’s ships.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1773, Feb. 3. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Lord William Campbell. In answer to a letter from Lord William proposing an augmentation in the Establishment of Nova Scotia on account of roads, a salary to a magistrate at Cannc̄ean, and an allowance to the Treasurer's widow. The proposition shall be laid before the Board of Trade, but Lord Dartmouth fears objections to any scheme for increasing the Parliamentary grant.

1773, Feb. 3.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Major Legge. Promising his influence to Major Legge to secure him some government appointment, and hoping the recommendation of the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland will secure him the Lieut. Colonelcy of the 57th regiment.

"It will probably be a satisfaction to you to hear that there are still hopes of Lord Bellamont's recovery; the ball is not yet extracted, but his fever is abated and there is not at present any alarming symptom."

1773, March 17, London.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Major Legge. Offering him the post of Governor, of a new settlement likely to be formed on the Ohio, with a salary of 1,000*l*.

1773, March 24. Anonymous letter from a person signing himself in Greek characters "Philanthropos" to the Earl of Dartmouth. On the prevalent distress among the poor owing to the high price of corn. For this, he blames the large farmers who, although the harvests of 1771 and 1772 have been very good, continue to ask 7*s*. 3*d*. a bushel for wheat, and indirectly the landlords for allowing one tenant to absorb several farms.

1773, April 19. Boston.—Governor Hutchinson to Mr. Pownall. "Private." "Our patriots say that the votes of the town of Boston which they sent to Virginia have produced the resolves of the Assembly there appointing a committee of correspondence, and I have no doubt it is their expectation that a committee for the same purpose will be appointed by most of the other Assemblies upon the Continent. If anything therefore be done by Parliament respecting America, it now seems necessary that it should be general and not confined to particular Colonies, as the same spirit prevails everywhere, though not in like degree.

I am to meet a new Assembly the 26th May, which I have reason to think will consist of the same persons as the last Assembly and in the same temper. I have sometimes heard it proposed that the Parliament should address his Majesty to appoint three or any other number of persons, of respectable rank and characters to visit the several Colonies, properly authorized and instructed to enquire into their state and to make report, as a preparatory step to measures to be taken by Parliament, and some have been of opinion that a perfect knowledge of their state cannot be so well obtained in any other way. For my part every measure appears to me of such uncertain success whilst the body of the people hold such absurd principles in Government, and all the servants of the Crown are so entirely at their mercy that I am utterly at a loss what to suggest. The leaders boast that they will submit to no regulations, and that by united strength they shall be able to oppose them." Governor Hutchinson then relates a conversation he had had with the Speaker of the House of Assembly who had received a letter from Dr. Franklin stating that from a conversation the writer had had with Lord Dartmouth he thought that there was hope that the grievances of the Colonists would be redressed; in the meantime he advised them to be quiet. "I asked whether the proceedings of the town of Boston and so many other towns, and the countenance shown them by the House [of Assembly] could be thought consistent with this advice? He answered that he opposed the town meeting at Boston as not advisable, and, besides he had no great expectation, at that time, of such encouragement. . . . I told him I saw no chance of peace whilst the supremacy of Parliament was denied: he acknowledged there was no line to be drawn, but if Parliament could bind the Colonists they were all slaves. This is always the conclusion of the Party, and by this conclusion they strike the minds of the people in general and raise a violent prejudice against all who maintain the supremacy of Parliament."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1773, April 21. 4 Charles Street.—John Gray to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing a pamphlet, being a refutation of the answer of the Bostonians to Governor Hutchinson's speech. The writer's intention has been "to pull up the seditious doctrines of the Colonists by the roots in such a manner as to prevent them from sprouting again."

1773, May 4. London.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Lieutenant Colonel Legge. Informing him that he is to be appointed to the Governorship of Nova Scotia.

1773, May 5. New York. "Private." Governor Tryon to the Earl of Dartmouth. Asking Lord Dartmouth's favourable interpretation of the measures he has taken in his Majesty's interest. "His Majesty's instructions and His Majesty's interests are not at all times one and the same thing, and he who in America follows implicitly the letter of the instructions will not best serve the King, and although I am not ignorant that by an implied disobedience to them, I stake the forfeiture of my Government, yet I would rather make that sacrifice than forego any proper opportunity to promote the public concerns of my Royal Master. Asks Lord Dartmouth's influence to secure a grant of a regiment and a baronetcy for him as a solid reward of his services.

1773, May 12. 4 Charles Street.—John Gray to the Earl of Dartmouth. Asking for the return of his pamphlet forwarded to Lord Dartmouth on April 21st.

1773, May 19. London.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Lieutenant Colonel Legge. As Colonel Legge's appointment to the Governorship of Nova Scotia is just at hand, Lord Dartmouth recommends him to make his preparations for leaving the army.

1773, June 2. New York.—"Private." Governor Tryon to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to the purchase of lands from the Indians. The Governor himself has laid out money in some 40,000 acres. Some of the lands he proposes to settle.

1773, June 14.—Peter Livius to the Earl of Dartmouth. Requesting his assistance in settling his affairs previous to his departure to New Hampshire. Without help from his Lordship he will have nothing to show that he has vindicated his character from the charge of having brought a false accusation (against the Governor of the Colony), and he begs to be allowed a copy of the judgment in his case.

1773, June 15.—Lord Hyde to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing accounts relating to Governor Tryon's expenditure, and the disbursements out of his private fortune, which from June 1764 to May 1773 amounted to 8,986*l.* 2*s.* 5*½d.*

1773, June 17. Savannah in Georgia.—"Private." Governor Wright to the Earl of Dartmouth, recommending Mr. Tattnell, a Captain of Militia, and Sir Patrick Houstoun, Receiver-General of the Province, for seats in the Council.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1773, June 20. Wexford.—George Lehunte to the Earl of Dartmouth. Asking for a grant of lands in America in recompense for his services in the late war in America under Sir Jeffrey Amherst. Ventures to address Lord Dartmouth on the score of his being related to his family through his grandmother, Alice Legge.

1773, July 2. Antigua.—Valentine Morris to the Earl of Dartmouth. Particulars respecting the Caribbs inhabiting St. Vincent's, and the means to be employed to bring them to their allegiance to the British Empire. With a duplicate copy.

1773, July 7. London (Copy). Long letter from Dr. Benjamin Franklin, to whom does not appear, possibly to the Provincial Congress. Parliament has been prorogued without any reference to the state of America; has forwarded the King's answer to the petitions of the Colonists, part of which runs: "That his Majesty has well weighed the subject matter and the expressions contained in those petitions, and that as he will ever attend to the humble petitions of his subjects, and be forward to redress every real grievance, so he is determined to support the Constitution, and resist with firmness every attempt to derogate from the authority of the Supreme Legislature." Dr. Franklin proceeds to consider the question how the Colonists may best procure redress of their grievances, and after stating the waning power of England, weakened by the last war she undertook, with a depleted treasury and a decreasing population, and the growth of the Colonies in population, wealth, and resource, thus continues: "Whenever a war happens our aid will be wished for" [by England], "our friendship desired and cultivated, our goodwill courted. Then is the time to say redress our grievances. You take money from us by force, and now you ask it of voluntary grant. You cannot have it both ways. If you choose to have it without our consent, you must go on taking that way and be content with what you can so obtain. If you would have our free gifts, desist from your compulsive methods, acknowledge our rights, and secure the future enjoyment of them." Our claims will then be attended to, and our complaints regarded." Dr. Franklin advises a declaration to this effect to be drawn up at a Congress of all the Colonies, and a copy thereof presented to the King. 'This he thinks would bring matters to a crisis.

The letter continues: "With regard to the sentiments of the people in general here concerning America, I must say that we have among them many friends and wellwishers. The dissenters are all for us, and many of the merchants and manufacturers. There seems to be even among the country gentlemen a general sense of our growing importance, a disapprobation of the harsh measures with which we have been treated, and a wish that some means may be found of perfect reconciliation. A few members of Parliament in both Houses and perhaps some in high office, have in a degree the same ideas; but none of these seem willing to be active in our favour, lest adversaries should take advantage and charge it upon them as betraying the interests of this nation."

1773, July 21. Antigua.—Valentine Morris to the Earl of Dartmouth. A long letter (with a duplicate) giving further particulars of the condition of the Caribbs, and the means proposed for subduing them.

1773, July 23. Philadelphia.—Joseph Reed to the Earl of Dartmouth. Offering his services in the purchase of land from the Indians.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1773, August 5.—Mr. Pownall to the Earl of Dartmouth. Suggesting that Governor Hutchinson should be recalled to lay before the King the state of his government.

1773, August 11.—Extract of the minutes of a Cabinet Council relating to a projected settlement by a French trading company on the coast of Africa, in order to carry on the gum trade.

1773, August 12.—Mr. Pownall to the Earl of Dartmouth. Relating a conversation he had with Lord North, during which it was determined to recall Governor Hutchinson at his own request.

1773, August 14. Blackheath.—Mr. Pownall to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing papers for signature, and as to Governor Hutchinson's recall, a letter to Governor O'Hara at Senegal, &c. (not now with the letter).

1773, Aug. 20. Boston.—Governor Hutchinson to the Earl of Dartmouth. Asking for an appointment in America for one of his sons.

1773, Aug. 28. Pensacola.—Governor Chester to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing copy of a letter from the Governor of New Orleans to Mr. Chester, and copy of his answer thereto; also copy of a letter from one of the magistrates of West Florida, as to a murder and robbery committed by English subjects, who attacked two Spanish canoes on the Mississippi richly laden, and murdered the crews, consisting of three Frenchmen and two negroes. The murderers are now in custody, and are of the worst class of the people who have flocked to the Mississippi for the past two years. As Mr. Chester foresaw, several of the first settlers on the river were persons who had fled from justice, and he strongly recommends the re-establishment of the posts on the river which were abandoned, and the establishment of courts of justice.

1773, Aug. 30.—Mr. Pownall to the Earl of Dartmouth. "The French plot for stealing away our gum trade thickens fast. . . . I am informed by one of the principal importers of gum, a Mr. Bradley, that it is certainly true that one vessel is arrived in France from Portendic with gum, and two more are expected, and that this intelligence has given great alarm to the traders here. It is not, however, thought advisable to send out the man of war till a more favourable season, unless the French do upon the declaration of our exclusive claim to Portendic and Arguin, controvert that claim, in which case if I understand Lord Rochford right, a ship of war will be immediately sent with your letter to O'Hara."

1773, Sept. 22. Whitehall.—Mr. Pownall to the Earl of Dartmouth. An unimportant letter, touching on several subjects, including the dissolution of the Society of Jesus, and its effect upon the members of the Society in Quebec, the state of Boston, the conference of the Dutch Commissaries with the Board of Trade, &c.

1773, Sept. 26. Brookfield.—The Rev. E. Forbes to Governor Hutchinson. On the state of the Province of Massachusetts. Certain false reports concerning the Governor had been spread, which had the effect of raising the temper of the people to a furious pitch. The pamphlet of Philalethes has now been read, and the storm has abated. "We are at present unhappy, but I verily believe that the leading character of this people is loyalty and goodness, but there is a spirit of enthusiasm prevailing at this day in the nations of Europe, of Asia, as well as in America, and when religion or politics are the subjects it always occasions disturbances and revolutions in church and state, but this spirit having its seat in the passions will soon subside and the people that have been affected with it will reassume their leading characters."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

1773, October 6. Whitehall.—William Knox to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to Governor Tryon's requisition for troops. Adverse to granting it. "In addition to what Mr. Pownall has mentioned, . . . exclusive of the violence and inhumanity of employing the soldiery upon such occasions, I always understood from Lord Hillsborough that the King was particularly averse to the detaching his troops for such purposes, as it serves to make the army odious to the public."

1773, Oct. 6. Vanbrugh Fields.—Mr. Pownall to the Earl of Dartmouth. The arrival of the New York mail. Riots have occurred in New Hampshire, and Governor Tryon requests troops from the Commander-in-Chief. Mr. Pownall hopes Lord Dartmouth will not countenance such an extravagance "in a case where perhaps it will be found that these rioters, as they are called, will be able to show that they have been treated with the greatest injustice and oppression."

1773, Oct. 9. Boston.—J. Brenton to Andrew Snape Hammond. Asking for his interest to secure him the post of Attorney General of Nova Scotia.

1773, Oct. 9. Whitehall.—W. Knox to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing two papers giving an account of the alleged destruction of the fort and garrison at Senegal, and proving that the report is false. It was spread by a trading ship coming from thence to enhance the price of a cargo of gum they were carrying.

1773, Oct. 9. Halifax.—James Burrow to Lord William Campbell. As to a search he had carried on, by Lord William's orders, in Catch Harbour and at Prospect, for evidence of the illicit trading supposed to be done in that locality. The search was unsuccessful, but the writer thinks that his visit will have a good effect. He then proceeds to relate the state of the fishery and inhabitants in the parts he visited, which he considers highly satisfactory and capable of great development. The letter concludes with a plan for a periodical visitation of all the harbours and fishing stations in the Province; the appointment of Tide Surveyors, &c.

1773, Oct. 9. Boston.—Governor Hutchinson to the Earl of Dartmouth. "Private." A long letter on the state of the Province of Massachusetts, from which the following is an extract:—

"It must be allowed that the people in general are possessed with a jealousy that it has been the design of the Administration in England to enslave them, as they term it, or to subject their liberties and properties to the arbitrary disposal of a power in which they have not any share, and ones [over] which they cannot, be the excesses what they may, have any control. There are many, however, and more would appear, if they dare, of the most sensible part of the community, who know and declare that these jealousies are groundless, and that they were raised and cultivated by artful designing men. The conductors of the people are divided in sentiments. Some of them profess that they only aim to remove the innovations since the date of the Stamp Act, or, as they sometimes say, since the expiration of the war, for they are not always the same, and though they don't think Parliament has a just authority, yet they are willing to acquiesce, seeing it has been so long submitted to. Others declare they will be altogether independent; they would maintain an alliance with Great Britain; each stands in need of the other; their mutual interest is sufficient to connect them together. Of the first sort the Speaker of the House often declares himself, so does a clergyman of Boston who has great influence in our political measures, so do some of the Council who have most influence there. Those of the

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

latter opinion have for their head one of the members for Boston, who was the first person that openly and in any publick assembly declared for a total independency, and who, from a natural obstinancy of temper and from many years practice in politicks, is perhaps as well calculated to excite the people to any extravagance in theory or practice as any person in America. From large defalcations as collector of taxes for the town of Boston and from other defects in pecuniary matters, his influence was small until within these 7 years, but since then it has been gradually increasing until he has obtained such an ascendancy as to direct the town of Boston, the House of Representatives, and consequently the Council just as he pleases." The Governor encloses for Lord Dartmouth's perusal the letter from Mr. Forbes, noticed above.

1773, Oct. 12.—Mr. Pownall to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing a copy of a letter he wrote to the printer of the Daily Advertizer, denying a report which appeared in that newspaper that the garrison at Senegal had been cut off by the natives and the fort entirely destroyed.

1773, Oct. 12.—Mr. Pownall to the Earl of Dartmouth. Understands that Lord Garlies is by this time Lord Galloway, and that there is another vacancy at the Board of Trade. Asking a line to Lord North to secure him the vacancy.

1773, Oct. 14, Jamaica Plain.—The Rev. William Gordon to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing a copy of a letter addressed to the Canadian Indians from the French King, which he thinks of sufficient importance to communicate to Lord Dartmouth.

"The salutation of the French King to his former children of the five nations."

"My dear children, are you yet alive; I yet remember you, you especially of the five nations, and am longing to see you. I hear grievous things concerning your circumstances. I am informed that the English have settled all the lands they have made pretensions to by conquest, are coming hard upon you, are building towns even up to your bedside, and are also oppressive in their trade. This, my dear children, was not the conduct of your former father, the French King. When I conquered you, the five nations, I immediately resigned your territories, because it was the land of that part of the world that God had given to you Indians. I own'd nothing in your territories. Wherever I set foot it was upon your loan (sic.) My dear children I resent this treatment that you have received from the English. I am grieved for this cruel usage. Courage my children; courage my children. Your father is awaking out of his stupor. You know he received a blow from the English, with which he was stunn'd; but now he revives; and you remember that at the time before he was quite speechless, he told you that within seven or eight years, he should revive and revenge the cause of his dear children of the five nations. I have now awoke, and am rising and behold, the hatchet is within reach of my hand. Unite your strength, my children, from the north to the south; be of one mind, in general expectation of seeing your old father within two or three years. He has many ships in readiness and men, and warlike stores without number. By that time near upon eighty ships will be ready to enter Canada and an equal number shall enter the Mississippi for my southern children. Then I expect to see you all; furnish you for the field and supply all your wants. Your old father salutes you all and longs to see you."

This letter, Mr. Gordon says, is only known to the Sachems and head warriors. It has had a great effect; "they are expecting a French war, and are ready to co-operate with France in any attempts against the English."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

A further letter from Mr. Gordon accompanies the above, explanatory of it and giving further details. Speaking of the disposition of the Indians towards the English he says: "Sir William Johnson has had some account of the affair [of the French King's letter] sent him, but he may not have received it. The Indians are not so well affected to Sir William as formerly. They consider themselves as having been ill used by him; and I have reason to apprehend, from what I have heard in free conversation with persons of consequence and intelligence at New York, in Connecticut, and the Massachusetts that he has attended more to his own private interests than the good of the State, in the distribution he has made of the Government allowance; and that were the Indians to understand what sums have been designed for their use, they would wait for and embrace the first opportunity of scalping him. Unless Indian affairs are better managed and some conciliating methods speedily given into, the Indians will be quite alienated from the English and will embrace any future opening to revenge themselves on the publick for the injuries committed upon them by individuals." Sincerely hopes the Government will not suffer Canada to fall into the hands of the French so that the Colonies might be more easily managed. The remedy would be worse, he thinks, than the disease. . . . "I would mention to your Lordship . . . that Quebec is in a defenceless state, the guns having been taken from the ramparts and carried off before your Lordship's appointment, so that was France to plan the surprise of it, and unknown to the English to send a fleet against it, Canada would be instantly lost." A Duplicate accompanies each of the above.

1773, Oct. 19. Boston.—Governor Hutchinson to the Earl of Dartmouth. "Private." Enclosing a copy of a most important letter (which is not now enclosed) received by the Speaker of the House of Representatives from the Agent of the House in England. This letter appears to have proposed a General Congress of Representatives from all the Colonies, a proposal shortly afterwards adopted and carried into effect.

1773, Oct. 20.—Mr. Pownall to the Earl of Dartmouth, as to some Conference about to be held with the Ambassadors from Holland. "Mynheer Ribaut is sick in Zealand and cannot come till his stomach settles a little, Mynheer Graffland is arrived with orders to open the Conferences without his colleague, and I find by Lord Suffolk that everything will be ready on Tuesday for the Board [of Trade]. But I do not think the Board will be ready for the business; Lord Robert Spencer begs to be excused, Mr. Jenyns can't come, Mr. Eliot certainly won't come, and Mr. Jolliffe has sent no answer."

1773, Oct. 26.—Copy letter to Lord William Campbell without signature, as to lands in Nova Scotia fit to be reserved by the Crown for the supply of timber and masts.

1773, Nov. 2.—"Copy of a letter to Thomas and Elisha Hutchinson delivered at their house in Boston."

"Messieurs Thomas and Elisha Hutchinson. The Freemen of this Province understand from good authority that there is a consignment of a quantity of tea to your house from the East India Company which is destructive to the happiness of every well wisher to his country, therefore it is expected that you personally appear at Liberty Tree on Wednesday next at 12 o'clock at noonday to make a public resignation of your commission agreeable to a notification of this day for that purpose Fail not upon your peril. O.C."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1773. Nov. 4. Governor Hutchinson to the Earl of Dartmouth. Copy extract. Enclosing copies of letters showing the attempts of the rioters to intimidate the consignees of tea from the East India Company.

1773, Nov. 4. Copy of a printed hand-bill posted up at Boston summoning the freemen to meet at Liberty Tree to hear the consignees of tea make a public resignation of their offices as consignees. It ends with the words "Show us the man that dare take down this," and is signed "O.C., Secretary."

1773. Papers endorsed "Copy of Narrative," being accounts of attacks made by the rioters on the houses of the tea merchants in order to compel them to attend the meeting at Liberty Tree on Nov. 4, which they had all refused to do. The consignees whose houses were attacked were Messrs. Clarke, Hutchinson, Faneuil and Winslow; and the Committee of freemen comprised Messrs. Molineux, Denny and Johannot and Doctors Joseph Warren and Church.

1773, Nov. 6. Milton near Boston. Governor Hutchinson to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing further papers on the same subject as the above, viz., A copy of a letter from Messrs. Richard Clarke and Sons, Benjamin Faneuil and Joseph Winslow refusing to comply with the request of the Committee of the Town to resign their commissions; Copy minute of a meeting of the Freeholders of Boston held 5 Nov. 1773 at Faneuil Hall appointing the Hon. John Hancock, Mr. John Pitt, Mr. Samuel Adams, Mr. Samuel Abbot, Dr. Joseph Warren, Mr. William Powell and Mr. Nathaniel Appleton a Committee to request Messrs. Thomas and Elisha Hutchinson to resign their commissions as consignees of tea; and copy letter undated from Messrs. Hutchinson to Mr Hancock refusing to resign.

1773, Nov. 6.—Mr. Pownall to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing a letter from Lord Suffolk with papers as to emigration to America, including a copy printed notice referring to the advantages of St. John's Island which had been posted up in parts of Scotland and Ireland; and protests against the increase of emigration which is alleged to be detrimental to the commerce and industries of Great Britain.

1773, Nov. 14. Halifax, N.S.—Governor Legge to the Earl of Dartmouth with respect to the quitrents due to the Crown from lessees of land in the Province. The difficulty of getting them in. The amount of land granted in the Province at one farthing per acre amounted to 3,344*l.* 9*s.*, and of this the collector was only able to obtain 112*l.*

1773, Nov. 15. Boston.—Governor Hutchinson to the Earl of Dartmouth. On the state of the town, and the Governor's efforts to restore order. The Council give him no help, as they sympathise with the people's objects though they allege disapproval of the means.

1773, Nov. 23. Parliament Street.—James Meyrick to Governor Legge. On business matters, and military gossip in England. Thanks the Governor for two kegs of cod sounds.

1773, Nov. 23 to Nov. 29. Boston.—Report of debates in the Council between these dates. The matters debated are principally connected with a petition of the consignees of tea from the East India Company, for protection for their persons and property from the violence of the mob; with the question as to whether the council could form a committee of enquiry into the cause of the riots and present a report thereon to the Governor (a proposal opposed strongly by the Governor himself); and whether statements made in the council were to be kept secret from the people of Boston.

The debates show strong opposition to the Governor, and sympathy with the objects of the rioters by a majority of the council. The principal speakers appear to have been, Mr. Rowdoin, violently opposed to the Governor, Mr. Pitts, Colonel Otis, Captain Erving on the side of the Governor, Dr. Winthrop and Mr. Danforth.

1773, Nov. 26. Copy notification printed in the Massachusetts Gazette, from the "select men" of Boston to the inhabitants of the town of a meeting to be held at Faneuil Hall on the 27 Nov., "in order to consult whether further application shall be made to said consignees, or otherwise to act as the town shall think proper at the present dangerous crisis." It is signed "by order of the select men, William Cooper, Town Clerk." There is also an account of a meeting held at Boston, when a further application was made to Messrs. Clarke, Faneuil and Hutchinson, the consignees, to resign their commissions, and a copy letter from them to the Honourable John Hancock, refusing the application.

1773, Dec. 1. Boston.—Long account of the meetings held by the inhabitants of Boston after the first consignment of the tea had arrived in port, proceedings upon the appointment of a watch to see that none was landed, proclamation by Governor Hutchinson, &c.

1773, Dec. 1. New York.—Governor Tryon to the Earl of Dartmouth. "Private." As to the repeal of the Act imposing a duty on tea. The dangers it would involve by encouraging illicit trade in geneva, arrack, yarn &c.

1773, Dec. 1. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Governor Legge. Recommending persons for various vacant offices, &c.

1773, Dec. 2. Tortola.—Two letters from James Dawson and Robert French to the Earl of Marchmont. Respecting the death of the Governor of the Island, Mr. Home, and containing recommendations for his successor.

1773, Dec. 2. Boston.—Governor Hutchinson to the Earl of Dartmouth. "Private," with a duplicate. Respecting the report of the debates in the Council which he had enclosed in a public despatch. He thinks Lord Dartmouth will see from them "the situation of a Massachusetts Governor, and that he is without the least support in measures for maintaining the authority of the Crown."

1773, Dec. 2. Governor Hutchinson to the Earl of Dartmouth. Relating the attacks made by the mob upon the houses of the consignees of tea and enclosing a petition from the consignees to the Governor and Council for protection for themselves and the consignments of tea; and the minutes of the proceedings of the Council (who declined any advice in the matter) thereupon, containing a long report made by them to the Governor excusing the conduct of the rioters and declining to give any assistance either to the consignees or their consignments.

1773, Dec. 6. Castle William, Boston Harbour.—(Copy). Lieutenant-Colonel the Honourable A. Leslie to the Secretary at War. Giving accounts of the proceedings of the rioters similar to those in the foregoing papers.

1773, Dec. 8. Boston.—Admiral Montagu to Philip Stephens, Secretary to the Admiralty. An account of the proceedings of the rioters. The Admiral expresses his readiness to act in aid of the Governor whenever he may be called upon.

1773, Dec. 13. Halifax, N.S.—Letter unsigned, but written by the Governor's desire, to Mr. James Fulton respecting the making of roads in the

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Province, requiring a report upon the best route for a road from Halifax to Truro which would secure the maximum of safety and the minimum of cost.

Enclosed in this letter is a paper headed "Reasons why the Governor of Nova Scotia should not have been restricted from passing grants of land to people from the Northern Colonies in America, but to encourage them to settle in this."

1773, Dec. 14. Boston.—Governor Hutchinson to the Earl of Dartmouth. "Private." The appointment of a Committee of correspondence of the towns of Boston, Charlestown, Roxbury, Brooklyn, Dorchester and Cambridge, which has taken under its direction the affair of the East India tea. The proceedings of this Committee to prevent the landing of the tea, &c.

1773, Dec. 15. Boston.—Governor Hutchinson to the Earl of Dartmouth. (Copy.) The continuance of the disturbances in the town.

1773, Dec. 17.—Same to same. (Copy.) The destruction of 340 chests of tea by the rioters.

1773, Dec. 17. Boston.—(Copy.) Admiral Montagu to Philip Stephens, Secretary to the Admiralty. Another account of the destruction of the tea in Boston Harbour. "I must also desire you will be pleased to inform their Lordships [of the Admiralty] that during the whole of this transaction neither the Governor, magistrates, owners or the revenue officers of this place ever called for my assistance; if they had, I could easily have prevented the execution of this plan, but must have endangered the lives of many innocent people, by firing upon the town."

1773, Dec. 17. Castle William.—Lieutenant-Colonel Honourable A. Leslie to the Secretary at War on the same subject. "I had the regiment [the 64th] ready to take their arms had they been called upon. I am informed the Council would not agree to the troops going to town, however it must end in that."

1773. Paper headed "Wm. Tongue's remarks on the times in New York, 17 December 1773, after a meeting of the Sons of Liberty at the City Hall respecting the tea from Great Britain."

1773. Paper headed "State of the Province of Nova Scotia with respect to the number of its inhabitants & its produce taken in the year 1773."

1773, Dec. 18. Boston.—Governor Hutchinson to the Earl of Dartmouth. "Private." The destruction of the tea.

1773, Dec. 20.—Same to same. (Copy.) "There has been no intelligence relative to the teas. It is generally believed that the teas designed for Philadelphia will not be suffered to go up the river, and the expectation of an union of measures in the three great Colonies of Pennsylvania, New York, and Massachusetts Bay, has raised a higher spirit here than I have ever seen before."

1773, Dec. 21. Boston.—Governor Hutchinson to the Earl of Dartmouth. "Private." The spread of the spirit of disaffection throughout the Province. "At and near Boston the people seem regardless of all consequences. I may not presume to propose measures. To enforce the duty appears beyond all comparison more difficult than I ever before imagined. I doubt whether any merchant has given orders for any teas from England next year. Now, it is said is the time for teas from Holland. To concede endangers raising the like spirit in other cases of Parliamentary authority."

1773, Dec. 22. Tower Hill, London.—A letter from A. L. (Arthur Lee) to whom is not stated, but to one of the leaders of the rebel

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

Colonies (probably at Boston), as to the state of affairs in England with reference to America. "I am sorry that a total silence with respect to the redressing our grievances reigns at Court. The professions of Lord D[artmouth] I own give me very little confidence; he was called upon last sessions of Parliament in the House of Lords by our unalterable friend Lord Shelburne to account for his having done nothing to conciliate the Colonies; he answered with fair promises; he will be again called upon this session by the same noble Lord. I think he must then speak decisively, as any further evasion will be palpable. It becomes us to be prepared for the worst: to men of such a disposition what happens bad is better borne; what happens good is doubly acceptable."

Advocates a Committee of correspondence of all the Colonies to demand a repeal of the Revenue Acts from 1764, with all their pernicious appendages. This obtained, "it will be enough. In no sense of policy is it our interest to quarrel with this country, if we are not compelled to it. If they are obliged to retract from the exercise of their assumed power now, when will they be able to renew it? . . . they will be glad to maintain their supremacy without attempting to bind us in all cases whatsoever, and it is surely better for us to submit silently to that degree of subordination, till the gentle course of nature shall bring us to maturity and independence, than by a premature, doubtful, and dangerous struggle to hazard the ruin of the whole British Empire."

1773, Dec. 22. Philadelphia.—Joseph Reed to the Earl of Dartmouth. A long letter relating the whole history of the American revolt, attributed by the writer to the fact that the Act of 7th Geo. III. was declared to be for the purpose of raising a revenue in America. On the subject of plans to allay the revolt, the writer says, "I cannot presume to suggest expedients to your Lordship's wisdom and prudence: some proper ones, I doubt not, will occur. Severities have been tried. If it can be thought consistent with the supremacy and dignity of the mother country to relax and adopt lenient measures on this occasion, it would crown your Lordship's administration with unfading honour, to be the instrument of removing this remaining source of civil discord. For notwithstanding any contrary representations, I cannot but be firmly persuaded that the repeal of the whole Act would ensure the future submission of the inhabitants of this part of America to every other Act of the British Parliament now in force."

1773, Dec. 24.—Same to same. (Copy.) A meeting of the Council has been held, and it has been resolved that the Attorney-General shall be directed to enquire into the matter, and to lay it before the Grand Jury. A copy report of the meeting and of the resolution follows (No. 19).

1773, Dec. 27. Halifax Yard.—Admiral Arbuthnot to Governor Legge. That it is not in his power to lend him 1,000*l.* of the money supplied by the Navy board for the dockyard, for the purpose of facilitating the raising of a provincial regiment.

1773, Dec. 27. Philadelphia.—Joseph Reed to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing extracts from a Philadelphia newspaper, and also a written paper giving accounts of the proceedings of the inhabitants of the town on the arrival of the tea ship. These papers state that, on hearing the tea ship had been sighted, the Committee of the town waited upon the consignees of the tea and requested them to resign their commissions. This they did. On the arrival of the ship the captain, Mr. Ayres, was informed by the Committee that he could not discharge his cargo, and that the Committee had determined he should take it back to England.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

The vessel was supplied with all necessities, and in two hours time set out on her return. This is the substance of the written paper. The extracts from the newspaper contain, in addition to reports of these proceedings, expresses from Charlestown, New York, and Boston, giving accounts of the tea riots in those places, the proceedings of the Committees, reports of meetings, &c.

Mr. Reed in his letter says, "As it may be a matter of importance to your Lordship, not only to be made acquainted with the facts, but the circumstances, rank, and character of those who promote this opposition, it would be improper for me to conceal that it has originated and been conducted by some of the principal inhabitants, and I may safely say continued and encouraged by all, as there has not been a single publication nor have I heard one person speak in favour of the measure. Your Lordship will judge from these facts how general and unanimous the opinion is, that no article subject to a duty for the purpose of raising a revenue ought to be received in America. Nor is it confined to this city. Your Lordship will see by the papers herewith that the same opposition is made at New York, Carolina, and Boston, and you may rely upon it that the same idea prevails throughout the country. Any farther attempts to enforce this Act, I am humbly of opinion, will end in blood. . . . The destruction of the tea at Boston has occasioned much speculation in this city, and there is some difference of opinion, but in general their conduct is approved as proceeding from necessity. . . . If the total repeal of this Act should be thought of, it is not possible to frame a stronger argument than what arises from the increase of smuggling, by which there is a regular and sufficient supply of tea, and has been for several years, equal to the demand of this whole country. What a loss must this have been to the mother country! What an acquisition to a foreign state! From the first enquiry and computation I have been able to make, the annual consumption of this province now amounts to 2,000 chests of tea, the profits of which have been totally lost to England for upwards of five years. At the lowest computation it cannot be less than 100,000*l.* lost to England from this Province only; but when other articles are considered which accompany it, who can tell to what amount it may reach?"

1778. Dec. 28. New York.—Major-General Haldimand to the Earl of Dartmouth. The news of what happened at Boston on the 15th has created such a ferment at New York and Philadelphia that the Governors, General Haldimand writes, will probably choose to have the tea sent back to England.

1773, December. A few cuttings from American newspapers.

1774. Jan. 4th. Boston. — Governor Hutchinson to the Earl of Dartmouth. (Copy.) One of the tea ships which had been cast ashore off Cape Cod has safely discharged her cargo, and the Governor has ordered it to be stored in the castle. It is not expected that the ships bound for New York and Philadelphia will be allowed to discharge their cargo.

1774, Jan. 4. Newbern, North Carolina.—Martin Howard, Chief Justice of North Carolina to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing a memorial for increase of salary and emolument.

1774, Jan. 5.—(Extract.) Major-General Haldimand to the Earl of Dartmouth. The tea was sent back to England from Philadelphia by order of the mob as soon as it arrived. It has not yet arrived at New York. "I cannot find that the behaviour of the people of Boston meets with the general approbation even of the people of that Government, some of

EARL
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

which seem desirous that their metropolis should be made to pay for it. . . . I cannot but think however but that the mercantile interest will prevail and influence a great many parts of that country to approve their unwarrantable behaviour in the destruction of the property of the East India Company." Enclosing a report of a meeting of the inhabitants, held at Plymouth on the 7th December 1773, approving the proceedings of the inhabitants of Boston and Philadelphia, and declaring the consignees to have forfeited the protection to which every good citizen is entitled; and also a protest signed by forty of the inhabitants of the same town, protesting against the foregoing report and declaring their loyalty to the King.

1774, Jan. 6.—Copy of correspondence from December 9th 1773 to January 22nd 1774 between Mr. Meyrick, Governor Legge's English agent, and Mr. Montgomery, Mr. Dilkes and others, respecting money due to Governor Legge for the purchase of his company in the 62nd regiment and for other matters.

1774, Jan. 6. Boston.—Governor Hutchinson to the Earl of Dartmouth. "Private." Enclosing a Journal of proceedings in Massachusetts Bay relative to the importation of teas on account of the East India Company from November 2nd to December 16th, 1773.

1774, Jan. 6. 25, North Street, Soho. John Hanson to the Earl of Dartmouth. The appointment of a naval officer in the customs at Philadelphia, and on the question whether the appointments to such offices were vested in the Crown or in Mr. Penn. Enclosing a copy of a letter to Mr. Penn on the subject, and a paper of notes on the same matter.

1774, Jan. 8. East India House.—P. Michell, Secretary to the Court of Directors of the East India Company, to Governor Legge. The Directors find that their agents at Boston, New York, Philadelphia and South Carolina are in some danger of being interfered with in the execution of their commissions and that some of them are likely to be exposed to the effects of popular indignation. Enclosing under cover to the Governor such instructions to their agents at Halifax as they consider necessary for their future guidance. Requesting the Governor to "give such countenance to our said agents as shall be consistent with the dignity of the high office which you hold under the Crown."

1774, Jan. 12. Newbern, North Carolina.—Governor Martin to the Earl of Dartmouth as to the hardships and sufferings of Mr. Fanning, a Colonel of Militia and a lawyer, which he underwent at the hands of the Colonists for his steady adherence to the Crown and Government. The most disgraceful indignities were offered to his person, and his house and furniture were wrecked at a loss to him of 1,500*l*.

1774, Jan. 13.—Copy of an Act of Parliament entitled "An act to discontinue, in such manner, and for such time as are therein mentioned, the landing and discharging, lading or shipping of goods, wares, and merchandise at the town and within the harbour of Boston in the Province of Massachusetts Bay in North America."

1774, Jan. 15. Dublin.—R. Browne to Governor Legge. Asking an appointment in America for his brother, an ensign in the 31st Regiment.

1774, Jan. 19.—An unaddressed letter from the Duke of Manchester. Respecting an appointment offered to his brother, which being of so small value he cannot accept.

1774, Jan. 25. Lincoln's Inn Fields.—W. Hey, Chief Justice of Quebec, to the Lord Chancellor. Submitting "A plan for the Administration of the laws in the Province of Canada."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

1774. Jan. 26.—Lord Chancellor Apsley to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing a letter from a Mr. Nelme, a copyist, to Lady Apsley, and requesting Lord Dartmouth to let him go with a proper reprimand for his folly.

N.D. Saturday night.—Same to same. On the same subject. Mr. Nelme "copied the letter he brought for Lady A. from a draught given him by Dr Dodd." The letters probably refer to the charge of simony brought against Dr Dodd (the "Maccaroni parson") who, through his wife, offered a sum of money to the Chancellor for a Church living of which he was patron.

1774, Jan. 28. Boston.—Governor Hutchinson to the Earl of Dartmouth. Respecting the tarring and feathering and other barbarities committed by the mob upon the person of Mr. John Malcolm, a preventive officer of Falmouth, in Cases Bay, he having rendered himself obnoxious by seizing a vessel for want of a register and other acts. Accompanied by an extract from a letter in the Boston Gazette dated 27th January to the same effect, which also states Mr. Malcolm's life to have been despaired of. Both of these papers were laid before the Houses of Parliament on the 11th March 1774.

1774, Jan. 30. Leeds.—Richard Browne to whom not stated. Encloses a letter (not now with the papers) by his brother's desire. Thanks his Excellency for favours received from General Gage and Colonel James, and for his countenance when a volunteer under his Excellency's command in America.

1774, Feb. 2. New York.—Major-General Haldimand to the Earl of Dartmouth. The teaship for New York not yet arrived. "Every thing seems quiet at present, but little matters in the present state of affairs might give new vigour to that spirit of opposition, which is greatly strengthened by the association, and steps taken by the assemblies of the respective Provinces to proceed with unanimity in opposing the authority of Parliament from extending to the Colonies in North America."

1774, Feb. 9. Welbeck Street.—William Payne Georges, Agent for the Virgin Islands, to the Earl of Dartmouth. With respect to a petition from the inhabitants of the Islands to the King, requesting Lord Dartmouth's favour for it.

1774, Feb. 15. Pensacola.—J. Stephenson to Mr. Montfort Browne. As to his settlements along the Mississippi.

1774, Feb. 17. Boston.—Governor Hutchinson to the Earl of Dartmouth. "Private." The proceedings of the people against the Judges of the Superior Courts to prevent a trial of those concerned in the tea riots. Advantage was taken of the weak state of body by which the mind was also affected, of one of the Judges and he was induced, in consequence of the resolves of the last session, to send a letter to the Speaker expressing his determination to comply with the demand of the House. Having carried this point with one, the others were afraid of increasing the rage of the people against them if they refused to comply with the renewed demand made upon them the present session, and one of them assured me that he was constrained to a compliance, merely because his person, his wife, and children, and his property were at the mercy of the populace, from whom there was nothing which he had not to fear. I used every argument in my power to fortify him, but could not prevail, and none but the Chief Justice refused to comply. . . . Indeed there is no prospect of any notice of the late extravagancies in the town of Boston, the grand Jurors for that town being persons who were among the principal promoters of the meetings which occasioned the destruction of the tea and were undoubtedly selected to prevent any prosecutions. I see no prospect of persuading the people who disapprove of these proceedings to support me in my opposition to them, unless they could be sure of protection. They all gave me one and the same answer." The illness of the Lieut. Governor has prevented the Governor availing himself of the leave granted him.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Sees no prospect of order being restored without the interposition of power from England. "I rather think the anarchy will continually increase until the whole Province is in confusion. I received intelligence a few days ago of town meetings held in the County of Berkshire adjoining to the Province of New York to form combinations against the payment of lawyers and sheriffs fees in actions at law, because they thought the established fees by the law of the Province were too high. Success in the opposition to the supreme power over the whole leads the subjects of subordinate powers to conclude they may also shake off such subjection whensoever they are dissatisfied with them."

1774, Feb. 18, Friday.—James Burrow to Governor Legge. Enclosing a return of all the papers and books belonging to the Court of Chancery at Halifax.

1774, March 2, King's Bench Walk. The Hon. Daines Barrington to Lord Dartmouth.

"Happening to be the only Vice President last summer in London during the recess of the Royal Society I had the honour to inclose your Lordship a letter from Prince Masserano, in which he informed the Royal Society that the King of Spain had consented to furnish them with the natural productions of South America which they might request, provided his Majesty might receive in return for his own Museum those of the British Colonies.

Your Lordship after this informed me that you had laid this proposal of exchange before the King who was pleased to approve of this intercourse of science between the two nations, and that when we had prepared the first present on our part, you would take his Majesty's pleasure in what manner it should be transmitted to the King of Spain.

The Committee of Natural History therefore having now made a collection which is nearly ready for packing, would be happy to receive your Lordship's further directions on this head.

Give me leave also to take this opportunity of reminding your Lordship that the Royal Society will not be able to continue this barter of natural productions unless a proper artist is sent to North America in order to do justice to fresh specimens, who cannot be procured to cross the Atlantic under an allowance of 150*l.* or rather 200*l.* per ann. an expence which the finances of the Royal Society are by no means equal to."

1774, March 5.—Print of "An oration delivered March 5th 1774, at the request of the inhabitants of the town of Boston to commemorate the bloody tragedy of the 5th March 1770, by the Hon. John Hancock, Esq." A very inflammatory address of 20 pp. long, delivered at Faneuil Hall, Boston.

1774, March 7. Saint Augustine.—Governor Tonyn to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing copies of a letter from Lord Barrington to him and of his answer thereto, relative to a charge for the Garrison Hospital at St. Augustine's which his Lordship proposes shall be placed to the Governor's contingent account.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

1774, March 9. Boston.—Governor Hutchinson to the Earl of Dartmouth. Copy. The first part relates to the attempt of the House and Council to remove the Chief Justice of the Province by impeachment.

"Sunday the 6th instant a vessel arrived from London having on board about 30 chests of tea on account of several traders in tea. The next day the vessel was haled to the wharf where the vessels lay which had the East India Company's tea, and in the evening a sufficient number of persons disguised like Indians went on board and destroyed the tea in a short time, and the next morning the vessel was haled to the long wharf, where vessels from London generally unload to take out the rest of her goods. The owners of the tea are very silent, and I think if they could find out who were the immediate actors they would not venture at present to bring any action in the law against them. If they had attempted to land it, it's probable they would have shared in the fate of the consignees of the Company's teas, neither of which have been able to return to the town since they were first banished."

1774, March 10. Whitehall.—J. Pownall to Governor Legge. "Circular." Enclosing the King's message to the Houses of Parliament, accompanying papers on American affairs, particularly the riots at Boston and of the resolutions of the Houses thereon.

1774, March 24.—Letter signed by Henry Newton, Jonathan Binney, and others, to Richard Cumberland. The writers represent the settlers of Nova Scotia, who have sent a petition to the King praying him to remit the quit rents due from them to him for a few years, as they find themselves quite unable to pay it owing to the youth of the Colony, the absence of roads, &c.

1774, Mar. 25. South Carolina.—Copy of message from the Commons House of Assembly to the Lieutenant-Governor, respecting the rejection of bills passed by them by the Council, and the impossibility of any further business being done, and asking leave to adjourn till August.

Copy of Lieutenant-Governor Bull's answer adjourning the House till May.

Copy of resolutions of the House of Assembly relative to the distress under which the public creditors labour for want of payment of their debts, and recommending payment to them of interest.

1774, March 25.—Colonel Dalling to Mr. Pownall. His return home in the ensuing summer in spite of his deputy's non-arrival. This disobedience of orders will be due to the precarious state of his wife's and family's healths.

1774, March 29.—James Burrows to Governor Legge. Inviting him to a dinner the writer proposes to give on his being admitted a member (?) of the Council.

1774, March 30. Boston.—Governor Hutchinson to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing a copy of a letter from Mr. Lee, Agent of the House of Representatives of Boston in England in the absence of Dr. Franklin. This is probably the letter from "A. L.," dated 22nd December 1773, extracts from which are given above. "The Speaker to whom it was directed having lent it to a gentleman, he copied it, and the same person who furnished me with the copy of the letter which I transmitted in October procured this, being in a public station and thinking himself bound in duty to the King to promote His Majesty's service."

1774, April 4. Philadelphia.—Joseph Reed to the Earl of Dartmouth. I glad to hear that his letters to Lord Dartmouth have proved useful.

Nothing of importance has happened since the departure of the tea ship, but some designs are forming and will be carried into execution unless the Tea Act is repealed. Mentions some grievances. The post office, where the rate of postage for small distances continues the same as in Queen Anne's time. The lowest rate is 8*d.* currency for a single letter, or about 5*d.* sterling. "This is become a very heavy tax upon all trade and business and is a real loss to the revenue, as the postage would amount to more than it now does (from the increase of letters) if it was put on a more reasonable footing."

The bad system of communication between the colonies, the misappropriation of the revenues of the Post Office, and the rudeness and incivility of many of its officers are other grievances connected with the postal system.

Another complaint, mentioned by Mr. Reed, arises from the mode of trying Revenue causes at the Admiralty Courts by deputy judges appointed without the proper supervision of the judges themselves who are in England. "When the Court fixed at this place opened, the judge was a disappointed stamp officer, and every officer in it an underling in the Custom House. The Register was a gauger and surveyor, the Marshal a tide waiter, &c. No measure could have been formed more certain to invite opposition and contempt. These officers are generally interested in the cause depending, so that partly from that reason and partly their incapacity, it is often necessary to procure indifferent persons to do their duty."

1774, April 9. Ashford.—The Rev. Thomas Bliss, Vicar of Ashford, to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to his distressed circumstances.

1774, April 9. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Governor Gage. The King has appointed Mr. Gage Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief of the province of Massachusetts Bay, and requires him to return at once on board the Lively to his command in North America, with full powers and instructions. An Act of Parliament recently passed will be sent with this letter, for discontinuing the loading and unloading of merchandise in Boston Harbour, and the Governor is directed to call a meeting for the purpose of securing the best means to carry the Act into effect. Every care is to be taken to quiet the people by gentle means, the troops over whom the Governor has the command are not to be called out unless absolutely necessary, but in the meantime until a proper submission to the King has been made, Lieut.-General Gage is directed to fix the seat of Government at Salem and to remove thither all the Government offices and business which is not fixed by law to be transacted at Boston. Lord Dartmouth proceeds to consider what punishment should be awarded to the ringleaders of the riots at Boston in November and December 1773, the destroyers of the tea, &c., and says that it has been decided that proceedings shall be taken against them in the Colonial Courts by the Governor, but he is to exercise his discretion as to prosecuting them or not, by the likelihood of a local jury bringing in an impartial verdict; "if, however, the prejudices of the people should appear to you to be such as would in all probability prevent a conviction, however clear and full the evidence might be, in that case it would be better to desist from prosecution, seeing that an ineffectual attempt would only be triumph to the faction and disgraceful to Government." Power is given the Governor to veto the election of any persons to be members of the Council, as are known to him to be opposed to the King's Government.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1774, April 11. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Governor Gage. "Since my letter to you of the 9th inst. a commission has passed the Great Seal authorizing you to pardon all offences and to remit all fines and forfeitures without exception."

1774, April 11. Inner Temple.—Francis Maseres to the Earl of Dartmouth. Relative to Canadian affairs. The writer has received two letters from Quebec, one from Colonel Christie and the other from Mr. Delisle the Protestant minister at Montreal. Colonel Christie writes "I cannot give you any satisfactory account concerning the state of this Province, which for want of the long expected laws or regulations from home is every day getting into greater confusion." Mr. Maseres' pamphlet in answer to one by Mr. Cugnet is universally admired, and he quotes extracts from letters he has received to show that it is so. He then states his ideas on the subject of the reform of the Canadian laws at some length.

1774, April 11. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Governor Legge. Recommending the bearer of the despatch, Mr. Monk, for the office of Attorney General of Nova Scotia upon the first vacancy.

1774, April 13. Covent Garden.—W. Bollen to the Earl of Dartmouth. Unimportant; mentions the departure of Governor Gage.

1774, April 30. Gray's Inn.—Edward Montagu to the Earl of Dartmouth. Has just heard of the death of Mr. Dalrymple his Majesty's Attorney General in Grenada. Mr. Sharp is thought the most proper person in this island to succeed him.

Same date. Bloomsbury Square.—Similar letter from Henry Wilmot.

1774, April. Copy. Statement of account. Massachusetts Bay with Dennys de Bordt.

1774, May 10. Halifax.—Report from Mr. Burrow to Governor Legge. As to the condition of the Orphan House at Halifax, with estimates for conducting it on a more economical plan. With a duplicate copy.

1774, May 11.—Mary Countess Dowager Gower to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to the Vicarage of Ashford of which she is patron. Mr. Bliss, the present vicar, complains of the smallness of his stipend. Lady Gower promises to make enquiries.

1774, May 24. Halifax.—Copy letter for signature of Governor Legge. Congratulating General Gage on his appointment as Governor of Massachusetts Bay and promising his cooperation in everything to promote His Majesty's service.

1774, May 24.—Grey Elliott to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to the case of Mr. Gordon, which he requests may be referred to the Board of Trade.

1774, May 27. Halifax.—Governor Legge to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to the necessity of Law Officers of experience being appointed in the Colonies seeing that the Governors frequently have not sufficient knowledge of the laws and constitution of Great Britain or the Colonies and need men to whom they can refer cases of difficulty.

Many such cases have been brought before the writer in which he has not had any assistance from Mr. Nesbitt, the Attorney General, as they were for the most part complaints against him for the misappropriation of money. As there was no one else to call upon, Governor Legge was under the necessity of forwarding the papers to Mr. Pownall for the consideration of the Law Officers of the Crown.

Has heard that Mr. James Monk is to have the reversion of the office of Attorney General of Nova Scotia. Governor Legge thinks he is too young to have acquired sufficient knowledge of law.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1774, May 30. Philadelphia.—Joseph Reed to the Earl of Dartmouth. The state of affairs in America in consequence of the proceedings against Boston and Dr. Franklin. Announces himself as one of those "who cannot admit the right of Parliament to tax America." Has been nominated by his fellow citizens to devise and assist in such measures as will prevent the exercise of this right by Parliament.

"If the Boston port bill and the other proceedings against that Province have been founded on a supposition that the other Colonies would leave them to struggle alone, I do assure your Lordship there never was a greater mistake. It is now about three weeks since the advices came, and every Colony from Massachusetts to Virginia, from which we have not time to hear, have signified their resolutions to concur with each other in every measure to relieve Boston from the distresses the Act will bring upon them."

Mentions meetings of the legislative bodies of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Connecticut, to devise measures to support Boston in the struggle. A suggestion has been made to send supplies to that town to relieve distress; "in less than a month there is little doubt but ship loads of provisions will be sent as presents from every Province on the Continent except Canada and the Floridas." Not one person has advised Boston to submit, and it seems certain that they never will, and if neither Parliament or America will recede the most dreadful consequences will ensue. Encloses a petition from the inhabitants of Pennsylvania to John Penn, Esquire, Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Province, praying him to call the Assembly as soon as possible, that they may consult how best to relieve the anxieties of the people and restore harmony and peace between the mother country and the Colonies.

1774, June 2. London.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Governor Legge. Is rejoiced to hear he finds himself so happy in his present position. Is afraid it will be difficult to procure him a grant of 500*l.* from Parliament for the roads of his Province, but will endeavour to obtain money elsewhere.

1774, June 3. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Governor Gage. "Separate and secret." Requesting him to procure copies of two letters, one from Doctor Franklin, dated 7th July 1773, the other from Mr. Arthur Lee, dated* 25th (sic) December 1773, as they are supposed to be of a treasonable nature.

1774, June 3. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Governor Gage. "Separate." Enclosing the Act for providing quarters for the King's troops in America, which has just received the Royal Assent.

1774, June 3. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Governor Gage. Enclosing (the enclosures are not now with the letter) two further Acts of Parliament which have received the Royal Assent. "These Acts close the consideration of what relates to the state of your Government, and it is hoped that they will have the good effect to give vigor and activity to civil authority; to prevent those unwarrantable assemblings of the people for factious purposes, which have been the source of so much mischief; and to secure an impartial administration of justice in all cases where the authority of this kingdom may be in question." One of the Acts is for the better regulation of the Government of the Province

* Probably a mistake for 22nd December 1773, the date of the letter given in pages 344-5.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

of Massachusetts Bay, and provides that the Council shall henceforward be nominated by the King on the recommendation of the Governor and shall no longer be elective. The other Act is for the more impartial administration of justice. Another bill, waiting the Royal Assent, is for making more effectual provision for quartering His Majesty's troops and is founded on the artifices used in Boston in 1770 to elude the Act of Parliament, when two regiments had been ordered to be quartered there. The remainder of the letter treats of the impeachment of the Chief Justice of the Province by the Council, which the firmness of Mr. Hutchinson avoided, and the death of the French King on the 10th of May 1774, an event which, Lord Dartmouth thinks, may be of great importance in the crisis. Everything depends on what Ministers the young King will choose to put his confidence in. Who these will be, Lord Dartmouth says, is mere conjecture.

1774, June 10. Philadelphia.—Joseph Reed to the Earl of Dartmouth. Announces the determination to hold a general Congress of all the Colonies to oppose the Parliamentary claim of taxation and to relieve the distresses of the port of Boston. The first business proposed for them is to draw up what was on a former occasion called a Bill of Rights and it is probable that certain members will take this personally over to Great Britain. Encloses resolutions "unanimously agreed to by 46 of the principal inhabitants of Philadelphia as proper to be proposed at the Great Meeting to be held next week, when no doubt they will be agreed to as containing the general sense of the inhabitants of this city. These resolutions propose a subscription to relieve Boston, and a meeting to choose delegates for the Province to attend the Colonial Congress.

1774, June 15.—Thomas Pitt to the Earl of Dartmouth, asking an audience for Mr. Wharton who has received important news from America.

1774, June 16.—The case of Colonel Edmund Fanning, private secretary to Governor Tryon.

1774, June 17. London.—Mr. Dennis de Bordt to the Earl of Dartmouth. Asking for an appointment in America.

1774, June 26. Grenada.—Governor Leyborne to the Earl of Dartmouth. Copy Extracts. Enclosing Acts of the Island for establishing law courts and compelling the specific performance of money contracts. (Not now with the letter).

1774, June 30. Whitehall.—J. Pownall to Governor Legge. Mr. Cumberland's office is not a law office and himself though a very sensible man no lawyer. The Law Officer of the Board of Trade is Mr. Jackson one of the King's Counsel. Encloses Mr. Jackson's observations (not now with the letter) on this letter of the 18th March and the papers enclosed.

N.D. [1774, June.]—Memorial of Lientenant Cambel, Engineer, for a grant of 1,200 acres of land on the Mississippi in the province of West Florida to himself and of certain other lands to several persons whom he names.

N.D.—Draft letter undated and unsigned from the Earl of Dartmouth to Mr. Reed in answer to his of the 30th May. Is a strong friend to America and will remain so until the clearest evidence of contempt or disregard of the mother country shall compel him to withdraw his friendship. Is fully aware of the turn things have taken there, but hopes they will become better. "I will still hope that principles of another nature prevail in the minds of those who are best entitled to

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

the attention and consideration of their fellow subjects, and that a little time will convince you and all that can think with coolness and temper, that the liberties of America are not so much in danger from anything that Parliament has done, or is likely to do here, as from the violence and misconduct of America itself." "The absurdity of the idea that is held out to the common people, that England wants to enslave America. "What then, is the present case? The supreme legislature of the whole British Empire has laid a duty (no matter for the present whether it has or has not a right so to do, it is sufficient that we conceive it has) on a certain commodity on its importation into America; the people of America, at Boston particularly, resist that authority and oppose the execution of the law in a manner clearly treasonable upon the principles of every government upon earth. The mother country very unwilling to proceed to extremities passes laws (indisputably within its power) for the punishment of the most flagrant offenders, for the reformation of abuses, and for the prevention of the like enormities for the future. The question then is, whether these laws are to be submitted to: if the people of America say no, they say in effect that they will no longer be a part of the British Empire; they change the whole ground of the controversy; they no longer contend that Parliament has not a right to exact a particular provision, they say that it has no right to consider them at all as within its jurisdiction." If a proper submission is made, America will probably receive all she wants. As to the case of Dr. Franklin, Lord Dartmouth cannot applaud his conduct with relation to Mr. Hutchinson's letters, and is of opinion that many of those not favourably disposed to Mr. Hutchinson are now ashamed of the clamour raised against him on account of the letters. "I am persuaded the time will come when every body that reads them will be astonished to think they could have been made the ground of a serious accusation against him."

1774, July 6. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Governor Gage. Is glad to see by the Governor's letters that there is a hope that the tranquillity of the Province will be restored. With regard to the Boston Port Bill, Lord Dartmouth says that whenever it shall be certified that the East India Company have received compensation from the town of Boston for the loss of the tea, and, by report from the Governor, that the king's duties may be safely collected there, there is no doubt the privileges of Boston as a port will be restored.

1774, July 8.—Statistics of the town of Louisbourg, Nova Scotia, as to its inhabitants, number of houses, stores, and shells of houses not repairable, as likewise the grass lands near the town.

1774, July 8. Halifax.—Governor Legge to the Earl of Dartmouth. The insufficient communication between Great Britain and Nova Scotia. The Adamant is the only vessel trading between the two, and she makes but two voyages a year. Has heard by a vessel from Portsmouth, New Hampshire, that the trading towns on the Continent of America are entering into combinations not to trade with Great Britain or the Sugar Colonies.

1774, July 11.—Grey Elliott to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing a petition of Mr. Gordon, a merchant, in Charlestown, South Carolina, to the King in Council, praying redress for the loss of lands bought by him in 1763 in East Florida.

1774, July 15. Philadelphia.—Printed Postscript Extra to the Pennsylvania Journal of July 23rd, 1774, containing a full account of the proceedings "at a Provincial Meeting of Deputies chosen by the

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSB.

"several Counties in Pennsylvania held at Philadelphia, July 15th, 1774, and continued by adjournments from day to day."

The names of those present for the City and County of Philadelphia and of the other Counties in Pennsylvania are given. The Postscript then proceeds:

"Agreed that in case of any difference in sentiment the question be determined by the Deputies voting by Counties. The letters from Boston of the 13th May were then read, and a short account given of the steps taken in consequence thereof, and the measures now pursuing in this and the neighbouring provinces; after which the following Resolves were passed.

Unan. I. That we acknowledge ourselves and the inhabitants of this Province liege subjects of his Majesty King George the Third to whom we and they owe and will bear true and faithful allegiance.

Unan. II. That as the idea of an unconstitutional independence on the parent state is utterly abhorrent to our principles, we view the late unhappy differences between Great Britain and the Colonies with the deepest distress and anxiety of mind as fruitless to her, grievous to us, and destructive of the best interests of both.

Unan. III. That it is therefore our ardent desire that our ancient harmony with the Mother Country should be restored and a perpetual love and union subsist between us on the principles of the constitution and an interchange of good offices without the least infraction of our mutual rights.

Unan. IV. That the inhabitants of these Colonies are entitled to the same rights and liberties within these Colonies that the subjects born in England are intitled to within that realm.

Unan. V. That the power assumed by the Parliament of Great Britain to bind the people of these Colonies in all cases whatsoever is unconstitutional and therefore the source of all these unhappy differences.

Unan. VI. That the Act of Parliament for shutting up the Port of Boston is unconstitutional; oppressive to the inhabitants of that town; dangerous to the liberties of the British Colonies; and therefore that we consider our brethren at Boston as suffering in the common cause of these Colonies.

Unan. VII. That the Bill for altering the administration of justice in certain criminal cases within the Province of Massachusetts Bay if passed into an Act of Parliament will be as unconstitutional oppressive and dangerous as the Act above mentioned.

Unan. VIII. That the Bill for changing the constitution of the Province of Massachusetts Bay established by Charter and enjoyed since the grant of that Charter if passed into an Act of Parliament will be unconstitutional in its consequences to the American Colonies.

Unan. IX. That there is an absolute necessity that a Congress of Deputies from the several Colonies be immediately assembled to consult together and form a general plan of conduct to be observed by all the Colonies for the purposes of procuring relief for our suffering brethren, obtaining redress of our grievances, preventing future dissensions, firmly establishing our rights, and restoring harmony between Great Britain and her Colonies on a constitutional foundation.

Unan. X. That although a suspension of the commerce of this large trading Province with Great Britain would greatly distress multitudes of our industrious inhabitants, yet that sacrifice and a much greater we are ready to offer for the preservation of our liberties; but in tenderness to the people of Great Britain as well as of this country, and in hopes that our just remonstrances will at length reach the ears of our gracious Sovereign, and be no longer treated with contempt by any of our fellow subjects in England, it is our earnest desire that the Congress should first try the gentler mode of stating our grievances and making a firm and decent claim of redress.

XI. Resolved by a great majority, That yet notwithstanding as an unanimity of councils and measures is indispensably necessary for the common welfare, if the Congress shall judge agreements of non-importation and non-exportation expedient, the people of this Province will join with the other principal and neighbouring Colonies in such an association of non-importation from and non-exportation to Great Britain as shall be agreed to at the Congress.

XII. Resolved by a majority, That, if any proceedings of the Parliament, of which notice shall be received, on this Continent before or at the General Congress shall render it necessary, in the opinion of that Congress, for the Colonies to take farther steps than are mentioned in the eleventh Resolve, in such case the inhabitants of this Province shall adopt such farther steps and do all in their power to carry them into execution.

Unan. XIII. That the vendors of merchandize of every kind within this Province ought not to take advantage of the Resolves relating to non-importation in this Province or elsewhere; but that they ought to sell their merchandise which they now have or may hereafter import at the same rates they have been accustomed to do within three months last past.

Unan. XIV. That the people of this Province will break off all trade, commerce, and dealing and will have no trade, commerce, or dealing of any kind with any Colony on this Continent or with any city or town in such Colony, or with any individual in any such Colony, city, or town which shall refuse, decline, or neglect to adopt and carry into execution such general plan as shall be agreed to in Congress.

Unan. XV. That it is the duty of every member of this Committee to promote as much as he can the subscription set on foot in the several counties of this Province for the relief of the distressed inhabitants of Boston.

Unan. XVI. That this Committee give instructions on the present situation of public affairs to their Representatives who are to meet next week in Assembly and request them to appoint a proper number of persons to attend a Congress of Deputies from the several Colonies at such time and place as may be agreed on to effect one general plan of conduct for attaining the great and important ends mentioned in the ninth resolve.

That John Dickinson, Dr. William Smith, Joseph Reed, John Kidd, Elisha Price, William Atlee, James Smith, James Wilson, Daniel Broadhead, John Okely and William Scull be appointed to prepare and bring in a draught of Instructions.

The Committee above-named having brought in a draught of Instructions the same were debated and amended and being agreed to were ordered to be signed by the Chairman. On the 21st the Committee in a body waited on the Assembly then sitting and presented the same."

The Instructions which are very long are printed at length.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

With the papers is also a MS. copy of the Resolves which differs in some particulars from those printed in the journal; the 12th Resolve being altogether omitted.

1774, July 18. Philadelphia.—Joseph Reed to the Earl of Dartmouth. The project of establishing a new Post Office in opposition to that of the Government has failed. The distress of Boston. Non-importation and non-exportation with Great Britain decided on.

1774, July 26. Philadelphia.—Joseph Reed to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing the above "Postscript Extra to the Pennsylvania Journal" dated July 23rd. The non-consumption and non-importation agreements throughout America against Great Britain: "There are at present great quantities of English cloth and manufactures in the country; that, and a spirit of frugality which may make it fashionable to wear old cloaths, will I believe induce this Province to go into a non-importation and non-consumption agreement if advised by the Congress; or if the Deputies who will be sent to Great Britain to endeavour to settle these unhappy disputes should be treated with neglect or contempt. It is at present the sense of the inhabitants of this Province that no measure of opposition to the Mother Country should be adopted until other modes have failed of success. The inclosed paper being the first attempt to draw the line of submission between Great Britain and the Colonies may not be unworthy your Lordship's notice."

There is a rumour that General Gage has orders to interrupt the Congress as a measure most obnoxious to administration; but for reasons stated in the letter the writer trusts that the Congress will not appear in so obnoxious a light. The General Assembly has resolved that a Congress is necessary for the redress of American grievances; and seven of their members have been appointed to attend the Congress. The letter concludes "Though I have had some small share in the transactions of this City, I do assure your Lordship it has been with reluctance, and if I could be convinced that a submission to the claims of Parliament to bind America in all cases whatsoever did not virtually and necessarily imply both for myself and my children a surrender of the blessings of liberty I should have bore a testimony against the measures pursued, and I am sure I speak not only my own but the sentiments of many of the most respectable in this City when I say there is nothing they so much lament as these unhappy differences and that they will rejoice to see the old union of affection renewed."

1774, Aug. 3. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Governor Gage. "It is much to be lamented that the people of Boston should still be capable of being made to believe that the measures they are prevailed upon to adopt are likely to attain the end they propose and to promote the reconciliation and union with this country which they profess to desire. Parliament has already shewn that it expects obedience and due submission to legal authority, and I can have very little insight into the principles of Government, if any relaxation from the spirit of the measures it has taken can be expected till that submission is satisfactorily obtained."

1774, Aug. 4. Whitehall.—J. Pownall to Governor Legge recommending Captain Jadis who is anxious to establish himself and his family upon the St. John's River.

1774, Aug. 9. Parliament Street.—J. Meyrick to Governor Legge. On private business matters and military gossip. "General Gausel died in the Fleet Prison on the 28th of last month after a few days illness, he was very near finishing a settlement of his affairs, and obtaining his liberty; Lord Cavan succeeds him as Colonel of the 55th Regiment." A duplicate of the letter follows.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1774, Aug. 9. Ashford.—The Rev. Thomas Bliss, Vicar of Ashford, to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to his poverty and the smallness of his stipend.

1774, Aug. 9.—Extracts from a letter from Major McDonald an officer in one of the Virginia Militia regiments to Major Connolly, an officer acting under the Earl of Dunmore at Pittsburgh. (Enclosed in a letter from Thomas Walpole to the Earl of Dartmouth of Oct. 27, q. v.). "On the 2nd instant I and my party attacked the Upper Shawnesse towns; I destroyed their corn fields, burnt their cabbins, took three scalps and made one prisoner; I had two men killed and six wounded. Simon Girty being returned from Wheeling to Pittsburgh gives the following information the 11th August 1774. That he met David Owens and twelve men upon Captina, on their return from attacking the upper Shawnesse Towns, where they had been with Major McDonald, who told him that the day before the pilots (Owens being one) had reached Wackitomika; they came across an Indian coming towards them at whom Owens fired but missed him, then the guidea found a horse with some baggage on him. And upon their arrival at Wackitomika, they were informed by a prisoner (afterwards taken) that this Indian was going for bears' oil at some adjacent encampment. That they encamped that night, and the next morning proceeded on their march when three men (pilots or spies) being forward they heard a kind of noise, like a cough on the path before them which alarming them, they saw an Indian coming up towards them on the road, at whom they fired but missed him, advancing a little further they perceived where the Indians had made blinds on the path side to waylay the party who they expected to be coming against them, after proceeding a little further they were fired upon by a party of Indians by which five white men were wounded and two killed; and one Indian supposed to be a Delaware also killed, but how many Indians were wounded is unknown, but they suspected there were some more either killed or wounded. Leaving 25 men to guard the wounded, they pursued the Indians into the Snakes' Town, and the advanced party observing an Indian making from the water up the bank, whom they suspecting to be in the preceding battle, fired at and wounded him, the main body then coming to the opposite side of the river to the said town, Joseph Nicholson called over to the Indians and told them that he was one of the six nations; the Indians reply and asked if he was Simon Girty, Nicholson answered that he was not Simon Girty, for that he was at Fort Pitt, upon which four of the Indians came over. Major McDonald then gave it out in orders that no white man should attempt to come near them or molest them. A council then commencing between Major MacDonald and these Indians, one of his men fired across the river and killed an Indian. The Indians after receiving orders from Major McDonald to bring over two white women they had prisoners, which they promised to obey, were dismissed, however none of them returned except one Indian an Onondaga but without the prisoners, and him they detained as a prisoner. They then crossed the river and attacked the Snakes' Town, where they found some Indians on whom they fired, killed one, and one of their own men was wounded, last of all they proceeded on through the several upper towns, destroying them all and all the corn they found standing as likewise between three and four hundred bushels of old corn."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1774, Aug. 10. Pittsburgh.—Extract of a letter from Colonel George Croghan. (Enclosed in the letter of Oct. 27, from Thomas Walpole to the Earl of Dartmouth, q. v.).

"I was in great hopes that the legislature of Pennsylvania would have fallen on some measures to have treated with the Six Nations and the Delawares who live on the river Ohio, and opposite to that province: But I find they have unfortunately neglected to do it, I much fear the true state of the frontiers has not been laid before them and that they do not sufficiently know who was the cause of the present melancholy situation of these frontiers, for if they had they would certainly have speedily and earnestly represented to the natives their innocence in the bloodshed of their countrymen. The Six Nations and the Delawares, have given the strongest proofs of their desire for peace and have taken great pains to stop the war now finally carrying on between the Virginians and the Shawnesse, but at the same time they observe that they are greatly surprised that whilst their brother Sir William Johnson (in behalf of their Father the Great King) and myself are talking to them of peace, giving them peace belts and assuring them of the friendly disposition of the King's subjects, that at the same time the great man of Virginia is putting guns into his people's hands and sending them to destroy their brothers the Shawnesse and their houses and their corn, &c. I have done, I assure you, everything in my power to maintain the present peace with the Six Nations and the Delawares on the river and at a very large expence to myself—as my house has for several months been continually filled with chiefs and principal warriors, but I cannot any longer support the expence and therefore must plainly tell you that unless I receive some assistance from you in behalf of the proprietors of the new Province I shall be forced to fly from hence—the consequence of which will be the inevitable destruction of hundreds of poor families, who now stay on the plantations depending on my interest with the Six Nations and Delawares. If the new Colony had been established last year, as the Indians were acquainted and promised by Sir William Johnson by order of the King it would be, the blood of the King's subjects would have been saved, and the present unspeakable distress of thousands of families would not have been fatally experienced as it is by them. Mr. Campbell waits on you with this letter and let me intreat of you to send me immediately by him thirty thousand of white and twenty thousand of black Wampum that I may once more exert my utmost influence with the neighbouring nations to prevent the spreading of a general Indian rupture."

1774, Aug. 13. Cambridge, Massachusetts Bay.—Mr. Brattle to Governor Hutchinson. Mentioning alterations in the constitution of the Province which he should rejoice to see effected; 1st "That petit jurors might be drawn out of the box as formerly; 2ndly, that no civil officer be displaced but by advice of Council; . . . 3rdly, that the towns without particular application to the Governor, which will be very troublesome, might at their March meetings have liberty to vote a town tax to defray the charges of the town."

1774, Aug. 15. Boston.—Admiral Graves to Governor Legge. Hopes that "the gentlemen composing the Congress will, after a dispassionate consideration, judge it entirely for their honour and interest to be reconciled to Great Britain upon her own terms."

1774, Aug. 25. Grenada.—Ashton Warner Byam to the Earl of Dartmouth. Thanking his Lordship for his appointment as Solicitor General.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

1774, Aug. 31. London.—Nathaniel Colver to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to the distress of patentees and settlers of lands in the Hudson's river and elsewhere. Enclosing a petition to the King from the Sechem and Chiefs of the Mohekanuck Tribe complaining of ill usage by the Government of New York State, and dispossession from their lands therein, and alleging that they served as rangers in the late war in Canada against the French, and are entitled to a grant of lands as a bounty promised them.

1774, Sep. 2. Boston.—Copy of a letter from Governor Gage to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing nine papers relating to the action of the inhabitants against the members of the Council. "Though I saw things were bad when I wrote from Salem, I found them much worse than I expected when I arrived here. Several of the new Councillors who dwell at a distance had fled from their houses and been obliged to seek protection amongst the troops in Boston. In that number were Messrs. Ruggles, Edson, Leonard, and Murray; and Messrs. Loring and Pepperell are lately come into town. The object of the people was to force them to give up their seats in Council which has taken effect with Mr. Paine who was seized and roughly treated."

Other members of the Council were treated badly, Mr. Watson, Mr. Willard, who "was grievously maltreated, first in Connecticut where he went on business and every township he passed through in his way home in this Province had previous notice of his approach and [was] ready to insult him, arms were put to his breast with threats of instant death, unless he signed a paper the contents of which he did not know nor regard. He went home after making me that report, but the news is that a large body was marching to his house in Lancaster to force him to some other concessions." Several members have resigned their seats in Council. General Gage proceeds; "I came here to attend the Superior Court, and in the intention to send a body of troops to Worcester to protect the Courts there, and if wanted, to send parties to the houses of some of the Councillors who dwell in that county; but finding from undoubted authority that the flames of sedition had spread universally throughout the country beyond conception, the Councillors already drove away, and that no courts could proceed on business, I waited the event of the sitting of the Superior Court here on the 30th ultimo. The judges met, but could get neither grand nor petit jury. . . . The Council was of opinion that it was very improper to weaken the troops here by any detachments whatever, as they could not be of any use to the Courts, as no jurors would appear, and by that means defeat their proceedings, and that disturbance being so general and not confined to any particular spots, there was no knowing where to send them to be of use, and would terminate only in dividing them in small detachments and tempt numbers to fall upon them: which was reported to be the scheme of the directors of these operations.

"It was considered that the whole is now at stake, Connecticut, and they add Rhode Island, as furious as they are in this Province, and that the first and only step now to take was to secure the friends of government in Boston, and to reinforce the troops here with as many more as could possibly be collected, and to act as opportunities and exigencies shall offer." The Governor is informed that New York is at present quiet, and mentions several plans he has for the reduction of the rebellion; his information of the depth of it is from too reliable sources to be doubted. The judges have represented to the Governor the impossibility of carrying on the business of the Courts, and civil government is nearly at an end. Asserts the importance of large re-

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

inforcements so that a decisive blow may be struck at once. The papers enclosed are a minute of the proceedings of the Council, held Aug. 31st, 1774; several letters from members of the Council to Governor Gage, stating the treatment they have received from the rioters; a letter dated Aug. 28th, 1774, from Daniel Murray to Mr. Councillor Murray, relating an attack made by the mob on the Councillor's house at Rutland, in order to intimidate him from serving on the Council; and a "Narrative of Mr. Loring one of His Majesty's Council in the Massachusetts Bay" to the same effect.

1774, Sept. 5. Norwich.—Governor Hutchinson to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing his letters and papers as they "may contain some circumstances not mentioned in the despatches from the Governor" (? of Boston). . . . "Your Lordship will make such use of the letters and papers as you think proper. I should be glad to have the newspaper again on my return to London. The enigmatical piece, in imitation of Swift, discovers the real sentiments and views of the party in a more full manner than any thing I have before seen in print."

1774, Sep. 8. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Governor Gage. Much regrets the unconstitutional step taken by the Colonists in summoning a Congress of Deputies from the several Colonies, "but I hope their proceedings and resolutions will be such as not to cut off all hope of peace and union with the Mother Country."

1774, Sep. 19th. Halifax.—Proclamation signed by Governor Legge against meetings and assemblies of the people of Nova Scotia "unwarranted by law and called without due authority."

1774, Sep. 20.—Memorial to the Earl of Dartmouth from Captain George Collier, R.N. The memorialist as commander of a ship was put to great expense having received the King's orders to carry Lord Dunmore and his family out to New York and to bring back from Boston Lady Bernard, wife of Sir Francis Bernard, and her family. He has repeatedly applied to Lord North and Lord Hillsborough to recoup him the money he had to spend (£730*l.*) but they, though admitting the reasonableness of the demand, would not do so. Begs Lord Dartmouth to represent his case to the King and procure him some redress.

1774, Sep. 25. Philadelphia.—Joseph Reed to the Earl of Dartmouth. A long letter on the state of America now and formerly. Formerly "no King ever had more loyal subjects, or any country more affectionate Colonists than the Americans were. I, who am but a young man, well remember the former to be always spoken of with a respect approaching adoration, while to be an Englishman was alone a sufficient recommendation for any office of respect or civility. But I confess with much concern that these happy days seem passing swiftly away, and unless some plan of accommodation can be speedily formed, the affection of the Colonies will be irrecoverably lost." The Congress met on the first of September and consisted of 52 delegates from all the Colonies from New Hampshire to South Carolina. They opened their meeting with great solemnity and chose the speaker of the House of Burgesses of Virginia their president. Great unanimity of opinion prevails. "But what shall I say to your Lordship of the appearances in this country; what seemed a little time since to be a spark which with prudence and wisdom might have been extinguished, is now a flame that threatens ruin to both parent and child. The spirit of the people gradually rose, when it might have been expected to decline, till the Quebec Bill added fuel to the fire; then all those deliberate measures of petitioning previous to any opposition were laid aside as inadequate to the apprehended danger and mischief, and now the people are generally ripe for the execution of any plan the Congress advises, should it be war itself

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

. A few days ago we were alarmed with a report that General Gage had cannonaded the town of Boston: so general a resentment, amounting even to fury, appeared everywhere, that I firmly believe, if it had not been contradicted, thousands would have gone at their own expense to have joined in the revenge. It was difficult to make them doubt the intelligence or delay setting out. . .

. The idea of bringing down the Canadians and savages upon the English Colonies, is so inconsistent not only with the mercy, but even the justice and humanity of the Mother Country that I cannot allow myself to think your Lordship would promote the Quebec Bill, or give your suffrage for it with such intentions."

As to the proceedings of the Congress, the writer understands that they will propose; "1st An immediate non-importation agreement; 2nd A non-exportation to Great Britain after a future day not very remote; 3rd Should these fail by a particular day set, then a non-exportation to Ireland and the West Indies." If these fail Mr. Reed thinks they will try the last resort, and the result will be "a civil war not to be equalled in history for its importance and fatal consequences." Enclosing No. 2387 of the Pennsylvania Gazette for Sept. 21st 1774, containing the resolutions entered into by the Delegates from the towns and districts in the county of Suffolk and Province of Massachusetts Bay, copy of a letter from a Committee of the Delegates to Governor Gage as to the fortifications being made by him on Boston Neck; remonstrating against them and the insults offered by the soldiers to persons in the town of Boston; letter from the select men of Boston to General Gage on the same subject, with his answer, &c. Enclosing also the following paper:

"Philadelphia. In Congress, Thursday, September 22, 1774.

Resolved,

That the Congress request the merchants and others in the several Colonies, not to send to Great Britain any orders for goods, and to direct the execution of all orders already sent, to be delayed or suspended, until the sense of the Congress, on the means to be taken for the preservation of the liberties of America, is made public."

1774, Sept. 27. St. James's, "one o'clock Wednesday." — Mr. Fraser to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to secret intelligence which Sir Richard Perrot has relating to America and which he refuses to divulge to any one but the King.

1774, Sept. 27. Parliament Street.—W. Hey to the Earl of Dartmouth. Resigning his commission of Chief Justice of Quebec.

1774, Sep. 27. Bushy Park.—Lord North to the Earl of Dartmouth. "I have a prospect of being able to bring your cousin Legge into Parliament, and I should be glad to learn from you tomorrow whether you and he are desirous of it. If I succeed in my negotiation the expence will, I believe, not be considerable, and I shall be ready to grant his offices to any trustee whom he shall think proper to name. Mark me well, I do not say that I am absolutely certain of bringing him into Parliament; I only say that I have hopes of doing so, and that if I succeed at all, I shall succeed at a moderate expence. It is, however, convenient that I should know Mr. Legge's opinion before I receive an answer to a letter which I sent this morning express into the country."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1774, Sep. 27. London.—Baron Alvensleben to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to the affair of the "Sieur de Beauvain." What this affair was, does not appear.

1774, Sep. 29. 51 St. Paul's Churchyard.—Mr. Clarke to the Earl of Dartmouth. A packet from New England has unexpectedly arrived. Sends Lord Dartmouth the names of the gentlemen who have taken the oaths to qualify them for the Council, with other particulars.

1774, Sep. 29. Council Office.—Stephen Cottrell to the Earl of Dartmouth. Summons for a Council at St. James's on the day following at one o'clock.

1774, Sep. 30. Lower Grosvenor Street.—Governor Tryon to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing a copy of a letter he wrote to Lord North, requesting that some favour may be shewn to Mr. Fanning, an American gentleman who has made great sacrifices to prove his loyalty to the King.

1774, Oct. 1. Lord North to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to the coming election for Bramber. Lord North has no objection to Mr. Thompson's standing with Sir Henry Gough if there is no compromise between Sir Henry and Mr. Thoroton.

1774, Oct. 1. Blackheath.—George Thomson to the Earl of Dartmouth. Declining to stand for Bramber as he hears a compromise has taken place between one of the old members and Sir Henry Gough.

1774, Oct. 2. Downing Street.—Lord North to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to the candidature of Lord Charles Montagu for Southampton in opposition to Mr. Stanley and Mr. Fleming. Lord North asks Lord Dartmouth to dissuade Lord Charles from opposing the friends of the King's Government in this matter.

1774, Oct. 2. Same to same.—Upon the same subject. If Lord Dartmouth can dissuade Lord Charles from standing it will be doing him a great service. "A pensioner setting him against the friends of government is a phenomenon, of which there are but two or three examples, and those of a very modern date."

1774, Oct. 3. Southampton.—Lord Charles Montagu to the Earl of Dartmouth. Is greatly concerned that the part he is taking is objectionable to Lord Dartmouth. Has so far pledged himself to the freemen of Southampton as to make it impossible for him to retire.

1774, Oct. 5. St. Osyth.—The Earl of Rochford to the Earl of Dartmouth. "I confess I do not yet despair of the American business turning out right, for if I understand Gage right, the Bostonian Rebels will not meet with assistance from the other Colonies; if they do, he will certainly want a much greater force than can well be spared here. I think, in my poor opinion, he has judged properly in keeping all his forces together at Boston, and if practicable, I think the sooner he is reinforced with ships and marines the better."

1774, Oct. 6. Trentham.—Earl Gower to the Earl of Dartmouth. "I am much obliged to you for your early communication of the news from Boston, and, indeed, I think it of a very alarming nature, and big with mischief to the two countries, for I am sure they may too properly be called two now. I think the servants of the Crown who were in town have done wisely to advise his Majesty to give all the support possible to Gene. Gage in this alarming crisis."

1774, Oct. 6.—Copy of a Speech of Governor Legge to the General Assembly of Nova Scotia with the addresses of both Houses and the Governor's answers.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1774, Oct. 8. 10 Swan Street in the Minories.—Alexander Trescot to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing a plan for "the better securing his Majesty's customs."

1774, Oct. 9. Southampton.—Hans Stanley, one of the Government candidates for Southampton, to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to the candidature of Lord Charles Montagu for the borough. Enclosing papers on the subject, one being a printed notice to the electors from Lord Charles adverting to the interference of a Cabinet Minister in the election, and the other a statement by Mr. Stanley of how it happened that he divulged the secret of that minister being Lord Dartmouth.

1774, Oct. 9. Southampton.—Lord Charles Montagu to the Earl of Dartmouth. Explaining that he felt himself obliged to publish the printed notice (a copy of which he encloses) above alluded to by Mr. Stanley, as Lord Dartmouth had interfered in the election so publicly that Lord Charles's friends desired to know the meaning of the letter sent.

There is a draft answer from Lord Dartmouth dated October 11.

1774, Oct. 13. Bath, South Parade.—J. Temple to Mr. Pownall. Expressive of his mortification at being superseded in the Lieut.-Governorship of New Hampshire in America.

1774, Oct. 13. Bath, South Parade.—Same to the Earl of Dartmouth. On the same subject; a long letter, stating the hard treatment he has received from Lord North.

1774, Oct. 17. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Governor Gage. Has received his letters by the Scarborough. They "represent the affairs of the Province to be indeed in a very dangerous and critical situation, and it looks not only as if the people were determined at all events to refuse obedience to the law, but that notwithstanding the assistance of so large a military force sent purposely to support the authority of civil government, they have it still in their power to trample upon it with impunity, and to bid defiance to all control." Lord Dartmouth proceeds to mention the means about to be taken for augmenting the forces in the Province. No regiments can at present be spared, but three guard ships, with 600 men commanded by a field officer are under orders to proceed to Boston immediately. Encloses commissions for several gentlemen to be members of the Council.

1774, Oct. 17. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Governor Gage "Separate and secret." As to the proceedings of Mr. Lee, a Major on half pay with rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, who is encouraging the enemies of Government at Boston by seditious speeches and writings. It would be desirable if the Governor would take every legal method to prevent his continuing these practices.

1774, Oct. 17.—A return of the state of the Island of Breton.

1774, Oct. 19. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Governor Gage. "Secret and confidential." Enclosing papers (not now with the letter) shewing the steps taken to prevent the importation of arms, gunpowder, and other ammunition into America.

1774, Oct. 20. London.—Baron Alvensleben to the Earl of Dartmouth. Unimportant.

1774, Oct. 20. Parsons Green, Middlesex.—William Weston to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing a plan for the cultivation and improvement of America and the West Indies.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

1774, Oct. 20th. Southampton Street.—Stephen Fuller to the Earl of Dartmouth. Reminding his Lordship of the petition of the people of Jamaica for more troops and more ships, particularly the latter.

1774, Oct. 21. Downing Street.—Lord North to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing a letter from Thomas Boone, Commissioner of Customs, requesting Lord North and Lord Dartmouth to recommend Josiah Tattnell for appointment to the Treasurership of Georgia.

1774, Oct. 24. Philadelphia.—Joseph Reed to the Earl of Dartmouth. The Congress have agreed upon an address to the King, and have recommended another Congress to be held on the 10th May 1775. Encloses an account of some proceedings at Annapolis in Maryland (but no enclosure is now with the letter) which shows to what height the spirit of the people is raised. "The Americans are certainly determined never to submit to the claims of Parliament, unless compelled by irresistible force, and this submission will never continue longer than the force which produces it. However visionary it may appear at first view to give up the commerce of the whole country, and as the last resource try their strength in arms with so powerful a nation as Great Britain, your Lordship may depend on it they will attempt both. Preparations are making by military associations in every part of the country for the last appeal, and every other step taken which indicates the most determined purpose to yield to nothing but necessity. The universal claim of America is to be restored to the state of 1763."

1774, Oct. 27. Nassau Street, Soho.—Thomas Boone to the Earl of Dartmouth. Recommends Mr. Tattnell as the successor of Mr. Jones the Treasurer of Georgia.

1774, Oct. 27. Bushy Park.—Lord North to the Earl of Dartmouth. "The Recorder is to make his report to-morrow to the King, and in the absence of Lord Rochford and Lord Suffolk, it will I believe be your business to attend. One of the Under Secretaries of Lord Suffolk will give you the list of the convicts with the applications that have been made in favour of any of them. As soon as the Recorder has read each report, you will mention to his Majesty if any application has been made for the convict, and when the King has declared his pleasure, you will write opposite to each name, either 'respited' or 'law to take its course' according to his Majesty's commands. If you are not able to give your attendance at St. James's to-morrow, let me know early that I may go up to town and officiate in your room. Probably you will be there After the Council you are to deliver the list of convicts to the Recorder."

1774, Oct. 27. Lincoln's Inn Fields.—The Hon. Thomas Walpole to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing papers received from America relating to the rupture with the Indians on the River Ohio. (See under Aug. 9th and 10th above.)

1774, Oct. 28. Vanbrugh Fields.—Mr. Pownall to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to the dispute between Spain and Portugal with reference to their possessions on the Rio de la Plata. "I am sorry to say I think we have taken it up in a way that does not quite consist with that wisdom, spirit, and discretion that I wish should accompany all our measures; instead of taking it up as the friend and ally of Portugal we ought to have taken it up in the higher character of the friend to mankind in general and to the publick tranquillity, and have insisted that the matter in dispute between them should be referred to the mediation of some indifferent state and this would have been the more ad-

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

visible, as I am convinced that in point of justice the pretensions of Portugal are not to be supported. Surely we departed from our dignity and from ground of great advantage when we demanded to know of Spain, whether the armament they were fitting out were intended against us. Grimaldi could not be ignorant that we knew their real destination, and from the place we held in the political system of Europe we had a right to demand an explanation of the motives for any armaments (against whatever states they were directed) that might in our judgment have the effect to disturb the peace of Europe."

1774, Oct. 29.—Draft letter in French from the Earl of Dartmouth to Monsieur Duhamel. Promising to present to the King on the first opportunity the petition which Monsieur Duhamel has handed him from the inhabitants of the Island of Grenada.

1774, Oct. 31.—The Duke of Manchester to the Earl of Dartmouth. In reference to his brother Lord Charles Montagu's candidature for Southampton noticed above. Has heard that Lord Charles is again set out for Southampton to canvass, Mr. Fleming having vacated his seat by acceptance of an employment. The Duke will do his best to prevent his offering himself as a candidate.

1774, October Session.—Address of the House of Assembly of Nova Scotia to Governor Legge. That they have agreed to a Bill for extending the sittings and terms of the Supreme Court of the Province, to three of the most considerable inland Counties to which there is access by land, expressing a hope that in process of time the state of the Province will admit of roads being made so that the benefits of the Bill may operate throughout the whole Province, and praying the Governor to communicate the contents of the Bill to the ministry in England that the King's consent thereto may be obtained.

1774, Nov. 1. Somerset House.—Thomas Desbrisay to the Earl of Dartmouth. Requests leave as Lieutenant-Governor to take possession upon his arrival next spring in St. John's of the house in which Mr. Duport the late Chief Justice of St. John's resided.

1774, Nov. 2. Whitehall.—William Knox to Governor Legge. As to the appointment of Mr. Monk to succeed Mr. Nesbitt (as Attorney-General of Nova Scotia). Unless Mr. Monk can be charged with misbehaviour, Governor Legge cannot pass him by, although he is not approved of, especially as Lord Dartmouth has given him good reason to expect the office.

1774, Nov. 2. London.—General James Murray to the Earl of Dartmouth. Recommending Mr. Suckling, late Attorney-General of Quebec, to Lord Dartmouth's favour.

1774, Nov. 3. Aberdeen.—Lieutenant Robert Hay to the Earl of Dartmouth. Requesting Lord Dartmouth's favour and patronage for his son Edward Legge Hay and enclosing a petition to the same effect.

1774, Nov. 5. Bushy Park.—Lord North to the Earl of Dartmouth. "Before this year I never received a card of invitation from the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs and therefore I never sent a formal excuse, but now I think I must send a card in return to that which I have received, and I have directed Mr. Brummell to write one neither rude, nor more polite than the invitation, and I think that you had better do the same."

1774, Nov. 6. Philadelphia.—Joseph Reed to the Earl of Dartmouth. Asking him to use his influence to procure some accommodation from Great Britain to America, and to avert the civil war which will in-

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

fallibly occur if the protests and claims of the Colonies are treated with contemptuous silence.

1774, Nov. 9.—Lord North to the Earl of Dartmouth. Returning letters announcing the death of the Duke of Athole; “as to his successor” (as a Representative Peer) “I must talk with Lord Suffolk and with a great personage before I can answer the question.”

The two letters enclosed are :—

1774, Nov. 6. Edinburgh. Earl of Balcarres to the Earl of Dartmouth. Requesting Lord Dartmouth's assistance, that he may be returned as a Representative Peer in the room of the Duke of Athole.

1774, Nov. 7. Cawline Park.—Sir James Adolphus Oughton to the Earl of Dartmouth. Giving particulars of the Duke's death, which happened at Lord Cathcart's, requesting Lord Dartmouth to recommend his relative Lord Balcarres at the forthcoming election of a Representative Peer.

1774, Nov. 12. Cavendish Square.—Viscount Barrington to the Earl of Dartmouth. Offering suggestions for the reduction of the rebellion in the Colony of Massachusetts.

1774, Nov. 14. Edinburgh.—Earl of Balcarres to the Earl of Dartmouth. Thanking him for his good offices at the election of a Representative Peer which were not, however, successful.

1774, Nov. 15. Halifax.—Report of the Council of Nova Scotia, recommending a reduction in the quorum of the House of Assembly from twelve to nine members, an increase of four in the number of members returned by Halifax, power to the House to inflict fines on members who absent themselves without leave from the Speaker and the House, and on other matters.

1774, Nov. 16. Cawline Park.—Sir James Adolphus Oughton to the Earl of Dartmouth.

“I have a thousand things to say to you and know not well where to begin. The poor Duke of Athol is first in point of time, and the idea strong on my mind. On the Wednesday he was seized with an apoplectic fit: on his recovery from it he swallowed (without knowing it and before he could be prevented) a tea cup full of hartshorn, with which they had been rubbing his temples; he instantly bled violently at nose and mouth, and in the intervals of reason complained most of his head and of violent heat, saying nothing could relieve him, but being put up to the chin in the Tay; he repeatedly said his understanding was gone and he was a dead man, but rejoiced that his son was so soon to be married; he was watched attentively, but with caution, to prevent his perceiving it, but on Saturday about 8 at night he found means to slip out of the house and running down to the river plunged in; all that night he was searched for in vain by the whole town of Dunkeld and the neighbourhood and the next morning was found eight miles below his house not in the least disfigured; but all efforts to restore life failed, never man was more justly or more universally lamented. To you, my Lord, who knew him so well it is needless to attempt his character, let it suffice to say that his manly virtues were as diffusive as his benevolence, and thousands felt the happy effects of both. The poor Dutchess and family set out for London on this day. Lord Cathcart and all his family are now with me and begin their journey to town on Monday. The young Duke is to be married as soon as decency will permit, and at the same time Miss Mary Cathcart will be married to Mr. Graham of Balgowan, a young gentleman of very good estate, and a most excellent character.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

And now, my dear lord, how shall I express what I feel for your unbounded kindness to me in adopting so warmly the interests of my young friend, Lord Balcarres. I blush at my own presumption in having requested it, while my joy at every fresh instance of your friendship makes me glad that I did it; he is a well disposed good hearted man, and as sensible as I could wish of your Lordship's goodness to him; his mother quite in raptures about it, and a whole family made happy by your goodness to me. To your Lordship these things are familiar, but what must my sensations of love and gratitude be?

Lord Suffolk's circular letters had given great offence to several of the Peers; meetings were held, and the Duke of Buccleugh laboured hard with them for two days to bring them to some temper. As he had joined those who asserted the independence of the Peerage on Lord Stair's election he judged it necessary to preface his votes with a declaration that he adhered to the same sentiments and voted for the candidates out of regard to their personal merits, not from any ministerial influence. The Earl of Home said he thought unanimity was of peculiar importance at this time to the satisfaction of the King and good of the nation; that he wished earnestly to see it prevail at that meeting, and therefore voted for all the candidates. The Earl of Haddington objected to ministerial lists and circular letters, asserted the independence of the Peerage and voted for none but Lord Eglinton and Lord Breadalbain, because he had not solicited the ministry; Lord Selkirk declaimed with great warmth against ministerial influence, and the insult offered to the Peers in prescribing to them who they should vote for, observed that such treatment was only introduced in the Duke of Grafton's Administrations, had gone on increasing ever since, and unless checked might end in dragooning them into obedience to the ministers' dictates; recapitulated what he had said at Lord Stair's election and the letters he had wrote, which he hoped would have prevented any future affronts of the like nature; professed the warmest attachment to the King, whom he highly praised, and said that it was out of regard to him, as he was at that time pestered by that infamous fellow Wilkes, the detestation of every honest man, that they had not laid their grievance before Parliament, but proposed that every Peer present should sign an address to His Majesty requesting that he would order his ministers no more to insult the Scotch Peerage with their requisitions, which were a manifest breach of the Articles of Union. He added, with a degree of agitation which affected all his auditors, that the first intimation he had of his brother's death was a letter from Lord Suffolk desiring his vote for Lord Aberdeen. Lord Cathcart replied that both time and place were highly improper for discussions of that nature; that they were assembled there by the King's order for the sole purpose of choosing their Representatives in Parliament, and had no legal power to transact any other business. Lord Selkirk then proposed that they should meet at a tavern and draw up an address, though he still insisted that the present time and place was most proper, and he neither understood nor valued any promunire he might incur. Lord Dalhousie replied to the same purpose as Lord Cathcart, said he had no objection to meet the Peers anywhere else, and give his own opinion, but could not agree to any debates at that time. Lord Kelly said the same. Lord Selkirk then desired that the time and place should be fixed, and proposed the next day. To this the Duke of Buccleugh objected, said he would go to no such meeting, acknowledged that he had wrote to Lord Suffolk after Lord Stair's election; that he by no means conceived the affront general to the whole body of the Peers, but merely personal to those

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

who considered themselves as offended by it, which could not possibly be the case of every Peer who might receive such a letter. This put a stop to the altercation, and Lord Selkirk voted for Lord Eglinton and Lord Breadalbain only. Lord Aboyne spoke with great calmness and temper in support of the independence of the Peerage which he thought infringed by such circular letters from the minister whose requests might be considered as equivalent to commands. Lord Ellibank spoke for some time to the same purpose with great temper, propriety, and humour, urged most of the arguments contained in the enclosed pamphlet which he published a few days before the election, said he wished to maintain the honour and importance of the Peers, and that they might at least have the power of obliging one another, which under the present mode was impossible, as he appealed to the candidates whether it was to the minister or their brother Peers that they felt themselves indebted for their election. He voted only for Lords Eglinton and Breadalbain, Galloway and Irwin. Lord Eglinton having offered himself as a candidate before it could be known that the Administration had any other person in view, twenty Peers having promised voted for him. Lord Cassilis nevertheless carried it by a majority of thirteen. It was reported this day that several Peers had met to consider of an address. I shall not close this letter till I get some better information, though I must now hasten to assure my dearest Lord of my most fervent love, gratitude, and affection, in which I am sincerely joined by my whole family.

The report of the meeting was groundless. A report prevails that Lord Strathmore is dead of an apoplexy. I wished much to have paid my duty to Lady Dartmouth by this post, but am so hurried that it is quite impossible. The enclosed newspaper (not now with the letter) of the Lords' speeches I have just got, and it is pretty just."

1774, Nov. 17. Whitehall.—Sir Jeffrey Amherst to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing a letter from Major-General Haldimand (not now with the letter).

1774, Nov. 20. Stanhope Street.—Viscount Beauchamp to the Earl of Dartmouth. Recommending Captain Johnson for some civil or military appointment in America not incompatible with his rank in the army.

1774, Nov. 21. Chapel Stairs, Whitehall.—Colonel T. Howard to the Earl of Dartmouth. Asking for the Lieutenant-Governorship of St. John's, vacant by the death of Major-General Bradstreet.

1774, Nov. 22. Duke St., Westminster.—The Earl of Suffolk to the Earl of Dartmouth. "I have reflected much on Mr. Gage's conduct, and I am thoroughly persuaded that it is not to be rectified by sending a couple of subordinate officers to him. He is too far gone to be recovered. It is therefore much better to supersede him at once. In a case of so much importance nothing should stand in the way of the most wise and expedient measure. Gage should be removed and the fittest person, whoever he is, appointed to succeed him, I think not only in the command of the army but in the government also. It is idle to do things by halves, and never was there a busyness of a more serious nature, that required a more vigorous exertion, and more determined firmness. I submit this as my humble opinion; at the same time assuring your Lordship that I shall concur in the wiser determination of the Cabinet whatever it is."

1774, Nov. 23. Wickham.—W. Hey to the Earl of Dartmouth. "My letters speak of the Canadians as happy beyond all expression at the thoughts of returning to so much of their old establishment as is reserved under the new Act of Parliament and that they consider it as the completest gratification of their wishes that could possibly be indulged to them."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1774, Nov. 26. London. -- Stephen Fuller to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to ordnance stores for Jamaica.

1774, Nov. 28. St. James's Square. -- The Honourable C. F. Greville to the Earl of Dartmouth. Recommending William Grant, Collector of the Customs for Granville Bay in the Granadas, for one of the six Lieutenant Governors to be appointed in Canada.

1774, Nov. 30. Montreal. -- Sir Jeffrey Amherst to the Earl of Dartmouth. Thanking him for having recommended the King to appoint Colonel Amherst to the Lieutenant-Governorship of St. John's.

1774, Nov. 30. Russel Street, Bath. -- Richard Cumberland to the Earl of Dartmouth. The death of his father has added to the burdens he has to bear, and the loss of his employment at Quebec renders him unable to bear the strain upon his resources. Hopes Lord Dartmouth will be able to find him some new employment.

1774, Dec. 1. -- Minute of a Cabinet meeting at which the Lord Chancellor, Lord President, the Earls of Suffolk, Rochford, Dartmouth, and Sandwich, and Lord North were present. "The last despatches from General Gage having been read and considered, Lord D[artmouth] is desired to advise with the Attorney and Solicitor-General whether the acts of the people of the Province of Massachusetts Bay therein stated are overt acts of treason and rebellion, and if they are, to direct them to prepare the draught of a proclamation requiring all persons who have been guilty of the same, except such as shall be therein excepted, to surrender themselves before a certain day, and to declare that such as shall not surrender themselves shall be treated as rebels and traitors."

1774, Dec. 7. Halifax. -- Jonathan Belcher, Chief Justice of Nova Scotia, to Governor Hutchinson in London, to assist him in recovering arrears to the amount of 362*l*., due to him from the War Office.

1774, Dec. 9. Council Chamber, Halifax. -- Report of the Council respecting a Bill amending the Act for establishing the rate of interest; requesting the Governor to give his assent thereto.

1774, Dec. 10. Philadelphia. -- Joseph Reed to the Earl of Dartmouth. The proceedings of the Committee appointed to carry out the resolutions of the Congress. "Since the first of this month every cargo arriving from Great Britain, Ireland, or the British Islands, has been delivered into the hands of the Committee to be sold or stored as the importer should direct. And so great is the unanimity and prevailing spirit of the inhabitants that no individuals have thought proper to refuse or decline a compliance with this self denying ordinance of the General Congress. But what is of great importance in this Province the Assembly has this day adopted all the measures of the Congress as your Lordship may see by the enclosed Minute of their proceedings." The Minute enclosed is printed and in the following terms:--

"In Assembly, Saturday, December 10th, 1774

The House taking into consideration the report of the Committee appointed to attend the General Congress and the papers therein referred to, Resolved unanimously That this House approve the proceedings and Resolves of the Congress, and do most seriously recommend to the good people of this Province a strict attention to and inviolable observation of the several matters and things contained in this journal of the said Congress."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

1774, Dec. 20. — Note endorsed "Mr. Pownall" probably to the Earl of Dartmouth. "The American petition came under cover to Dr. Franklin, but consigned to five gentlemen, viz. the Doctor himself, Mr. Burke, Mr. Gantt, Mr. Arthur Lee and Paul Wentworth, to be by them presented to the King attended by as many Americans and merchants as could be prevailed upon to take a part in the business, or to be delivered to your Lordship in order to be presented. The petitioners recommend the first mode, but understand Dr. Franklin adopts the latter. They were to meet to-day at Waghorn's Coffee house, but Paul Wentworth (from whom I have these particulars) declines acting, and says the Petition is an assertion of all their claims in a very high tone and with very offensive expressions."

1774, Dec. 24. Philadelphia.— Joseph Reed to the Earl of Dartmouth. The Quakers have hitherto acted a passive part in all disputes between Great Britain and America; but lately the Governor having applied to them to repair the barracks built here for the soldiery, they have for the first time absolutely refused to make any such provision. "A question was moved in the House to provide a quantity of arms and ammunition, but this was overruled rather I believe from the religious, than political principles of a number of the members."

A provincial convention of Maryland has assessed the Counties of that Province at 10,000*l.* to procure arms, ammunition &c., they have also formed companies and regiments, and are daily practising the use of arms. Every preparation is being made for a call to arms. Virginia shows the same spirit. Georgia has joined the Congress.

1774, December.—Memorials of Elihu Hall of Connecticut to Lord North and the Earl of Dartmouth. The memorialist raised a troop of 100 men and officers to serve in the expedition against Canada in 1746, and has suffered great losses by having had to advance the pay and subsistence of the troop for more than a year. He prays a lucrative post in the Civil Department in the Plantations, or for the Collectorship of his Majesty's Customs in Connecticut, now vacant.

N.D. (? 1774).—The Honourable Brownlow North, Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry to his step brother the Earl of Dartmouth. Requesting the appointment of Mr. Baker, now Solicitor-General, to the vacant Attorney-Generalship of Antigua. "As to personal knowledge of the Solicitor himself, I can only say that I remember him at Oxford, a young man of parts, a grievous coxcomb indeed, but he may not be the worse lawyer for that."

N.D. (? 1774).—MSS. endorsed "Notes relating to the Virgin Islands," containing statistics of the population, productions, &c. of the Islands. (See Mr. George's letter of Feb. 9th 1774 above).

N.D.—Paper, unsigned, as to the advantages and disadvantages of the proposal for a new Colony on the banks of the Ohio.

1775, Jan. 21.—Minute of a Cabinet meeting at the Earl of Sandwich's house at which were present the Lord Chancellor, the Lord President, the Earls of Sandwich, Dartmouth, Suffolk, Rochford, and Lord North; "Agreed that an address be proposed to the two Houses of Parliament to declare that if the Colonies shall make sufficient and permanent provision for the support of the civil government and administration of justice and for the defence and protection of the said Colonies, and in time of war contribute extraordinary supplies, in a reasonable proportion to what is raised by Great Britain, we will in that case desist from the exercise of the power of taxation, except for commercial purposes only, and that whenever a proposition of this kind shall be made by any of the Colonies we will enter into the consideration of proper laws for that purpose, and in the meanwhile to entreat his Majesty to take the most effectual methods to enforce due obedience to the laws and authority of the supreme legislature of Great Britain."

1775, Jan. 24. Boston. — Admiral Graves to Governor Legge. Relating to an execution served on Lieutenant Knight, commanding the Diligent schooner, for recovery of 60*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.*, costs of a suit brought against him for non-payment of duty on the rum used on his ship.

1775, Jan. 27. Whitehall. — The Earl of Dartmouth to Governor Legge. On the more fair and impartial taxation of the Colonists of Nova Scotia, the proposed addition of members to the House of Assembly, the sale of lands, the prohibition of the taking of coals from the Colony without licence of the Governor, and other general subjects.

1775, Feb. 13. Halifax. — Governor Legge to Admiral Graves. As to the prosecution of Mr. Knight. The complaint against that gentleman arose from his having sent to Windsor a barrel of wine and a barrel of rum on board a coaster and not on his own vessel.

For the duty on these he was prosecuted, and as he did not appear to defend the action, judgment went against him by default.

The Court has granted an application for a new trial, and if Mr. Knight can show that the wine and rum were stores for his Majesty's service the judgment against him will no doubt be reversed.

1775, Feb. 14. Philadelphia. — Joseph Reed to the Earl of Dartmouth. A long letter on the state of feeling in the Colonies towards the Mother Country. Reports the proceedings of a provincial Convention held at Philadelphia at which the writer was present; he noticed there, "notwithstanding all which has passed, much remains of that old affection to the parent state which distinguished our happier days, that a contest with her is regarded as the greatest possible evil, next to the loss of what we esteem our rights, and that there is a general disposition in a great majority of this Province to a reconciliation upon any terms consistent with those essential rights which we apprehend ought to distinguish an English colonist from those of an arbitrary State." At the Congress, "the King's speech was received with a kind of sullenness, which I can hardly describe, but is strongly expressive of a resolution and spirit not to submit without a struggle, in case no conciliatory measures are adopted by Great Britain. There is scarcely a man in this country, my Lord, in or out of office, not of immediate appointment from England, who does not oppose taxation by the British Parliament. And we are much misinformed if it is not your Lordship's opinion, as well as many others, that it is not expedient to exercise it. Suppose it was made a previous term that full satisfaction should be made for the tea, then declare the inexpediency of taxation, repeal the Boston Acts and the tea duty; with much deference, I submit it to your Lordship, that such a procedure would create such confidence and excite such gratitude as would dispose the Colonies to concur in any propositions of settling a constitution for America upon reasonable principles, and raising the so much desired revenue; or if an experiment of this kind is deemed hazardous, I verily believe a submission to all Acts of general superintendency and control as well of trade as otherwise (excluding a revenue) might be relied on."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

The letter concludes thus :—"By what I have said, your Lordship will see that my opinion is, that if it can be reconciled to the dignity of the Mother Country to express a desire of accommodation and the present severities against Boston could be suspended on making satisfaction for the damage done the tea, the Americans may think it their interest and duty to recede in some degree from that line of jurisdiction which has been drawn in the late Congress. But this country will be deluged with blood before it will submit to any other taxation than by their own Assemblies."

1775, Feb. 16. Parliament Street. — James Meyrick to Governor Legge. The first part on private affairs. The Ministry and Parliament are determined to force the Americans to submission. "General Howe, General Clinton, and General Burgoyne go to Boston, the 17th Light Dragoons, 35th, 49th, and 63rd regiments of foot are ordered to embark at Corke about the middle of next month for that place with drafts and recruits to compleat all the Corps at present under General Gage, the 22nd, 40th, 44th and 45th regiments are also under orders to hold themselves ready for embarkation, but whether their destination is the same, I am uncertain. An augmentation is immediately to be made to the regiments of infantry (those stationed abroad excepted) to consist of 10 sergeants, 10 drummers, and 180 privates to each corps, and 20 independent companies of invalids are to be formed from out pensioners of Chelsea; this augmentation was voted yesterday, and an addition of 2,000 seamen to the Navy upon Monday. I hope the Americans will be wise enough to acknowledge the authority of the Parliament of Great Britain, in time to save themselves from ruin."

1775, Feb. 17. New York.—Rev. John Rodgers to J. T., Esq. As to the feelings of the Americans in the crisis. "His Majesty has not more loyal and dutiful subjects in all his dominions than the Americans; they love and honour his person and choose to be under his Government; but they never will submit to the claims of the British Parliament, as having a right to make laws binding them in all cases whatever, as they are not nor can be represented by them. There is a surprizing unanimity on this head in persons of all ranks, denominations, characters, and classes throughout all the Colonies, a few officers of Government and expectants from the Crown excepted. And where there is any difference it is not about the principle but the mode of opposing the claims of Administration with the greatest success, in which indeed all are not so perfectly agreed, though there is no great difference even in that. The Assembly of this Province is the only one on the Continent that has met and not approved the measures of the Continental Congress which you have no doubt seen. They too determine to oppose the present measures of Administration towards us only in a different mode."

1775, Feb. 18. A long letter unsigned and unaddressed, endorsed, "Thoughts upon American Commerce and resistance."

1775, Feb. 27. "Nova Scotia.—A list of persons in possession of lands by licence of occupation." Paper so headed signed "Richard Bulkeley."

1775, Mar. 3. Whitehall.—(Circular Duplicate). The Earl of Dartmouth to the Governor of St. John's. Enclosing (though the enclosure is not now with the letter) a resolution of the House of Commons "declaratory of the nature of the indulgence they are ready to show to any of the Colonies that shall make the proposal to which the resolution refers."

1775, Mar. 3. Whitehall.—"Private." The Earl of Dartmouth to the Deputy Governor of Maryland. On the same matter as the above and referring to the copy resolution that had been sent therein. It is the King's wish that the resolution should not be communicated officially to the provincial Assemblies, but explained by the Governors of the various Colonies to such persons as may be able by position and connexion to facilitate the measures it points to.

1775, March 13. Quebec.—(Extract.) Governor Carleton to Lord Dartmouth. The letter from the Continental Congress at Philadelphia to the Canadians has been translated, printed, and disseminated throughout this Province.

1775, March 15. Charlestown.—Lieutenant-Governor William Bull to the Earl of Dartmouth. Respecting the case of the Rev. Mr. Bullman, Curate of St. Michael's Charlestown, who has been dismissed the parish on account of a sermon he preached on Sunday 12th Aug. 1774, in the course of which he said "We pry into our neighbour's secrets that we may censure and find fault and are exceedingly rash and precipitate in passing our judgment in every matter In short it is from this unhappy temper that every idle projector who perhaps cannot govern his own household, or pay the debts of his own contracting, presumes he is qualified to dictate how the State should be governed, and to point out means to pay the debts of a nation. Hence too it is, that every silly clown, and every illiterate mechanic will take upon him to censure the conduct of his Prince or Governor, and contribute as much as in him lies, to create and foment those misunderstandings which, being brooded by discontent and diffused through multitudes, come at last to end in schisms in the Church and sedition and rebellion in the State." Enclosing extracts from the sermon, and the proceedings of the vestry of St. Michael's on Mr. Bullman's dismissal.

1775, March 15.—Memorial of Charles O'Hara, Governor of Senegambia, to the King, stating that he has served in the army on active service twenty-five years, and that his health is much impaired by the climate of Senegambia, praying an appointment to a government in the West Indies.

1775, April 5. Whitehall.—("Circular duplicate.") J. Pownall to Governor Legge, sending and requesting publication of an Act recently passed intituled "An Act to restrain the trade and commerce of the Provinces of Massachusetts Bay and New Hampshire and Colonies of Connecticut and Rhode Island and Providence Plantation in North America, to Great Britain, Ireland, and the British Islands in the West Indies, and to prohibit such Provinces and Colonies from carrying on any fishery on the banks of Newfoundland or other places therein mentioned, under certain conditions and limitations."

1775, April 8. Whitehall.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Governor Legge. Relative to an application for a grant of 500 acres of land in the Province of Nova Scotia with a considerable frontage on the River Ristigouche by a Mr. Shoolbred, a merchant. Enclosing a letter from Mr. Shoolbred to the Governor on the subject and a copy of his petition to Lord Dartmouth.

1775, April 15. Whitehall. (Circular.)—The Earl of Dartmouth to Governor Legge. Stating his Majesty's pleasure to be that the orders of the Commander-in-Chief of the forces in North America and under him of the Major-Generals and Brigadier-Generals shall be supreme in all cases relative to the operations of the said troops, and be obeyed accordingly.

1775, April 23. Boston.—General Gage to Governor Legge. Relating to transports ordered to embark from Nova Scotia to Boston. "Hostilities are commenced here The country are all arming

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

against His Majesty's troops, and it is necessary to take every possible precaution to oppose the rebels."

1775, April 24. Preston at Boston.—Admiral Graves to Governor Legge.—Requesting the Governor to allow small vessels to come from Nova Scotia with fresh beef, mutton, poultry, vegetables, &c., each vessel to have his Excellency's pass to prevent her being seized as New England property, and directions to proceed straight to Boston. If the inhabitants of Nova Scotia are active the Admiral promises them a considerable profit as full payment will be made for everything.

1775, April 24. Boston.—General Gage to Governor Legge. All vessels from Nova Scotia coming into Boston with provisions will be protected by Admiral Graves while there and conducted safe out of port. A letter from the Admiral will inform Governor Legge what is required of the masters of the vessels. The fullest publication possible of this letter is requested.

1775, April 29. Boston.—Same to same. Transmitting an account (which does not now appear) "of an unhappy affair that happened in this Province the 19th inst. between His Majesty's troops and the people of the country, whereby you will see the pitch their leaders have worked them up to, even to commit hostilities upon the King's troops when an opportunity offered."

1775, May 6. Council Chamber, Halifax.—"An account of deficiencies in the Treasury of Nova Scotia from 25th June 1751 made by the late Treasurer and sundry officers appointed to collect the revenue of the Province."

Bundle of letters thus described: "Letters received by Joshua Manger, Esq., from John Butler Esq., of Halifax, Nova Scotia, under several dates from 6th May to 21st July 1775 delivered to John Pownall, Esq., for the perusal of the Right Honourable Lord Dartmouth, one of his Majesty's Principall Secretaries of State. Westminster 21st September 1775." The bundle contains among other letters the following:—

1775, May 6. Halifax. (Duplicate.)—J. Butler to Joshua Manger. A long letter on the state of trade and general affairs of the Province. "Our Governor conducts himself so ignorantly and oppressively that no good men will come amongst us. Poor Binney is absolutely put in prison in the most cruel and unjustifiable manner, which Collector Newton's letter will fully show you, and I hope you and Mr. Watson will get him relieved. Indeed there is the most horrid scene of persecution carrying on that is possible. I wrote you about the audit of public accounts, the characters of the men, &c. Day has lately resigned and James Monk is chose in his room; so now there is a judge who is to try the cause, a lawyer who is paid for pleading it, and the sheriff who comes in for his fees, and little Burrow the settler on with Bridge, who is a poor tool, so that the Governor could not have chose another such a sett to throw the Province into a flame and ruin its credit; and this without the least cause or any order from the King. Must not omit telling you that Mr. Binney is carressed by the whole gentlemen in town, and the commanding officer of the troops visited him with his officers in a body; so much is his case pittied that the gaol is crowded, while there is nothing but gloomy darkness and distrust reigns at the Great House, which is entirely neglected except by the sycophants."

1775, July 3. Halifax.—Same to same. "You will find that affairs run very high at Boston: we obtained a dear bought victory on the 17th ult., and I wish a dearer one may not have been obtained before this. I am concerned to say that had the Ministry strengthened the General's hand with 10,000 men, all this blood might have been saved and the affair probably settled before this time. If the rebellion should continue I expect 20 or 30,000 foreign troops out in the spring. Our government affairs go on in the same ridiculous way. The House of Assembly is sitting and finding fault with the Governor's proceedings. A bill passed both Houses yesterday for the relief of Mr. Binney, but God knows whether the Governor will assent to it; as soon as the Session is at an end you shall have a full account of it, and a curious history it will be."

1775, July 21. Halifax.—Same to same. "The House have passed a Bill to release Mr. Binney on paying 180*l*. and not 800*l*., and have also passed a Bill for the relief of sundry other persons whom the auditors brought in debt in the most unjust manner. The Governor would not assent to either of those Bills untill the King's pleasure should be known. This shows the cruelty of the man, who if not removed will infallibly ruin the Colony. The Lower House drew up and passed a long catalogue of complaints against him to the King; this frightened him and made him promise to give up Burrow, which promise he has yesterday broke."

1775, May 7. Boston.—General Gage to Governor Legge. As to a proposal to supply the King's troops at Boston with coal from Cape Breton.

1775, May 8. Boston.—General Gage to Governor Legge. On the same subject.

1775, May 11.—Lieutenant William Pirrie to the Earl of Dartmouth, with "Remarks and observations on the importance of an interior survey of the North-west Regions of America" for the execution of which the writer is ready to offer proposals, should Lord Dartmouth think fit.

1775, May 13. Boston.—General Gage to Governor Legge. Numbers of people are moving to Halifax and other parts of Nova Scotia, many of whom will use every means to debauch the minds of the people. Mentions one, a Mr. Howard, a Presbyterian minister, whom it would be well to secure on the first opportunity.

1775, May 13. Cambridge (Mass.). (Copy).—Dr. Joseph Warren to "the gentlemen the select men of the town of Boston." Will not be able to attend the Congress to-day, but on Monday he will lay the letter (this refers apparently to something gone before) before them. "It appears that General Gage supposes there is an impropriety in treating with subjects in arms against their Sovereign. The gentleman mistakes the matter. We have been compelled to take arms for our defence, for the defence of our liberties. We wish the prosperity of the British nation. We love to honour our Sovereign, and now stand ready with our lives and fortunes to maintain the justice of those great constitutional principles by which he holds his Crown. We have no desires incompatible with the honour and dignity of the King and the welfare of the whole empire; but as we have now taken arms we mean to have a final settlement of our disputes before we lay them down, and whatever hard names we may be called, conscious of the justness of our cause, we will steadily persevere untill we have freed our country from bondage, or find a refuge from slavery in the arms of death. Major Dunbar, whilst here, will be treated with that decency which is due to a gentle-

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

man; but I think [it] not at all probable that he will be exchanged for any person who may be taken up in Boston, as we conceive that every inhabitant of Boston has, by the agreement made with the select men, a right to come out with his effects, and as we think no future agreement can be more binding than that, we must suppose, if he cannot be liberated and suffered to come out upon the strength of that agreement, it will be trifling in us to expect his reaping any advantage from any future treaty. . . . I think I should speak the sentiments of nine-tenths of the people between this and Philadelphia if I should say we ought not to pay the least attention to anything that may be offered us from the army under General Gage, or any person belonging to it, untill the terms upon which the people of Boston laid down their arms are punctually complied with."

1775, May 24. Boston.—General Gage to Governor Legge. Respecting the rebel emissaries from Boston.

1775, May. London.—Memorial of William Burgess of London, Merchant, to the Earl of Dartmouth. Requesting a grant of land from the Government for carrying on a fishery on the coast of Labrador.

1775, June 5. Boston.—Sir William Howe to Governor Legge. Complimentary. The postscript asks that three or four bear skins may be sent him by the next conveyance from Halifax.

1775, June 6. Piccadilly.—William Philips to the Earl of Dartmouth. The writer has a plan for adjusting the differences between America and England, and begs an interview with Lord Dartmouth to explain it.

1775, June 7. Boston. — General Gage to Governor Legge. The General much regrets the scarcity of troops in Nova Scotia. The Beaver, Captain Bett, is ordered there and to St. John's, where he hopes to raise a number of men to join the King's Army. These are to be quartered at Halifax, and put under the command of Colonel Goreham. He also suggests an attempt to induce the Indians to join.

1775, June 7. Whitehall.—(Original.) The Earl of Dartmouth to Governor Legge. Unimportant.

1775, June 10. Secretary's Office, Halifax.—(Copy.) Richard Bulkeley to Joseph Winnett and Thomas Williams, Justices of the Peace for the county of Annapolis. Informing them that "one Howard a dissenting teacher, a man of seditious and treasonable practices," has arrived in that county, and requesting them to cause him to be arrested and given in charge to the Provost Marshal, who is to bring him to Halifax; and letter of same date to Mr. Fenton, Provost Marshal at Annapolis, to the same effect. (See letter from General Gage of 13 May 1775.)

1775, June 11. London.—Long paper upon the rise and progress of the disputes between Great Britain and America, with suggestions for an accommodation. Unsigned, but marked on the back "L^d D—d."

1775, June 14. Halifax.—"State of the troops now actually in garrison of 65th Regiment." Signed by Francis Marsh, Captain 65th Regiment.

1775, June 14. Council Chamber.—Address of His Majesty's Council of Nova Scotia to the Governor, Francis Legge Esquire.

1775, June 14. "In the way to Dublin."—John Wesley to the Earl of Dartmouth protesting against the American war. "All my prejudices

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

are against the Americans, for I am an High Churchman, the son of an High Churchman, bred up from my childhood in the highest notions of passive obedience and non-resistance; and yet in spite of all my rooted prejudice, I cannot avoid thinking (if I think at all) that an oppressed people asked for nothing more than their legal rights and that in the most modest and inoffensive manner which the nature of the thing would allow.

"But waiving this, waiving all considerations of right and wrong, I ask, is it common sense to use force toward the Americans?" . . .

"They are divided among themselves? So you are informed by various letters and memorials. So I doubt not was poor Rehoboam informed concerning the ten tribes! So (nearer our times) was Philip informed concerning the people of the Netherlands! No, my Lord, they are terribly united: not in the Province of New England only, but down as low as the Jerseys and Pennsylvania the bulk of the people are so united that to speak a word in favour of the present English measures would almost endanger a man's life." The writer goes on to speak of the dangers to be apprehended of an attack from abroad on Ireland while all our available resources are engaged in America.

"But we have our militia, our valiant, disciplined militia: these will effectually oppose them, Give me leave, my Lord, to relate a little circumstance of which one then on the spot informed me. In 1716 a large body of the militia were marching toward Preston against the rebels. In a wood which they were marching by a boy happened to discharge his fowling piece. The soldiers gave [up] all for lost and by common consent threw down their arms and ran for life. So much dependence is to be placed on our valorous militia!"

Mr. Wesley then draws a parallel between the time at which he is writing and the time of the rebellion between the years 1640 and 1650, the dearth of provisions, the depression of trade and the hatred of the poor for the rich all being similar. He concludes, "Upon the whole I am really sometimes afraid that 'this evil is of the Lord.' When I consider (to say nothing of ten thousand other vices shocking to human nature) the astonishing luxury of the rich, and the profaneness of rich and poor, I doubt whether general dissoluteness of manners does not demand a general visitation. Perhaps the decree is already gone forth from the Governor of the world. . . . But we Englishmen are too wise to acknowledge that God has anything to do in the world! Otherwise should we not seek Him by fasting and prayer before He lets the lifted thunder drop. O my Lord, if your Lordship can do anything, let it not be wanting! For God's sake, for the sake of the King, of the nation, of your lovely family, remember Rehoboam! Remember Philip the Second! Remember King Charles the First! I am with true regard, my Lord, your Lordship's obedient servant, JOHN WESLEY."

(1775, June 19th. Boston.—General Gage to Governor Legge. Respecting the raising of a regiment of Highlanders in St. John's and Nova Scotia, under Lieut.-Col. Maclean. In a postscript the General says:—"On the morning of the 17th inst. we discovered a redoubt the rebels had made on Charlestown Neck; General Howe with a number of men got over as fast as possible, attacked the rebels and beat them out of their hold, and entirely off the neck. The particulars I shall give you hereafter.")

1775, June 21. "Camp on the Heights of Charles Town."—Studholme Brownrigg, Ensign 38th Regt., to Lieutenant-General Hodgson. (Copy Extract). "The 17th inst., about 11 o'clock, under the command of Major-General Howe, we came from Boston to the opposite shore of

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Charles Town, in boats, to attack and take possession of the heights surrounding it, on which were two redoubts, one a very large and strong one lately made by the rebels and manned with three thousand men and two pieces of cannon; three pieces more were very advantageously planted behind a fence on a flat to the right of the rear of the redoubt; on our disembarkation the battalions formed in two lines, and the corps of Light Infantry and Grenadiers flanked to the right and left. A strong breastwork ran down the hill from the redoubt, on our right the cannon played and we advanced slowly up the hill. Two frigates that lay to the left of the town of Charles Town kept up a fire on the redoubt, as did a battery of 24 pounders from Copse Hill in Boston, but made no breach in it, as the rampart was very thick.

When we got within about five or six hundred paces they gave us a very heavy fire of cannon and small arms for about ten minutes which we received without firing a shot, but it being repeated with the greatest vigour we were obliged to retreat about twenty paces, but immediately rallied and carried the redoubt by storm. Our loss indeed has been very considerable several officers killed and wounded, about 200 privates killed and 400 wounded, but we are a little reconciled to it by being fully convinced that the loss of the rebels is as great if not greater. When the first redoubt was taken, the second, which was about half a mile further, made little or no resistance; near 100 of the rebels are taken prisoners. We are now encamped and have thrown up a strong entrenchment and two redoubts in our front. It is a pity our numbers would not permit our going on to Cambridge that day, as it is the strongest hold they have in the Province, and where they have almost all their artillery. The town of Charlestown was burnt by carcasses from Copse Hill battery during the action. The rebels have now retreated to a hill about two miles from us, where they are entrenching themselves. I have enclosed you the disposition of the troops on that day as well as I could recollect it, by which you will judge of General Howe's great abilities."

1775, June 21. "Camp on the heights of Charles Town."—George Clerk to Robert Clerk, Edinburgh. "On the morning of the 17th the rebels were perceived at work on these heights, very strong ground opposite to Boston, which it was determined immediately to attack and dislodge them from thence. We embarked on board boats about 12 at noon. Not having boats for all the troops designed, there were three different embarkations. The first were the Light Infantry of the army and Grenadiers, the first of which I commanded, and the Grenadiers my friend Abercrombie. The whole landed without the least opposition. I was sent immediately forward with four companies of the corps of light infantry within about 400 yards of the works of the enemy, where we lay covered under the bank of the water and other banks extending to our left. About half past three the rest of my corps joined me, by which time I believe the whole had landed, when I received orders to move on and endeavour to get round the flank of the rebels, which I was anxious to effect, but was retarded by fences, but mostly the water which prevented our moving on round the point I wished. At this time a very heavy fire from the enemy continued on us from behind a barricade of fence rails, trees, &c., all within 90 yards. By this time the line got orders to move on to attack the works on the left, a small redoubt and lines of earth; in about half-an-hour they drove the rebels and got possession of their entrenchments. We moved on at the same time driving the runaways and took possession of the extremity and the whole of these heights, very strong ground. They kept firing at us

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

from a small village below all the evening but did little hurt. We immediately threw up an entrenchment and are now going on completing other works on this ground. At the beginning of the attack Charlestown was set on fire, and the whole by the day after laid in ashes, part of the terrible effects of a civil war.

The rebels were very numerous and behaved far beyond any idea I could ever have formed of them. They had about 5,000 men in the field, We not much above 2,000, if so many, but we have paid for our victory. lost a great number of our officers, I am told above 80 killed and wounded—a great smash by such miscreants.

They are fortifying themselves very strongly on heights in our front about a mile and a half. They have drove away all their cattle, &c. so we are no better as to provisions. What will now be done I can't say as they seem to be fortifying every hill and determined to dispute every inch of ground with us."

1775, June 24. London.—Petition of John Moss to the Earl of Dartmouth, requesting some appointment from the Government in the Colonies, as a recompense of his services when serving in the army in the late war in America. Mentions Lord Denbigh, Sir Adolphus Oughton, and Surgeon-General Adair as knowing him and being willing to recommend him.

1775, June 25. Boston.—E. Le Cras to Mr. Le Cras, London. Sends a resolution of the Continental Congress to starve the Navy and Army, "and they will go a great way towards it, if something is not done to prevent it, for nothing can be got but by force, and very little in that way. The southern colonies are determined to support this, and our force will not do to subdue all."

1775, July 5. London.—Will. Strahan to Doctor Franklin. As to the doctor having been voted by the Assembly of Philadelphia one of their Delegates to the Congress, urging him to use all the influence he possesses to compromise and settle the disputes between the mother country and the American colonies.

1775, July 5. London.—H. Cruger to his brother John Harris Cruger. On domestic affairs. Anticipates utter ruin to America from the war which she has brought upon herself.

1775, July 10. Halifax.—"The deposition of Thomas Flinn, master of the schooner Falmouth packet, taken before me George Deschamps, Esquire, one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the county of Halifax," detailing an attack made upon a King's schooner commanded by Captain Moore, by a number of the inhabitants of Machias (Maine), who seized the deponent's ship arrived at Machias from Windsor in the Province of Halifax to load timber, for the purpose of the attack. Captain Moore was severely wounded, and afterwards died. Mentions the names of some of the rebels who led the attack.

1775, July 14. Boston.—General Gage to Governor Legge. As to obtaining fuel from Nova Scotia and the guarding the military stores at Halifax. "We are still at war here, and things promise rather worse than better; a staff, sent by the Continental Congress, has lately joyned the rebels. Washington (from Virginia) commands, Lee amongst the Major-Generals, and Horatio Gates, Adjutant-General."

1775, July 17. Halifax.—W. Tonge to Governor Legge. Answering complaints made against him by the Governor in the discharge of his office of Naval Officer of the Province of Halifax.

1775, July 17. Halifax.—Jonathan Biune to Joshua Mauger, M.P. Relating his "persecution" by Governor Legge. "I have been confined in gaol from 4th May last to the 14th this instant. The House and Council passed an Act or Bill for my relief the 4th instant, but Governor Legge delayed giving his assent to it; the loathsome situation I was in, being confined in gaol with my wife and family obliged me to write the Governor praying his assent to said Bill that I may be released; his answer was, if I would give sufficient security to the acceptance of the Crown Law Officers for the sums I stand charged with by the Executive, to be payable in six months or when his Majesty's pleasure shall be known in respect of the Bill passed, that then he would pass said Bill with a suspensory clause. I was obliged to give security for the whole sums and pay the costs of the Solicitor-General and Provost Marshal amounting to 69*l.* 11*s.* 4*d.*" Asks Mr. Manger to use his influence at home to get him a final acquittance of all the persecution, and some of the costs and damages repaid him.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1775, July 22. Halifax.—The Rev. John Breynton, D.D., to Joshua Manger, M.P. The difficulties which have beset America since the commencement of the war affect Nova Scotia as deeply as any other Colony.

1775, July 25. Boston. (Copy extract.)—F. Vernon to Messrs. Lane, Son, and Foster. "We the inhabitants that remain here may say we have a being and that is all; we are restrained from all manner of fresh provisions, and obliged to bear with many insults and abuses both by the army and navy, and even our own country about us has and still is acting with too great severity with us in restraining all natural subsistence from us they can, that we may say we are in a more distressing situation than prisoners confined in a close gaol."

1775, July 26. Boston. (Copy extract.)—Nathaniel Taylor to Messrs. Harrisons and Ansley. "I shall not particularly describe the condition of this town, but if you will please to paint to yourselves a place suffering under the calamities of fire and sword, famine in a degree, and pestilence you will have an idea of our state."

1775, July 27. Boston. (Copy Extract.)—James Anderson to his brother, Andrew Anderson, merchant at Greenock. "The town is very quiet, most of the inhabitants are gone out and will not be allowed to return. The fortifications are amazingly strong, and they are adding to them every day, but indeed we are under no apprehension of their attacking the town, they are not an enemy for such kind of work, their expedition to Charlestown, as we since learnt, was a push to burn the shipping, &c. The ardor and bravery of the troops was remarkable on that day; but a little more coolness would have given the rebels a complete overthrow. You may remember Charlestown Neck, which is not a stonethrow across, could have been defended by a few guns in lighters, and their retreat effectually cut off."

1775, July 28. Charlestown Camp.—General Sir William Howe to Governor Legge. Thanking him for four bearskins sent.

1775, July 29. Boston.—General Gage to Governor Legge. Asking him to procure twenty or thirty ship carpenters, and as many seamen as possible, to go to Quebec by a ship which the Admiral intends to send thither shortly. General Gage has heard the news from Machias. (See the deposition of Thomas Flinn dated 10th July 1775).

1775, Aug. 2. Halifax. — Copy letter unsigned, but apparently from Governor Legge to Mr. Shoolbred, an English merchant, and a proposed settler in the Province. (See letter of April 8th in this year from Lord Dartmouth to Governor Legge.) He offers him all the assistance possible in preparing a deed of grant of the land he requires.

1775, August 4. Philadelphia. (Copy).—Thomas Wharton to Samuel Wharton. Communicating the contents of an express which arrived at Philadelphia on the 3rd instant from General Schuyler. The General is informed that Governor Carleton had but 450 men at his command, "that he had used his utmost influence with the Canadians to join and augment his army so that he might retake Crown Point and Ticonderoga, which they had positively refused to do, and declared they never would fight against their brethren the Colonists. Seven tribes of Indians headed by that warlike tribe, the Cochnawagas, have also given satisfactory proofs of their determination to remain neuter in this unnatural dispute, and in order to keep their young men from joining Governor Carleton, they have appointed a head man or chief over every tribe, and one chief over the whole body, and retired to their castle. The same express further adds that the Canadians considered the treatment they receive from the soldiers in so cruel a light that they have intimated a desire that the Colony troops should take possession of Canada, and I am fearful this will be attempted, because I know a majority of the Congress did give General Schuyler liberty, if he thought prudent, to penetrate that country. This intelligence is known to very few, and I may say has afforded to some of us abundant uneasiness, because it is going from the ground we first put our stand upon, that of a defensive opposition for the preservation of our rights and privileges, and because it will make our settlement more difficult, as the honour and property of the nation is concerned.

A letter from T. Mifflin by this day's post, dated at the provincial Camp, says that five deserters had come in that day from General Gage's army, and informs us that the whole of the regulars did not exceed 6,500 effective men, that General Gage had resigned the command, and General Howe succeeded thereto, that Gage acted as Governor, that a disagreement subsists among the four chief officers, that two companies of the Riflemen were arrived, and were impatient to get to work, but that General Washington would not permit it."

1775, Aug. 8. Parliament St.—James Meyrick to Governor Legge. The preparations to increase the Royal Army in America. There is a copy of the same letter enclosed.

1775, Aug. 11. Boston.—General Gage to Governor Legge. The Admiral has been informed of the rebel cruizers mentioned by Mr. Legge, and now has two vessels in the Bay of Fundy, and has ordered another to protect the transports waiting there for convoy, and if possible to destroy the pirates.

1775, Aug. 11. Preston at Boston.—Admiral Graves to Governor Legge. Is satisfied that the rebels are meditating some mischief to Halifax and other parts in Mr. Legge's Government, and will endeavour to interrupt the navigation to and from the Bay of Fundy. Positive orders have been given to the Commanders of the St. Lawrence and Hope armed schooners to search for pirates about Annapolis, Machias, and if necessary, Windsor.

1775, Aug. 19. Boston.—General Gage to Governor Legge. As to proposals for raising a number of ship carpenters and scamen for active service.

1775, Aug. 20. Boston.—Same to same. Is sorry a misunderstanding has arisen between Governor Legge and Captain Marsh, with regard to the hay on George's Island and the Eastern Battery. The use of the ground round the guns has always been considered the perquisite of the officer in command. Enquires if Governor Legge be still in the army; if not, he requests him not to put Captain Marsh in arrest.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1775, Aug. 21.—“The present state and condition of the Colonies with respect to their Governors and government.” Stated on the back to be by Mr. Morris.

“Massachusetts has rejected the Governor and Council appointed by His Majesty by virtue of an Act of Parliament, have called an Assembly of Representatives and chosen the Council, and appointed the President of Council, with authority of Commander-in-chief.

“New Hampshire have rejected their Governor, are at present governed by a provincial Congress.

“Rhode Island and Providence Plantations have a Governor, Council, and Representatives according to their charter all elective.

“New York have a Committee of safety and provincial Congress. Governor Tryon just arrived, and who is in great favour in general, yet can have at present no authority as Governor.

“New Jersey, governed by a provincial Congress, the Governor without authority.

“Philadelphia, governed by a provincial Congress, the Governor of no weight, nor indeed ever was; this government is by charter wholly popular, having only one branch, to wit, the House of Representatives.

“Maryland, governed by a provincial Congress.

“Virginia, governed by a provincial Congress, the authority of Governor and Council set aside, and the Governor retreated on board a King's ship.

“North Carolina, governed by a provincial Congress, the Governor and Council of no authority.

“South Carolina, governed by a provincial Congress, have refused to receive Lord William (Campbell) their present Governor, who has taken refuge in Georgia.

“Over all the provincial Congresses is one general Continental Congress, who govern in general, and have appointed Generals and all superior officers. This seems to be the design model of American government, and who begin to call themselves the States General of the United Colonies.

“Canada remains to the Crown. Nova Scotia, with good management, does likewise; but the contagion spreads, and, as in the first instances, the quarrel begins with the Governor and ends with the Crown. This republican spirit has in America the same effect as bigotry in religion had once in Europe. The House of Representatives is more than one half republicans, and the majority of Council have other measures which will be subservient to that cause.

“Georgia is divided, one part sides with Royalty, the other with Republicans.

“Newfoundland are all fishermen, and are now starving for want of bread, and leaving the country; all government is alike to them, when they have bread, pork, and peas sufficient.”

1775, Aug. 21.—“St. Lawrence and Hope schooners, at Windsor.” Lieutenants John Graves and George Dawson to Governor Legge, enclosing an account of a number of disaffected people at Annapolis and Windsor who are quite ready to join the rebels from New England whenever opportunity offer.

1775, Aug. 23. Halifax.—Draft letter from Governor Legge to General Gage. Mentioning the above from Lieutenant Graves and Dawson and stating what he proposes to do to prevent the spread of disaffection.

1775, Aug. 23. Preston at Boston.—Admiral Graves to Governor Legge. Respecting New York and Philadelphia privateers, which he does not believe are so numerous as Mr. Legge's informants state. It is probable that all the Colonies will have cruisers. Mentions the movements of his Majesty's ships in the vicinity of Nova Scotia.

1775, Aug. 31. Halifax.—Governor Legge to General Gage. For preventing a descent of the rebels upon the Province, the Admiral has ordered the Scarborough to cruize at the mouth of the Bay of Fundy, and two armed schooners and the Senegal are to cruize there also. A company of Light Infantry is to be formed from the Militia in every part of the Province. The great difficulty is with regard to the payment of the Militia, as the resources of the Province are not sufficient.

1775, August.—"Abstract of the number of families settled in Nova Scotia from a State of that Province taken in August 1775." At the end of the Abstract is this note: "By this estimate there are specified 2,488 families in the Province: allowing six to each family, as is the case at Lunenburg, the number of inhabitants is 14,928. By a return from the Secretary's Office in the year 1773 I find them amounting to 17,752."

1775, Sep. 4. Charlestown Camp, near Boston.—General Sir William Howe to Governor Legge. Thanks him for sending a very fine ox and two sheep which have arrived safely. Governor Legge's volunteer, Proctor, has distinguished himself greatly in a small brush with the rebels, going out with a small party to drive them back. "The situation of the King's troops and that of the rebels is nearly the same as when I had the honor of writing to you last. They are entrenched upon every advantageous spot, and we are so strongly posted here that we wish to tempt them to attack us, which if they do not shortly do, perhaps we may try our fortune against them, but we are so well prepared upon these heights that it would be imprudent to attack them before we give up their coming to us."

1775, Sep. 4. Boston.—General Gage to Governor Legge. As to the protection of the Province of Nova Scotia from attacks by the New England rebels.

1775, Sep. 4. Preston at Boston.—Admiral Graves to Governor Legge. Preparations made by sea to prevent attacks by the rebels on Nova Scotia.

1775, Sep. 5. Boston.—General Gage to Governor Legge. Unimportant. "The Admiral has now so many vessels in the Bay of Fundy that the rebels from this Province will not have an opportunity to land there."

1775, Sep. 10. Boston.—General Gage to Governor Legge. "I have certain intelligence from deserters lately come in from the rebels, that about 1,500 men have marched from Cambridge, and it is said are intended to joyn the rebel army on the frontiers of Canada; but as their route is through Newberry, they may possibly be intended for your Province. I therefore give you this information and hope the force the Admiral has in the Bay of Fundy will be able to frustrate all the designs of the rebels."

1775, Sep. 11. Boston.—General Gage to Governor Legge. Confirmatory of the news in the preceding letter, and asking him to send a letter

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

immediately by a trusty Indian to General Carleton, as by going through the woods he would get to him before the rebels can have arrived.

1775, Sep. 11. Halifax.—Richard Bulkeley, secretary to the Governor, to Governor Legge. Pointing out the consequences attendant on the Governor's leaving Halifax, owing to the peculiar state of the law of the Province of Nova Scotia.

1775, Sep. 19. Yarmouth. (Copy.)—Colonel Goold to Messrs. Durkee, Crawley, and Cook, magistrates at Yarmouth. Colonel Goold has been appointed by Governor Legge colonel of the militia of Queen's County, and has been instructed to raise a company of 50 privates with a captain and two lieutenants to be called the Light Infantry company, out of such of the inhabitants of the county as are known to be well affected active men. Asking for the assistance of the magistrates to raise the company.

1775, Sep. 20.—"Return of a Light Infantry company formed at Yarmouth." The company consists of 48 rank and file, with two lieutenants, David Scott and Benjamin Brown, a captain, Eleazar Hebbard, and commanded by Colonel Arthur Goold.

1775, Sep. 21. Old Palace Yard.—Mr. Mauger to Mr. Pownall. Enclosing some papers relating to Mr. Binney's case to be laid before Lord Dartmouth.

1775, Sep. 23. Dublin.—Alexander Duncan to Governor Legge. Respecting arrears of pay due to him.

1775, Sep. 28. Boston.—General Sir William Howe to Governor Legge.

The King having required General Gage's presence at home to consult him upon the present state of America, I am invested in his absence with the command of the forces in North America on the side of the Atlantic; General Carleton having the same powers within his Government and in the back country, and would take the command of the whole were we to meet. Our two Commissions are to command in chief in our respective districts, wherein I shall be happy to render you every service in my power."

1775, Sep. 29. Boston.—General Gage to Governor Legge. Has lately intercepted a letter from one Edward Pheaton, supposed to be a journeyman printer at Halifax, to Mills and Hicks, printers in Boston, giving an account of everything that is being done in Nova Scotia; recommends a strict watch of his movements to be kept, as he has the spirit of rebellion strongly in him. Announces his departure shortly for England, and that he has left the command with General Howe.

1775, Sep. 30. Boston. (Copy.)—General Gage to Lieutenant-Colonel Gorham, Commandant. Directing him to embark immediately on board a transport provided for Halifax with a number of men of the Royal Fencible Americans and Royal Highland Regiment of Emigrants, and to take command of all His Majesty's forces in Nova Scotia.

1775, Sep. 30. Boston.—Admiral Graves to Governor Legge. The importation of fresh provisions from Nova Scotia into Boston. Passes have hitherto been freely granted to the inhabitants who have fitted up vessels for the purposes of the trade, but on Mr. Legge's representations no further passes will be issued except for the service of the Army and Navy.

1775, Oct. 2. Boston. (Copy.)—General Gage to Lieutenant-Colonel Gorham. Has ordered two companies of the 14th Regiment under Captain Stanton to accompany him to Halifax in addition to those previously intended for that service.

1775, Oct. 2. Boston.—General Howe to Governor Legge. Recommending to his favour Lieutenant Barry of the 52nd Regiment, who has been appointed secretary to Lieutenant-Colonel Gorham.

1775, Oct. 2. Boston.—General Gage to Governor Legge. Stating the forces which Lieutenant-Colonel Gorham will have under his command for the protection of Halifax.

1775, Oct. 3. Boston.—General Gage to Governor Legge. Announcing his departure for England, and that he has left the command of the forces at Quebec and on the frontier with Major-General Carleton, and those on the Atlantic under Major-General Howe.

1775, Oct. 7. Halifax.—Deposition of William Humphrey sworn before Charles Morris, J.P., with regard to a woman whom he had sent for from England to be a maid servant to Governor Legge.

1775, Oct. 16. Whitehall.—Copy. The Earl of Suffolk to Governor Legge. Governor Legge's despatches have been laid before the King to whom the condition and safety of Nova Scotia have now become a matter of great anxiety. These apprehensions have been increased by the news of the revolt at Machias, and it has been thought advisable to send one of the five regiments, just embarked from Cork, to Halifax; the Roebuck, a 40 gun ship, has also sailed three weeks ago for the same place.

The King's wishes are that a corps of 1,000 men be formed in Nova Scotia and Newfoundland to be commanded by Mr. Legge with the provincial rank of Colonel. The pay and subsistence are to be the same as those of the regular army, and grants of land may, if necessary, be made by Governor Legge to induce people to join. The inhabitants of the townships on the Bay of Fundy to be disarmed; the fortifications of the harbour to be strengthened by temporary works. The despatch concludes: "I must not omit to observe that His Majesty sees with equal concern and displeasure that, at a time when the situation of public affairs demands that all his servants in Nova Scotia should lay aside every other consideration but that of the most effectual means of uniting their efforts to support the authority of the parent State, and avert the dangers that surround them, the public peace should be disturbed, and his Majesty's service obstructed by ill-humour, anger, and resentments in matters of the most trivial moment respecting merely the domestic economy of the Province."

1775, Oct. 17. Preston at Boston.—Admiral Graves to Governor Legge. The Admiral will continue a good force in the Bay of Fundy, and ships shall winter at Annapolis and Windsor. Suggests with the object of checking communication between New England and Nova Scotia, that some of the principals in the matter shall be seized and made examples of.

1775, Oct. 18. Boston.—General Sir William Howe to Governor Legge. Recommends a palisade with block houses, similar to one which Governor Legge has put up for the defence of Halifax dockyard to be erected on Citadel hill for the protection of the town.

1775, Oct. 21. — Paper headed "State of his Majesty's forces at Halifax," and signed by Lieutenant-Colonel Joseph Gorham, command ing officer.

N.D. (but after 11th October 1775.)—William Black to Governor Legge. Referring to some charges brought against him by Governor Legge.

1775, Nov. 5. Halifax.—Commodore Arbuthnot to Governor Legge. Announcing his appointment as commander in chief in the absence of a flag officer. On his arrival he found H.M. ship Somerset, Commodore Le Cras, under orders to proceed home, but as a report was prevalent that a considerable force of rebels had marched up the country, the orders have been countermanded for the present until the Admiral's further directions are known.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1775, Nov. 8. Halifax. (Copy).—Governor Legge to General Sir William Howe. Enclosing letters received from St. John's Island and three pamphlets addressed to the General Court and Province of Nova Scotia. Captain Stanton of the 14th regiment has been sent to secure the Indians on St. John's River to the support of Government. On the same sheet is a copy of a letter dated from Charlotte Town, St. John's Island, 13th October 1775, from the Governor of the Island to Governor Legge, enclosing copies of despatches from Lieut.-Governor Cramahé, from Lieutenant-Colonel McLean &c., by which will appear "the disagreeable situation General Carleton and the Province under his government are in. Captain Fraser has private letters which inform him the Canadians have absolutely refused to join us, assigning for reason that the English law is taken away from them, and that as the King has broken his word they have a right to do the same; daring licentiousness has extended itself from North to South." The writer trusts Governor Legge will not be disturbed in his Province; "a lieutenant belonging to Captain Fraser's company a few days ago returned from the south shore of your Province, where he had been recruiting; he informed me he met with many snubs and jeers. As to my miniature Government I have not the least cause to suspect any disturbance. I believe all their trouble will be to get something to eat."

1775, Nov. 8. Boston.—General Sir William Howe to Governor Legge. "An ordnance store ship from England, and a transport with part of the 17th regiment of foot from Ireland arrived this day.

"They are forerunners of two fleets from Portsmouth and Cork with military stores, provisions, and a reinforcement of five regiments, all which are daily expected."

1775, Nov. 20. Halifax, Nova Scotia.—Letter unsigned, but from some of the Government officers of the Province of Nova Scotia, to Governor Legge. Complaining of the disloyal conduct of some members of the Government, instancing the Speaker of the House, who "has in a most unequalled manner opposed the measures of Government introduced to the House, not merely by his influence among the members, and upon Committees, but as Speaker has repeatedly insisted on a privilege of being heard in that character, and offered dictatorial opinions from the chair upon Bills and other papers he has been delivering to the House with manifest intention to sway the debate and their judgment.

"He has upon repeated occasions, where the Governor of this Province has been mentioned, endeavoured to represent your Excellency's conduct as odious and obnoxious, and made as well direct as ironical aspersions greatly tending to lessen that respect and confidence due by the community to a Governor of this Province, and which, if estranged from, must undoubtedly at all times, but singularly so at present, be very prejudicial to His Majesty's service." The Surveyor and Searcher of his Majesty's Customs, and other persons, have united to defeat the measures of Government. The writers strongly recommend that the conduct of the Speaker and his friends may not go unnoticed, and hope this private information will be useful to the Governor.

1775, Dec. 8. Boston.—General Sir W. Howe to Governor Legge. As to the works in progress for the defence of the town and dockyard, victualling the troops at present in Nova Scotia, &c. A further detachment of six companies of the 65th Regiment under Lieutenant-Colonel Bruce has been sent off to Halifax to protect the Province.

1775, Dec. 13. New Jerusalem [Maine.] — Deposition of Joshua Snow, taken by G. H. Monk and Richard Wheeler, concerning armed schooners, fitted out by the American Congress to cruize for prizes off the coast of Nova Scotia, and stating that Governor Patterson of St. John's Island was a prisoner on board one of these schooners and "that thirteen thousand men had been embodied by the Congress to subdue Nova Scotia and particularly Halifax, and that they were prevented from pursuing their design while the men of war lay in the Bay of Fundy. And that they believed Halifax would have been taken long since had it not been for the small-pox being there which at present deterred the Liberty army."

1775, Dec. 14. Halifax.—Depositions of William Watson and Christopher Cowling as to a resolution of a rebel assembly in New England to send an army of five or six thousand Provincials to attack Nova Scotia.

1775, Dec. 18. Boston.—General Sir William Howe to Governor Legge. Announcing the despatch of Brigadier-General Massey with the 27th Regiment to Nova Scotia.

1775, Dec. 19. Preston. Boston.—Admiral Graves to Governor Legge. Thanks him for his letter of Dec. 6, as to the proceedings of rebel schooners, and of a ship fitted out from Philadelphia.

1775, Dec. 23. Brigadier-General Massey to Governor Legge. As to Mr. Studholme being a captain in Captain Stanton's Corps.

1775, Dec. 25. Mount Denson.—Lieutenant-Colonel H. Denny Denson to Governor Legge. On various subjects, the small-pox epidemic in Nova Scotia, the Militia law, &c.

1775, Dec. 25. Halifax.—Recruiting instructions to Captain Studholme of his Majesty's Loyal Regiment of Nova Scotia Volunteers, to raise a company of 4 sergeants, 4 corporals, 2 drummers, and 96 privates to serve in this volunteer regiment.

In lieu of rank, pay or pension, when the regiment is disbanded, the field officers are to have 5,000 acres of land in the Province; captains, 3,000 acres; subalterns and staff officers, 2,000 acres; non-commissioned officers, 200 acres, and privates 50 acres. While the regiment is on the establishment the officers and men are to receive the same pay as officers and men of the regiments of infantry. The oath to be taken by each volunteer is subjoined.

1775, Dec. 26. Halifax.—Governor Legge to Commodore Arbuthnot. Enquiring the reason of his refusal to advance him 1,000*l*. to facilitate the raising of a regiment of 1,000 men for the service and defence of the Province.

1775, Dec. 29. Mount Denson.—Lieutenant-Colonel Denson to Governor Legge. Thanking him for having appointed him Lieutenant-Colonel of the Nova Scotia Volunteer Regiment.

1775, Dec. 29th. Falmouth.—Lieutenant Colonel Denson to Governor Legge. As to recruiting for the Volunteer Regiment about to be raised in Nova Scotia, and the difficulties in the way. "The implacable rancour of the people of this country against His Majesty's Government, &c., is prodigious, consequently there is little probability of our having great success among them."

Estimate of the charge of maintaining and supporting the Civil Establishment of His Majesty's Colony of Nova Scotia for the year 1775.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

N. D.(? 1775). Draft letter from the Earl of Dartmouth, to whom does not appear, but probably to some person in America, relating to the growing disputes between that Colony and Great Britain. Lord Dartmouth has received a letter from the person addressed by the hands of Doctor F[ranklin] written in the name and by the order of the Lower House of Assembly of the Province of Massachusetts Bay together with two petitions to the King. Expresses his great concern at the "unhappy spirit of disunion and dissatisfaction which has lately prevailed in the Province," and that the principal cause of this arises from "the Acts of Parliament that have lately passed for raising a revenue in America for the support of civil government there." The answer of the House of Assembly to a recent speech of the Governor appears to Lord Dartmouth "to be a most serious, I had almost said an insuperable, bar to the return of that state of union and tranquillity which I so anxiously wish to see restored to the British Empire. Indeed I must be free to own myself persuaded that till that unhappy bar shall be removed out of the way by the same hands that laid it there, it will be fruitless to wish, it will be in vain to attempt to alleviate the causes of uneasiness in other instances alluded to in your letter, to some of which I flatter myself an easy remedy might otherwise have been applied." Concludes by hoping some means may be found, by the opening of the next session, to remove the hindrance to a general peace in the British Empire which now exists.

1775. Bundle of minutes of despatches from and to the Earl of Dartmouth. The majority are from the Governors and Deputy-Governors of the various Provinces of North America. Many of them are undated, but they all treat of the commencement of the war and are mostly concerned with stating the general temper of the Colonies, and consist of the following:—

South Carolina.—Despatches undated, from Lieutenant-Governor Bull, describing the feelings of the Colonists and the proceedings of the General Congress at Philadelphia as being adverse to England and favourable to the resolution of the Congress. The 17th of February, "being the day appointed by the Congress for a general fast," he says, in his letter of the 22nd, "had been observed with great strictness throughout the Provinces, several of the clergy had shown a most rigid compliance to the order and suited their pulpit declamations to the temper of the times."

Attacks by the Colonists on the Armoury and State House, the Magazine, and other Government buildings.

Georgia.—Despatches from Sir James Wright. Riots by the Colonists, and the feelings of the people distinctly adverse to Great Britain. Robbery at the Government powder mill of 600 pounds of powder; not more than 300 pounds remained for the King's use. Proclamations had been issued with a reward for the discovery of the offender, but Sir James had no hopes of success.

Great excitement was caused among the people by the account of the skirmish near Boston; he concludes by requesting troops from England.

North Carolina.—Despatches from Governor Martin. Deputies have been sent from North Carolina to the Congress in spite of his efforts to delay it. A mob assembled at Newbern, who surrounded the Governor's house and finally burned the fort, which he had been obliged to evacuate; asks assistance from England. With a small number of troops he could raise an army of about 30,000 natives, and with such a force he would draw multitudes of well affected subjects from their

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Colonies and establish order and obedience everywhere south of Pennsylvania.

Maryland.—Despatches from Deputy-Governor Eden. The sentiments of the people distinctly adverse to Great Britain. A quantity of gunpowder and arms have been seized. Lord Dartmouth's letter, enclosing the resolutions of the House of Commons, has been received, but has been unsuccessful in restoring order.

Pennsylvania.—Despatches from Deputy-Governor Penn. Committees have been appointed by the inhabitants of the City of Philadelphia to see that the agreements entered into by the Congress should be fully complied with. He regrets that there appears a general inclination in the people to adhere to the resolutions of the Congress. He spoke in the Assembly on the subject of Lord Dartmouth's letter and the resolution of the House of Commons, and received an answer that the resolution was considered by the Assembly to be unfit for them to adopt, and that they were resolved to adhere to the other associated Colonies, and abide by the determination of the General Congress. 20,000 men in the Provinces were already provided with arms and ammunition, and were learning military duties and exercises for the avowed purpose of opposing the parent state. No prospect of a speedy termination of the hostilities commenced in Massachusetts Bay, as military preparations were making in all the old Colonies. . . . Major Skeene, on his arrival at Philadelphia, was taken into custody by order of the City Committee, and it is quite out of Mr. Penn's power to release him in the present state of affairs.

The General Congress has resolved to raise an army of 15,000 men; they have likewise ordered two million of dollars in Bills of Credit to be struck for the charges of the war, a part of which are already in circulation; paper Bills of the value of 35,000*l.* have also been issued.

Rhode Island.—Despatches of Governor Wanton. The General Assembly of the Colony have passed an Act for raising an army of observation, to consist of 1,500 men. A protest was entered into by himself and the Deputy-Governor against the Act, but to no purpose.

In a subsequent letter Governor Wanton sent to Lord Dartmouth copies of the several Acts of Assembly passed in their last session for carrying on the war against his Majesty's Government.

Connecticut.—Despatches from Governor Trumbell.

Virginia.—Despatches from the Earl of Dunmore. Owing to the hostile temper of the people the Governor has judged it proper to remove some gunpowder from a magazine at Williamsburg, which step had given great umbrage, and the Mayor demanded restitution thereof. The Governor refused to comply, and to check further violence threatened them with liberating the negroes in case they proceeded to any acts of hostility; he requests a small reinforcement of troops and a quantity of arms and ammunition, with which and the assistance of the ships of war he undertakes soon to reduce the factious of the Colony to obedience.

In a subsequent letter Lord Dunmore states that he has been advised to shut himself up and make a garrison of his house, as he finds the violence of the people increasing. All the Colony was in a state of anarchy; a party headed by Patrick Henry, a man of desperate circumstances, extorted from the Receiver General 300*l.*, part of the King's revenue under the pretence of indemnifying the people for the loss of the gunpowder.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

In a despatch from Lord Dartmouth to Lord Dunmore he states that he had entrusted 3,000 stand of arms and ammunition in proportion to Captain Dodsworth to be delivered to Lord Dunmore.

A battalion of Highlanders is to be raised in the Province of North Carolina.

In a further despatch it appears that Lord Dunmore found it necessary to seek refuge on board His Majesty's ship Fowey and he says that he cannot entertain the most distant hope of accommodation with the Colonists.

A letter from Lord Dartmouth follows, enclosing the King's License for Lord Dunmore's return to England.

New Jersey.—Despatches from Governor Francklin. These are all of a similar character to the above and contain apprehensions for the restoration of peace between Great Britain and the Colonies. "He intimates in a despatch of the 2nd August that, in consequence of a declaration of the General Congress, every preparation was making for carrying on the War, and states that it is his opinion that not many persons in the Colonies would draw their swords in support of Parliamentary taxation, but is confident numbers would fight to maintain its supremacy."

New York.—Despatches from Lieutenant-Governor Colden. Has been obliged to apply to Admiral Graves for one of the large ships from Boston as there were only 100 men of the Royal Irish regiment in the City. In his letter of the 7th of June he says that "provincial Congresses and Committees were then established and acting with all the authority of the legal Government; that the principal objects then before them were the raising an army to oppose the King's troops and erect such fortifications as may serve to keep the command of the country; that the citizens had taken arms and several companies were formed who had appointed their own officers and were armed and clothed in uniform that a body of 2,500 Connecticut men were encamped at Greenwich, a place in that Government about 40 miles from New York, whose avowed purpose was to keep that Government in awe, and in case of defection, as they call it, to attack the Province."

In his letter of the 3rd of July the Lieutenant-Governor mentions that the Congress had appointed George Washington Commander-in-Chief of the American Army, Colonel Lee and Philip Schuyler Major-Generals, and Horatio Gates Adjutant-General.

There are also minutes of a long despatch from Governor Tryon, giving a very gloomy view of the situation. He does not meet with any of the inhabitants of his Province who show the smallest inclination to draw the sword in support of Great Britain.

Massachusetts Bay.—Very voluminous minutes of despatches from General Gage, dating from the 13th of October 1774 and ending the 20th of August 1775. In his first despatch, he mentions that the Congress had entered into a resolve for embodying 15,000 men commanded by four persons, and that these men were to be ready on a moment's warning, and would be maintained by his and the neighbouring Province for the avowed purpose of opposing the law and authority of Great Britain; that Major-General Haldimand with the 47th Regiment and three companies of the 18th at New York had joined him and brought with him many useful stores.

General Gage thinks it impracticable to disarm any of the Provinces, and says that the violence of the people was so great against the "mandamus" councillors that they had been obliged to seek protection amongst the King's troops, but notwithstanding this the General speaks with great confidence of the probability of subduing opposition to Government were a respectable force sent into the field.

A minute of a long despatch from Lord Dartmouth, dated the 27th of January 1775, then follows, stating the determination of the Government to reduce the Colonies to obedience.

There is a minute of a further letter from Lord Dartmouth dated 22nd of February 1775, acquainting General Gage that Parliament had voted an augmentation of the Army, and that he would be further reinforced by four more regiments of Infantry and one of Light Horse which were now preparing to embark, and that Major-Generals Howe, Clinton, and Burgoyne, were ordered for service in America, and would join him in the middle of next month.

In a despatch dated the 19th of April 1775, General Gage gives an account that, in consequence of having received information that a large quantity of military stores for the avowed purpose of revolution was collected at Concord, he sent the Grenadiers and Light Infantry under the command of Colonel Smith to seize and destroy all the said military stores, which service, though vigorously opposed, had been effected under many heavy fires of the rebels, which the troops with great spirit returned; that on their return they found large bodies of them armed and accoutred, who from all quarters where any cover was to be found kept up a continual heavy firing; that for their support he had detached Lord Percy with 8 companies of the 4th Regiment and the same numbers of the 23rd and Marines, with cannon, who joined at Lexington where a skirmish commenced and continued the whole of their march back to Boston, the troops being fired at from every fence and house, barn, hill, etc.; but his Lordship kept the enemy off and brought the troops to Boston, though with considerable loss to our army, much greater to the rebels. The General speaks with confidence that the whole country is now in arms, and that several thousands are now assembled about Boston getting up artillery and threatening an attack.

The General in another letter to Lord Dartmouth dated the 13th of May, says that "all the avenues of the town are stopped by large bodies of men who have collected artillery and military stores from the country, and have desired the inhabitants to remove their effects and leave the town." Further despatches from General Gage give accounts of the surprise and attack of the Fort of Ticonderoga, and of the attack on Major Skeene's settlement, and he says that, as the Provinces of Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, and others, are in open rebellion, a very large force will be requisite to make any impression of consequence, and that all the Colonies have refused to supply the troops with articles necessary for further support. In answer to this there is a despatch from Lord Dartmouth giving details of the extensive preparations for war making at home.

General Gage's despatch of the 25th of June 1775, relates an action with the rebels on the Peninsula of Charles Town; they having raised a battery there against the town of Boston, Major-General Howe with Brigadier-General Pigot and 2,000 men, landed on the Peninsula, and attacked the rebels. By the fire from Boston in a critical moment Charles Town was set on fire. The Brigadier, however, pursuing his attack carried the redoubt, drove the rebels clear off the Peninsula and took five pieces of cannon. The loss of the rebels has not been ascertained, but must have been very considerable, but our loss, though less in number, was much more material, and notwithstanding

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

our success the General thinks that the affair will rather strengthen than disperse the rebels.

Quebec.—Despatches from Governor Carleton.

These state that a correspondence had been held between Mr. Jeffrey of Boston and Mr. Jonas Clarke Minot of Quebec, the tendency of which was to inflame the minds of the Canadians and to promote a union between them and the other Colonies in their opposition to the measures of the Government; and that they had succeeded so far in this attempt as to prevail upon the town of Quebec to send them a benefaction for the relief of the poor at Boston, and that several letters of a treasonable nature were in circulation in Canada.

Further letters of Governor Carleton relating to attempts of emissaries from Massachusetts Bay to poison the minds of the Canadians and render them adverse to the King's Government; several copies of letters from the Congress to the Canadians were translated into French and dispersed among the inhabitants. A Mr. Brown, a member of the provincial Committee of Cambridge, arrived at Montreal, and brought a letter addressed to some of the inhabitants, and signed by Thomas Mackay and Warren, the purport of which was to represent the cause of the Americans in the most favourable light, holding up the Acts of the British Legislature as oppressive and unconstitutional, and exhorting the Canadians to join in the common cause, and send Delegates to Philadelphia; the rebels have likewise been tampering with the Indians on the upper part of the River St. Lawrence.

An application was received by Governor Carleton from General Gage requesting that he would send the 7th Regiment to Boston as hostilities had commenced in the Province of Massachusetts Bay; news was received the next day in Quebec that Benedict Arnold had landed a considerable number of men at St. John's, 8 leagues distant from Quebec, that they had surprised the detachment of the 26th Regiment doing duty there, consisting of a Serjeant and ten men, made them prisoners, seized upon the King's sloop Batteaus, and military stores, and a few hours afterwards departed, carrying off the craft, prisoners, and stores they had taken.

The Governor also received the first information of the rebels being in arms on the Lakes, and of their having under the command of the said Arnold surprised Ticonderoga and Crown Point.

"Arnold told Captain Hazen that he had received a commission of Colonel from the Congress of Massachusetts for that purpose with the command of 500 men, and that volunteers to the amount of 1,500 followed him, but he would not wait for them."

Accounts were also brought to the Governor of the rebels having landed at St. John's a second time in the night between the 18th and 19th May 1775; this party was said to be 300 strong, and 900 more were at the Isle aux Noix; this second party, however, were not nearly so numerous as at first reported and would most probably have been cut off by a detachment of 100 men from the 26th Regiment under the command of Major Preston had they not been advised of the march of the troops.

Governor Carleton says that "upon the receipt of this intelligence, the little force they had in the Province was immediately in motion and ordered to assemble at or near St. John's, the noblesse were called upon to collect their inhabitants in order to defend themselves, and the savages of this part likewise had the same orders, but though the gentlemen testified great zeal, neither their entreaties nor example could prevail upon the people. A few of the gentry, consisting principally of the youth residing in Quebec and its neighbourhood formed a small corps of volunteers under the command of Mr. Samuel Mackay and took post at St. John's; the Indians showed as much backwardness as the Canadian peasantry." The consternation in the town and country he reports to have been very great as they were equally unprepared for attack or defence. He proposes raising a Militia, but there are doubts whether he will be able to effect it.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Minutes of Despatches of the Earl of Dartmouth shewing that Governor Carleton had received directions to raise 3,000 men to serve as Light Infantry, and that orders had been given for providing arms, ammunition, and clothing for that number, and these articles with four light brass three pounders were accordingly sent by a store ship.

In a further letter Governor Carleton was directed to raise 3,000 more men, and arms, &c., were sent for them.

In Lord Dartmouth's letter of the 2nd of August the Governor is informed that His Majesty hopes to have an army of 20,000 men in North America next spring, exclusive of Canadians and Indians, and that he may depend upon a reinforcement of regular troops in Canada to be under his entire command. General Gage's return to England is also mentioned, and the devolution of the command of the troops at Boston on General Howe.

By a letter dated the 8th of September 1775, Mr. Pownall acquainted Governor Carleton that application had been made to the Empress of Russia for 20,000 infantry a very considerable body of which it was hoped might be sent to North America early in the spring, and if the plan of operations for next year be adopted by Major-General Howe, it was probable that the greatest part of the Russians would be sent to Quebec.

New Hampshire.—Despatches of Governor Wentworth relating the capture of Castle William and Mary by the rebels. In his letter of the 26th of April he speaks of the general disposition of the people of New Hampshire to assist and support the people of Massachusetts Bay, and in his letters of the 17th and 28th of May and 3rd of June mentions that "a large body of rioters had come to Portsmouth and continued for one night in examining and pledging many of the King's good subjects to swear against Toryism as they call it, and in the morning had marched off with two or three additional companies from that Province on their way to Cambridge. Two or three days after this, Captain Barkley of His Majesty's Ship Scarborough, having seized and sent to Boston two vessels laden with provisions for Portsmouth, the news was immediately spread throughout the country, and large bodies of armed men were put into motion to destroy the King's sloop or drive her out of the harbour."

Governor Wentworth's despatches also mention an attack on Castle Island by 600 or 700 rebels who stole from the Fortress there 8 pieces of cannon.

Despatches from the Earl of Dartmouth acquainting Governor Wentworth of the King's firm resolution to make the most vigorous efforts both by sea and land to reduce his rebellious subjects to obedience, and stating what preparations were being made for the purpose.

There is also a bundle of Minutes of the advices and communications to the Earl of Dartmouth from other ministers of State containing des-

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

patches from Lord Barrington as to the embarkation and disposition of the regiments sent out to reinforce the troops in America ; from the Lords of the Admiralty with instructions as to the reinforcements of the Navy ; a report by the Attorney General and Solicitor General upon the charters and commissions to the Governors of the Colonies ; letters from the Secretary of the Admiralty sending copies of despatches from Vice-Admiral Graves, etc. ; Letters from the Earl of Sandwich, Mr. Boddington, the Master General of the Ordnance, Mr. Robinson, Sir Jeffrey Amherst, and others on similar subjects.

A bundle of papers endorsed Minutes of Lord Dartmouth's correspondence with the other officers and King's servants ; Minutes headed Plantations, and general circular letters of Lord Dartmouth ; and finally Minutes of letters from and to Lord Dartmouth and the Agents for Indian affairs in America of the year 1775.

N.D.—(1775). Two drafts of an address from the House of Commons to the King on the subject of the late riots in Massachusetts Bay, Rhode Island, and Connecticut :—

“ We can never so far desert the trust that has been reposed in us, as to relinquish any part of the Sovereign authority over all your Majesty's dominions, which by the Constitution is vested in your Majesty and the two Houses of Parliament ; and the conduct of several of the Colonies during the late unfortunate dissensions is alone sufficient to convince us how necessary the power is for the protection of the lives and fortunes of all your Majesty's subjects. We should act with the greatest partiality and injustice if we should allow that any part of your Majesty's dominions ought to be exempted from sharing in the common burdens which are necessary for the safety and welfare of the whole ; and if any of the Colonies had at any time in a proper manner applied to us, and had suggested any mode of contribution which would have answered the ends of Government, according to the principles of the constitution, we should always have been ready to have taken it into our consideration, and to have afforded them every indulgence in our power. We still continue in the same sentiments ; and whenever any of the Colonies shall have made sufficient and permanent provision for the support of the Civil Government and administration of justice and for the defence and protection of such Colony ; and shall also have given satisfactory assurance that they will in time of war contribute such reasonable aid as shall in their state and circumstances be judged to bear a just proportion to what is raised in this country for the general interest and security of the whole ; we shall in that case think the continuance of the laws for raising a revenue in America no longer necessary, and will desist in future from the exercise of the power of taxation in such Colony, except for commercial purposes only, and in such case would consent that the produce of such taxes should be carried to the account of the Province in which they are raised. Whenever therefore any of the Colonies shall make a proposition of this nature, or shall be in a disposition to receive it, we shall be ready to enter into the consideration of proper laws for this purpose. In the meantime, we humbly intreat Your Majesty, that you will take the most effectual measures to enforce due obedience to the laws and authority of the Supreme Legislature ; and we assure your Majesty, that it is our fixed resolution, at the hazard of our lives and properties, to stand by your Majesty against all rebellious attempts in support of these just and constitutional measures.”

N.D.—(? 1775.) Bulky MS. entitled "A proposal for putting the forts on the Coast of Africa under the direction of the Lords of Trade and Plantations."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

N.D. (? 1775.)—Memorial of Colonel William Tryon, Governor of New York, and late Governor of North Carolina, to the King, praying his Majesty to reimburse him the sum of 13,000*l.* which he expended out of his own purse in suppressing insurrections in his Province and in making treaties with the Cherokee Indians, besides the total disbursements of the Salaries and Emoluments of both Governments and to compensate him for the total loss of all his money, plate, furniture, and effects which were entirely destroyed by the burning of the Fort House in New York in 1774.

N.D. (? 1775.)—Memorial (in duplicate) to the Earl of Dartmouth of Major John Campbell, appointed in 1775 Commandant of the Indians and Superintendent and Inspector of Indian affairs in the Province of Quebec in North America, requesting an addition to his salary and an allowance for a deputy.

N.D. (? 1775.)—Petition of Anthony Fiva, formerly of New York, now of Hopewell township, Cheepoty Hill, on the Bay of Fundy, to Governor Legge, stating that he was obliged to quit New York with his wife and family on account of the persecution inflicted on him for his loyalty to the King, and that he is now in Nova Scotia in very indigent circumstances, praying such relief as Mr. Legge may think fit to afford him pursuant to his proclamation of October 17th, 1775.

1775.—Petition to Governor Legge from the loyal inhabitants of the towns of Hopewell, Hillsborough, and the river Memramcok, expressive of their continued loyalty to the King and praying relief in the shape of ammunition and food to help them to defend themselves against the rebels.

1775.—Petition of the House of Assembly of Nova Scotia to the King, praying, that owing to the great scarcity of fuel they may be allowed to take sufficient coal for their needs out of His Majesty's coal mines on the island of Cape Breton.

1775.—Memorial of the King's Council of the Province of Nova Scotia to Governor Legge, on the same subject as the above.

1775.—Address of the House of Assembly to Governor Legge on being called together for the Session, stating what measures it is intended to bring forward.

N.D. (? 1775.)—"Thoughts on the State of the Colonies" by the Rev. Mr. Vardell.

N.D. (? 1775.)—"List of the counties and towns in each county in the Province of Nova Scotia."

1775.—Paper docketed "Declamation, W.L.," apparently a prize essay, with the motto "Dictatoris officium reipublicæ Romanæ diutius conservanda inservit."

1776. Jan. 1st. Mount Denson.—Lieutenant Colonel Denson to Governor Legge. Doctor Michael Head has offered his services as Surgeon to the Volunteer Regiment, and also hopes to have a lieutenant's commission as he will engage to raise 40 men.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1776, Jan. 2. Annapolis Royal.—William Shaw to Governor Legge. Offering himself for a company in Mr. Legge's regiment.

1776, Jan. 2. Annapolis Royal.—Same to Lieutenant-Colonel Denson. On the same subject, offering himself for a captaincy in the regiment. He thinks a good number of men might be raised with proper encouragement in Annapolis.

1776, Jan. 3.—Colonel Denson to Governor Legge. On matters connected with the Governor's regiment.

1776, Jan. 3. Halifax.—Charles Morris to Governor Legge. "Enclosed you have a duplicate of what I wrote you on the first appearance of the rebels at Cumberland.

1776, "The fort was invested and Colonel Gorham summoned to surrender, which being refused they attacked it in the night and were repulsed, upon which they set fire to ten or a dozen dwelling houses around about with an intent the flames should reach the fort, but without effect, and soon after arrived a detachment from this place and immediately on their arrival they marched out, defeated and dispersed them. It appears to have been only a number collected by Mr. Eady, Rogers, and others of Cumberland and those parts joined with some Indians from St. John's River, and some of those inhabitants there together with about 100 Acadians, inhabitants of those districts. I believe it was encouraged by the Congress to make a diversion, and if possible to draw off some of the troops from the continent where their own affairs are in very indifferent circumstances.

"By our latest advices from head-quarters the King's troops had entirely conquered all their places of defence about New York, and the continental army were retreated to some mountains about 40 miles from King's Bridge, and since we hear General Howe was marched for Philadelphia and was arrived at Trentown without any opposition within twenty-four hours march of the city; that a fleet sailed up the Delaware to join them. We are further informed that General Clinton is arrived at Rhode Island and taken possession there, and proposes marching to Boston where all the capital ships are going. Should those attempts be attended with the wished for success, I apprehend the Americans will soon lament their rashness, for it is said a general uneasiness prevails among them, and they find it almost impossible to raise their new levies. They have issued an edict stopping all their privateers to encrease their land forces.

"I hope a few days will bring us the news of their success at Boston, the seventh of last month they landed at Rhode Island. This has effectually secured us at present, and if successful, hope things will soon come to an issue. The generous and benevolent behaviour of the two commanding brothers have procured them the highest veneration and respect from the friends and even from the enemies of Government, and I am fully persuaded such generous behaviour will soon procure that peace which is so much wished for and desired."

1776, Jan. 4. Lunenburg.—John Creighton to Governor Legge. With respect to the rank to be bestowed on him (Mr. Creighton) in Mr. Legge's regiment.

1776, Jan. 8. Windsor.—The Rev. W. Ellis to Governor Legge. Thanking Mr. Legge for having appointed him Chaplain of his regiment.

1776, Jan. 12. Halifax. (Circular).—Governor Legge "to the Commanding Officers of the Militia in the several counties," desiring them to represent to the troops under their command, that under no circumstances will they ever be called upon for service outside the Province, and that a regiment of loyal Provincials for the additional protection of the Province is about to be formed, the officers and men of which will be maintained on British pay so long as their services are required.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1776, Jan. 13. Halifax Yard.—Commodore Arbuthnot to Governor Legge and Brigadier-General Massey. As to orders lately received by him to remove the Roebuck and Somerset from the port of Halifax, regretting that it is impossible for him to disregard the orders.

1776, Jan. 14. Halifax.—Brigadier-General Eyre Massey to Governor Legge. Announcing his intention of making proper defences to the dockyard of Halifax before beginning any new works about the town.

1776, Jan. 17. Halifax. (Copy).—Governor Legge to Captain George Henry Monk. Is about to proceed upon a recruiting expedition in a district far removed from headquarters. Giving instructions as to bounty money, &c.

1776, Jan 20. Secretary's Office, Halifax. (Copy).—Richard Bulkeley to John Anderson, at St. John's River. The Governor of Nova Scotia is anxious to have news of the movements of the rebels in Canada, and of any designs they may have upon this Province. Mr. Anderson is requested to furnish it by trusty messengers.

1776, Jan. 21. Halifax. (Private).—Governor Legge to the Earl of Dartmouth. Complaining of the efforts of certain officers of his Province to paralyze the Government, and especially of their having spread a rumour that the militia was to be assembled at Halifax, and sent to New England, in consequence of which many regiments refused to assemble, and had not the 27th Regiment arrived at Halifax, serious danger to the Province might have arisen.

1776, Jan. 21. Halifax.—Governor Legge to James Burrow. Referring to his enemies in the island, the memorials they have sent to Lord Dartmouth, and their desire to overthrow the King's Government, and join the rebel Colonists.

1776, Jan. 28. Nassau, New Providence.—Montfort Browne to Governor Legge. Has been appointed by his Majesty Captain General of the Bahama Islands, and offers Mr. Legge any civility in his power. Has just heard the news of the death of his brother William Browne, a Captain of the 35th regiment at Boston.

1776, Jan. 31. Boston.—C. Cuyler to Governor Legge. "We have had an account for some days past by deserters who have come in from Roxborough, and it has also been confirmed by letters from Captain Wallace from Rhode Island, that the rebels have had a trimming at Quebec, and by the inclosed copy taken out of a rebel party received this day by a flag of truce, it leaves no doubt of the certainty."

1776, Feb. 4. Boston.—General Sir William Howe to Governor Legge. "I am much concerned for the exposed situation of the inhabitants of your Province upon the coast, but the calamities brought on by this rebellion are so general as to make it impossible to afford protection to every small settlement, and if they have not sufficient virtue and courage among themselves to repel the pyratrical attempts complained of, it never can be done by such detachments as could be spared from the troops." Thinks it probable the rebels may attack Halifax in the spring.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1776, Feb. 6th. Boston.—Same to same. Proposes to remove some 200 families of well-disposed persons from Boston in the spring, and requests Mr. Legge to inform him how many could be accommodated in Halifax and the neighbourhood.

1776, Feb. 7. Boston.—James Robertson, Barrack-master General to Brigadier-General Massey, Halifax. The corps raised by Governor Legge cannot be supplied by the Barrack Office with fuel, bedding, utensils, lodgings or lodging money as the supply of these troops does not fall in his province.

1776, Feb. 7. Windsor, Nova Scotia.—J. Deschamps to Governor Legge. Requesting a commission for his son in the Volunteer Regiment of Militia of which Governor Legge is Colonel.

1776, Feb. 8. Boston.—David Lawler to Governor Legge. Acknowledging gratefully the commission in his corps which the Governor has granted him, but stating that the Commander-in-Chief does not think it proper that he should leave the 10th Regiment.

1776, Feb. 10. Granville County, Annapolis, N.S.—Lieutenant William Shaw to Governor Legge. Stating that he is disappointed at getting only a lieutenancy in Governor Legge's corps instead of the Captaincy which he imagines to be his due.

1776, Feb. 14. Windsor County, Halifax.—Lieutenant-Governor Michael Francklin to Governor Legge. Acknowledging the commission appointing him Colonel of a Regiment of Volunteer Militia.

1776, Feb. 21. Parliament Street.—James Meyrick to Governor Legge. The first part on money matters connected with pay to be advanced on his credit for the Volunteer corps in the Province, subsistence, &c. "Provision had been made by Government for clothing 500 men, but as no provision would be made here for pay of officers or men he could not advise me to furnish any part of your order relating to the officers, and thought it right to inform me you were to come to England, and therefore the command of the 500 men, if raised, would devolve upon some other person.

You will probably receive more information from Major Stanton as he has seen Lord Dartmouth and Lord George Germain. I can only relate what passed between me and Mr. Robinson* and Mr. Pownall without knowing the springs that have moved this alteration A large force will be sent to America to put an end to the rebellion and I hope effectually. Seven regiments are sailed from Cork, nine more go next month from England and Ireland (one of which is Light Dragoons) a detachment of 1,000 men from the Footguards and 17,000 Hessians, Brunswickers, &c."

1776, Feb. 22. Windsor, N.S.—Lieutenant-Governor Francklin to Governor Legge. Reports have come to the writer of disloyal and riotous assemblies in the county of Cumberland, convened by half a dozen evilly disposed persons enemies to the King's Government. Mr. Francklin proposes to go with a few men as an escort to pacify the people, whom he regards as on the whole well affected, and to dispel the false reports spread by the agitators to discredit the King's Government. With another copy of the same letter.

1776, Feb. 23. Halifax.—"Return of the officers of his Majesty's provincial regiment of Loyal Nova Scotia Volunteers," with the dates of their commissions.

* Mr. Robinson, one of the Secretaries to the Treasury Board.

1776, Feb. 26. Windsor.—Lieutenant-Governor Francklin to Governor Legge. He will undertake to raise a regiment of 500 volunteers from among the inhabitants of Windsor, Newport, Falmouth, Horton, Cornwallis, and Cobequid. Recommends names for commissions. With another copy.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

1776, Feb. 27. London. (Copy.)—John Shoolbred to Governor Legge. Relative to a grant of land from the Government in Nova Scotia, where he proposes to establish a salmon fishery. Represents to his Excellency the danger of leaving the fisheries on the Ristigouche (where his own is) unprotected in these distracted times.

1776, Feb. 27. London.—Private. The Earl of Dartmouth to Governor Legge. "As the vessel is about to sail which I understand is to carry out to you the signification of the King's pleasure that you come home to give him an account of the state of the Province under your government, I cannot help troubling you with a few lines to tell you how much pleasure it gives me that you will by that means have an opportunity of answering in person to the malicious complaints that your fidelity and integrity have excited against you."

1776, Feb. 28. Halifax. (Copy.)—Governor Legge to Lieutenant-Governor Francklin. In answer to one of Mr. Francklin's of the 22 February (see above) relative to riotous assemblies in Cumberland and the neighbourhood. With another copy.

1776, Feb. 28. Halifax. (Copy.)—Governor Legge to Lieutenant-Governor Francklin. In answer to his of the 26 February. With regard to Mr. Francklin's proposal to raise a corps of 500 men in the towns of Windsor, Newport, Falmouth, Horton, Cornwallis and Cobequid. Mr. Legge will have great pleasure in conferring the Colonelcy of the regiment on Lieutenant-Governor Francklin.

1776, March 3. Windsor.—Lieutenant-Governor Francklin to Governor Legge. As to the proposed Cumberland Volunteer Corps of Militia, enclosing a copy of the oath he proposes the volunteers should take, so framed that "every harsh expression is studiously avoided that it might more generally take, although I flatter myself it will be found strong enough to answer the end, and at the same time I apprehend it does not contain any matter that has a tendency to prevent our Militia Laws taking place when it shall be absolutely necessary to call forth this corps on actual service." The danger of making the Militia Act a precedent for raising the new corps is, Mr. Francklin thinks, the great alarm it has caused throughout the Province lest the volunteers should be called away to serve in distant parts of the county and even in other Provinces with the regular army. With another copy of the same letter.

1776, March 9.—"State of the township and district of Windsor when assembled by the Lieutenant-Governor's direction." The total number of men above 16 years of age appears to be 150, of whom 117 had enrolled or were expected to enrol, themselves in Mr. Francklin's corps of Volunteer Militia.

Following this is a list of persons recommended by the Lieutenant-Governor for commissions.

1776, March 10. Windsor.—Lieutenant-Governor Francklin to Governor Legge. On the same subject as the above. The inhabitants of Windsor came forward to enrol themselves with great eagerness, and Mr. Francklin has no doubt of being able to raise two companies, of 50 men each in Windsor. He proposes to proceed to the other towns in the course of the next fortnight.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1776, March 16. Halifax.—Minutes, signed by Richard Bulkeley, of a Council held at Halifax relative to the above letters of Lieutenant-Governor Francklin, approving of his form of oath for the enrolment of volunteers, and directing him to proceed to Cumberland to institute an enquiry into the behaviour and conduct of the inhabitants and to report thereon to the Governor. Power is also given him to apprehend "All persons who on due proof shall be found guilty of any rebellious and treasonable transactions."

1776, March 17.—"On board H.M.S. Chatham, Boston Harbour" General Howe to Governor Legge. "I have the honor to inform your Excellency that, from a variety of circumstances which Brigadier General Robertson will particularly explain, I have this day evacuated Boston, and that the Army with all the inhabitants who chose to accompany it are embarked and getting ready to proceed to Halifax as soon as possible. The Brigadier, who will assume the command on his arrival, has my orders to make the best preparations circumstances may admit of for the reception of the troops and I flatter myself that on this emergency your Excellency will grant every aid in your power to promote so desirable an end as well as for the convenience of the inhabitants."

1776, March 19. Windsor.—Lieutenant-Governor Francklin to Governor Legge. Has received from Mr. Bulkeley the minutes of the Council held on March 16th (see above), and hopes to complete the enrolment of men from all the townships he undertook within the week.

1776, March 20. "King-Road near Boston."—Admiral Molyneux Shuldham* to Governor Legge. Regrets to learn from Mr. Legge his fears that Canada is in the possession of the rebels and that an attack is meditated by them on Nova Scotia. "Nothing properly authenticated of the situation of Canada is known here, but the accounts of that country which we have obtained from deserters and similar information have been of a very different nature from that which I have had the honour to receive from you. However, it having been thought expedient to abandon Boston, the troops being embarked, and the transports and other vessels preparing with the utmost expedition to sail for Halifax accompanied by me with some of Her Majesty's ships under my command, it may not be necessary to enter more particularly into the subject at present, deferring the further consideration of the affair until the fleet and army arrive at Halifax, when in conjunction with General Howe and yourself a proper disposition may be made to protect your Government from any annoyance. I judge it necessary to inform you that his Majesty's forces here are extremely short of provisions, that so far as may be consistent with your office you may adopt such measures for the procuring subsistence for them as you shall think proper."

1776, March 20. Halifax.—Brigadier-General Massey to Governor Legge. Sends off a detachment to Cumberland next Sunday. Many irregularities and disorders in Halifax were reported to General Massey yesterday occasioned by some houses near the barracks, one Pedley's house in particular.

1776, March 25. Dover Street.—Sir Charles Wintringham to Captain Monk. "The civil discord between the parent country and its enraged Colonies now boils over with inexpressible violence, whilst the administration late, too late, convinced of this truth, that "neglecta solent incendia sumere vires," are now preparing to send out a most

* Afterwards created Lord Shuldham.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

formidable force. In the meantime their adversaries both within and without doors, triumph in the ample occasion thus afforded them to load them with this humiliating but undeniable sarcasm "Que les sots font à la fin, ce que les sages font au commencement." The Ministry environed with incendiaries, and accounting all helps as scarce sufficient to quench the conflagration, to Hesse, to Brunswick, to Hanover they run, supplicating, Oh cross the Atlantic every mother's son or that milch cow Britannia is undone The Chancellor Lord Bathurst is declared Lord High Steward, so that maugre all the chicanery of the lawyers, the Dutchess of Kingston will be brought to a trial for bigamy. The invidious spleen of the peeresses, not the justice of the peers are her grace's untameable persecutors."

1776, March 26. Merlin, Annapolis Basin.—Captain W. C. Burnaby to Governor Legge. Applying for a grant of land in Nova Scotia in the terms of the King's proclamation of 7th Oct. 1763, he having served more than two years in the late war; and enclosing a petition to the same effect.

1776, March 28.—Agreement between Robert Fletcher of Halifax, Merchant, and Governor Legge for the hire of the schooner Betsy now lying in Halifax harbour for the purpose of conveying men and stores to such places in the province of Nova Scotia as the master of the schooner shall be directed.

1776, March 31. Halifax.—Brigadier-General Robertson to Governor Legge. Requesting him to find cover for 3,000 men and 200 officers who, under General Howe, may be expected at Halifax in a few days from Boston. The provisions of these troops are nearly exhausted, and General Robertson requests Mr. Legge to use every effort to furnish supplies; 5,000 head of cattle will be necessary for this service "A number of the most respectable and loyal inhabitants of the Province of Massachusetts have been drove from their dwellings by the rebels, and are come to seek shelter under your protection. I have it in command from the General to acquaint you that he thinks the honour and interest of Government is concerned, and therefore hopes you will give all the assistance and afford all the provision that the occasion, and your own disposition may point out."

1776, April 11. Halifax.—Resignation of the commission of Lieutenant and Adjutant in the Loyal Nova Scotia Volunteers by Henry Hamilton, and letter from him of the same date, to Captain Barry, informing him of the fact.

1776, April 16. Halifax.—Governor Legge to the Earl of Dartmouth. Informing his Lordship of the death of Mr. Belcher, Chief Justice of Nova Scotia.

1776, April 24. Windsor.—William Ellis to Governor Legge. Has heard that His Majesty has deprived Mr. Legge of his office. The letter expresses Mr. Ellis's sorrow on hearing the news.

1776, April 26. Windsor.—Same to same. On the same subject. He has found that his information was wrong, and wishes Mr. Legge a good voyage home and a speedy return to the Province.

1776, April 25. Halifax.—Declaration by Captain Stanton of the proceedings upon his recommendation of Lieutenant Constable for a company in the Loyal Regiment of Nova Scotia Volunteers.

1776, May 8. Halifax.—Lieutenant J. Solomon to Governor Legge. Has just returned from a recruiting expedition to Yarmouth, Argyle, St. Mary's Bay, Annapolis, Horton, and Windsor, in which he has had

EARL OF
- DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

no success. The people in that part of the Province are in a wretched condition without many of the necessities of life, and numbers of them leave daily to join the rebel army.

1776, May 12.—“Return of officers in his Majesty’s Provincial Regiment of Loyal Nova Scotia Volunteers.”

1776, May 13. Quebec.—Captain James Barten to Governor Legge. “I hope your Excellency will excuse me in communicating to you the great applause your Excellency has obtained from His Excellency General Carleton and all other officers in the garrison by engaging such good men for the service as your Excellency has sent to this Province; they have the applause to be the best men in the garison, not even for work only, but in defending the garison; when there was an alarm they was distinguish[ed] to be the first to their alarm post. The 31st of December, when those rebels stormed the garison your Excellency’s company which was called behaved like good soldiers during the engagement. with the loss of their chief commander Montgomery; they have opened batterys on all quarters of the town, but to no effect.”

1776, May 15.—Extracts from a Boston and New Hampshire newspaper [name torn off] of Acts of Congress of this date, one of them being “An Act repealing an Act intitl’d ‘An Act for the more effectual securing to his Majesty the allegiance of his subjects in his Colony and Dominion of Rhode Island and Providence Plantation,’ and altering the form of commissions, of all writs and processes to the Courts, and of the oaths prescribed by law;” also a declaration that “Whereas it appears absolutely irreconcilable to reason and good conscience for the people of these Colonies now to take the oaths and affirmations necessary for the support of any government under the Crown of Great Britain; and it is necessary that the exercise of every kind of authority under the said Crown should be totally suppressed, and all the powers of government exerted under the authority of the people of the Colonies for the preservation of internal peace, virtue, and good order, as well as for the defence of our lives, liberties, and properties against the hostile invasions and cruel depredations of our enemies; therefore Resolved, that it be recommended to the respective Assemblies and Conventions of the United Colonies, where no government sufficient to the exigencies of their affairs has been hitherto established, to adopt such government as shall in the opinion of the representatives of the people best conduce to the happiness and safety of their constituents in particular, and America in general. By Order of the Congress, JOHN HANCOCK, President.”

1776, May 21. Halifax.—Charles Morris, Senior, to Governor Legge. Hopes his letter will find his Excellency safe arrived in England. “The Commodore (Arbuthnot) as far as I am acquainted with him appears to be a person of amiable qualifications for the exercise of that important trust reposed in him in this critical conjuncture of affairs, and I believe will make use of every power to unite and preserve the peace of the Colony.”

1776, May 22. Halifax.—Charles Morris, junior, to Governor Legge. “A day or two after your departure the Lieutenant-Governor sent for me and we had some conversation in regard to your regiment; he said he should be glad to do anything in his power to promote the success of it, but expressed some doubts in regard to drawing bills for the subsistence of the officers, and said that he would take an opportunity of laying the matter before General Howe, and whatever he advised he should readily comply with. He has since talked with the General on this subject, and this day informed me that General Howe was of opinion the officers ought to be contented with what they had already received until they shall have raised at least half the men the regiment is to consist of. This may be reasonable, but when it is considered that the officers of this regiment in general have quitted other employments for this, and that they have now no other dependence for their living, it cannot be supposed they can continue in this service in these expensive and distressing times unless subsistence is allowed them, as customary in all other recruiting regiments in Her Majesty's service Notwithstanding every struggle against you I have not a doubt but you will be able to settle all things to your wishes, and that the ministry will be convinced of your zeal for the true interest of this Colony and his Majesty's service, and that every step you have taken since you first had the command here was with a view of effecting those good purposes." With another copy of the same letter.

1776, May 23. Halifax.—Captain R. Gibbons to Governor Legge. As to the affairs of the Province since Governor Legge's departure. "The troops begin on Monday next to embark, Gorham's, M'Lean's, the 14th and Marines are to remain in this Province, the privates of the 65th are to be drafted into the other corps. Gorham is to command at Cumberland; I know not whether any other corps are to stay."

1776, May 23. Halifax.—Captain Gibbons to Lieutenant-Colonel Denson. Respecting a memorial of the officers of the Loyal Nova Scotia Volunteers to General Howe. As the memorial contains a charge against Governor Legge of the misapplication of money drawn on the account of the Regiment, Captain Gibbons cannot consent to sign it.

1776, May 24. Halifax.—Lieutenant-Colonel Denson to whom is not stated, possibly to Governor Legge. Recruits for the Volunteer Regiment of Nova Scotia, the subsistence of the officers, &c. The Lieutenant-Governor asserts that Mr. Legge has overdrawn the account of the Regiments, and makes other charges in which Lieutenant-Colonel Denson sees a resolution to do all the injury possible to the Volunteers.

1776, June 1. Halifax.—Printed "Extract of a letter from a gentleman in Quebec to his friend in this town dated May 13th brought here by H.M.S. Niger, Captain Talbot, which arrived yesterday," the print is directed to Governor Legge and begins, "Dear Nat.;" it is not signed. "We are still in possession of Quebec, after a siege of near six months during which time we have suffered much fatigue, as one third of the garrison was always on guard, and those off guard frequently employed in working parties, at night every man off duty obliged to sleep at extra pickets upon a bearskin with his arms by the side of him, every English gentleman in the city has done the duty of a common soldier in the British Militia, sharing fatigue and danger with the lowest person in the garrison.

On the 14th of November General Arnold made his appearance with about 600 men before the city, and on the 25th General Montgomery arrived with his troops from Montreal; grown giddy with his success above he expected to carry the city without the formality of a siege and sends a flag to demand it, but General Carleton thought proper to refuse admittance to the flag, which occasioned a most extraordinary letter being shot into town upon an arrow, which letter you have enclosed (a copy of this letter is given below); our General has persevered in this conduct the whole winter, acquainting them whenever they sent a flag that unless they meant to implore the King's mercy they must return immediately. From the 9th December to the 31st they kept pelting us with shot and shells, though with little success, on which morning about 5 o'clock, Mr.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Montgomery thought proper to storm the lower town, making two feints upon the upper town, at Cape Diamond and St. John's Gate. The lower town is situated under the hill of the upper town and upon the side of the river St. Lawrence, about three quarters of a mile in length, at each end a passage under the hill of the upper town, which were the only ways the rebels could come at it, the front being on the side of the river; it was agreed that Mr. Montgomery with 750 men should attack the south end of the town, by way of the Pot-ash, and Arnold the north end with between six or seven hundred more; they were to meet at the market place about the centre of the lower town, and from thence were to assault the upper town. Arnold's attack was a short time before Mr. Montgomery's; he was wounded in his approach and carried off, but his party entered the barrier which was defended by two pieces of cannon, without any further opposition than the firing of one gun; the captain who commanded the post and his whole guard were taken prisoners. A large picket in the lower town and parties sent from the upper checked their progress, until a party ordered out by the General at Palace Gate came upon the back of them, when finding themselves between two fires and their retreat cut off [they] thought proper to surrender themselves prisoners, amounting to 500 privates and 32 officers the remainder of the party (except about half a dozen that went off with Arnold) were all killed; our loss was a brave Lieutenant Anderson, of the Navy, and five other brave fellows killed and died of their wounds.

The Pot-ash (at which I happened to be posted) was attacked in a short time after the other; the place was fortified by a barrier across the road, and 7 small pieces of cannon, 3-pounders, some placed at the barrier, the rest in the Pot-ash house, which was a little advanced of the barrier our guard consisted of a French Captain of militia, and about 30 men, a ship's Captain, by the name of Barnsfare, and 9 seamen for serving the cannon, a corporal and eight of the British Militia. My being urged to accept a commission in the militia, which I refused, I thought would countenance me in usurping the authority of an officer, which I did by encouraging the men before the rebels came on and posting myself at the corner of the Pot-ash, which commanded the best view; and when the enemy were advanced within 25 yards of the Pot-ash I gave the order for firing, which was followed by the French; we kept up our fire about ten minutes, which obliged the rebels to retreat with the loss of their General, his Aid de Camp, Captain McPherson, Captain Cheesman, and two or three others; we suppose many fell over the bank into the river as they were shot and doubtless they had many wounded.

The rebels were no sooner retreated than we received an account of Arnold's having forced the post at the Saut de Matilot with the addition of their having got possession of the lower town, which so frightened the French part of our guard that they threw down their arms and ran out of the barrier to make their peace with them as well as they could; such dastardly scoundrels are the Canadians in general.

This check kept them quiet for some time, but after a reinforcement arrived they began to be troublesome again, frequently alarming us and obliging us to keep a constant good look out; the last alarm was the 3rd instant, about nine o'clock in the evening; when they sent a fire ship up from Orleans, with a design of setting fire to the shipping and the lower town, they lost their chance of succeeding by quitting her too soon, had their fire ship been successful they were to have made an assault for which we were well prepared. On the sixth instant in the morning early we were agreeably surprized with the sight of 3 men-of-war, a

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

50-gun ship, a frigate, and a sloop, with about 170 of the 29th Regiment, the troops were landed before noon, and at twelve o'clock they, with all the garrison off duty, the whole amounting to 1,000 men, marched out of the town upon the plain, with two field pieces and two grashoppers; notwithstanding the rebels force was near 4,000 they ran off with the utmost precipitation, leaving all their cannon and stores behind; their fright was so great that officers did not wait for men or men for officers but every one shifted for himself, many of them throwing away their arms that they might run the faster. Thus ended our troublesome, lengthy siege. With 200 Emigrants, 60 Fusiliers, 500 Seamen, 300 British Militia, and about 700 French Militia, we have kept the town of Quebec against these scoundrels near 6 months:—I hope after this you will not despair of Great Britain's success. I am much mistaken if the check they have received in this Province don't damp their ardor; rely upon it, they have lost a great number of men by sickness besides what have died of their wounds and been killed. The arrival of the reinforcements has made a total change in the conduct of the Canadians, they are constantly coming into town, bringing their priests with them to apologize for their conduct and offering their service to government. Our present relief is the 29th and 47th regiments but are in expectation of 12 or 15,000 troops the latter end of this month which will penetrate the Colonies by the way of the lakes, and rely upon it there will be no want of Canadians or Indians to join them. I should not be surprised if this summer should make them intirely sick of their dispute with Great Britain; depend upon it, brother Nat, whenever the King's troops can come at them fairly, they will give them a most horrid beating."

From the Quebec Gazette, March 21st [published by authority]. "A letter from Mr. Montgomery, sent into town by an old woman the 7th of December a copy whereof was shot in upon an arrow some days after.

Sir,

Holland House, December 6th.

Notwithstanding the personal illtreatment I have received at your hand, and notwithstanding your cruelty to the unhappy prisoners you have taken, the feelings of humanity induce me to have recourse to this expedient to save you from the destruction which hangs over you. Give me leave, Sir, to assure you I am well acquainted with your situation:—A great extent of works in their nature incapable of defence, manned with a motley crew of sailors, the greatest part our friends, of citizens who wish to see us within their walls, and a few of the worst troops who ever stiled themselves soldiers; the impossibility of relief and the certain prospect of wanting every necessary of life, should your opponents confine their operations to a simple blockade, point out the absurdity of resistance—such is your situation:—I am at the head of troops, accustomed to success, confident of the righteousness of the cause they are engaged in, inured to danger and fatigue, and so highly incensed at your inhumanity, illiberal abuse, and the ungenerous means employed to prejudice them in the minds of the Canadians, that it is with difficulty I restrain them till my batteries are ready from insulting your works; which would afford them the fair opportunity of an ample vengeance and just retaliation.

Firing upon a flag of truce hitherto unprecedented even among savages prevents my taking the ordinary mode of communicating my sentiments. However, I will at any rate acquit my conscience; should you persist in an unwarrantable defence, the consequences be on your own head.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Beware of destroying stores of any kind, public or private, as you have done at Montreal and in the river, if you do, by Heavens, there will be no mercy shown.

(Signed)

RICHARD MONTGOMERY,
Brigadier-General Continental
Army.

Direction upon the cover,
His Excellency Major-General Carleton,
Quebec."

1776, June 4. Halifax.—Copy letter (by Captain Gibbons) from General Sir W. Howe to Lieutenant-Governor Arbutnot. The service to be expected from the Nova Scotia Provincial Regiment is so inconsiderable that General Howe has resolved to reduce the officers in proportion to the number of men raised. A detachment of the corps has been ordered to dig coals at Louisbourg to form an early magazine.

1776, June 8. Halifax.—Captain Gibbons to Governor Legge as to the above letter of General Howe. Everything now done in the Province seems to be for the purpose of throwing odium upon the Governor and his policy.

1776, June 14. Halifax.—Captain Gibbons to Governor Legge. A long letter as to the efforts of his enemies to damage the Governor in the eyes of the Ministry and King at home, by discrediting and discouraging the Volunteer regiment he formed. The regiment is probably to be broken up, and only two captains, two lieutenants, and two ensigns are in future to receive any subsistence, the others are told they must go into the Recruiting Service without receiving any pay until they have completed their companies. Captain Gibbons forwards a petition to the King from the officers of the corps and he and the petitioners entreat Mr. Legge's services to assist them in their application, and that he will forward the petition when he has read it to Lord George Germain to lay it before the King. The remainder of the letter is personal.

1776, June 14. Halifax.—Two copies of a letter from the officers of the Loyal Nova Scotia Volunteers to Governor Legge, enclosing a petition to the King, and begging Mr. Legge's interest in the matter, also of the petition to the King (the original copy being much injured), and a copy letter accompanying the petition to Lord George Germain. The petition sets out the grievances of the officers at some length.

N.D.—Copy petition from the officers to General Howe on the same subject.

1776, June 18. Halifax.—Captain Gibbons to Governor Legge. Enclosing the day's orders relating to the Volunteer regiment and its reduction in point of officers. The meeting of the House of Assembly. "James Brenton, I am informed, moved in the House that an address of thanks should be immediately sent to the King for calling your Excellency to England, and declared it was the general voice of the Province. It was opposed by your friends, and alleged that the House could not undertake to say this was the sentiment of all the people, as there were so few members present. However, it was apprehended it would be carried and sent by the first opportunity home. I most sincerely wish your Excellency may effect a total change of men and measures in this Province without which no man of principle would wish to remain in it."

1776, June 26. Halifax.—William Shaw to Governor Legge. As to the proceedings of the House of Assembly. "The address to the King, Lords, and Commons which appears on the journals as the unanimous sense of the House, was carried through in a great hurry, when there was but one country member present. That and the letter from the Speaker which accompanies it, must convince every thinking man of the character of the composers."

1776, July 2. Halifax.—Declaration of William Ross, Lieutenant in the Loyal Nova Scotia Volunteer Regiment.

1776, July 7. Halifax.—Captain Gibbons to Governor Legge. Enclosing duplicates of the petitions of the officers of the Volunteer Regiment to the King, and of their letter to Lord George Germain. These enclosures are not now with the letter.

1776, July 7. Halifax.—Lieutenant-Colonel H. D. Denson to Governor Legge. "I think the House of Assembly has by far outdone anything they ever did before; they have by a vote struck off Binney's debt, and by another next day, the same was done for John Newton, and to make him some amends they have taken six per cent. off the country Collectors and given it to those of Halifax; they have given the treasurer 200*l.* per annum, and added 50*l.* more to Mr. Deschamps' salary for going to Horton and Annapolis, so that instead of lowering the public debt (as they promised the Lieutenant-Governor) they have done everything in their power to increase it; and he, good man, found not the least fault with them for breach of promise, or any other act of theirs, but on the contrary thanked them for their unanimity and despatch.

When he put an end to the Session they proceeded to feasting and joy. Old Speaker said in the joy of his heart, 'We have got a Governor of our own, and we will now do as we used to,' that is, fleece the poor Province If you do not come out again or some other Governor who has honesty and spirit sufficient to stop this vile faction (who insist upon living at the expence of this unhappy Province as they have hitherto done), we shall be ruined, and our estates burthened with a debt created by them, and annually augmented to support them in luxury and insolence."

1776, July 8. Halifax.—Captain Gibbons to Governor Legge. As to the affairs of the Volunteers and the proceedings of the House of Assembly under Lieutenant Governor Arbuthnot. The statements made are similar to those in Colonel Denson's letter.

1776, July 8. Halifax.—Judge Morris to Governor Legge. As to the state of the Province and proceedings of the House of Assembly.

The writer continues, "The army has sailed from hence about four weeks, but we have not heard where destined, part of the Hessians and the Guards arrived last week and sailed on Saturday for the general rendezvous, they parted with the remainder on the banks of Newfoundland. Canada is in a manner evacuated by the rebels, Montreal is in possession of the English troops and the army in pursuit of their main body consisting of about 6,000 men, and who were retreating to Fort St. John's on the river Sorrell as we were informed by the last advices from Canada. The Americans seemed determined in their opposition, but a report has prevailed here that upon the Congress attempting to declare the Provinces independent, great numbers in Philadelphia opposed them, and that many rose in arms. I hope this report has some foundation in truth, it's possible this may be the turning crisis, for it cannot be supposed that independency can be the aim of the Americans in general."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSB.

1776, July 9.—Charles Morris junior to Governor Legge. The success of the opposition in the Province during the absence of Mr. Legge.

"I am much concerned to find that the leaders of the opposition by their successes are become irresistible, and nothing can be deemed secure where such people and principles predominate, our only dependance is on your friendship, and hope you will have it in your power to prevent our total overthrow, which they seem to exert every nerve to effect both here and at home, and for no other reason but because we have endeavoured to support the King's governor in this Colony. By the last accounts from Quebec the rebels are retreating precipitately out of Canada, but in all the other Colonies they seem determined to hold it out to the last, except a number of the Church of England in Philadelphia, who have declared against an independency, and we hear the Quakers, and some others, are joining them."

General Howe sailed from this port the 10th of June, but for what part of the continent [is] unknown to us. We are very impatient to hear from him; Lord Howe by this time must have joined him, as he passed this harbour about 14 days ago: it is said Lord Howe brought proposals for an accommodation; hope we shall have good accounts from them soon, otherwise I fear this summer will not finish the business."

1776, July 12. Halifax.—Captain Gibbons to Governor Legge. "I have just now procured the journal of the last session of Assembly, and have the honour to inclose it herewith," [it is not now with the letter], "their proceedings are by far more shameful than I had heard or could have conceived. I need make no notes upon them; they speak sufficiently plain for themselves. I was yesterday told that Shaw had raised his Annapolis company upon paper and had wrote to General Massey."

1776, July 13. Halifax.—Same to same. "I, yesterday, saw a paper printed by Mills and Hicks, and published the day before containing what were called extracts from some of the continental papers, some of which are most audacious and traitorous proceedings carrying on by the rebels. I have used every means in my power to procure one to transmit to your Excellency, but my endeavours are hitherto fruitless, although I have offered to give a dollar apiece. I am credibly informed those printers were yesterday called before the Lieutenant-Governor and council as was also a Mr. Hutchinson, a judge and brother to the Governor by whose advice it is said the printers made the publication. He excused himself by saying the printers had made a mistake in printing those extracts without some notes or introduction which he intended making to them. The further publication is stopped by order of the Lieutenant-Governor and Council. These papers contain a resolution of the General Congress for the total and perpetual independence of the Colonies and separation from Great Britain, and an instrument called an act of the Colony of Rhode Island absolving the people from their allegiance to the King and for ever renouncing him and his authority (in terms too highly criminal for me even to repeat), and all further union and connection with Great Britain and its inhabitants, so that the mask is now wholly thrown off, and total extirpation or independence the only alternatives offered by the Colonists."

1776, July 14. Halifax.—Same to same. Sends portions of the paper alluded to in the foregoing letter [these are not now with the letter]. "Mr. Hutchinson, Mr. Councillor Morris tells me, could not deny before the Council his having given his approbation of the publication, and says he is a candidate for the Chief Justice's seat in this Province. I will make no remarks upon this gentleman's conduct, but such as I might will instantly occur to your Excellency."

1776, July 14. Halifax.—Lieutenant Colonel Denson to Governor Legge. Enclosing one of the papers [not now with the letter] referred to by Captain Gibbons. "I have lately been well assured of a firm and most solemn association entered into by the members of the Cabal to stand their ground against any Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, or any of their adherents that may at any time hereafter attempt to prevent them from those benefits, &c., that they have enjoyed so long, and that they look upon as their due, &c., &c."

1776, July 26.—Two draft letters of this date, one from John Robinson to General Howe, and the other from John Robinson to General Massey, as follows. "Sir, Having laid before my Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury a memorial of Francis Legge, Esq., Governor of Nova Scotia, relative to a body of men raised by him, for the defence and protection of that Province in pursuance of directions received by him from the Earl of Suffolk, I am commanded by their Lordships to signify to you their desire that your Excellency will subeist the said corps in the same manner as Colonel Maclean's and Colonel Gorham's corps are subsisted. I am, &c."

"Sir, I am commanded by the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury to transmit to you for your information the inclosed duplicate of a letter I have this day sent to his Excellency, General Howe, respecting the subsistence of the body of men raised in Nova Scotia by Governor Legge for the defence and protection of that Province. I am, &c."

A duplicate of the letter to General Howe follows.

1776, Aug. 13. Kew Lane.—Lord George Germain to Governor Legge. Returning papers with thanks.

1776, Aug. 16. Sandwell.—The Earl of Dartmouth to Governor Legge. On the subject of his memorial to the King. Is doubtful whether it would be proper for Mr. Legge to appear before the Council or not. "If you prove what you propose that the address was not the unanimous voice of the Assembly, it cannot be denied that it was the voice of a majority, and therefore unless it can clearly be shewn that the whole was the act of an interested faction, which perhaps it would be very difficult to show, though the fact be mistaken, the advice that is grounded upon it by the Lords of Trade will not be disapproved by the Council, and you will remain without redress as to that part of the report. On the other hand, it is so cruel and unjust, to hold you out as the object of general dislike by the people of your government, that I cannot wonder at the eager desire you shew to vindicate yourself from that representation, and therefore if you think that a hearing before the Council will tend in any degree to vindicate your character, though no alteration should be made in the advice given by the Lords of Trade, I cannot dissuade you from delivering in your memorial, for which purpose you have nothing to do, but to carry it to one of the clerks of the Council to be laid before the Lord President, which will be done of course. . . . I am very glad to hear that you was so graciously received at St. James's."

1776, Aug. 18. Halifax.—Two letters of this date from Lieutenant-Colonel Denson to Governor Legge. As to the affairs of the Governor's Volunteer Regiment. The bill for 200*l.* has been cashed, and the money will be applied to recruiting for the regiment. The officers are to set off this week to recruit. "There is great murmuring here already; no dispatch of business in either department, much passion, and a full proof of want of capacity; nay, a certain homo, said a few days ago, if he had known

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

the government was so troublesome he would not have accepted of it. The deserters from your Regiment are all at Machias, and have an armed vessel ready to carry me off when I return to the county. Captain Gibbons will show you a letter on that head wrote."

1776, Aug. 21. Halifax.—Same to same. Captain Gibbons expects to sail to-morrow; "he will let you know the conduct of the two Kings of Brentford, as nothing can equal the thunders of the one, but those of the other. Captain Gibbons will show you a letter from Isaac Deschamps, Esq^r, to me of a very threatening nature. Thus are we used for our loyalty to our most Gracious Sovereign; they are spirited up by the Cabal of this town to any excess of villainy in their power. I hope to hear from you soon, and that you are coming out again; you have more friends here now than at your departure."

N.D. [1776, August].—Draft Memorial of Governor Legge to the King in Council as to the Report made by the Lords Commissioners of Trade and Plantations after an inquiry held by them upon Mr. Legge's conduct in office. Reference is made in that report to an address of the Assembly of Nova Scotia, which is said to be the unanimous voice of the Province by the Representatives in general assembly to return the King thanks for recalling him; but by advices the Memorialist has received, he believes the assertion will be found to be unwarranted in point of fact, and he humbly prays that the Report may not be confirmed by the King until he has been heard before his Majesty in Council.

N.D. [1776, August].—Governor Legge to Lord George Germain. Long draft letter on the Report of the Lords of Trade and Plantations in relation to the charges brought against him as Governor of Nova Scotia. Giving a very clear idea of the nature of these charges and of Mr. Legge's refutations of them. "An undeserved severity through the whole of that composition. I relied upon the integrity of my character, and besides I had been brought to think 'that the report was intended to do me service, and entirely to exculpate and satisfy me.' To that effect as I have been told your Lordship has exprest yourself, and I think you did me the honour of hinting the same in a conversation which I had with your Lordship. What then must have been my surprize when I perused a state of the case which seems to be the deepest wound to a man of honour and sensibility. Your Lordship will allow me to do all that becomes a person in my situation to throw disgrace from my name. My rank in the army has been earned by a long train of service in various parts of the world, and if I assume to myself a character that never knew a stain till lately I hope I may do it without arrogating too much. Labouring as I now do under imputations unjustly thrown upon me at first, and strengthened, as I apprehend with a degree of harshness by the Report, I am sure your Lordship will agree with me that to remain silent would be a mark of insensibility, nay a confession of the offences laid to my charge." Mr. Legge hopes to vindicate his reputation before the Privy Council. He concludes the report was prepared for signature by an official of the Board, and that the "Art" running through it escaped Lord George, as the tenderness towards him shewn by Lord George does not appear to have affected the writer of the Report. The writer then proceeds to answer the charges in the Report. The first is, "That the Governor of Nova Scotia neglected and insulted the old servants of Government and so endangered the affections of his Majesty's subjects that unless he had been speedily removed, it was to be apprehended that the Province would have been lost." Mr. Legge then points out the trifling nature of the alleged insults committed by him against the late Chief Justice of Nova Scotia, Mr. Belcher, the Secretary of the Province, Mr. Bulkeley, and the Attorney General, Mr. Nesbit, and points out that there is no direct evidence of these statements, but that it is all general allegation. Mr. Legge continues, "In the case of neglect the report says, 'it may be as difficult to fix the charge as to refute it.' This, my Lord, I call giving substance to shadows and lending colours to this extraordinary accusation which closes with a strong assertion that 'the Province was in danger of being lost.' In answer to this, I presume to say that in the most dangerous crisis, when the whole continent of America was in commotion, I preserved the Province of Nova Scotia. The times demanded vigour. The measures which I pursued will shew the zeal I felt for his Majesty's Government. I refer on this head to my public and private letters to [the] Ministry, to the Commander-in-Chief, and to the Admirals upon the American Station. My whole conduct is there laid open, and the event is a demonstration that my endeavours were crowned with success. Of the difficulties that surrounded me in this arduous business, no one on this side of the Atlantic can form an idea. Pressed every moment by sudden emergencies, I stood in need of the ablest and best advice. If I met in the counsels of any man in office fluctuation, delay, and uncertainty, I knew the danger of losing time, and I went on with ardour. If the writer of the report thinks proper let it be called impatience, but it was an honest impatience. My Lord, it was activity in his Majesty's service. I knew the Province, I was aware of the factions that prevailed and were increasing, and the subdivisions of those factions. The spirit of revolt that went abroad in America began to appear in the Province entrusted to my care. I used all possible precautions, and those precautions I am bold to aver prevented the mischief."

The second charge is "that the Governor disregarded and ill-treated the members of his Majesty's Council, and conducted himself at the Board in so unbecoming a manner as to deny that freedom of debate which alone could give value to their advice." The same instances as were given in support of the charge of insulting in Charge 1 are given in support of Charge 2, but the Report allows "that excepting some trifling irregularities to the Chief Justice, Mr. Belcher, mentioned in the affidavit of Joseph Goreham, Esq., no particular instances are adduced in support of this complaint." Charge 3 is "That the Governor interfered in the Courts of Justice by appearing at trials instituted by his order and overawing and influencing the jury." Mr. Legge admits that he was present at a trial, but asserts that it was with the privity of the Chief Justice trying the cause, and that he went as an ordinary spectator in a private capacity and to watch the character and dispositions of the other spectators at a time of public danger. Charge 4, that "the Governor abused and discouraged loyal refugees from the rebellious Colonies" is admitted by the report to have no foundation. Mr. Legge then says, "The following paragraph I take the liberty to say is very extraordinary. 'The Governor through the course of his administration has been wanting in that gracious and conciliating deportment which the delicacy of the times and the tempers of men under agitation and alarm more particularly demanded, for want of which his upright intentions became in a great measure fruitless and abortive, and so general a ferment and dissatisfaction spread through the Province that it became necessary to call him home to answer the complaints exhibited against him.' Permit me, my Lord, to ask in what instance have my upright intentions been fruitless and abortive? Is there in the whole of the evidence a single fact upon which this inference bottoms itself? Is it warranted by anything within the knowledge of former Ministers in your Lordship's department? Have any advices reached the Secretary's office since your Lordship undertook the reins of administration? If there are any such I presume to call for the production of them. To whom has my conduct been ungracious? I approved of the suits against public defaulters. I could not take these men to my bosom, but in my behaviour to them I was always guarded. In turbulent times I loved no man who did not love his King and country. The petitions, signed by 24 inhabitants out of 30,000, came from individuals connected by views of interest, by ties of affinity and similitude of manners. The genius of the men is seen in their evidence; they supported one another in proceedings that could not bear the public eye. One petition is signed by 5 persons; three of them were defaulters. Another petition is signed by nineteen in number; thirteen of them were in the same predicament, and the remaining six had been some of them justly discharged from the magistracy, and the rest had not obtained what they wanted Suits at law may be ungracious, and regularity in the revenues is not favourable to men of certain principles. I did my duty, my Lord, and I was not mean enough to connive at public rapine. My upright intentions were not rendered fruitless. Your Lordship will pardon me for thus averring it. If it be true that a general ferment and dissatisfaction spread through the Province where is the evidence of it? If my measures failed where are the instances? A Governor may be recalled for reasons of state, but it is hard that for the sake of the measure guilt should be thrown upon him. It is hard my Lord that his best intentions should be declared abortive, when in consequence of his conduct the Province was preserved in its duty and obedience to his Majesty's Government.'” Mr. Legge concludes by asking Lord George's permission to present a petition to the King to be heard in reply to the Report, before the Privy Council.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1776, Sept. 2. Windsor, in Nova Scotia.—The Rev. William Ellis to Governor Legge. Relating his distressed condition and the persecution he suffers from the party now in power in the Province owing to his being a friend of the Governor's. The governing party have deprived him of the chaplaincy of the Volunteer Regiment which Mr. Legge raised.

1776, Sept. 5. Halifax.—Lieutenant-Colonel Denson to Governor Legge. Several of the officers of the Volunteers have started on the recruiting expedition. The affairs of the Province do not improve. “The two Brentford K—gs go on from one blunder to another without end; the town is much diverted by them; particularly by the peculiar stile of General Orders. They are originals.”

1776, Oct. 1. Chamblé.—Papers headed “Order of Battle” with a key and the following note, “The rebels are about 9 or 10,000 by the best accounts, and the King's troops about 8 to 9,000; the rebels have 10 or 12 armed vessels from 8 to 16 guns each upon the Lakes. General Carleton was to be on the Lakes 4th October.” The Plan shows only the order of the British Army.

1776, Nov. 18. Halifax. Judge Morris to Governor Legge.—On the aspect of affairs in the Province. Is informed that the Governor has had a hearing before the Lords of Trade which has terminated greatly in his favour.

“Our sea coasts have been infested greatly with the rebel privateers and they have destroyed all the small craft from Cape Sables to L'Have [and] terrified all the settlers on the coast that they know not which way to turn themselves for their preservation. They have also destroyed our fishery at Canso and Isle Madam.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

"And yesterday we had advice that three or four hundred under the command of Eady have invested Fort Cumberland, and it is reported that 3,000 Americans are soon to follow them; with this party are joined the Acadians and Indians, the Americans give 100 dollars to every Indian, provision, pay, and clothing. We are greatly alarmed, and more so as we have not had any advice from Head Quarters this six weeks. What will be our fate is difficult to conjecture, but [we] hope that by some means or other this important Colony will be preserved to His Majesty, though I must confess that at present affairs here have but a gloomy prospect.

"When I went the circuits, from whence I returned the last of September, I found the people in general well disposed, especially in the county of Cumberland, the Grand Jury openly in court declaring their resolution of maintaining the duty and allegiance to the Crown, their submission to the Authority of Parliament and their determination to the utmost of their lives and fortunes to support these principles, and I found the common people there of the same sentiments; they attended the court with uncommon zeal and due subordination, and in that temper of mind we left them, 'tis now said they are all in arms.

"They had a general meeting just before your departure to form an address and thank your Excellency for your just administration and the attention you had paid to their memorial. This has been deemed an unlawful assembly and the principal people pursued and driven out of the country, and being encouraged by the Congress have returned and united all those who were in the same predicament to take up arms and it is difficult to say how it will terminate. I can assure your Excellency that I found the same sentiments among the people of the other countys in regard to your administration notwithstanding the infinite pains to procure different sentiments." With a duplicate of the same letter.

1776, Nov. 23. Halifax.—Captain Daniel Cunningham to Governor Legge. As to the difficulties that Lieutenant-Governor Arbuthnot has thrown in his way in his recruiting expedition to Newfoundland to procure men to serve in Governor Legge's Volunteer regiment.

1776, Nov. 24. Halifax.—Charles Morris, junior, to Governor Legge. "I imagine you will have a particular account of the present situation of this Colony from the representations that will be made to the Ministry by the present commanders of the several departments here. But I beg leave to make some observations to you from my own knowledge of our affairs. The privateers have so swarmed upon our coast (notwithstanding the vigilance of the men-of-war) that they have almost destroyed the fishery at Canso, have taken vessels from Chester, Port Medway, Barrington, Yarmouth, and sundry provision vessels sent to Fort Cumberland for the troops there, and others coming out of the Bay with grain and roots for this market, so that the coast is now almost stripped of the small vessels that used to supply us with wood, roots, and other necessities of life, and we are threatened with a total destruction by the other Colonies, who look upon this place as a magazine of stores for the Army and Navy and have come to a determination to make an entire conquest of it this winter; for which purpose a large party is arrived in the Colony and have invested Fort Cumberland, and a much larger party, some say 8,000, are soon to follow them. General Massey has sent a reinforcement who sailed from Windsor last Tuesday, since which we have not received any certain advice from them. We are informed that the inhabitants of St. John's River, Indians and Acadians, and the people of the County of Cumberland have joined, so that they have entire possession of all the north side, the Bay of Fundy, except the fort at Cumberland which by the last advices was surrounded, in all this distress not a man that Mr. Francklin had inroled would be prevailed on to go to the relief of Cumberland. Now we begin to see the advantage your regiment would have been to us had you not been obstructed in every method taken to raise it." The remainder of the letter is on the affairs of Governor Legge's Volunteer regiment.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1776, Nov. 26. Halifax.—Lieutenant-Colonel Denson, of the Loyal Nova Scotia Volunteers, to Lord George Germain. Requesting reasonable pay and subsistence for the officers of the regiment while recruiting, and stating some of the difficulties thrown in the way of the service by Lieutenant-Governor Arbutnot and other enemies of Governor Legge.

1776, Dec. 7. Halifax.—Lieutenant-Colonel Denson to Governor Legge. The sufferings of that part of Governor Legge's Volunteer regiment told off to work the coal mines. Nine men have died, and nine more must be discharged unfit for service. A ship surgeon says that most of them must die during the winter owing to a yellow or nervous fever brought about by the sulphurous fumes in which the work has to be carried on. Mentions this in the hope that Governor Legge may procure some redress.

1776, Dec. 27. Halifax.—Joseph Bonnett to Governor Legge. As to his efforts to win over the Indians to the King's side. Had very good success with the Mickmacks, but in the disturbances which have recently taken place in Cumberland some of the River St. John Indians were concerned. Encloses an account of money expended on the expedition, and hopes the Governor will use his interest with Lord George Germain to have it repaid him.

N.D. Kentish Town, Saturday evening. — James Burrows to Governor Legge. The Nova Scotia letters I have sent inclosed to Lord George and I hope his eyes will open a little relative to that Province . . . I am just returned from Mr. Holland's where that great politician has now found out that Goreham, instead of defeating, has been defeated, with considerable loss; owing to the "absence of his engineer, the fewness of his men and the party sent from Halifax losing their way."

N.D. (? 1776).—Petition of Governor Legge to the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, begging that he may be recouped the expenses he has been put to in coming to England and vindicating himself of the charges brought against him by persons in the Province of Nova Scotia. Enclosing a copy address to him from the House of Assembly of the Province, stating what legislation they have effected for the preservation of the Colony and the money they have voted to his Majesty's use.

N.D. (? 1776).—Draft letter, unsigned, from Governor Legge to some person in Halifax about the affairs of his Nova Scotia Volunteer regiment.

1777, Jan. 15. Admiralty Office.—Philip Stephens to the Earl of Dartmouth. Has laid before the Lords of the Admiralty Lord Dartmouth's letter requesting the discharge of Thomas Hedges, one of his Lordship's watermen, who has been impressed. Their Lordships ordered the Regulating Captains in town to report upon the matter. Encloses a copy of the report, and is to acquaint Lord Dartmouth that their Lordships cannot discharge the man.

Enclosing :

Jan. 14. King's Head, Tower Hill.—Captain J. Kirke and Captain A. North to Mr. Stephens. As to the impressing of Thomas Hedges, Lord Dartmouth's waterman.

1777, Feb. 4. London.—Governor Legge to Charles Morris, junior, Halifax. Is sorry to hear that his letters to Mr. Morris, senior, and Colonel Denson have miscarried. The letter is on the money matters of the Loyal Nova Scotia Volunteers.

1777, March 18. London.—Governor Legge to Sir William Howe. As to the Loyal Nova Scotia Volunteers, concerning which regiment the Governor has sent in a memorial to Lord George Germain, asking for a grant of money to complete it. This memorial is to be referred to Sir William, and Mr. Legge hopes that he will accede to it. "I can with great certainty say the corps would have been long since completed had it not been for the unjustifiable opposition I met with in the Province, whereby not only the intentions of government were defeated by its pretended friends, but I have been put to a most enormous expence to justify a character which now appears blameless, as my Lord George has done me the honour to repeat frequently, but it is hard that an innocent man should be put to the expence of a thousand pounds to prove it."

1777, April 25. St. James's.—Approbation under Royal Sign Manual of the election of Richard Geast, Steward of the City of Litchfield, in the place of Gryffyd Price, Esq., resigned.

1777, June 13. Halifax. Judge Morris to Governor Legge. Acknowledging the Governor's kindness as shown in a letter from him to Charles Morris, junior, his son. "As for public affairs it is, in my opinion, a critical time. If the rebels have no foreign assistance they must soon surrender; their distresses are beyond description. I am credibly informed they have lost, according to their own lists, twenty-two thousand and upwards last summer, and now they are forcing their farmers from the plow, the consequence of which will be famine if they hold out another year, but which I think impossible they can do. We don't hear yet of any general action; our General acts upon the solid principles of old Fabius, which worries and distresses them more than a battle, and some poet may say again 'Unus cunctando nobis restituit rem.' I believe he waits for the troops from Canada."

1778, Jan. 19. Philadelphia.—Copy letter from Sir William Howe to Governor Legge in answer to Mr. Legge's of March 18th 1777. Enclosing the "Plan on which the corps of Loyal Nova Scotia Volunteers are now formed," dated 6th June 1776, regretting that he cannot comply with the Governor's wishes and agree to the memorial.

1778, April 14. London. (Copy.)—The Earl of Dartmouth to Major-General Tryon, New York. Recommending Captain Barretti, the bearer of despatches, to General Tryon's favour. On the same sheet is a copy of a letter from Lord George Germain to the same, dated the 12 April, to the same effect.

1778, July 13. New York.—J. Galloway to Ambrose Serle, Esq.
"This city has been for several days blocked up by the French Fleet, which lies in a line of battle about three miles without the Hook.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

They take everything coming in, and we are not a little anxious about the safety of the Reasonable, the Centurion, and Renown, which are expected from the eastward. The British Fleet under Viscount Howe lies within the Hook also prepared and in line of battle, intending, as I suppose, to attack the French should they venture in, notwithstanding their superior force in weight of metal, as it is said this may be done with a good prospect of success, because they cannot come in all together, nor can the largest ships come in at all, for want of a sufficient depth of water; or it is not improbable that Lord Howe is waiting for the expected arrival of Admiral Byron, whom we learn is dispatched after the French Fleet. Could I find any reasonable ground of hope, after such a train of misfortunes which have attended the British arms, I should expect his arrival soon. But I fear Monsieur D'Estaing has better intelligence of his situation than we, or I think he could not be so imprudent as to stay on this coast, and more especially so near to the Fleet under Lord Howe. I cannot account for an act of so much folly upon any other principle but that of their having a certain knowledge that Byron cannot be soon in these parts. Because should Byron arrive before their departure, and should the proper measures be taken, and spirit shewn, it seems impossible that they should escape the two British Fleets.

"What I mentioned to you at Philadelphia has come to pass. That the British Army would suffer more by an immediate march from Philadelphia than by going out to the Valley Forge and first attacking Washington. I am informed by Officers of the best judgment that the loss on the march by desertion and in the battle was not less than 1,000 men. Washington's camp I am certain might have been stormed and taken with a loss much less. That single stroke would have ended the rebellion, if it had been pursued by that wisdom and policy which the present circumstances of America obviously and plainly point out: I mean those of calling on the loyal friends to the Crown to assist in the work, and vigorously pursuing by arms the advantages gained: or it would have obliged the Congress to have treated on any terms. Their Army defeated, their situation would have been desperate notwithstanding the prospect of French assistance. But the abandonment of Philadelphia without an action has given the Congress high spirits and a tone of language becoming the most powerful States. But it is a truth, that the people in general have not caught the infection. Their sentiments of the tyranny of their new masters remain the same as when you left them. They still feel their oppression and cruelties, and reason from their feelings. They yet remember the blessings they enjoyed under a British Government, and wish for a restoration of them. And their resentment against the British for deserting them is suppressed by their miseries and the hopes that it has arisen from the present necessity only and that future exertions will be made for their safety.

"From certain intelligence I learn that the people of Philadelphia have been in great distress since we left it. Provisions very dear and every article of foreign produce, salt 6 dollars per bushel, brown sugar 9s. p. lb., Bohea tea £3, loaf sugar 22s. 6d., continental currency, and every necessary of life in the same proportion.

"I enclose with this a Connecticut paper. You will find in it a letter from G—— J—— with an answer not sent. Upon this letter arriving here the advertisement was pasted up at Rivington's corner. They require no animadversions but speak for themselves.

"Washington has passed the North River at King's Ferry. His force at the battle near Middletown, it is now reduced to a certainty

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

was not 9,000 men, about 6,000 regulars, if any of his troops may be called so, and 3,000 enlisted for a few months only. The latter have left him so that he did not pass over the North river with more than 6,000 men and those very sickly. What his intentions are is uncertain. We have not the intelligence we had at Philadelphia, but it is generally allowed, that when his Corps shall join Gates's now at the White Plains, the whole will not amount to more than 10,000 men, while our number of British must exceed 20,000 at this place.

"My estate being confiscated by a Legislative Act I have no means of subsistence left. His Majesty's goodness and justice can alone relieve me from a state of absolute indigence. I am sure I need say no more to you, who know my situation as well as I do myself.

"I enclose some observations on the conduct of the Army, and where I think it will admit of reformation. It is intended that you should make what prudent use of them you please. If they should be useless burn them. I believe measures will be taken to prevent indiscriminate plunder in future.

"I have been altogether unsettled since I have been here, and even now write in much interruption and haste as you'll perceive by this scrawl. I have heard from Mrs. G——, she remains in her house unmolested. This is some satisfaction to me. Betsy begs her best compliments may be presented to you, and joins me in wishing you and your worthy family every blessing."

Enclosing a copy of the "Connecticut Courant and Weekly Intelligence," No. 702 for Tuesday July 7th 1778, containing a copy Petition presented to the House of Commons on Feb. 19th 1778 from the gentlemen freeholders and others of the County of Norfolk and City of Norwich protesting against a call made upon the county to raise men and money for supporting the constitutional authority of Great Britain, and praying an enquiry into the true grounds and method of conducting the American War, of which the results have been so disastrous to the Empire. Containing also the proceedings of the American Congress from June 11th to June 17th 1778, upon the embassy of Lord Carlisle, Mr. William Eden, and Governor Johnstone, who had been appointed Commissioners for restoring peace to the Colonies; among other matters connected with this episode is a long letter from the Commissioners dated at Philadelphia the 9th of June 1778, to Henry Laurens the President of the Congress, stating the terms of the proposed peace and the unanimous answer of the Congress stating the only terms upon which they could agree to a peace; the recognition by Great Britain of the independence of the States or the withdrawal of the English fleets and armies. There is also news from Philadelphia and Boston, dated June 20th and July 2nd 1778.

N.D.—A Squib. "To be Sold, the British rights in America. Consisting, among other Articles, of:—

"The thirteen Provinces in rebellion which Britain in the 'hour of her insolence' attempted to subdue; the reversion of the Government of Quebec, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, East and West Florida; the territories of the Hudson Bay Company; a respectable body of troops; a considerable part of the Royal Navy; and all the Loyal Subjects in America.

"The British West Indies will be included in the Sale if agreeable.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

"Apply to George Johnston* Esquire, who is desirous to conclude a private bargain.

"Conditions of the Sale to be seen in the hands of Henry Lawrance Esq., President of the Congress.

"To make it easy to the purchasers, a seat in Congress will be taken as part payment, the rest in Continental currency. N.B. Discount will be allowed for all the Loyalists who have been murdered since 18th April 1775."

1778, Sep. 16. John Street, Rathbone Place.—Ambrose Serle to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing a letter from Mr. Galloway for his Lordship's perusal. Has some "observations on the conduct of the army" which are of such a nature that they cannot be sent by the post.

This is probably the letter of July 13th. See p. 417.

1779, Aug. 13.—Mr. Wilks to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing a copy letter from Bombay, which he states shall be kept secret until further or official accounts arrive.

The enclosure is headed "Extract of a letter from Bombay, dated the 15th January 1779."

"It is chiefly to inform you that poor Mostyn died on New Year's day in the morning universally regretted; and that Colonel Cay, and Captain Stewart, have both been killed on the Poonah expedition; poor Stewart was killed on the spot by a cannon ball, Cay mortally wounded by a rocket. Cay returned hither, and I am this instant returned hither (sic), and I am this instant returned from his funeral. In the loss of these two gallant officers, in my opinion the present expedition may suffer considerably. No general action has yet taken place, for Cay and Stewart both fell by distant cannonading; the former under the first and the latter under (on) the 4th of the month. On the 6th a smart skirmish took place, the enemy were beaten off the field, and Hartley who succeeded to the command of Stewart's select corps, very materially distinguished himself in the action; by our latest advices from Camp dated the 10th, the army was within three hours' march of Poonah, and in great distress for provisions, for the enemy, as they retire before us, burn and destroy every village, and it is said intend burning and destroying Poonah also. Colonel Egerton endeavoured to return to Bombay but was obliged to join the army again; the enemy having several parties of horse in the Coucan, the direction of the army has been for some time under Colonel Cockburn. Captain Eames set off the day before yesterday for Ponwell in order to clear the Coucan and to convey a large quantity of provisions up to the army, so that I believe we have not now 300 fighting men in garrison: the French and Mahrattas I trust, are too much engaged at home to think of molesting us at least for this season, and as the Revenge and Grab are just now at Tellicherry a couple of French frigates if stationed off the harbour might interrupt the whole trade of our settlement. Eames' party consists of about 500 men.

"We have no certain accounts as yet of Colonel Goddard and the Bengal Brigade neither were the Asia and our East Indiamen arrived at

* Governor Johnstone.—The squib was probably suggested by a letter written by him while one of the Commissioners for Restoring Peace, to Mr. Laurens, the President of Congress, and printed in the "Connecticut Courant" above mentioned. The phrase quoted above occurs in the letter; "If you should follow the example of Britain in the hour of her insolence and send us back without a hearing."

Tellicherry the 2nd instant. In short I do not on the whole like the present appearance of things in general in this quarter and I wish most fervently our Poonah expedition may terminate successfully; not a partizan of consequence has as yet I hear come over to Ragobah; what therefore Ragobah is to do when he gets even to Poonah is a business at present above my comprehension.

"The Madras troops are not yet arrived at Tellicherry in order to undertake the reduction of Mahe.

"By advices from Malacca dated in August the India ships and the Company's China ships were safe arrived there and intended proceeding in company to Canton. A Bermudas Snow Privateer had been at Molucca, carrying 16 guns and 60 men.

"The Royal Henry sails tomorrow for Bengal.

"15th January 1779 continued, 9 p.m.

"I would that my prophetic spirit had deceived me, my dearest — but — who arrived this afternoon from Ponwell, brings an account that our army was routed and dispersed by the Mahratta army on the 12th instant, that all our guns and ammunition were taken and that almost all our Seapoys had deserted to the enemy before the misfortune took place. Lindrum received this information from a Seapoy and a Lascar who escaped the 12th in the evening. As they came away they say (saw) Egerton, Hartley, and Holmes, together in a tent; the enemy had got possession of the pass that we had on the Gaats. I close here for to night, as the Dingey, I hear, does not sail before tomorrow at noon."

"16th January 1779, — a.m.

"Nothing further have I heard, unless it be that an Ensign Day has been killed and Major Speath mortally wounded; no letters that I know of having been received from any gentleman belonging to the army; the foregoing accounts are I hope exaggerated by the fears of the fugitive tellers, something very dreadful however I am convinced must have happened, so much so that I declare to you I am afraid to hazard my suspicions even regarding it. Our army, together consisted of about 3,500 men, the enemy's it is said of 60,000 horse, judge therefore what must be the consequence when they charged and broke our line; and when every one was left to shift for himself: God send us better accounts, but I doubt it most exceedingly. Should the accounts of yesterday prove true we shall then in my opinion have nothing to do but to shut the gates of our town, lock ourselves up, and let the Mahrattas ravage and destroy our Island as seemeth best unto them; Salset and our Northern Purgunnahs will now I fear be again taken from us; the French influence again rise in Poonah and Goddard have nothing to do, but get to Bombay as well as he can with the Bengal Brigade and assist us in the defence of it. Goddard has about 8,000 men with him for whose safety I begin now to be a little uneasy. At this juncture too, much is to be dreaded from the Mahratta fleet. Indeed indeed — since I have known India I never knew our affairs in general wear so gloomy an appearance.

"17th January 1779. Sunday 10 a.m.

"I have this instant received a letter from — at Ponwell dated last night at 11 o'clock from which I extract the following:—"We have had some men come in here this evening who left the army the 13th at night about 7 o'clock; the accounts they bring are far from being satisfactory, but they all agree that Captain Hartley was wounded in the arm; he commanded the brigade in front of the enemy; he lost 3 guns, was

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

overpowered and retired to join the main body. Our army retreated to Toolgaum (about 15 coss from Poonah) the 12th about 1 o'clock in the morning. This was the prelude to our loss for the enemy charged at 5 o'clock that morning, surrounded the flanks of the army and got in between the baggage and the line, the baggage guard was under the command of Captain Gordon but the enemy carried off a great part of it, and a number of bullocks; they never came to close action; but came up, gave their fire, and retired to make way for others. Our army and the enemy were engaged the whole of the 13th but not closely, chiefly cannon and rockets. That evening our army was drawn up on the banks of a little river, 2 coss on this side Toolgaum. They had provisions for some days and also some ammunition. Captain Westphal of the artillery was wounded in the thigh; the other officers' names I cannot find out, as most of the people that have run hither from the army are Lascars. Batterow has deserted from Ragobah and was the cause of having forged letters made out in Holkar's name which caused our army's retreating from Toolgaum; in this retreat it was that the enemy attacked us; the enemy have placed a great number of men at Bore Gaat Pass (Frazer's Post) and Frazer arrived here at 9 o'clock last night. The enemy have also possession of Campoley, such——, is the melancholy account of this morning; not so bad indeed, as was at first suspected but still very, very deplorable; for surrounded as our army is how they are to get provisions, or how make their retreat good without ammunition, and with the enemy in possession of the Gaat Pass at Condolah I cannot make out.

“19th January 1779, Tuesday — p.m.

“Yesterday afternoon I received a note from Lindrum at Ponwell, dated yesterday morning at 9 o'clock, the purport of which is as follows. There are letters from our camp dated the 14th instant, at Burgaom about one coss on this side of Toolgaum where there is a tank and a river; Meckon and Day are the only officers killed; the number of men killed are by no means equal to the former reports, so that I am still in hopes. The enemy's numbers, it is said, exceed a lack (100,000) of men; there are letters to the Governor now dispatched from the camp.

“The Governor's letters however from camp contain nothing more I believe than what was mentioned to me, at least he mentioned nothing more; though I was [with] (sic) him last night for an hour. In this uncertain and desperate situation of things am I obliged to close this letter. No news of Goddard! No European ships yet arrived upon the coast.

“Bombay 20th January 1779, Wednesday 4 p.m.

“I am very happy the Dingey did not sail last night, as I have this morning learnt, that advices have been received from camp at Condolah that mention some treaty or other to have been entered into with the Ministerialists by Carnac and Egerton: and that Ragobah is gone on to Poonah with Hartley's Brigade; that our army are encamped at the Condolah Pass and that the yacht sailed a few hours ago to bring over Mr. Carnac. Everything at present here seems mystery and confusion, so much so, that I suspect we have been obliged to submit to the terms of the Ministerialists. When I know more you shall hear from me by the first Dingey. The advices from Condolah are dated the day before yesterday.

“A great number of our officers have been wounded.”

1779, Oct. 4.—John Robinson to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing by order of Lord North, “Some minutes relative to East India affairs as heads proper for consideration before the renewal of the charter of the Company which as to its exclusive trade expires in April 1780."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1779, Oct. 8. London.—J. Pownall to the Earl of Dartmouth. "My sincere regards for both the Browns compel me to say a word or two on the subject of the very unusual, I believe unprecedented, step that has been taken in consequence of the complaints against the Governor, and whatever may be said about it, the entire revocation of his commission convinces me there can be no real intention of restoring him; permit me also, my Lord, to inform you that Governor Brown cannot now receive a single sixpence of the salary allowed him; the whole becomes vested in Mr. Maxwell from the date of his commission under the Great Seal. I do not think [the] Office was aware of this consequence of the step they have taken, and therefore I should hope they would upon a proper representation compel Mr. Maxwell to come to some agreement on that head.

What could have induced our old friend Tryon to countenance or rather command the wanton severitys, to use no harsher expression, of which the innocent inhabitants of Fairfield and Greenfield so loudly complain. I can venture to tell your Lordship, out of the confidence of my private correspondence with C——n, that he highly disapproves Tryon's conduct in this occasion and has called upon him for his reasons at large for such a procedure."

1779, Oct. 19.—J. Pownall to the Earl of Dartmouth. Has written to Mr. Cumberland as to the removal of Governor Brown.

N.D. (? Oct. 1779).—Letter, unsigned, to Richard Cumberland respecting the harsh treatment received by Governor Brown, who has been deprived of his commission until he can refute the charges brought against him, and deprived also in the mean time of all emolument by the appointment of Mr. Maxwell to his post.

1779, Oct. 29. Excise Office.—J. Pownall to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing Mr. Cumberland's answer (not now enclosed) to his own as to the removal of Governor Brown. There is no doubt that the Governor's case is prejudged. "Mr. de Grey with whom I have talked upon this subject though he speaks with great asperity of the Governor's conduct seems somewhat aware of the impropriety of the proceeding, declaring at the same time that, had it not been from considerations of wishing to show all possible lenity to the Governor, the charges were of such a nature as must have induced immediate and direct dismissal."

1779, Nov. 4. St. John's, Newfoundland.—Captain G. H. Monk to Governor Legge. On recruiting matters connected with the Loyal Nova Scotia Volunteer Corps.

1779, Dec. 10. King St., Covent Garden.—J. T. Lane to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing a petition and other papers relative to a dispute between the parishes of Olney and Wellingborough.

1780, Nov. 22. Extracts from the Gazette of the Isles of France and Bourbon relating to Indian affairs.

II.—1784 to 1807.

1784, Nov. 28. Halifax. — Sir Charles Douglas to the Earl of Dartmouth. Giving notice of his application to be recalled from his command that no time be lost in having application made to his successor in favour of Mr. Legge, then on board the Ariadne near the mouth of the Bay of Fundy.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

. 1785, Feb. 15.—Dr. Parr to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing an epitaph (which had been approved by the Bishop), in memory of William Legge, the 2nd son of the Earl, who died on the 20th of October 1784.

1785, Sept. 20.—Tunbridge Wells. Dr. Grieve to Lady Dartmouth. On the properties of Koumiss in consumptive cases.

1786, June 28. London.—The Earl of Guilford to the Earl of Dartmouth. "Lord North has just wrote me word he is to name the High Steward to the University of Oxford which he intends to offer to your Lordship. 'Tis a very honourable office, I dare say the University will be much pleased with your acceptance of it, and therefore I hope I may congratulate them and your Lordship."

1786, June 28. Bushy Park.—Lord North to the Earl of Dartmouth. "There is just fallen into my disposal an office of great honour and dignity, which, though it is accompanied by no emolument, and I believe by no function whatever, ought, nevertheless, not to be given away lightly and inconsiderately: I mean, the Office of High Steward of the University of Oxford. In my nomination to this vacancy, I must consult both the satisfaction of the University, and my own credit, and, as there is no man living better calculated than you are, to answer both these objects, I hope you will permit me to nominate you. Your constant friendship for me renders it quite unnecessary for me to trouble you with any arguments to induce you to consent to a choice, which you will easily perceive must be both very agreeable and highly honourable to me."

1786, July 6. Lower Grovesnor St.—Lord North to the Earl of Dartmouth. "I enclose you a letter I received yesterday from the Vice Chancellor of Oxford in which you will see the great satisfaction which your appointment has given to our Alma Mater. I will sign the Letters Patent as soon as I receive them from Dr. Forster, and will give you notice of the receipt of them."

1786, July 9.—Lord North to the Earl of Dartmouth. Has received the Letters Patent and signed them, will send them to the Vice Chancellor that the Official Seal may be affixed, and will have everything in readiness for his admission by Wednesday night. The letter concludes with family matters.

1786, July 19. Bushy Park.—Lord North to the Earl of Dartmouth. "I am glad to hear the ceremony of admitting our new High Steward of the University is over without having given too much fatigue to our new Officer." Regrets he was not present himself, but fears the visit of a Chancellor, unless upon previous notice, is apt to give more trouble than satisfaction to the University, otherwise he would pay his respects there oftener. Thinks it may be necessary for the High Steward to appoint a Deputy.

1786, Oct. 28. Downing St.—William Pitt to the Earl of Dartmouth. Requests his sentiments on Mr. Brown's case. (Draft reply of Lord Dartmouth is annexed.)

1787, July 10. Antwerp.—Dr. John Ash to the Earl of Dartmouth. On general subjects. Mentions the signs of civil commotions visible in that country.

1787, July and August.—Further letters from the same to the same from Spa. On the mineral properties of the waters and general topics.

1787, Oct. 4. New Bond Street.—Dr. John Ash to the Earl of Dartmouth. "If you may pay credit and sufficient confidence in the reports of London, war is inevitable, and Mr. Arthur will certainly meet with professional employment. But Mr. Grenville is not returned, who carried, it is said, a more peremptory requisition than has ever been sent to the Court of France since the time of Oliver Cromwell." . . . "At Lord Loughborough's I met with Mr. Edmund Burke, and we had a fine dish of politics, that continued near hours in serving up. He is a wonderful man in abilities and reading, but yet not to depreciate his excellencies, I have met with men who have arranged their acquisitions with greater skill and precision." Also on family and general topics.

1787, Dec. 1. Admiralty.—Viscount Howe to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to Mr. Legge's promotion.

1788, July 7. London.—Dr. Ash to the Earl of Dartmouth. "My publication (on the medicinal properties of the Foreign Mineral Waters) will be completed this morning by the final printing the last corrected proof sheet, and I hope to get a copy of it sewed tomorrow to send to your Lordship tomorrow evening." "The Chancellor after all his bullying has put the Seals to Sir R. Pepper Arden's patent, and for a similitude of conduct has got the name of Emperor Thurlow, like the Emperor Joseph."

1788, Sept. 7. Spa.—Dr. Ash to the Earl of Dartmouth. On the reception accorded to his book. Is collecting materials for another volume.

In a letter of 27th June 1788, (of no general interest) Dr. Ash mentions that the 9th of July is the day of his nativity 66 years ago.

1788, Oct. 4. Berkeley Square.—The Earl of Chatham to the Earl of Dartmouth. Will be very happy to contribute to the advancement of his Lordship's wishes for his son Mr. Legge.

1790, Nov. 22. Admiralty.—The Earl of Chatham to the Earl of Dartmouth. "It is now with very great satisfaction that I inform your Lordship that upon the Valiant being paid off Mr. Legge will be promoted to be a Master and Commander."

1785, 1791, 1792.—Correspondence between the Bishop of Winchester (the Honourable Brownlow North) and his step-brother the Earl of Dartmouth. Relative to the Bishop's trust business and papers relating thereto.

1795. Letters and papers connected with the settlements on the marriages of Lady Charlotte Legge to Mr. Charles Duncombe (son of C. S. Duncombe, Esq. of Duncombe Park, and afterwards Lord Feversham), and of the Honourable Augustus George Legge with Miss Honora Bagot.

1800 to 1803 ; 1826 ; 1827.—A collection of letters and papers on Indian affairs during the time of, and subsequent to, the Presidency of the Board of Commissioners for the Affairs of India of George Viscount Lewisham and Earl of Dartmouth on the resignation of the Right Honourable Henry Dundas, created on the 24th December 1802 Baron Duneira and Viscount Melville.

These papers include a letter dated 22nd February 1801 from Henry Addington to Lord Lewisham informing him it was probable that he would be introduced to the King on the following Tuesday or Wednesday as President of the India Board, and a draft letter from Lord Lewisham to Lord Wellesley, dated 11th June 1801, announcing his appointment as President of the Board of Commissioners for the Affairs of India on the resignation of Mr. Dundas.

They also comprise either original or copy despatches on most important matters connected with the administration of Indian affairs

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

from and to Marquess Wellesley, Lord Clive, Mr. Addington, Marquess Cornwallis, Henry Dundas, Sir John Macpherson, Lord Hobart, Lord Glenbirvie, Viscount Castlereagh, N. B. Edmonstone, J. Webbe, Major John Malcolm, Henry Gwillim, Benjamin Sullivan, C. F. Greville, Thomas Henchman, Charles Mills, J. Roberts, Jacob Bosanquet, and others, as well as correspondence and papers from and to the Board of the East India Company and the Board of Control on the East Indian trade, on the revenue and charge of the Presidencies of Fort William, Fort George, and Bombay, on the military establishment and other subjects. There are also applications from numerous persons in all ranks of life from the Queen downwards for Writerships, Cadetships, Recommendations to the Governor General, Seats at the Supreme Board, and Directorships.

The following letters are among the more important.

1801, Sept. 30. Monghyr. — Letter marked Private, No. (1) from Marquess Wellesley to Viscount Lewisham.

“My dear Lord,

The object of this letter is to solicit your Lordship's immediate attention to the request, which I have urged to the Court of Directors, relative to the appointment of a provisional successor to me in this Government. Your Lordship will readily admit the reason and justice of those motives which render me anxious that this great trust should not be exposed to the hazard of devolving into hands, which the Government at home might not deem equal to sustain such a burthen; and while I assure your Lordship of my earnest desire to remain at my post (as long as my public obligations and duties shall demand my continuance in India, and as long as I shall retain the power of serving the Company and the Nation with any prospect of essential advantage to either) you will not deem me to be too presumptuous, if I claim the indulgence, extended to both my immediate predecessors, of being enabled to deliver over charge of the Government to some person in India, specially approved by the Court of Directors, and appointed to supply my place, in the event of any unforeseen emergency, which might call me to Europe.

It is not for me to suggest to your Lordship whether the person, to be named in India, should be the same who may be ultimately destined to the permanent administration of this Government, or whether it should be understood, that my provisional successor should merely exercise the Government untill the choice of His Majesty and of the Court of Directors could be fixed on some person in Europe, who might be judged more qualified for the charge. It would still less become me to name any person to your Lordship in any other manner than that which my public duty requires for your information. I understand from report, (although his Lordship has not yet signified his intention to me) that Lord Clive proposes to return to Europe in the approaching season; the event of his Lordship's resignation will place the Government of Fort St. George in the hands of Mr. Petrie. My resignation would place this Government in the hands of Mr. Barlow.

I can assure your Lordship with perfect confidence that Mr. Barlow is fully qualified for the temporary administration of this Government: the nomination of a Governor General, intended to hold this Government permanently, might be affected by principles which might exclude any person now in India, with the exception of Lord Clive; it is not my duty to trouble your Lordship on this part of the question; my intention is merely to state to your Lordship the necessity of appointing a provisional successor to me for the temporary exercise of the Government in the event of my death, absence, or resignation; and to apprise you that, in my judgment, you may safely approve the grant of such a Commission to Mr. Barlow, the person on whom the Government would now devolve of course, in any of the events supposed.

In urging these considerations to your Lordship I think it is my further duty to apprise you, that as soon as the provisional appointment shall reach India, I shall consider myself to be at liberty to return to Europe without further notice to the Government at home; and I must add that I entertain a confident hope of being able to deliver over this charge to my successor without hazard, in the course of the next season, from the month of October 1802 to that of February 1803. The great objects which I am anxious to accomplish previously to my departure are,

The final settlement of the Carnatic, already far advanced by the transfer of the Civil and Military Government to the Company under the late treaty.

The final settlement of Oude, which I trust will be brought to a prosperous issue within the course of a few months.

The arrangement of our Military Establishments;

And, lastly, the general system of our expenditure and resource in India.

With regard to the Military Establishments, I trust that I shall be able in the course of twelve months to bring the charges of Bengal within the limits proposed in the last plan received from the Court of Directors. It will be utterly impracticable to meet the wishes of the Court in the reductions proposed to be made at Fort St. George and Bombay until affairs shall assume a more settled aspect in the Peninsula; the reductions proposed in those establishments would compel us instantly to evacuate Mysore and the countries ceded by the Nizam. The execution of the Court's orders in this instance must therefore be suspended; and your Lordship will hereafter, upon a deliberate comparison of charges, of resources, and of demands for military force in the Peninsula of India, exercise your discretion with regard to the proposed reduction of the army at Fort St. George and Bombay.

I shall anxiously avail myself of every practicable occasion to carry the orders of the Court of Directors respecting those armies into effect, so far as the safety of their Dominions will admit. I have not yet received from Fort St. George the necessary documents on this branch of their affairs; but I expect in the course of about a month to be enabled to reply fully to the late military letter of the Court of Directors, stating to what extent the plan of the Court has been executed, or appears to me to be practicable; and submitting to the Court the instantaneous and inevitable consequences of executing the whole plan in the present crisis.

Your Lordship will feel the difficulty of my situation; bound by my public duty, on the one hand, to maintain the security of this Empire in all its parts, and on the other, to pay obedience to orders, issued from an authority which I must ever respect, and to which I am ever ready to submit. But in the instance in question the orders of the Court appear to have been framed previously to the knowledge of the existing disturbances in the Peninsula, and in the Circars, of the late treaty with the Nizam, and of the extent of the force sent to Egypt; the recent treaty with the Nabob Azeem ud Dowlah in the Carnatic, will also vary many parts of the question.

It does not become me to dwell on the additional circumstance that the plan has been formed without any reference whatever to my opinions, or any latitude to the exercise of my discretion. It would be presumptuous to expect that the wisdom and experience which formed that plan should have admitted the possibility of my being enabled to submit any opinion worthy of consideration on the means of maintaining our conquests in the Peninsula, or our acquisitions in the Dekan. It would also be improper to weigh in the scale the unanimous sentiment of every military officer acquainted with the state of the possessions in question. I am aware that it will be my ultimate duty to submit to the authority appointed by law to control this Government, even if the commands of that authority should appear to my judgment to be founded in error; but it is my primary duty respectfully to represent facts which could not have been known, and consequences which could not have been foreseen in the formation of this plan, before I proceed to carry it into execution. If, after full information, my orders should be, even to evacuate all our conquests, for the purpose of increasing the commercial investment of one season, I should not hesitate to obey; and although I should be anxious to retire from a scene, which could present no object to my view unconnected with sensations of regret and disappointment, I would not retire, untill I had fully obeyed the commands of legitimate authority, and had employed every endeavour to render the act of my obedience as little as possible injurious to the security of this Empire.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

With regard to the Finance, I entertain the strongest hopes of being able to improve its condition considerably in the ensuing season. I have already effected much in Bengal and I hope to effect more in the same quarter. The late acquisition of the Carnatic will certainly improve the finances of Fort St. George; if my other avocations should admit of my absence from Fort William, I propose in the month of January, after my return from my present expedition, to proceed to Fort St. George, and ultimately to Bombay for the express purpose of revising in person the details of those Establishments.

If a supply of bullion shall be dispatched from England at an early period of the approaching season, and shall arrive in Bengal in the month of July 1802, I have little doubt that all financial difficulties might be settled here within a short period of time. I have the honor to enclose a memorandum on the subject of the means of discharging the debt in India, of which I request your Lordship to furnish a copy to Mr. Dundas and Mr. Scott. Some of the suggestions stated in the memorandum might prove useful. I shall hereafter enter more fully into this subject. Perhaps the most advisable mode of proceeding with respect to the debt would be, to fund a part of it in England, and at the same time to send out bullion to discharge another part in India; if the debt be taken at 14 or 15 millions, and by the joint effect of funding at home and of exportation of bullion to India, one half of it could be redeemed, it would not be necessary to proceed farther: I am satisfied that the importation even of two millions of bullion into Bengal, applied to the discharge of debt, would entirely restore the financial system of all India.

Intending to have the honor of writing to your Lordship by the next packet, I shall not at present trouble you further than to assure you that I have the honor to be with great respect and esteem

My dear Lord

Your Faithful and obedient Servant,

WELLESLEY.

In adverting to the subject of finance, I have omitted to mention that I have enclosed two accounts usually transmitted annually to the President of the Board of Control; I request your Lordship to furnish copies of those accounts to Mr. Dundas, to whom I have transmitted a copy of this letter, as containing references to some of his former dispatches addressed to me.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

W.

I request your Lordship to permit Mr. David Scott to peruse this letter.

W."

This letter is in triplicate. No endorsement.

(The Draft of Viscount Lewisham's reply follows this letter.)

1801, Oct. 12. Fort St. George.—Letter marked Private from Lord Clive to Viscount Lewisham.

"My dear Lord,

It was impossible to consider without regret the dissolution of a Ministry which was so eminently entitled as that of Mr. Pitt to the public confidence and respect; but, in the fortunate arrangements, by which His Majesty has been enabled to meet the actual exigencies produced by that event, I observed with no ordinary satisfaction the nomination of your Lordship to be President of the Board of Commissioners for Indian Affairs, and although this appointment has not yet been formally announced to me, you will not object to the unofficial congratulations of an old friend, nor entertain a doubt of their cordial sincerity.

The relation of your official situation to that which I have the honor to fill renders it my duty to solicit your attention to the important interests confided to my care, and in the discharge of that duty I have no doubt your Lordship will permit me to place much reliance on your consideration and friendship for me.

A private despatch which I have recently had the honor of receiving from the Chairman of the Court of Directors, is of that extraordinary nature, as to render it expedient for me to enter into a succinct history of the principles and events of my Government. In the best consideration which I can give to the subject, I do not, I trust, deceive myself in the belief that the grounds of my measures and the uniform success which has attended them entitle my Administration to the approbation and support of His Majesty's Ministers. In this confidence I do myself the honor of enclosing a copy of my despatch to Mr. Scott, and the near interest I must feel on the events dependent upon that despatch will justify the earnestness with which I recommend the subject to your Lordship's liberal consideration. My letter to the Chairman contains an epitome of my Government, and the explanation of the principles on which I have acted renders a farther intrusion on your Lordship's politeness unnecessary. I think it necessary, however, to remark that the increasing importance of our Indian Empire, appears to me to require a correspondent portion of the vigilance of His Majesty's Ministers. The considerations which now attach to our possession in India are not determinable by the maxims of a commercial policy: the power of the Board of Control is therefore indispensably necessary to the prosperous administration of our Eastern affairs. The beneficial effects already produced by the institution of that Control in the Government of the East India Company contain irresistible evidence of the necessity of continuing and increasing the influence of His Majesty's Ministers in the administration of Indian affairs. Under that influence the Marquis Cornwallis was enabled to establish the foundation of our Eastern Government on those principles of enlarged policy without which it cannot be preserved; principles which have since been the anxious object of Lord Wellesley's care. My

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

letter to the Chairman is founded on considerations conformable to those principles, and therefore speaks a language more suited to the general maxims of His Majesty's Councils, than to the limited views of a commercial Body. Under this impression I deem it to be my public duty to recommend to your Lordship's serious reflection that part of my despatch to the Chairman which involves the consideration of general principles, now applicable to our Eastern Government. With respect to myself I indulge an expectation that a candid consideration of the principles stated by me to the Court of Directors, and the support of His Majesty's Ministers founded on the uniform success of my Government, will render it unnecessary for me to anticipate the period of time, which I had prescribed for my residence in India; but if the determination of the questions dependent on my present dispatches should be of such a nature as to require my earlier departure, I trust I shall be relieved from all embarrassment in adopting that measure, by the appointment of a successor to Fort St. George.

In directing your Lordship's attention to an embarrassment of such a description, it will be consistent with the principles stated in this dispatch to refer you to the consequences produced at former periods of time under a casual succession to the Government of Fort St. George. I have the honor to be with the greatest regard and esteem, My dear Lord, most faithfully yours.

CLIVE.

Lord Viscount Lewisham.

Addressed:

The Right Honourable
Lord Viscount Lewisham,
&c. &c. &c.
London.

Endorsed:—Clive.—R., 23 Mar."

1801, November 1. Fort St. George.—Letter marked Private from Lord Clive to Viscount Lewisham.

"Sir Henry Strachey has not failed to acquaint me with the communication which had taken place between himself and your Lordship in April last upon the subject of my advancement to a higher station in India, nor have the favorable sentiments of regard and the opinion of my character expressed by your Lordship upon that occasion failed to recall to my mind early times, and to excite in it a gratification proportionable to your kindness. And although the extraordinary nature of the dispatches from the Court of Directors by the Terpsichore, and the unusual interference of that Body in the interior and subordinate arrangements of the executive offices of my Government force me irresistably to relinquish a situation, the arduous duties of which can never be executed with energy and success unless the person intrusted with the charge has the happiness to possess the full confidence and support of his superiors at home, and the free exercise of selection in the instruments he may deem it expedient to employ in the execution of his measures, yet I flatter myself that I shall still be honored with the continuance of your Lordship's friendship and regard, and that the administration of the affairs of Fort St. George during the time I have resided there, and the state of the country when I shall resign my trust will be such as to entitle me to the approbation of your Lordship and the Board over which you preside.

My dispatch of the 15th ulto. which I had the honor of transmitting to your Lordship by the Lord Thurlow, when compared with the late

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

orders of the Court of Directors will have prepared your Lordship for the effects which those orders have produced upon my mind, and your Lordship I have no doubt will have anticipated my early retirement, and have taken measures for the appointment of a successor to the important station which I have now the honor to fill. Under ordinary circumstances I should have deemed it to be my duty to have awaited the communication of the pleasure of the Court of Directors respecting my departure and the appointment of my successor; but to continue to administer the affairs of this Presidency with weakened authority, and under the public impression of the loss of confidence of those under whose orders I am placed would be neither consistent with my principles and reputation nor advantageous to the public welfare.

I have the honor to enclose for your Lordship's farther information a copy of my letter of this day's date apprizing the Court of Directors of my early intention of relinquishing the Government of Fort St. George."

COPY.

"To the Honourable the Court of Directors for the affairs of the Honourable the United Company of Merchants of England trading to the East Indies.

Gentlemen,

Fort St. George, 1st November 1801.

In a dispatch addressed by me to the Chairman of the Court of Directors on the 15th ult^o I had the honor of stating, with the most explicit precision, the principles on which I considered it to be practicable for me to conduct the affairs of the government of Fort St. George. That dispatch was founded on the intention of the Court of Directors, communicated to me by the Chairman, to adopt resolutions for reversing certain measures of my administration upon the grounds of information conveyed to the Court through private channels of intelligence: I have since had the mortification of learning the result of that intention from the correspondence of individual persons; and the dispatches of the Honourable Court subsequently received by His Majesty's Ship Terpsichore have left no doubt on my mind of the effects intended to be produced by the Honourable Court of Directors.

Those dispatches contain the orders of the Court for the removal of the principal executive officer of my government, in whom the confidence reposed by me is sufficiently known to the Court: it has also pleased the Court to supply by a direct nomination from itself the vacancy occasioned by that removal in the office of Chief Secretary; and the Court has further deemed it necessary to order the appointment of persons under its own nomination to the Board of Revenue, and to one of the principal commercial Presidencies.

I have the honor of stating in the most respectfull manner to the Honourable Court that this resolution, to interfere in the local government of this Presidency, demonstrates either a material change in the principle of administering the Company's affairs since my acceptance of the Government of Fort St. George, or a direct distrust of my future administration.

In one case the principle of my compact with the Court of Directors is dissolved; in the other case the inference is too direct to be stated; and in both cases the deprivation of the choice of instruments renders the conduct of the Government impracticable upon the principles which I have avowed and stated to your Honourable Court. Although the impression produced on my mind by this determination of your Honourable Court is of the most painful nature, I have not hesitated to obey the dictates of my duty by carrying your orders into immediate execution, as far as the execution of them is immediately practicable; nor shall I protract the arrangements, which are yet dependent on the arrival of persons appointed to stations by your Honourable Court. Having acquitted myself of this part of my duty it now becomes my painful task to apprise your Honourable Court that I consider the operation of its orders to have suspended the execution of the measures which I had judged to be necessary to the public interests committed to my charge; upon the same grounds I despair of completing the measures which are now in a train of execution; and I therefore feel it to be incumbent on my reputation, and conformable to your wishes, that I should pay implicit obedience to the intention of your orders, by relinquishing the Government of Fort St. George.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

It is my intention to record the reasons which have terminated in this resolution; in the mean time it is my duty to acquaint your Honourable Court that I have resolved to embark for England on one of the Company's ships, destined to complete their cargoes in the month of January next.

Under ordinary circumstances I should have deemed it to be proper for me to await the arrival of a successor appointed by your Honourable Court; but it is manifestly impossible for me under your existing orders to administer the affairs of the Company in a manner consistent with my avowed principles; my continuance therefore to preside in this Government unsupported by the confidence of the Court of Directors would at the same time subject me to an unnatural responsibility, and exhibit the dangerous example of degraded authority and distrusted power. Under this impression I deem the orders of your Honourable Court to be a sufficient indication of your wishes; and I can have no doubt that the Court is prepared to expect my retirement by the earliest opportunity to be the obvious consequence of their late orders.

I have the honor to inform your Honourable Court that I have apprized the most Honourable the Governor-General of my determination to relinquish the Government of Fort St. George, and that I have requested His Excellency to make such provisions, as he may deem expedient for that contingency."

1802, March 24. Copy of a letter from the Earl of Dartmouth^a to Mr. Addington.

"I trouble you with this letter to beg that you will allow me at your leisure to have some conversation with you upon the subject of a private communication I have received from Lord Clive and a paper by which it is accompanied. The contents of this communication have confirmed me in an opinion I have long entertained that it is necessary that an effective control should be established over the affairs of India. The Board at which through your favors I preside is (I am obliged to say) in its present circumstances and condition totally inefficient for the purposes for which it was originally constituted, and unless it be made an integrant part of Government the smallest evil that can occur (unless my views are entirely incorrect) is that India will become a burthen instead of a resource to this Country. Our Indian possessions are of too high an importance to be administered according to the mercantile views and limited conceptions of a body of merchants, however respectable.

"I should think myself deficient in gratitude, and unjust to my own feelings of regard to you, and to the warm wishes by which I am

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

actuated for the success of your administration, if I neglected this opportunity of conveying to you my sentiments with all possible frankness and sincerity, and directing your attention to a point which I consider of the utmost importance to the general interests of the Empire.

"I trust that a small degree of that attention will suffice to convince you that a Cabinet Minister in whom you can place the utmost reliance should be at the head of the Board of Control. India cannot be governed by 24 merchants, controlled by an inefficient and subordinate Board, against whose decisions they may hope for redress by appealing through another channel to the Minister, or even immediately to the Minister himself. If by these few observations (for I purposely avoid encroaching upon your time) I may be able to induce you to turn your mind to the subject I am satisfied.

"No personal view whatever has influenced me in submitting these observations to your notice. The heavy responsibility and arduous duties annexed to the office such as I have presumed to think it ought to be are sufficient to render it by no means an object of my ambition, were my abilities and experience more adequate to the due discharge of its duties, and certainly if it is to remain as now circumstanced the moment when I can quit with honor to myself and without injury to those interests I wish to promote will be no unpleasant moment to me. It is with reluctance I press upon your time, but till I have seen you and know your views I am utterly incapable of returning an answer either to Lord Wellesley or Lord Olive."

1802, March 25. Downing Street.—Letter endorsed Private, from H. Addington to the Earl of Dartmouth.

"My dear Lord,

As I had not a minute's leisure from the time of my receiving your Lordship's letter till midnight, I am sure that you will pardon me for having delayed my answer. I shall be happy to see you at $\frac{1}{2}$ past two o'clock to-morrow, if that time should perfectly suit your convenience. Allow me, however, to take this opportunity of assuring your Lordship that I feel very strongly the manner in which you have done me the honor to express those sentiments towards me which you have uniformly manifested, and that, during the last trying year, few circumstances have been more gratifying to me than the acquisition of what, I trust, I may venture to call your regard and friendship.

With dispositions and sentiments perfectly and cordially reciprocal, I am, my dear Lord, Sincerely and faithfully yours,

HENRY ADDINGTON."

1802, August 5. Fort William.—Letter marked Private, from Marquess Wellesley to the Earl of Dartmouth.

"My dear Lord,

My last private letters to your Lordship were dated on the 7th and 8th of June, since which time I have had the honour to receive your Lordship's private letters of 2nd and 3rd of February, the latest date of any private communication which has reached me from your Lordship.

The official dispatches will apprise you of the dates of the dispatches received by the Governor-General in Council from the Court and Committee, as well as of the general state of affairs in India. I have only to add my private assurances that we now enjoy the most promising state of prosperity, together with perfect tranquillity, and with every appearance of security and continued repose.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

I am anxious to receive instructions respecting the private trade; if your Lordship's commands should not reach me in the course of another week I must proceed to act upon my own judgment, which will induce me to continue without variation the license granted in the last year to the private merchants, under similar restrictions, conformably to the principles stated in my letter to the Court of Directors of the 30th September 1800. I shall hereafter resume the whole subject of the private trade in an official form of discussion, for the purpose of vindicating my conduct and opinions, and I shall then furnish your Lordship with a statement of facts and arguments, which will abundantly satisfy you of the incontrovertible justice of those sentiments in which you have done me the honor to concur with me.

Your Lordship will have anticipated the painful sensations which I must have experienced in receiving the orders of the Court of the 27th of January for the immediate abolition of the College at Fort William. Having endeavoured to explain the various considerations affecting that interesting question in a letter addressed to the Chairman by this dispatch, (No. 1), I shall not trouble your Lordship with any further details on the subject, merely referring you to a copy of my letter to the Chairman now transmitted for your use. I must, however, anxiously request your Lordship to interpose effectually (if it should be necessary) for the restoration of this indispensable institution; I trust you may be able to persuade the Court to concur with you in early measures for this salutary purpose; at all events it is highly desirable that I should receive orders without delay on a question of such delicacy and importance; your Lordship will observe that if your orders should be considerably delayed the institution will expire under my order in Council of the 24th of June. I think it proper to apprise your Lordship (and I leave it to your discretion to use the information as you may think fit) that if the Court should ultimately abolish this institution it is my fixed and unalterable resolution to propose to Parliament immediately after my return to England a law for the restoration of an establishment, which I know to be absolutely requisite for the good government of these possessions. So convinced am I of the necessity of this institution, that I am determined to devote the remainder of my political life to the object of establishing it, as the greatest benefit which can be imparted to the public service in India, and as the best security which can be provided for the welfare of our native subjects. The East India Company can afford the expense of the institution; if, however, this proposition be contested on just grounds, the public ought to indemnify the Company for the amount of the charge. Without such a system of discipline and study in the early education of the Civil Service it will be utterly impossible to maintain our extensive empire in India.

Your Lordship will have received intelligence of the reductions already effected in the military charges at the several Presidencies, and you will find their nature and amount more particularly detailed in my letters by this dispatch. Whatever can be accomplished with safety, justice, and propriety towards a further reduction of the military charges will be attempted by me during my continuance in India; and I trust that your Lordship will never suffer any person to hold the station of Governor General on whom you cannot rely for a just attention to the economy of every branch of the public charges, especially of those in the military department. Peremptory orders from England relative to such details tend to embarrass and degrade the local Government.

Your Lordship will rejoice with me in the prosperous state of the finances of India exhibited by the accompanying statements.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

(No. 2.) The regular official accounts will be forwarded in about a month. I entertain a reasonable hope, that the actual result of the year 1802/3 will be more favourable than the estimate.—1803/4 will certainly prove a year of unexampled prosperity; every branch of the revenue promises improvement, the civil charges will not be augmented, and the military charges may possibly be diminished.

I am at a loss to account for the reasons which have so long delayed in England the confirmation of the treaty of the Carnatic.

Considerable inconvenience and danger has already arisen in consequence of this delay.

Your Lordship has been informed of the death of Ally Hussein; the Government of Fort St. George appears to have employed every precaution for the preservation of his health; but he was of a weakly constitution, and I suppose that the removal of the restraints, to which he was subject during the life of Omdut ool Omrah, have enabled him to indulge in those habits of debauchery, which are said to have destroyed him. He appears to have been ill for some months previous to his decease, and to have refused the medical aid offered to him by Lord Clive. A report has been circulated that Ally Hussein has left his wife pregnant; it is also said that he has bequeathed the Carnatic to one of Omdut ool Omrah's brothers, in whose apartments he latterly resided. Your Lordship will feel the necessity of precluding the mischief of all such rumours. I am concerned to say that the Government of Fort St. George is at present reduced to an alarming state of inefficiency and disunion, the necessary effect of the late measures adopted by the Court of Directors against Lord Clive's administration. That Government has absolutely escaped from my hands; nor can I be responsible for its conduct, untill the authority of an adequate Governor of Fort St. George, and my own authority also shall be restored without reservation at that distracted settlement. On this subject I have the honour to transmit an extract of a letter (No. 3) which will afford your Lordship a strange but true picture of the state of Fort St. George.

I expect hourly your Lordship's approbation of the treaty of Oude. The ceded Provinces continue in a state of perfect tranquillity. My brother Henry expects to be able to conclude a triennial settlement of the Land Revenue in a few weeks, and then proposes to quit the Government, as soon as I can introduce a proper police into the country.

By a newspaper which has accidentally reached me I perceive with pleasure that the Court of Directors has appointed Mr. Barlow to the provisional succession of the Government General; although in my letter to the Chairman I have not adverted to the possibility of my continuance in India beyond the month of January 1803, I wish your Lordship to understand, that no change has taken place in my sentiments since the date of my letters of the 13th March 1802, to your Lordship, and to Mr. Addington; my intention is to abide by the result of the reference stated in those letters to His Majesty's Ministers. Your Lordship, however, will feel, that the injury which my authority has suffered by the abolition of the College, and by other obvious circumstances in the late dispatches from the Court, must encrease my anxiety to receive the fullest and most unequivocal assurances of support from His Majesty's Ministers, as the only possible security for the due discharge of my functions in this Government. Any want of this support must at once compell me to deliver over my charge to Mr.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

Barlow. I have the honor to be with great regard and esteem, my dear Lord, your most faithful and obedient servant,

WELLESLEY.

Your Lordship may be assured that I will not fail to pay every practicable degree of attention to your recommendations lately received, of which I shall return an acknowledgment by the ship Cornet now under dispatch. I request your Lordship's attention to a copy of a very able letter from Mr. Webbe (No. 4) on the subject of the study of the Oriental languages at Fort St. George.

W.

I request your Lordship to furnish my brother, Mr. Pole, Mr. Dundas, and Mr. Pitt and Mr. D. Scott with copies of my letter to the Chairman on the subject of the College. Mr. Addington, I conclude, will see it officially; but I apprehend that the Court may be disposed to bury it in the abyss of Leadenhall Street. I also am anxious that the same persons should see the statements of account now transmitted. I propose to send one copy of them to Mr. Dundas.

W.

August 12.

I enclose the Gazette extraordinary of yesterday, containing the intelligence of the dreadful misfortune which had happened with regard to the Persian Embassy at Bombay; it is not possible to describe the horror and affliction with which this disaster has filled my mind. I trust, however, that I shall be able to succeed in convincing the Court of Persia that this calamity has arisen from circumstances which the British Government could neither have foreseen nor prevented. For this purpose I have ordered Major John Malcolm, so much distinguished by his successful Embassy to Persia, to proceed to Bombay, under instructions, which will enable him to apply his knowledge of the temper and manners of the Court of Persia, and his influence with the individuals of that nation to the actual state of affairs on his arrival at Bombay. I also propose to despatch immediately to Bushire, Mr. Lovett, a young gentleman of considerable talents, and intimately acquainted with the Persian language, for the purpose of forwarding the necessary communications to his Persian Majesty, and eventually of proceeding to the Court of Persia.

W."

A copy of the Calcutta Gazette Extraordinary, of Wednesday, Aug. 11th, 1802 is enclosed.

1803, November 8. Fort William.—Letter marked (Duplicate) and Private, from Marquess Wellesley to the Earl of Dartmouth.

"It is my intention to transmit to his Majesty by the Belle Packet which is now under despatch, a detailed narrative of the late transactions which have occurred in the Mahratta Empire, and of the military operations which have been directed against the power and resources of the confederate Mahratta chieftains, Doulut Row Scindiah and the Rajah of Berar with their French officers and artillery. I am extremely anxious however, that no despatch should leave this country, without conveying to his Majesty some authentic information on this interesting topic, and request that your Lordship will have the goodness to submit to his Majesty's notice the enclosed printed copies of the Official Gazettes which have been published under my authority at Fort William since the commencement of hostilities, together with the dutiful expression of my congratulations on the signal success which has distinguished the progress of the British arms in every quarter of India during the present contest."

"P.S.—As the communication proposed to be made to his Majesty is not of an official nature, it appeared to me that your Lordship's high station near his Majesty's person would enable you to make it with propriety, and I flattered myself that your Lordship would not object to my request on such an occasion. My memorial to his Majesty in a more regular form, containing the details of our glorious success will be transmitted through Mr. Addington, Lord Hobart, or Lord Castlereagh.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

W."

1804, March 30. 66, Berwick Street.—Letter endorsed "Mirza Aboo Taleb Khan, in answer to a letter conveying 200*l.* to him on the part of Government."

"Mirza Aboo Taleb Khan feels himself highly flattered by the note just received from the President of the Board of Control and is exceedingly sensible of the condescension of the British Government in the proof it contains, of their hospitality to a stranger, whose strongest wish, upon leaving this country, will be to return to it, as the happiest existing.

His prayers shall ever continue for its prosperity."

(Impression of seal.)

1805, September 6. Downing Street.—Lord Mulgrave to the Earl of Dartmouth. Offers him the Embassy at St. Petersburg. Draft reply declining the offer is annexed.

1805, November 13. Whitehall.—Lord Hawkesbury to the Earl of Dartmouth. To arrange for Lord Nelson's funeral.

1805, November 14. Lord Chamberlain's Office.—John Hale to the Earl of Dartmouth. On the same subject.

1806.—Correspondence relating to the arrangements for the trial of Viscount Melville in Westminster Hall, with a copy of precedents on the trials of Elizabeth Duchess of Kingston in 1776 and of Warren Hastings in 1787.

1806, June 6.—Oath of the Earl of Dartmouth as Lord Chamberlain of His Majesty's Household, and list of fees payable to the Privy Council.

1806 and 1807.—Letters and papers addressed to the Earl of Dartmouth in his capacity as Lord High Chamberlain by the Treasury and by owners of theatres and the opera house: including letters from Mr. Astley, Mr. Thomas Sheridan, Mr. W. Taylor, Colonel H. F. Greville.

Also papers relating to the establishment of the Royal Household, and the net salaries thereof, and the Lord Chamberlain's salary.

Among the papers after 1800 are many family letters and papers both on legal and private matters, pieces of poetry, &c. including a bundle of letters between 1802 and 1822 from the Rev. John Till, of Hayes, to William Viscount Lewisham and Earl of Dartmouth on general subjects, and letters from or to John Wheelock, LL.D., President of Dartmouth College in America (1802), H. Brougham (1820), Sir Vicary Gibbs, Lord Chief Justice (1814), Lord Athenry (1828, on the Athenry Peerage and the Earl of Dartmouth's connection therewith), Robert H. Inglis (1843), and others.

III.—"LETTERS of GEORGE III. and of ROYAL PRINCES and PRINCESSES, &c. 1773-1808."

1773, April 6. Queen's House, 10 m. past 4 p.m.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. "Lord Dartmouth, I cannot

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

return the account of the total reduction of the Charibbs without just expressing to you the pleasure I feel at these poor deluded people having submitted to what enables their being kept on the island, and consequently has removed the idea which though necessity might have approved, would have always been most grievous to my mind."

1773, July 17. St. James's.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. "Lord Dartmouth, I return the letter you communicated sometime since to me; it contains many very useful lessons to a young man, but I could have wished that the author had put before his young friend the only true insentative (incentive) to a rectitude of conduct, I mean the belief in a Supreme Being and that we are to be rewarded or punished agreeably to the lives we lead; if the first of all duties, that to God, is not known, I fear no other can be expected, and as to the fashionable word honour that never will alone guide a man farther than to preserve appearances. I will not add more for I know I am writing to a true believer, one who shews by his actions that he is not governed by the greatest of tyrants, Fashion."

1774, Feb. 5. 9.30 a.m. Queen's House.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. "Lord Dartmouth, No one that claims the common feelings of humanity can read Governor Tryon's letter to Lord Hyde without an ardent wish to alleviate the misfortunes that have befallen him, but when his resignation is attended to that makes his religious sentiments appear in their just light, that it greatly encreases my inclination to be of use to him; I desire you will communicate his letter to Lord North, and consider whether by the packet some comfort cannot be sent to him in his present very melancholy situation."

1774, March 7. 8 m. past 11 a.m. Queen's House.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. Returning messages to the two Houses. Is glad Lord North has waived his opinion as to the Bill for rendering perpetual the mode of deciding controverted elections in deference to the manifest desire of the House of Commons.

1774, March 10. — m. past 6 p.m. Queen's House.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. Approves the steps taken by Sir Adolphus Oughton to secure the Chair of Moral Philosophy of Edinburgh University for Dr. Beattie. The application of Mr. Daines Barrington for a salary for a person to collect Natural History (specimens) for the King of Spain His Majesty thinks unreasonable. (See Mr. Daines Barrington's letter of March 2, 1774, above.)

1774, March 27. 46 m. past 9 a.m. Queen's House.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. "Lord Dartmouth, The reason of my detaining from Friday evening to this morning the box containing Governor Leybourne's letter of the 14th of January with the court martial on Major Maxwell of the 6th Regt. of Foot arose from the delicacy of the nature of the dispute; the validity of Governor Leybourne's Commission, and of Mr. Morris's as Lieutenant-Governor, are undoubted, but doubts may very naturally arise of what power Governor Leybourne has to delegate such ample authority to Mr. Sharpe over the military by his own appointment, as of course Lieutenant-Governor Morris is invested with in consequence of my sign manual, therefore previous to any decision on this delicate subject you must examine by what authority Governor Leybourne has appointed a temporary Lieutenant-Governor with such full powers whilst he himself is resident in any of the islands that compose his Government. The warrant to the President of Council to which Mr. Sharpe refers as an authority for taking the command over the military : also any instructions from the Secretary of State to the Governor of the Charibbee Islands relative to the Military.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

The reason of my wishing to see this maturely examined is that perhaps the honour, life, and commission of officers may be at stake, and therefore ought not to be lightly decided upon."

1774, April 8. 25 m. past 4 p.m. Queen's House.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. "I am sorry to find the miserable Crab Island is likely to occasion some unpleasant conversation with the Court of Spain."

1774, April 9. Queen's House, 46 m. past 4 p.m.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. "Lord Dartmouth, I am sorry to find by the very able letter you have received from Governor Hutchinson that the minds seem to ferment impossible* (sic) more in his Province than I expected; I shall take no notice of having seen it. He ought to receive through the hands of Lieutenant-General Gage an answer to it and some comfortable expressions that may make his mind easy that he is not discarded, and will receive marks of favour."

1774, Oct. 4. Kew.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. Very much approves of the steps taken at the Cabinet meeting held on the previous night at Lord North's. Recommends the addition of a couple of regiments of Infantry (the 49th and 63rd), to the Marines to be sent to America.

1774, Oct. 5. Kew.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. Congratulating him in his own and the Queen's name upon the safe delivery of Lady Dartmouth of a daughter.

1774, Oct. 10. Kew.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. As to a letter received from Mr. Hutchinson. "There is great candour in the dispatch to General Gage, but I should imagine an additional paragraph assuring him that, though the conflict is unpleasant, Great Britain cannot retract, might do good as it [would] give him resolution, and without it I should fear he would think there was some wavering which the present moment I am sure cannot allow to be the case with the most gentle minds."

1774, Dec. 15. Queen's House.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. "Lord Dartmouth, nothing can be more provoking than the conduct of the inhabitants of Massachusetts Bay; some measures must undoubtedly be adopted after Christmas to curb them, and by degrees bring them to a due obedience to the mother country, but reason not passion must point out the proper measures."

1775, Feb. 28. Queen's House.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. "Lord Dartmouth, I am infinitely happy at the receipt of the very comfortable appearance of temper in the Assembly of New York, which if it continues must greatly tend to bring the other Provinces to their senses: perhaps this account may change the opinion of Governor Tryon, and incline him to look on an immediate return to New York as the surest means of recovering his health, as it would certainly be attended with the return of the Colony to a due sense of deference to her Mother Country."

1775, May 20. Kew.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. "Lord Dartmouth, how far the proposal of the Admiralty for withdrawing the sailors and marines from the Block House on the coast

* Should read "if possible."

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

of Labrador may be proper in future deserves consideration; but whilst the disturbances continue in America every means must be taken to encrease the forces under Lieutenant-General Gage, consequently no change can be admitted at present that would occasion the detaching men for garrisoning that fort."

1775, May 29. 40 m. past 4 p.m. Kew.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. "Lord Dartmouth, it is not improbable but some detachment sent by Lieutenant-General Gage may not have been strong enough to disperse the Provincials assembled at Concord; but no great reliance can be given to the manner in which it will undoubtedly be exaggerated in American news papers, or when related by an American trader."

1775, May 29. 37 m. past 8 p.m. Kew.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. "Lord Dartmouth, by the newspaper you have transmitted, which undoubtedly was drawn up with the intention of painting the skirmish at Concord in as favourable a light as possible for the insurgents, I am far from thinking the General has reason to be displeased; the object of sending the detachment was to spike cannons and destroy military stores, this has been effected, but with the loss of an equal number of men on both sides; the dye is cast. I therefore hope you will not see this in a stronger light than it deserves. As to Mr. Pownall's expression of bad news it shews he is more fit for expediting the directions of others than he would have been for a military department or giving advice where firmness is required."

1775, June 29.—Unaddressed letter from the King, with the above date endorsed upon it. "The King trusts that General Gage, having received before this time a reinforcement of seven regiments of infantry and one of cavalry, which will make the army at Boston amount at least to 8,000 men, will not be within that town, and will have destroyed any works thrown up by the rebels in the neighbourhood of it.

"If the General on consulting the able Generals sent to his assistance, is of opinion that, with the force now under his command he cannot advance farther into the country, he ought to weigh whether the defence of Boston cannot be effected with detaching one of the Generals with a suitable force to retake possession of New York.

"The General ought to send over his ideas as to the best mode of conducting warlike operations next summer and the force that will be required, for it is impossible to send him any succour early enough to be of utility this season."

1775, July 17. 2 m. past 1 p.m. Kew.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. "Lord Dartmouth, I am much pleased with the despatches from Lieutenant-General Gage, as they are fuller than any before received from him; it will be necessary to send an additional number of arms, accoutrements, and cloathing for Canadians; as the rebels have got Indians to their assistance, we must make use of the same desperate weapons."

1775, July 17. 30 m. past 5 p.m. Kew.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. Asking him to consider whether a larger quantity of arms, accoutrements, and clothing cannot be sent to Canada. Expects a reply when he sees him on Wednesday.

1775, July 21. Kew. 36 m. past 4 p.m.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. "Lord Dartmouth, the letter received from Governor Wanton shews what men of sense, and those not entirely guided by their passions, think in America; the other letters as clearly point the heat of the rest; but the difficulties many of the Colonies will suffer the next winter, and the force that will act the next campaign will, I trust, bring them to soberer thoughts."

1776.—Unaddressed letter from the King to the Earl of Dartmouth. "My dear Lord, I hope you are too well acquainted with the feelings of my heart to doubt in the least of the pleasure I feel, when I can with propriety save the life of any miserable wretch, but I must not let myself from sensations that ought ever to reside in the breast of man, to fall into a most improper evil, the preventing the execution of the laws without some real ground for the interposition of the most agreeable feather of the Prerogative of the Crown. Burglaries daily encrease, they are the most alarming of all robberies; these, and highway robberies call at present very strongly for a very exact execution of the laws, and the sending a reprieve within a couple of hours of the time of execution is never done but on some strong appearance of some new point from whence perhaps the innocence of the prisoner can be presumed. I therefore must decline preventing the law to take its course."

1779, Feb. 6. Queen's House.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. As to an anonymous letter received by Lord Dartmouth. "Undoubtedly the unfortunate court martial is big with mischief, and as I owe I foresaw will end in nothing but creating that degree of faction in the Fleet which perhaps may never again be eradicated."

1779, Mar. 22. Queen's House.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Apprising him of the intended appointment of Lieutenant Legge of the 10th Dragoons, to be Captain Lieutenant of Major-General Manners' Regiment of Light Dragoons.

1780, April 15. 46 m. past 7 a.m. Queen's House.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. "Lord Dartmouth is ever an early man, therefore may with the less impropriety be sent to at an unfashionable hour; I desire he will therefore as soon as convenient take his walk to this place this morning."

1780, Dec. 23. Windsor Castle.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. "Lord Dartmouth will easily conceive that the hour when I take my eldest son out of the hands of his governor must be an arduous one to me; I see the various rocks that surround every young man in this thoughtless and dissolute century. I therefore have had no views in forming his family but to collect men of good private characters, and have not permitted politicks or arrangements to come across me; I have as much as possible found men not in the height of youth; one young man would be an exception to my rule, but that I could only make for the son of the excellent man to whom I am writing. I am certain his sons must have been bred up in the school of virtue and decorum, as such I venture to think of your second son Mr. Legge for one of his Grooms of the Bedchamber, that will be an office of trust and some attendance, but I think I shall not be disappointed in my choice; the Duke of Montagu has told me that it would be agreeable to you, if that is the case I desire he may be in town time enough to be presented on Friday the 29th.
GEORGE R."

1781, June 4. St. James's.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Regrets to hear of his illness.

1781, Aug. 3. Kew.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enquiring after his health.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1781, Sept. 1. Windsor.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Is glad to hear that the sea air has restored his health.

1782, Feb. 28. Queen's House.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Hopes a few days absence from town may complete his recovery.

1782, March 27. The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. "Lord Dartmouth, Though I have directed Lord North this morning to acquaint all the Cabinet that they must come and resign their respective offices before the levee this day, as I think it would make an odd medley to see some there kissing hands whilst others are to resign, therefore that I shall if possible be at St. James's before one for that melancholy purpose, I owne I could not let Lord Dartmouth hear this without writing him a few lines to avow how very near he will always be to my heart, and that I have ever esteemed him since I have thoroughly known him in another light than any of his companions in Ministry.

What days has it pleased the Almighty to place me in when Lord Dartmouth can be a man to be removed but at his own request, but I cannot complain, I adore the will of Providence, and will ever resign obediently to His will. My heart is too full to add more.

GEORGE R."

1783, March 31. Queen's House.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Announcing that his son Major Legge has been appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of the 88th Regiment of foot.

1783, Nov. 14. Queen's House. The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. "Lord Dartmouth will, I trust, receive this model in wax of a much loved departed child as a mark of my esteem and affection which the conviction of the worth of the hands in which I am placing it inspires. I owne every hour encreases the chasm I feel for want of that dear object, but this is accompanied with the joyful conviction that however strongly my loss weighs upon me, it has secured his happiness.

GEORGE R."

1783, Nov. 16. Carlton, Sunday night.—The Prince of Wales to the Honourable William Legge. "My dearest Legge, I cannot express to you what I feel at the disagreeable and painful necessity we are under at being separated.

Indeed, my dearest friend, I was happy to get our parting as expeditiously over as possible, but I could not bear the thoughts of your leaving me for so long time, without your knowing what my sentiments were respecting yourself. Believe me, my dear Legge, from the first of my acquaintance with you, you have hourly endeared yourself to me by your engaging and sweet manner which will ever make you beloved and distinguished wherever you go. Greatly should I feel your loss at any time, but most especially at this time as I am also deprived [of] our mutual friend St. Leger, there is no one to whom I could unbosom myself with more satisfaction, or trust the most secret thought of my heart with greater delight than to you. But I should feel much more on the present occasion did I not look forward with eagerness and impatience to the pleasant moment when we shall meet again, and which I sincerely hope is not far distant. Your kindness, attention, and affection to me upon every occasion demand the warmest and most grateful thanks from me, and beleive me the whole of your conduct throughout the whole time of my acquaintance with you can never be obliterated from my heart. Adieu mon très cher ami, croyez moi toujours votre très affectionné ami,

GEORGE P."

"P.S.—Pray excuse this blotted and interlined scrawl, 'tis entirely owing to the hurry in which I write to you. I send you inclosed for St. Leger."

1801, Sept. 22. Castle Hill Lodge, Middlesex.—"Private." Edward Duke of Kent to the Earl of Dartmouth. Asking a cadetship in the Indian Army for Mr. Watson.

1801, Sept. 24. Castle Hill Lodge.—The Duke of Kent to the Earl of Dartmouth. Thanking him for procuring the cadetship for Mr. Watson.

1801, Sept. 29. Castle Hill Lodge.—The Duke of Kent to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to the appointment of Mr. Watson to a cadetship in India, and choosing the Bengal Establishment, upon which it is to be granted.

1801, Nov. 16. Castle Hill Lodge.—The Duke of Kent to the Earl of Dartmouth. Asking for a cadetship for Mr. Straton, the son of an officer who served for many years under the Duke's command in America.

1801, Dec. 23. Kensington Palace.—The Duke of Kent to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to a young man for whom Lord Dartmouth had failed to obtain a cadetship upon the Duke's recommendation.

1802, Jan. 23. Kensington Palace.—The Duke of Kent to the Earl of Dartmouth. Asking for a cadetship in Bengal for Mr. Emmerson.

1802, Feb. 2. 33 Green Street, Park Lane.—The same to the same. On the same subject as the foregoing.

1802, Dec. 8. Bushy House.—The Duke of Clarence to the Earl of Dartmouth. Enclosing a petition from the Duke of Cambridge's house-keeper.

1803, July 14.—Princess Elizabeth to the Earl of Dartmouth. Asking a post for a young man named Hopkins.

1803, July 28. St. James's.—The Duke of Cumberland to the Earl of Dartmouth. In answer to a letter from him, the subject of which does not transpire.

1804, May 14. Queen's Palace.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. "The King acquaints the Earl of Dartmouth, his much esteemed and truly beloved Lord Chamberlain, that the Marquess of Bath has in the handsomest manner declined accepting the office of Lord Steward; this enables His Majesty to authorise the Earl of Dartmouth to write to the Earl of Aylesford, to acquaint him that he need not come to town till the Countess of Aylesford* is safely delivered of a twentieth child, though the King rather hopes two will be produced, not unfrequent in that branch of the Finch family; indeed, the more the better if like the parents in virtue, honour, and attachment to the true Church and to the King, whose attachment to the Established Church can never end but with his life.

"GEORGE R."

1805, Feb. 9. Kensington Palace.—The Duke of Kent to the Earl of Dartmouth. Asking his good offices on behalf of Mrs. Reynett, the wife of a clergyman.

* Bath, in original.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.

1805, Feb. 21. Queen's Palace.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. "The King has roughly drawn up the salaries of the proposed establishment for Princess Charlotte to which the salaries of the servants are to be added and such additional ones as the Earl of Dartmouth may think absolutely necessary on conversing with Lady de Clifford, of which the King will desire to have a written account when the Earl of Dartmouth has properly digested it; it will be proper to have a state of the annual expence that has as yet been incurred; Gray the young Princesses' servant out of livery can probably procure the necessary information. GEORGE R."

Enclosing a list of salaries and appointments.

1805, April 1. Windsor Castle.—The King to the Earl of Dartmouth. Holograph. On the question of an application by Lord Aylesford, Lord Steward of the Household, for the right to the boxes under the gallery in St George's Hall. The boxes were also claimed by the Lord Chamberlain. His Majesty writes that the right to the boxes is in the Lord Chamberlain.

1805, April 17. Wednesday.—The Princess of Wales to the Earl of Dartmouth. Asking him to give the vacant apartments at Hampton Court Palace to "old Mrs. Cholmondy." Signed "C.P."

1805, Aug. 26. Weymouth.—Lord Hawkesbury to the Earl of Dartmouth. Announcing the death of the Duke of Gloucester, and enclosing an order containing the King's wishes as to the funeral.

1805, Aug. 29. Weymouth.—The Duke of York to General Culvert. As to the funeral of the Duke of Gloucester at Windsor. Enclosed are letters dated Aug. 26 and 29, 1805, from Lord Hawkesbury to Lord Dartmouth on the same matter.

1805, Oct. 7. Kensington Palace.—The Duke of Kent to the Earl of Dartmouth. Recommending his domestic chaplain the Rev. J. Wetherall to succeed Dr. Thompson, the late Palace chaplain.

1805, Oct. 10. Kensington Palace.—The Duke of Kent to the Earl of Dartmouth. Thanking him for the appointment of Mr. Wetherall to be Palace chaplain.

1805, Oct. 14. Kew House.—The Princess Mary to the Earl of Dartmouth. Asking for his interest to procure the post of organist of Greenwich Chapel for the son of Mr. Relfe late organist, who has just died leaving his family in very distressed circumstances. "I cannot put up this letter before I add, what I am sure will make it more acceptable, that our adored King is in perfect health; as to his eyes they certainly are not worse than when you saw him at Weymouth, indeed we flatter ourselves some days they are better. His patience and resignation under so severe a calamity is a striking proof of his angellic disposition and a striking lesson to all around him."

1805, Oct. 18.—Princess Mary to the Earl of Dartmouth. Thanking him for granting a request she made him.

1805, Oct. 24. St. James's.—The Duke of Cambridge to the Earl of Dartmouth. Asking him to appoint Mrs. Jane Williams as house keeper to one of the Palaces.

1805, Dec. 22.—The Princess Sophia to the Earl of Dartmouth. Congratulating him upon the approaching marriage of his daughter Lady Louisa Legge with Lord Bagot.

1806, Dec. 22. Windsor.—The Duke of Cambridge to the Earl of Dartmouth. Congratulating him upon the coming marriage of his daughter.

1807. Paper endorsed. "Receipts and expenditure of the Establishment of Her Royal Highness the Princess Charlotte from Feb. 1, 1805, to April 6, 1807." A similar account from April 6th 1808 to April 5th 1809.

1807, May 20. Luton Park.—Louis Philippe Duc D'Orléans to the Earl of Dartmouth. "The honour we have of being related to his Majesty makes it a duty for me to inform the King of the death of my brother [the Duc de Montpensier]. I hope therefore that your Lordship will have the goodness of presenting the inclosed to his Majesty and that the circumstances in which we are at present will be my apology, should I have failed in making this melancholy communication with all the forms of which I am ignorant."

1807. Queen's House.—Princess Amelia to the Earl of Dartmouth. For a situation for an old servant of the Queen.

1808, Mar. 9. Downing Street.—Spencer Perceval to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to the proposed alterations in the Banqueting room at Whitehall of which the King has expressed his approbation.

1808.—Princess Amelia to the Earl of Dartmouth. Thanking him for his promise to use his influence to procure an appointment for one Griesbach to be Musician in Ordinary to the King.

1820, May 6. 64 Jermyn Street.—E. H. Locker to the Earl of Dartmouth. As to some of King George's letters which he wished to publish.

IV.—MISCELLANEOUS.

N.D.—Paper headed "An accompt of the charges of the journey from Sandwell to Oxford and of my Lord Lewisham's and Mr. Legge's settling in the University."

"Coach hire from Warrwick to Oxon, 4*l.* 18*s.* To Sir Charles Holt's coachman, postillon and groom, 1*l.* 0*s.* 6*d.* At the George on the Tree, 6*s.* At Warwick, 3*l.* 6*s.* At Kenton, 5*s.* 6*d.* At Banbury, 1*l.* 7*s.* At Middleton Stony, 6*s.* To the manciple and servants belonging to Magdalen College, 4*l.* 15*s.* To the President's man, 2*l.* 2*s.* Matriculation, 8*l.* 11*s.* To the Vice Chancellor's man, 1*l.* 1*s.* Caution money, 40*l.* Instead of a treat in the Hall, 10*l.* To the University Bellingers and Waits, 10*s.* Given at the Library, Museum, &c., 15*s.* 6*d.* Admittance in the Comon Room, 7*l.* 3*s.* A dozen of wine the first time the gentlemen dined in the Hall, 1*l.* To the waiters at the High Table, 10*s.* To the sexton and beadle of St Mary's, to Mr. Holt's man, 10*s.* 6*d.* To the porter of the College, 2*s.* 6*d.* For two night gowns, 7*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* For two every day gowns, 18*l.* Brocade and silk for lining, 51*l.* 13*s.* Making the best gowns, buckram, silk, &c., 3*l.* 5*s.* 6*d.* Nine dozen of gold loops, 3*l.* 10*s.* per doz., 31*l.* 10*s.* Upholsterer's bill, 14*l.* 4*s.* 10*d.* For two capps, 2*l.* For a bob wigg, 1*l.* 1*s.* For two dozen of bands, 1*l.* 10*s.* . . . A journey to Blenheim, 1*l.* 2*s.* 6*d.* Expenses at the Angel Inn, 6*l.* 10*s.* 7*d.* For my lodgings, 15*s.* . . . The total amount is 241*l.* 16*s.* At the end is "The tutor is to have 20 guineas a year for each of the gentlemen. The necessary woman four pounds a year for each. The lodgings 20*l.* a year." The date of the writing is probably the beginning of the last century.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MSS.
—

1686. Frankfort. Printed fly sheet in German, headed, "Neu und wundersame Erfindung eines Kupfernen Mörsels, welcher, vermittels des windes, so grosse Bomben wirfft, dass man darein 25 mann verstecken und selbige ohne schaden in eine feindliche stadt oder Festung werfen kan, auf die probe gesetzt und erfunden, durch den weltberuffenen Ingenieur Mustaphato Salicio, der zeit renegaten." The account is illustrated with four woodcuts, showing the men entering the shell, the loading of the gun therewith, filling the shell with air and firing the gun, and the arrival of the shell in the ramparts of the enemy's stronghold showing the inmates emerging.

[1685-88?] July 8. From the Fleet prison.—H. (endorsed Captain) Wycherley.

"I am now the most unhappy man living, my wife being lately dead, and I frustrated of all my expectations from her estate unless I can prevail by your lordship's interest with some one in Ireland who has the honour to be employed by your lordship to keep possession for me of an estate in Dublin, of which she has levied fines to my use, so that if I had any friend there I could be sure of I might secure that estate; but if that be not to be done, I am the most miserable man in the world, and cannot secure myself of a friend in the world, unless your lordship's great generosity and goodness shall take pity on a man eternally lost in the world since frustrated of my only hopes in the world, if your lordship can think of any agent you have in Ireland, perhaps by his means I may prevent my total ruin."

1704. "A full and impartial relation of the battle fought on the 13th of August 1704 N.S. in the plain of Höchstette between the villages of Pleintheim, Overklauw, and Lutzingen."

N.D.—Paper endorsed "Narrative concerning Capt. Anson's Squadron, in a letter from Capt. Legge of the Severn." The squadron under Capt. Anson consisted of the Centurion, 60 guns, the Gloucester, 60 guns, Severn, 50 guns, Pearl, 40 guns, Wager, 20 guns, Tryal, 8 guns.

1759, March 22. Plaistow.—The Rev. Dr. William Dodd to the Earl of Dartmouth. Upon a report that his Lordship was about to take Holy Orders.

1772, October 9. Cranston, near Edinburgh. — Sir John Dalrymple to the Earl of Dartmouth. "The circumstances of King James being advised to seize Lord Dartmouth I found in King James's Memoirs at Paris, it must have been a trick of the Whigs around him, in order to deprive him of one of his steadiest friends. I observe the expression I have used, and which your Lordship takes notice of, implies a very different thing; I am vexed at it, but shall set it right in this new edition.

"The note at the bottom of page 223 about Lord Dartmouth's shifting his station from the east of the Galloper contains I have reason to believe the very words of King James I did not compare the particular words upon that article, but they were copied in his note* as the very words of King James, and I am sure the substance is right. I dare say Lord Dartmouth had very good reasons for the alterations he made, and I shall say so. The circumstance of Lord Dartmouth's agreeing to carry over the young Prince I found in a manuscript of the Scotch College at Paris, called the Life of King James, said to have been written by Mr. Caryll, his secretary, in five quarto volumes.

* Principal Gordon of the Scottish College at Paris, who had made some researches for Sir J. Dalrymple.

"I shall be very glad that your Lordship's papers set me right on that head.

"With regard to Lord Dartmouth's intrigues with St. Germain, the fact is beyond doubt. Lord Hardwicke, who has seen the late Mr. Curtis' extracts from King James's Memoirs and other papers, can I believe satisfy your Lordship that I have done him no injustice in that respect.

"The circumstance of King William's giving the honours of war to Lord Dartmouth's body I found in Collins' peerage and I fancy also in the Gazette. The thing tallies very well with King William's heroism, for from many papers I have seen he respected most those who were most attached to a master who had obliged them.

"Lord Hardwicke gave me a manuscript called Memoirs of Lord Torrington, which imputed Lord Dartmouth's submission to the Prince of Orange upon his coming to London to selfish views, but the book (though written by one who seemed to know secrets) not being authenticated, and not believing the imputation, I took no notice of it.

"I beg your Lordship will honour me with the papers you are so good as to mention as soon as is convenient for you."

1763, Oct. 7. S. James's.—Royal Proclamation limiting and bounding the Provinces of Quebec, East Florida, West Florida and Grenada, and annexing divers islands to the Governments of Newfoundland and Nova Scotia.

1781.—Plan of Birmingham.

1783, April 25.—Dr. Johnson to the Earl of Dartmouth. "My Lord, The bearer, Mr. Desmoulins, has persuaded himself that some testimonial from me will be useful to him in his application to your Lordship, and I hope that what I yield merely to his importunity will not be imputed to any vain conceit of my own importance.

He desires indeed nothing to be said but what is true; that he is not in difficulties by his own fault; that he has a brother and sister in great distress, and that if he should by your Lordship's favour now obtain any little employment, he will, I hope, do the business faithfully, and use the income properly. I am, my Lord, your Lordship's most obedient and most humble servant, SAM. JOHNSON."

1797, June 6. "Le Pompée at sea."—"An address of the well disposed part of the company of His Majesty's Ship Pompée to their brother seamen and the nation at large." Printed. Relating to a mutiny of part of the crew of the vessel.

1801, June 1. East India House.—Printed letter from the Executive Committee of the East India Company to the Proprietors of the Stock with reference to the renewal of the charter and the question of whether the Indian trade shall be carried on exclusively by the Company's ships.

1801, Dec. 1.—Printed paper endorsed "Proposal for the more easy transfer of the Company's debts in India to Great Britain." Relating to the East India Company.

N.D. (after 1801).—Bulky paper headed "Remarks on the Indian Expences with an estimate of a peace establishment."

1802.—Paper endorsed, "Substance of Speech," being notes of the Earl of Dartmouth's reply to the Earl of Suffolk in the House of Lords upon the affairs of the Carnatic.

EARL OF
DARTMOUTH'S
MESS.
—

1806, March 17. London.—Address signed by Sir Benjamin West, Richard Westall, J. S. Copley, J. Opie, H. Thompson, James Northcote, William Owen, Sir Thomas Lawrence, Robert Smirke, Joseph Nollekens, and Charles Rossi, to the Earl of Dartmouth, President, and the rest of the noblemen and gentlemen of the Honourable Committee of Directors of the British Institution for promoting the Fine Arts in the United Kingdom, requesting that the exhibition of pictures at the British Institution may remain open concurrently with the Royal Academy, instead of being prematurely closed.

1806, April 5. Palace Yard.—William Wilberforce to the Earl of Dartmouth. Asking him to become Vice-President of the Society for supplying the Army and Navy with Bibles and Testaments.

INDEX.

A.

- Abbeville:
robbery of mail near; 315.
M. d'. See Albeville.
- Abbot, Samuel, of Boston, New England; 342.
- Abercrombie, grenadiers at Charlestown under; 380.
- Aberdeen:
letter dated at; 367.
Earl of (1774), proposed as a representative peer; 369.
- Abingdon, Earl of (1685), letter of; 125.
- Aboyne, Lord (1774), speech of; 370.
- Academy, Royal, address concerning; 448.
- Acton, letters dated at; 292, 293.
- Adair, Surgeon-General; 381.
- Adams:
Samuel, of Boston, New England; 342.
William, of Titchfield, a gunner; 120.
- Addams, Lient. James, at Tangier; 109.
- Addington, Henry, letters of and to; 425, 426, 432, 433.
- Adenbroke, Mr., curate of West Bromwich; 295.
- Admiralty, the; 86, 89, 108, 139, et seq., 294.
See Pepys, Samuel. kept in ignorance of the Tangier expedition; 93.
- Advertiser, the Daily; 340.
- Africa:
gum trade in; 338.
French trading company in; 338.
forts on coast of; 397.
Company, the, and the negro traffic; 26, 68.
- Age, the Iron, book called; 5.
- Air ..., Dom^{co}, of Tangier; 96.
- Ailesbury, Earl of:
(1688); 239.
(1684), letter of; 120.
sent to James II.; 231.
with James II.; 242.
(1711), his son; 309.
- Aire:
siege of; 299.
surrender of; 302.
- Akarman, Captain; 153.
- Albemarle, Duke of:
(1661); 4.
(1666), list of the navy under; 15.
(1680); 53.
(1681); 70.
letter of; 124.
(1685-86), letters of; 128, 131.
(1688), his death; 217, 228.
as Governor of Jamaica; 239.
- Albeville, Marquis d'; 144, 146, 151, 175.
extracts from letters of; 176-183, passim, 201, 255, 263.
- Albury, Lord Aylesford's death at; 325.
- Alcasar:
governor of; 77.
the Alcaid of; 319, 320.
— Col. Kirke's negotiations with; 90-92.
- Aldworth, Mr.; 78.
- Algiers; 7.
pirates, expedition against; 17-19.
ships of, taken; 68.
corsairs; 105.
bombardment of; 161.
- Ali Benabdala, the Alcade, his correspondence with Lord Dartmouth; 110.
- Alcant; 106.
fortifications of; 7.
Road; 17.
— letter dated from; 19.
- Alice Holt forest; 25.
- Alikmare; 4.
- Alington, Lord:
constable of the Tower; 76.
letter of; 86.
- Allen:
Mr., lease to; 326.
Sir Thomas; 290.
— admiral, squadron under; 15.
— his journal in the Resolution; 16-19.
— Spragge's complaint against; 19.
- Alline, Capt. Thomas; 75.
- Allmarca bay; 107.
- Ally Houssein, death of; 435.
- Alsmore, John, at Tangier, report by; 61.
- Alvansleben, Baron, letters of; 364, 365.
- Ame, Mr., evidence of; 312.

- Amelia, Princess, daughter of George III., letters of; 445.
- America:
 annexation of six nations of Indians in; 163.
 trade distresses in; 381.
 Stamp Act in, tumults arising from; 382, 389.
 the fight for independence; 382, et seq.
See under the different States.
 former loyal feeling in; 382.
 English cloth, &c. in; 358.
 colonies of, statement of their condition; 384.
 proposal to send Russian infantry to; 395.
 war with, protest from Norfolk against; 419.
 squib on British rights in; ib.
 South, natural products of; 349.
- Amherst:
 Col., Lieut.-Governor of St. John's; 371.
 Sir Jeffrey, services under; 337.
 — letters of; 370, 371, 396.
- Amiens, robbery of mail near; 315.
- Amphill, letter dated at; 120.
- Amsterdam; 31, 302.
 ship of; 20.
 the Prince of Orange's troubles with; 31.
 letter dated at; 151.
- Andalusia, French merchants in; 16.
- Anderson:
 Lieut., killed at Quebec; 406.
 Andrew, letter to; 382.
 James, letter of; 382.
 John, of St. John's river, letter to; 399.
- Andover, James II. at; 215, 216, 220, 275.
- Andros:
 C., of Guernsey; 124.
 Sir Edmund, governor of New England; 184.
- Anglesey, Earl of:
 (1665), and Sir M. Eustace; 12.
 (1679); 33.
 (1702), and his wife; 298.
- Anjou, Duke of, Spain plundered by; 299.
- Annapolis, or Annapolis Royal:
 governor of; 320.
 taking of; ib.
 justices for; 378.
 pirates about; 383.
 disaffected people at; 384.
 ships at; 387.
 letters dated at; 398.
 basin; 403.
- Anne, Princess, afterwards Queen: account by Pepys of her withdrawal from James II.'s court; 214, 278.
 her correspondence with Lord Dartmouth; 298-316, passim. letters of Charles III. of Spain and his Queen to; 301, 302, 304.
- Anne, Princess, afterwards Queen—cont.
 address from Convocation to; 303.
 plot in Ireland against; 315.
 her medals; 316.
 her debts; 321.
- Anale, Harrison and; 382.
- Anson, Captain, his squadron; 446.
- Antigua:
 letters dated at; 295, 337.
 Solicitor-General of; 372.
- Antiquaries, club of; 328.
- Antwerp; 31, 175.
 letter dated at; 424.
- Appleby, election for; 124.
- Appleton, Nathaniel, of Boston, New England; 342.
- Apaley:
 Sir Allen; 37, 44, 47, 56, 74.
 Lord Chancellor, letters of; 348.
 lady; ib.
- Aquila, Don John de, threatened landing at Cork of; 125.
- Arbuthnot:
 Admiral, letter of; 345.
 Commodore, letters of; 387, 399.
 — letter to; 389.
 — his charge in Nova Scotia; 404.
 Lieut.-Governor, letter to; 408.
 — and the Volunteers; 415, 416.
- Archbold, Sir Henry:
 Geo. Legge's courtship of his daughter; 16.
 letter of; 56.
- Archer:
 Captain, plot or plan by; 30.
 Edw., letter of; 123.
- Arden, Sir R. Pepper; 495.
- Areleman, Mr., at Tangier, report by; 59.
- Arguin, English claim to; 338.
- Argyle:
 Nova Scotia; 403.
 Earl of (1679), trial of; 41.
 — his escape; 43, 56.
 — and the test; 44, 70, 71.
 Duke of (1711); 305.
 — (1711), letter of; 305.
 — his aide-de-camp; ib.
 — (1712), his pass; 310.
 — (1715), his chaplain; 322.
- Arlington, Earl of:
 (1665); 12.
 the Duke of York's comments on; 46.
 (1684), letter of; 120.
- Arms, seizure of; 120.
- Armstrong, Sir Thomas, the Duke of York's expressions against; 34, 35, 37.
- Army:
 cost of establishment at Tangier; 28, 29.
 the, strength of, in 1688; 171.
- Arnold:
 General, Quebec besieged by; 405-407.
 Benedict, English troops seized by; 394.

Arran:

- Earl of (1665), letters of; 11.
- (1681); 70, 71.
- his Countess; 15.
- son of Duke of Hamilton (1684), letter of; 115.
- son of the Duke of Ormonde, letter of; 131.
- Countess of, Mary, letters of; 14, 15.

Arthur:

- Captain; 271.
- Mr.; 425.

Arts, Fine, promotion of; 448.Arundel Castle, William Legge imprisoned in; 25.*Ascough, Sir George, admiral, squadron under; 15.*Ash:

- Ben., of Tangier; 96.
- Dr. John, letters of; 424, 425.
- his work on mineral waters; 425.

Ashburnham, Lord (1718); 315.Ashby:

- Capt.; 102.
- John; 17.

Ashford:

- letter dated at; 351, 359.
- vicar of, his stipend; 351, 352, 359.

Askin, Captain, at Nieuport; 27.Assiento, the; 315.*Astley, Mr., letters of; 438.*Athenry, Lord, letter of; 438.*Athlone, Lord Ranelagh at; 132.*Athol:

- Marquis of (1685), and the Scotch rebels; 125.
- Duke of (1774), death of; 368.
- Duchess of; 368.

Atkins, Samuel, secretary to Lord Dartmouth, letters to; 100, 103, 108.Atkinson:

- Captain, of the Trinity House; 140.
- Mr., of Kingsthorp; 293.

Atlee, William, of Pennsylvania; 357.Aubrey, Herbert, his son; 159.*Avance; 119.*Ayles, Captain, of the Trinity House; 140.*Aylesford; 294.

- Earl of (1721), letter of; 326.
- (1767), and the Maidstone election; 333.
- and Countess of (1804); 444.
- Lady, her South Sea stock; 326.

Aylmer:

- Capt.; 236.
- Capt. George; 86, 102, 268.
- and Upnor Castle; 153, 157.
- of the Portland; 182, 194, 197, 201, 207, 218.
- letter of; 219.
- Capt. Matthew; 102, 232, 237, 242, 288.
- obliged to salute the Spanish fleet; 85, 89.
- letter of; 85.

Ayres, Captain, teas brought to Philadelphia by; 345.B.*B., J., letter of; 9.*Babbington, Colonel, part of his regiment taken; 263.*Babry Church; 263.*Bacher, Fred.:

- letters of; 95, 97.
- reports by; 97, 108.
- depositions before; 106.
- reports on petitions by; 118, 119.

Backer, Peter, Dutch Captain; 21.Baden:

- Marquis of; 5.
- illness of; 8.

Badminton, letter dated at; 86.Bagot:

- Honora, her marriage; 425.
- Lord (1806), his marriage; 445.

Bahama Islands:

- proprietors of; 302.
- Captain General of; 399.

Baker:

- Mr., in Algiers; 18.
- Solicitor-General of Antigua; 372.

Balcarras, Earl of:

- (1774), letter of; 368.
- as a representative peer; ib.
- his character; 369.

Ballen, Lieutenant; 148.Ballynekill, near Kilkenny, sale of; 12.*Banbury; 445.*Banker, Adrian, Admiral for Zealand; 21.*Bankes:

- Mr., and his son, letter touching; 125.
- James, certificate of; 238.
- Sir John; 287.

Banstead Downs; 124.Bantry, Bay of, fight in; 252, 253.*Barbadoes:

- letter dated at; 135.
- the Duke of Albemarle at; 135.
- Secretary's office; 295.
- citron water from; ib.
- Carlisle Bay; ib.
- complaint against Governor of; ib.

Barbary, West, Prince of, treaty by; 13.Barber, Ensign Nath, at Tangier; 109.*Barbour, Captain, his company at Tangier; 109.*Barcelona; 298, 305.

- letters dated at; 301-304.

Barclay, Captain, at Tangier; 103.Barker, Samuel, at Tangier; 110.*Barkley, Captain, of the Scarborough; 395.

- Barlow:
 Dr., book attributed to; 47.
 Mr., Lord Wellesley's opinion of;
 426, 427. provisional Governor General; ib., 435.
- Barnsare, a ship's Captain; 406.
- Barrett, James, of Sligo, declaration signed by; 249.
- Barretti, Captain; 417.
- Barrington:
 Lord (1774), letter of; 349.
 — despatches from; 396.
 Daines, letters of; 349, 439.
 Nova Scotia; 415.
- Barry:
 Lieut., Secretary to Col. Gorham; 387.
 Captain, of the Nova Scotia volunteers; 403.
- Barter, Cape; 19.
- Barton:
 Capt. James, letter of; 404.
 on Humber; 134.
- Basingstoke, letter dated at; 302.
- Bastiaens, Dutch admiral; 180.
- Bastick, Mr., of Dover, letter of; 184.
- Basto, Mathew; 107.
- Bath; 120, 127.
 letters dated at; 75, 327.
 James II. at; 138.
 election at; 297.
 account of society at; 327.
 Russell Street; 371.
 South Parade; 365.
 Lord, commissioner to General
 Monk; 25.
 Earl of (1681); 68.
 — (1685), letter of; 128.
 — (1688), letter of; 139.
 — his second son; ib.
 — (1688), his letters seized; 193.
 — instructions to; 198, 274.
 — Plymouth seized by; 216, 274.
 Marquis of (1804); 444.
- Bath and Wells, Bishop of:
 (1685-88), letters of; 128, 134, 138.
See Ken, Dr. Thomas.
- Bathurst:
 commoner of the city; 95.
 Sir Benjamin; 84, 214.
 Lord (1721), letter of; 326.
 — (1776), Lord High Steward; 403.
- Batterow, —, his desertion from Ragobah;
 422.
- Batteville, Baron; 6.
- Battine, Edward, of Portsmouth, letter of;
 242.
- Beach:
 Capt. Richard, in the expedition against
 Algiers; 17, 19.
 Sir Richard; 88, 151, 153, 163, 221.
 — letters of; 155, 201, 211, 217,
 222, 224, 225, 232, 235.
 — on the Navy Board; 212.
 — instructions to; 244.
 — packet returned by; 246.
 — at Portsmouth; 282.
- Beachy Head; 186, 263, 265.
- Beard, Mrs., landlady; 313.
- Beattie, Dr.; 439.
- Beauchamp, Viscount (1774), letter of;
 370.
- Beaunclerk, Lord William, at Bath; 327.
- Beaufain, Sieur de, affair of; 364.
- Beauford, Mons., slain; 17.
- Beaufort, Duke of:
 (1683), letter of; 86.
 (1685), letter of; 127.
 (1710); 297.
 letter of; 298.
- Beaumont, Lieutenant of the Portsmouth;
 182.
- Beanvall, Lewis, of Rochelle; 78.
- Becke, Captain, his ship taken; 18.
- Beckett, Mr.; 235.
- Beckford:
 Colonel; 136.
 — of Jamaica; 239.
 Mr., slopseller; 152.
 Peter, in Jamaica; 316.
- Beckmann, Major, afterwards Sir Martin, at Tangiers; 51.
 his preparations against the Moors; 52.
 letters of; 52, 88, 124, 134.
 walls of Tangier to be mined by; 84.
 memorandum by; 89.
 pay due to; 116.
 at Glasgow; 125.
 instructions by; 132.
 his progress on Hull fortifications;
 136, 222.
 and the Hull fortifications; 222.
 sacrament taken by; 236.
 his new religion; ib.
- Bedfordshire: arms seized in; 120.
 election in; 326.
- Bedloe, the informer; 31.
- Belcher, Jonathan, Chief Justice of Nova Scotia; 413.
 letter of; 371.
 his death; 403.
- Bellamont, Lord (1778), his wound; 235.
- Bellasis or Belasyse, Lord, John (1666),
 Governor of Tangier, treaty by; 13.
 (1683), letter of; 86.
- Bellem, letter dated at; 297.
- Bellott, Justice, of Cornwall; 115.
- Benaisha, admiral of Sallee; 319.
- Benett, Mr., candidate for Cambridge University; 253.
- Benge, Mr.; 143.
- Bennett:
 Sir Henry, secretary of state; 9, 10, 11.
 Capt. Tho., his company at Winchester; 15.
- Bentinck, M.; 66.
 at Helvoetsluis; 165.
 with the Prince of Orange; 181, 203.
- Berar, Rajah of; 437.
- Bergomi, Count de, at the Hague; 306.
- Berkeley:
 Captain, his company at Tangier;
 110.

Berkeley—cont.

- Colonel, ordered to Portsmouth; 237.
 Lord (1668), President of Connaught;
 11.
 — and Lady, their payments for Vandeveldt's pictures; 153.
 of Stratton (1685), John, letter of;
 128.
 Lord (1688); 275.
 — in the Straits; 189.
 — 'very pert'; 261.
 — of the Montagu; 188.
 — instructions to; 203.
 — letters to and of; 205, 210, 222.
 — his interview with James II; 222.
 — (1689), letter of; 250.
 — William, of Stratton (1710); 302.
 — — letter of; 305.
 — — (1718), letters of; 316.
 Earl of (1688); 229.
 Mrs., her flight with Princess Anne;
 214.

Ensign And., at Tangier; 110.

Berkham, Mr., in Algiers; 19.

Berkshire county, New England, meetings in; 349.

Bermudas; 135.

Bernard, Sir Francis, his wife and family brought from Boston; 362.

Berry:

- Sir Edward Seymour at; 185.
 Sir John; 99, 102, 250, 251.
 — letters of; 94, 97, 153, 159,
 167, 233.
 — loss of his ship, the Gloucester;
 74, 75.
 — at Tangier; 80.
 — instructions concerning Tangier
 to; 84, 85, 86.
 — orders to; 94.
 — his battalion of seamen; ib.
 — reports by; 97, 107.
 — certificate by; 110.
 — as Navy Commissioner; 147,
 152, 212.
 — his division; 161, 171.
 — instructions to; 247, 248.
 — his advice; 264, 268.
 — ships placed under; 283.
 Capt. William, at Tangier; 108.

Bertie:

- Mr., his mission; 225.
 Charles; 245.
 — letter of; 138.

Bertrand, Laurence, commander of the St.
Anne; 103.

Berwick:

- letters dated at; 67, 124.
 election for; 124.
 fortifications of; 69, 80.
 survey at; 74, 75.
 garrison at; 135.
 Duke of; 215.

Berwick—cont.

- Duke of (1688), letters of; 139, 235,
 287.
 — certificate of; 236.
 — his regiment at Salisbury; 204.
 — his regiment gone over to the Prince; 210.
 — sent to Portsmouth; 226.
 — his withdrawal; 280.
 — and Gosport; 234, 235.
 — with James II.; 242.
 — letters to; 281.
 — at Portsmouth; 280-283.

Bethell:

- Slingsby; 42, 65.
 Sheriff; 65.

Bett, Captain, of the Beaver; 378.

Betts, Isaac, certificate by; 210.

Beverley:

- Mr., in Virginia; 80.
 Mrs., of Tangier; 97.

Bickerstaff:

- Captain; 74.
 — candidate for Berwick; 124.

Biddle, Mr.; 56.

Biggs, Sir John, recorder of Portsmouth;
 123.

Billingsley, Major, of the Guards; 121.

Bingley, Lord:

- (1718), his skill in architecture; 318.
 in the country; 319.
 and South Sea stock; 325, 326.
 letters of; 325.
 his Cheshunt nunnery; 324.

Binney, Jonathan, of Halifax, Nova Scotia:

- letter of; 350.
 his imprisonment; 376, 377, 381, 382.
 letter of; 381.
 papers concerning; 386.
 his debt; 409.

Birmingham:

- new church at; 320.
 letter dated at; 328.
 housebreakers about; ib.
 plan of; 447.

Bishops ness, letter dated at; 146.

Black, William, letter of; 387.

Blackheath; 328.

- Vanbrugh Fields; 338, 339, 364, 366. firing on; 132.
 Lord Dartmouth's property at; 326.
 Sir G. Page's house at; 380.

Blathwayte:

- Mr.; 81, 111, 242, 246.
 William, letter of; 297.
 — his election; ib.

Blackwell, Mr.; 8.

Blaydes, Joseph, letter of; 123.

Blencowe, Mr., his fellowship at All Souls; 299.

Blenheim:

- or Hochstette, battle of; 446.
 co. Oxford, journey to; 446.

Blessington, Lord (1688), joins the Prince of Orange; 222.

Bliss, Rev., Thomas : of Ashford, letters of ; 351, 359.
 his stipend ; 352.
 Blood, Holcraft, letter of ; 146.
 Blunden, Mr. ; 17.
 Blunt, Sir John, South Sea director ; 326.
 Boddington, Mr., letters of ; 396.
 Bohemia, Queen of, in England ; 4, 6.
 Boldock, Mr., at York ; 184.
 Bolingbroke, Lord ; 310.
 at Paris ; ib.
 (1712), at the Privy Council ; 311,
 313.
 (1713), and the new appointments ;
 318.
 M. Torcy and ; 315.
 Bollen, W., letter of ; 353.
 Bombay :
 letter from ; 420-422.
 army reductions in ; 427.
 Persian embassy at ; 436.
 Bonnerman, Ensign John, at Tangier ;
 110.
 Bonnett, Joseph, letter of ; 416.
 Bonser, Ambrose, of Tangier ; 96.
 Bontiers, Captain, with the Dutch fleet ;
 181.
 Boone, Thomas, letters of ; 366.
 Booth :
 Captain, his capture of an Algiers ship ; 68.
 Sir William ; 102.
 — letters of ; 144, 157, 161, 251.
 — in the Tangier expedition ; 94.
 — his battalion of seamen ; 94.
 — reports by ; 97, 107.
 — his lieutenant ; 145.
 — as Navy Commissioner ; 147,
 152, 212.
 — his men run away ; 164, 172.
 — Pepsys and ; 174.
 Bordeaux, shepherds on stilts near ; 331.
 Bordier, C., petition of ; 104.
 Bordt, Denny de ; 353. application from ; 354.
 Borlase, G., letter of ; 333.
 Bosanquet, Jacob, letters of ; 426.
 Bostock :
 Nathaniel, testimonial concerning ;
 132.
 — his lieutenant's certificate ; 223.
 Boston, New England :
 letters dated at ; 320, 334-350, 360,
 373-389, 399, 400.
 fortifications of ; 134.
 seditious pamphlets circulated about ;
 320.
 consignments of tea to, disturbances concerning ; 341, et seq.
 Liberty Tree at ; 341, 342.
 attack on houses of tea merchants in ;
 342.
 debates in Assembly ; 342, 343.
 Faneuil Hall ; 342, 343.
 — meeting of freeholders in ; ib.
 — oration delivered at ; 349.

Boston, New England—cont.
 East India's Co's. agent at ; 347.
 Gazette ; 348.
 House of Representatives, their agent
 in England ; 350.
 riots, instructions to General Gage concerning ; 351.
 reported cannonading of ; 363.
 rebels at ; 364.
 supported by the other provinces ;
 353, 354.
 quartering regiments in ; 354.
 ill-usage of Council at ; 361.
 troops embarked for ; 374.
 hostilities begun at ; 375, et seq.
 select men at, address to ; 377.
 defence and sufferings of ; 382.
 continual fighting round ; 393.
 General Clinton marching on ; 398.
 distresses of inhabitants ; 399.
 proposed removal of families from ;
 400. evacuation of ; 403.
 King's Road near ; ib.
 governor of, Hutchinson, his letters ;
 335-350, 362.
 Milton near ; 342.
 Harbour, Castle William ; 343, 344.
 — tea thrown into ; 344, 346.
 — Act concerning ; 347, 351, 353, 355.
 Neck, fortifications made on ; 363.
 Cope Hill in ; 380.
 Botham :
 Captain ; 102, 237.
 Capt. William ; 75.
 Bothmer, Baron, letters of ; 305, 320.
 Bounds, letter dated at ; 332.
 Bourne, Mr. Clark at ; 10.
 Bowdoin, Mr., of Boston, New England ;
 343.
 Bowles, Mr., or Phineas, secretary to Lord
 Dartmouth ; 160, 164, 166, 173,
 206, 227, 339, 245, 260.
 letters of ; 242, 245, 247.
 Pepsys' displeasure with ; 245, 247.
 Bowyer, Thomas, collector at Dartmouth ;
 185.
 Boyle, Mr. ; 295, 297.
 Boyne, Lord (1785) ; 328.
 Boynton, Major, at Tangier ; 50.
 report by ; 61.
 Bradford, Wilts, letter dated at ; 126.
 Bradley, Mr., gum importer ; 338.
 Bradstreet, Major-Gen., Lieut.-Governor of St. John's ; 370.
 Brady, Dr., candidate for Cambridge
 University ; 253.
 Bramber, election at ; 364.
 Brompton Castle, letter dated at ; 321.
 Branch, or pilot's warrant ; 122.
 Brandenburgh :
 Elector of ; 9.
 Duke of ; 193, 194.
 Brattle, Mr., letter of ; 360.
 Brazil, fleets from ; 300.
 Breadalbane, Earl of (1774) ; 369, 370.

Breda; 81, 82, 83.
 Bregets, T., of Tangier; 96.
 Breholt, David, deposition of; 106.
 Brent, Mr., his house attacked; 229.
 flight of; ib.
 Brentford, the two Kings of; 412, 414.
 Brenton:
 J., letter of; 339.
 James, his motion against Governor Legge; 408.
 Brest; 331.
 Breton:
 Island; 383.
 — return concerning; 365.
 Cape, coal from; 333, 377, 397.
 Brewer, Captain, at Nieuport; 27.
 Breynon, Rev. John, letter of; 392.
 Bridge, —, in Nova Scotia; 376.
 Bridgeman, Mr.; 183, 201.
 Bridges:
 Mr.; 262, 263.
 — recommendation of; 286.
 — at Gravesend; 247.
 Sir Brook, candidate for Kent; 332.
 Sir Matthew; 186.
 William, letter of; 188.
 Bridgewater; 204.
 Monmouth's army at; 126, 127.
 letter dated at; 128.
 Brihuega, prisoners at; 305.
 Brill, the; 178, 181.
 Brisart, Fern^{do}, of Tangier; 97.
 Brisbane:
 Mr., in Algiers; 17, 18.
 J., of the Admiralty; 68.
 — letters of; 88, 89.
 Bristol; 134, 204, 211.
 letter dated at; 127.
 rendezvous at; ib.
 and the Prince of Orange; 222.
 Bishop of (1713), Lord Willoughby;
 316, 317.
 Earl of (1688), at Sherborne; 219.
 — (1661), his mission; 6.
 Brixham:
 the Dutch fleet seen off; 185.
 the Prince of Orange lands at; ib.
 Broadhead, Daniel, of Pennsylvania; 357.
 Broomey:
 letter dated at; 310.
 secretary; 321.
 Bromwich, West, curacy at; 295.
 Brookfield, Mass., letter dated at; 338.
 Brooklyn, New England; 344.
 Brougham, Henry, letter of; 438.
 Brouncker:
 Lord, at the Admiralty; 86, 89, 108.
 — his death and will; 113.
 Thomas, of Portsmouth, letter of;
 242.
 Brown, Browne:
 —, valet to Lord Mohun; 312.
 Captain; 17.
 Governor, complaints against; 423.
 — his removal; ib.
 Mr., purser; 173.

Brown, Browne—cont.
 — his mission to Montreal; 394.
 Lieut. Benjamin; 386.
 George; 272, 273.
 Montfort, letter to; 348.
 — letter of; 399.
 R., letter of; 347.
 Richard, letter of; 348.
 Capt. William, his death; 399.
 Brownrigg, Studholme, letter of; 379.
 Bruce:
 Lord (1711); 308.
 — letter of; 309.
 Lieut.-Colonel, detachment under;
 389.
 Brudenell, Lord (1754), in France; 331.
 Brussels; 5.
 the Duke of York at; 30-37.
 Buccleuch, Duke of (1774), and the Scotch peers; 369.
 Buckingham, Duke of:
 (1679); 42.
 (1685), letters of; 123.
 (1710), letter of; 300.
 (1713), Lord Conway and; 315.
 Bucknall, —; 148.
 Buckwith, commoner of the city; 95.
 Bailth, Mr.; 193.
 Bulkeley:
 Lieut., his ship aground; 249-251.
 Kate; 293.
 Richard, secretary in Nova Scotia;
 332, 413.
 — letters of; 378, 386, 399.
 — paper signed by; 374.
 — minutes signed by; 402.
 Bull, William, Lieut.-Governor of South Carolina; 350.
 letter of; 375.
 his despatches; 390.
 Bullioun, Mons., slain; 17.
 Bullman, Mr., curate at Charlestown, his dismissal; 375.
 Bulls, Bay of, letter dated from; 110.
 Burgess, William, memorial of; 378.
 Burghley, Lord, publication of his papers;
 329.
 Burgis, Capt. John, his company at Tangier; 109.
 Burgoyne, General:
 sent to Boston; 374.
 ordered to America; 393.
 Burgundy, Duchess of, and Sicily; 311.
 Burke, Edmund:
 petition consigned to; 372.
 his powers of conversation; 425.
 Burino van trist, James, of Tangier; 96.
 Burino, James, of Tangier; 79.
 Burley, letters dated at; 293, 294, 295.
 Burlington:
 Bay, the Dutch reported in; 138.
 — expected landing of Dutch in;
 178, 181.
 Earl of (1688); 229.
 Burnaby, Capt. W. C., application of;
 403.

- Burnet:
 Dr., afterwards Bishop, at Exeter ; 192, 193.
 — intercepted letter of; 266.
 — his book; 322.
 John, confession of; 107.
 Dr. Thomas, Master of the Charter-house; 322.
- Burrow or Burrows:
 little, in Nova Scotia; 876.
 James, letters of; 389, 349, 350, 416.
 — report from; 352.
 — letter to; 399.
- Burton:
 —, flight of; 229.
 Dr., 293.
 Bushy House, letter dated at; 443.
 Bushy Park, letters dated at; 363, 366, 367, 424.
 Buskins, Master or Major; 3.
- Butler:
 Colonel, of Killoeah; 234.
 — his son Walter; ib.
 — his dragoons at Chester; 252.
 Lady, death of; 234.
 John, of Halifax, N. Scotia, letters of; 376, 377.
 Thomas; 23.
 Tristan, evidence of; 314.
- Byas, Mons.; 308.
- Byam, Ashton Warner, letter of; 360.
- Byng:
 Lieut. George, his interview with the Governor of Gibraltar; 109.
 — certificate concerning; 110.
 — order brought by; 283.
 Sir George, at the Council; 299.
- Byron:
 Admiral, sent after the French fleet; 418.
 Lieut. Richard, of the Pearl; 87.

C.

- Cadiz; 17, 19, 52, 68, 88, 89, 99, 104, 109, 110.
 letter dated at; 103.
 affairs at; 94.
 consul at; ib.
 provisions at; 94, 101.
 French expedition to; 298.
 ships taken off; 298.
 Bay; 97, 101, 103, 106.
 — the Spanish fleet in; 82.
 — violent storm in; 101.
- Caen Wood, Highgate, letter dated at; 305.
- Calais; 202, 239.

- Calkar, near Cleve; 4.
- Calvinists, French, punishment of; 331.
- Cambel, Mons., engineer, memorial of; 354.
- Cambridge:
 King's College; 253, 316.
 Trinity College; 316.
 University, Chancellor of; 136.
 — election for; 253.
 Massachusetts; 344.
 — letters dated at; 360, 377.
 — rebels at; 385.
 Duke of (1809); 443.
 (1805) letters of; 445.
- Cameron, a minister, his conventicles; 38.
- Campbell:
 Mr.; 360.
 Major John, memorial of; 397.
 Lord William, letter of; 334.
 — his wish to leave Nova Scotia; 334.
 — letters to; 333, 334, 335, 339, 341.
 — licence by; 333.
 — governor of South Carolina; 384.
- Campden:
 Lord (1682), his earldom; 76.
 Lady; ib.
- Camphor wood; 5.
- Campo, Marquis de; 302.
- Campoley, seizure of; 422.
- Canada:
 reduction of; 162.
 Indians of, Louis XV. and; 340.
 — Sir William Johnson and; 341. plan for administration of; 347.
 affairs of; 352.
 satisfaction in; 370.
 lieutenant governors for; 371.
 expedition in 1746 against; 372. reported dissatisfaction in; 383.
 loyalty of; 384.
 the frontiers threatened; 385.
 attempts to raise rebellion in; 394.
 evacuated by the rebels; 409, 410.
- Candia; 17.
- Cannegan, Nova Scotia; 335.
- Canning, George, of the Temple; 333.
- Canso, fishery at; 414, 415.
- Canterbury:
 prebend at; 311.
 Prerogative Court of; 330.
 races; 332.
 Archbishop of (1688); 170.
 — (1688); 229.
 — (1711), letter of; 305.
 Dean of, Dr. Stanhope; 305.
- Canton, ships bound for; 421.
- Carbery, Earl of (1688); 229.
- Cardigan:
 Earl of (1712-13), letters of; 311, 315, 316.
 — his chaplain; ib.
 Lady; 325.
- Cardinash, envoy from Morocco; 319.
- Careye, J., of Guernsey; 124.
- Cargill, the field preacher; 65.

- Carleton: or Charleton,—; 80, 83, 84, 35, 86, 74.
 Lord ; 53.
 General or Governor, letter of ; 375.
 — the Indians and ; 383.
 — the extent of his command ;
 386, 387.
 — disagreeable situation of ; 388.
 — his despatches from Quebec ; 394.
 — his defence of Quebec ; 405–407.
 — Gen. Montgomery's letter to ;
 407, 408.
- Carlisle: corporation ; 76.
 government of ; 245.
 election at ; 309.
 Earl of (1682), letter of ; 75.
 — his daughter ; ib.
 — (1688) ; 229.
 — (1788), commissioner to
 America ; 419.
- Carmarthen, Marquis of (1710), letter of ;
 302.
- Carnac, Mr., treaty by ; 422.
- Carnarvon, Lord (1751), at Göttingen ; 330.
- Carnatic, the, settlement of ; 427, 428, 447.
- Carolina:
 Lieut.-Governor of ; 23.
 tea riots in ; 346.
 North, governor of, Martin ; 347.
 — despatches from Governor Martin
 in ; 390.
 — Highlanders raised in ; 392.
 and South, state of government ; 384.
 South, East India Co.'s agent in ; 347.
 — disputes between the Assembly and the Council ; 350.
 — despatches of Lieut.-Governor
 Bull from ; 390.
- Carpenter, William, of Tangier ; 97.
- Carr:
 Captain, at Tangier ; 108.
 Major, at Newport ; 27.
- Carrickfergus:
 fortifications of ; 11.
 letter dated at ; 13.
 mutiny at ; ib.
- Carter:
 Captain ; 158.
 Captain Richard, and Southsea Castle ;
 281, 288.
 Dick, his groom ; 265.
- Carverth, Captain, his ship ; 101.
- Caryl, secretary to James II. ; 447.
- Cassel, Prince Rupert at ; 5, 9.
- Cassilis, Lord:
 and the Test ; 71.
 (1774), a representative peer ; 370.
- Cassils, Robert, his petition ; 304.
- Castle Cornett, letter dated at ; 11.
- Castle Hedingham ; 328.
- Castlehaven, Earl of, letter of ; 121.
- Castlereagh, Viscount, letters of ; 426.
- Castleton, Lord:
 letters of ; 81, 82, 121, 123.
 his son Charles ; ib.
- Casum, letter dated at ; 20.
- Catalonia ; 298, 299.
- Catalonia, army in ; 119.
- Cathcart:
 Lord (1774) ; 368.
 — speech of ; 369.
 Mary, her marriage ; 368.
- Catt water ; 210.
- Cavan, Lord (1774), Colonel ; 359.
- Cawline Park, letters dated at ; 368.
- Cay, Colonel, killed on the Poonah expedition ; 420.
- Cevennes, the, Calvinists in ; 331.
- Chamblé, papers dated at ; 414.
- Chandos, Lord (1688) ; 229.
- Chapelizod, letter dated at ; 131.
- Chappell, Mrs., of Tangier ; 97.
- Charlemont, fortifications of ; 11.
- Charles I.:
 at Oxford ; 3.
 Onslow's sayings against ; ib.
 William Legge's services to ; 24, 25.
 services rendered to ; 129.
 at Hampton Court ; ib.
- Charles II.:
 Prince Rupert's references to ; 3–9.
 his marriage ; 5, 6.
 — feeling at Vienna against ; 6.
 and his Queen, at Whitehall ; 10.
 on board the Royal Charles ; 20.
 warrants of ; 25.
 the relations of the Prince of Orange
 to ; 34, 39.
 his escape from Worcester, Pepys's relation of ; 49.
 and the Moorish king ; 77, 78.
 his instructions to Lord Dartmouth on the Tangier expedition ; 83.
 his escape from the plot ; 83.
 his additional instructions to Lord
 Dartmouth ; 86.
 his instructions to Sir John Berry ; 86.
 at Winchester ; 89.
 at Portsmouth ; 93.
 at Portsmouth ; 99.
 his kindness to the people from Tangier ; 99, 100.
 warrant of ; 103.
 his letter approving of Lord Dart-mouth's services ; 112.
 Pepys's interview with, concerning the Tangier expedition ; 113.
 his death ; 122.
 his treatment of his brother. See York, Duke of, James, letters of.
- Charles III., of Spain :
 bad state of his affairs ; 299.
 letter of his Queen, Elizabeth ; 300.
 his letters to Queen Anne ; 302, 304.
- Charlestown, Charleston, New England ;
 344, 346.
 letter dated at ; 375.
 merchant of ; 355.
 camp near, letters from ; 379, 385.
 descriptions of battle near ; 380, 381. burning of ; ib.
 action with rebels near ; 393.
 Neck ; 382.

- Charleston—cont.
 Neck, attack on rebels at; 379.
 St. Michael, curate of; 375.
 Charleton, lame; 87.
 Charleville; 14.
 Charlotte, Princess, cost of her establishment; 444, 445.
 Chatham; 22, 143, 148, 154, 161, 187, 197, 198, 199, 206, 251.
 the Dutch at; 129.
 Clerk of the Cheque at; 178.
 Dock, letter dated at; 144.
 Earl of (1788), letters of; 425.
 Cheeke, Col. Thomas, letter of; 153.
 Cheepoty Hill, on Fundy Bay; 397.
 Cheesman, Captain, killed at Quebec; 406.
 Chelsea pensioners; 374.
 Chepstow garrison, want of stores in; 86.
 Cherokee Indians; 397.
 Cheshire, arms seized in; 120.
 Cheshunt; 178.
 the nunnery at; 324.
 Chester; 131.
 letter dated at; 308.
 the Duke of Ormonde in; 10.
 reception of Lords Tyrconnell and Clarendon at; 131.
 frigates to be sent to; 243, 244, 246, 250, 251, 284. governor of, William Legge; 24.
 mayor of, complaint against; 252.
 Castle, letters dated at; 131, 252.
 — arms collected into; 252.
 — garrison in; 43.
 deanery of; 131.
 Bishop of (1688); 141.
 — (1688), his desertion of James II.; 228.
 — (1707); 294.
 Nova Scotia; 415.
 Governor of Pensacola, letter of; 338.
 Chesterfield, Earl of (1661); 10.
 Chestone, Edward, of Tangier; 79, 96.
 petition of; 104.
 Chetwynd, Mr.:
 at Genoa; 298.
 at Turin; 300.
 Chicheley, Sir Henry:
 in Virginia; 80.
 his misrule and death there; ib.
 Chichester; 225, 264.
 Chichley, Sir Tho., Master of the Ordnance; 19.
 Chilton, letter dated at; 190.
 Chilworth, powder mills at; 3.
 Chirurgeons or Surgeons for the fleet; 145, 148, 151, 152, 158.
 Cholmley, Sir Hugh, his house at Tangier; 85.
 Cholmondeley, Col. Thomas, letter of; 139.
 Cholmondy, Mrs.; 444.
 Christie, Colonel, at Quebec; 352.
 Chuchalana; 68.
 Church, Dr. of Boston, New England; 342.
 Churches, building of; 310.
 Churchill:
 Captain, of the Newcastle; 174.
 Captain George; 75.
 — letter of; 210.
 — certificate of; 202.
 — in Plymouth; 212, 213, 215.
 — warrant for his arrest; 215.
 — order for apprehension of; 272, 273, 274.
 Col. John, afterwards Lord, and Duke of Marlborough; 33, 37, 43—64 passim.
 — letters of; 55, 57, 67, 69, 81.
 — dragoons under; 99.
 — (1688), his houses seized; 214.
 — his desertion of James II.; 215.
 — his influence with the Prince of Orange; 235, 242, 249.
 — directions signed by; 237.
 See Marlborough, Duke of.
 Col. Joseph, concerned in the Hamilton and Mohan duel; 311, 312.
 Lady, afterwards Duchess of Marlborough, her flight with Princess Anne; 314.
 Circle, the, quadrature of; 304.
 Clanricarde, Earl of:
 letter of; 107.
 (1686), his government of Galway; 131.
 (1687), letter of; 132.
 Claremont, letter dated at; 331.
 Clarence, Duke of (1801), letter of; 443.
 Clarendon:
 Lord Chancellor (1661), Prince Rupert's references to; 3—9.
 Earl of (1686), Lord Lieut. of Ireland, letters of; 129—132.
 — (1711), letter of; 305.
 — (1713), letters of; 316, 322.
 — his reception at Chester; 131.
 — books removed from Dublin by; 132.
 — (1688), joins the Prince of Orange; 222.
 Clarke:
 Mr; 314.
 Edward, letters of; 51, 364.
 Richard, Boston tea merchant; 342, 343.
 Capt. Robert; 17.
 Clayton, Sir Robert, alderman of London; 144.
 Clement or Clements, Captain John:
 149, 168, 177, 259, 260, 263.
 Dutch prisoners in charge of; 198, 200.
 letter of; 198.
 seamen pressed by; 145.
 recommendation of; 233.
 Clerk:
 George, letter of; 330.
 infantry at Charleston under; ib.
 Robert, letter to; 331.

- Cleve :
 Prince of Orange at ; 4.
 Prince Rupert at ; ib.
 Electors of, Sweden and ; ib.
 Clifford :
 an officer, his escape ; 304.
 Lady de ; 444.
 Clinton, General :
 sent to Boston ; 374.
 ordered to America ; 393.
 at Rhode Island ; 398.
 Clive, Lord (1801) :
 his return to Europe ; 426.
 letters of ; 429, 430.
 Clobury, Sir John, candidate for Winchester ; 123.
 Clonmell, letter dated at ; 14.
 Cobequid, Nova Scotia, volunteers in ; 401.
 Cochnawaga Indians ; 383.
 Cockburn, Colonel, his command in India ; 420.
 Cod, Cape ; 346.
 Coffin, Captain ; 140.
 Cog (?), Captain ; 127.
 Colchester, Lord (1688), gone over to the Prince of Orange ; 210.
 Colden, Lieut. Governor of New York ; 381, 382.
 his despatches ; 392.
 Cole :
 Mr., at Venice ; 298.
 Captain, vessel taken by ; 266, 267.
 • Coleman, Capt. William ; 17.
 Coleshall, letters dated at ; 293, 299.
 Collier :
 Captain, payment due to ; 117.
 Capt. George, memorial by ; 362.
 Collins :
 Captain ; 227.
 — his commission ; 245.
 Arthur, letters of ; 328, 330.
 — his new Baronage ; 328, 329, 330.
 Rev. Edw., letter of ; 310.
 — his brother ; ib.
 Colondaby, Major, taken prisoner ; 268.
 Colver, Nathaniel, letter of ; 361.
 Compton :
 Lord (1711) ; 308.
 — letter of ; 309.
 Sir William, of the Ordnance ; 10.
 Concord :
 seizure of military stores at ; 393.
 assembly at ; 440.
 Condolah :
 Gaet Pass at ; 422.
 camp at ; ib.
 Congreve, Captain, his brother ; 14, 15.
 Connaught, presidency of ; 11.
 Connecticut :
 its support to Boston ; 353.
 customs' collector in ; 372.
 restraint of trade ; 375.
 despatches from ; 391.
 Courant, contents of ; 419.
 Connolly, Major, letter to ; 359.
 Constable, Captain ; 148, 154, 163.
 Constantine, Alderman, of Dublin ; 307.
 Constantinople ; 18.
 English ambassador at ; 104.
 Conventicles ; 38.
 Conway, Lord :
 (1680) ; 44, 202.
 letters of ; 81, 86.
 his health ; 87.
 (1713), the Duke of Buckingham and ; 315.
 Conyers, Edward, petition of ; 81.
 charges against ; ib.
 Cook, —, magistrate of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia ; 386.
 Cooke :
 Daniel, boatswain, petition of ; 87.
 Col. Ed., letter of ; 11.
 Copley, Captain, at Hull ; 41, 128.
 J. S., the artist ; 448.
 Coppin, George, Commander, squadron under ; 15.
 Corbett, one ; 316.
 Cork :
 harbour, fortification of ; 125.
 transports at ; 299.
 troops embarked at ; 374, 387, 388, 400.
 Corn, high price of ; 335.
 Cornbury, Lord :
 (1688), his regiment ; 204.
 gone over to the Prince of Orange ; 210.
 Cornewall, Capt. W., letters of ; 228.
 Cornwall :
 Duchy of ; 333.
 Colonel, his regiment at Hull ; 134.
 Capt. Wolfran, of the Dartmouth ; 138.
 Cornwallis :
 Captain, at Portsmouth ; 75.
 Marquis, his government of India ; 429.
 — letters of ; 426.
 Nova Scotia, volunteers in ; 401.
 Corriton, a bombardier ; 161.
 Cory, John, Judge Advocate at Nieuport ; 27.
 Cotesmore, letter dated at ; 326.
 Cotton, Captain ; 148, 153, 166, 259.
 Pepys's directions to ; 141, 142.
 Cottrell, Stephen, letter of ; 364.
 Coucan, the, English army in ; 420.
 Council minutes on duel between the Duke of Hamilton and Lord Mohun ; 311-314.
 Courtney :
 Captain, killed ; 21, 23.
 Sir William, and the Prince of Orange ; 188.
 Coventry ; 131.
 Henry, letter of ; 29.
 Cowerdon, —, his regiment ; 202.
 Cowes ; 212, 233.
 Dutch fleet said to be at ; 204.
 Cox, Chief Justice, examinations before ; 315.
 Craggs, Secretary, purchase by ; 326.
 letter of ; ib.

Cramahé, Lieut. Governor; 388.
 Cranstoun, near Edinburgh; 446.
 Crauford, R., letter of; 178.
 Craven, Lord:
 (1661), Queen Henrietta Maria and; 4.
 (1684), letter of; 121.
 (1710); 302.
 Crawley, magistrate of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia; 386.
 Creed, Mr., secretary; 77.
 his office; 85.
 and the Tangier records; 105.
 Creighton, John, letter of; 398.
 Crequi, his army at Treves; 119.
 Cressett, his news letter; 47.
 Crewe, Lord (1688); 229.
 Croft or Crofts:
 Captain; 186, 187, 189, 263, 264, 265.
 Will., letter of; 135.
 Croghan, Col. George, letter of; 360.
 Croissy, M. de; 90.
 Cromartie, Earl of (1746), trial of; 330.
 Cromwell, Oliver; 129, 425.
 extolled in a book; 5.
 at Galway; 131.
 Cron, H., letter of; 208.
 Crone or Croone, Mr.; 166.
 Cross, Mr.; 267, 268, 271.
 Crow, Captain; 240. of the Kitchen yacht; 84.
 Crowe:
 Mr., case of; 299.
 Metford, governor of Barbados; 295.
 Croydon; 293.
 Cruger:
 H., letter of; 381.
 John Harris; ib.
 Cugnet, Mr., his pamphlet; 352.
 Culleford, —, Col. Kirke's "creature"; 127.
 Culpeper, Lord:
 (1683), Thomas, his letter from Virginia; 80.
 (1688); 229.
 Culver Cliff; 223.
 Culvert, General, letter to; 444.
 Cumberland:
 choice of deputy-lieutenants in; 124.
 militia in; ib.
 America, attack on the fort at; 398.
 — riotous assemblies in; 400, 401.
 — militia raised in; 401.
 — expressions of loyalty in; 415.
 — Fort, investment of; 415.
 — seizure of provisions sent to; ib.
 Duke of (1745), and the rebels; 329.
 — (1802), letter of; 443.
 Mr., his office; 354.
 Richard, letter of; 371.
 —, and the removal of Governor Brown; 423.
 — letter to; 350.
 Cunningham:
 Capt. Daniel, letter of; 415.
 Sir John, and the Test; 71.

Curragh, the, sports on; 11.
 Curraghmore, letter dated at; 122.
 Cuthbert:
 Mr., warrant to; 118.
 Robert, of Tangier; 79, 96.
 Cuyler, C., letter of; 399.

D.

D'Albeville. See Albeville, d'.
 Dalhousie, Lord (1774), speech of; 369.
 Dalling, Colonel, letter of; 350.
 Dalrymple:
 Mr., Attorney-General in Grenada; 352.
 Lieut.-Col., Commander in Nova Scotia; 332.
 Sir John, letter of; 446.
 Dalyel, General, at Glasgow; 39.
 Danby, Earl of; 32, 36, 46.
 his impeachment; 122.
 (1688), at Ribston; 138.
 (1688), in the North; 225.
 and the government of Carlisle; 245.
 Danforth, Dr., of Boston, New England; 343.
 Daniel, sheriff of London; 95.
 Danube, the, the Turks' operations about; 5, 7, 8.
 Danvers, Mrs., in attendance on the Princess Anne; 214.
 Dartford; 235.
 Dartmouth:
 Dutch fleet seen off; 184, 185, 203.
 magistrates of, and the High Stewardship; 300, 301.
 Lord, first. See Legge, George.
 — at a Council of War; 90.
 — warrants of; 99.
 — his battalion of seamen; 94.
 — his secretary Atkins; 100.
 — petitions to; 104.
 — his report on Tangier to Charles II.; 105.
 — letter of; 111.
 — Pepys's criticism of his letter about Tangier; 112.
 — opinions of Charles II., and others on his services at Tangier; 113, 114.
 — schedule of Tangier papers received from; 116-119.
 — reports on Tangier petitions to; 118, 119.
 — in St. James's Square; 120.
 — Monmouth's lodgings given to; 128.
 — letters of; 132, 231, 232.
 — in command of the expedition against the Prince of Orange; 138, et seq.
 — his son William; 158.
 — his son's studies; 183.
 — death of his mother; 234, 249.

Dartmouth—cont.

- Lord (cont.), letter of; 253.
 — Pepys's report on his fleet; 253.
 — copies of his letters to James II. and others; 255-283.
 — book of documents relating to his expedition; 255-285.
 — commission to (168); 255.
 — instructions, &c. to; ib.
 — papers relating to his imprisonment; 285-292.
 — Sir J. Dalrymple's comments on; 446, 447.
 — second, afterwards first Earl of, letters of; 292, et seq.
 — his marriage; 293.
 — letters to; 292-330.
 — sworn of the Privy Council; 293.
 — (1710), appointed Secretary of State; 295, 296.
 — his letters to Queen Anne; 298-316 passim.
 — High Steward of Dartmouth; 301.
 — made Lord Privy Seal; 317.
 — (1714), arrears due to; 321.
 — (1745), letter of; 329.
 Earl of, second, William, letters of; 330.
 — (1765), urged to take office; 331.
 — at the Plantation Board; 332.
 — Secretary for the Colonies; 334.
 — letters of and to; 334, et seq.
 — (1790), his son in the navy; 435.
 — President of East India Board, his correspondence; 425-437.
 — (1786), elected High Steward of Oxford; 424.
 — (1779-88), appointments of his sons; 441, 442.
 — removed from office; 442.
 — (1806), as Lord Chamberlain; 437, 438.
 Lady, Barbara (1684); 114.
 — letters of; 146, 158, 232, 234, 241.
 — and family; 183.
 — leaves of book cut out by; 279, 284.
 College in America; 438.
 Dashwood, sheriff of London; 95.
 Datchet; 318.
 Daun, Marshal; 300.
 Davies, Capt. William, letter of; 139.
 Davis, Captain, his advice; 264, 268.
 Daves:
 — appointed Lieutenant to Captain Shovell; 177.
 — Sir John, his son; 157.
 Dawson:
 — Lieut. George, letter of; 384.
 — James, letter of; 343.
 Day:
 —, of Halifax; 376.
 — Ensign, killed in the Mahratta war; 421, 422.
 — Thomas, commission for; 146.

Day—cont.

- Lieut. Thomas, report by; 210.
 — certificate of; 238.
 — scandal about his sister; 245.
 Deal; 251, 267, 269, 270.
 — letter dated at; 187.
 — postmaster at; 196, 201.
 — storekeeper at; 200.
 Deane, Sir Anthony:
 — Commissioner of the Navy; 114, 146, 152, 155, 167.
 — letter of; 157.
 — of the Victualling Board; 142.
 Deannish, —, officer, his desertion; 224.
 De Beauvoir, Daniel, of Guernsey; 124.
 De Fuentes, Marquis, Spanish Ambassador; 6.
 Degatt, Cape; 19.
 Delacarterie, Jacques, of Tangier; 96.
 Delatre, —; 352.
 Delaval:
 — Colonel; 171.
 — Mr., at Lisbon; 318.
 — letter of; 319.
 Delaware Indians, on the Ohio; 360.
 Delisle, Mr., minister at Montreal; 352.
 Denbigh, Earl of:
 — (1710), letters of; 296.
 — (1775); 381.
 Denmark:
 — King of (1661); 4.
 — Prince of, George, his regiment; 144.
 Denny, Mr.; 328.
 — freeman of Boston, New England; 342.
 Denson, Lieut.-Col. H. Denny, letters of; 389, 397, 398, 405, 409-416 passim.
 De Pas, Mr., or Samuel, Secretary to Lord Dartmouth; 103, 111.
 — letter of; 111.
 Deptford; 107, 145-147, 207, 213.
 — letter dated at; 237.
 — ships at; 199.
 — robbery near; 314.
 — voters in; 326.
 Derby:
 — rebels at; 329.
 — Earl of (1688), Lord Lieut. of Cheshire and Lancashire; 167.
 Dering, Captain Dan., or Captain; 102.
 — letter of; 93.
 — narrative of; 98.
 — ship seized by; 103.
 De Rues, an engineer, Prince Rupert's account of; 4.
 De Ruyter, Admiral, engagements with; 21, 22.
 Desaunares, B., of Guernsey; 124.
 Desbrisay, Thomas, letter of; 367.
 — Lieut. Governor of St. John's; ib.
 Deschamps:
 — Mr., his salary; 409.
 — George, justice for Halifax, Nova Scotia; 381.
 — Isaac, letter of; 400.
 — his threatening letter; 412.
 Desmonlins, Mr.; 447.
 D'Estaing, M., French fleet under; 418.

- Devereux family, the, and Lichfield; 122.
 Devizes; 126.
 Devonshire, Duke of:
 (1707), letter of; 294.
 (1789), Lord Lieut. of Ireland; 328.
 Dias, Joseph, envoy from Morocco; 319.
 Dickfelt, M.; 302.
 Dickinson, John, of Pennsylvania; 357.
 Digby:
 Sir Kenelm; 5, 6.
 Lord (1708), letters of; 293.
 — (1709), letter to; 295.
 — (1710), letter of; 299.
 — (1714), letter of; 320.
 Dilkes, Mr; 347.
 Ditton:
 living; 293.
 H., certificate by; 304.
 Dodd:
 Dr., charge of simony against; 348.
 Dr. William, letter of; 446.
 Dodsworth, Captain; 392.
 Domville, Sir William, letter of; 122.
 Doncaster; 82.
 Dongan, Col. Thomas, letter of; 162.
 Donington Castle, fight at; 129.
 Dorchester:
 Countess of, letters of; 302, 306.
 — at James Graham's house; 292.
 New England; 344.
 Dorington, Sir Fr., Prince Rupert and; 7.
 Dorrington, his Irish battalion; 158.
 Dorset:
 Earl of, at the battle of Edgehill; 40.
 — (1688); 229.
 — present at Lord Dartmouth's examination; 287.
 — (1710), and the Kent elections; 297.
 Duke of (1767), and the Sussex election; 332, 333.
 Douay, foundry of ordnance at; 120.
 Doughty, Mr.; 123.
 Douglas:
 Captain or Major, at Tangier; 108.
 Sir Charles, letter of; 423.
 Dover; 154, 155, 188, 187, 202, 239, 248, 261, 264, 265, 301.
 postmaster at; 175, 178.
 ship builder at; 207, 218.
 Castle, seizure of; 228.
 mayor of; ib.
 Earl of (1688), at Portsmouth; 215, 220, 223, 224, 225.
 — at Portsmouth; 278-277.
 — his seizure of money and provisions; 221.
 Dowglass, Col. Charles; 315.
 Drayton, owners of; 122.
 Dresden, the Carnival at; 330.
 Drift:
 Mr., at Paris; 315.
 Adrian, executor to Prior; 329.
 Driscoll, Cornelius, boatswain; 87.
 Dublin; 9.
 letters dated at; 9-16, 64, 73, 131, 122, 123, 129-132, 136, 159, 224, 239, 293, 294, 308, 328, 347, 386.
 trial of conspirators in; 11.
 dispute about the Lord Chancellor's house at; 12.
 French Protestants in; 73.
 survey of; 122.
 disputes between Lord Lieutenant and city; 306, 307.
 Castle; 11.
 — room for arms in; 131.
 — fortifying of; 249.
 theatre at; 11.
 Bay, survey of; 122.
 Duff, Ensign Simon, at Tangier; 109.
 Dugdale:
 the informer; 36.
 Sir William, his Baronage; 330.
 Duhamel, Mons., letter to; 367.
 Duke, George, of Sarson; 298.
 Dumbarton, Lord:
 his regiment; 43.
 his regiment at Tangier; 50, 77.
 his regiment; 101.
 (1685); 125.
 his withdrawal; 230.
 Dumbartonshire, the rebels in; 125.
 Dumbane, Lord (1688), at Ribston; 136.
 Dunbar, Major, prisoner at Cambridge, Massachusetts; 377.
 Dunboyne, Earl of:
 (1666), his sad condition; 14.
 the Duke of Ormonde's kindness to; ib.
 Duncan, Alexander, letter of; 386.
 Dunchurch, road from; 295.
 Duncombe:
 Mr.; 87.
 C., his marriage; 425.
 Sir John; 67.
 Dundas, Henry, President of East India Board; 425, 426.
 Dungeness; 155.
 Dunkeld; 368.
 Dunkirk; 202, 351.
 its sale to France; 10.
 fortifications; 120.
 preparations at; 298, 299.
 robbery of mail from; 314.
 demolition of; 319.
 Dunmore, Earl of:
 (1774), in command at Pittsburgh; 359.
 his passage to New York; 362.
 his despatches from Virginia; 391.
 demonstration by colonists against; 391, 392.
 Dunnose; 30.
 Dunstable; 132.
 Duport, Mr., Chief Justice of St. John's; 367.
 Duras, Lady, death of; 26.
 Durham, the Duke of York at; 37.
 Durkee, —, magistrate of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia; 386.
 Duxbury, John, letters of; 51.

E.

- Eady, Mr., of Cumberland; 398.
 rebels under; 415.
Ealing, Castle Hill Lodge; 443.
Eames, Captain, his command in India; 430.
Eastny Point; 153.
Ebersdorf, stag hunting at; 8.
Ebertson, Dutch Admiral; 390.
Eccles, John, schoolmaster at Tangier; 104.
Eden:
 Hall, letter dated at; 188.
 Deputy Governor, his despatches from Maryland; 391.
 William, Commissioner to America; 419.
Edgehill, battle of; 24, 40.
Edgell, Mr., shipowner; 107.
Edinburgh:
 the Duke of York at; 37-49, 53-74.
 letters dated at; 301, 368.
 demonstrations against papists in; 42, 48.
 Holyrood house; 125.
 College in; 804.
 University, chair of Moral Philosophy in; 439.
Edlington, near Doncaster; 26.
Edmonstone, N.B., letters of; 426.
Edmonton, guns heard at; 183.
Edson, councillor at Boston; 361.
Edwards, Sir James; 59.
Egerton, Colonel, his command in India; 420, 421.
 treaty by; 422.
Egham, King's Head at; 286.
Eglinton, Earl of (1774); 369, 370.
Egmont, Lord (1770), extract from letter to; 333.
Elizabeth, Princess, daughter of George III., letter of; 448.
Ellibank, Lord (1774), speech of; 370.
Elliot, Eliot:
 Captain, letter of; 209.
 Mr., at the Board of Trade; 341.
 Mun.; 44.
 Captain Mun; 238.
 Grey, letters of; 352, 355.
Ellis, Rev. William, letters of; 398, 403, 414.
Ellitt, Ensign Rodger; 109.
Elminstone, Christopher, of Gosport; 73.
Elyott, Capt. Edmund, letter of; 213.
Embsden, James II. sails from; 231.
Emes, Francis, of Tangier; 96.
Emmerson, Mr., his cadetship; 443.
Emms, Francis, of Tangier; 79.
Emsworth; 264.
Epsom, letter dated at; 309.
Erlisman, John, translation by; 106.
Erving, Captain, of Boston, New England; 343.

Essex:

- expected landing of the Dutch in; 176.
 housebreakers in; 328.
 Earl of, the Duke of York's opinion of; 36.
 — Lord Lieut. of Ireland; 130.
Eustace, Sir Maurice, and Lord Anglesey; 12.
 Lord Chancellor of Ireland; 180.
Euston, letter dated at; 120.
Evelyn, Mr., of the Post Office; 298.
Everson or Evertsen, Cornelius, Dutch admiral, 21.
 with the Prince of Orange; 203.
Examiner, the, journal; 310.
Exe, the river; 203.
Exeter; 86.
 recorder of; 81.
 letter dated at; 124.
 castle; ib.
 the Prince of Orange at; 188-193, passim.
 postmaster of; 192.
 Kerton near; 192.
 Bishop of (1688); 190.
 (1710), his address; 297.
Exmouth, the Dutch fleet near; 185, 192, 203.
Eyles, Sir John, Lord Mayor, turned out; 143.

F.

- Fairburne:
 Sir Palmes, at Tangier; 51, 52, 55, 104.
 Ensign Staff., at Tangier; 108.
Fairfax, Mr., member for Kent; 332.
Faisant, Hierosmé, of Tangier; 97.
Falaizeau, his continuation of Rapin; 328.
Falkland, Lord:
 (1682), letter of; 76.
 (1688), Commissioner of the Navy; 145, 151, 152, 160, 164.
Falmouth; 198.
 ship brought into; 111.
 troops quartered in; 115.
 mayor of; 115.
 in Cases Bay; 348.
 Nova Scotia; 389.
 — volunteers in; 401.
Faneuil, Benjamin, Boston tea merchant; 342, 343.
Fanning:
 Mr., his bad treatment in North Carolina; 347.
 — an American loyalist; 364.
 Col. Edmund, secretary to Governor Tryon; 354.

- Fanshaw:
 Mr.; 141, 150.
 Charles, letter of; 101.
- Fantry, Mr.; 47.
- Fareham, troops near; 234.
- Fargeon:
 —, petition of; 104.
 Jean, of Tangier; 97.
 John, merchant at Tangier; 105.
- Farnham; 286.
- Faro, trade at; 16.
- Farrell, Sir Connell, his son; 123.
- Faversham:
 Queen's Arms in; 231.
 James II. taken near; 231-233.
- Fayeby, Captain; 240.
- Fazakerly, Mrs., at Bath; 237.
- Fasly, Captain; 277.
- Feife, Captain, pay due to; 116.
- Feilding, Mr.; 54.
- Fenn, Nic., commissioner of victualling;
 107, 159, 160, 163, 168, 177, 259, 261.
- Fenton, Mr., at Annapolis; 278.
- Fenwick, Sir John, his regiment at Nicuport; 27.
- Ferguson:
 —, with the Prince of Orange; 180, 181.
 Mr., servant of the Duke of Hamilton; 312-314.
- Feverham, Earl of; 38, 44, 55, 72, 99.
 letters of; 128, 153, 232.
 letter to; 279.
 (1685), in command against the Duke of Monmouth; 126.
 letters of; ib.
 his letter to the Prince of Orange; 229.
 sent to James II.; 231.
 blamed for disbanding his soldiers; 223.
 under confinement; 235.
 liberated; 249.
 living in his gift; 223.
 C. Duncombe afterwards; 425.
- Fex: kingdom of; 57.
 king of; 68.
- Finch:
 Captain, killed; 21, 23.
 Mr.; 53, 56.
 Heneage, letters of; 293.
 Sir John, his servant; 104.
- Finchley Common, camp on; 229.
- Finlater, Lord (1718), Chancellor of Scotland; 318.
- Fire ships, operations of; 21, 23.
- Firth, Charles, storekeeper at Tangier; 99.
- Fish, Mr., his fly-boat lost in Mount's Bay; 115.
- Fishermen, impressment of; 141, 145, 149, 154, 157, 167, 172, 200.
- Fitch:
 Mr., his work at Hull; 222.
 Sir Thomas; 99.
- Fitzhardinge, Lord (1687), letter of; 133.
- Fitzharris:
 trial of; 57, 60, 62, 63.
 his confession; 65.
- FitzJames, Captain, at Nicuport; 27.
- Fitzjarrald, Ensign Garret, at Tangier; 109.
- Fiva, Anthony, American loyalist, petition of; 297.
- Flamsteed, the astronomer; 44.
- Flanchford, letters dated at; 26, 74.
- Flanders:
 the French in; 90.
 French troops in; 96.
- Fleetwood:
 —, brother of Lord Dartmouth; 122.
 Col., a prisoner; 9.
- Fleming:
 Sir Daniel; 124.
 Mr., candidate for Southampton; 264, 267.
- Fletcher:
 Sir George; 124.
 — his disputes with Lords Carlisle and Morpeth; 75.
 Robert, his schooner Betsy; 403.
- Flinn, Thomas, deposition of; 381.
- Florida, West, murder in; 338.
- Floud, Thomas, of Dartmouth; 300.
- Floyd, Captain; 238.
- Floyer, John:
 letter of; 303.
 his son; ib.
 publication by; ib.
- Floyres, Dr., letters concerning; 76.
- Forbes:
 Lord (1688), his regiment; 158.
 — (1710), ships taken by; 298.
 Captain, at Tangier; 103.
 Mr., his letter; 240.
 Sir Arthur; 11.
- Fordemell, J., recorder of Tangier; 96.
- Foreland, South; 249, 250.
- Forgeon, John, alderman of Tangier; 78.
- Fountaine, Major, Hull garrison under; 187.
- Foux, Etienne de la; 305.
- Fowler:
 Captain; 51, 102.
 — Thomas, letters of; 101.
 — — certificate by; 110.
- Fowles, or Foules, Captain, killed; 21, 23.
- Fownes, Mr., shipowner; 107.
- Fox, Sir Stephen, letter of; 127.
- France:
 ships of, off Algiers; 17, 18.
 fleet of, Charles II.'s visit to; 20.
 — its part in the Dutch engagements; 20-23.
 trade of the Moors with; 102.
 privateers of; 229, 240.
 attitude towards England and James II. of; 253, 254.
 in the West Indies; 294.
 her claim on Savoy; 311.

- Franklin, Deputy Governor Michael :
 letter to ; 333.
 the King's disapproval of ; ib.
 his despatches from New Jersey ; 392. letters of, &c. ; 400, 401, 402.
 Frankfort :
 Prince Rupert at ; 8, 9.
 paper dated at ; 446.
 Franklin, Dr. Benj. :
 his interview with Lord Dartmouth ;
 335.
 letters of ; 337, 353.
 agent for Boston ; 350.
 proceedings against ; 353.
 and Governor Hutchinson's letters ; 355. petition sent to ; 372.
 delegate to the Congress ; ib.
 letter to ; 381.
 Frant, Sir Patrick ; 234.
 Fraser :
 Captain, his company ; 388.
 Mr., letter of ; 363.
 Freeman, Dr., to be a bishop ; 294.
 French, Robert, letter of ; 343.
 Friend, Sir John ; 157.
 Frise, Baron de, his regiment ; 181.
 Frome, letter dated at ; 125.
 Frowd, Frowde :
 Captain ; 102, 269.
 — in the Slad way ; 177.
 — Frederick, letter to ; 178.
 — — of the Ruby ; 203.
 Philip ; 216.
 — letter to ; 184.
 — letters of ; 143, 167, 178, 192,
 193, 230, 249.
 Fuller, Stephen, letters of ; 366, 371.
 Fulton, James, letter to ; 343.
 Fundy, Bay of ; 383, 385, 387, 389, 416, 423.
 Hopewell on ; 397.
 Fysh, Gregory, of Tangier ; 97.

G.

- Gage :
 Colonel, his regiment at Chester ;
 252.
 General ; 348.
 — Governor of Massachusetts,
 letters to ; 351-365, passim.
 — his removal advocated ; 370.
 — his despatches ; 371.
 — letters of ; 375-387, passim.
 — strength of his army ; 383.
 — his resignation ; ib.
 — his return to England ; 386,
 387.
 — his despatches from Massachusetts Bay ; 392, 393.
 U 24961.

Gage—cont.

- General, his return to England ; 395.
 — George III.'s letters concerning ;
 439-441.
 Gainsborough, Earl of :
 (1684), letter of ; 120.
 (1685), letter of ; 124.
 Gallas, Count, excuses by ; 307.
 Galloway :
 Earl of (1773) ; 340.
 — (1774) ; 370.
 J., letter of ; 417, 420.
 Galway :
 petition for opening a passage through ;
 131.
 Lord, letters of ; 297, 302.
 — news from ; 298.
 — embarks for England ; 299.
 Gambler, Commodore, remarks by ; 334.
 Gansel, General, his death ; 358.
 Gardener, Mr. ; 108.
 Gardiner :
 T., letters of ; 222, 225, 233, 236.
 Mrs., at Bath ; 327.
 Gardner, Eliz., and her daughters Parth-enia and Sabra ; 109.
 Garlies, Lord :
 (1773), report by ; 334.
 at the Board of Trade ; 340.
 Garrat, young ; 34.
 Gartt, Mr., petition consigned to ; 372.
 Gascoyne, Bamber, report by ; 334.
 Gates :
 General, joined with Washington ;
 419.
 Horatio, adjutant-general at Boston ;
 381, 392.
 Gazette, the ; 296, 297, 298.
 Geast, Richard, elected steward of Lichfield ; 417.
 Genoa ; 18, 298.
 ships of, and the Turks ; 30.
 English envoy to ; 305.
 George :
 Captain ; 102.
 Prince, of Denmark, his desertion of
 James II. ; 216.
 George I., letter to ; 320.
 George III., his letters to the Earl of Dartmouth (1773-1805) ; 438-444.
 — letters of his children ; 442-445.
 George's Island ; 383.
 Georges, William Payne, letter of ; 343,
 372.
 Georgia :
 treasurership of ; 366.
 and the Congress ; 372.
 state of government in ; 384.
 despatches from Sir James Wright
 in ; 390.
 riots in ; 390.
 Germain, Lord George ; 400, 408, 409.
 letters of ; 411, 417.
 Governor Legge's defence addressed
 to ; 412-414.
 letter to ; 416.
 Germany, and the Turks ; 4.

- Gibbons, Capt. R. :
 letters of; 405, 408, 410.
 his departure for England; 412.
- Gibbs, Sir Vicary, letter of; 488.
- Gibraltar; 88, 95, 135.
 letter dated at; 186.
 English consul at; 189, 110.
 Spanish governor of, his treatment of Capt. Rooke and Lieut. Byng; 109, 110.
 the Moors at; 297.
 Bay; 101.
- Gifford:
 Captain; 102, 164, 269.
 — of the Mermaid; 145, 149.
 — of the Phoenix; 183, 194, 197, 201.
 Boniface, on a Moorish ship; 93.
 — suggestions by; 95.
 Capt. William, letter of; 111.
- Giles, Captain, at Tangier, report by;
 59.
- Gironne, siege of; 800.
- Girty, Simon, at Wheeling; 359.
- Glasgow; 125.
 letter dated at; 306.
 conventicles at; 89.
- Glastonbury, Monmouth's army at; 126.
- Gledhill, Colonel, his election at Carlisle; 309.
- Glenbirrvie, Lord, letters of; 426.
- Gloucester :
 James II. at; 184.
 Duke of (1771), his recovery; 334.
 — (1805), his death; 444.
 — funeral of; ib.
- Goddard, Colonel, and the Bengal brigad; 430, 431.
- Godolphin:
 Lord (1688); 151.
 — (1688), letter to; 209.
 — and the Prince of Orange; 222.
 — the Duke of York's remarks on;
 58.
 Mr., succeeds Jenkins as secretary;
 111.
 Sir William; 17.
- Goodricke:
 Sir H., and Lord Danby; 36.
 Sir Henry, his narrative; 81.
 — his seat at Ribston; 188.
 Sir Harry, letter of; 249.
- Gould, Colonel Arthur, letter of; 386. militia under; 386.
- Gordon:
 Captain, his command in India;
 422.
 Mr., his case; 352.
 — his petition; 355.
 Lieut. Robert, at Tangier; 110.
 Rev. William, letter of; 340.
- Gore; 188.
 Prince Rupert at; 3.
 Alderman, of Dublin; 307.
- Goree; 165, 180, 181, 258.
- Goreham, Joseph, his affidavit; 413.
- Gorge, Col., his groom; 312.
- Gorham or Goreham, Colonel: troops under; 378, 387.
 directions to; 386.
 his secretary; 387.
 his defence of Cumberland fort; 398.
 in command at Cumberland; 405.
 his alleged defeat; 416.
- Goring, H.; 67.
- Gorman, James, alderman of Tangier;
 78, 97, 105.
- Gosling, Mr., of Winchester; 16.
- Gosport; 223.
 inhabitants, petition of; 73.
 Lieut. Governor of; 76.
 castle seized; 234.
 quietness at; 235.
 barracks at; 242.
 security of; 282.
- Gottingen University; 330.
- Gough, Sir Henry, candidate for Bram-ber; 364.
- Gower:
 W. Leveson, candidate for Staffordshire; 326.
 Earl (1774), letter of; 364.
 Countess Dowager, letter of; 352.
- Graffland, Mynheer, Dutch ambassador; 341.
- Grafton:
 Duke of (1679); 39.
 (1683), admiral, instructions to; 86.
 (1684), at Tournay; 120.
 (1687), in the Straits; 133.
 (1688), a volunteer in the fleet; 176.
 his desertion of James II.; 215.
 his quarter-master; 238.
 with the fleet; 261.
 (1765); 331.
 (1774), his administration; 369.
- Graham, Grahme:
 uncle to Geo. Legge; 11, 16, 30.
 —, flight of; 229.
 Mr.; 130.
 — of Balgowan, his marriage;
 368.
 James; 35, 66, 217, 231, 292.
 Sir R.; 53.
- Graine, island of, saltwork in; 129.
- Grammont, Duke of; 116.
- Grana, M. de; 90.
- Granard, Lord (1689), Lieut. General in Ireland; 249.
- Grandee, Mr., chirurgeon at Tangier;
 26.
- Granger, —; 11.
- Grant, William, collector of customs;
 371.
- Granville:
 co. Annapolis, letter dated at; 400.
 Bay, in the Granadas; 371.
 G., made Lord Lansdowne, letter of; 309. his brother Bernard; ib.
- Gravelines, fortifications at; 120.
- Graves :
 Admiral, letters of; 360, 373, 376,
 383-389.

Graves—cont.
 Admiral, letter to; 373.
 Lieut. John, letter of; 384.
 Gravesend; 99, 100, 103, 142, 247.
 Gray:
 Mr., candidate for Berwick; 124.
 John, letters of; 336.
 Graydon, Capt. John, of the Sandadoc;
 138.
 Greenhill, Captain, of the Trinity House;
 140.
 Greenock, merchant at; 382.
 Greenwich; 10, 168, 198.
 letter dated at; 80.
 hospital, organist at; 444, 445.
 Connecticut, camp at; 392.
 Greenwood, one, apprehended; 170.
 Gregory:
 Mr., Clerk of the Cheque at Chatham; 173.
 Ja., of the College in Edinburgh;
 304.
 Grenada:
 letters dated at; 354, 360.
 petition from; 367.
 Grenville, Mr., his mission to France;
 425.
 Greville:
 Lord (1773), report by; 334.
 Hon. C. F., letters of; 371, 426.
 Col. H. F., letters of; 438.
 Grey: of Ruthyn, Lord (1685) his dispute with the Earl of Kent; 124.
 Mr. de; 423.
 Sir James; 328.
 Griesbach, a musician; 445.
 Grieve, Dr., letter of; 424.
 Griffith, Sir John; 26.
 Grimaldi, Spanish minister; 367.
 Grimes, Mr.; 160.
 Grubellie, E., of Tangier; 97.
 Guadiana, the river; 298.
 Guernsey; 285.
 fortifications of; 11.
 St. Peter's port; 20.
 ordnance stores in; 49.
 bailiff, &c. of, letter of; 124.
 defence of; ib.
 King's attorney in; 134.
 preparations against landing of French in; 239-243.
 soldiers sent to; 284.
 Lord, at Aylesford; 294.
 — (1709); 295.
 — (1719), letters of; 325.
 Guilford, Lord:
 — (1712), letter of; 309.
 — (1715), letter of; 322.
 — (1786), letter of; 424.
 Guiscard, Marquis de, papers about;
 305.
 Gully:
 Captain, death of; 310.
 Jack, letter on behalf of; 132.
 Gum trade in Africa; 338.

Gunman, Capt. Christopher; 40, 42, 49, 67. court-martial on; 74, 75.
 Gunnery experiments; 10.
 Gunning, Dr., book attributed to; 47.
 Guy, Henry, of the Treasury, receipt by 119.
 Guyland, —, at Tangier; 17.
 Gwillim, Henry, letters of; 426.
 Gwyn, Francis:
 letters of; 202, 233, 237.
 attestation by; 231.
 candidate for Portsmouth; 237.

H.

Hackett:
 Mr., chaplain; 311, 316.
 Sir James, at Tangier; 103.
 Hackney; 236.
 Bishop Wood's estate in; 76.
 Haddington, Lord:
 and the test; 71.
 (1774); 369.
 Haddock:
 Captain, ships taken by; 298.
 Sir Richard, president of a court-martial; 75.
 — letter of; 107.
 — at the Victualling Office, &c.; 140, 147, 152, 155, 159, 160, 166,
 174, 218, 240, 260.
 Hague, the:
 letters dated at; 3, 31, 176, 181, 201,
 305, 308, 321.
 Prince Rupert at; 3.
 the Duke of York at; 31.
 Princess Royal at; 330.
 Halbowling, fortification of; 125.
 Haldanby, Mr.; 139.
 Haldimand, Major-General:
 letters of; 346, 348, 370.
 joined with General Gage; 392.
 Hale, John, letter of; 437.
 Hales:
 Colonel, his regiment; 143, 144.
 Sir Edward, at the Admiralty; 86,
 89.
 — letter of; 157.
 — at the Tower; 194.
 — desertion of his captain; 210.
 — and the Tower batteries; 211.
 — turned out of the Tower; 216.
 — his flight; 229.
 — his island; 231.
 — taken with James II.; 232,
 233, 234.
 Halifax:
 Nova Scotia, letters dated at; 332,
 339, 342, 343, 352, 368, 371, 373,
 376-389, passim, 398-416, 423.
 — fortifications of; 332.
 — road making in; 243.

Halifax—cont.

- Nova Scotia, Yard; 345.
- East India Co.'s agent at; 347.
- Court of Chancery at; 349.
- Orphan House at; 352.
- proclamation at; 362.
- dockyard, defence of; 387.
- Citadel hill; ib.
- expected attack on; 399.
- removal of families from Boston to; 400.
- defences of; 399.
- militia at; 399, 400.
- disorders in; 402.
- Pedley's house in; ib.
- House of Assembly, proceedings of; 408–410.
- Governor of. See Legge.
- Viscount, afterwards Marquis of, Lord Shaftesbury and; 69.
- Lord Conway's comments on; 86.
- the Duke of York's references to; 35–73, passim.
- (1688); 170.
- and the Prince of Orange; 222.
- second, William, letters of; 292, 293.
- Lady (1682), a godmother; 74.
- (1700); 293.
- (1702), letter to; ib.
- (1705), a godmother; 294.
- Hall, Elihu, of Connecticut, memorials of; 372.
- Hallier, —, sent out of the country; 307.
- Halsey, Lieut.-Colonel, at Newport; 27.
- Ham House, offered to James II.; 286.
- Hambleton, Mr., wounded; 23.
- Hamburgh ships, to be secured; 20.
- Hamilton:
 - Captain; 63.
 - Colonel, concerned in the Hamilton and Mohun duel; 312–314.
 - A., letter of; 316.
 - Henry, his commission in Nova Scotia Volunteers; 403.
 - James, letter of; 202.
 - Duke of (1680, &c.); 45, 48, 66.
 - and the test; 70, 71.
 - his loyalty; ib.
 - (1712), his duel with Lord Mohun; 311–314.
 - Duchess of; 70, 317.
- Hammersmith, letter dated at; 126.
- Hammond, Andrew Snape, letter to; 339.
- Hampshire, militia in; 124, 125.
- Hampton Court:
 - Charles I. at; 129.
 - apartments in; 444.
- Hancock:
 - John, of Boston, New England; 349, 343.
 - oration by; 349.
 - President of Congress; 404.
 - Thomas, mayor of Portsmouth, deposition of; 230.
 - letters of; 234, 242, 244.

- Handsworth, estate in; 293.
- Hanover; 310.
- Hanson, John, letter of; 347.
- Harcourt:
 - Lord (1785); 328.
 - Sir Simon, letter of; 299.
- Hardwicke, Lord Chancellor, letters of; 330.
- Harley:
 - Robert, his house in York buildings; 295.
 - letters of; 297, 303, 305.
 - See Oxford, Earl of.
 - Lord (1713); 317, 318.
 - Lady Harriot; 318.
 - Henrietta; 319.
- Harman:
 - Admiral; 179.
 - Sir John; 17.
- Harmond:
 - William, a gunner; 73.
 - Capt. Thomas; 73.
- Harris:
 - , book translated by; 6.
 - , a drawer; 312.
 - Mr., chaplain; 322.
 - Capt. Leonard; 17.
- Harrison and Ansley, Messrs., letter to; 332.
- Harry, Sir Daniel; 17.
- Hart, Captain, in Algiers; 19.
- Hartley, Captain:
 - his command in India; 420.
 - wounded; 421.
- Hartshorn, Charles, of Tangier; 96.
- Harwich; 165, 167, 168, 169, 175, 176, 182, 192, 200, 239, 251, 259, 261, 269.
- sea light at; 140.
- Hastings:
 - barony of; 124.
 - Captain; 102, 187, 275.
 - his capture of an Algiers ship; 68.
 - his ship; 176.
 - ship seized by; 197.
 - Anthony, his boatswain; 87.
 - Colonel; 171.
 - Major, at Nienport; 27.
 - Warren, his trial; 437.
- Hatfield, Herts:
 - publication of manuscripts at; 329.
 - living at; ib.
- Hatton:
 - Lord (1673), letter of; 20.
 - (1680); 44.
 - (1685), letters of; 124, 124, 137.
 - Chr., letter of; 11.
- Hauses, Mr., candidate for Winchester; 123.
- Hawkes, Mr.; 157.
- Hawkesbury, Lord (1805), letters of; 437, 444.
- Hawkins, Dr.; 236.
- Hawley, Lord; 48.
- Hawne, John de, Dutch admiral; 21.

Hay:

- Hon. Mr., letter of; 334.
- Lieut. Robert, letter of; 367.
- his son Edward Legge; ib.
- Will., servant to Lord Arran; 116.

Hayes, Lieut., of the Dover; 172.

Haynes, informer; 65.

Hazen, Captain; 394.

Head, Dr. Michael; 397.

Heath, Sir Richard, letter of; 168.

Hebbard, Eleazar; 386.

Hedger:

- Mr., justice at Portsmouth; 230.
- Nicholas, of Portsmouth, letter of; 242.

Hedges:

- Sir Charles; 300.
- Thomas, waterman, impressment of; 416, 417.

Hebbreren, Baron de; 202.

Heene, A., letter of; 295.

Heling, Capt. Daniel; 17.

Helversluce or Helvoetsluys; 165, 176, 180, 262.

Henby Park, letter dated at; 309.

Henchman, Thomas, letters of; 426.

Henderson, Jacob, of Tangier; 79.

Henrietta Maria, Queen, her journey to Whitehall; 9.

Henry, Patrick, a Virginian rebel; 391.

Herbert, Admiral; 82, 83, 89, 90.

- in command of the Dutch fleet; 151, 153, 165, 174, 180, 181, 191, 203, 221, 224, 261, 262, 278.

his ship disabled; 177.

in Torbay; 304, 218.

letters opened by; 218.

in the fight at Bantry; 252, 258.

Herefordshire, elections in; 322.

Herrenhausen, letter dated at; 297.

Herring fishery, the, the Dutch and; 4.

Herriot, Mr.; 152.

Hervey, Sir Eliab; 181.

Hesse Cassel, Princess Mary at; 330.

Heveningham, Captain, joins the Prince of Orange; 222.

Hewell, letters dated at; 64, 134.

Hewer, William; 94.

Treasurer for Tangier, memorials by; 95.

letters of; 103, 108.

in Seville; 108.

his report on Tangier accounts, &c.; 117.

— on Mr. Thistlethwayte's affairs; 118.

illness of; 142.

Commissioner of the Navy; 152, 167.

Hey, W., Chief Justice of Quebec, letters of; 347, 363, 370.

resigns his office; 363.

Hickman:

William, Ordnance Commissioner; 49.

Sir Willoughby, Commissioner; 81.

Hicks, Mills and, Boston printers; 386.

Hildbrand, Captain, of the Lansman; 20.

Hill:

Ensign; 100.

George, valet; 312.

[Richard?] letters of; 306.

Hilliard:

Mrs.; 74.

Sir Robert, Commissioner; 81.

Hillsborough:

Nova Scotia, petition from; 397.

Earl of (1687), letters of; 333, 334.

— (1774); 362.

Hinton, letters dated at; 293, 294.

Hipsley, —, porter; 312.

Hobart, Lord, letters of; 426.

Hobby, Sir Charles; 320.

Hochstette or Blenheim, battle of; 446.

Hodder, Mr., messenger; 189, 191, 266.

Hodge, Captain, at Tangier; 103.

Hodgson, General, letter to; 379.

Hogemogenden, the, or Dutchmen; 4.

Hogue, Cape de; 20.

Holder, Mr., his place; 78.

Holdsworth, Arthur and Robert, of Dartmouth; 300.

Holland:

and the herring fishery; 4.

naval engagements with; 14, 15, 20-24.

ships of, to be secured; 20.

list of admirals of; 21.

the Duke of York in; 31, 32.

prizes taken from; 77.

feeling in, about the Prince of Orange's expedition; 145.

movements of the Prince of Orange's fleet from; 165, 170, 174, 175, 177,

178, 180, 203, 204.

losses in the fleet; 176.

fleet damaged by storm; 176, 178.

— its reported shattered condition; 183.

— gone westward; ib.

— seen off Dover, Dartmouth, and Lyme; 184, 185.

— in Torbay; 185.

— ships of, seized; 187.

— comparison of, with Lord Dartmouth's fleet; 191-196, passim.

— Lord Dartmouth's operations against; 255, et seq.

— damage done to; 257.

mails from; 298, 299, 300.

butter in; 330.

ambassadors from; 341.

Mr.; 416.

Hollis, —, cup bearer; 63, 64.

Holmes:

—; 7, 8.

Captain, in Algiers; 19.

Jeremy, waterman; 162.

Sir Robert, letters and orders of; 20.

— governor of the Isle of Wight; 101.

— grant to; 137.

— letters of; 185, 221, 225, 231.

Holmes—cont.

- Sir Robert, desertions from; 225, 231.
- at Yarmouth, I.W.; 233.
- Irish soldiers sent to; 246.

Holt:

- the, Lord Dartmouth's house at; 285, 286.
- Sir Charles, his servants; 445.

Holte:

- Sir Cleobury; 295.
- Sir Lister, his marriage; 328.

Holyhead; 317.Holy Island, near Berwick, letter from; 184.Home:

- Captain, his company at Tangier; 110.
- Governor of Tortola, his death; 343.
- Count Jean de, his regiment; 202.
- Earl of (1774); 369.

Honduras, Bay of, pirates in; 136.Honyman, John, deposition of; 106.Hopewell:

- on Fundy bay; 397.
- petition from; ib.

Horses:

- belonging to the Duke of York; 81, 83, 87.
- prices of; 127.

Horton, Nova Scotia; 408.

- volunteers in; 401.

Hoskins, Captain; 155.Hotham, Sir John, Lord Belasyse and; 86.Hough, Dr. John, his letters; 328.Hounslow Heath; 236.

- order of march to; 182.
- letter dated at; 133.

Houstoun, Sir Patrick, Receiver-General of Georgia; 336.Howard:

- Captain, at Nieuport; 27.
- Mr., Presbyterian minister from Boston; 377, 378.
- Martin, Chief Justice of North Carolina; 346.
- Sir Philip, his invention for sheathing ships; 79.
- Colonel T., letter of; 370.

Howe:

- Lord; 410.
- (1778), British fleet under; 418.
- (1787), letter of; 425.
- Sir Richard, his coach; 134.
- General, or Sir William, sent to Boston; 374.
- letters of; 378, 382, 385-402, 408, 417.
- letters to; 388, 411, 417.
- attack led by; 379, 380.
- succeeds Gage in command; 383, 395.
- ordered to America; 398.
- his victory at Charleston; 398.
- his march on Philadelphia; 398.
- provision for his troops at Halifax; 403.

Howe—cont.

- General, memorial to; 405.
- sailed from Halifax; 410.

Howell:

- Captain; 146.
- Mr.; 212.

Howden, Captain at Nieuport; 27.Howston, Major, killed at Portsmouth; 75.Hublethorne, Colonel, killed; 23.Huddesford, Dr., letters to; 330.Hudson's river, distress of settlers about; 361.Hughes:

- Mr., schoolmaster at Tangier; 104.
- minister of Tangier; 118.

Hull:

- letters dated at; 81, 123, 128, 134, 136.
- garrison; 34, 41.
- works at; 223.
- commissioners for fortifications at; 81.
- Governor of; 86.
- gunner at; 121.
- progress of works at; 128.
- fortifications at; 134, 136.
- master pilot of, with the Dutch fleet; 178.

Humber, the, the Dutch fleet steering for; 180.Hume, Captain, at Tangier; 50.Humieres, M. d'; 90.

- his march to Liège; 181.

Humphrey, William, deposition of; 387.Hungarian sickness; 5.

- wine; 5, 6, 7, 8.

Hungary, campaign in; 139.Hunter, Mr.; 148, 198.Huntingdon, Lord, confined at Plymouth; 216.Huntingdonshire, arms seized in; 120.Hurst Castle; 233.

- defence of; 185.
- attempt to surprise; 225.

Husher, Robert, his petition; 310.Hutchens, Captain; 237.Hutchinson:

- Boston tea merchant; 342, 343.
- Governor of Boston, letters of; 338-350, passim, 362.
- suggested recall of; 338.
- Dr. Franklin's conduct regarding his letters; 355.
- letters to; 360, 371.
- charge against his brother; 410.
- George III.'s letter concerning; 439.
- Thomas and Elisha, of Boston, letter to; 341.
- minute concerning; 342.

Hyde:

- Lord, the Duke of York and; 38, 39, 40, 41, 60-72, passim.
- (1778), letter of; 336.
- Lady; 64.
- Mr., the Duke of York's references to; 33, 45, 47, 57-60, 70.

I.

- Inchiquin, Earl of :
 (1675), letter of; 26.
 Governor of Tangier; 104.
 (1685), letter of; 125.
 his reported disaffection; ib.
- India, East :
 subscribers for stock; 74, 447.
 Company, tea consigned to Boston by;
 341, 342.
 — tea importation by; 347.
 — renewal of charter; 423.
 the Mahratta war in; 420-422.
 affairs of (1800-1803); 425-437.
- Indians, American :
 skirmishes with; 359.
 English relations with; 360.
- Indies, West : ship fitted out for; 131.
 the French in; 294.
 plantations in; 315.
 monopoly given to; 331.
- Inglis :
 Mr., vicar of Lewisham; 329.
 Robert H., letter of; 438.
- Inglish, Robert, of Tangier; 97.
 at Tangier hospital; 104.
- Ingoldsby, Lieut.-Gen., at Dublin; 308.
- Ipswich; 120.
- Ireland :
 north of, Scottish ministers in; 11.
 the Duke of Ormonde's letters referring to; 9-15.
 transportation of cattle from, prohibited; 12.
 seizure of cattle from; 75, 76.
 state of army and fortifications in (1684); 121.
 Attorney-General for; 122.
 merchants of, their treatment in France; 121.
 fortifications in; 125.
 threatened by Spain; ib.
 Lord Chancellors of, their emoluments; 130.
 Lord Clarendon's opinion of; 130.
 neglect of fortifications in; 131.
 army of, to be encamped; 132.
 bad state of armaments in; 211.
 state of, in 1688; 234.
 committee concerning; 252.
 Tyroconnell's preparations in; 249.
 poverty of; 293.
 Lord Chancellor of; 307.
 Lord Lieut. of, Ormonde removed and Shrewsbury appointed; 318.
 housebreakers from; 328.
 Secretaryship of; ib.
 Lord Lieut. of, Devonshire; ib.
- Irwin, Lord (1774); 370.

J.

- Isla de Vaca; 25.
- Islay, Lord (1713), his submissions; 317, 318.
- Italy, Princes of, treaty among; 298.
- Jacobite papers; 329.
- Jacobs, a pirate; 136.
- Jackson, Mr. :
 of the Board of Trade, his observations; 354.
 name for James II.; 255.
- Jadis, Captain; 358.
- Jaggar, Thomas, certificate of; 238.
- Jamaica; 185.
 letters dated at; 25, 135-137, 152, 316.
 Assembly of; 25.
 — Acts passed by; 68.
 Lord Carlisle in; 76.
 government of; 239.
 the Council in; 306.
 Duke of Albemarle in; 135-137.
 —, death of; 152.
 petition from; 366.
 ordnance stores for; 371.
 Port Royal; 152.
- James, Colonel; 348.
- James II. :
 his letters to Lord Dartmouth; 144, 152, 168, 169.
 letters of; 170, 190, 194, 219, 220, 224-226, 252.
 letters of Lord Dartmouth to; 282.
 orders by; 198, 202.
 his coronation, dispute between Lords Grey and Kent concerning; 124.
 his progress in the West; 133, 134. birth of his son; 136.
 and the Bishops; 137.
 evidence touching the birth of his son; 170.
 his interviews with Pepys respecting Lord Dartmouth's operations. See Pepys, S., letters of, passim.
 press warrants signed by; 138.
 his instructions to Lord Dartmouth; 138, 139.
 his restoration of the charters; 167.
 at Salisbury; 210, 212, 213, 271.
 at Andover; 215, 216, 220.
 his summons of the Peers; 216.
 his purpose of calling a Parliament; 216, 217.
 his son; 204, 205.
 his son at Portsmouth; 210, 272, 275.
 his son's removal; 216, 220, 223, 224. his interview with Lord Berkeley; 222.
 further desertions from; 228.

James II.—cont.

- his flight from London; 228, 229.
- his capture near Faversham; 231-233.
- his treatment at Faversham; 234.
- at Rochester; 236, 238.
- his return to London; 235, 236.
- his submission to the Prince of Orange; 236.
- his most faithful followers; 242.
- in Paris; 249.
- his coaches and horses; 252.
- views of his Protestant followers; 253, 254.
- his declaration for a free parliament; 272-275.
- Lord Dartmouth's reasons against removal of his son; 275-278.
- and Magdalen College; 299.
- Sir J. Dalrymple's comments on; 446.
- Jeffrey, Mr., of Boston; 394.
- Jeffreys, Lord Chancellor:
 - and the London Corporation; 148.
 - his reception in the City; 144.
 - his message to Lady Dartmouth; 146.
 - proposes to turn out four judges; 168.
 - illness of; 183.
 - his flight; 229, 230.
 - imprisoned; 232, 233.
 - his capture; 235.
- Jekyl, Nicholas, manuscript of; 328.
- Jenkins, Sir Leoline, secretary:
 - letters of; 87-101, passim, 126.
 - letter to; 111.
 - resignation of; ib.
- Jennens, Sir William; 146.
- letters of; 170, 174, 233, 238, 239.
- his conduct; 182.
- his ship; 222.
- charges against; 238, 239, 245, 246.
- complaint by; 242.
- Jenner or Gener, Baron, his flight; 229.
- Jenner, Mr., Recorder of London; 95.
- Jennings, Lieut., to Sir W. Booth; 145.
- Jenyns, Soame:
 - report by; 334.
 - at the Board of Trade; 341.
- Jermyn, Lord (1688); 229.
- Jersey; 235.
- ordnance stores in; 49.
- foot soldiers to be transported to; 243, 246.
- soldiers sent to; 284.
- Lord and Lady (1721), their house at Squerries; 326.
- Earl of (1701-1710), letters of; 298-300.
- Jerusalem, New, deposition taken at; 389.
- Jesuits:
 - Powder; 157.
 - in Quebec; 338.
- Jevon, Anne, her claim; 317.
- Jews in Tangier; 83, 84.
- Jodrell, Paul:
 - letter to; 305.
 - letter of; 306.
- Johnson:
 - Captain; 370.
 - Dr. Samuel, letter of; 447.

Johnson—cont.

- Sir William, and the Canadian Indians; 341.
- charges against; ib.
- and the Delaware Indians; 360.
- Johnstone, Governor George, Commissioner to America; 419, 420, note.
- Johonnot, freeman of Boston, New England; 342.
- Jolliffe, Mr., at the Board of Trade; 341.
- Jones:
 - a pirate; 136.
 - a gamester at Bath; 327.
 - judge; 60.
 - Robert, of Tangier; 97.
 - Tom; 44.

K.

- Kaye, Lady, letters to; 327, 328.
- Keightley, Thomas, letter of; 139.
- Kelly:
 - Lord (1774); 369.
 - Hugh, and his Molly; 20.
- Kempthorne:
 - company for; 224.
 - Captain; 64.
 - Sir John, Admiral, squadron under; 15.
 - election of; 29.
- Ken, Dr. Thomas:
 - letter of; 120.
 - his brother; ib.
 - Bishop of Bath and Wells, letters of; 123, 134, 138.
- Kensington:
 - court at; 296.
 - Gate; 313.
 - Palace, letters dated at; 443, 444.
- Kent:
 - elections in; 297, 300, 326, 332.
 - Earl of (1685), his dispute with Lord Grey of Ruthyn; 124.
 - Duke of (1801, &c.) letters of; 443, 444.
- Kentish Knock; 259.
- Kentish Town, letter dated at; 416.
- Kenton; 445.
- Kew:
 - letters dated at; 439-442.
 - House, letter dated at; 444.
 - Lane, letter dated at; 411.
- Kidd, John, of Pennsylvania; 357.
- Kildare, letter dated at; 121.
- Kilkenny, letters dated at; 12, 14.
- Killegrew, or Killigrew:
 - Captain or Capt. Henry; 64, 94, 102, 103, 115.
 - letters of; 94, 103.
 - report by; 107.
 - left at Tangier; 111.

Killegrew, or Killigrew—cont.
 Captain, his lieutenant; 115.
 — his voyage to Guinea; 189.
 Harry; 189.
 Mr., on board a Spanish ship; 85.
 — lieutenant; 148.
 Lieut., of the Portsmouth; 172.
 Rob., volunteer in the Navy; 63.
Kilmarnock, Earl of (1746), trial of; 380.
Kilsoran, living of; 294.
King:
 Mr., recommendations of; 325.
 Dr. John, and the Mastership of the Charterhouse; 322.
Kingsthorpe, living of; 293.
Kingston; 3.
 execution at; 310.
 Duchess of, her trial; 403, 437.
Kinsale; 130. taken by the Spaniards; 125.
Kirby, letters dated at; 124, 184, 187.
Kirke:
 Captain J., report by; 417.
 Col. Percy, Governor of Tangier,
 letters of; 59, 61, 64.
 — letters of; 72–80, passim 86, 90.
 — letters of; 112, 115, 128.
 — order to; 84.
 — instructions to; 86.
 — his cipher; 98.
 — his regiment at Pendennis; 103.
 — certificate by; 104.
 — list of his company at Tangier;
 108.
 — disposal of his battalions; 111.
 — with Lord Feversham against Monmouth; 126.
 — taken prisoner; 219.
 Major-General, troops sent to Holland under; 249.
Knatchbull, Sir Edward, candidate for Kent; 326.
Knight:
 Lieut., execution served on; 373.
 judgment against; ib.
 Major, companies under; 304.
Knox, William, letters of; 389, 367.
Koumiss, properties of; 424.

L.

Labrador, fishery on coast of; 378.
Lambert, Alderman, of Hull; 81.
Lambeth; 10.
 letter dated at; 305.
Lamplugh:
 Bishop of Exeter; 190.
 Mary, her son; 296.
Lanark, rebellious declaration at; 45, 46, 48.
Lancashire, arms seized in; 120.
Lancaster, New England; 361.

Landguard Fort; 143, 144, 148, 156.
Landport, barracks at; 242.
Lane:
 Dick; 11.
 J. T., letter of; 423.
 and Foster, Messrs., letter to; 382.
Lanesborough, Lord (1685), letter of;
 123.
Langdale, Lord (1688), letters of; 186,
 187.
Langley, Captain, of Harwich; 140.
Langstorn, Capt. Thomas; 100.
Langnedoe, Calvinists in; 331.
Lanier, Sir John; 171.
Lansdowne:
 Lord, G. Granville made; 309.
 Lady, at Whitehall; 318.
Larache, a Spanish garrison; 91.
Larance, Lieut., under Capt. Killegrew;
 115.
Lashley (Lealie ?), Sir James, his company at Tangier; 109.
Laton, Captain, of the Mary; 237.
Lauderdale, Duke of:
 in Scotland; 34.
 his anger with the Duke of York;
 70.
Laurens, Henry, President of American
 Congress; 419, 420.
Lawder, Captain, at Tangier; 103.
Lawes, Lieut. Richard, at Tangier; 109.
Lawler, David, letter of; 400.
Lawley, Sir Francis, candidate for parliament; 56.
Lawrence, Sir Thomas; 448.
Lawson, Admiral; 179.
Lead, ships sheathed with; 79.
Leake:
 Captain, pay due to; 116.
 Captain, master gunner; 306, 217.
 Sir John, at the Council; 299.
Le Cras:
 Commodore, of the Somerset; 388.
 E., letter of; 381.
Lee:
 Captain, at Nieuport; 27.
 Major, his proceedings at Boston;
 365.
 Mr., agent for Boston; 350.
 Arthur, letters of; 344, 353.
 — petition consigned to; 372.
 Major-General; 381, 392.
Leeds:
 letter dated at; 348.
 Duke of, William III. and; 298.
 — (1710), letter of; 298.
Leeward Islands, parish ministers in;
 298.
Lefever or Lefevre, Thomas:
 letter of; 299, 300.
 news from; 298.
Le Fleming, Sir Nicholas; 233.
Legard, Sir John, Commissioner; 81.
Legge:
 Captain; 111, 112.
 — ship for; 294.
 — of the Severn; 446.

Legge—cont.

- Mr., proposed master master of the fleet; 164.
 Alice; 337.
 Lady Anne, her marriage; 328.
 Augustus George, his marriage; 425.
 Lady Charlotte, her marriage; ib.
 Edward, letter of; 328.
 Major Francis, afterwards Governor, letters to; 334, 335.
 — appointments offered to; 334, 335.
 — appointed Governor of Nova Scotia; 336.
 — letters of and to; 345–389, passim, 397–417, 423.
 — his agent; 347.
 — money due to; ib.
 — proclamation by; 362.
 — speech of; 364.
 — his alleged oppressions; 376, 377.
 — his alleged persecution of Binney; 381, 382.
 — his maid servant; 387.
 — petitions, &c. to; 397.
 — his departure for England; 403–405.
 — attempts to cast odium upon; 408, et seq.
 — memorial by; 411, 412, 417.
 — his reply to the charges against him; 412–414.
 — his petition for expenses; 416.
 — Sir C. Douglas and; 423.
 George, afterwards first Lord Dartmouth, gentle; 16.
 — summary of his services; 25.
 — letter of; 16.
 — Captain, in command of the Fairfax; 20.
 — Governor of Portsmouth; 30.
 — his journal when commanding the Royal Katherine; 20–22.
 — Colonel, letter of; 33.
 — letters to; 23, 25, et seq.
 — his command in Nieupoort, Flanders; 27.
 — raised to the peerage; 79. See Dartmouth, Lord.
 Heneage, letters of; 328–330.
 — appointed King's Counsel; 329.
 — made a Baron of the Exchequer; 330.
 Henry, letter of; 328.
 Col. John; 10.
 Lady Louisa, her marriage; 445.
 Robert; 74.
 — temp. Hen. 8; 324.
 — of Great Cotton, his will; 330.
 Capt. Thomas, of the Weymouth, letter of; 295.
 — in Antigua; 295.
 — depositions against; ib.
 Col. William, letters to; 3–19.
 — summary of his services; 24.

Legge—cont.

- Capt. or Col. William, brother of first Lord Dartmouth; 74, 123, 151, 153, 163, 169, 173, 234, 240, 245, 247, 248, 256, 257, 259, 260.
 — in Ireland; 130.
 — and the government of Jamaica; 152.
 — candidate for Portsmouth; 222.
 — son of first Lord Dartmouth, letter to; 253.
 — his studies; ib.
 — son of the second Earl, epitaph on; 424.
 — (1783), letter to; 442.
 Leghorn; 17, 300.
 the Duke's galley at; 107.
 the Duke of Gloucester at; 334.
 Lehunt, George, letter of; 337.
 Leigh, Charles, candidate for Bedfordshire; 326.
 Leighton:
 Capt.; 102.
 Capt. Thomas; 237, 275.
 — letter of; 101.
 Leipsig, letters from the Earl of Dartmouth at; 330.
 Leith; 42.
 Le Marchant, W., of Guernsey; 124.
 Lenox, Duke of (1673); 22.
 Leonard, councillor at Boston; 361.
 Lesley, Count, his cousin; 5.
 Leslie:
 Col. the Hon. A., letters of; 343, 344.
 Sir James, at Tangier; 55.
 — peace concluded by; 56.
 — at Cadiz; 94.
 — letter of; ib.
 Lester, Ensign Marten, at Tangier; 109.
 Lestrangle, Mr., candidate for Winchester; 123.
 Levant, the, corsairs from; 105.
 Lewen, —; 80.
 Lewes, electioneering at; 332.
 Lewis, Erasmus; 318, 314.
 note by; 305.
 Swift and; 317.
 news letters from; 317, 319.
 candidate for Somerset; 326.
 letter of; 328.
 Lewisham:
 letter dated at; 326.
 freeholders at; 326.
 vicarage, candidate for; 329.
 manor, escheat in; 334.
 and Lord Dartmouth; 305.
 Lord (1722), his marriage; 326, 327.
 — (1745), and his sisters; 329.
 Lewsy (?), —, officer, his desertion; 224.
 Lexington:
 skirmish at; 393.
 Lord, letters of; 310, 311.
 Leyborne, Governor of Grenada:
 letter of; 354.
 letter of George III. concerning; 439.
 Leybourne or Leyburne, Mr.; 37, 225, 277.

Lichfield; 181.

- letters dated at; 16, 303.
- Chancellor of; 76.
- new charter to; 122.
- recorders of, letter about; ib.
- Lord (1688), his regiment; 142.
- with James II.; 242.
- and Coventry, Bishop of, Wood, letters of; 76.
- (1774), North, letter of; 372.

Lille fortifications; 120.Linch, Sir Henry; 284.Lindsay, Lord (1661); 8.Lisbon; 213.

- letters dated at; 101, 299, 304.
- English Factory at; 123.
- the Rock of; 135.
- mails from; 298, 300.
- Brasil fleets at; 300.
- English representatives at; 318, 319.
- river; 100.

Lisvegarny; 13.Littlecott, gathering at; 81.Littleton:

- an officer, his escape; 204.
- George; 44.
- Sir H.; 56.
- See Lytleton.

Liver, John de, Dutch Vice-Admiral; 21.Livius, Peter, letter of; 386.Lo, Mr., Coroner; 311.Locker, E. H., letter of; 445.Lockhart:

- Mr.; 318.
- Sir G., and the Test; 71.

Lockyer, —, servant; 287.Loder, Mr., of Deptford; 107.Lodington, Nathaniel, alderman of Tanager; 78, 97.Loggan, Mr., recommendation of; 76.London:

- Arlington Buildings; 286.
- Arlington Street; 320.
- Berkeley Square; 425.
- Berwick Street; 437.
- Bloomsbury; 293.
- Square; 352.
- new Bond Street; 327, 328, 331, 424.
- Brownlow Street; 314.
- Cavendish Square; 368.
- Chancery Lane; 135, 306.
- Channel Row, Westminster; 332.
- Charing Cross, Old Man's Coffee House; 297.
- Charles Street; 336.
- Charterhouse, the Mastership of; 322, 325.
- Cheapside, Half Moon in; 312.
- Christ Church; 304.
- Clarendon House; 23.
- Cockpit; 138, 214, 217, 245, 282, 305, 306, 310, 311, 313, 314, 326.
- Covent Garden; 352.
- Derby House; 26, 86, 89, 108, 290.
- Dorset Court, Westminster; 332.
- Dover Street; 402.

London—cont.

- Downing Street; 364, 366, 424, 438, 437, 445.
- Drury Lane, Castle Yard in; 307.
- Duke Street, Westminster; 370.
- East India House; 347.
- Fishermen's Company; 167.
- Fleet Prison; 358, 446.
- Globe Tavern; 311.
- Gray's Inn; 352.
- Lane, King's Road; 330.
- Green Street, Park Lane; 443.
- Grosvenor Square; 331.
- Lincoln's Inn; 135, 329.
- Lincoln's Inn Fields; 321, 330, 347, 366.
- burning of mass house in; 229.
- One Black Ball in; 327.
- Lincoln's Inn Gate; 306.
- Long Acre, the Bagno in; 311.
- Lower Grosvenor Street; 364, 424.
- Guildhall, meeting of Peers in; 228—230.
- documents dated at; 229, 279.
- Hanover Buildings; 327.
- Hanover Square; 333.
- Hicks Hall; 129.
- Hyde Park, duel in; 312—314.
- Inner Temple; 168, 352.
- James Street, Westminster; 334.
- Jermyn Street; 445.
- John Street, Rathbone Place; 420.
- King's Bench Walk; 349.
- King Street, Covent Garden; 423.
- Leicester Fields; 293.
- Minories Church; 234.
- Minories, Swan Street; 365.
- Newcastle House; 329.
- Newgate, prisoner in; 304.
- Old Palace Yard; 386.
- Palace Yard; 448.
- Pall Mall, letter dated at; 152.
- Parliament Street; 342, 358, 363, 374, 383, 400.
- Piccadilly; 123, 378.
- Post Office; 167, 230.
- Queen's Arms; 311, 312.
- Queen's Square, Westminster; 294.
- Royal Exchange; 52.
- Great Russell Street; 293.
- St. James's, Charles Street; 302.
- , letters dated at; 303, 363, 417.
- , Prince of Orange at; 236, et seq.
- St. James's Gate, proclamation at; 315.
- St. James's Square; 75, 120, 297, 371.
- , Halifax House; 293.
- St. James's Street; 144, 233.
- St. Martin's Church; 192.
- St. Paul's Churchyard; 364.
- Soho, Nassau Street; 366.
- , North Street; 347.
- Somerset House; 286, 305, 316, 367.
- , searched; 43.
- , Lord Feversham's lodgings in; 128.
- Southampton Street; 366.

London—cont.

- Spitalfields, sewer from; 139.
- Old Spring Garden; 295.
- Stanhope Street; 370.
- Suffolk Street, riot in; 328.
- Temple Bar, Bell Yard; 315.
- Tothill or Tuttle Street, Col. Legge's house in; 26.
- Tower, prisoners in; 9.
- letters dated at; 10, 11, 26, 49, 182, 157, 188, 323, 324, 325.
- lieutenant of; 9.
- the plague near; 11, 18.
- Constable of; 76.
- lodgings for prisoners in; 86.
- Dutch prisoners in; 194.
- batteries at; 211.
- keys of; 230.
- change of lieutenants; ib.
- Hill; 344.
- King's Head; 417.
- wharf; 142.
- Trinity House; 148.
- courts held at; 121, 122.
- assistance to Lord Dartmouth's expedition from; 140, 141.
- buoys to be relaid by; 198, 207.
- Turnmill Brook; 129.
- Victualling Office; 107.
- Waghorn's Coffee house; 372.
- Watermen's Hall; 157, 168, 257, 259.
- Welbeck Street; 348.
- Westminster, High Steward of; 315.
- Westminster school; 296.
- Whitechapel; 129.
- Whitehall; 10.
- documents dated at; 19, 39, 89, 95-114, 132, 138, 144, 146, 152, 170, 183, 190, 302, 219, 220, 224-226, 233, 236, 237, 253, 272, 294, 299, 305-310, 317, 333, 334, 335, 339, 343, 350-378, passim, 387, 437.
- Lord Dartmouth's lodgings in; 128.
- rebuilding of; 318.
- Chapel Stairs; 370.
- Banqueting room at; 445.
- York Buildings; 295, 315.
- merchants, and the sale of Dunkirk; 10.
- city companies, their barges; 10.
- new magistrates of; 98.
- lord mayor, &c. of, commissions of Charles II. to; 95.
- sheriffs and recorders of; ib.
- charter restored to (1688); 143.
- lord mayor, &c. turned out; ib.
- lord mayor of; 296.
- and Lord Jeffreys; 235.
- (1774), his invitation to Lord North; 367.
- burning of mass houses in; 230.
- chapels and houses pulled down; 232.
- lieutenancy of; 299.
- threatened disturbance in; 307.
- Bishop of (1688); 170.
- (1710), letters of; 296, 298.
- his death (1718); 315.

London—cont.

- Bishop of, John Robinson, letters of; 322, 325.
- and the Privy Seal; 317.
- Lord Strafford and; 318, 319.
- Londonderry:
 - fortifications of; 11.
 - Earl of (1665), his estate of Ballynekill; 12.
- Long, Mr., carpenter; 187.
- Longford, Earl of, letters of; 64, 76, 125.
- Longleat, letters dated at; 80, 120, 122, 184.
- Longsand Head; 253.
- Lopas, Peter, of Teriff; 109.
- Lords, House of, summonses from; 330.
- Loring:
 - councillor at Boston; 361.
 - narrative of; 362.
- Lorraine, army before; 119.
- Lostwithiel, election at; 318.
- Loughborough, Lord (1787), Edmund Burke at his house; 425.
- Louis XIV., Lord Arran made his aide-de-camp; 116.
- Louis XV.:
 - his letter to the Canadian Indians; 340.
 - his death; 354.
- Louis Philippe, Duke of Orleans, letter of; 445.
- Louisbourg, Nova Scotia:
 - statistics concerning; 355.
 - coals at; 408.
- Lovat, Lord, Simon (1746), trial of; 330.
- Lovelace, Lord (1688), gone over to the Prince; 210.
- Lovett, Mr., his mission to Persia; 436.
- Lowth, Mr., of St. Margaret's, Rochester; 329.
- Lowther, Sir John:
 - his proceedings at Workington; 233.
 - and the government of Carlisle; 245.
 - present at Lord Dartmouth's examination; 287.
- Lowthrop, J. certificate by; 304.
- Lucas, Lord, Lieutenant of the Tower; 230.
- Luke, Thomas; 17.
- Lumley:
 - Lord (1680), the Duke of York and; 53.
 - Colonel, absconding of; 326.
- Lundy, Captain, at Tangier; 103.
- Lunenburg:
 - families in; 335.
 - letter dated at; 398.
- Luton Park, letter dated at; 445.
- Luxembourg, report on fortifications at; 119.
- Lyme Regis, Dutch fleet seen off; 184, 185.
- Lynch:
 - , letter of; 302.
 - Mr., and the French prisoners; 137.
 - Sir Thomas, in Jamaica; 137.

Lyons, letter dated at; 331.

Lyte, Henry, letter of; ib.

Lyttleton:

Sir Charles, letters of; 152, 190, 198.

— prisoners sent to; 270.

Lord (1753), George, letter of; 330.

Lady; ib.

See Littleton.

M.

Maas, the; 3.

Macartney, General, his connexion with the duel between Hamilton and Mohun; 311-314.

Macarty, Lieut. General, in Ireland; 249.

Macclesfield, Earl of:
(1688) with the Prince of Orange;
180, 181.

at Exeter; 192.

Macdonnell, Captain; 102.

McDonald, Major, extract from letter of;
359.

Machias, in Maine:
ship attacked by inhabitants of; 381, 382.

pirates about; 383.

revolt in; 387.

deserters at; 412.

Mackay:

Thomas; 394.

Samuel, volunteers under; 395.

Mackeny:

Alex., captain of horse; 110.

— his sons and daughters; ib.

Madam Lewis; ib.

Mackenzie, Ensign Rorie, at Tangier;
110.

Maclean, Lieut.-Col.; 388, 405.

Highlanders under; 379.

McPherson, Captain, killed at Quebec;
406.

Macpherson, Sir John, letters of; 426.

Maddocks, John, opinion by; 334.

Madrid, letter dated at; 302.

Maestricht, garrison at; 181.

Mahe, reduction of; 421.

Mahe, Lieut. Phill., at Tangier; 109.

Mahratta war, the; 420-422.

Maidenhead, desertion of guards quartered
at; 228.

Maidstone:

assizes; 332.

election at; 338.

Malaoca, Indian ships at; 431.

Malaga; 17, 19, 201.

letter dated at; 99.

Malcolm:

John, a preventive officer, tarred and feathered; 348.

Major John, letters of; 426.

— his mission to Persia; 436.

Mallett, Sir Thomas, seizure of; 3.

Manchester, Duke of:

(1774), letters of; 347, 367.

his brother. See Montagu, Lord
Charles.

Manger, Joshua, letter of; 386.

letters to; 376, 377, 381, 382.

Mann, Mr., a volunteer; 100.

Manners, Major-General; 441.

Mansell, Lady Bab, at Bath; 327.

Mar, Earl of:

(1710), letter of; 301.

(1711), letter of; 306.

(1713), Secretary of State; 318, 319.
letter of; 319.

Marchmont, Earl of (1778), letter to; 343.

Margan, Sir Thomas; 10.

Margate; 224, 255, 256.

road; 256, 277.

Markham, Sir Robert; 58.

Marlborough:

Duke of, letter of; 296.

— and Lord Denbigh; 296.

— (1710), news from; 299.

— instructions to; 299.

— letters of; 301, 302.

— his challenge to Lord Poulett;
309.

See Churchill, John.

Duchess of, letter of; 315.

Marr, Lieut., observations on his report;
332.

Marseilles; 17.

Marsh:

Captain; 9.

Capt. Francis, statement by; 378.

— Governor Legge and; 383.

Marshall, Captain; 206.

Marston, Lord Orrery at; 327.

Martell, Marquis, ships under; 18.

Martii, Manoel, of Tangiers; 97.

Martin:

Cape; 18.

Captain; 270.

Governor, his despatches from North
Carolina; 390.

Mary, Princess, daughter of George III., letters of; 444, 445.

Maryland:

its support to Boston; 353.

preparations for resistance in; 372.

Deputy Governor of, letter to; 374.

state of government in; 384.

despatches from Deputy Governor
Eden in; 391.

Maseres, Francis, letter of; 352.

his pamphlet; ib.

Mason, Alderman, of Hull; 128.

Massachusetts:

state of; 339.

constitution of, proposed alterations
in; 360.

state of government in; 384.

Gazette; 343.

Bay, proceedings in; 347.

— Act for government of; 354.

Massachusetts—cont.

- Bay, people of, to be treated as rebels ; 871.
- restraint of trade ; 375.
- General Gage's despatches from ; 392, 398.
- inhabitants of, George III.'s comment on ; 440.
- Masserano, Prince ; 349.
- Massey, General Eyre :
 - sent to Nova Scotia ; 389.
 - letters of ; 389, 399, 402.
 - letters to ; 400, 411.
 - reinforcement by ; 415.
- Mathews :
 - Captain ; 78.
 - Mr. ; 17.
 - Sir Jo. ; 84.
- Matson, Mr. ; 294.
- Matteson, John, Dutch admiral ; 21.
- Matthews, Stephen, information of ; 218.
- Maurice, Prince ; 4.
- Maxwell :
 - Major, court-martial on ; 439.
 - Mr., his commission ; 423.
- Mayence :
 - Prince Rupert at ; 5.
 - Elector of ; 5, 6.
- Maynard, Thomas, of the Lisbon Factory ; 128.
- Meagher, John, apothecary at Tangier ; 105.
- Medway, the ; 187, 199.
- Port, Nova Scotia ; 415.
- Melfort, Lord (1688) ; 196.
- Melvill, Captain, at Tangier ; 103.
- Melville, Viscount, his trial ; 487.
- Memramcook, Nova Scotia, petition from ; 397.
- Mequinez, court of, peace concluded at ; 57.
- Palace of, letter dated at ; 302.
- Mercer, George, schoolmaster at Tangier ; 104.
- Meres, Thomas, at the Admiralty ; 108.
- Messa, corn for ; 91.
- Methley living, Yorkshire ; 134.
- Methuen, Mr., secretary ; 326.
- Metz ; 119.
- Meyrick, James, letters of ; 342, 358, 374, 383, 400.
- agent to Governor Legge ; 347.
- Michell :
 - Captain ; 196.
 - of the Deptford ; 110.
 - P., Secretary of the East India Company, etter of ; 347.
- Mickmack Indians ; 416.
- Middlesex :
 - lord lieutenant of ; 308.
 - Lord (1735) ; 328.
- Middleton :
 - Lord (1667), Governor of Tangier ; 16.
 - (1688) ; 189, 196, 197, 198, 200, 252.
 - sent to James II. ; 231.

Middleton—cont.

- Lord, with James II. ; 242.
- warrant sent by ; 269, 270.
- letter to ; 232.
- (1710), his sons prisoners ; 301, 306.
- Mr. ; 138.
- Stony ; 446.
- Middletown, battle near, American forces at ; 418.
- Miffin, T., letter of ; 383.
- Mildmay, Mr. ; 125.
- Mill End ; 236.
- Millington, Mr. ; 139.
- Mills :
 - Charles, letters of ; 426.
 - and Hicks, Boston printers ; 386, 410.
- Minga, John, petition of ; 104.
- Minors, Captain ; 157.
- Minot, Jonas C., of Quebec ; 394.
- Mint, the, petitions concerning ; 119.
- Mississippi, the :
 - proposed colony on ; 334.
 - murder of Spanish crews on ; 338.
 - settlements on ; 348.
 - land on ; 354.
- Mister :
 - George, letter of ; 104.
 - the victualler ; 106.
- Mitchell, —, with Admiral Herbert ; 204.
- Modena :
 - Duke of, Queen Anne's letter to ; 305.
 - Duchess of, death of ; 299.
- Mohekanuck tribe, ill usage of ; 361.
- Mohun, Lord :
 - challenge to Lord Poulett brought by ; 309.
 - (1712), his duel with the Duke of Hamilton ; 311-314.
- Mold, —, officer ; 224.
- Molesworth :
 - Colonel, in Jamaica ; 137.
 - Governor of Jamaica ; 228.
 - Mr., at Genoa ; 305.
- Molineux, freeman of Boston, New England ; 342.
- Moly, Mrs., of Tangier ; 97.
- Molyneux, Lord (1688) ; 167.
- Monatt, Lieut. John, at Tangier ; 110.
- Monck, General, commissioners to ; 25.
- Monckton, Robert, letter of ; 296.
- Monciffe, Captain, at Tangier ; 103.
- Monghyr, letter dated at ; 426.
- Monk :
 - Capt. George Henry, letter to ; 399.
 - deposition by ; 389.
 - letter to ; 402.
 - letter of ; 423.
 - James, recommended as Attorney-General of Nova Scotia ; 352, 367.
 - appointment of ; 376.
- Monmouth :
 - Duke of, orders of ; 27.
 - the Duke of York's references to ; 33, et seq.
 - the Duchess of Portsmouth and ; 60.
 - (1688), his return to court ; 101.

- Monmouth—cont.
 Duke of (1685), his expected landing in Scotland; 125.
 — expedition against; 126–128.
 — his capture; 128.
 Duchess of; 127.
- Monroe, Captain, at Tangier; 108, 110.
- Mons, army before; 119.
- Monson, Lord (1677), his seat in Reigate church; 26, 27.
- Mont St. Michel; 331.
- Montagu:
 Duke of (1711), subscription by; 307.
 — (1780); 442.
 Admiral, letters of; 343, 344.
 Edward, letter of; 352.
 Lord Charles, candidate for Southampton; 364, 365, 367.
 — letters of; ib.
 — printed notice by; 365.
 Sir James, his election at Carlisle; 309.
- Montecuculi:
 a general in Transylvania; 5, 6, 7.
 illness of; 8.
- Montfues, fortifications at; 18.
- Montgomery:
 Capt. James, of the Nonsuch; 188.
 Lord (1688), his regiment; 187.
 Mr.; 347.
 — under secretary to the Duke of Queensberry; 306.
 General Richard, commander of rebels; 404.
 — Quebec besieged by; 405–407.
 — his letter to General Carleton; 407, 408.
- Montpensier, Duc de, his death; 445.
- Montreal:
 letter dated at; 371.
 attempts to raise rebellion in; 394.
 General Montgomery at; 405.
 recovered by the English troops; 409.
- Montrose:
 Marquis of (1679); 41.
 Duke of (1711), letter of; 306.
- Moodie, J., letter of; 133.
- Moore:
 Captain, his schooner attacked; 381.
 — death of; ib.
 Colonel; 234.
 Mr.; 315.
 Sir Henry, Lieut. Governor of New York; 332.
 Sir Jonas, death of; 76.
- Moors, the:
 fights at Tangier with; 50, 51, 52.
 attacks by; 61.
 at Gibraltar; 297.
- Moray, Sir James, his company at Tangier; 110.
- Mordaunt, Lord (1688); 136.
- Morelby, Dr., interpreter; 270.
- Morgan:
 Sir H., shipwrecked; 25.
 Sir Thomas, his letter; 30.
- Morice, Humphry, Lord Warden of the Stannaries, letter to; 333.
- Morley, Mr., candidate for Winchester; 133.
- Morly, —; 31, 33.
- Morocco: kingdom of; 57.
 ambassador in England; 77, 78.
 King of, English mission to; 79.
 envoys from, treatment of; 319.
 Emperor of (1710), letter of; 302.
- Morpeth; 37.
 Lord, his dispute with Sir Geo. Fletcher; 75, 76.
- Morrice:
 —, groom; 312.
 John; 252.
- Morris:
 Charles, judge in Nova Scotia, paper signed by; 332.
 — deposition before; 387.
 — letters of; 398, 404, 409, 414, 417.
 — junior, letters of; 404, 410, 415, 417.
 Lieut. Governor, his commission; 439.
 Mr., statement on American Colonies by; 384.
- Moss, John, petition of; 381.
- Mostyn:
 —, his death in India; 420.
 Sir Roger, letter of; 296.
- Moulsworth, Colonel, governor of Jamaica; 239.
- Mount Denson, letters dated at; 389, 397.
- Mountjoy, Lord:
 (temp. Eliz.), fortification by; 125.
 (1686), his services in Ireland; 130.
 (1688), letter of; 136.
 (1689), major-general; 249.
- Mount's Bay; 115.
- Mountstevens, Mr.; 183.
- Mousset, Pierre, of Tangier; 97.
- Moyser, Mr., his Register Bill; 295.
- Mulgrave, Earl of:
 (1683), troop under; 99.
 (1688); 239.
 (1805), letter of; 437.
- Munster:
 peace of; 6, 7.
 Bishop of (1665); 12.
 — defeat of the Dutch by; 13.
- Murray:
 Captain, at Tangier; 103.
 Mr., aide-de-camp; 305.
 councillor at Boston; 361.
 — attack on his house; 362.
 Daniel, letter of; 362.
 General James, letter of; 367.
 Lord John; 328.
- Musgrave:
 Sir Christopher, Ordnance Commissioner; 49, 53, 81, 99, 115, 119, 124, 263.
 — letters of; 93, 138, 144, 233, 309.

Musgrave—cont.

- Sir Christopher, his discovery of lead ore; 138.
 — and the government of Carlisle; 245.
 Philip, letters of; 211, 216, 281, 235; 245.
 — letters to; 144, 233, 232.
 — member for Appleby; 124.
 — at the Ordnance Office; 159, 183.
 — at Gravesend; 247.
 Mustow, Mrs., of Tangier; 97.
 Myddelton, Capt. Charles, receipt of prize by; 20.
 Mysore, evacuation of; 427.

N.

- Nagle, Sir Richard; 234.
 Nantes; 17.
 Naples, letter dated at; 309.
 Narborough, Sir John; 290.
 his ships about Barbadoes; 185, 186.
 Nartos, Diego, of Tangier; 96.
 Naseby, battle of; 24.
 Nash, Beau, his losses at Bath; 327.
 Nassau:
 Count of, with the Prince of Orange; 178.
 New Providence, letter dated at; 399.
 Navy:
 the, lists of, in 1666; 15.
 ships sheathed with lead; 79.
 Commissioners of; 152.
 See Ships.
 Neagle, Captain; 225, 277, 278, 279.
 Negroes, traffic in; 26, 68, 100.
 Neilson, Mr., instructions to; 132.
 Nelme, a copyist, letters concerning; 348.
 Nelson:
 Major, at Tangier; 84.
 Lord, his funeral; 437.
 Nesbitt, Attorney-General in Nova Scotia; 352, 367, 418.
 Neustadt; 7.
 Nevell:
 Captain, of the Elizabeth; 140.
 John, translation by; 106.
 Nevis, West Indies:
 the Duke of Albemarle at; 135.
 tumults in; 332.
 Newark, Prince Rupert at; 24.
 Newberry, New England; 365.
 Newburgh, Lady; 314.
 Newburn, North Carolina; 346, 347.
 riot at; 390.
 Newcastle-on-Tyne:
 the Duke of York at; 37.
 troops raised for Charles I. at; 74.
 governor of; ib.

Newcastle, Duke of:

- (1666), William, letter of; 14.
 (1682), Henry, letters of; 74, 75, 79, 80, 125.
 (1745), letters of and to; 329.
 (1765), letter of; 331.
 (1767), electioneering at Lewes; 332, 333.
 Newfoundland:
 fish; 94.
 convoy from; 99.
 fisheries; 135, 333, 375.
 French ships destroyed off; 300.
 government of; 310.
 state of fishermen; 384.
 government in; ib.
 recruiting in; 415.
 Newhall, Essex, letters dated at; 128, 131.
 New Hampshire:
 riots in; 339.
 Lieut. Governor of; 365.
 restraint of trade; 375.
 state of government in; 384.
 despatches of Governor Wentworth from; 395. successes of the rebels in; ib.
 New Jersey:
 its support to Boston; 353.
 state of government in; 384.
 despatches of Governor Franklin from; 392.
 Newland, commoner of the City; 95.
 Newman, Tho., of Dartmouth; 300.
 Newmarket; 68, 74, 146.
 Newnham Padox, letter dated at; 296.
 New Orleans, Governor of; 338.
 Newport:
 Shropshire; 131.
 Nova Scotia, volunteers in; 401.
 Earl of; 24.
 Lord (1688), letter of; 162.
 Newton:
 Collector; 376.
 Dr., news from; 299, 300.
 Henry, letter of; 350.
 John, his debt; 409.
 New York:
 letters dated at; 162, 331, 336, 348, 346, 348, 374, 417.
 state of feeling at; 374.
 blocked up by the French; 417.
 Governor, &c. of; 331, 332. rioters confined at; 332.
 Governor of, Tryon, his letters; 336.
 meeting of the Sons of Liberty at; 344.
 tea riots at; 346.
 East India Co.'s agent at; 347.
 the rebels at; 361.
 state of government in; 384.
 privateers of; 385.
 despatches of Lieut.-Governor Colden from; 392.
 Fort House, burning of; 397.
 the royal forces about; 398.
 George III.'s letter on proceedings in; 440.

Nicholas :

- Major ; 68.
- Secretary, retirement of ; 11.
- Mr., his house in Spring Garden ; 295.
- Noll ; 37, 43, 44, 57, 58, 60.
- Lieut. St. John, Major Howston killed by ; 75.

Nicholson :

- , witness of the Hamilton and Mohun duel ; 811, 812.
- Lieut. ; 82.
- Fr., letters of ; 320.
- Joseph, and the Indians ; 359.

Nickson, Dr., prebendary of Canterbury ; 811.Nicolson, Mr., courier to Tangier ; 79.*Nieuport, Flanders :

- English occupation of ; 27.
- punishments of soldiers at ; ib.

Nimeguen, peace of ; 71.Nismes, Calvinists at ; 331.*Noailles, Duke of ; 300, 304.*Noel, Lord :

- and the government of Portsmouth ; 44, 72.
- (1682), Edward, letters of ; 75, 76, 77.
- his son ; 76.

Norfolk :

- sheriff of ; 293.
- protest against the American war from ; 419.

Norris, Sir John :

- at Barcelona ; 298.
- off the Isle of Wight ; 307.

Norshrott, Captain, at Nieuport ; 27.North :

- and Grey, Lord (1688) ; 229.
- and Guilford, Lord (1745), letters of ; 329.
- Mr., afterwards Lord, Earl of Dartmouth's travels with ; 330.
- Lord (1773), and Governor Hutchinson ; 338.
- (1774) ; 362.
- letters of ; 363-368, 424.
- his invitation from the Lord Mayor ; 367.
- at a Cabinet meeting ; 371, 372.
- George III.'s references to ; 438.
- Capt. A., report by ; 417.
- Brownlow, Bishop of Lichfield ; 372.
- Fra., letter of ; 293.

Northampton ; 132.

- Duke of Cumberland at ; 329.

Northumberland, Duke of (1684), Vauban and ; 119.Norton :

- Essex, living of ; 325.
- Colonel, candidate for Petersfield ; 237.
- Col. Richard, letter to ; 282.
- Nortus, Diego, of Tangier ; 79.
- Norwich, letter dated at ; 362.

U 24961.

Norwood :

- Col. Henry, letters of ; 11, 15, 16.
- his house at Tangier ; 85.

Richard, certificate of ; 238.Nottingham, Earl of ;

- (1683), letters of ; 88, 89.
- at the Admiralty ; 93, 103.
- (1688) ; 170.
- and the Prince of Orange ; 222.
- (1689), letter of ; 253.
- his brother ; ib.
- (1691), warrant signed by ; 285.
- his examination of Lord Dartmouth ; 286-292.
- (1702), letters of ; 293, 294, 295.
- his daughter's marriage ; 294.
- his twenty-first child ; ib.

Nova Scotia :

- cost of civil establishment ; 333.
- Assembly of ; ib.
- remarks on ; 334.
- illicit trade in ; 334, 339.
- establishment, proposed increase of ; 335.
- Col. Legge made Governor of ; 336.
- Attorney-General of ; 339, 352, 367.
- lands reserved in ; 341.
- state of the province in 1773 ; 344.
- petition from ; 350.
- communications with ; 355.
- proclamation against meetings in ; 362.
- General Assembly of ; 364.
- House of Assembly, address from ; 367.
- recommendations of the Council ; 368.
- Chief Justice of ; 371, 403.
- taxation of ; 373.
- land owners in ; 374.
- grants of land in ; 375, 401, 403.
- deficiency in Treasury ; 376.
- address from Council ; 378.
- recruiting in ; 378, 379, 385, 389, 399, 403, et seq.
- volunteers ; 403-423, passim.
- Governor Legge's reply to the charges against himself ; 412-414.
- privateers off ; 414, 415.
- loyalty of ; 384.
- families settled in ; 385.
- directions for its safety ; 387.
- complaints of disloyalty in ; 388.
- petitions concerning ; 397.
- cost of establishment ; 389.
- armed cruisers off ; 389.
- return of officers in the volunteers ; 400.
- wretched condition of some parts ; 404.

H II

O.

- Oase Edge; 141, 152, 165, 167, 259.
 Odyk, M., at the Hague; 83.
 Ogilby, Mr., his theatre at Dublin; 11.
 Ogilethorpe:
 Colonel, his regiment; 185.
 Lady; 817.
 — her daughter; ib.
 Sir Theo., letter of; 161.
 O'Hara:
 Governor; 338.
 Charles, Governor of Senegambia,
 memorial of; 375.
 Ohio, the:
 new settlement on; 385.
 Indians on; 360, 366.
 new colony on; 372.
 Okely, John, of Pennsylvania; 357.
 Oldys, Alex., at Tangier; 110.
 Olney parish; 423.
 Omdut ool Omrah; 435.
 Onslow, Sir Richard, charges against; 3.
 Opie, J., the artist; 448.
 Orange, Prince of:
 (1661), at Cleve; 4.
 (1679), his troubles with Amsterdam;
 31.
 his assurances to the Duke of York;
 34.
 Charles II. and; 34, 39.
 Algernon Sidney and; 65.
 in England; 65, 66.
 rumours concerning; 158.
 his sailing from Holland; 170.
 his preparations with the Dutch fleet;
 176, 180.
 sets sail; 177, 181. strength of his fleet and army; ib.
 his reception in Devonshire; 188.
 at Exeter; 189, 190, 192, 193.
 sailing of his fleet; 203.
 regiments gone over to; 210.
 his letters to Lord Dartmouth; 219, 235, 239.
 at Sherborne; 219.
 additions to his followers; 222.
 negotiations with; ib.
 Lord Feversham's letter to; 229. expected in London; 230.
 the Peers' address to; 234.
 James II.'s submission to; 236.
 Peers summoned by; 237.
 his state at St. James's; 238. order by; 237.
 his instructions to S. Pepys for Lord Dartmouth; 240, et seq.
 reserved and hard of access; 241.
 at Helvoetsluys; 262.
 orders signed by; 247, 251, 283—
 285.
 Princess of; 245.
 Orbestoune, —; 70.
 Orchard Wyndham, letter dated at; 326.
 Orde, Gilbert, letter of; 134.

Ordinance Office:

- letters, &c. concerning; 10, 49.
 bankrupt state of; 211, 216, 222.
 Ormonde, Duke of:
 (1661), Spanish opinion of; 6.
 (1661, &c.), letters of; 9—16, 23, 73.
 (1662), in Chester; 9.
 (1684), his son Lord Arran; 121.
 (1684), letter of; 121.
 (1703); 293.
 (1711); 307.
 letters to; ib.
 (1713), High Steward of Westminster;
 315.
 his desertion of James II.; 216.
 his proceedings at Dublin; 308. in Chester; ib.
 letter of; ib.
 government of Ireland taken from;
 318.
 Duchess of, Elizabeth, letters of; 15.
 Orquart, Captain, at Tangier; 103.
 Orrery, Earl of:
 (1666), his house at Charleville; 14,
 (1731), letters of; 327.
 Ossory:
 Earl of, (1665), letter of; 12.
 — (1673) rear-admiral; 20.
 Lady, confinement of; 11.
 Ossulstone, Lord (1688); 229.
 Ostend; 31, 33, 37, 170, 263, 299.
 Oster bank off; 20, 23.
 letter dated at; 202.
 Otis, Colonel, of Boston, New England;
 343.
 Oude, settlement of; 427, 435.
 Oughton, Sir James A.; 381, 438.
 letters of; 368.
 Overkerck, M., with the Prince of Orange;
 181.
 Owen, William, artist; 448.
 Owens, David, attack on Indians by; 359.
 Oxford; 87.
 court at; 11, 12.
 letter dated at; 125.
 Charles I. at; 129.
 convention of old parliament of; 241.
 old Town Hall; 330.
 cost of a journey to; 445, 446.
 University, High Steward of; 424.
 — expenses at; 446.
 All Souls College, fellowship at; 299.
 Jesus College; 134.
 Magdalen College, James II. and;
 299.
 — expenses at; 446.
 St. Mary's; 446.
 Trinity College; 330.
 Bishop of (1688); 170.
 Earl of, Harley (1711), letter of;
 307.
 — letter of; 309.
 — (1712), letter of; 310.
 — his cousin, from Hanover; ib.
 — (1713), letters of; 315.
 — and Lord Islay; 317.
 — letters of; 319—325.
 — rhymes by; 321.

Oxford—cont.

- Earl of, illness of; 322.
- (1722), letter of; 327.
- (1789), and Prior's papers; 329.

P.

Page, Sir Gregory, his house at Blackheath; 330.

Paine:

- Mr., councillor at Boston; 361.
- Thomas, clerk at Tangier church; 104.

Palatine, Elector, and the court at Vienna; 7.

Pariente, Solomon, petition of; 104.

Paris, letters dated at; 115, 317.

Scotch College at; 447.

Parke, Daniel, Governor of Antigua, letter of; 295.

Parker, Sir Thomas, Chief Justice, letter of; 316.

Parma, Princess of; 5.

Parr, Dr., epitaph by; 424.

Parsons:

- Mr., postmaster of Exeter, letter of; 192, 193.
- John, Commissioner of Victualling; 107.
- Sir John; 159, 160.
- Green, letter dated at; 365.

Partridge:

- his predictions; 324.
- William, cattle stealer; 316.

Pascoll, John, master of pacquett boat; 192.

Pate, Thomas, at Tangier; 109.

Patterson:

- William, letter of; 304.
- governor of St. John's Island; 389.

Pauley, Mr., his estate near Salisbury; 129.

at Stepney; ib.

Payne, Edward, a captive, letters of; 106, 107.

Paz or Pass. See De Paz.

Pearse:

- J., surgeon general; 99, 100, 145, 148, 151, 152, 154, 155, 157, 161.
- letters of; 148-161, passim, 152, 158, 217, 223.

Peeke, John, letter of; 316.

Pelham, Mr., at Lewes; 332.

Pemberton, Chief Justice, appointment of; 60.

Pembroke, Earl of (1683), death of; 89. (1687), his coach; 134.

(1688); 229.

present at Lord Dartmouth's examination; 287.

Pendarves, James, letter of; 99.

Pendennis, letter dated at; 112, 115.

Castle, state of; 112.

— troops quartered in; 115.

Penn:

Admiral; 179.

John, governor of Pennsylvania, petition to; 353.

William, letter of; 169.

Lient. William, of the Bristol; 170.

Mr. (1774), and Philadelphia; 347.

Deputy Governor, his despatches from Pennsylvania; 391.

Pennsylvania:

its support to Boston; 353.

petition from; ib.

despatches from Deputy Governor Penn in; 391.

Journal, extract from; 355-358.

Gazette, extracts from; 363.

Penny:

Captain; 228.

Captain William; 152.

Pennyfeather, Miss, at Bath; 327.

Pensacola, letters dated at; 338, 348.

Peny, William, letter of; 289.

Penzance, letter dated at; 333.

Pepperell, councillor at Boston; 361.

Pepys, Samuel; 29.

letters of; 26, 95, 97, 105, 107, 112, 121.

reports by; 97, 252, 253.

petitions referred to; 104.

press warrants signed by; 138.

his relation of Charles II.'s escape from Worcester; 49.

or "Peepes," with the Tangier expedition; 94.

in Spain; 103, 105, 107.

letters of; 105, 107.

his interview with Charles II. concerning Lord Dartmouth; 113.

reports on petitions by; 118, 119.

instruction to; 122.

his notes on Capt. Ridley's proceedings; 135.

his letters and instructions to Lord Dartmouth; 139-252.

his list of commanders; 174.

his displeasure with Lord Dartmouth's secretary; 245, 247.

his retirement from office; 253.

Perceval, Spencer, letter of; 445.

Percy, Lord (1775), in command at Lexington; 393.

Periwigs; 223.

Perriman, Captain; 142.

Perrot, Sir Richard; 363.

Perry Hall, letters dated at; 298.

Persia, Major Malcolm's mission to; 436.

Peterborough:

Earl of (1679); 32, 36.

— book left with; 78.

— (1688), his flight; 228.

— taken near Ramsgate; 231.

— (1731), at Bath; 327.

Lady, her house at Tangier; 85.

Bishop of (1688); 229.

Petersfield, candidate for; 237.

- Petre, Father :
 a privy councillor ; 138.
 or Peeters, his flight ; 230.
 capture of ; 231.
- Petrie, Mr., Governor of Fort St. George ;
 426.
- Pett, Sir Phineas ; 161, 251.
 letters of ; 80, 174.
 instructions to ; 143, 144.
- Petworth, letters dated at ; 135.
- Pheaton, Edward, printer ; 386.
- Philadelphia :
 letters dated at ; 337, 345, 351, 353,
 354, 358, 362, 366, 367, 371-373,
 383, 417.
 teas consigned to ; 344, 345.
 customs at ; 347.
 East India Co.'s agent at ; ib.
 postal grievances in ; 351.
 proposed Congress at ; 354.
 meeting at, proceedings at ; 355-358.
 proposed new Post Office at ; 358.
 Congress at ; 362, 363, 366, 371, 390, 391.
 — letter from ; 375.
 provincial Convention at ; 373.
 Assembly of, Dr. Franklin and ; 381.
 state of government in ; 384.
 privateers of ; 385.
 General Howe's march on ; 398.
 the rebels in ; 410.
 Quakers of ; ib.
 great distress in ; 418.
 cost of provisions ; ib.
 losses of British forces on march
 from ; 418.
- Philaethes, pamphlet by ; 338.
- Philanthropos, letter signed ; 385.
- Phillips :
 Ensign, pay due to ; 116.
 Thomas, his report on fortifications at Luxembourg, &c. ; 119, 120.
 — "honest Tom," his high character ; 125
 — letters of ; 120, 122, 133, 135,
 203.
 — his works at Portsmouth ; 222.
 — his draught of the ruins of
 Tangier ; 111.
 William, letter of ; 378.
- Phipps, Lord Chancellor of Ireland ; 318.
- Pictures by Vandeveldt, prices of ; 153.
- Pier, Wm. (?) ; 295.
- Pierie, Lieut. William, letter of ; 377.
- Pigot, Brigadier-General, in the fight at Charlestown ; 393.
- Pilkington, Mr., at Ipswich ; 120.
- Pilton, E., at Cadiz ; 52.
- Pirgo, letter dated at ; 133.
- Pitt :
 John, of Boston, New England ; 342.
 Thomas, letter of ; 354.
 William (1786), letter of ; 424.
 — dissolution of his ministry ; 429.
- Pitts :
 Mr., at Hull ; 136.
 — of Boston, New England ; 343.
 George ; 32.
- Pittsburgh, skirmishing with Indians near ; 359.
 letter dated at ; 360.
- Plaistow, letter dated at ; 446.
- Plymouth ; 89, 198, 204, 221.
 letters dated at ; 111, 128, 210.
 Tangiers troops sent to ; 103.
 seized by Lord Bath ; 216.
 Dutch fleet at ; 222.
 seized for the Prince of Orange ; 274.
 Sound ; 202.
 New England, meeting at ; 347.
 Earl of, letters of ; 81, 121, 134.
- Pointall ; 99.
- Poland :
 a lame Prince from ; 4.
 King of, and the Turks ; 93.
- Pomerania ; 5, 7.
- Ponte, James, sergeant at Nieuport, punishment of ; 27.
- Ponwell ; 420.
 English army routed near ; 421.
- Poole :
 Haven ; 202.
 port of ; 217.
 Antelope Tavern ; 233.
 Capt. William ; 17.
- Poonah expedition ; 420-422.
- Popacheus, Lieutenant in Spanish fleet ; 82.
- Pope :
 Alexander, censures on ; 327, 328.
 or Poope, Major ; 59, 61.
- Porcia, Prince, at Vienna ; 7.
- Portendie, English claim to ; 338.
- Porter :
 Captain, of the John pink ; 17.
 Lord Chancellor of Ireland, letters of ; 130, 131.
- Portland :
 Point ; 203
 letter dated at ; 219.
 Road ; 212.
 Lord (1713) ; 315.
 Countess of (1684), letter of ; 120.
 — her creditors ; ib.
- Portmore, Lord :
 his wife, the Countess of Dorchester ;
 306.
 (1711), letter of ; 304.
 (1713), opposition in Scotland to ;
 318.
- Portsmouth ; 148-153, 199, 201, 219, 222, 268.
 letters dated at ; 76, 123, 127, 203,
 211, 217, 224, 225, 232-236, 242,
 244, 328.
 plan of ; 4.
 fortifications, &c. of ; 4, 120, 135,
 230.
 governor of, Geo. Legge, afterwards
 Lord Dartmouth ; 20, 25, 26, 29,
 44, 46, 63, 64, 65, 67, 68, 72, 143.
 Charles II. at ; 93, 99.
 progress of works at ; 51.
 military quarrel at ; 75.
 recordership of ; 123.
 defeats of garrison ; 127.
 the great street in ; 76.

Portsmouth—cont.

- gunners at; 120.
- expected attack on; 163.
- troops hastened to; 183.
- expected Dutch attack on; 186.
- charter for; 202.
- Dutch ships near; 204.
- works at; 222.
- charter for; 223.
- election at; ib.
- James II.'s son at; 223-225, 272, 275, 277.
- the gates kept open; 225.
- mayor of, deposition by; 230.
- alarm in; 232, 234.
- Col. Berkeley's instructions touching; 237.
- election at; ib.
- Irish garrison at; 242.
- soldiers quartered on inhabitants; 244.
- ships from; 258, 259.
- field pieces at; 266.
- garrison; 279, 281, 282.
- Duke of Berwick at; 281, 282.
- defence of; 289, 290.
- troops embarked at; 388.
- New Hampshire; 355.
- rioters at; 395.
- Duchess of; 39, 60.

Portugal :

- King of (1661), his daughter's marriage; 5, 6.
- and Spain, armies of; 10.
- dispute between; 366.
- inhabitants of, in Tangier; 83.
- army of, entering Spain; 298.
- English assistance to; 300.

Portumna, letters dated at; 107, 132.

Post Office, the, papers concerning; 27.

Postboy, the, Abel Roper and; 298.

Poulett :

- Earl, letters of; 293-295, 310.
- the Duke of Marlborough's challenge to; 309.
- Lady, Bridget, letters of; 309.

Poulson, or Powson :

- Capt. Edward, letters of; 162, 217.
- his ship deserted; 217, 227.
- his ship seized; 233.

Povey, Francis :

- letters from Tangier of; 50, 51, 52, 61, 68, 77-80, 239.
- reports by; 59, 61.
- Kirke's character of; 62.
- in England; 72, 73.
- his return to Tangier; 77.
- at Gibraltar; 110.
- in the expedition against Monmouth; 126.
- his becoming Protestant; 239.
- Lord Carmarthen's recommendation of; 302.

Powbrocke (?), Sir W. Courtney's house at; 188.

Powell :

- Mr., 30, 31.

Powell :

- William, of Boston, New England; 342.

Powis :

- Lord (1688); 167, 277.
- (1688), with the young Prince; 225.
- Lady, and the young Prince of Wales; 224.

Pownall :

- Mr., or John; 400.
- letters of; 338-342, 350, 354, 358, 366, 375, 423.
- letters to; 350, 365, 386.
- letters delivered to; 376, 377.

Powntney, William, at Tangier; 108.

Powson. See Poulson.

Pratt, Charles; 74.

Preistman :

- Captain; 102.
- of the Hampton Court; 194, 199.

Presbyterians, murdering; 83.

Preston :

- rebels at; 379.
- Lord (1684); 120.
- letters of; 121, 204.
- (1688), Secretary of State; 178, 224, 228.
- his desire for retirement; 241.
- papers taken with; 253-255.
- his trial; 289.
- his brother James; 292.
- Lady Dorchester and; 292.
- Major, detachment under; 394.

Price :

- Elisba, of Pennsylvania; 357.
- Gryffyd, late Steward of Lichfield; 417.

Mr., killed in a duel; 327.

Prices, illustrations of; 446.

Priestman, Captain :

- at Tangier; 80.
- "a leading politician"; 261.

Prince, Mr.; 39.

Prior, Matthew :

- letter of; 317.
- his executor; 329.
- publication of his papers; ib.

Pritchard :

- Sir William; 99.
- as Lord Mayor; 95.
- his refusal to be Lord Mayor; 143.

Proctor, a volunteer; 385.

Prospect, Nova Scotia; 339.

Providence :

- Island, fortification of; 302.
- plantations, restraint of trade; 375.
- state of government in; 384.

Pulteney, Mr., letter of; 310.

Putney, the Royal family at; 10.

Q.

Quakers, in America; 372.

Quebec; 447.

Jesuits in; 338.

Chief Justice of, W. Hey; 347, 363. defenceless state of; 341.

affairs at; 352.

Bill, the feeling against; 362, 363.

Attorney General of; 367.

Richard Cumberland at; 371.

letter dated at; 375.

Gen. Carleton commanding at; 387.

despatches from Governor Carleton proposal to send Russian troops to;
at; 394.

395.

corps of volunteers formed about;
ib.

superintendent of Indian affairs in;
397.

rebels beaten at; 399.

Nova Scotians distinguished at; 404.

account of its siege in 1776; 405-407.

St. John's Gate; 406.

the Pot-ash; ib.

Saut de Matilot; ib.

Queenborough; 144.

oyster drndgers of; 178.

Queensberry, Duke of:

(1685) letter of; 125.

(1709) his vote; 295.

(1711), his death; 306.

as Secretary of State for Scotland;
318.

Querian, Marquis de:

passport for; 233.

Sir Wm. Jennens' alleged treatment
of; 238, 239.

his information against Sir W. Jennens; 245.

Quiffin, Captain, his pink taken; 186.

R.

Radnor, Earl of:

Lord Lieut. of Ireland; 180.

(1710), letter of; 296.

(1718), letter of; 315.

Radnorshire, elections in; 322.

Ragley, letters dated at; 81, 86.

Ragobah, and the Poonah expedition; 421, 422.

Ramsgate; 187, 231, 255, 256.

Ranelagh, Lord:

(1687), at Athlone; 182.

(1688); 280.

Ranshe, Mr., curacy for; 295.

Raphson, Jos., certificate by; 304.

Rapin's History, continuation of; 328.

Ratisbon; 8.

Raulyns, Mr., of Lichfield; 122.

Rawden, —; 11.

Raynes, Dr., Chancellor of Lichfield; 76.

Raynham, Norfolk, letter dated at; 294.

Reading; 223.

skirmish near; 228, 230.

treatment of Irish dragoons at; ib.

—; 81.

Rebellion of 1745; 329.

Reed, Joseph:

of Philadelphia, letters of; 337, 345,

346, 351-354, 358, 362, 366, 367,

371-373.

instructions prepared by; 357.

Register Bill, the; 295.

Reigate:

letter dated at; 303.

church, Lord Monson's seat in; 26, 27.

Reinberg; 4.

Relfe, Mr., organist at Greenwich Hospital; 445.

Remington, —, coachman; 312.

Remusal, W., of Tangier; 97.

Renegadoes; 106, 107.

Rennalls, George, of Gosport; 73.

Rennes; 331.

Reresby:

Col. Edmond, letter of; 242.

— complaint against; 244.

Sir John, letter of; 134.

Reus, Captain de, pay due to; 116.

Reynett, Mrs.; 444.

Reynolds, —, witness of the Hamilton and Mohun duel; 311, 312.

Rhine wine; 5.

Rhode Island:

remarks on; 334.

restraint of trade; 375.

state of government in; 384.

despatches from Governor Wanton
in; 391.

Ribaut, Mynheer, Dutch ambassador; 341.

Ribston, Yorkshire, letter dated at; 138.

Rich:

Alderman; 99.

Sir Robert, concerned in the Hamilton and Mohun duel; 311, 312.

Richards, Mr.; 146, 178.

Richmond:

Surrey; 37.

— letter dated at; 306, 316.

Duke of (1679); 39.

— (1712), his connexion with the
Hamilton and Mohun duel; 311-314.

Rider, Mr., with the expedition against
Monmouth; 128.

Ridge, Ri., mayor of Portsmouth; 123.

Ridley, Captain Hugh, his cruize off the Burlings; 135, 136.

Ringwood, Prince of Orange's troops near;
225.

- Bio de la Plata; 366.
- Ristigouche :
the river; 375.
fisheries on; 401.
- Roane, Thomas, town clerk of Tangier; 97, 105.
- Roberts :
Lord (1679); 83.
a chairman; 314.
J., letters of; 426.
Thomas, apothecary at Tangier; 104, 109.
- Robertson :
General; 402.
— letter of; 403.
James, barrack master, letter of; 400.
- Robins, a shoemaker; 815.
- Robinson :
—, ship seized by; 233.
Mr., surveyor of stores; 64.
— letters of; 396.
— Secretary to the Treasury; 400.
John, letters of; 411, 422.
- Rochelle; 73.
- Rochester :
Scotch troops at; 103.
soldiers sent from; 142, 144.
James II. at; 230, 236.
St. Margaret's; 329.
Earl of, Hyde (1683); 81, 86.
— (1683), letters of; 87, 88.
— (1683), at Twickenham; 98.
— letter to; 103.
— (1684), letters of; 112, 115.
— his opinion of Lord Dartmouth's services at Tangier; 113, 114.
— (1687), letter of; 131.
— (1688), letter of; 146.
— out of favour with James II.; ib.
— (1688); 229, 232, 235, 242.
— letter of; 232.
— letter to; 280.
— (1711), letters of; 303, 305.
Bishop of (1688); 229.
— (1712), Sprat, letter of; 310.
— (1713); 315.
- Rochford :
Earl of (1774), letter of; 364.
— (1774); 366.
— at Cabinet meetings; 371, 372.
- Rockett, Caleb, of Dartmouth; 300.
- Rockingham, Marquis of (1765), letter of; 331.
- Rockroye; 119.
- Rodd, Miss, at Bath; 327.
- Roderigus, John, petition of; 104.
- Rodgers, Rev. John, letter of; 374.
- Rogers, —, of Cumberland; 398.
- Rollo, Captain, at Tangier; 103, 110.
- Romney, Lord (1767), and his son; 333.
- Rooke, Capt. George :
report signed by; 97.
of the St. David; 101.
of the Deptford; 138.
- Rooke, Capt. George—cont.
letters of; 223, 237, 239.
sent to intercept the young Prince; 223.
his treatment by the Governor of Gibraltar; 109.
- Rooth :
Captain; 158, 187, 188, 190, 258, 263, 265, 266, 269.
Francis, letter to; 202.
- Roper, Abel, and the Gazette; 296, 298.
- Roscommon, Lord (1681); 66.
- Ross, William, Lieutenant of Nova Scotia Volunteers; 409.
- Rossi, Charles; 448.
- Roth, Mr., of Tangier; 104.
- Rothe, Edward, of Tangier; 97.
- Rotherford, Lieut. And., at Tangier; 110.
- Rothwell :
Mr., gunner; 217.
J., letter of; 222.
- Rotterdam; 8.
soldiers ready at; 192.
news from; 293.
letter dated at; 305.
- Rowe, Mr., under secretary to the Duke of Queensberry; 306.
- Rowley, Mr.; 314.
- Roxborough, deserters from; 399.
- Roxburgh, Duke of :
(1707), letter of; 294.
his marriage; ib.
- Roxbury, New England; 344.
- Ruggles, councillor at Boston; 361.
- Rupert, Prince :
his letters to Col. W. Legge; 8-9.
his chemical tastes; 3, 5.
attacked in a book; 5.
French gunner recommended by; 10.
his fight with the Dutch; 15.
list of the navy under; 15.
in command against the Dutch; 22, 24.
Wm. Legge's services with, in the Civil Wars; 24.
- Russell :
Captain; 31, 242.
Lord (1688), with the Prince of Orange; 203.
Frank, deserts to the Prince of Orange; 210.
Jack, book dedicated to; 5.
Mr., gone to Holland; 261.
- Russia :
Czar of (1712), his threats; 310.
infantry from, to be sent to Quebec; 395.
- Rutland, America; 362.
- Rye; 202, 264.
Charles II. landed at; 20.
Bay; 263.
- Ryley, Philip, sergeant-at-arms, sent to arrest Lord Dartmouth; 285-287.

S.

- Sables, Cape, privateers off; 414.
 Sachem Indians; 340.
 Sacheverell, Dr.; 297.
 Sackfield (Sackville?); 224.
 Sackville:
 Lieut.-Col., at Nieuport; 27.
 Mr., candidate for Kent; 332.
 — at Lewes; ib.
 Col. Edward, commander at Tangier; 55, 104.
 — a defender of Lord Dartmouth; 115.
 St. Alban's; 132.
 Lord Churchill's house at; 214.
 Head; 217.
 Lord (1680), his regiment; 204.
 Duke of, his regiment gone over to the Prince; 210.
 — (1712), letter of; 309.
 — in the Band of Pensioners; ib.
 St. Andrea, Fort; 17.
 Saint Augustine:
 letter dated at; 349.
 Garrison Hospital at; ib.
 St. Christopher's:
 the Duke of Albemarle at; 135.
 tumults in; 332.
 St. Clair, Col. Robert, letter of; 133.
 St. David's, Bishop of (1682); 74.
 St. Domingo; 136.
 St. George, Fort, government of; 426-436, passim.
 proposed reductions at; 427.
 St. George's Channel; 243.
 St. Germain, James II. at; 252, 254.
 St. Helens, the Dutch fleet off; 185, 186, 195, 201, 202, 264, 268, 271, 272.
 St. Jago upon Cuba; 136.
 St. John:
 Henry, secretary; 300-302.
 — letter of; 308.
 Captain Thomas, at Tangier; 50.
 — shot; ib.
 — report by; 59.
 — his company at Tangier; 108.
 — payment due to; 117.
 St. John's:
 Newfoundland; 423.
 Island; 333.
 — emigration to; 342.
 — Governor of, letter of; 338.
 — letter to; 374.
 Charlotte Town; 388.
 Chief Justice of; 367.
 recruiting in; 378, 379.
 English regiment surprised at; 394.
 volunteers posted at; 395.
 Lieut. Governor of; 367.
 — Gen. Bradstreet; 370.
 — Col. Amherst; 371.
 Fort, on the Sorell; 409.

- St. John's—cont.
 River; 358.
 — Indians on; 388, 398, 415, 416.
 St. Lawrence River, Indians on; 394.
 St. Leger, —, attached to the Prince of Wales; 443.
 St. Loe, Captain George; 75.
 on the Dartmouth frigate; 90.
 examination of; 93.
 certificates of; 132, 223.
 St. Lucar, letter dated at; 105.
 St. Malo; 223, 331.
 St. Margaret's Bay; 250.
 St. Mary's, Port; 105.
 St. Mary's Bay, Nova Scotia; 403.
 St. Michell, Capt. B., at Tangier; 110.
 St. Oayth's; 171.
 letter dated at; 364.
 St. Petersburg, embassy to; 437.
 St. Vincent, Cape; 106.
 St. Vincent's, Caribbs inhabiting; 337.
 Salem:
 Massachusetts; 361.
 seat of government at; 351.
 Salisbury:
 estate near; 129.
 letter dated at; 133.
 march of James II.'s forces to; 202.
 Berwick's regiment at; 204.
 Dutch troops near; ib.
 James II. at; 210, 212, 213, 271.
 Dean of, his coach; 134.
 Earl of (1677); 26.
 — (1688); 222.
 — (1688) his flight; 228.
 — his house searched; 229.
 — capture and escape of; 235.
 Sallasch, Comte de; 302, 304.
 Sally, Sallee:
 privateer; 83.
 suggested attack on; 95.
 man-of-war; 98.
 French consul at; 102.
 cruisers off; 90, 91, 93.
 pirates; 105.
 man-of-war; 106.
 Capt. Wrenn's capture of; 106.
 Admiral of; 319.
 Samms, John, of Tangier; 79.
 Sandbeck, letters dated at; 81, 82, 123.
 Sanders, Captain; 44.
 Sanderson, Captain:
 reported death of; 227.
 order to; 243.
 and the Phubbs yacht; 245.
 Sandford:
 Mr., of Harwich; 167, 206.
 — letter of; 192.
 Nicholas, alderman of Tangier; 78.
 Sandwell, Lord Dartmouth's seat; 317, 324, 411, 445.
 Sandwich; 187.
 Earl of (1661), in Algiers and Spain; 7.
 — as admiral; 179.
 — at a Cabinet meeting; 371.
 — (1775), meeting at his house; 372.
 — letters of; 396.

- Sanford, Nic., of Tangier; 97.
 Sanquhar, rebellious declaration at; 45.
 Saragossa:
 Major Gen. Wade at; 302.
 prisoners at; 305.
 Sauvins, A., of Tangier; 97.
 Savannah, in Georgia, letter dated at;
 386.
 Savile, Henry:
 orders signed by; 20.
 at Paris; 69, 180.
 at the Admiralty; 86, 89, 103.
 in a gay humour; 93.
 Savoy; 298.
 its claim on Sicily; 311.
 Scheveling; 170, 175, 177, 202.
 Bay; 175.
 Schomberg:
 Marshal; 249.
 — letter of; 180.
 — with the Prince of Orange; 181.
 or Duke of, in Flanders; 303.
 Schonvelt, engagement in; 25.
 Schuyler:
 General, his operations; 383.
 Philip, appointed Major-General;
 392.
 Scilly; 198.
 Scotland:
 first and second expeditions to; 24.
 the Duke of York in; 39, et seq.
 parliament in, the Duke of York at;
 63.
 the rebellion in (1685); 125.
 French troops embarked for (1710);
 298.
 pretended landing of Dutch in; 178.
 peers of; 306, 307.
 Chamberlain of; 307.
 Lord Portmore and; 318.
 new Chancellor and Secretary for;
 318. election of representative peers; 368–
 370.
 Scott:
 Captain, his wife Elizabeth; 109.
 Lieut. Andrew, at Tangier; 110.
 Lieut. David; 386.
 David, on the Indian Board; 428,
 429, 436.
 Dennis, letter of; 234.
 Sir Edward, letters of; 225, 231.
 — letter to; 234.
 — Lieut.-Governor of Portsmouth,
 charges against; 225, 230–232,
 232, 233.
 — resignation of his commission;
 236.
 Lady, Ellis, letters of; 231, 237.
 — sent to Guernsey; 235, 237.
 William, chirurgion, at Tangier;
 109.
 Scram, Vulcher, Dutch admiral; 21.
 Scroggs, Chief Justice, put out; 60.
 Scroope, Captain, at Nieuport; 27.
 Scull, William, of Pennsylvania; 357.
 Seabroucke, or Sheabrough, —, cousin (?)
 of Prince Rupert; 4–8.
 Seamen, impressment of; 172, 178, 182,
 200, 227, 257, 279.
 Searle, John, of Tangier; 97.
 Selby, William, letter of; 134.
 Selkirk, Lord (1774), speeches of; 369.
 Senegal; 338.
 fort and garrison at; 339, 340.
 Senegambia, Governor of, C. O'Hara;
 375.
 Senhouse:
 Richard, of Tangier; 97.
 — petition of; 104.
 Mrs., of Tangier; 97.
 Serlo, Ambrose, letter to; 417.
 letter of; 420.
 Severn, the river; 222.
 Seville:
 Pepys at; 105, 107, 108.
 siege of; 300.
 Sewers, Commissioners of, proceedings of; 129.
 Seymour:
 Captain, his desertion; 224.
 — his company; ib.
 Mr.; 39, 40, 41, 44, 46, 62, 65, 71,
 72, 242, 245.
 — his earldom; 76.
 — his disgrace; 80, 81.
 — at Exeter; 86.
 Edward, letter of; 139.
 — his son; ib.
 Sir Edward, Dutch fleet seen at Berry
 by; 185.
 Shaftesbury, Earl of:
 (1679), restored to favour; 32.
 trial of; 38.
 Lord Halifax and; 44, 69.
 country reports concerning; 64.
 third (1711), letter of; 303.
 his bad health; 303, 304.
 (1712), letter of; 309.
 Shakerley, Peter, letter of; 181.
 governor of Chester, letter of;
 252.
 Shakspeare, Thomas, a soldier; 109.
 Shannon, Lord (1710); 299.
 Sharp:
 John, Archbishop of York, letter of;
 296.
 Mr., Attorney-General in Grenada;
 352.
 Sharpe, Mr., and Governor Leybourne;
 489.
 Shaw:
 Mr.; 87.
 Sir John, his wedding; 330.
 Lieut. William, letter of; 400.
 William, letters of; 398, 409.
 Shawness, Upper, towns of, attack on;
 359.
 Sheerness; 182, 184, 197, 199, 200, 207,
 213.
 letters dated at; 152, 178, 190, 198.
 garrison at; 152.
 governor of; 163.
 Dutch prisoners at; 190.

Shelburne, Lord, a friend to the colonies ; 845.

Sheldon :

a shipwright ; 253.

Mr., or Ralph, with James II. ; 234, 242, 252.

Shelley, Captain, at Nieuport ; 27.

Shenton, Lieutenant ; 148.

Sherborne, Lord Bristol's house at ; 219.

Sherburne :

Sir Edward, of the Ordnance Office ; 77, 157.

— letters of ; 222.

— removal of ; 236.

— F. Povey's training under ; 239.

— his distressed condition ; 252.

— his father Edward ; ib.

Shere :

Mr., afterwards Sir Henry, his proposals ; 79.

— his estimate of labour for demolishing the Mole ; 102.

— certificate of ; 104.

— Pepys and ; 112, 118.

— recommendation by ; 143.

— letters of ; 114, 126, 128, 157, 183, 202, 233, 236.

— his illness ; 157.

— at Gravesend ; 247.

Sheridan, Thomas, letters of ; 438.

Sheriden, Mr. ; 69.

Ships, names of :

Adamant ; 855.

Advice ; 19, 150, 153, 190.

Antelope ; 208, 212.

Ariadne ; 423.

Asia ; 420.

Assurance ; 197, 199, 207, 213, 265, 268.

Batteaus ; 394.

Beaver ; 378.

Bedford ; 299.

Betsy ; 403.

Bonadventure ; 86, 194, 200, 212, 264.

Bristol ; 17, 19, 170, 284.

Cambridge ; 23, 146, 158, 187, 223.

Centurion ; 99, 100, 111, 193, 197, 199, 206, 208, 268, 418, 446.

Charles ; 199.

Charles and Henry fireship ; 153, 171.

Charlotte yacht ; 74.

Chatham ; 402.

Cignet ; 212.

Cleveland yacht ; 74, 181, 261, 262, 271.

Concordia privateer ; 300.

Constant ; 19, 208, 284.

Crown ; 89, 212.

Danby ; 107.

Dartmouth ; 90, 95, 121, 138, 148, 244, 285.

Defiance ; 167, 284.

Deptford ; 138, 148, 223, 284.

Deptford ketch ; 17, 19, 110.

Diamond ; 143, 161.

Ships, names of—cont.

Diligent ; 873.

Dove ; 213.

Dover ; 11, 98, 172, 264, 284.

Dragon ; 139.

Drake frigate ; 101.

Dreadnought ; 143, 150, 151, 156, 160, 187, 190, 217, 290.

Dunkirk ; 199, 211, 217, 220, 222.

Edgar ; 199, 210, 211, 220, 227, 228, 250.

Elizabeth ; 141, 150, 153, 159, 167, 169, 259, 284.

Fairfax ; 16, 19, 20, 25, 138.

Falmouth packet ; 381.

Fanfan ; 204, 222.

Foresight ; 19, 148, 150, 200, 202, 263, 264.

Fountain ; 15.

Fowey ; 392.

Frederick ; 17.

Garland ; 15, 19.

George ; 15.

Gloucester, loss of ; 74, 278.

Gloucester ; 446.

Grab ; 420.

Grafton ; 90, 102, 110, 113.

Greyhound ; 105.

Guardland ; 244.

Guernsey ; 212.

Guernsey fireship ; 247.

Half Moon of Algiers ; 68.

Half Moon ; 199.

Hambrough man of-war burnt ; 97.

Hampshire ; 17, 212.

Hampton Court ; 194, 197, 206, 213.

Happy Return ; 80, 94, 100, 103, 199.

Headzenburgh hospital ship ; 156.

Heldenburg Hospital ; 271.

Heldrenbergh, loss of ; 212.

Henrietta ; 80, 94, 97, 107, 145, 212.

Herbert ; 300.

Hind frigate sunk ; 308.

Hope ; 383, 394.

James ; 68.

James galley ; 83, 89, 199.

Jersey ; 17, 245, 271.

Joseph Bonadventure ; 19.

Jupiter, capture of ; 21, 23.

Katherine yacht ; 149, 168, 171, 175, 176, 207, 252, 257, 259, 260, 263.

Kent ; 187, 194, 197, 199, 206, 211, 213.

Kingfisher ; 161, 164, 187, 263.

Kitchen yacht ; 74, 143, 153, 164, 167, 168, 263, 265.

Lansman, of Amsterdam ; 20.

Lark ; 103, 148, 212.

Leyden ; 203.

Lion ; 211.

Lively ; 851.

Lord Thurlow ; 430.

Maiden of Dart ; 165.

Mary ; 17, 18, 19, 194, 204, 211, 217, 220, 233, 237, 239, 258, 265, 284.

Mary yacht ; 75, 223.

Mary galley ; 199.

Ships, names of—cont.

Mary Rose ; 86, 87.
Merlin ; 403.
Mermaid ; 111, 145, 149, 153, 188, 199, 207, 213.
Monk ; 199.
Montagu ; 94, 97, 103, 108, 111, 188, 203, 208, 211, 268.
Mordant ; 218.
Newcastle ; 150, 171, 174, 181, 202, 210, 212, 213, 215, 264, 272.
Niger ; 405.
Nonsuch ; 18, 19, 138, 208, 251.
Ossory ; 228.
 — boatswain of, murdered ; 278.
Oxford ; 110, 199.
Pearl ; 87, 150, 153, 160, 244, 266, 446.
Pembroke ; 15, 25.
Pendennis ; 150, 157, 161, 169, 251, 258, 259.
Phoenix frigate ; 134, 183, 194, 199, 213.
Phubbs yacht ; 235, 241, 243, 245.
Plymouth ; 143, 150, 151, 160.
Pompée, mutiny on ; 447.
Portland ; 182, 194, 199, 207, 213, 247.
Portsmouth ; 17, 148, 172, 182, 212, 223, 284.
Preston ; 376, 388, 385–389.
Prince ; 15, 173.
Quaker ketch ; 156, 160, 274.
Reasonable ; 418.
Recovery, loss of ; 104.
Renown ; 418.
Reserve ; 80.
Resolution ; 20.
 — journal of ; 17–19.
 — disabled ; 23.
 — Lord Dartmouth's flagship ; 139–283, passim.
Revenge ; 420.
Richmond ; 15, 150, 284.
Rochester ; 15.
Roeback ; 198, 199, 205, 207, 387.
Rose fireship ; 19, 199.
Royal Charles ; 15, 20.
Royal Henry ; 421.
Royal James ; 15.
Royal Katherine, journal of ; 20–22.
Royal Oak ; 199.
Royal Prince, disabled ; 22.
Ruby ; 178, 203, 212.
Rupert ; 145, 170, 187, 245.
 — report on her defects ; 210.
St. Alban's ; 145, 150, 154, 188, 208, 233, 264, 284.
 — complaint against commander of ; 179.
St. Anne ; 103.
St. David ; 17, 100, 101, 284.
St. George ; 24.
St. Lawrence ; 383, 384.
St. Michael ; 20.
St. Paul fireship ; 171.
Sally Rose ; 212, 264.
Sampson fireship ; 182, 199.

Ships, names of—cont.

Samuel ; 106.
Sandados ; 138, 218, 268, 264.
Sapphire ; 68, 87, 88, 199.
Scarborough ; 365, 385, 395.
Sedgemoor, aground ; 249, 250, 251.
Senegal ; 385.
Severn ; 446.
Somerset ; 388.
Sovereign ; 142, 161.
Speedwell fireship ; 15, 162, 212, 217, 233, 264.
Spragg fireship ; 201.
Suadados ; 247.
Suffolk ; 199.
Swallow ; 145, 150, 169, 171, 194, 200, 263, 264, 284.
Sweepstakes ; 15, 199, 209.
Terpsichore ; 430, 431.
Thomas and Elizabeth ; 213.
Tiger ; 138, 156, 158, 161, 171, 172, 184, 264, 284.
 — prize ; 85, 89, 194, 197, 199, 213.
Trial ; 446.
Two Lions, of Sally ; 106.
Unity ; 97, 99, 100.
Unity fireship ; 171, 201, 208, 216.
Utrecht, Admiral Herbert's ; 165.
Wager ; 446.
Warspite ; 194, 197, 199, 211, 217, 222, 227, 233, 238, 239.
Warwick ; 19, 208, 284.
Weymouth ; 294, 295.
Woolwich ; 103, 150, 169, 181, 206, 264, 284.
York, disabled ; 23.
York ; 25, 171, 208, 264.
Shirley, Sewallis ; 328.
Shoolbred :
 John ; letter of ; 401.
 — his petition for grant of land in Nova Scotia ; 375.
 — letter to ; 382.
Shovell :
 Captain, afterwards Sir Cloudesley ; 87, 102, 144, 161.
 — his capture of an Algiers ship ; 68.
 — forced to salute the Spanish fleet ; 82, 89.
 — his journal in the James galley ; 83.
 — letter to ; 89.
 — his prize ; 94.
 — his sending the Crown ship home ; 94.
 — reports by ; 97, 107.
 — left in the Mediterranean ; 105.
 — his leave of absence ; 140.
 — his lieutenant ; 157.
Shrewsbury :
 Earl of, at Exeter (1688) ; 192.
 Duke of (1710), letters of ; 295, 296.
 — (1711), letters of ; 308.
 — (1713), Lord Lieutenant of Ireland ; 318.
 Duchess of ; 317.

- Shuldham, Admiral Molyneux, letter of; 402.
 Sicily, claims of France and Savoy on; 311.
 Sidney :
 Colonel, at Nieuport; 27.
 Algernon, the Prince of Orange and; 65.
 Sing, —, gunner at Hull; 121.
 Sinhouse, Richard, of Tangier; 78.
 Sittingbourne, troops at; 143, 144.
 Skeene, Major :
 in custody; 391.
 attack on his settlement; 393.
 Skelton :
 Captain; 144.
 — Peyps and; 174.
 Colonel, Lieutenant of the Tower; 216.
 — — — turned out; 230.
 Skipton Castle, letter dated at; 124.
 Sligo Protestants, declaration of; 249.
 Slingsby :
 Henry, letter of; 99.
 — of the Mint, petitions of; 119.
 Harry, candidate for Portsmouth; 233.
 Major Henry, letter of; 127.
 Smallridge, Dr.; 318.
 Smelt, Lieut. Math., at Tangier; 110.
 Smirke, Robert; 448.
 Smith :
 Captain, of Woolwich; 107.
 — of the Tiger prize; 194.
 Colonel, his seizure of stores at Concord; 393.
 Sir James, alderman of London; 144.
 James, of Pennsylvania; 357.
 Sir Jeremiah, convoy under; 15.
 John, groom; 123.
 Richard; 123.
 Samuel, letter to; 332.
 Capt. Thomas, of the Falcon; 138.
 Thomas, Queen's Proctor; 300.
 — his son George; ib.
 William, mayor of Tangier; 78, 96.
 — letter of; 97.
 — his reception by Charles II.; 100.
 — petition of; 104.
 Dr. William, of Pennsylvania; 357.
 William, letter of; 331.
 Smyrna; 18.
 engagement; 25.
 Smyth :
 Sir William, letter of; 129.
 — his treatment by Jeffreys; ib.
 — account of his life and services; ib.
 Smythe, Baron, letters of; 332.
 Snakes' Town, attack on; 359.
 Snow, Joshua, deposition of; 389.
 Society, the Royal, the King of Spain's gift to; 349.
 Soldiers, punishments of; 27.
 Sole Bay; 15.
 engagement in; 35.
 expected landing of the Dutch in; 176.
 Solmée, Count de, with the Prince of Orange; 181.
 Solomon, Lieut. J., letter of; 403.
 Somerset :
 Duke of (1687), letters of; 135.
 — his treatment by James I.; ib.
 — (1710); 295.
 Dukes of, recorders of Lichfield; 122.
 Duchess of, her death; 122.
 Sooper, Major, complaint against; 133.
 Soper, Major Thomas, letter of; 224.
 Sophia :
 Electress, letter of; 297.
 Princess, daughter of George III., letter of; 445.
 Sorell, the river; 409.
 Sotherne, James, of the Navy Board; 174.
 Souche, General de, on the Danube; 4, 6, 7, 8.
 Southam, co. Warwick, living of; 316.
 Southampton :
 Scotch troops at; 103.
 Water; 264.
 election at; 364, 365, 367.
 letters dated at; 364, 365.
 Southcott, Sir John; 204.
 Southesk, Lord, Test taken by; 71.
 Southsea :
 barracks at; 242.
 Castle, the dragoons in; 235.
 — delivery of; 281-283.
 South Sea Stock, losses in; 325, 326.
 Southwark, Kent Street; 231.
 Southwell :
 Edward, letters of; 294, 308, 324.
 — under secretary; 318.
 Sir Robert; 114.
 Spa, letters from; 424, 425.
 Spain :
 ambassador from, at Vienna, and Prince Rupert; 5, 6.
 feeling against England in; ib.
 and Portugal, armies of; 10.
 fleet of, Capt. Shovell forced to salute; 82.
 — English ships obliged to salute; 85, 89.
 — Admiralty report on; 89.
 Tangier horses to be sold in; 86.
 Samuel Pepys in; 105.
 Ireland threatened by; 125.
 Portuguese army invading; 298.
 English recruits for; 299, 300.
 bad state of its affairs; ib.
 French troops sent to; 300.
 King of, his renunciation; 311.
 treaty of commerce with; 319.
 King of (1774), his gift to the Royal Society; 349, 439.
 and Portugal, dispute between; 366.
 Sparks, Henry, of Tangier; 79, 96.
 Speath, Major, wounded in the Mahratta war; 421.
 Spencer, Lord Robert; 241.
 at the Board of Trade; 341.
 Spesshardt; 4.

Spithead ; 17, 19, 20, 102, 153, 195, 201-248, 268-284, passim.
 Spragg, Spragge : nephew of Col. Legge ; 11.
 Sir Edward ; 18.
 — letter of ; 19.
 — in command of the fleet ; 19.
 — his engagements with Van Tromp ; 21, 22.
 — drowned ; 24.
 — appeal from his son ; 298.
 Capt. Thomas, letter of ; 152.
 Sprat, Thomas, Bishop of Rochester, letter of ; 810.
 plot against ; ib.
 Squerries, near Westerham :
 letters dated at ; 293-300, passim.
 purchase of lease ; 326.
 Squibb on British rights in America ; 419.
 Squibb, Robert, letter concerning ; 305.
 Stafford, Viscount, trial of ; 39, 40, 54.
 Staggins, Lieut. Charles :
 report by ; 210.
 certificates of ; 238.
 and Sir W. Jennens ; 245.
 Stagings, Lieut. E., detained on a Spanish ship ; 85.
 Stainborough, co. York, letter dated at ; 325.
 Staines :
 letter dated at ; 224.
 William, of Tangier ; 97.
 Stair, Lord, his election as a representative peer ; 369.
 Stamford, letter dated at ; 319.
 Stanes, William, alderman of Tangier ; 78.
 Stanhope :
 Dr. George, letters of ; 306, 322, 326.
 — at Lewisham ; 305.
 Mr., in Spain ; 300.
 General James, letter of ; 302.
 — taken prisoner ; 303.
 Lord (1721), his funeral ; 326.
 Stanley :
 Haus, candidate for Southampton ; 364, 365.
 — letter of ; 365.
 Sir John, under Secretary ; 318.
 Stanton :
 Captain, companies under ; 386.
 — on St. John's River ; 388.
 — declaration by ; 403.
 Major ; 400.
 Star, a blazing ; 44.
 Staremburg :
 Comte de ; 308.
 General ; 7.
 — death of ; 8.
 Start Point, the Dutch fleet off ; 185, 203.
 Stasy, Gabriel ; 17.
 Stedman, Major ; 126.
 Steele, Sir Richard, and the Charterhouse mastership ; 322.
 Stephens, Philip, Secretary to the Admiralty, letters to ; 343, 344.
 letter of ; 416.
 report to ; 417.
 Stephenson, J., letter of ; 348.
 Stepney :
 church ; 129.

Stepney—cont.
 the Walloons at ; 129.
 lease of Liberty of ; ib.
 troops at ; 144.
 Stevenson, Mr. :
 purser ; 142, 147.
 his memorial ; 159.
 Stewart :
 Captain, killed on the Poonah expedition ; 420.
 Colonel, negotiations by ; 301.
 Lieut. George, at Tangier ; 110.
 Stigrant, William, certificate by ; 210.
 Stirling ; 56.
 fort at ; 125.
 Stockton, Richard, his scheme for pacifying the Colonies ; 332.
 Stokes Bay ; 155, 204, 264.
 Stonehouse, Nanny, at Bath ; 327.
 Storton, Lieut. Will., at Tangier ; 109.
 Stout, H., of Tangier ; 97.
 Strachey, Sir Henry, at Fort St. George ; 430.
 Strafford, Earl of :
 (1711), letter of ; 308.
 (1712), at the Privy Council ; 311.
 (1713), the Bishop of London and ; 318, 319.
 (1714), letter of ; 321.
 (1718), letter of ; 325.
 (1722), letter of ; 326.
 Strahan, Will., letter of ; 381.
 Stratford-upon-Avon ; 295.
 Strathmore, Lord (1774), reported death of ; 370.
 Straton, Mr., his cadetship ; 443.
 Stratton, letter dated at ; 294.
 Streeter, Colonel, his son ; 170.
 Strickland, Sir Roger :
 his fleet for Jamaica ; 25.
 extract from journal of ; 30.
 the Duke of York's recommendation of ; 66.
 ships under, to join Lord Dartmouth ; 188.
 his squadron ; 141, 147, 161, 171.
 letter to ; 132.
 advice about his flag ; 132, 133.
 direction to ; 162.
 his signal flags ; 166.
 letters of ; 187, 211, 233, 238.
 his application to quit his commission ; 233.
 ships under ; 194, 199.
 his crank ship ; 258.
 indiscreet and unpopular ; 261.
 advice by ; 264.
 Stringer, Sir Thomas ; 128.
 Stroci, Comte, envoy to England ; 7.
 Strode, Mr. ; 328.
 Stuart, Mr., superintendent of Indian affairs in America ; 334.
 Studholme, Captain ; 389.
 instructions to ; ib.
 Studland Bay ; 217.
 Sturgion, Robert, of Queenborough ; 178.
 Sturt, Arthur, Commissioner of Victualing ; 107.

Stynim (?), Count de, with the Prince of Orange; 181.
 Styria, the Turks in; 8.
 Suckling, Mr., Attorney - General of Quebec; 367.
 Suffield, John, of Portsmouth, letter of; 242.
 Suffolk:
 county, America; 363.
 Earl of (1773); 341.
 Lord, letter of; 342.
 Earl of (1774); 366, 368.
 — letter of; 370.
 — indignation of Scotch peers against; 369.
 — at Cabinet meetings; 371, 372.
 — (1775), letter of; 387.
 — (1802), speech of; 447.
 Sullivan:
 Benjamin, letters of; 426.
 Daniel, letter of; 238.
 Summerton, camp near; 127.
 Sunderland:
 Earl of; 36, 41, 46.
 — (1683), letters of; 87, 88.
 — (1684), letter of; 113.
 — (1688), letter to; 178.
 — (1709), letter of; 295.
 — dismissed; 178.
 — seals resigned by; 295.
 Lieut.-Col., at Nieuport; 27.
 Surgeons for the fleet; 217.
 Sussex:
 electioneering in; 332, 333.
 Earl of (1688); 229.
 — (1731), death of; 327.
 Lady (1688); 241.
 Swaine, Captain; 164.
 Swale, the river; 256.
 Sweden:
 Elector of Cleve and; 4.
 King of (1670); 19.
 Swift, Jonathan; 321.
 letters of; 316, 317.
 paper in imitation of; 362.
 Swynfen, S., letter of; 328.
 Sybourg, Sieur de; 130.

T.

Talbot:
 Captain of the Niger; 405.
 Sir John, his son killed; 128.
 Tallard, Marquis de, his release on parole; 800.
 Tarragona, English troops at; 298.
 Tarras, Robert, of Tangier; 97, 110.
 Tarring and feathering at Boston; 348.
 Tattnell:
 Captain of Militia in Georgia; 336.
 Josiah; 366.
 Tayleur, John, of Portsmouth; 230. deposition by; 231.

Taylor:
 Nathaniel, letter of; 382.
 W., letters of; 438.
 Tea, the consignments to America of, riots, &c. concerning; 341, et seq.
 Tangier or Tanger:
 letters dated at; 11, 15, 16, 26, 50, 51, 52, 55, 61, 64, 68, 72, 73, 74, 77, 78-80, 86, 90, 99, 103.
 treaty made at; 12.
 carriages for; 17.
 chirurgion at; 26.
 account of civil inhabitants; 27.
 survey of houses, &c. in; 28.
 cost of military establishment; 28, 29.
 capture of Charles, Henrietta, and Giles forts; 50.
 account of fight with the Moors; ib.
 serious condition of garrison; 51.
 threatened attack on; ib.
 renewal of the Moors' hostilities; 52.
 Pole Fort and Fountain Fort; ib.
 comet seen at; 55.
 articles of truce made at; ib.
 peace concluded at; 57.
 reports on works at; 59, 61.
 incompetent gunners there; 61, 64, 73.
 naval fights off; 68.
 want of stores and beds at; 77.
 wells opened at; 78.
 names of mayor and corporation; 78, 79.
 arrival of men and stores; 79.
 Peterborough Tower; ib.
 York Castle and Devil Tower; 79, 84. instructions to Lord Dartmouth for demolition and evacuation of; 83, 84. removal of inhabitants; ib.
 Jews in; ib.
 disposal of forces departing from; 85, 86.
 instructions to Sir John Berry and Col. Kirke touching; 86. additional instructions to Lord Dartmouth; ib.
 works on the pier at; 88.
 negotiations with the Alcaid of Alcazar; 90.
 battalions of seamen at; 94. valuation of property at; 95, 97.
 address to Charles II. from; 96.
 Town house in; 97.
 report on the Mole; ib.
 address of late Governor and officers of; 97, 98.
 Portuguese church of; 99, 101.
 storekeepers at; 99.
 arrival of inhabitants in England; 99, 100, 101.
 labour of demolishing the Mole; 102.
 distribution of forces from; 103.
 books and papers relating to; 104.
 petitions of inhabitants; 104, 105.
 interpreter, schoolmaster, &c. at; ib.
 clerk of the church; 105.

- Tangier or Tanger—cont.
 report on Mole and harbour at; 107.
 lists of officers, soldiers, and inhabitants brought home from; 108–110.
 opinions of Lord Dartmouth's management of expedition; 112–114.
 Phillips's draught of the ruins; 114.
 pay of engineers, &c. at; 116.
 schedule of papers concerning the expedition; 116–119.
 church goods belonging to; 118.
- Tellicherry:
 English ships near; 420.
 Madras troops at; 421.
- Telloone; 17.
- Tempest, Captain, killed; 21, 28.
- Temple, J., Lieut.-Governor of New Hampshire, letters of; 365.
- Tennant, Capt. Matthew; 75, 156.
 letters of; 161, 184.
 of the Tiger; 188.
 complaint against; 172, 182.
 Pepys's excuses for; 172.
- Teriff; 109.
- Terrif, letter dated at; 104.
- Tessinn, Bernard, engineer at Tangier; 59, 61.
- Test, the, signatures of Tangier officers to; 88.
- Tetuan; 819.
 letters dated at; 106, 107.
 trade of Tangier with; 16.
 French consul at; 102.
- Teviot, Earl of:
 (1669), letter of; 16.
 at Tangier; 50.
- Tewkesbury; 134.
- Texel:
 the; 158, 180.
 engagement off; 24, 25.
- Thames, the; 259, 261.
- Thanet:
 Isle of; 144.
 Earl of (1685), letter of; 124.
 — (1688); 229.
- Thistlethwayte:
 Mr., his death at Tangier; 118.
 — state of his accounts; ib.
 Mrs., of Tangier; 97.
- Thomas, Jenkin, alderman of Tangier; 78, 97, 108.
- Thompson:
 Dr., chaplain at Kensington Palace; 444. or Thomson, George, candidate for Bramber; 864.
 — letter of; ib.
 H., artist; 448.
- Thornhill, Mr., witness; 811.
- Thoroton, Mr., candidate for Bramber; 864.
- Throckmorton:
 Captain, at Berwick; 184.
 Sir W., at Putney; 10.
- Thurland, Baron, and Reigate church; 27.
- Thurlow, Lord Chancellor, styled Emperor; 425.
- Tichborne:
 Sir Henry, the Duke of York, and; 86.
 of the Ordnance Office; 260.
 — letter of; 222.
- Tichfield, letters dated at; 75, 76, 77, 124.
- Ticonderoga fort, attack on; 393.
- Tiffin, Major; 118.
- Tilbury; 103.
 Governor of; 222.
- Till, Rev. John, of Hayes, letters of; 438.
- Tillingham; 161.
- Tilson, Mr., a chaplain; 293.
- Tippetts, Sir John, of the Navy Board; 166, 174.
- Tirrell, Jack; 225.
- Tobacco, Virginia; 80.
- Tobin, Ja., of Tangier; 96.
- Tollemache, Capt. William, letter of; 250.
- Tonge:
 W., letter of; 381.
 complaints against; ib.
- Tongue, William, remarks by; 344.
- Tonson, Jacob, recommendation of; 306.
- Tonym, Governor, letter of; 349.
- Toolgaum, English army retreated to; 422.
- Topsham; 188, 192, 193, 203, 221.
- Torbay, the Dutch fleet in; 185, 192, 195, 203, 205, 213.
- Torcy, Marquis de; 811.
 letters of; 300, 315.
- Tories, the, distinctions among; 819.
- Torrington, Earl of (1689); 253.
 Memoirs of; 447.
- Tortola:
 letter dated at; 343.
 Governor of; ib.
- Totterdale, Hugh, a lawyer in Jamaica; 306.
- Toulon, Calvinists at; 381.
- Tournay:
 letter dated at; 119.
 Vauban's citadel at; 120.
- Townesend, Mr., deputy of Sir Edw. Sherburne; 252.
- Townshend:
 Lord (1679); 32.
 Viscount, a godfather; 294.
 — (1702), letter of; 293.
 — (1705), letter of; 294.
 — (1714), letter of; 321.
- Tracy, Baron, report by; 310.
- Trafford, Mr., of Norfolk; 298.
- Tramalier, —, fellow of Jesus College, Oxford; 134.
- Transylvania; 4, 7.
- Trelawny:
 Captain, at Tangier; 50.
 — killed; ib.
 Col., his regiment; 94, 103, 104, 118, 128.
- Trentham, letter dated at; 364.
- Trentown, General Howe at; 398.
- Trescot, Alexander, letter of; 365.
- Treves, Marquis Crequi's army at; 119.
- Tripoli; 18, 105.
- Trumbell, Governor, his despatches from Connecticut; 391.

Trumbull, Dr. William :
 letters of ; 95, 97.
 report by ; 97.
 in England ; 99, 100,
 Truro, Nova Scotia ; 344.
 Tryon, Col. William, Governor of New York :
 letters of ; 336, 343, 364.
 his expenditure ; 336.
 in great favour ; 334.
 his requisition for troops ; 339.
 his secretary ; 354.
 disloyalty of his Province ; 392.
 memorial of ; 397.
 letter to ; 417.
 complaints against ; 423.
 his letter to Lord Hyde ; 438.
 his return to New York ; 440.
 Tucker, Captain, of the Unity ; 97, 100.
 Tufzon, Mr., member for Appleby ; 124.
 Tully, John, seaman ; 107.
 Tunbridge ; 87.
 James II. at ; 133.
 Wells, letter dated at ; 424.
 Tunis ; 18, 19, 105.
 King of ; 18, 19.
 man-of-war, prizes taken by ; 77.
 Turberville, informer ; 65.
 Turin ; 298.
 Turks, the :
 Princes of Germany and ; 3. success gained by ; 5, 6.
 retreat of ; 8.
 alleged negotiations of England with ;
 6.
 beaten out of Fort St. Andrea ; 17.
 their ships burnt at Algiers ; 19.
 encounter of their ships with the Genoese ; 30. victory over ; 93.
 Turner, Sir William, alderman of London ;
 144.
 Tuscany, Prince of (1710), illness of ;
 299.
 Tweeddale, Marquis of (1710) ; 296.
 Twickenham ; 98.
 letters dated at ; 131, 169.
 Twysden, Sir Thomas, candidate for Kent ;
 326.
 Tynemouth ; 37.
 Castle, repairs at ; 75.
 Tyrconnell, Earl of :
 (temp. Eliz.), rebellion under ; 125.
 (1686), his reception at Chester ; 131.
 in England ; ib.
 Lord Lieut. of Ireland ; 226, 234.
 (1687), letters of and to ; 132.
 his preparations in Ireland ; 249.
 Tyrell, — ; 74.
 Tyrone, Earl of :
 (temp. Eliz.), rebellion under ; 125.
 (1685), letter of ; 122.
 Tyrrell, Captain ; 102, 150.
 Tyrwhitt, Captain John ; 156, 161.
 letters of ; 158, 223.

U.

Ulster, in arms under Tyrone ; 125.
 Upnor Castle ; 76.
 Governor of ; 153, 157.
 Ushant ; 198.
 Usher, Ignat., letter of ; 74.
 Utrecht, Lord Strafford at ; 308.
 Uxbridge :
 letter dated at ; 229.
 Lord Feversham's army at ; 229, 232.

V.

Vaena, Dorhis de, of Tangier ; 97.
 Valencia :
 attempt on ; 298.
 reduction of ; 300.
 Vale Royal, letter dated at ; 139.
 Valkenire, M., burgomaster of Amsterdam ; 31.
 Van Benning, or Venbenning, M., his memorial ; 71.
 Vanbrugh Fields (Blackheath?) ; 339,
 366.
 Vander Saan, Captain ; 203.
 Vandeveldt de Oude (the Old) :
 William, letter of ; 153.
 prices of his pictures ; ib.
 Van Runing ; 290.
 Vanseterflett, Daniel, of Tangier ; 97.
 Vansusterfleet, Daniel, of Tangier ; 79.
 Van Tromp, Admiral :
 engagements with ; 20-23.
 and the Prince of Orange's expedition ; 158, 178.
 Vardell, Rev. Mr., Thoughts on the Colonies by ; 397.
 Vauban, Mons., account of his fortifications ; 119, 120.
 Vaudry, Mr. ; 282.
 Vaughan, Lord :
 (1675), letter of ; 25.
 Governor of Jamaica ; 137.
 Vendome, Duc de ; 304.
 Venes, John and Aaron, Dutch admirals
 21.
 Venice ; 298.
 Vermüden, Mr. ; 3, 6.
 Vernon :
 George, letter of ; 320.
 Mr., or Ned ; 16.
 — candidate for parliament ; 56.
 Versailles, letters dated at ; 130, 300.
 Vetch, Colonel Samuel, charges against ;
 320.

Victualling, Commissioners for: 147, 150, 152, 154, 159, 164, 177, 218, 221, 240, 242, 243, 260.

Vienna:

Prince Rupert's mission to; 3-9.
letters dated at; 5-8.
the Earl of Dartmouth at; 330.
christening of an Archduchess; ib.

Villahermosa, Duke of; 30.

Villa Nova; 106.

Villiers:

Col. Sir Edward, letter of; 75.
Sir William; 160.

Vincent:

Ettienne, of Tangier; 97.
Stephen, of Tangier; 79.

Virgin Islands:

agent for; 348.
petition from; ib.
statistics concerning; 372.

Virginia:

secretary in; 23.
Lord Calpeper's letter from; 80.
Sir H. Chicheley's misgovernment of; 80.
Assembly at; 335.
its support to Boston; 353.
militia in; 359.
House of Burgesses; 362.
preparations in; 372.
state of government in; 384.
Lord Dunmore's despatches from; 391.
in a state of anarchy; ib.

Voiteire, Captain, of the Katherine, fire-ship; 23.

Votier, —, with Admiral Herbert; 204.

W.

W., R., letter of; 815.

Wackitomika; 359.

Wade, Major-Gen., his services in Spain; 302.

Wales:

Prince of (1751), his future bride; 330.

— (1783) letter of; 442.

Princess of (1805), letter of; 444.

Walker, Obadiah, taken prisoner; 231.

Wallace, Captain, at Rhode Island; 399.

Walle, Mrs.; 53.

Waller:

Mr., letter to; 9.
Sir Hardress, a prisoner; ib.
Sir William; 189.

Wallis:

Mr., recommendation of; 80.
— candidate for Berwick; 124.

U 24961.

Wallis—cont.

William, storekeeper at Tangier; 99.

Walloons, the, at Stepney; 129.

Walpole:

Sir Robert, letter of; 303.
— dismissed from office; ib.
— his motion on the South Sea directors; 326.
— his brother Townshend; 321.
— Henry Legge and; 328.
Thomas, his letter; 359, 360, 366.

Walshford ale; 138.

Walsingham, James; 34, 35.

Waltham Abbey, Pynest Green near; 328.

Wanton, Governor; 441.

his despatches from Rhode Island; 391.

Wapping:

Jeffreys taken in; 233, 235.

Warbeck, Perkin; 224.

Waringe, James, of Tangier; 79, 97.
petition of; 104.

Warminster, letter dated at; 128.

Warr, Mr., and Lord Nottingham; 286.

Warren, Dr. Joseph:

of Boston, New England; 342.

of Cambridge, Mass., letter of; 377.

Warton, Sir Michael:

letters of; 295, 296, 308, 309.

refuses a peerage; 308, 309.

Warwick; 445.

Sir Philip; 9.

Earl of, Beauchamp; 328.

Washan, Ali Rice:

captain of a Sally man-of-war; 106.
confession of; ib.

Washington:

General George; 381, 383.

— commander-in-chief; 399.

— his camp near Philadelphia; 418.

— his forces at Middletown; 418.

Harry; 10.

Watermen, impressment of; 141, 145, 149, 154, 157, 172, 200, 257, 259.

Watson, Mr.:

councillor at Boston; 361.

his cadetship; 443.

Watts, Mr.; 52.

postmaster at Deal; 196, 201.

Webbe, J., letters of; 426.

Welbeck; 13.

letters dated at; 74, 75, 79, 80, 125.

Welford, —; 265.

Welldon, Mr., sheriff in Virginia; 80.

Wellesley, Marquis, letters of; 426, 434, 486.

Wellingborough parish; 423.

Wells; 134.

Monmouth's army at; 126.

letters dated at; 128.

Welsh:

Sir Robert; 3, 4.

—, his horses; 33.

Wentworth:

Lady, her Liberty of Stepney; 129.

Wentworth—cont.

General, his despatches from New Hampshire; 395.

Paul, petition consigned to; 373.

Werden:

Major-General; 181.

Sir John; 81, 87.

— instructions signed by; 20.

Wealey:

Colonel, reported drowned; 45.

John, letter of; 378, 379.

West, Sir Benjamin; 448.

Westall, Richard; ib.

Westbury, letter dated at; 126.

Westcombe, Sir Martin, consul at Cadiz; 94.

Weston:

Henry, letters of; 325, 326.

William, letter of; 365.

Westphal, Captain, wounded in India; 423.

Wetherall, Rev. J.; 444.

Wetwang:

Sir John, complaint against his son; 94, 100, 103.

Lieut. Jos., letter of; 103.

Wexford, letter dated at; 337.

Weybridge; 302.

Weyley, James, surgeon, at Tangier; 108.

Weymouth:

letters dated at; 444

George III. at; 445.

Lord (1683-87), letters of; 80, 130, 122, 134.

— (1687), his coach; 134.

— (1688); 229.

Wharton:

Lord (1677), Philip, in the Tower, letters of; 26.

Lady; 237.

— Ann, letter of; 26.

Mr., at Tournay; 120.

— his news from America; 354.

Dick, at Plymouth; 204.

Capt. George, letters of; 9-12.

Goodwin; 26.

Sir Polycarpus, letter of; 144.

Richard, letter of; 128.

Samuel, letter to; 383.

Thomas, letter of; ib.

Sir Thomas, letter of; 26.

Wheat, high price of; 335.

Wheatley:

Nathaniel, account by; 334.

Phillis, letter and poem by; ib.

— an African slave; ib.

Wheeler:

Captain; 87, 102.

Colonel; 3.

Sir Charles, death of; 89.

Sir Francis, letter of; 211.

— his misfortune; 300.

Richard, deposition by; 389.

Wheeling, America; 359.

Wheelock:

Captain Anthony; 333.

John, President of Dartmouth College; 438.

Whelan, James, of Tangier; 97.

Whitchurch; 131.

White:

Captain, at Tangier; 103.

Major John, letter of; 51.

Lieut. William, at Tangier; 110.

Whitworth, his evidence; 311.

Whitfield, Rev. George, letter to; 331.

Whitlock, Lieut., killed; 210.

Wich, Mr., letter of; 310.

Wickham, letter dated at; 370.

Wicksteed, —, apprehended; 170.

Widdrington:

Lord, at Berwick; 75.

Colonel R., letter of; 124.

— candidate for Berwick; ib.

Wight, Isle of, Dutch fleet off; 202-205, 264, 265, 271, 272, 299, 302, 307.

Charles I. in; 25.

mutiny of the militia in; 185.

Irish soldiers transported to; 246.

Wilberforce, William, letter of; 448.

Wild, Captain; 164.

Wilford, Captain; 165, 199.

his letter; 184.

Wilkinson, one; 17.

Wilkes, John; 369.

Wilks, Mr., letter of; 420.

Willard, Mr., councillor at Boston; 361.

William, Fort; 426, 428, 434, 436.

college at; 434.

William and Mary, Castle, in New Hampshire; 395.

William, Rice, servant of Lord Mohun; 311.

William III., his honours to Lord Dartmouth; 447.

Williams:

Lady, executrix of Lord Brouncker's will; 113.

Captain; 102, 108, 258.

Charles, certificate of; 238.

Edward, killed; 87.

Capt. H., letter of; 190.

Capt. Hen.; 75.

Jane; 445.

Thomas, of Annapolis, letter to; 378.

Williamsburg, magazine at; 391.

Williamson, Mr.; 17.

Willoughby, Lord (1713), Bishop of Bristol; 316.

Wilshaw, Captain, of Deptford; 146, 147, 150, 168, 259.

Wilson:

Lieut., captive among the Moors; 105.

James, of Pennsylvania; 357.

Robert, Consul at Gibraltar; 109.

— letters of; 109, 110.

Wiltshire, Lord (1688), at Exeter; 192.

Wimbledon, letters dated at; 310, 332.

minister of; 310.

Winche, H., at the Admiralty; 103.

Winchelsea, Earl of (1767); 332.

Winchester:

letter dated at; 298.

the Star at; 16.

Charles II. at; 89.

- Winchester—cont.
 Scotch troops at; 103.
 election at; 123.
 Bishop of (1688); 170, 229.
 — North (1785, &c.), letters of;
 425.
- Windham, —; 31, 32.
 sale of his place; 63.
- Windram, Major, at Nieuport; 27.
- Windsor; 122.
 letters dated at; 87, 88, 115, 132, 235, 237, 309, 442.
 ministers at; 310, 311.
 Castle, St. George's Hall in; 444.
 Lord, letters of; 26, 59, 61, 64, 74.
 — (1680); 54, 55.
 Nova Scotia; 373, 381.
 — letters dated at; 398-402, 414.
 — pirates about; 383.
 — disaffected people at; 384.
 — ships at; 387.
 — state of township; 401.
 — volunteers in; 401.
- Wingfield:
 Capt. Charles, his company at Tangier; 109.
 Capt. George, his company at Tangier; ib.
- Winnett, Joseph of Annapolis, letter to;
 378.
- Winnington, Sir F., the Duke of York and;
 33.
- Winalow, Joseph, Boston tea merchant;
 342.
- Winthrop, Dr., of Boston, New England;
 343.
- Wintringham, Sir Charles, letter of; 402.
- Withers:
 Mr., clerk of the Fishermen's Company; 167.
 Lieut. Hen., at Tangier; 109.
- Wivell, Capt. Francis, letter of; 216.
- Wolferman, Mr., charges by; 133.
- Wollferman, Mr., instructions to; 132.
- Wolseley, Sir Ch., candidate for parliament; 56.
- Wood, Thomas, Bishop of Lichfield,
 letters of; 76.
- Woodlands Court, letter dated at; 139.
- Woodward, Mr., surgeon; 312.
- Woolmer Forest; 25.
- Woolwich; 107.
 quarrel at; 87.
 ships at; 199.
- Worcester:
 battle of, Charles II.'s escape after;
 49.
 James II. at; 134.
 New England; 361.
 Bishop of, Dr. Hough, his letters; 328.
 — (1687), his regiment at Chester;
 131.
 Marquis of (1688), joins the Prince of Orange; 222.
- Workington, seizure of arms at; 233.
- Worseley, Harry, at Lisbon; 318.
- Worsopp, Sir Thomas, and his son, their services; 131.
- Worthing or Worden, Captain, killed; 21, 23.
- Wrenn:
 M., instructions signed by; 19, 20.
 Capt. Ralph; 75, 102.
 — letter of; 99.
 — and the Portuguese Canons; 101.
 — his ship at Lisbon; 102.
 — journal of his proceedings; 106.
 — his encounter with a French
 man-of-war; 115.
- Wrey, Sir Bouchier, his brother shot at Tangier; 51.
- Wright:
 —, Governor of Georgia, letter of; 336.
 Sir James, his despatches from Georgia; 390.
 Lieut. William, letter of; 187.
 — his search for ships; 187, 188.
 — sent to Dover; 265.
- Wroth, Edward, alderman of Tangier;
 110.
- Wurtsburg; 6, 8.
- Wyborne, Sir John; 102.
 at Tangier; 80.
 instructions to; 85.
 orders by; 90.
 letters of; 94, 100, 103.
 report by; 107.
 certificate by; 110.
- Wybrant, Alderman, of Dublin; 10.
- Wycherley, Capt. W., letter of; 446.
- Wye, Dr. Mossom, letter of; 294.
- Wyndham:
 Col., his coach; 134.
 Sir William, letter of; 326.
- Wynne, Dr. O., letters of; 111, 174.
- Wyrley, Mr., his estate at Handsworth;
 293.

X.

Xeres, Pepys at; 105.

Y.

Yanky, a pirate; 136.

Yarmouth:

- Great, Trinity House at; 121.
 — pilots at; 122.
 Isle of Wight; 233.
 — Sir Robert Holmes at; 185.
 — letters dated at; 221, 225, 231.
 — desertion of troops from; 225.
 Earl of (1684), Lord Brouncker's
 executor; 113.
 — sent to James II.; 231.
 South; 212.
 Nova Scotia; 403, 415.
 — infantry raised in; 386.

Yeams, Mr., ship builder at Dover; 207, 218.

York:

- arms and guns at; 134.
- letters dated at; 134, 137, 249.
- Clifford's Tower; 134.
- Archbishop of (1688); 229.
- (1710); 296.
- Duke of, James (1661); 8.
- his letters to Col. George Legge, afterwards Lord Dartmouth; 30-49, 53-74, 100, 122.
- letter to; 28.
- his barge; 9.
- instructions, &c. signed by; 19, 20.
- on board the Royal Charles; 20.
- his seat in Reigate Church; 27.
- his daughter at the Hague; 30.
- his behaviour to Lord Danby; 32.
- his riding to the Scottish parliament; 63.
- his daughter; 63, 64, 65, 67.
- at Winchester; 89.
- James, at Portsmouth; 93.

York—cont.

Duke of, his opinion of Lord Dartmouth's services at Tangier; 113.

See James II.

— (1805), letter of; 444.

Duchess of; 31, 32, 33, 37, 42, 45, 60, 67.

— defends Lord Dartmouth; 114.

Yorkshire militia, the first raised in England; 86.

Young:

Robert, his plot against Bishop Sprat; 310.

Sir William, a Houghton Tale by; 327.

Z.

Zealand; 341.

admiral for; 21.

Zuyder sea; 158.

HISTORICAL MANUSCRIPTS COMMISSION.

ELEVENTH REPORT, APPENDIX, PART I

THE MANUSCRIPTS

OF THE

EARL OF DARTMOUTH.

Presented to both Houses of Parliament by Command of Her Majesty.

LONDON:
PRINTED FOR HER MAJESTY'S STATIONERY OFFICE,
BY EYRE AND SPOTTISWOODE,
PRINTERS TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

And to be purchased, either directly or through any Bookseller, from
EYRE AND SPOTTISWOODE, EAST HARDING STREET, FLEET STREET, E.C., and 32, ABINGDON STREET, WESTMINSTER, S.W.; or
ADAM AND CHARLES BLACK, 6, NORTH BRIDGE, EDINBURGH; or HODGES, FIGGIS, & Co., 104, GRAFTON STREET, DUBLIN.

1887.

